Whereas the custom of drinking has usually been associated with the "college years," that period of growth toward maturity from high school to responsible citizenship, I was appalled by the extent of the use of, and the abuse of, alcohol as described in your article on drinking in the PAW of March 21. A letter I wrote in response to that article appeared in your issue of October 10 but was abridged and modified from my original. I wrote because your article revealed a significant failure of the university to understand the problem of alcohol as an addictive substance.

As a surgeon, I have seen in the emergency room the carnage due to alcohol, and in the hospital the illness it causes. Like Kevin Ferry, Princeton's alcohol counselor, I am not a recovering alcoholic or a recovering anything else. However, certain facts are known. Alcohol is an addictive substance. Frequency and intensity of use (such as extended weekend bingeing) increase the risk of addiction to it. It is a chemical dependency. Whatever the individual's initial "reasons" for seeking relief in alcohol, insidiously, as the disease of addiction takes over, it becomes its own reason for drinking.

The disease of addiction to alcohol has reached epidemic levels in our society and among young people in particular. Today, it is not unusual for elementary students to bring alcohol to school. A recent national survey revealed that within two weeks preceding it, up to 16 percent of sixth, seventh, and eighth graders had consumed five or more drinks consecutively. Another survey, of high-school seniors, revealed that 35 percent of those questioned had been drunk at least once in the preceding two weeks, and 5 percent of the respondents said that they drank alcohol every day. Young bodies become addicted to alcohol much faster than those of adults. At equal rates of consumption, an adult who drinks becomes hooked in six years, an adolescent in just six months. The University of Pittsburgh Medical Center has diagnosed children as young as sixteen with cirrhosis of the liver.

Abusing alcohol at an early age also increases the likelihood of nicotine and drug abuse later. The disease of addiction (biologic craving) is the same for the body; only the substance differs—alcohol, tobacco, cocaine, prescription drugs, each with its own characteristic consequences.

Thus, with alcoholism frighteningly prominent in high school, the apparently bright young freshman may already be farther along in his or her addiction than is realized. In the college setting, the alcoholic's problem may be hidden by the party atmosphere.

Although students who abuse their newfound freedom at college by excessive partying may be responsive to the university's cerebral approach, the magnitude of the problem described in your article indicates the need for a deeper understanding. When a long weekend's bingeing begins to connect to the next weekend, and when overt drinking extends to covert drinking, the individual has a problem, though he (or she) may delude himself into believing he still has control over his drinking. Denial becomes paramount at this point. Those students quoted in your article who were recovering from alcohol addiction were critical of the university's approach. As one student quoted in your article put it, "When you hit bottom," when the look into the abyss of his personal hell is so frightening that it finally overcomes denial, his weak call for help must be heard and recognized as a last desperate cry for self-preservation. Strong support must be rendered immediately—within minutes or hours. Only a recovering alcoholic has the credibility to effectively relate to these individuals. Princeton needs such a counselor.

In their susceptibility to this terrible disease, which ravages individuals, families, and society, Princeton students are no different from anyone else in their age group. With 240 cases of alcohol toxicity admitted to the infirmary and alcohol-related assaults and injuries (as well as a death several years ago), could it be that Princeton itself is suffering from grand-scale denial? May I suggest that the university intermittently try a "dry week"

"Hungry Tuesday"?

I read with great interest of the Art Museum's recent acquisition of Willem de Kooning's abstract oil painting Black Friday, which was described as "the most significant gift of postwar American art ever made to the museum" (Notebook, December 5).

Your article and the photograph that accompanied it move me to donate one of my own original abstract paintings, which I enclose for transmittal to the Art Museum. I call it Hungry Tuesday, because on the morning I painted it, my kindergarten teacher, Mrs. Kiddleon, sadly informed the class that, because of a missed delivery, we would not receive our usual cartons of milk before commencing our lesson in finger-painting.

STEWART HARRIS '83
Alexandria, Va.

Exclusively for PAW readers:

NEW YEAR'S SOCK SALE

Wool, Cotton, and Now Colorful Orlon

Call toll-free:
In N.J., 1-800-624-4236
Elsewhere, 1-800-631-0137

- ___ Wool Anklet @ 3/$14.90
Color(s) _____
- ___ Wool Over-the-Calf
@ 3/$16.90
Color(s) _____
- ___ Cotton Anklet @ 3/$12.90
Color(s) _____
- ___ Cotton Over-the-Calf
@ 3/$14.90.
Color(s) _____
- ___ Orlon Anklet @ 3/$8.90
Color(s) _____

This year our popular PAW sock sale includes our colorful, fluffy orlon socks as well as our best quality wool and cotton, at the lowest price of the year.

Our wool socks are 65% wool for comfort and warmth, with 35% nylon for flex and fit. One size fits shoe size 8 to 12. Black, brown, grey or navy. Anklet, Reg. $7.00 or 3/$21.00, SALE 3/$14.90. Over-the-calf Reg. $8.00 or 3/$24.00, SALE 3/$16.90.

Our SuPima cotton socks are 85% mercerized cotton, 15% nylon, in black, brown, or navy. One size fits shoe size 8-12. Anklet, Reg. $6.00 or 3/$18.00, SALE 3/$12.90. Over-the-calf Reg. $7.00 or 3/$21.00, SALE 3/$14.90.

Orlon Weekender socks, one size, in black, brown, navy, lt. grey, camel, lt. blue, pink, or yellow. Reg $4.00 or 3/$12.00, SALE 3/$8.90. Add $4.25 shipping.

the
PRINCETON
University Store

36 University Place, Princeton, NJ 08540

Charge my ☐ U-Store ☐ VISA ☐ MasterCard ☐ AmEx

Acct. # _____ Exp. Date _____

Name _____

Address _____

City/State _____ ZIP _____

with a buddy system. This is not to limit the right to drink but to challenge these young adults for their own safety.

GEORGE S. WEBER '53, M.D.
Woodbury, N.J.

Rogers, Hall Recalled

To the fifteen or more classes whose undergraduate experiences commenced after his retirement, the obituary in the November 7 PAW of Professor of Physics Eric M. Rogers might have passed unnoticed. For many of us who were his freshman students, particularly those who were not destined to major in the physical sciences, he was a man who could change your life, and did, I'm sure, for hundreds of Princeton freshmen.

Some viewed him then, and may remember him now, as an eccentric character with wild, flying tufts of gray hair, a loping, lurching way of striding through a lecture hall or laboratory, and a habit of shouting his lectures. He was definitely not "cool," but he knew what he was doing. He was committed to squeezing into the brains of young Princetonians, especially those who he had reason to know would probably never again turn up in a laboratory, some fundamental understanding of the essential nature of scientific insight and method. He knew he didn't have much time with us, so the techniques had to be radical. They were, and they worked.

He had watched leaders of government, business, and the nonscientific professions struggle with momentous decisions involving science, unable to understand what they were hearing and seeing. He committed himself to changing that in his lifetime.

To all the earnest graduate students who struggled to follow up on his lectures with nervous freshmen, fearing that not enough good hard math and scientific substance were being absorbed, rest assured: at least this Princetonian was left with many insights, often based upon the recollection of graphic demonstrations that can never be forgotten, and a fascination with concepts that might never have been encountered. Some of that contribution to my life and work and to my sense of eager participation in this rapidly changing world I trace directly to Eric Rogers's freshman physics class.

May there be many more like him, cool or not.

RICHARD G. ADAMS '63
Middletown, Conn.

For Performance At Its Best, Rest Under The Roof.

North Princeton
Route 1 and New Road
908-821-8800

Princeton
I-295 and U.S. 1 North
U.S. 1 North, Exits 67/67A
609-896-3388

I loved your From the Archives of November 21, with the photograph of "Buzzer" Hall delivering his final lecture. He was a great teacher, and I was fortunate enough to have been one of his students. My years at Princeton coincided with the construction of the Harvey S. Firestone Memorial Library, a building made possible largely by gifts of the Firestone family.

One day, I had stopped at the edge of the construction pit when Professor Hall walked up, nodded to me, and joined in watching the excavation in progress. After a while, he said, "I flunked one of those Firestone boys, and I almost flunked the other!"

Then the famous Buzzer Hall walked off triumphantly.

EDMUND A. STANLEY, JR. '49
Oxford, Md.

Tenured Radicals

A note of appreciation for W. Robert Connor '61's lucid review of Tenured Radicals: How Politics Has Corrupted Our Higher Education, by Roger Kimball (PAW, October 10). One problem that the reviewer does not address, however, is that much of the errant view of what's going down at "elite" schools comes about because sensible, rational folks simply don't stand up and say, "Sit down, you clown, you're rocking the boat!" Letting some of this nonsensical rhetoric flow unchallenged by those who know better is akin to good men remaining silent. As for "politically correct" behavior, this is an eternal problem that I've found all over the world. Only the "correctness" of views varies, from Quebec to Moscow to Stockholm to wherever. I've long suspected that the intellectual's mind is inherently attracted to some form of totalitarianism and is uncomfortable unless and until everybody is aboard.

T. R. FEHRENBACH '45
Austin, Tex.

Tweedy Triplets

Regarding your photographs of Provost Paul Benacerraf '52 '60, Dean of the Engineering School Hisashi Kobayashi '67, and Director of Health Services Louis A. Pyle, Jr. '41, in the Notebook of November 7: is there a required uniform for university administrators these days?

JOSEPH BRASUELL '70
New York, N.Y.

Energy Crisis

Your photograph of Secretary of State James A. Baker III '52 and Prince Saud al-Faisal '64, the Saudi Arabian foreign minister, with a jocular caption suggesting that they may have been discussing Princeton's football prospects (PAW, November 7), reminded me of an interview I had with the prince in Riyadh in the fall of 1974, during his days as the deputy minister of petroleum. When I asked him his views on the energy crisis, he quipped that the energy crisis that was really bothering him was the one in Palmer Stadium!

JOHN LAW '45
Bethesda, Md.

Here's to Change

More format changes? The good old PAWS on my shelf, going all the way back to 1935, are turning over and over. But wait! The print in those old issues looks fuzzy, and everything looks rather old-fashioned. And the ads—starched collars, men in garters and BVDs, steam locomotives, and not a word about fundraising.

Six decades and six formats later, in comes yet another new model, snappier and trendier, as if someone had left a window open, letting in a fresh breeze to caress the back of my neck. America's economy may be weak as a kitten, but the faithful PAW stays in full fettle, a tiger ever young and handsome.

And have you seen the campus lately? It's changing, too. Among some 3,500 colleges and universities in this country, we remain very close to the top, but no longer are we the white-shoe crowd of old. Hardly anybody anxiously scans the society news over morning coffee. Most students have campus jobs, all dress conservatively but economically, and every fifth student has a dusky complexion. Every state of the Union and dozens of foreign countries are represented.

A spicy mixture to be sure. Many of them are enthusiastic athletes, and all of them have sharp intellects, are hell-bent to save the world and make a million, and they are just the ones to do it. We only hope they have come in time.

WILLIAM G. MACKENZIE '35
Pebble Beach, Calif.

Innate Perversity

In your Faculty File in the December 5 PAW, Professor of Psychology Joel Cooper says of computer anxiety, "This kind of emotional response just doesn't exist in our interactions with other mechanical devices . . ."

Wrong, wrong, wrong! Has the chairman of our psychology department never observed anyone kicking a recalcitrant piece of machinery or throwing something at it? Has he never taken a badly misbehaving automobile to a mechanic, only to have it purr like a kitten?

A former boss of mine once described this phenomenon, in which I devoutly believe, as "the innate perversity of inanimate objects."

LAURENCE DAWSON '42
Los Altos Hills, Calif.

Mixed Models

I am a bit baffled by the ad for an "elegant French country Tudor Princeton" in the November 21 PAW. The only confluence of French and Tudor I can remember is Mary Queen of Scots, whose bloodlines included some of each.

Perhaps the house advertised dates from the time (the mid-1930s) of the Ford "Tudor," which was not a half-timbered station wagon, as one might expect, but a two-door sedan.

FRANK POE '43
New York, N.Y.

Correction

I found Carol Zall '88's article on Princetonians at Oxford informative, entertaining, and generally accurate (PAW, October 24). I must point out, however, that my tenure here has been supported by the Marshall Aid Commemoration Commission, not by the Rhodes Trust.

MATTHEW I. SAAL '85
Oxford, England

PAW welcomes letters on topics of general interest to alumni. We reserve the right to edit for length and clarity. Our address is PAW, 41 William Street, Princeton, NJ 08540.

Children's Photographs from $75.00

Bachrach
Photographers since 1868

We're Now in Greenwich

Boston 617-536-4730 Chicago 312-642-5500
Greenwich 203-869-6922 Morristown 201-267-2006
New York 212-755-6233 Philadelphia 215-563-0551
Washington, D.C. 703-548-2111

Everything you expect
from a vacation paradise.

Beaches, Tennis, Golf, Dining,
Entertainment, Shopping,
Relaxation

Ralph Locke Islands, Inc.
P.O. Box #800
Waccabuc, N.Y. 10597
Toll Free Nationwide
(800)-223-1108

The Buccaneer
ST. CROIX, U.S. VIRGIN ISLANDS

Astronomer's Guide to the Universe: Professors Team Up to Map the Cosmos

ASTROPHYSICISTS from Princeton, the Institute for Advanced Study, and the University of Chicago have teamed up to conduct the largest survey of the universe ever undertaken. The Digital Survey of the Sky, which will take five to seven years to finish and will map a volume of space a hundred times greater than all previous surveys, will get underway in 1995, when the telescope to be used in the survey is completed. Each institution will fund a third of the project's $15 million cost.

Scientists hope that the survey will help answer some of the most basic questions about the origin and evolution of the universe: What is the nature and distribution of mass in the universe, and what does this tell us about the universe's large-scale structure? How did galaxies form, and what is their pattern of distribution throughout space? And how rare are quasars (extremely distant and luminous objects thought to play a role in the birth of galaxies)?

Astronomers have likened what the survey will produce to a kind of celestial topographic map—a three-dimensional diagram in which every observable galaxy, star, and quasar in a wedge-shaped area of space around us will be plotted. Says Richard Kron, an astrophysicist at the University of Chicago: "This project provides a road map to the universe; we have to know what's around us to figure out where it's come from and where it's going. We need to establish a good sample of the nearby universe in order to understand the more distant and hence earlier one." Scientists expect that the Digital Sky Survey will enable them to "look back" about 20 percent of the time to the Big Bang, the theoretical event in which the universe began ten to twenty billion years ago.

The primary instrument for the survey will be a wide-angle, 100-inch telescope to be installed at Apache Point, in the Sacramento Mountains of New Mexico. The telescope, whose principal designer is James E. Gunn, the Eugene Higgins Professor of Astronomy, will be the first to combine state-of-the-art optical, detector, and computer technologies. Its wide-angle lens will take in a patch of sky thirty-six times wider than the full moon, and a corrector plate will eliminate distortion, increasing the range of the telescope's accuracy. Light passing through the lens will be captured by an array of thirty charge-coupled devices, detection instruments a hundred times more sensitive than photographic film.

FACULTY FILE

New Medical Evidence Reshapes View of Wilson's Presidency

Arthur S. Link

IMAGINE FINDING OUT in the last mile of a marathon that the distance to the finish line had suddenly lengthened, but that the detour was worth the trip.

That vastly understates the recent experience of Arthur S. Link, the George Henry Davis '86 Professor of American History and the editor since 1958 of the multi-volume Papers of Woodrow Wilson. Link, who published his first book on Wilson (Wilson: The Road to the White House) in 1947, has dedicated his lengthy scholarly career to the twenty-eighth president. But it was just last spring that Link made one of his most startling discoveries about his subject.

The discovery came about when Link received a large package of documents from the son of Dr. Cary Grayson, Wilson's personal physician at the time of his futile fight with the Congress over whether the United States would ratify the Versailles Treaty and join the League of Nations. The package turned out to be only the tip of the scholarly iceberg. Link learned that the Grayson family had four filing cabinets crammed with documents that offer a wealth of insights into Wilson's perplexing, ineffective behavior during the critical struggle over ratification. The biggest prize of all was his medical records, which the doctor's family had kept from historians out of respect for the confidential nature of patient-physician relations.

The records show that Wilson was vexed by serious cerebrovascular disease even before October 1919, when he suffered a major stroke. In fact, Wilson had been afflicted by interruptions in the flow of blood to his brain for years—as far back as 1896—and this condition hampered his mental functions at a time when he, and the world, needed intellectual adroitness.

"It is one of the great tragedies of the twentieth century," Link says. "The man who was most responsible for building support for the idea of a league of nations was struck down just as his leadership was most needed. And he was struck down by events over which he had no control."

According to Link and other scholars, the medical records cast a new light on the bitter end to Wilson's Presidency. In the past, some analysts and biographers of Wilson advanced theories about a fatal psychological or character defect, but they now seem far less credible.

The records include a firsthand account of the President's grim condition following the stroke. Francis X. Dercum, a neurologist and stroke specialist who rushed from Philadelphia to Washington after Wilson's collapse, describes the sixty-three-year-old Wilson falling into and out of consciousness. One side of his face drooped, and his left leg and arm were completely paralyzed.

Equally important, Link notes, the records show that the

These detectors will convert the images directly to digital signals for computer analysis, and specially designed software will sort the images by type.

A great advantage of such a computer-intensive system is its blinding speed. According to Jeremiah P. Ostriker, the Charles A. Young Professor of Astronomy and chairman of the astrophysics department, designing and building this system will take "hundreds of thousands of hours," but "once the survey gets underway, the recording and analysis of objects will be almost completely automated" and will require little time on the part of the survey team.

The telescope's package of instruments will also include a robot-controlled spectrograph capable of measuring the color of the light from as many as six hundred stellar bodies at a time. Astronomers use an object's spectrum to determine its distance from Earth—essential to creating a three-dimensional map of the universe. The survey is expected to increase a hundred-fold the number of recorded quasars (to 100,000) and galaxies (to one million) with measured distances.

Students Receive Two Marshalls

TWO PRINCETON SENIORS, Peter R. Orszag '91 and Albert Jun-Wei Wong '91, are among forty American students who were awarded Marshall Scholarships for study at British universities. Wong, a physics major from Oak Ridge, Tennessee, plans to study theoretical biophysics at New College, Oxford. Orszag, an economics major from Princeton, intends to study international economics at the London School of Economics. These coveted awards are worth approximately $24,000 a year and provide for two or three years of study.

In the competition for Rhodes Scholarships, Princeton students fared less well. For the second time in three years—but only the third time since 1976—Princetonians were shut out of the competition for the thirty-two Rhodes Scholarships awarded annually to Americans. Students from Harvard (five) and Yale (four) garnered the most awards.

Orszag is writing his senior thesis on Congressional oversight of the Federal Reserve Bank. He works as an editorial consultant to The American Prospect, a political journal published in Princeton, and as assistant to the president of Crittix, Inc., he is helping to market a new technique for reprocessing spent nuclear fuel. Orszag, the son of Stephen A. Orszag '66, a professor of engineering at Princeton, plans to obtain a Ph.D. and become a government economist.

Wong, who has published several scholarly articles, including one in the Journal of Theoretical Biology on prebiotic evolution, is writing his thesis on the origins of ordered systems. He plays intramural soccer for Campus Club, sits on the Undergraduate Student Government's Academics Committee, and plans to earn a doctorate and teach at a research university.

Michael W. Cadden, an assistant professor of English and the adviser to Princeton's Rhodes applicants, speculated that a higher-than-usual number of Princeton students applying from the same states may have affected their individual chances. □ stroke was the culmination of a disease that had Wilson in its grip during the crucial preceding months. Backed by modern-day analyses of the records, Link sees in Wilson's intransigence and muddled thinking the classic symptoms of someone suffering from cerebrovascular disease.

Wilson's pre-stroke condition, Link observes, "had disastrous implications in his negotiations with the Senate. He was just then beginning talks with a large group of moderate Republicans who had 'moderate' reservations to the treaty. His medical problem simply threw him into a state of disorientation, confusion, memory loss, intransigence. He seemed to lose the customary powers of leadership and conciliation that would have succeeded in getting reasonable groups together on a platform that would have put the treaty and league across."

It would not have taken much to accomplish this reconciliation, says Link, because national sentiment was favorably inclined toward the league, and senators' objections were relatively minor. The Wilson who performed so adroitly at the Paris Peace Conference certainly could have forged a compromise, Link says. And so could have Vice President Thomas R. Marshall, if Wilson had died or resigned, according to Link. (The Wilson papers show that Wilson indeed would have stepped down after the stroke had his wife not vetoed the idea.)

It's an academic exercise, of course, but imagine the implications. Link, for one, doubts that Hitler would have gotten away with aggression for as long as he did if the United States had joined the League of Nations.

The discovery of this seventy-year-old evidence has had dramatic implications, too, for Wilson's chief biographer, who this spring will oversee the publication of the sixty-fourth volume of the Wilson papers. The new materials supplied by Dr. Grayson's family stretched by several hundred pages the amount of space that will be needed to cover Wilson's life from late 1919 to 1920.

It means a lot emotionally to Link as well. The seventy-year-old historian identifies with the former president, a fellow Virginian and a man who helped shape the university where Link has toiled since 1959. He speaks of Wilson as if he knows him personally, because, in a way, he does.

The new medical information is both painful and reassuring to Wilson admirers. It hurts to learn of a great man's medical woes, but it's heartening, Link says, to discover that Wilson's problems were caused by physical ravages rather than ineptitude or character flaws.

"I'm dedicated to historical truth first," says Link. "Having said that, I can say I've found Wilson one of the most attractive and endearing persons I've ever encountered in history. I think I know Woodrow Wilson. If he had neuroses, I would know it. If he had psychoses, the whole world would know it by now. When a well person who normally gets on with people—the person I call the 'characteristic Wilson'—goes off and does impulsive, irrational things at times, there has got to be a cause. If the cause is psychological, that's going to persist. But problems arising from what might be called interpersonal relationships are episodic and rare in Wilson's case. So I would say there is a very measurable, absolutely identifiable connection between his health and his behavior.

"The failing of Wilson's health at such a critical juncture is very hard to take emotionally after you've lived with the man for fifty years. It is sometimes like going through a prolonged serious illness with a close friend."

—Tom Krattenmaker

Tom Krattenmaker is the senior writer in the university's Office of Communications.

It's Not Easy Being Paul Volcker These Days

WALKING INTO ANY CLASS at the beginning of a term at Princeton can produce a wide variety of emotions, from interest and anticipation to dread and even boredom. But when you first walk into Paul A. Volcker '49's class—which for undergraduates is a fall-term policy conference in the Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs—you can't help but feel a little intimidated.

Volcker is, after all, a big man on campus—in every sense of the phrase. In 1987, after eight years as chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, he retired to general acclaim as the official who had tamed the stagflation of the 1970s. He is also unusual on the Princeton campus in that, unlike most professors, all his experience has been hands-on, in the "real world." Finally, Volcker stands out in more obvious ways: he is a big man and towers over his students. A basketball player as an undergraduate, he's six-foot-eight, with a proportional girth.

Needless to say, when Volcker left the Fed, many businesses and financial institutions were interested in hiring him. But, says Volcker, "I didn't want to spend 100 percent of my time doing business at this stage of my life. I needed the stimulus of an academic environment." Among the many universities that were also trying to recruit him, Princeton offered the best combination of factors: first, the opportunity to teach at his alma mater's school of public policy, rather than a business school (after all, he's spent most of his career in the public sector); second, the flexibility to pursue outside business interests throughout the academic year; and third, the proximity of Princeton to Manhattan, where he lives with his family.

Volcker, officially the Frederick H. Schultz '51 Professor of International Economic Policy, spends the first two days of the week in Princeton, teaching and holding office hours. From Wednesday to Friday, he sees to his responsibilities as president of James D. Wolfensohn, Inc., which Volcker describes as "a small company advising select corporate customers on strategic planning." During breaks in the university's calendar, Volcker travels on business a great deal; recent trips have taken him to the Far East, Europe, and Latin America.

Yet teaching at Princeton has remained his primary pursuit. According to Anthony D. Marcus, a Ph.D. candidate in the Wilson School who works closely with Volcker, "he enjoys teaching more than anything else he does right now. I am amazed at how much time and energy he devotes to the class."

Volcker is also unusual in that, unlike most professors, all his experience has been hands-on, in the "real world."

Paul A. Volcker '49

Because of the nature of policy conferences at the Wilson School, and their heavy emphasis on independent work, Volcker's undergraduate classes aren't lectures but seminars. In class, he is usually reticent, a quality that Marcus attributes to his reluctance to interfere with the students' debate and discussion. The most important contact between Volcker and his class occurs one on one, as he works individually with his third-year students on their junior papers (J.P.s).

He also has one of the most extensive Rolodex files in Princeton, so he can call on government and business experts in a variety of fields to assist his students. Last fall's conference, for example, was entitled "U.S. and Mexico: A New Economic Relationship." Volcker arranged meetings for his class with undersecretaries in the Mexican government and with the president of Banco de México (Mexico's equivalent of the Federal Reserve Bank). The Mexican Ambassador himself is to hear the conference's final report this month.

Despite all the fame that surrounds him, Volcker's students seem to have overcome their initial fear of the man. Even so, Volcker says, "my students don't come around to 'bother' me enough during office hours, especially early in the term." But as the deadline for the first drafts of their J.P.s draws near, many of his juniors find it useful to drop by his office, in the recently dedicated Bendheim Hall, on Mondays or Tuesdays. Later in the term, at individual conferences with Volcker, the students have to orally defend not only the theses of their papers but also their writing styles. For some students, it is their first such experience at Princeton.

With so many irons in the fire at once, it's not easy being Paul Volcker these days. Sometimes the demands on his time catch up with him, and he has to charter a helicopter to fly him from New York to Princeton so he won't be late to a meeting of his policy conference. And the pace of his life is not slowing down. The final report of last spring's graduate-level conference, on American and Japanese views of international monetary exchanges, is due to be published as a book. Likewise, the embrace of capitalism by formerly communist nations around the world has made him a sought-after lecturer.

Once his students overcome their awe, Volcker seems to be able to break through to them. By the end of the term, says Alice W. Detwiler '91, most students "think of him as just another professor—they treat him with a lot of respect, but they don't try to soak up every word that comes out of his mouth."

—Matthew T. Henshon '91

Matt Henshon, a senior from Wilbraham, Massachusetts, is majoring in the Woodrow Wilson School and plays on the varsity basketball team.

Extending into the Zone.

Suddenly you totally control the game with the new Prince Extender.™ The innovative, teardrop design increases the string bed and sweet spot for relentless power. You feel it instantly. Its lightweight, aerodynamic frame gives you the maneuverability that turns tough gets into winners. Point after point. More touch, more power, more racquet. It gives you unbounded confidence, taking you and your game one step further... "extending" you into a dimension we call the zone.

Mark Talbott, World Hardball Champion

© 1990 Prince Manufacturing, Inc.

CTS Extender™

Extender™

Extender SC™

Extender Comp™

prince®
Playing in the Zone™

The new Prince Extender Series. Four distinct models for every level of play. Extend into the zone by seeing your dealer, or calling 1.800.2TENNIS.

Digitized by

PRINCETON IN WHOSE SERVICE?

*Woodrow Wilson's Famous Phrase Has Come
To Mean Much More Than He Intended*

By Theodore J. Ziolkowski

EVER SINCE 1896, WHEN WOODROW Wilson formulated the phrase, "Princeton in the Nation's Service" has often been regarded as the unofficial motto of the university. At fundraising time, "the nation" has seemed to be a more promising source than the authority designated in the official motto on the university's seal, Det sub numine viget (Under God's power she flourishes). During World War II, Annual Giving sent out orange cards captioned "Princeton in the Nation's Service," assuring that "The Trustees, Administration, and Faculty of Princeton University conceive her role as one of complete cooperation with all demands on her facilities." In the early 1980s, the case statement for A Campaign for Princeton reminded potential donors that "Wilson's eloquent essay . . . suggested not just an opportunity, but an obligation, to apply one's learning to the affairs of the world."

Over the years, "service" has come to be understood in the widest possible sense. The Woodrow Wilson Award, bestowed annually on the alumnus who best exemplifies Wilson's conception of "Princeton in the Nation's Service," has been presented to physicians, physicists, philanthropists, and movie stars, among other servants of the people. Popularly, the phrase has been applied even more broadly. An editorial in The Princeton Sentinel, a newspaper of conservative student opinion, invoked it in defense of R.O.T.C.'s presence on the campus.

In short, uses for Wilson's famous phrase have been limited only by the ingenuity of the users. But are these uses appropriate? If we seek to recapture Wilson's own understanding of his phrase, we need first of all to locate it in context. "Princeton in the Nation's Service" was the title of his oration at the celebration of the university's sesquicentennial, on October 20, 21, and 22, 1896, one of the most spectacular academic festivals ever held on this side of the Atlantic. Two years in the planning, the extravaganza was preceded by a week of lectures by six distinguished scholars from Europe. Recalling the event several years later in a 475-page memorial book, Professor George Maclean Harper 1884 wrote, "Nature herself had donned Princeton colors" for the occasion. Two huge triumphal arches were erected on Nassau Street—a copy of the Arch of Trajan and a model of Manhattan's Washington Arch. The latter bore inscriptions in Latin bidding farewell to the College of New Jersey and greeting Princeton University, as the college was to be renamed.

Each morning at 10:30, an academic procession, which included representatives from seventy-seven educational institutions of the United States and Europe, formed in Marquand Chapel and then marched to Alexander Hall for the day's events. The first program featured a sermon by President Francis L. Patton, "Religion and the University," followed by a presentation of the delegates and a performance of, among other works, Brahms's Academic Festival Overture. The second day opened with literary performances sponsored by the Whig and Cliosophic societies, and in the afternoon Princeton defeated Virginia, 48-0, in a football game. That evening, the President of the United States, Grover Cleveland, reviewed an elaborately orchestrated torchlight procession from the steps of Nassau Hall.

At the formal celebration of the sesquicentennial, on October 22, President Patton's announcement that the College of New Jersey "shall in all future time be known as Princeton University" prompted the audience, according to Harper, to break into "immense applause, which settled into deep, concerted, shattering cheering." In the name of the new university, and with the Latin formula still used today, Patton capped the ceremony by awarding fifty-eight honorary doctorates. President Cleveland, for whom a reception was held that afternoon at Prospect, was so attracted to the university and the community by the events of those October days that he retired to Princeton after he left office the following year.

Opposite: Woodrow Wilson in about 1902, when he was elected president of Princeton. The academic gown reflects the Ph.D. he received from Johns Hopkins.

Wilson as photographed by Pach Brothers in 1893.

Wilson gave the address entitled "Princeton in the Nation's Service" on the morning of the second day. He shared the dais with Henry van Dyke 1873, a professor of literature who, representing the Cliosophic Society, recited his ode "The Builders." Wilson, a professor of jurisprudence, had been active in the Whig Society during his undergraduate years and was the obvious choice to represent that organization. A charismatic lecturer who enjoyed an almost cultlike following among students—they routinely voted him the most popular teacher on the faculty—the thirty-nine-year-old Wilson was also a national figure celebrated for his high-minded (albeit often unscholarly) lectures, magazine articles, and biographies. The sesquicentennial provided him with an ideal opportunity to strut his stuff before a distinguished international audience. In a letter, Wilson's wife, Ellen, reported of his speech that famous men from all parts of Europe "declared there had been 'nothing to equal it since Burke.'" Princetonians, she added, "simply fell on his neck and wept for joy. They say that those who could not get at Woodrow were shaking each others [sic] hands and congratulating each other in a perfect frenzy of delight that Princeton had so covered herself with glory before the visitors."

What did Wilson say in his oration to arouse such a fervent response? He began by reviewing the early history of the university for the assembled guests. Following a quick sketch of its founding and its earliest leaders, he devoted the first half of his lengthy address to the era of John Witherspoon (president, 1768-94), when Princeton became for a time "the academic centre of the Revolution." Princetonians never tire, he explained to the visitors, of enumerating the public figures who graduated from Princeton during Witherspoon's time, nor did Wilson refrain from reciting that catalogue. Then rather abruptly, he reminded his listeners that "The Revolutionary days are gone, and you shall not find upon her rolls another group of names given to public life that can equal her muster in the days of the Revolution and the formation of the government." The students of Witherspoon were "the special fruitage of an exceptional time."

It is only this first half of the oration that in any strict sense justifies the speech's title. But this part was composed almost by prescription to fulfill its expected function: the sesquicentennial celebration, after all, had to include a survey of the institution's past. But it was not the historical elegy that most concerned Wilson and excited his listeners. Writing in his diary, Horace Elisha Scudder summarized Wilson's address as "a well considered historical discourse closing with a strong plea for the humanities in the college course." Another listener, Henry Newell Hoxie, a teacher at the Haverford School, congratulated

Wilson on "the bright & stirring outline of the college history"; but what impressed him most was Wilson's stress on "the higher civilizing influences of Europe" and his "reference to the worth of the classic literatures."

In the second part, which constitutes the thematic core of the oration, Wilson pointed out that while the Revolution produced "a radical work of change in the world," it also was "a work of conservation." In a profound sense, his oration can be called the same. Progress is life, he observed, but "not all change is progress, not all growth is the manifestation of life. Let one part of the body be in haste to outgrow the rest and you have malignant disease, the threat of death." Thus, "the College should serve the state as its organ of recollection, its seat of vital memory." Men who aspire to leadership must be able to calculate the probabilities of failure and success, to distinguish the permanent from the fleeting, to understand the principles according to which others have lived. The right preparation for leadership in the world, therefore, is "the catholic study of the world's literature as a record of spirit." Anticipating Santayana's famous aphorism, Wilson argued that it is essential to keep alive the world's memory, "or we shall never see an end of its old mistakes." He saw as the greatest danger in the present the loss of contact with the lessons of the past. "In America, especially, we run perpetually this risk of newness." The danger was more immediate in the 1890s than during the Revolutionary era, he said, because the "men whom Madison led in the making of the Constitution were men who regarded the past." It is the responsibility of universities in a free society "not merely to implant a sense of duty, but to illuminate duty by every lesson that can be drawn out of the past." No one can consider himself knowledgeable about the world of affairs who knows "only that little last segment of it which we call the present."

The best means of retaining the inherited wisdom of the past, Wilson continued, was "the intimate study of the ancient classics"—by which he meant the literature of Rome and Greece. (He specifically cited the authors he had been required to study as an undergraduate: Plato, Vergil, Horace, and Tacitus.) The admirer of Burke and Macaulay also included in his curriculum the rhetorical classics of English literature. And the professor of jurisprudence proclaimed his belief in "full, explicit instruction in history and in politics, in the experiences of peoples and the fortunes of governments."

It was this emphasis on the traditional humanities, or "liberal culture" as Matthew Arnold put it, that stirred many of his listeners to such expressions of rapture. But that was not all. As Wilson's brother-in-law Stockton Axson wrote to him, "it must have required some genuine courage to speak so plainly to the scientific fellows (or rather to the fellows who seek to misapply scientific principles)." That was what appealed to Waterman Thomas Hewett, a professor at Cornell who returned from a sabbatical in Europe to discover that "the technical men" at his institution had voted to drop a proficiency in Latin and Greek as a requirement for the A.B. degree—a decision that agitated classicists all over the country considered scandalous. (Princeton, for one, would retain its Latin requirement until 1930.) As Wilson wrote in his sympathetic response to a letter from Hewett, "It is deplorable and Philistine so to impoverish the arts degree; but we must live to fight another day. I believe the fortunes of the day can be turned in favour of the classics, if we are only stubborn, tactful, and eloquent enough." He added that "the plain men, whose sons we are teaching," are "beginning to notice the failure of the technical schools to fulfil their first promise."

What prompted these responses? In his oration, Wilson acknowledged "the extraordinary advances in physical science which this great age has witnessed," conceding that anyone who begrudged science its proper triumph would be a "barbarian" and a "lover of darkness." But he believed that the scientific spirit had produced a "great degeneracy." For science, in its arrogance of success, had engendered a "spirit of experiment" accompanied by a "contempt for the past." Wilson stressed that he was not pronouncing an indictment against science as such. "I have only a warning to utter against the atmosphere which has stolen from laboratories into lecture rooms and into the general air of the world at large." It had not only "driven mystery out of the Universe" but had infected other disciplines. Even the study of the classics, he lamented, had begun to sell out to "the phenomena of language" rather than "the movement of spirit."

But "worst of all," said Wilson, "we believe in the present and in the future more than in the past, and deem the newest theory of society the likeliest." He trembled at the thought of social reform, he went on, "led by men who have breathed" the "noxious, intoxicating gas" of science. Fearing "nothing better than utter destruction from a revolution conceived and led in the scientific spirit," Wilson added that, although science may have liberated us from superstition and disease, "it has not freed us from ourselves." Rather, by making wealth too easily attainable, it has merely intensified our ambitions.

Left: One of the highlights of Princeton's sesquicentennial celebration was a torchlight parade that Grover Cleveland, then President of the United States, reviewed from Nassau Hall.

Above: Each day of the celebration began with an academic procession. Here one passes in front of West College.

Wilson's reasoning—which strikingly anticipated the arguments of such educational conservatives of the 1980s as Allan Bloom and Lynne Cheney—led him to ask in his peroration for "the old drill, the old memory of times gone by, the old schooling in precedent and tradition, the old keeping of faith with the past, as a preparation for leadership in days of social change." While conceding science a modest place in the curriculum, he asserted that we must, above all, "make the humanities human again."

At the sesquicentennial, President Francis L. Patton announced that the College of New Jersey would henceforth be known as Princeton University.

In his closing paragraphs, Wilson recalled his initial theme, concluding that "it is not learning but the spirit of service that will give a college place in the public annals of the nation." He spoke of "the compulsion of the national life" and "the rough ways of democracy." For Wilson in 1896, "the perfect place of learning" was a little world apart, "a place removed,—calm Science seated there, recluse, ascetic, like a nun, not knowing that the world passes, not caring, if the truth but come in answer to her prayer; and Literature, walking within her open doors, in quiet chambers, with men of olden times, storied walls about her, and calm voices infinitely sweet." Wilson's university, in other words, is not in the world, even though, in the image so dear to him, it has windows that "open straight upon the street," where action takes place. It is a place where we "learn the truth about the past" but merely "hold debate about the affairs of the present, with knowledge and without passion." The university, in short, is a place for introspection, not extroversion. "Who," he cries in his closing sentence, "shall show us the way to this place?"

AS HIS AUDIENCE WELL UNDERSTOOD, WILSON HAD intentions quite different from those often attributed to him by readers who project onto the grand oration their consciousness of subsequent events: Wilson's creation of the preceptorial method of instruction, his crusade against the eating clubs, his battle over the Graduate College, and his political career. Wilson, not yet a university president or a politician, was an academic speaking to a distinguished audience of American and European scholars. For contemporary listeners, his oration amounted to a major statement in the great educational debate of the 1890s (see Laurence R. Veysey's The Emergence of the American University [1965]). Some of the issues in this debate were the vocationalism of the land-grant institutions versus the "liberal culture" of many private colleges; the new "research" imported from Germany to such aspiring universities as Johns Hopkins versus the studium generale of undergraduate colleges; required study of Greek and Latin versus the modern languages, which had recently asserted themselves through the establishment, in 1883, of the Modern Language Association; free electives according to the Harvard model versus the strict curriculum of Princeton; specialization versus a synthesizing general education; the nonpaternalistic arrangements at universities that, following the European model, provided no common housing for their students versus the collegiate system in loco parentis based on the English model.

Most of these issues are either explicit or implicit in Wilson's oration. Only a decade earlier, James McCosh, Princeton's president from 1868 to 1888, had raised one of the most articulate voices in the debate surrounding the revolutionary elective system at Harvard. "If our colleges discard Latin and Greek," he said, "the whole ancient world with its thoughts and deeds will remain very much unknown even to our educated men." In a pamphlet entitled The New Departure in College Education (1884), McCosh gloated: "I am glad that things have come to a crisis," for friends of education would now discover what was going on. "Tell it not in Berlin or Oxford that the once most illustrious university in America no longer requires its graduates to know the most perfect language, the grandest literature, the most elevated thinking of all antiquity."

Wilson, himself a product of McCosh's Princeton, echoed these sentiments regarding the classics, which he saw as besieged from two directions. First was the threat of the modern languages. Although he took (or more often cut) Joseph Kargé's French recitations and later learned enough German to decipher the standard works on legal administration that constituted his principal sources, Wilson was never comfortable with modern languages. Christian Gauss once wrote to Edmund Wilson '16 (no relation to Woodrow) that "He was more than usually ignorant of European civilization and literature as it exists outside of England." And Freud, in the "psychological study" of Wilson that he wrote with William C. Bullitt, repeatedly speaks of his "comprehensive dislike of France, Germany and Italy," arguing that Wilson was "cut off from direct contact with European life by his ignorance of European languages."

It was consistent with this view that, besides Greek and Latin, Wilson made a place in his ideal curriculum only for English literature—and an essentially rhetorical English not debased by the new philological spirit imported from Germany. Wilson was reflecting a view widespread at the time and expressed most often, perhaps, in the battle of liberal humanists against the encroachment of the Ph.D. on the liberal arts. In Literature and the American College (1908), Irving Babbitt bemoaned "the fetish worship of the doctor's degree on the part of certain college presidents," arguing that "this acceptance of the doctor's degree as proof of fitness for a chair of literature . . . is doing more than any one thing to dehumanize literary study and fix on our colleges a philological despotism."

But Wilson had in sight a broader target than the modern languages and what he saw as the philological debasement of the classics. He was taking a stand against the many American colleges that, at the end of the nineteenth century, were seeking to transform themselves into research universities on the model of the great German institutions. Wilson himself almost failed to obtain his Ph.D. because he could not adjust to the German research methods that dominated historical seminars at Johns Hopkins. This shift was taking place mainly in the sciences, because the Ph.D. was regarded, initially at least in the United States, as training for scientific research. It is no accident that many of the first presidents of the major research institutions were themselves scientists who had studied in Germany: the physical geographer Daniel Coit Gilman at Johns Hopkins, the chemist Charles W. Eliot at Harvard, and the psychologist G. Stanley Hall at Clark University.

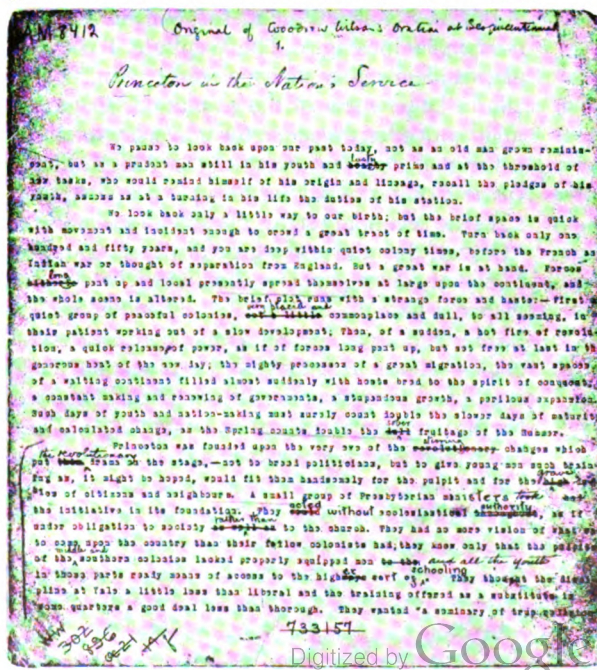

In short, Wilson's oration—particularly its second half, which appealed to most of his listeners—was intended to be a staunch defense of the traditional liberal arts against the trend toward modern languages that was undermining the classics, against the scientific methods of research that underlie the modern American university, and against the movement toward theory and method that presaged the neglect of history as ethical narrative.

Certainly, with his famous phrase, Wilson did not mean to suggest anything like today's Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs, where students learn about countries that hardly entered the intellectual ken of a man uncomfortable even in Western Europe. The off-campus internships in which students at the Wilson School participate would have struck him as suspiciously utilitarian. As Wilson wrote in Mere Literature and Other Essays, a book published in the year of the sesquicentennial, "There is more of a nation's politics to be got out of the poetry than out of all its systematic writers upon public affairs and constitutions." It is no accident that Wilson was fond in his rhetoric of spatial images like windows and doors and quadrangles; at this point, well over a decade before he evolved his politically motivated "democratic" theory of education, he still clung to his belief in the university as an elite institution closed off from the outside world, a place where the student could remain detached and aloof, gazing through the window at an external reality that, properly fortified by an education in the traditional liberal arts, he might later enter.

For this reason, the ecstatic letters that Wilson received after the oration amount to a roll call of the educational conservatives of the day. The few dissenting voices came from scientists like Ira Remsen, a professor of chemistry who was soon to become the president of Johns Hopkins. By means of his oration, Wilson was consciously positioning himself on the conservative side in the controversy between the ancient and the modern, between the humanities and the sciences, between history and theory, between liberal culture and vocationalism. Princeton in the nation's service? Perhaps. But through a traditional liberal-arts curriculum rather than the progressive educational initiatives taking place elsewhere in the country. Certainly, however, Princeton in Wilson's service. For the rhetorical flourish of the last sentence made it quite clear that, with regard to the future leadership of the newly named university, he was proposing himself as the most suitable person to "show us the way to this place." He was not to be disappointed.

SIX YEARS LATER, WILSON RETURNED TO THE SAME topic under almost the same title in his inaugural address as the university's president, "Princeton for the Nation's Service." This address amounts to a rhetorical inversion of the sesquicentennial oration: it ends with praise for Witherspoon's Revolutionary Princeton and begins with an ode to service. "The service of institutions of learning is not private but public. . . . [The nation] needs efficient and enlightened men. The universities of the country must take part in supplying them."

The first page of Wilson's typescript of "Princeton in the Nation's Service," delivered on October 21, 1896.

Four-year-old Alexander Hall was the site of Wilson's sesquicentennial and inaugural orations.

But having stated his theme, Wilson reiterates the familiar message of liberal culture. To be sure, as president rather than professor he must now take a larger view of the institution. He grudgingly concedes a place in his university to electrical engineering, "upon which the skilled industry of the modern world is built up," but he emphasizes the secondary status of professional schools. "Though the university may dispense with professional schools, professional schools may not dispense with the university. Professional schools have nowhere their right atmosphere and association except where they are parts of a university and share its spirit and method." He makes room for the modern languages (to which, as president, he would soon grant the status of a department)—not as ends in themselves but merely as "tools of scholarship." And he yields a larger role to science, "because science has had its credentials accepted as of the true patriciate of learning." Indeed, physics and chemistry offer a body of knowledge "as definitive almost, as mathematics itself." But science, the modern languages, and other concessions to modernity must be kept within bounds. "We must observe proportion and remember what it is that we seek."

What Wilson sought is still precisely what he advocated in the sesquicentennial oration: "a catholic appreciation of the best achievements of men and the best processes of thought since days of thought set in." In its quest for knowledge, civilization had lost "system," by which Wilson meant coherence and synthesis. This synthesis would be best restored by way of the "fundamental studies," by which he meant history and philosophy and literature—"the old discipline of Greek, Latin, Mathematics, and English" enlarged, within reason, by science and the modern tongues.

This is what Wilson meant by service. "It is serving the nation to give men the enlightenments of a general training." To achieve this final synthesis, "men must for a little while withdraw from action." Wilson's university, the "quiet place of remove from the bustle of actions," has changed little from his image of 1896, and it's a frankly elitist institution—"not for the majority who carry forward the common labour of the world" but "for the minority who plan, who conceive, who superintend, who mediate between group and group and must see the wide stage as a whole."

WILSON DELIVERED BOTH THESE GREAT ORATIONS IN Alexander Hall, beneath the south window of which a Latin inscription speaks of "serene temples informed by the teachings of the wise." These lines from Lucretius reflect Wilson's elitist view of Princeton as a place detached from the outside world, an institution where young men prepared themselves for life and leadership by studying philosophy, history, and the literature of antiquity, with a carefully controlled measure of science and modern languages. A curriculum in the nation's service, yes—but hardly one that would satisfy the students and faculty of today's Princeton, with its distinguished departments of science and modern languages, its powerful graduate school, its noted professional schools, and its diverse student body.

The appropriation of Wilson's phrase for such a variety of purposes, from justifying professional schools to supporting military recruitment, tells us a good deal about the nature of language, both its resilience and its incantatory power. It is perfectly permissible to use those magic words for our purposes today, so long as we remember that they no longer mean what Wilson intended. At the same time, this rhetorical exercise should caution us to pay critical attention whenever anyone seeks to manipulate our minds with slogans and quotations, no matter how revered their sources.

Theodore Ziolkowski, the Class of 1900 Professor of Modern Languages and a professor of comparative literature and Germanic languages and literatures, has been dean of the Graduate School since 1979. His most recent book is German Romanticism and Its Institutions (Princeton University Press, 1990).

Cold Handshake, Warm Heart

Princeton's Oldest Living Alumnus Recalls Woodrow Wilson

Arthur C. Holden '12

IT WAS IN 1908, WHILE I WAS PREPARING TO enter Princeton, that I learned about the trouble brewing over President Woodrow Wilson's opposition to the eating clubs. Wilson believed that the clubs had grown too sure of themselves and too aristocratic and that they should be replaced by a system of quadrangles similar to the residential colleges for freshmen and sophomores that exist on the campus today. "Our universities must be careful," I recall him saying, "lest the sideshow swallow up the circus." The existence of the clubs was only one of several fractious issues that, by the middle of my junior year, would drive Wilson from what he called the "hard politics" of the university to the relatively easy politics of elective office.

As a freshman, I often heard Wilson speak in Marquand Chapel and was always impressed with the aptness of his phrases. I did not really appreciate either his charm or the depth of his mind, however, until as a student in his course on jurisprudence I encountered him in the classroom. When he discussed government, he talked about the ability of men to mold their environment. His articulateness and forcefulness as a speaker were far beyond anything I have encountered, before or since.

It happened that I was a classmate and clubmate of Randolph West '12-'13, who was the son of Andrew Fleming West 1874, the first dean of the Graduate School and Wilson's great adversary in the debate over the scale and location of the proposed graduate college. As a sophomore, I often had supper at the Wests' home and became acquainted with the dean's charm. He loved to read and discuss Latin poetry and the great culture that it represented.

I was at Dean West's one night when the subject of the graduate college came up. To my surprise, the dean said that Wilson had deceived him. Although the remark left me momentarily speechless, I had the presence of mind to ask him, "What did he say?" After a pause, the dean replied, "He didn't say anything, but by remaining quiet he let me assume assent."

Years later, in the university's library, I came across a plan for a graduate college. This document showed the college as a quadrangle, with the existing 1879 Hall forming its east side. Although West had signed it, the plan obviously reflected Wilson's preference for a relatively small graduate college near the center of the campus, not West's vision of a larger college off the main campus and isolated from undergraduates.

The battle over the graduate college came to a head in the spring of 1910, during the second half of my sophomore year. It split the faculty and trustees and resulted in Wilson's resignation as president of Princeton during the fall of my junior year. But by then, he had set out on a new career, on a path that would take him first to the governor's mansion and ultimately to the White House. Although he was an academic without experience in elective office, Wilson was successful in politics because of his great magnetism and intellect, and because he cultivated a national following through his many magazine articles and public lectures on government. George Harvey, the editor of the North American Review, and other men of influence were promoting him as the Democratic candidate for governor of New Jersey, a position they saw as a steppingstone to the Presidency.

Andrew F. West, the first dean of the Graduate School and Wilson's great antagonist. This statue, by R. Tait McKenzie, sits in the main quadrangle of the Old Graduate College.

March 4, 1913. Little more than two years after leaving Princeton, Wilson is sworn in as President by Chief Justice Edward D. White. (This is a doctored photograph.)

A position on the staff of The Daily Princetonian sharpened my awareness of Wilson's nascent political career. My friend David Lawrence '10, who later founded U.S. News & World Report, was working his way through college as a reporter for the Associated Press. The Princetonian had recently been granted membership in the A.P.—the first college daily so honored—and Dave, after filing his nightly dispatches, would stay around the office and exchange opinions with me and other members of the editorial staff. Dave had a better sense of Wilson's growing political support than we did, and the prospect of his becoming President excited us all. In our idealistic minds, we believed that Wilson would infuse the Democratic Party with a kind of scholarly liberalism.

In October 1910, during the fall of my junior year, I had occasion to call on Wilson at his office, in the tower of 1879 Hall. He had accepted the Democratic nomination for governor a month earlier and was now in the thick of the campaign, all the while still carrying out his duties as president of the university. He was scheduled to deliver an important policy speech in Trenton that evening, and like any good reporter, I hoped to learn in advance what he planned to say. I first approached his secretary, a certain Mr. Close, requesting an interview with Wilson and stating my purposes for it. Close put me on the president's calendar but said he knew nothing about the speech, because Wilson prepared his own drafts and did his own typing.

When I returned a little later in the day for the appointment, Wilson greeted me with his usual charm. He said that because he had only one copy of the speech, he could not turn it over to me, as I had requested. As a student who had sworn to respect the Honor Code, I begged that I be allowed to take the single copy back to my room and make an abstract of it. After a few remarks about what he proposed to say that night, Wilson permitted me to do this, provided that I returned with the typescript by two o'clock. I remember to this day taking his proffered hand and feeling (in contrast to his personal warmth) how cold it was. I will never forget that goodbye handshake of Wilson, who a month later would be swept into office in a landslide victory.

During our brief interview, the impression that Wilson conveyed was one of absolute sincerity. As I recall my association with Dean West, I believe that he was no less sincere in his convictions. But neither man, in my opinion, possessed the innate sense of humor that enables an individual to view himself as others see him.

Arthur Holden, a retired architect and urban planner who has been the oldest returning alumnus at the last four Reunions, recently celebrated his one hundredth birthday (PAW, December 5). A resident of Washington, Connecticut, he currently serves as president and secretary of his class.

"Yessir, That Song Hit the Spot!"

SONGS OF THE SAILOR AND LUMBERMAN (third edition)

William Main Doerflinger '31 '32 • Meyerbooks, Box 427, Glenwood, IL 60425. $19.95 paper

NOT MANY BOOKS published in 1951 remain the reference works of choice in 1991. But Songs of the Sailor and Lumberman is one. This definitive collection of occupational folksongs remains informative, engaging, and entertaining.

William Main Doerflinger collected the songs for this book between 1930 and 1950 in the northeastern United States and eastern Canada from aging and retired sailors and lumbermen. The lyrics and tunes he recorded in the field include far more material from the seafarers than the lumber camps; in particular, he reproduces songs of the sea that date from between the War of 1812 and the Civil War and that flourished through the 1880s in America's merchant fleets. Among the many familiar songs Doerflinger recorded are "Shenandoah," "Lowlands," "The Drunken Sailor," and "I'll Go No More A-Roving with You, Fair Maid." Some have become staples of the Anglo-American folksinger's repertoire: "The Dark-Eyed Sailor," "Lady Franklin's Lament," "Rolling Home."

Doerflinger devotes a significant part of the book to sea "shanties" (probably from the French chanter, to sing), communal work songs that sailors aboard merchant ships sung in the course of performing their duties. There are short-haul shanties, sung when a short, hard pull on the ropes was necessary (perhaps to take up slack); halyard shanties, sung while raising the spars that held the sails or on any longer pull; capstan or windlass shanties, sung while using these devices to (for example) heave anchor; and, of course, many fo'c'sle shanties, sung after hours in the crews' quarters (usually located in the forecabin). Lumbermen did not have work songs, but they sang ballads in their equivalent of the fo'c'sles—the wooden shanties in the forests they worked.

According to Dick Maitland, one of Doerflinger's informants, the halyard shanty "Hanging Johnny" is "about as doleful a song as I ever heard . . . but there's a time when it comes in. For instance, after a heavy blow, getting more sail on the ship. The decks are full of water and men cannot keep their feet. The wind has gone down, but the seas are running heavy. A big comber comes over the rail; the men are washed away from the rope. If it wasn't for the man at the end of the rope gathering in the slack as the men pull, all the work would have to be done over again." Maitland learned "The Leaving of Liverpool" in about 1885 from a bosun on the General Knox: "I was on deck one night . . . when I heard a Liverpool man singin' it in the fo'c'sle . . . Yessir, that song hit the spot!"

Although this is the book's third edition since 1951, and new-found songs have been added, and the bibliography has been augmented, the basic collection remains unchanged. But what a collection it is! The breadth of Doerflinger's original work is still unrivaled, and his approach to the material, innovative forty years ago, is fully in keeping with current folklore scholarship. Many early collectors of folklore took an antiquarian attitude toward the material they gathered, isolating quaint specimens of folk art from the social and cultural settings in which they arose and were practiced. But like a folklorist today, Doerflinger regarded a folksong as a form of human behavior and placed great emphasis on its context.

Doerflinger also eschewed the antiquarian tendency to identify a "correct" tune and a "correct" set of lyrics out of the many variants that might have existed. Moreover, he did not attempt to transcribe songs from memory; other collectors did, and in so doing they perhaps created their own variants. Believing that every performance was equally authentic, he transcribed each song—and each version of a song—as his informant sang it, and took note of performance techniques as well.

Doerflinger's appreciation of the folksong's essential dynamism was also evident in the attention he drew to the interaction of black and white traditions, on land and at sea. A "lusty Negro halyard shanty" called "Gimme de Banjo" was sung for him by a Scots sailor who had heard it in 1877 aboard the American full-rigger Kit Carson, whose "entire port watch was white, the starboard watch colored."

An equally acute observation of Doerflinger's concerns the connection between the lumberman's work in the woods and the sailor's work at sea, a connection that sheds light on the transmission of the folksong and that shows why the songs of lumbermen and sailors belong in the same volume. As Gerald Parsons, the reference librarian at the Library of Congress's American Folklife Center, has observed, "Doerflinger saw the occupational context as a continuum, with the guys working in the woods all winter, following the logs downriver in the spring, and shipping out to sea in the summer."

Doerflinger did his fieldwork at a time when recording equipment was extremely cumbersome. Peter Bartis, a folklife specialist at the Library of Congress, estimates that he carried between sixty and a hundred pounds of equipment into the field. The fragile wax cylinders and glass-based discs he produced are now on deposit at the Library, which years ago loaned Doerflinger much of his recording machinery.

—Caroline Moseley

Caroline Moseley, the associate editor of the Princeton Weekly Bulletin, is a graduate of Harvard and received an M.A. in folklore and folklife from Penn. She also is a scholar and performer of nineteenth-century American folk and popular music.

Books Received

MAYDAY! MAYDAY! THE MOST EXCITING MISSIONS OF RESCUE, INTERDICTION AND COMBAT IN THE 200-YEAR ANNALS OF THE U.S. COAST GUARD
Samuel A. Schreiner, Jr. '42
Donald I. Fine, $19.95

METASYSTEMS METHODOLOGY: A NEW SYNTHESIS AND UNIFICATION
Arthur D. Hall III '49
Pergamon Press, $63.00

LOOKING FOR A SHIP (life aboard one of the last American merchant ships)
John McPhee '53
Farrar Straus Giroux, $18.95

BECOMING A COURAGEOUS MANAGER: OVERCOMING CAREER PROBLEMS OF NEW MANAGERS
Ross Arkell Webber '56
Prentice Hall, $13.25

SHARDS: A COLLECTION OF POEMS
Margaret Ann Stackhouse '74 (dec.)
Deerhaven Press, 8 Loantaka Ln. N., Morristown, NJ 07960. $13.95 postpaid

METEOROLOGY IN AMERICA, 1800-1870
James Rodger Fleming '88
Johns Hopkins University Press, $45.00

On the Road, Carril and Company Tangle With Knights, Rebels, and Two Gaels

IT WAS NOT EXACTLY a crowd of reporters that clustered outside the Princeton locker room after the championship game of the Cable Car Classic Tournament, on December 29. Rather, it was Princeton's sports media liaison, Mark Panus, and a couple of stragglers waiting for Pete Carril to come forth. "After a game like this," Panus said, "the coach is kind of like a VCR. He replays the whole game."

There were polite nods all around. Panus said, "You know, if someone had told him before the season started that he'd be eight and two after playing his first ten games on the road, I'll bet he'd have taken that."

Indeed, it was a thought that had crossed my mind more than once. But what a dazzling, frustrating, paradoxical eight and two it had been. The entire country had had a chance to see Princeton incur its first loss; a mere 4,051 were on hand in Toso Pavilion for the second, a game our little enclave of Princeton alumni and fans thought the Tigers should have won. As it turned out, so did Carril, who will emerge from the locker room presently. Until then, let's have a look at the season thus far.

What should we make of the game between Princeton and the University of Nevada at Las Vegas? What in the name of reason was a group of responsible, scholarly young men from central New Jersey doing, trotting onto a basketball court in Las Vegas in front of 17,778 fans? Were they asking for trouble? For humiliation? The zillion-watt spotlights and the pregame fireworks (indoors, if you please) aren't the typical fare when you play at Lafayette.

And what about the following: that the game was televised nationally (albeit on cable TV); that U.N.L.V. is the defending N.C.A.A. champion; and that the Las Vegans feature three players who could probably start on any N.B.A. team, and a second unit that itself could be among the top twenty-five in college basketball?

Does this shape up to be a game in which the Running Rebels beat the pants off the intimidated Tigers? Does Stacey Augmon cover Kit Mueller '91 like a glove, effectively removing him from the action? Do the Tigers fall apart completely, descending into a sad parody of themselves as the television announcers rather explicitly ridicule the very nature of Princeton's style? Next day, are Princeton fans subjected to scorn and derision?

Basketball is a non-contact sport! In a game shown on national TV, Princeton thrashed Rutgers, and the Knights' frustration was reflected in their many fouls, like this mugging of forward Matt Henshon '91. The ref (at left) made the call.

Well, yes.

But there's all this good news!

Hearken, if you will: Princeton, a team with one of the longest winning streaks at home in the nation, played its first ten games on the road. Is this (a) lunacy; (b) masochism; (c) that other college teams are afraid to play in Jadwin Gym; or (d) that potential opponents are reluctant to play in Princeton because no one attends the games, and thus there is little gate money to share? If you picked (c) and (d), you were correct, and may proceed to the next paragraph.

Before you could catch your breath this winter, the Tigers were 6-0, in the process winning their second and third in-season tournaments ever: the North Coast, in Cleveland, and the Manufacturer's Hanover, in New Rochelle, New York. In the latter, they triumphed over the Gaels of St. Mary's of California and the Gaels of Iona, certainly the first back-to-back wins over Gaels since the Romans did it nearly two millennia ago.

Rutgers was next on the schedule. Coming into the game, the Scarlet Knights were undefeated and still smarting from last year's narrow loss at Jadwin. Like the Tigers, the Knights were on the verge of a national ranking. They are tall, strong, fast. Where have we heard this before? For the second year in a row, ESPN broadcast the Princeton-Rutgers game, so those of us three thousand miles away had a rare chance to watch our team play.

It was no contest. It was a tour de Carril, a thing of beauty. The television people told us beforehand how Princeton plays the game; they made it sound like something that tastes awful but is ultimately good for you: They bleed the clock. They spread the court. They pass you to death. We knew that Carril's players pass the ball among each other with absolute precision, often for twenty or thirty seconds at a stretch, until the opponents are anxious and stupefied. When a Princeton player is open for a good shot, he takes it, and more often than not makes it. Rutgers players threw elbows, committed fouls of frustration. The Tigers were in synch and undaunted, recording an impressive 58-45 victory.

A continent away, I was gleeful. When ESPN sportscasters talk about Princeton basketball, they do not underuse certain adjectives: smart, short, slow. It is clear that these Tigers are very smart and kind of short. But George Leftwich '92, the point guard, is very fast, and Sean Jackson '92, the shooting guard, is greased lightning. Forward Chris Mooney, a freshman, is no slouch either, and Matt Eastwick '92 has surprisingly quick hands for a big man. The first players off the bench—forwards Matt Henshon '91 and Chris Marquardt '92 and guard Jerry Doyle '91—complete what is a formidable cast that complements the considerable talents of Mueller.

After the win over Rutgers, Princeton popped up on all the national polls of the best college teams, ranking anywhere from twenty-first to twenty-fifth—the highest for an Ivy League team in more than a decade. All the more grist for ESPN's hype mill: not only were the Tigers "America's Underdog," they were on the charts. But after the lambasting in Las Vegas (69-35 was the final score, if you were in Vladivostok), Princeton dropped back into the "also receiving votes" category.

So it was a marginally notorious team that took the floor against the University of California at Santa Barbara Gauchos in the first round of the Cable Car Classic, on December 28. But the Gauchos were hardly chopped liver: they entered the tournament with a 4-2 record, including a big win on the road against Kansas State. Their guards, sophomores Ray Kelly and Idris Jones, were both excellent penetrators, and the 6'9", 247-pound center Gary Gray and the 6'7" forward Lucius Davis averaged just under forty points per game between them.

It was a minute before either team scored, and then U.C.S.B.'s Davis delivered a thunderous slam dunk. Two and a half minutes later, Marquardt, starting for the first time, broke the ice for Princeton with a layup. By this point, the score was 4-2, and the Tigers' defense, an indescribably tenacious zone, had clearly taken charge. But Jackson's attempts at three-point shots (four of them thus far) were wayward, to say the least. The U.C.S.B. fans, several hundred of whom were concentrated behind the Gauchos' basket, amused themselves by droning "air-ball" every time he touched the ball.

Unlike the U.N.L.V. game, it was only a matter of time before Princeton's offense got on track. In little more than two minutes, Mooney hit the Tigers' first three-pointer, Mueller fed Leftwich for an uncontested layup, Leftwich stole the ball and laid it in himself, Marquardt swished for three, and suddenly the score was 12-6. The Gauchos appeared stunned. Their guards could not penetrate Princeton's zone themselves, and neither seemed to have any faith in his outside shot. On the rare occasions that they could pass the ball inside, their big men were hamstrung by the Tigers' defenders collapsing on them. Ultimately, U.C.S.B. was a team without an offense. Princeton's lead jumped quickly to 22-9, as Marquardt made another brace of nothing-but-net bombs, and the Tigers had a comfortable eight-point advantage at halftime, 29-17.

Santa Barbara's major adjustment to its offense in the second half was to pass the ball, whenever possible, to Gray, who is built rather like Popeye's nemesis, Bluto. Gray's style was to back in against Mueller, dribbling all the while, so that Mueller had to either give ground or make contact. This is hardly a legal tactic, but the referees chose to permit it, so Mueller sat out most of the half with four fouls. His replacement, Jimmy Lane '92, quickly picked up three fouls of his own, so Mueller returned—and fouled out.

It didn't matter. In the second half, Jackson found his range from beyond the three-point arc (as he often does after a bad first half), the Tigers canned fourteen of eighteen free throws down the stretch, and they coasted to a 67-51 win. After the game, Carril appeared relaxed and (dare we say it?) satisfied. He jabbered easily with members of the press. His boys had bounced back from the Vegas debacle, traveled even further west, and played one of their best games of the season.

As expected, center Kit Mueller '91 has been key to the Tigers' success. He leads the team in rebounding, assists, and minutes played, and now ranks sixth on Princeton's all-time scoring list.

Next day, the opening moments of the championship game, against the University of Santa Clara's 8-5 Broncos, featured more of the same. Jackson needed no warmup period that night, sinking a couple of quick three-pointers, and the Tigers stormed to an 11-2 lead. The Broncos' offense is run by Melvin Chinn, a fast, penetrating point guard whose job is to pass the ball inside to the scorers: the 6'7" forward Rhea Taylor and the mountainous center Ron Reis. At 7'1" and 285 pounds, Reis is hardly balletic, but it's awfully difficult to get around him, and in an era when the whistle for a three-second violation seems to have gone the way of the DeSoto, Reis grabs any offensive rebound that comes straight out and crams it into the basket with all the grace of a pile driver.

Late in the half, with Princeton leading by eight, Santa Clara abandoned its conventional zone defense for a "box-and-one," which is to say that four Broncos now played a "matchup zone" while

A pleasant surprise has been the play of forward Chris Marquardt '92, who graduated into a starting role in late December. Against U.N.L.V., he led the Tigers in scoring, with eleven points.

Grant A. Peacock '46
Kathleen Peacock

GRANT A. PEACOCK Inc.

*Fine Jewelry
Jewel Counselor
Estates Purchased*

Suite 2600
450 Park Avenue-at 57th St.
New York, N.Y. 10022 (212) 753-4640

Wanted to Buy

Highest prices paid
for American and European Art, including paintings, watercolors
and drawings, sculpture and prints
from 18th century to present.
Please contact Stuart P. Feld, '57

Hirsch & Adler
GALLERIES INC.

21 E. 70th St. NY 10021 • (212) 535-8810
Fax: (212) 772-7237

Barge Beautiful Canal du Midi or Burgundy aboard "La Tortue".
Cruising Spacious, comfortable. Large sundeck, lounge, 3 twin staterooms/baths. Notable cuisine,
10-speed bikes, minibus. Seasoned, agreeable British crew. Weekly charters Apr.-Oct. Color brochure:
"LaTortue", Dept. P, Box 1466, Manchester, MA 01944

Chinn frantically dogged Jackson wherever he went. To pick up the slack, Mooney or Marquardt had to get hot from outside, or Mueller had to maneuver past Reis. Neither happened. Although the Broncos were thoroughly outplayed, they were behind by only four, 23-19, at halftime.

In the second half, it seemed as if the Tigers had suddenly come down with a delayed-action case of jet lag. The aggressiveness that had characterized their first sixty minutes of play in California was there no more. Still, they might have hung on for the victory but for the performance of Rhea Taylor, the only man on the floor named after a flightless bird. He was anything but flightless. Barely noticeable in the first half, Taylor singlehandedly destroyed the Tigers' defense with a manic series of bullish inside moves. This night, it was Santa Clara that took command with about five minutes to play and coasted home, 59-53.

And so Carril finally met the press, such as it was. He was worried, he said, because he felt that a couple of teams in the Ivy League were better than Santa Clara. He was penitent, he said, because he hadn't prepared his team for the box-and-one. He was confused, he said, because his team had lost its aggressiveness in the second half. Carril might have been happy, under normal circumstances (are there any, in his mind?), with his 8-2 record after starting the season with ten road games, but he was concerned that the team's problems on offense still hadn't "straightened out."

I don't believe there's a team in the Ivies with anything like Santa Clara's talent. I'm worried that even if Princeton wins, say, fourteen of its remaining sixteen games, to finish at 22-4, the Tigers'll still be seeded very low in the N.C.A.A. tournament in March and have to face yet another megateam. But what the hell—this year they're good enough to win.

—Peter Delacorte '67

Peter Delacorte is a freelance writer who lives in San Francisco.

Life After Bittler: Women Cagers Look to Build on Young Talent

IMAGINE YOU'RE the head coach of a college basketball team. Now imagine that your team is returning to play after a hugely disappointing season in which it betrayed its great promise. Finally, imagine that you've lost your best player, the heart and soul of the team, to graduation. What do you do?

This was about the size of the problem that faced Joan Kowalik, the head coach of the women's basketball team, at the outset of this season. Last year, the Tigers never quite got it together, finishing with a middling 12-14 record overall. Even the dead-eye shooting of guard Sandi Bittler '90, Princeton's all-time leading scorer, could not pull the Tigers out of the mire of mediocrity.

But so far this year, things are different. Princeton has roared off to a 5-2 start, and the team looks rejuvenated. Twice this season, against Fairleigh Dickinson and Drexel, the Tigers have exploded for more than seventy points—offensive firepower that Pete Carril would kill for. What has Kowalik done to turn the program around?

To begin with, she has employed the talented young players she recruited in the freshman class. Guard Laura Leacy, for one, possesses all the court savvy of a seasoned senior, and she seems to do whatever it takes to chalk up the

When the Tigers need points, she scores; when they need tough defense, she comes up with the steal; when a teammate is open for a shot, she makes the perfect pass. If Princeton is to contend this season for the trophy that signifies an Ivy title, Leacy must continue to shine. Can Kowalik's women bring home this trophy, which hasn't visited Jadwin Gym since 1985?

Well, that all depends on which is the real Princeton team—the one that thrashed Canisius, 56-42, en route to winning the 1990 Princeton Invitational Tournament in early December, or the one that got crushed by Navy, 80-65, just three days before that tourney?

The talent is definitely there. Leacy, Leah Spraragen '92, and Julie Brackenridge '91, the team's captain, arguably comprise the best backcourt in the Ivy League. (For lack of an exceptionally tall player—the team's tallest is 6'3"—and because she has such good guards, Kowalik usually plays three guards on the floor at once.) Spraragen, the point guard, breaks the press, calls the plays, and passes the ball into the right hands at the right time. The Tigers will go only as far as Spraragen takes them. Brackenridge, who was almost cut from the team at the end of her freshman year, has become Princeton's premiere offensive weapon this season. She leads the team in scoring, averaging more than fifteen points per game, and she probably has dove for more loose balls, forced opponents to commit more offensive fouls, and bestowed more "high fives" on teammates than any other player—among other invaluable intangibles.

Point guard Leah Spraragen '92 is Princeton's general on the court. An excellent passer and a tenacious defender, she also has a good outside shot.

Seven games into the season, however, Princeton's frontcourt remains in doubt. The only established player is Corneille Burt '92. For the Tigers to be competitive under the basket, juniors Hilary Malcarney and Katrina Dowidchuk must contribute at least fifteen points and ten rebounds per game between them, and Tina Smith '94 will have to show more than just flashes of talent.

As is the case with Princeton's men, the name of the game for the women is patience on offense. Spraragen and Leacy can both run the fast break, but the Tigers will be most effective when they can wear down opponents with their halfcourt offense. This is an excellent passing team, and they hope to always find the player who is open for a shot. The emergence of Smith will be critical to this offensive scheme. If she and Burt can control the action in the paint, then Spraragen and Brackenridge will be free to rain in jump shots from beyond the three-point line. Putting points on the scoreboard should be no problem for the Tigers—if they are patient.

At the other end of the court, Princeton's aggressive style of defense tends to lead either to steals or to easy layups for the other team. Brackenridge, Spraragen, and Leacy are all tenacious defenders, and each has a penchant for thievery. Once again, the main question marks reside in the frontcourt. If Smith and Burt can work together effectively on defense, Princeton should hold most Ivy teams to fewer than sixty points per game.

This is a predominantly young team, with six freshmen and two sophomores on the roster of thirteen. Can Kowalik blend their talent with the experience of her upperclass players? If she can't, Princeton fans might be in for another long winter. But if she can, Tiger claws may once again wrap around the championship trophy come March.

—Philippe de Pontet '93

Philippe de Pontet, an English major from Washington, D.C., is a senior sportswriter for The Daily Princetonian.

SCOREBOARD

Men's BASKETBALL

(8-2 overall; 0-0 Ivy)

Princeton 70, Cleveland State 57

Princeton 42, Coastal Carolina 39

Princeton 45, Lafayette 36

Princeton 57, Lehigh 40

Princeton 63, St. Mary's 45

Princeton 58, Iona 50

Princeton 58, Rutgers 45

U.N.L.V. 69, Princeton 35

Princeton 67, U.C.S.B. 51

Santa Clara 59, Princeton 53

Women's BASKETBALL

(6-3 overall; 0-0 Ivy)

Princeton 79, Fairleigh Dickinson 68

Lafayette 59, Princeton 50

Princeton 62, Bucknell 59

Navy 80, Princeton 65

Princeton 63, Delaware 59

Princeton 56, Canisius 42

Princeton 78, Drexel 74

South Florida 82, Princeton 70

Princeton 87, Stetson 83

Men's HOCKEY

(4-9 overall; 3-6 E.A.C.)

Colgate 6, Princeton 5

Cornell 4, Princeton 3

Princeton 4, Harvard 3

Princeton 9, Dartmouth 0

Boston U. 7, Princeton 2

Princeton 6, Army 3

R.P.I. 7, Princeton 4

Vermont 3, Princeton 1

Clarkson 8, Princeton 6

St. Lawrence 6, Princeton 3

Colorado College 4,

Princeton 2

Colorado College 4,

Princeton 3

Princeton 4, Notre Dame 3

(overtime)

Women's HOCKEY

(2-4-1 overall; 1-1 Ivy)

New Hampshire 8, Princeton 1

Northeastern 7, Princeton 2

Princeton 3, St. Lawrence 1

Princeton 4, St. Lawrence 4

Princeton 8, Yale 1

Brown 4, Princeton 1

Providence 6, Princeton 1

Men's SWIMMING

(2-0 overall; 2-0 E.I.S.L.)

Princeton 160, Penn 83

Princeton Invitational

—1st place

Princeton 120, Brown 42

Women's SWIMMING

(4-1 overall; 4-0 Ivy)

Princeton 169, Columbia 111

Princeton 168, Penn 106

Princeton 181, Yale 119

Princeton Invitational

—2nd place

Princeton 170, Brown 111

Penn State 186,

Princeton 105

WRESTLING

(4-2-1 overall; 0-0 Ivy)

Kutztown 17, Princeton 16

Hofstra 22, Princeton 16

Princeton 22,

SUNY-Albany 9

Princeton 22, Kean 22

Princeton 18, Drexel 17

Princeton 24, Southern Connecticut 10

Princeton 19, Rutgers 15

Of course, this isn't to say there hasn't been much talk about Lexus automobiles. On the contrary. In Car and Driver's New Car

Buyer's Study,*

Lexus

owners helped the LS400 achieve the highest customer satisfaction rating the magazine has ever seen. An accomplishment rivaled only by our showing in the J.D. Power and Associates Initial Quality Survey, where owners ranked Lexus the most trouble-free nameplate on the road today.

To find out more about both the LS400 and the ES250, visit your local Lexus dealer. We're sure he'll have a few encouraging words of his own.

LEXUS
The Relentless Pursuit Of Perfection.

Where Seldom

Is Heard A Discouraging Word.

© 1990 Lexus, A Division Of Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. Lexus reminds you to wear seat belts and obey all speed laws. For more information, call 800-872-5998 (800-USA-LEXUS).
*November 1989 luxury-car registrations. J.D. Power and Associates 1990 Initial Quality Survey.™ Based on owner-reported problems the first 90 days of ownership.

Digitized by Google

FOR RENT

ENJOY THE LUXURY of your own villa, private pool overlooking the Caribbean, and staff of five to serve you. 3 BRs, 3 baths; exquisitely furnished; on one acre with terraced gardens in most exclusive residential neighborhood in Ocho Rios, Jamaica. Everyone should try this kind of living at least once. From $175/day, winter; $125/day, summer; $100/day, Sept.-Oct. B. Kaspers '70 (owner), 1165 Churchill Downs Rd., Atlanta, GA 30319; 404-255-0696.

ST. JOHN, USVI: 2 BR waterfront beachhouse amid tropical gardens. Spectacular view, excellent snorkeling. From $175/day, winter; $125/day, summer; $100/day, Sept.-Oct. B. Kaspers '70. 1165 Churchill Downs, Atlanta, GA 30319; 404-255-0696.

PARIS: Elegant small studio for two just off the Seine in the 6th. 2 min. walk to the Louvre, Notre Dame. 609-924-4332.

BARBADOS: Home of the late John L. Roe Jr. '34. West Coast on bluff overlooking Caribbean. Three air-conditioned BRs, cook, maid, gardener, laundry, swimming pool. 215-527-0585.

PARIS: Rue de la Paix, Elegant apartment. Suitable for 2 or 3. 7-days preferred. $200/night. 212-838-1731.

STOCKING ISLAND, Exuma, Bahamas: Octagonal wood and glass home, spectacular 360-degree sea view. All modern conveniences. $1000 weekly for two with boat. Sam Burns '46, 407-231-2822. Brochure avail.

SANIBEL ISLAND, FLA.: Delightful beachfront condominium. Magnificent gulf view. Spacious 2 BR, 2 baths, loft. Pool. Tennis. Will Smith '63. 908-842-2096.

BRITISH VIRGIN ISLANDS (Virgin Gorda): Elegant new villa directly on own private snorkeling beach. Spectacular, panoramic view of North Sound including Bitter-End (dive school, etc.) Perfect weather year round. 3 BR, 2 bath, magnificent LR, wrap-around deck, full mod. kit., microwave, dishwasher, marina, fishing, pool, tennis. (Restaurant, provisioning, staff, car, available extra.) $2,500/wk. 609-921-7872.

EXCLUSIVE LUXURY 4 BR, 4 bath villa at private Tryall Club in Montego, Jamaica. Private pool, staff of four, gorgeous grounds overlook Caribbean and championship golf course. Also private tennis, scuba, beach and club house. Available at 2 or 3 BR rate off-season. 203-254-0228 (h) or Carol Shaw at 203-929-6391.

LONDON LUXURY FLATS: In Knightsbridge, Mayfair, Chelsea, Kensington, Whitehall Court. One, two, three bedrooms. Furnished and decorated by owners. Rented by day, seven day minimum; reduced rates when exceeding six months. Call during office hours: 518-686-7841.

KAUAI, HAWAII: 4 BR, NaPali Coast beach house. $650-850/wk. 703-560-7900.

ST. MAARTEN: Elegant villa on blue Caribbean. Breathtaking views. Daily maid. All amenities. Sleeps 2-6. 201-271-0297.

ST. THOMAS: 2 or 3 BRs on the water, spectacular downisland view. H. Macaleer. 919-942-8439.

ITALY: Renting delightful holiday accommodations, each personally selected. Tuscan castles, Umbrian farmhouses. Seaside villas, lakeview cottages. Centrally-located apartments Venice, Rome, Florence. Week/month. 415-821-9345.

SANIBEL ISLAND: Gulffront 2 BR condo w/pool and tennis. Available weekly/monthly. Boozan '79, 201-522-8219

CENTURIES OLD FARMHOUSE at edge of Sabine hill town. Easy reach of Orvieto, Perugia, Assisi, Spoleto, Florence, Rome. Magnificent setting on 4 acres. Restored recently. Architect Ellen Jawdat of Washington, D.C., M.Arch. Harvard. Work executed by Valentini Ristauo of Rome. All modern comforts. C. Joseph, 1 Lincoln Plaza, New York, NY 10023, 212-873-5104.

PORT ANTONIO, JAMAICA: "Nirvana:" Fully equipped, staffed, 3 bedroom, 2 bath, beachfront villa on mile-long, mostly deserted beach. Surf, few tourists. $800/wk. in season. 207-359-4447.

LONDON RENTALS: Privately owned flats and houses in London's best areas offering comprehensive personal service at attractive prices. One week minimum stay. Call: A Place Like Home, London. 800-526-0215.

KAUAI LUXURY CONDO on the ocean in sunny Poipu. Fully equipped. 2 BRs, 2 baths, free tennis at Waiohale Tennis Club. $600/700 per week. 213-681-6869.

ST. BART'S, FRENCH WEST INDIES: Luxurious seaside villa surrounded by privacy, beautiful beaches and French restaurants. 412-687-2061.

PARIS. LEFT BANK APARTMENT: St. Germain, close to D'Orsay, Louvre, Rodin. Sunny. Fireplaces. Antiques. Luxuriously furnished. Memorable! 412-687-2061.

MAD RIVER SUGARBUSH AREA: Comfortable farmhouse for up to 20 skiers. $350 per day. William Iler '51, 508-922-0010.

TORTOLA. BRITISH VIRGIN ISLANDS: Luxury 5 bedrm., 3 bath villa. Pool. 11 island view. Every amenity. Maid, car included. Two thousand, six hundred dollars weekly. 516-283-2299.

MONHEGAN ISLAND, MAINE: 4 BR, 2 bath. Panoramic island, ocean view. Available June-September, $700/wk. Bill Walker '64. 215-687-3271.

VAIL, CO: 3 BR plus loft. 5 min. from gondola and great skiing. $225/night. $275 during Christmas and spring break. Bruce Brookens '67; 303-761-8815.

VAIL-BEAVER CREEK: Rocky Mountain seclusion, minutes from skiing. Creek-side home sleeps six. No X-mas. 303-926-3907.

ST. JOHN: Fabulous private home near beach. Peaceful. Furnished. Box 12287, St. Thomas, VI 00801. 809-775-4266.

SUN VALLEY, ID: Luxurious, spacious, ski condo at base of Mt. Baldy in Warm Springs. 3 BRs, 3 baths, fireplace. Walk one block to lifts, restaurants, shops, apres ski. Bill Travers '71, 805-684-5473.

EXUMA, BAHAMAS: Magnificent hilltop view. Fully equipped, 4 bedrooms, van, private beach, housekeeper available. $1,000 weekly in season. 302-428-1455, evenings.

SPAIN: Lovely 4 BR villa (pool) overlooking Mediterranean/village. Hess '64. 203-688-9333.

LUQUILLO, P.R.: Newly refurbished completely equipped 2 bedrm. 1 ba. apts. Beach 1 block, stores nearby. Special alumni rate. Beautiful beach and views. E. Pinney '47, P.O. Box 2210, Martinsburg, WV 25401. 304-263-4660.

SEABROOK ISLAND, S.C.: Near historic Charleston, oceanfront 1 BR condo, 2 baths. Sleeps 4; great golf, tennis, restaurants, pelicans. Hugh Hanson '47. 215-649-7335. Princeton discounts!

TORTOLA, BVI: 6 acres, 4 BR, 3 bath, noted architect-designed villa with pool on spectacular promontory jutting over sea and own beach on undeveloped N.E. coast. Two-week rental minimum. Charles Sommer, 11 Upper Ladue Rd., St Louis, MO 63124; 314-982-2690(w), 314-991-5527(h).

TAOS, NM: 2 BR, 2 bath condominium overlooking Kit Carson Park. $400/week, April 15-Nov. $575/week, Dec.-April 15. Charley Brooks, ERA Taos Realtors, 13 Paseo del Pueblo Norte, Taos, NM 87571; 505-758-0112.

CARIBBEAN PARADISE: Luxury 4 BR, 3 bath villa. Perfect 2-6 people. Enjoy heavenly views, gardens, privacy. Walk to 2 spectacular beaches. Tortola, British Virgins. Clipper Cleaver '41, Box 356, Adamsville, R.I. 02801. 401-635-4725(h), 617-742-8310(o).

TORTOLA, BVI: Three bedrooms overlooking two beaches. Maids, snorkeling, unspoiled. Bell, Box 3678, Greenville, DE 19807. 215-388-2241.

VAIL/BEAVER CREEK: Well-appointed 3 bedroom, 3 bath house 15 min. to Vail, 5 min. to Beaver Creek. Available Sat. to Sat. $850/wk. Charles Gaylord '34, 303-722-3474.

HANA, MAUI: One-bedroom executive getaway house with panoramic ocean/mountain views on 7.5-acre orchard/flower garden. $95/day, 4-day minimum. 213-654-2765.

ST. JOHN, USVI: 2 BR villa at Lagoon Point, sensational views. Weekly $840-$1260 winter; $560-$840 summer. Valentine, 8 Fern Way, Madbury, NH 03820. 603-742-3063.

ELEUTHERA, BAHAMAS: Cotton Bay Club. Magnificent waterfront home. Trent Jones golf course 100 yards away. Snorkeling, tennis, 3 bedrooms, Bertram sportsfisherman boat, pool, housekeeper. 617-722-7045.

IRELAND: Charming Georgian house in beautiful County Waterford. 4 BRs, 3 baths. Available all year. Low rental Nov. to June. 813-964-2465.

FLORIDA KEYS VACATION RENTALS: Call Jannie, Sugarloaf Realty. 305-745-2912.

SAN DIEGO: 2,500 sq. ft., 3 BR, 2½ bath Bauhaus condo. Exceptional executive living on ocean and lagoon. Furnished or unfurnished 6-month + lease, or lease-to-buy. $3,000/month or terms. 619-481-1548.

CASTLE HYDE: On the Blackwater River, County Cork, Southern Ireland. Exceptionally lovely 18th century Georgian house on 144 acres. 6 bedrooms, 5 modern baths, classic Renaissance gardens with fresh fruit and flowers. Fully staffed. Two miles of private trout and salmon fishing. Pheasant shooting. Available year round. Richard Kroon Y'64, 201-741-5692.

JUPITER ISLAND, OCEAN FRONT HOME: P.O. Box 1546, Hobe Sound, FL 33475. 407-546-2571. Bush '50, '64, '75.

ITALY. CASTLES IN THE SKY or villas in the vineyard, the best city or country rentals all over Italy. American specialist based in Rome will design the perfect holiday. INTERNATIONAL SERVICES, Piazza di Spagna 35, 00187 Rome, Italy. Fax 011-39-6-684-0943. In U.S. 212-794-1534.

COME BACK TO JAMAICA! Enjoy the privacy of your own spacious 3 BR, 3 bath villa, "Clive House", at Tryall Golf and Beach Club near Montego Bay. Beautifully appointed and complete with its own 20' x 40' pool. Cook, maid, laundress and gardener. Spectacular panoramic view of the Caribbean and our 18 hole championship golf course. Tennis, lovely sand beach and all water sports also on site for your enjoyment. Color brochure available on request. Call Liz Poley, w/55 or Susan Wylie weekdays 8-4:30. 612-339-1820.

TORTOLA, BVI: Three bedroom house, pool. Marvelous beach, views. Private, unspoiled location. Off-season values. 617-876-2590.

PERFECT DESERT VACATION HOME: Bermuda Dunes, California. Elegant, 3 bedrooms, jacuzzi, private tennis court, swimming pool, mountain vistas, great weather and nearby golf. William Kopolovitz '66, 800-352-1144.

CENTRAL VERMONT: Restored 1830s home. 4 bedrooms, dormitory, 2 1/2 baths. Fully equipped. Tennis, skiing, hiking nearby. $500/week. Mike Van Dusen '65. 202-244-3473.

VERMONT: Caspian Lake, Greensboro. Spacious lakeside home; golf, tennis. John Stone '53. 802-728-4846.

PORTUGAL, ALGARVE: Villa overlooking sea. Sleeps six. Maid. Available April through November. Harison, P.O. Box 6865, Providence, RI 02940.

MARTHA'S VINEYARD: New three bedroom contemporary, sleeps eight, water views, tennis, minutes to beaches, 609-924-7913 (office), 609-397-0147 (home).

NANTUCKET: Charming six bedroom Victorian, in town, walk to beach. 617-449-4954.

ALGARVE, PORTUGAL: Luxury country villa. Sweeping seaviews, near beaches, golf, 3 BRs, 4 1/2 baths. Swimming pool, staff. Available year-round with exceptions. 508-922-4763.

SANIBEL: Beach cottage 3/2 near Gulf & Gulf. Screened porches. Monthly, 609-737-1777. Backes '39.

ST. JOHN: Off-season rates. 2 bedroom villa, pool, spectacular view. 508-668-2078.

LONGBOAT KEY, FLORIDA: Right on bay. First floor condo. 2 BR/2 bath, tennis, pool. $2,600/month. Len Thomsen '56. 617-861-0796.

KEY LARGO, FLA.: 2 BR, 2 bath condo at the Anglers Club overlooking club marina on Card Sound. Tennis, par 3 golf course, croquet, and pool, $200/day. Frank Lovejoy '36. 305-367-2856.

KIAWAH ISLAND, S.C.: Fabulous beachfront house, 3 BR/bath, fully equipped. $1,500/wk Sept.—May; $2,000/wk June—August. 314-991-8768.

PROVIDENCIALES, TURKS AND CAICOS, BVI: Luxury "Villa Camilla" offers beauty, serenity on undiscovered tropical island. 3 bedroom/3 bath house fronts pristine 12-mile beach. Virgin snorkeling, diving. Sleeps 2—6. $2,000/wk high; $1,500/wk low. '71. 617-731-2194.

PERDIDO KEY, FLA.: Charming 2 BR, 2 B condominium 7th floor apartment, #706. Off-season rate Sept.—May 15. 800-338-2809.

COTSWOLDS: 17thC restored cottage. Historic Stanton Village, tour Stratford, Oxford, Bath, Broadway. Antiques, log fire, GCH, private garden, tv, washer/dryer, telephone, modern kitchen, sleeps four adults. Details: Tel: England 38674 495; Fax 38685 683. Whitefield House, Wood Stanway, GL54 5PG England.

NANTUCKET: New 3 BR, 2 1/2 bath cape on 3 secluded acres; 914-779-1302.

MONTOLOKING, NJ: Adjacent beach, 4 BR, 2 1/2. July $11,000. Aug. $12,000. 609-737-1150.

NEAR GENEVA in charming French village, 20 min. from city. Exceptional lakefront apartment. Splendid view over 1800. Sleeps 4. Available April through July. $900/wk. Tel: 919-967-2561.

FOR SALE

MANHATTAN: If selling a co-op, condominium, or townhouse, call about our unique 200 brokerage firm multi-list program. Sharon Baum w/62, S.W. Bird & Co., 331 Madison Ave., New York, NY; 212-351-2416.

EASTERN SHORE OF MD: Seeking residential property in waterfront mid-shore area, convenient to Washington, Baltimore and Phila.? Call Juana Mestres w/57. Clare Hughes Real Estate, Cambridge, MD 21613. 301-228-4236 (o), 301-228-4787 (h).

ISLAND HOUSE: See "For Rent, Stocking Island."

VAIL-BEAVER CREEK, COLORADO: Unique properties. 10% of commission proceeds donated, in your name, to the Yellowstone Bighorn Research Association in memory of my father, Professor Erling Dorf, Hon. '33. Bob Dorf 303-476-2421.

GREAT CAMANOE, BVI: Secluded home, magnificent view on private island. 2 BR, baths. Land Rover and Whaler. Doug Martin '54. 203-426-2928.

BOCA RATON, FLA., YACHTSMAN DREAM: Deep-water slip, 3,000 sq. ft. townhouse facing Boca Raton Hotel. Next to beach club and Boca Inlet. Magnificent home or investment. Phone 407-466-4219. 407-391-9072.

MANHATTAN, EAST 70s: Beautifully appointed 1 bedroom co-op. Completely renovated, modern appliances and windows, hardwood floors. Doorman. Perfect for personal or corporate use. $155k, low maintenance charge. 212-772-7135.

MANHATTAN/BATTERY PARK CITY: Two bedroom high floor corner condominium with spectacular Hudson River views. Walk to work downtown. Luxury doorman building. $335,000, maint. $621. Jennifer Jordan '78. Office: 212-969-6259, home: 212-945-3113.

OUTSTANDING INVESTMENT, LIVE IN HOME 1856 farmhouse off Great Road, Princeton-border. Good condition, 2 family, 6 bedroom home and cottage with current monthly rental income $2,000-$2,500. Income pays mortgage costs. Asking $235,000. Call evenings 212-996-1512.

PRINCETON TOWNSHIP, 31 acres (part of 18th century woodlots of University). Single owner since 1900. $1,500,000. L. V. Silvester, Jr. '45, Executor, Box 52, Princeton, 08542. 609-921-6171.

TELL YOUR WILLIAMS FRIENDS: Beautiful 64 acres with panoramic 3-state views, pond, in Williams-town. Jim Eglin '49. 413-458-5096.

CAPE COD, FALMOUTH/WAQUOIT: Lovely 4 bedroom home on 3.5 acres overlooking tidal river; boat to Vineyard Sound beaches. Abundant wildlife, spacious gardens. Close to Woods Hole science, Vineyard ferries, Cape Cod history. Perfect retirement/second home. $285,000. Buy now while the prices are low! Vincent Associates, 159 Main Street, Falmouth, MA 02540; 508-548-6500.

COUNTRY CLUB SETTING: Great South Florida location in one of Ft. Lauderdale's finest suburbs, 4 bedrooms, 2 1/2 baths & sparkling pool overlooking the golf course! $264,900. Call Pat Hance & Co. Realtor, 800-445-3964.

STEWARTSON-DOUGHERTY
Real Estate Associates
366 Nassau Street
Princeton, N.J. 08540
PHONE: 609-921-7784

PRINCETON - WESTERN SECTION

There is more room in this charming ranch house than meets the eye. There is a spacious living room with fireplace, a formal dining room, study and nice kitchen. The main house has two hall bedrooms and a very generous master bedroom with private bath. There is a separate connected guest house with bedroom and bath. The house is located on a lovely lot with attractive landscaping and mature trees. $365,000.

Robert Dougherty '50 Julie Douglas w/'41
Paul Douglas '41 Betsy Stewardson Ford w/'54
Georgia Graham w/'52 J. B. Smith '45
Diane Unruh w/'70 Barbara Broad w/'38
Betty McClelland w/'50 Judy Perrine s/'69

For no obligation—Information about real estate in the Princeton area call (609) 921-7784 or Outside of New Jersey 1-800-542-0067.

REALTORS

Representing Previews Executive Homesearch

OVER 4,000 CONTIGUOUS acres in Hell's Canyon on the Snake River near Lewiston, Idaho. Fenced cattle ranch with excellent hunting and fishing. Elk, bear, cougar, grouse, chuckar, quail, steelhead trout, sturgeon and much more. Gold mines. $200 per acre buys ranch and 1/2 of the minerals. Owner financing available. Austin Cater 713-789-1305.

ADIRONDACK ESTATE: Unique 3,000 acre forest preserve, with 150 acre private glacial lake, in northern Adirondacks. Extensive wildlife, including nesting loons. Six bedroom, 1890 main lodge, totally renovated. Boat house, guest house, and barn. Suitable as family compound or corporate conference center. Color brochure available. Call Kathy Gilligan, Merrill Thomas Realty, Lake Placid, 518-523-2519.

SARASOTA, FLORIDA: 2 BR/1 1/2 B condo. Only $82,500. Walk St. Armands Circle/beach. Gorgeous bay setting with 1/4 mile private sidewalk seawall. Adult-oriented. Clubhouse, pool, covered carport, boat docks. Own entrance ground floor porch. Low maintenance. Call Victor Race, Prudential Realty 813-366-1549.

OAK FOREST, PENNINGTON, NJ: 4 bedroom Colonial, large 19th century barn, cottage, 3 acres, convenient to schools, shopping. $375,000. R. Michael Carr '72. 609-737-0710.

NANTUCKET ISLAND: Over 3 acres of privacy with 500 feet of waterfront on Nantucket Harbor. This 3 bedroom, 2 1/2 bath home with panoramic views of upharbor and Nantucket Sound is priced to sell quickly. Call Jane Miller at Denby Real Estate, 508-228-2522 for the specifics on this prime property.

60s OFF PARK: Pre-war mint, wbf, 9 into 7. $875,000 neg. $1,380 mt. OR 60s OFF PARK: Pre-war, wbf, 8 into 7. $850,000 neg. $1,420 mt. Exclusives. Marjory S. Berkowitz, 212-439-1610 or 212-838-0337.

BROOKLYN HEIGHTS: Mint co-op, 1,295 sq. ft., huge living/dining, bedroom, den, closets, modern kitchen, views, exposed brick, near transportation. Immaculate full-service building. $235k. Ms. Church d'46, 212-697-5600.

FOR SALE/FOR RENT

NANTUCKET—Come join the 400 happy Princeton families. We have large and small rentals, investment opportunities, estates and commercial enterprises. AND we give your investments TENDER, LOVING CARE—PREFERRED PROPERTIES. Nancie B. Taylor, w'43, Lucy T. Eaton, d'43. 508-228-2320, 800-338-7715.

WASHINGTON, DC, METROPOLITAN area, Northern Virginia, Maryland. Sales, rentals, land, property management. Colleen Finks w'61, associate broker, Pardoe & Graham, 6729 Curran St., McLean, VA 22101; 703-734-7020; eves., 703-821-2850.

RESORTS & TRAVEL

LONDON, ENGLAND: Luxury self-catering apartments in the heart of Mayfair. We offer you the comfort and privacy of a recently converted period Georgian town house. British Breaks, Ltd., P.O. Box 1176, Middleburg, Virginia 22117. Telephone 703-687-6971. Fax 703-687-6291.

FLORIDA KEYS, BIG PINE KEY: Fantastic open water view, Key Deer Refuge, National Bird Sanctuary, stilt house, 3/2, screened porches, fully furnished, stained glass windows, swimming, diving, fishing, boat basin. 305-665-3832.

ITALY: INTIMATE, SMALL GROUP TOURS TO UNUSUAL DESTINATIONS: Tuscan Islands and Hill towns; The Palio of Siena; The Riviera; Mythological Routes in Sicily. La Pergola, Tours Inc.: A special company for the special traveler. Call for 1991 schedule: 914-358-6035.

ENGLISH CANALS with historian-skipper. Good food, no schedule. $595 weekly, inclusive. Box 2083, Springfield, Mass. 01101. Tel. 413-562-9296.

ARIZONA GUEST RANCH: Riding ranch-bred horses, tennis, pool, fantastic birding, shooting, all in a verdant valley surrounded by historic mountains. Season, Nov. 1 to May 15, limited to 40 guests. Brochure, Circle Z Ranch, Box 194 P-5, Patagonia, AZ 85624, winter 602-287-2091, summer 814-425-3768, Don Simmons P'49 manager.

SCOTLAND: Ardsheal House, historic home of the Stewarts of Appin, now a country house hotel owned and run by Jane & Bob Taylor (Princeton '53). Located on coast in magnificent West Highlands. Superb food. Brochure: Ardsheal House, Kentallen of Appin, Argyll PA38 4BX, Scotland. Tel.: 44-63174-227. Fax: 44-63174-342. Open Easter to Nov.

LEARN UMBRIAN cooking in renovated farmhouse in Italy. 212-873-5104.

ENGLAND-WALES WALKING TRIP: Welsh Coast, Welsh Border, Yorkshire Dales, Lake District, Cambridge, London. Day hiking, moderate pace, several sightseeing days. 18th year, 6th with adults. August 3—21, 1991. Lucy and Bill Farrar '40, Guilford, CT 06437. 203-453-5404.

BED & BREAKFAST

PRINCETON AREA: Alternative lodging in comfortable private homes. Bed & Breakfast of Princeton, P.O. Box 571, Princeton, NJ 08540; 609-924-3189.

DON'T FORGET
ALUMNI DAY
FEB. 16TH

The JOE BROWN Studio announces...his artistic legacy
Princeton Professor Emeritus Joe Brown created over 400 pieces of sculpture which are found in both private and public collections all over the world. Certified bronze sculptures from original molds are available in limited editions. The studio and gallery is open by appointment only.
The Joe Brown Studio • Timothy Maslyn, Resident Sculptor & Curator
RD 1, Box 122 A
Princeton, NJ 08540
609-921-2868
THE Joe Brown STUDIO

PLACE YOUR AD IN THE PRINCETON EXCHANGE

Name: _____

Address: _____

City: _____

State: _____ Zip: _____

Tel.#, (W): _____ (H): _____

My ad should run _____ time(s),
beginning the month of _____

Classification: _____

Payment for all insertions must accompany initial request. My check for $_____ is enclosed. Rates per insertion: 1-5 insertions, $1.50 per word; 6-10 insertions, $1.45 per word; 11-17 insertions, $1.40 per word. Send to: Princeton Exchange, Princeton Alumni Weekly, 41 William St., Princeton, NJ 08540 (609)258-4886. No phone orders please. Issues are published 17 times from September through July. Ads will appear five-six weeks after receipt. When calculating payment, multiply number of words X number of insertions X rate per word to arrive at total price. P.O. Box number counts as two words, phone number as one word. No charge for zip code or class numerals. We cannot accept PAW box numbers. Please attach this coupon to text and make checks payable to Princeton Alumni Weekly.

CAMPS

THE SUSQUEHANNOCK CAMPS, founded 1905 by G. Carlton Shafer '03, still under same family management of E.H. Shafer '44, G.C. Shafer '51, Priscilla H. Shafer '83. Summer resident brother/sister camps on private lakes in northeastern PA. Top quality staff instruction team and individual sports, waterfront, riding, arts and crafts, ecology. ACA accredited camps. Write Box 71, R.D. 1, Brackney, PA 18812, or call 717-967-2323/215-356-2436.

WANTED TO BUY

RARE BOOKS AND FIRST EDITIONS: We are interested in purchasing libraries or single volumes from the 15th to the 20th century. Top prices paid. Also, expert appraisals for individuals or institutions. David L. O'Neal '60, Antiquarian Booksellers, Inc., 234 Clarendon St., Boston, MA 02116; 617-266-5790.

OLD FOUNTAIN PENS: Any condition. Richard Golden, 212-758-6478; fax 212-557-8137.

BUSINESS SERVICES

PROFESSIONAL TAX PLANNING, ACCOUNTING, AUDIT REPRESENTATION. Personal and business. Enrolled to practice before IRS. By appointment. 212-947-6031. Virgil M. Cummins '67 (EA), 430 West 34th Street, New York, NY 10001.

GOODS & SERVICES

MEMBERSHIP COMPUTER SYSTEM for PC: Membership, letters, planning, attendance, billing, contributions for all clubs, societies, associations, foundations. 903-876-2224.

1987 Pacific Seacraft. DANA 24. Cutter rig, Loran, Autohelm, dodger, full cruise equipped. Price reduced. H. Hilliard '43. 207-781-2090.

OPPORTUNITIES

FLORIDA KEYS COMMERCIAL OPPORTUNITY: Operate your business from home with 2,000 sq. ft. apartment up, 2,000 sq. ft. down, 100' U.S. Hwy. #1 frontage, 80' canal in back. Call Jannie, Sugarloaf Realty 305-745-2912.

POSITION AVAILABLE

TEACHERS/ADMINISTRATORS: Join our placement network for employment in the nation's independent schools. Fall 1991 positions. The Education Group, 5952 Royal Lane, Suite 203, Dallas, TX 75230. 800-369-9102.

PAW

Reach 56,000
Princetonians world-wide with every issue!

To place an ad please contact:
Ms. Lolly O'Brien Advertising Manager
PRINCETON ALUMNI WEEKLY
41 William St. Princeton, N.J. 08540 (609)258-4886

12 ARTHUR C. HOLDEN Box 182 Washington, CT 06793; 203-868-7063

Since the death of Bill Whitney, the almost permanent chairman of the 1912 reunion committee, L'il Arthur has felt like "half" an alumnus instead of a full-grown graduate of the University. We realize, at our stage in life, when we have the best intention in the world to thank a friend for expressing his best regards to our undeserving self that all too frequently the name of the friend whom we wished to thank and even pat on the back has a habit of abruptly leaving us. Bill Whitney used to have the ability to make good the deficiencies of our own memory.

Here we are today, with more responsibility than ever before, but with less ability to cope with those responsibilities.

We have one classmate who is over 101 years old, namely Eef Gordy. He keeps his light under a bushel and keeps writing letters to us. These contain up-to-date songs of his composition, which are sufficient evidence of his ability, but he keeps his abilities hidden most of the time from other recipients than L'il Arthur. We apologize for not being able to live up to University specifications, as well as the Eef Gordy specifications, for the duly authorized correspondent for the Class of 1912.

13 ALISON R. BRYAN Box F Frenchtown, NJ 08825

George Bryan Logan Jr. '15, of Allegheny, Penn., spent part, if not all, of freshman year with our Class. He was a cousin of Alison R. Bryan. We recall it was for health reasons he had to drop out. A 50th-year Class record tells of his many activities in Princeton and his extended war record. He died Dec. 18, 1927. Reference may be made to him in a later issue.

We have a cordial note from Hannah, widow of our classmate Thomas Watt Henderson, 1404 Laurel St., South Pasadena, Calif.

Florence Bruder sends Thanksgiving greetings and a gift which she asks be added to the Class Fund in memory of her father, our late classmate Judge Joseph L. Smith.

Katherine E. Hill '91 sends her thanks for the Alan Wood Lukens Memorial Scholarship. She is in the civil engineering school and has recently joined the American Civil Engineering Society. Katherine is writing her senior thesis on the church of Hagia Sophia in Istanbul. The two professors in charge of the research are sending her to Turkey at Christmastime. She is a member of the varsity cross-country team and has traveled widely with them. Katherine wants to get a master's degree in structural design, but would like to work for a few years first.

17 ICE GRAMMER, c/o Chemical Bank 30 Rockefeller Plaza, Ste. 6100 New York, NY 10112

Our first Class news of 1991 starts off on a sad note as we report the passing of one of '17's giants—Kent Colwell died Nov. 28. Following his funeral service in Madison, N.J., at which the Class was represented by President Whit Landon, Kent was buried alongside his father, a naval officer, at Arlington Natl. Cemetery, with full military honors. To his widow, Pam Colwell, an honorary member of our Class, and his extensive family, 1917 extends its profound sympathy.

We also lost two other members of the 1917 family—the widows of Jack Denison and Bill McLean. On a happier note, a letter was received from Put Cheung of the Class of 1994, expressing appreciation for being a recipient of the Francis Yvonne Van Schoonhoven Jr. War Memorial Scholarship. Because of this grant, his dream of becoming an aerospace engineer is within his grasp.

We have a memorial in this issue.

19 GEORGE B. LARSON 14 Lake Forest Dr. Charlottesville, VA 22901

Not a single word from any 1919er to pass along to you. We assume and hope that all is well. Please let us hear from you.

20 SALLY S. McALPIN W'20 Box 670 Princeton, NJ 08542

Princeton is definitely not famous for its weather, though one can expect a reasonably good spring and fall. Alas, fall has now failed us. On Oct. 18, N.J. hosted a tornado, a small one, but an honest-to-goodness tornado, that hit so near Princeton we can lawfully also claim it. It touched down in an area of level open fields about three miles away as the crow flies and swept through a tiny development, leaving one side of a short street flattened to earth while the houses on the other side were untouched. No tragic casualties. At that same moment your secretary was driving home from a lecture at the institute in a gale of wind that whipped the trees back and forth as if they were twigs. It was wildly exhilarating, but a little frightening.

Speaking of the secretary, she has the honor of having a gardener who entered the 1990 Princeton Prize Tomato contest and won second place with a one-pound, nine-ounce tomato that had a circumference of 15¼ inches. The winner weighed a whopping two pounds, five and a half ounces!

We hope everyone in the Class of 1920 had a wonderful holiday and wish one and all a Happy 1991!

21 A. EDWARD CONOVER 331 Lower Dolington Rd., Apt. C-4 Newtown, PA 18940

HUGS

If you can't sweep your troubles under the rug

Just give someone a nice big hug.

If it's relationship you seek

A little peck upon the cheek

Will neutralize indifferent shrugs

And soon lead up to nice big hugs.

Samples from THE GHOST OF HENRY KLIDE AND OTHER POEMS by Ed Conover, $5.95, postage and autograph included. End of commercial.

My apologies to Jack Lewis '22 (who rowed number five in Heinie Leb's championship crew) for mistakenly calling him Joe in the Dec. 5 issue. That reminds me of a Zurich jeweler who, after fixing a loose screw in a brand-new Swiss watch, said "only the Pope is infallible."

Three more Class widows report recent moves. They are Craig Brackin's widow, Marion, to 1528 Springwood Dr., Sarasota, FL 34232-3347; Gordon McCulloch's widow, Ginny, to The Elms, 22 Elm St., Westerly, RI 02891; Richard Stillwell's widow, Celia, to Fox Hill Village, 10 Longwood Dr., Westwood, MA 01090.

Hearty greetings from the Class to Watt Matthews on his 92nd birthday, Feb. 1.

We are sorry to report that Darwood Myers died Dec. 3, 1990. The Class extends sympathy to his wife, Elizabeth, and family. A memorial will follow.

22 JACK REYNOLDS, JOHN CARTIER '60 103 East 84th St. New York, NY 10028

An update on John (Jack) Lewis, Class president. Jack is residing in Hightstown, N.J., at a beautiful retirement community called Meadow Lakes, run by the Presbyterian Church. Jack celebrated his 90th birthday on Sept. 3 with his usual every-five-year bash. The photo shows Jack and his family leading everyone to a reception. Jack recently reminisced with the assistant secretary about days at Princeton and his family and business career. In particular, Jack remembers the varsity crew of 1921 and 1922. The 1921 boat was considered to be the best in the country. Other '22 members were John Sinclair and Perry Morgan. Jack showed me a picture of their reunion in 1966 and also a recent copy of the annual rowing trophy that is awarded each year to the best Princeton Crew. On his wall is a Princeton oar, to remind him of these memories.

The Annual Giving effort is well underway, under the spirited leadership of Ed deConingb. The Class has a wonderful record of total giving to Princeton. We will report in detail in a subsequent issue on the number of dormitories, scholarships, and endowed professorships that have been established by various classmates, widows, children, and other relatives in behalf of 1922. At the present time 20 gifts have been received for a total of $18,000. The Class has achieved an 80% participation rate in past years. Keep up the good work and also send information and photos for the Class column.

We have a memorial in this issue.

23 LIBBY GOOD 201 W. Evergreen Ave., Apt. 716 Philadelphia, PA 19118

Mrs. Alfred S. Dasbiell (Sally) reports: "Fritz Dash- iell's 13th great grandchild is due within the next three weeks. How he would have loved all these youngsters!"

During his and Ika's annual summer weeks in the U.S., Ides Van der Gracht writes that he shared a delightful lunch at the Princeton Club with Don Griffin, and that he agrees with Shakespeare (albeit in a different context) that "age doth not wither him." The Van der Grachts spent the rest of their U.S. stay touching base with friends in New England and spending time with family in the Adirondacks along the Hudson River. Back home in Switzerland, they enjoyed the view of the Alps from their lakeside terrace during the "most glorious summer we can remember."

Mrs. John P. Gorman (Betty) had a great reunion in Spokane last summer with her daughter, Pat, her husband, six of their nine children, and three great-grandchildren! Another daughter, Barbara, is living in Tucson, Ariz., working as a volunteer at the Casa de la Niños. Although one of her three children does live nearby, Betty says, "We are such a scattered family that if ever I could gather all of them, including spouses and offspring, I would need to rent a hotel!"

Mrs. F. Morse Archer Jr. reports that her two shelties are well and that she spends much time these days walking, shopping, and fussing with high blood pressure.

We regret to report the death of Robert Millard Ives Sept. 13, 1990.

24

RICHARD H. HOBBS
862 Prospect Ave.
Winnetka, IL 60093

This photograph of our 1924 banner was taken at the usual assembly point in the front campus before the P-rade last June. As you can see none of our classmates are in the picture which means that they were off "visiting" with friends in other classes. There is always a lot of confusion while the P-rade is being organized so this is a very typical scene and one we have enjoyed year after year.

Crosby Boyd is at Islamorada, David McKee at Pompano Beach, and Howard Williams at Sarasota for the winter.

You will recall that Buzz Cuyler's daughter Margery is a well-known author of story books for children. The latest one is a picture book called "Baby Dot: A Dinosaur Story." Baby Dot is the youngest offspring of a dinosaur family, a spoiled brat who is used to getting her own way. The book is one of more than a dozen books for children. In addition Margery has written several books of poems on different topics under the pseudonym of Daisy Wallace.

We regret to report that Roger S. Ellis died in Woodstock, Vt., on Nov. 20, 1990.

25

JOHN L. K. JENNEY
Box 123
Montchanin, DE 19710

Our nicely arranged and enjoyable annual Class lunch was held at the Princeton Club of New York Dec. 6. Present were the Hayeses, Heyms, Grosses, Jenneys, MacMillans, McMahons, Peckermans, Streets, and (without wives) Dill, Nields, Harvey Phillips, Warnock, and Weare. Also Estelle Ives, Phoebe Conner, and Shirley Steeger, who had to report that Harry was in the hospital, to the great regret and concern of all of us. We owe great thanks to Shirley, who completed Harry's arrangements and successful efforts to ensure a good attendance.

We had looked forward to a talk by George Kennan, but George had to advise us that he was to enter the hospital Dec. 2 for an operation to fix an injury incurred while working at his place in Norway last summer. (The operation has been postponed in favor of therapy.) Don Altmair '55, assistant director of the Alumni Council (also with us at lunch) was successful in arranging for Bill McCleery, playwright and journalist with many connections with Princeton, to speak to us on Woodrow Wilson's views on education and his contribution to Princeton's educational program.

Buel Weare advised us that following the loss of his house by fire, he had moved to Fair Haven, a retirement home in Sykesville, Md. Contributions to Annual Giving may be sent to him there (7200 Third Ave; zip 21784).

The Peckermans attended the 100th birthday party of Arthur Holden '12 (see Dec. 5 PAW, which also included a story on Harvey Phillips' contribution to a documentary on the Civil War). Instead of visiting the Riviera to escape the New England winter as in past years, they are going to Australia and New Zealand for two months. The Streets hope to resume their annual visits to Yeamans Hall, near Charleston. Ernie Heyn has recovered from his fall, though he still carries a cane.

We sadly regret to report the death of Grant (Bill) Oliver on Dec. 14. A memorial will follow.

26

ROBERT WOHLFORTH
57 Rockwell Rd.
Ridgefield, CT 06877

The Thomas Jefferson Memorial Assn. honored Ed Dumbauld on Nov. 2 at a dinner in Monticello for his long and distinguished Jeffersonian scholarship with the presentation of the assn.'s Gold Medal, one of only four that have been awarded in the past 30 years. We add our acclaim to our illustrious classmate, who is senior U.S. judge for the western district of Penn., and who has favored us with learned commentary on Jefferson's life and accomplishments in recent 1926 "Summer Summaries."

Also from Penn. comes news that Madge and St Ubi were special guests at the Princeton Alumni Assn. of Western Penn. dinner in recognition of contribution to Annual Giving for 50 years, or since it was established in 1940. Says Si, "There were four of us honored and each received a replica of the Thomas Jefferson Cup which carries the seal of the university and our name and Class."

There were nine in the pre-game party at Jadwin for the Harvard encounter: Assoc. Mbr. Betsy Cook, Charlie Hemmersley, Patty and Bill Nevius, Jim Newman, Dottie and Stew Peyton, and Mary and Woaz Supplee.

Guy Dove married Mrs. Curtis Lucius Hillyer, the former Mary Cook of Savannah, Ga., Oct. 12 in Washington, D.C.

Jim Robbins reports that our 1926 Scholarship recipient, Julie Brackenridge '91, who started her Princeton basketball career by playing only fourteen game minutes her first Princeton season, is now the number one guard and captain of the promising women's varsity team.

We record with much sadness the deaths of classmates Al Lukens on June 27, Dan Hill on July 17, Julian Creighton on Sept. 24, George Blackburn on Oct. 8 and Ned Houpt on Nov. 12.

We have a memorial in this issue.

27

NILSON R. BURN
36 Lexington Rd.
West Hartford, CT 06119

The secretary has been reminded that all members of the Class should have the name and address of our President, James C. Westfall, 95 Central Ave., Montclair, NJ 07042; 201-746-4237.

In a recent letter, Mike Feighan, '27's former congressman from Ohio, shares news of a nostalgic weekend in Princeton. He lunched with his daughter, Mrs. Fleur F. Jones, her husband, their two sons Hugh and Michael, Barbara Sigmund, the late mayor of Princeton, and her mother Lindy Boggs of New Orleans, a congresswoman. Mike roamed around the campus, including 23 Blair Hall, his junior and senior room. He pointed out the fireplace where he carved the boys' grandmother's inietials. Both boys long to go to Princeton, and Mike wants to live in his grandfather's room and carve his mother's initials on the fireplace. Hugh, a champion swimmer, wants to be on the Princeton swim team. Mike also visited the Mudd Library to see his papers which he deposited there.

Bernie Thulin continues his lengthy studies of the prices of stocks of publicly held companies. Bob Hereford reports telephone chats with Bob Munoz in La Jolla, Calif., and Bob Ballantine in Vail, Ariz. He found them "as healthy as could be expected of a couple of old geezers," and in good spirits.

Curt Winsor in early Sept. cruised on the ROYAL VIKING up the St. Lawrence River to Montreal via Halifax, Cape Breton Island, and Quebec, with his son Curt Jr., former U.S. ambassador to Costa Rica, who was the ship's lecturer. "The trip doubled my cholesterol," he laments.

We have a memorial in this issue.

28

R. PARK JOHNSON
Box 28
Penney Farms, FL 32079; 904-284-8698

A report has been received from Helen and Brooks Barlow of the annual Class luncheon at the Princeton Club of New York on Dec. 3. The club is all torn up in the process of remodeling, but Jane and Don Liddell were helped by the Barlows in decorating two big tables in a nice room on the fourth floor with orange runners and silk flowers. Also attending the luncheon were: Marge and Bill Elliott, Charlotte and Fred Hyer, Jim Lee, Jack Leggett, John McMartin, Mary and Warner Taylor, Perc Young and Felicity Mead, widow of Jim Mead Jr. They all had a very good time, and enjoyed this small but significant gathering of some of what Helen Barlow accurately calls the "old stalwarts" of 1928.

The Christmas season recess has brought several additions to the necrology list: Jack Milliken died Nov. 15 in N.Y.; Barron Rockwell Nov. 23 in Rochester, Minn.; Walt Bennett in Pinehurst, N.C.; and Dick Huckin in Concord, Mass. on dates in mid-Nov. that have not yet been verified. Walt had recently written that he was going to go to the hospital for an operation, and Louise Huckin had reported Dick's immobility, suffering from Parkinson's and Alzheimer's, requiring a wheelchair. Our sympathy is with Natalia Milliken, Georgina Rockwell, Alice Bennett, Louise Huckin, and families.

We have word of the death of Mildred (whom we all knew as Mimi) Strauss, widow of Burt Strauss, on Oct. 19 in N.Y. They are survived by a son, Burt Jr., a daughter, Betty Pforzheimer, and five grandchildren. Burt died on July 24, 1988.

29

LOUIS F. KEMP
12 Winthrop Rd.
Guilford, CT 06437; 203-453-4646

I'm pleased to report on our Class scholarships that have been awarded, according to the recording secretary of the University. Che-Andre Heron '93 and Juliana Petrescu '91 are recipients of the Horatio Biglow Ballard Scholarship. Che-Andre is working towards a B.S. in engineering and has been active in track, student congress, Natl. Honor Society, and other interests. Juliana is concentrating on physics with an A.B. degree in mind. She has been involved in swimming, basketball, tennis, and horseback riding as well as student government, debating, and music. Yolanda Pierce '94 has won the 1929 Class Scholarship, heading for an A.B. degree in biology and medical school. She plays volleyball and is active in student publications. The John Stevens Memorial Scholarship has been awarded to Jauffmick Michel '94 and Craig D. Fiander '93. These students deeply appreciate the opportunity our Class has afforded them.

by Dick Bernheim still operates his leather business in Hoboken. "I'm in the clutches of a N.J. Environmental Bureau. Its purpose is worthy, but its edicts resemble those of a bureaucratic police state." But he does not let the work interfere with golf. Had Springer is still in pretty good shape—just moving slower. He has been in the same house since he and Susan were married 56 years ago.

Sadly, we lost Dick Jessup Nov. 25, 1990. A memorial will follow. We have a memorial in this issue.

30 HUBERT A. "RED" SCHNEIDER
8008 Westover Rd.
Bethesda, MD 20814

Mid-Winter Luncheon
Feb. 12, 1991, Noon
St. Andrews Club

4475 North Ocean Blvd., Delray Bch., Fla. Ladies invited. For reservations call Fred Frost at (407)-272-6670 or write him at the St. Andrews Club, Apt. 16-A. Herewith some more gleanings from the dues envelope flaps: Last summer Evelyn and Jack Myers attended the wedding of their granddaughter in Monmouth Mills, N.J. Among the out-of-town guests was a family from Columbia, South America, with whom the bride had lived as an exchange student several years ago. Bea and Burt Curry and Irene and Steve Stanton get together about once a month for dinner and cards at their home in Stuart, Fla. Howie Elting writes about an exhausting cruise they made from Lisbon, Madeira, Canary Islands, Minorca, Corsica, to Genoa and then home via Zurich and Frankfurt. He says: "No more of such busy, fast trips for us." Stacy Lloyd has moved from St. Croix, where he lived for many years, to Berryville, Va. Margaret and Don Robinson spent last Aug. in Nantucket, their 28th visit to the island since Don's retirement from the Foreign Service in 1961. In acknowledging his birthday card on the occasion of his 80th birthday, our youngest member, Warren Adams, wrote: "Keep them coming, please, a little longer." So say we all.

Mars Sprague informs us that Chick Shenk had been seriously injured in an automobile accident several months ago. Chick was in the hospital for many weeks, made a remarkable recovery, and at the last report was taking it easy in a convalescent home in Erie, Penn. Your secretary has had his second successful eye implant operation. He can now distinguish between blondes and brunettes but still can't catch them.

We have memorials in this issue.

31 HUGH T. KURN
15-01-U Meadow Lakes
Hightstown, NJ 08520; 609-448-4100

Anniston, down Bama way, was the site of a recent '31 mini-reunion. Ethel and Glenn Andrews, who live there, welcomed Ed Baumann from nearby Choccolocco and visitors Joyce and Ralph Cannon. The fearsome fivesome plan on our 60th.

If you wanted to find the Center for the Arts in Vero Beach, just ask the way to Armstrong Drive. Jean and George Armstrong have been the moving spirits behind this successful enterprise. Jean has a new knee and "Army" promises they will both be walking around Palmer Square in June.

We have two named Bond (Ev and Bob). Ev signs himself George E. and Bob as Gordon V. Well, as the Book says, "A good name is better than precious ointment."

Not up to "the full distance" for the P-rade, George Erdman will be on hand and can, with a dozen other '31ers, thumb a ride in an antique classic car. We may even have a '31 Ford wagon, driven by Rob Gibby (Lehigh '64), son of Bob Gibby '36. Remember Archie Bunker's theme song? "Gee, our old LaSalle ran great!"

Ruth and Bill Finesbriber, who have the enviable address of "Avenue of the Stars" in L.A. (where else?) plan a transit through the Panama Canal. Everyone know the famous palindrome? "A man, a plan, a canal, Panama."

We regret to report the death of Alfred Uiblein. A memorial will appear later.

32 MATLAND A. EDEY
Seven Gates Farm
Vineyard Haven, MA 02568

SOME NOTES ON AG: In addition to the $105,401 in Annual Giving earned as a result of Jack Kellogg's valiant efforts and reported on in an earlier column, there is another source of '32 generosity that has been gradually piling up under the stewardship of DeWitt Stern. DeWitt is in charge of a program known as Annual Giving Endowment, under which classmates make capital gifts to the University, the income from which goes to A.G. year after year—long after the donor is gone. So far DeWitt has gathered $163,230 for this eminently worthwhile enterprise. And as the years go by, more and more deceased classmates are being specifically targeted by A.G. contributions in their memory. They now number 47: Paul Bird, Albert Blanke, Edward Boyd, Thomas Brown, Howard Busick, Henry Cochran, Samuel Cochran, Richard Damman, Edward Davison, Wagner Dickerson, Henry Dodge, Robert Dripps, William Evans, William Freeston, Edward Gasson, Hollis Hand, Ashley Hardy, William Houser, Robert Kessler, Edwin Kimble, Edward Lammers, Robert Lansden, Brooks Larkin, Frederick Leonard, Screven Lorillard, Malcolm McAlpin, James McLean, George Medill, James Oram, Ralph Paddock, Richard Roberts, Richard Schumann, Belford Seabrook, James Sberwin, John Speer, Mark Sullivan, Raymond Swain, Harold Tasker, William Taylor, Cuthbert Train, Charles Truitt, Frank Wachter, Thomas Wagner, Robert Walker, Levin Waters, Henry Whitney, William Yeckley. It is worth listing these men for the wonderful memories they evoke when their names are read.

Betty and Jake Herzog have been commuting to Taos, N.M., where Betty has been making a series of portraits of Indians in their ceremonial garb. She has had one show, sold a number of portraits, and will have another next spring. John Ranch writes that the photo of him in gray top hat was not taken at Ascot but at Buckingham Palace during a garden party given by the Queen. He also points out that that famous "lost" photo was in your secretary's hands briefly, and would have been seen by all of you had he had sense enough to publish it.

33 ARTHUR MOODY
600 E. Cathedral Rd., Apt. A314
Philadelphia, PA 19128

In the last issue we had an item about a son of '33, the continuing saga of Fife Symington's son, Fife Jr. Now for two more: Jack MacDonald's son, John '66, reports that he and his family spent a week at Red Lodge, Mt., last summer in a Princeton-sponsored program. He returned with a document loaded with '33 material, which we are turning over to Bob Keidel for inclusion in next summer's newsletter. And last, we have some news about Joe Ferrer's eldest son, Miguel, who was recently featured in the "TV Talk" column in the PHILADELPHIA INQUIRER. The piece refers to his roles in "Twin Peaks" and "Broken Badges," and it asks, "What's it like going from uptight F.B.I. forensics expert to crazy Cajun cop?" Miguel says: "Albert Rosenfeld is the rudest man alive, while 'Beau' Jack Bowman is at the opposite end of the pole." With "Badges" airing at 9 P.M. Saturday, Miguel is his own warm-up act for "Twin Peaks" at 10. He has also been known to compete with himself in guest shots on "Shannon's Deal" running opposite "Peaks."

DEPARTMENT OF OMISSIONS AND CORRECTIONS: Justine and Bob Keidel were present at the Harvard game; John Redpath is not only a frequent attendee at Nassau Club lunches, but is a diligent reporter of '33 news; we assume no one will have been misled by the misspelling of Jack Kerkan's name in the announcement of his death.

Be sure to remember the date of Feb. 16, 1991, the Alumni Day luncheon at Jadwin and the Service of Remembrance in the University Chapel.

We have memorials in this issue.

34 RALPH K. FITCHIE
4347 Province Line Rd.
Princeton, NJ 08540

Events Chairman Alex Keer announces that our Spring Lunch in Princeton will be on Sat., Apr. 13; Reunions will be Fri. and Sat., June 7 and 8. Details to come.

Frank Buchner was married Oct. 20 to Maggie Farrell, a widow. The ceremony took place in his home in Mendham, N.J., before a small group of mostly Maggie's relatives and Frank's family. His first wife, Dot (Wooley), died in Nov. 1989.

Eugenia (Gene) and John Davidson celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary in Nov., the same month in which he reached his 80th birthday. "If you count that as news," he writes, "that's the best I can do."

Janet and Malcolm Johnson celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary in Sept. with a dinner dance at the Bronxville (N.Y.) Field Club. Classmates present included Gordy Brown (a fellow Bronxvillian), Bob Holton, Bill Oman (Mal's Princeton roommate and best man at his wedding), Jack Palmer, and Louise (the widow of Perry Sellon).

Betty and Ernie May celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary Columbus Day in Bermuda with their entire family—three children plus two daughters-in-law, ten grandchildren, and one grandchild-in-law.

Weasel and President Bayard Roberts's youngest daughter (of four), Selina (Mrs. Philip) Ottum, died of cancer Dec. 2 in Oregon two months after her 42nd birthday. She had been deputy chairman of the Natl. Endowment for the Arts in Washington, a post she had to give up early last year for health reasons. Previously she had been director of the Metropolitan Arts Commission in Portland, where she lived.

We have a memorial in this issue.

35 JOSEPH C. HAZEN JR.
94 Essex Rd.
Summit, NJ 07901

KUDOS. Bob Super, who retired six years ago from the English dept. of the Univ. of Michigan, was recently elected a corresponding fellow of the British Academy in London, and his bulky biography of the novelist Anthony Trollope has been awarded a prize as the outstanding book of 1990 at the Univ. of Michigan Press. Says Bob, "I first become acquainted with the 'Victorian demon' Trollope in the preceptorial of Willard Thorp in our sophomore year." During his 25 years at Michigan, Bob taught on visiting appointments at Rice, U.C.L.A., Berkeley, and Texas A. & M. His wife, Rebecca, is also an educator: she taught reading to adult illiterates. The Supers live in Ann Arbor.

UP-COMING. Alumni Day with its lectures, luncheon, and Service of Remembrance is scheduled for Sat., Feb. 16. At 10:30 that morning the Class will gather in the 1935 Room in the Jadwin Physics Building where hosts Will Harrington and Walker

Berkeley's New Chancellor

CHANG-LIN TIEN *59 is a modest man who downplays his many achievements. He is a popular professor, a noted researcher in the field of heat transfer, and the recently appointed chancellor of the University of California at Berkeley. He is the first Asian-American to head a major research university in the United States. The first. Only Tien seems unimpressed. "I personally believe it was just an evolutionary process for Asian-Americans," he says. "I was just in the right place at the right time. Asian-Americans are assuming important positions in all segments of society."

The road to Berkeley's top job began in Wuhan, China, where Tien was born to a wealthy family fifty-five years ago. The family's comfortable life was soon disrupted when, to avoid the Japanese army during World War II, they fled to Shanghai. In 1949, after the Communist revolution, they were forced to move again—this time to Taiwan. In 1956, Tien came to the United States for a year of study at the University of Louisville. He was instantly struck by the segregated lunch counters, drinking fountains, and restrooms. "You have to remember that this was before Martin Luther King, and the social circumstances were very different," he says. The discrimination extended into the classroom. In an interview with California Monthly, Tien recounted how a professor at Louisville had insulted him in front of other students, called him "Chinaman," and refused to address him by his name. Tien's English was so marginal that he didn't even realize he was being insulted.

In October 1957, after his year at Louisville, Tien went to Princeton and began what he describes as "a very intensive period" in his life. Just twenty months later, he graduated with an M.A. and a

Chang-Lin Tien *59

PHOTO BY ROBERT HOLMGREN

Ph.D. in mechanical engineering; along the way, he passed language tests in French and German, and exams in his minor (math and physics). Why the rush? "I was under a lot of economic pressure and needed to finish so I could get a job," Tien says. Despite the frantic pace of his studies, Tien says he had "a very good time" at Princeton.

Tien applied for teaching positions on both the east and west coasts. Professor Robert Drake, then the chairman of the mechanical engineering department at Princeton, encouraged him to seek a job at Berkeley, where Drake had received his Ph.D. Though the salary at Berkeley was low and the job title was only "acting assistant professor," Tien acquiesced in his mentor's wishes. "In the culture I grew up in," he notes, "you respect your teachers."

His introduction to Berkeley was not easy. As he and his wife searched for apartments, they found that many were designated "not for Orientals or Negroes." His love of teaching, however, more than compensated for any such difficulties. Knowing that his English was not good—he still speaks with an accent—Tien tried to excel in other ways: "good preparation, good blackboard work, good advising, and good discussions after class with students." His hard work paid off immediately: he won Berkeley's Distinguished Teaching Award in 1962—one of the youngest professors in the school's history to win this prestigious honor—and thus began a meteoric rise through the ranks. He became a full professor in 1968, chaired the mechanical engineering department from 1974 to 1981, and was Berkeley's vice-chancellor for research from 1983 to 1985. He left for two years to become executive vice-chancellor at the University of California at Irvine, and then returned last July to take over the 31,000-student Berkeley campus.

Among the many challenges Tien faces as chancellor, 40 percent of Berkeley's faculty will retire in the next decade. "That's a tremendous opportunity, but also a challenge," he told California Monthly. "We can make it or break it. If we can get all the very best people, new blood, then we'll be able to maintain and enhance our level for many, many years." And his vision to guide Berkeley in the future? "Excellence through diversity," he said simply. "Diversity of students, faculty, management; but absolutely first-class quality."

—Christopher P. Lu '88

Stevenson will provide the usual refreshments.

PAST PARTIES. The Harvard game picnic attracted 21 classmates and 17 wives, including these whose names seldom appear in this column: Caleb Fox of Philadelphia, Jim Crane of Buffalo, Alb Fleitas of Philadelphia, and Ralph Reiman of Drexel Hill, Penn. A month or so later, the annual mid-winter party, which was switched to noontime, to N.Y.C., and to a co-ed format, attracted a number of classmates who didn't usually make the dinners in Princeton: Hugh Adams, Brook Alexander, and Kidder Smith of N.Y.C.; Julian Gregory of Wilton, Conn.; Bob Johnson of Millbrook, N.Y.; Jim Sweeney of Westport, Conn.; and George Vondermuhl of Brookfield, Conn. A total of 25 men and ten wives were present.

In MEMORIAM. William H. Harrison of Louisville,

Ky., Mar. 19, 1913—Oct. 7, 1990; Frederick P. Ross of Fitchburg, Mass., Nov. 8, 1914—Oct. 1, 1990. The Class has a memorial in this issue.

36

JAMES Q. BENSEN
24 Aylesbury Cir., Windermere
Madison, CT 06443

Shown are the ever-young Bill Mennen and Audrey at the 10,000-foot level on the Schilthorn during their recent month-long trip to Bavaria, Austria, and Switzerland. Next excursion: a month in France, England, and the fjords of Norway. Some life! Other recent Class travelers: Bill Taggart to London, Salzburg, and Munich; Malcolm Van Arsdale to England and Scotland; and Ari Grenier to east Germany, Czechoslovakia, Poland, Hungary, and Bulgaria. He brought home a piece of the "Wall" and disliked the use of carbonated "mineral" water to brush his teeth!

Nels Abbott reports that he and Monette, of Orem, Ut., claim they are the biggest non-Mormon boosters of B.Y.U. football and basketball. They also enjoy the Utah Opera Co. in Salt Lake.

Speaking of music, in mid-Nov. the Palm Beach Community College presented "An Evening on Broadway," featuring music from Kismet and Bells Are Ringing with Herbert Bayard Swope, local popular talk-show host, as narrator. Bruce Ridgway advises that on Nov. 29 he, Bob French, and John Bliss, who recently celebrated his 78th birthday with family and friends including Seaver Jones in N.Y.C., represented the Class at the 100th birthday celebration in Washington, Conn., of Arthur Holden '12, Princeton's legend known as Lil Arthur.

So we enter the year of our 55th reunion and 59 years since entering as freshmen! Many of us will attend our 55th next June.

37

STANISLAW F. MEDINA
250 Broadway, Rm. 2104
New York, NY 10007

Again, to start us off with 50th wedding anniversaries coming up in 1991: Jane and Frank Avery June 14; Allison and Harry Caesar March 15 (sculpting furiously, with nine pieces in his New York gallery, 25 at a show on Long Island, etc. "here and there"); Henrietta and Jim Cannon Aug. 2; Virginia and Val Cartus Sept. 13; Betty and Walt Close July 2; Betsy and Brad Cochran Dec. 30 (under the tape for a joint income tax return, and last Oct. rolling up an aggregate 437 golfing with Culler, Ferenbach, and Pyme); Helen and Shovel Cummings July 19; Audrey and Larry Hauxhurst Sept. 20; Virginia and Harry Hogan Aug. 15; Barbara and Johnny Jones Feb. 10; Virginia and Nic Larzelere Nov. 26; Sally and Ed Limberg Nov. 22; Grace and Gar Lotspeich Mar. 29; Charlotte and Will Lutz May 1; Phyllis and Hank McCreery Sept. 4; Virginia and Johnny Meirs Sept. 6; Helen and Bill Oechler Dec. 22; Lucia and Jim Parker Mar. 29; Eleanor and Gene Pendexter May 25; Frances and Bob Rye Mar. 22; Lucy and Bob Sayre May 17; Elinor and Sam Scovill Feb. 22; Judith and Johnny Smyth Jan. 14; Helen and Dave Stanley Apr. 19; Lisa and Johnny Trent June 10; and Kathryn and Jack Wood Dec. 6. Anybody left out? One first wives slipped in by mistake? Left out last year were Betty and Al Osgood, apologies, who celebrated their 51st Oct. 20, 1990. The McCreerys, incidentally, precelebrated with a month in France last year, mostly in Brittany, where they rented a beach house for fifteen days. "Went to a Rotary dinner in Dinan, only French spoken. We look forward to the 55th reunion."

Our honorary classmate Dick Colman was inducted into the Football Hall of Fame last Oct. His .694 victory performance, 1957-68, matched that of his mentor Charlie Caldwell. We'll bet you don't recall, however, that he was elected mayor of Princeton and active in democratic politics as a delegate to natl. conventions.

Regretfully we report the death of Sieve Trentman Nov. 24, 1990. A memorial will follow. We have a memorial in this issue.

38

WILLIAM P. TAMS
Box 25217
Jackson, WY 83001; 307-733-5193

Alumni Day always brings together a number of classmates, not only from nearby but also from a distance, for the awards luncheon. This year it will be held on Feb. 16, and you will receive a notice regarding the program. The Service of Remembrance at 3 P.M. in the University Chapel will honor our departed brethren of 1990: Sparrow Chapman, Bob Devine, Walt Hankin, Jim Hillhouse, Lonnie Noofin, Peter Moore, Stan Sarnoff, Jim Whitlock, and Evarts Ziegler. Their families will be guests of the Alumni Council at the luncheon, and a classmate will escort them to the service.

A meeting of the Class Executive Committee and interested others prior to the Harvard game turned out to be one of the most enjoyable of such occasions in recent years. Participants: Karen and John Armitage, Ruth and Les Block, Paul Bradbury, Betty and John Burke, Peg and Austin Furst, Carroll and Fred King, Mannette and Dan Lieblitch, Jean and Andy McLeod, Ginger Meyer, Barbara and Jack Plat- ten, Ellen Hoke and John Scoon, Jim Simpson, Helen and Bill Tams, and Maddy and Dave Wilson. We learned that Class funds are in exemplary condition. The necessary increase in dues to $35 does not appear to have an adverse effect on participation. Our dues are still among the lowest. Those coming next day for the picnic lunch and game included Jane and Cliff Baker, Charlotte and Bob Kulp, Mary and Frank Kinney, and Ginny and Palmer Way.

You don't see Clarice Simpson listed above because she was busy with exhibits of her superb photography in Czechoslovakia. Her current show, "Trekking Nepal and India," is a record of the trip she and Jim made on foot in 1988. Clarice is of Czech ancestry and grew up in East Bernard, Tex., where Czech is still spoken as a second language.

We regret to report the deaths of James Hillhouse Nov. 3 and Evarts Ziegler Nov. 24. Memorials will follow.

39

RICHARD R. UHL
12 Charlotte Ct.
Briarcliff Manor, NY 10510

Ash Lee writes "Our Class notes of Oct. 24 reported on some but not all minis and new '39 grandchildren. Out here we had a Fall mini in our Dillon, Colo. condo, when Elizabeth and Dave Nes spent a weekend with Barbara and me in Sept. Dave had never played golf before at 9,200 ft. Incidentally, Dave, who has five daughters, is now also a grandfather: a red-headed grandson was born to daughter Nancy and her husband. Dave had gone to Colorado to attend what he termed "a very moving reunion of his 612th Pack Artillery Battalion (Mule), an outfit which crossed the Burma hump to supply the hard-pressed Chinese." Dave adds that his grandson Nicholas Nes Knowlton was born at the close of our 50th reunion: "very appropriate."

In his letter Ash also referred to the new book MAIN LINE WASP by Thacher Longstreth '41. On page 134, says Ash, Thach grossly exaggerated when he claimed that Ash won $800 from him in an end-of-war, homeward-bound gin rummy game. "If I had won $800 from him, I would have been able to buy a new Ford when I got home."

Speaking of grandchildren (which we were a minute ago), Bill Bours boasts a granddaughter on campus this year. She's Emma Morten Bours, daughter of Bill IV (Stanford '66). We call Emma a fourth-generation tiger. Her great-grandfather was 1904.

Bill Robinson reports that in the fund drive to finance a new fleet of boats for the Princeton Sailing team, '39 had the most donors of any class.

We have memorials in this issue.

40

BENJAMIN FULLER
6119 Vernon Terr.
Alexandria, VA 22307; 703-329-1961

FORWARD WITH FORTY into 1991! It promises to be a lot of fun!

One who came a goodly distance to Old Nassau from beyond the shores of the U.S. for our 50th reunion was "Mad Mike" O'Malley—all the way from his horse farm in Tipperary, Ireland. Here we note Mike in the stable yard wearing his reunion "panama" hat and about to depart for the races. The young man on his left is a neighbor, a student at Dublin's Trinity College, who had just delivered Mike's winter hay supply. Mike and Catherine "would be happy to have classmates stop by to see us in this beautiful part of the world."

Less said the better about the results of the past football season where losses to Harvard, Yale, Dartmouth, and several other opponents were witnessed by a loyal but disappointed 1940 representation. However, this experience was somewhat offset by a victory over Penn celebrated at a cheerful gathering afterwards at Margaret and Bob Goheen's Princeton home.

Among those present on this far brighter Sat. afternoon were Chiz Anderson, Bob Bordley, Palmer Bouie, Bill Davidson, Ed Farley, Jack Getsel, Joe Gilleaudeau, Gordon Griffin, George Hamid, Bob Hazlehurst, Jim Hundley, Gil Kayser, Bucky Turner, Ray Schweitzer, Johnny Valentine.

Here is an unusual question for you to ponder. Who among the classmates listed above had never ever been in Palmer Stadium before even during his four years as an undergraduate? Answer to appear in a subsequent Class column.

With sadness we record the death of classmate Wally Tiernan on Nov. 22, 1990, at Delray Beach, Fla. A memorial will follow. We have a memorial in this issue.

41

BILL WILSON
Box 1420
Bridgehampton, NY 11932; 516-537-2458

There will be a Class dinner on the evening of Alumni Day, Feb. 16, in Fine Hall tower.

Pictured is Ohio's Dan Carmichael in his Formula Atlantic machine out for early morning practice at Elkhart Lake, Wisc. This summer he won the 10-state Central Division Championship and finished third in the S.C.C.A. Nationals at Atlanta in Oct. One of the young drivers there said "Gee, Mr. Carmichael, I have a grandfather younger than you!" ("I kicked his ass on the track," reports Dan.)

"SHORT STANDS TALL ON CROQUET COURT." brayed a Chapel Hill sports page headline on Oct. 17. The reference is to Andrew Short, son of Janet and Win Short, who just became Cambridge Singles Champ. This past summer he won the Claremont Classic in Maine. "I find it relaxing to concentrate on something with no ultimate significance," observed Andrew, a clinical psychologist in Chapel Hill. (Pro circuit purses run to $50,000.)

Bill Wilson is grateful to his daughter-in-law Greer and son Chris Wilson '73 for his third grandchild (all distaff), Jesse Hardwicke Wilson (8 lbs.) Dec. 1, 1990, Boston. Thank Heaven for Little Girls. Ted Price was president of N.J.'s Ridgewood Country Club (oldest in the state) during its centennial-year celebration. Jack Nicklaus, Lee Trevino, Byron Nelson, and Lester Lanin helped Ted. Barbara helped too.

The cancer he fought so quietly for so long finally killed Dick Plumer on Nov. 15, 1990. A stronger and more gentle man there never was. A memorial will follow. We have a memorial in this issue.

42

ARMSTRONG HUNTER
R.R. 1, Box 250, Perkinsville, VT 05151
802-263-5361; FAX 802-263-9263

Luke 15:8 Dept: Another victory, thanks to Ed Essertier '43, who read in this column that we had no good address for John deChamplon and promptly put Don Vreeland on the trail. John's in San Diego, Calif., retired from college teaching, taking care of things while wife, Barbara, studies molecular biology at the graduate school of U.C.-San Diego. The deChamplons' address was in '42 News 10 (p. 18); their telephone is 619-566-4112.

Some aging words from dues/A.G. flaps. Jack Guthrie, Va.: "Youngest son, Kevin '84, is doing color commentary on ESPN Ivy League football games. Number two son, Gus, and his wife, Marty, have added Mark Reiley Guthrie (10 lbs., 15 oz.) to family rolls." Montk Morse, Va.: "Heart problem seems to be under control. I keep busy on the farm raising my Hereford cattle. Vi has recovered from her kidney operation." Duckie Clark, Ariz.: "Howard is enjoying the beauty around him. He sees the Red Rocks of Sedona—our apartment faces the Bell Rock and the big sky above. Each day his mind remembers less. It is Alzheimer's."

Pat Flournoy, Fla.: "During the summer of 1989 I was stricken with Parkinson's Disease while visiting my summer place in Denver. Since I couldn't afford to keep two houses and pay for the very expensive medicines, I sold the house there. The new treatment has me in pretty good shape." Bob Gensler, Calif.: "Retirement is grand. Sally and I volunteer a day a week with the Marin Cty. Public Defender; I also work a couple of days a week for a local attorney. We're both involved in running our homeowner's association." Bob Wheeler, Conn.: Celebrated my 70th with a week in London, a gift from longtime companion Shelley Claar."

Dick Stifel's valiant 17-year fight against the debilitating of Parkinson's Disease (and lately jaws cancer) ended Nov. 15 in Washington, D.C. Ed Eisenbart and Jack Nevius represented the Class at his memorial service. A memorial is in preparation.

43

JACK LAPLIN
10 Vardon Rd.
West Hartford, CT 06117; 203-523-8929

There will be a Class dinner held at P.C.N.Y. on Thursday, Feb. 28, with cocktails starting at 6:30 P.M. and chow down at 7:30 P.M. Exact price and speaker have not yet been determined. The dinner is in conjunction with the Florida mini-reunion that had to be canceled last year. Tues., Mar. 5 is the date for the annual cocktail party of the Princeton Alumni Club of S.W. Florida, where Dave Headley and Ted Van Buren are leading wheels. A hospital room is to be set up in the Naples Beach Hotel on Mon., Mar. 4 to continue through Wed., Mar. 6. Lunch on that date, Mar. 6, will conclude the festivities. For all the details and reservations for either event or both, contact Dave Peaslee, 11822 Goya Dr., Potomac, MD 20854, AC 301-251-1068; or Ed Essertier, 9303 Kittery Ct., Fairfax, VA 22031, AC 703-323-1215. Let's make this one a biggie!

The last two above-mentioned classmates and wives, Essertiers and Peaslees, sojourned at Casa Laplin over the Yale weekend. As usual, the socializing was top-drawer, the cocktail hours convivial and lengthy, the food fantastic. The game, however, played in a veritable monsoon, was highly forgettable. We all left at the end of the first half, with the score tied 7-7. It proved to be a wise move. The announced "crowd" was 5,500, which was only possible if at least 2,000 came disguised as empty seats!

John Howard writes, "Seventh grandchild born Sept. 26. Count is now three boys and four girls."

Dick McGraith took a beautiful tour of the Loire Valley recently (May) with a "French and French Art" group. He says that Ginny Ridder, Dan Ridder's sister-in-law, was with the group.

Tom Knapp throws his hat in the ring for the third- and fourth-generation sweepstakes by noting a total of 16 grandchildren and one great-granddaughter. Class record???

We have a memorial in this issue.

44

HURVEY S. STOCKMAN
1041 Matador Dr., S.E.
Albuquerque, NM 87123; 505-296-7057

From the Class Dinner Oct. 20, a delightful photo of three generations of tigers: (r-l) John Murdock, our mascot cradling John's granddaughter Katie Bauman, Class of 2013, and John's lovely daughter Missy Bauman '83. Bill Adamson writes that our St. Paul's contingent, not about to be out-done by the Taft School alumni, established a 97% contribution record with their class gift. Of the 64, 42 made a most enjoyable 50th. Along with Bill and Lenkie came Maisie and Tal Adamson, Grace and Doug Donald, Janny and Andy Jones, Sis and Ric Obstrom, Patty and Pete Wall, Pem Drinker's widow, Pril, Mary and Yeates. Teasley and John Denison returned from Tokyo this past fall having attended with the whole family the wedding of their son, David, to Chika Okumura in a full Shinto ceremony. David works for an English/Japanese financial company, Veda-Harlow. "Coke" Accola and Marcy are now ensconced in their new home in Osprey, Fla., and visited with Ferdie Baruch. Their seasonal swing will be five months in Martha's Vineyard and seven in gatorland. Last Oct. they took the Alumni College trip to the U.S.S.R., finding it wonderful to visit but nothing more than that. Jim Gardner of Mantoloking, N.J. lunches once a month with Curt Colby at the local P.A.A. meeting in Monmouth Cty. Jim is heading up Annual Giving for that Jersey area through '91. Alan Miller seeks a fishing classmate who has ever hooked a 32-pound salmon in the dorsal fin on light tackle and lived to tell the tale. McCaffrey and Morgan can you answer that? A lovely winter to you all.

45

WARREN W. EGINTON
U.S. Courthouse, 915 Lafayette Blvd.
Bridgeport, CT 06604

Once again it is a pleasure to announce that the Charles Patterson Shelly Scholarship has been awarded to Jefferson B. Davis '93 and Benita L. Thompson '94; the R. Peyton Woodson III Scholarship has been awarded to Kern Rim '93; the Lawrence H. Sanford Jr. Scholarship has been awarded to Bernard V. Miller '93; the Baird Scholarship has been awarded to Harry A. Mittleman '91 and to Katherine B. Geiersbach '93; and the Peter Cooper Stevenson Student Aid Fund Award has been made to John C. Ricketts '93 and Jeremias C. Garcia '94. Congratulations to all these fine undergraduates, whose careers will continually pay tribute to our generous and thoughtful classmates.

Val Silvester and Herb Hobler '44 are married to industrious ladies, respectively, Jeanne Silvester and Randy Hobler, who have just published PRINCETON—ON THE STREETS WHERE WE LIVE, which deals with the local thoroughfares surrounding the University. Presumably this is available from the Princeton Univ. Store and probably from your favorite book shop.

A new publication definitely available from the Princeton Univ. Store and your favorite book shop is Don Young's latest book, THE LION'S SHARE, published by Avranches Press. Don writes from personal experience of the 506th Infantry during the Battle of the Bulge. Don was taken prisoner and experienced many of the incidents he describes in his fictionalized account of that division, particularly of Wes "Stoney" Carter, a G.I. reminiscent of Catch 22. The book follows Carter's trials and tribulations from battle experiences through capture and imprisonment. This book is worth reading, not only for those who participated in WWII, but for all those who enjoy a good war adventure novel.

We have a memorial in this issue.

46

ROBERT CAMPBELL JR.
Investors Security Services
636 Morris Tpk., Short Hills, NJ 07078

Bill Hummer was recently ranked number one among fifty economic forecasters across the nation. According to the WALL STREET JOURNAL, Bill, chairman of the LaSalle Natl. Bank, has the highest forecasting accuracy recorded in the ten-year history of Columbia Univ.'s Center for International Business Cycle Research. Bill says we are now in a mild recession which he expects to be over by next spring. This will be followed by slow growth, a minor 0.8% next year, adjusted for inflation. We sincerely hope Bill's record for accuracy continues unabated.

With high tribute to the independent of spirit, we hear Jim Freeman is in his third year of undergraduate classic Greek at U.N.C. He welcomed his sixth grandchild into the world last summer, and is entered in the Marine Corp Marathon—on two artificial hips.

Dwight Schoeffler reports he saw Betty and Bill Ulsh at Long Boat Key, Fla., recently. Bill and Dwight were roommates, and, says Dwight, "It was great to see Bill after some decades." John Snyder announces he and his wife own a real estate company in northeast Tenn. "We're presently torn between the fun of working and the fun of retirement." John Wuberspoon writes in shorthand, "Still working, retired from Rockwell Intl., working for Westinghouse Hanford Co., keeping busy." Grant Goodman, retired from Univ. of Kansas in 1989, was a visiting professor at Fukuoko Univ. (Japan) and is now at the Intl. Research Center for Japanese Studies in Kyoto. Doctor Bill Wagner of Basking Ridge, N.J., says he has joined "the long list of disappointed alumni now receiving solicitations from other colleges." His oldest son just made dean's list at Lehigh.

47

ASA BUSHNELL
Box 7034
Tucson, AZ 85725; 602-741-4715

When Baltimore insurance company manager Rudy Hendrickson (left) and N.J. pharmaceutical research administrator Val Wagner got together at the San Francisco Megablast for this youth-exuding photo, they no doubt vowed to meet again Feb. 16 in Princeton. That will be Alumni Day, complete with Jadwin luncheon, the Service of Remem- brance, and a '47 cocktail party hosted by Prexy George Eggers.

If you enjoyed the Class birthday card concocted by Paul Rodda for 1990, you'll double your pleasure upon receipt of his 1991 effort, which the rural Penn. architect sketched before wife, Jean, retired from her local utility post as cartographer, with plans to whisk Paul off to Alaska. If you'd like to market your "juicy memoirs," you should contact N.Y. publisher Mac Talley, who's apparently headed in that different direction following the success of his two fall blockbusters, THE MIDAS TOUCH, by Anthony Simpson, "England's pre-eminent journalist," and THE MONEY WARS, by Roy C. Smith, "the best new financial writer since Martin Mayer."

Part-time money management consultant Hal Oates of Chicago was one of eight Princetonians in the throng of 300 partygoers that converged on the American Club in Kohler, Wisc., last July as the Sheboygan Clinic saluted the retirement of its noted veep, surgeon Dick Windsor. The plush club would be "a great place to hold a mini-reunion," quipped Hal, realizing full well Dick has chosen that very site for the first half of our Kohler-Chicago Muster next Sept. Perhaps retired banker Jim Pickard, now an Oct.-April resident of Green Valley, south of Tucson, will journey over to Wisconsin from his old home base in Bloomington, Minn.

48

DAVID K. REEVES
106 Snowden Ln.
Princeton, NJ 08540; 609-924-3340

His paintings have been/ are exhibited in the Metropolitan Museum, AM Adlar, Musee des Arts Decoratifs (Lausanne), the Smithsonian, and dozens of other museums and galleries from Tokyo to Deer Island and Newport. He has written any number of books, including the definitive work on Norman Rockwell. He has been involved with boards all over the world from Amsterdam to Shelbourne, among them the McDowell Colony, Parsons, Lawrenceville School. He has headed up Steuben Glass and the Brooklyn Museum as well as the Corning Museum of Glass. Under the generic title "How to Paint a Picture," Tom Buechner will tell us about his art and experiences at our Princeton Club of N.Y. mid-winter dinner on Feb. 19. Come along sixish with dinner at 7 P.M. Tom has promised to bring slides and to respond to any art-related concerns (e.g., N.E.A., the Jesse Helms/Robert Mapplethorpe award, etc.). The chance to enjoy an evening with the sage of Corning is not to be missed.

Mike Keeley has a new book on Yannis Ritsos coming from the Princeton Univ. Press. And his SALONIKA BAY MURDER has been optioned for a film or T.V. series.

Miles Charest hates being retired but loves living in Baltimore, "that most gracious of cities."

Richard Lewis has been traveling to Charlottesville, Va., each summer as grader of the various levels of chartered financial analyst examinations. He reports Dick Larson, an ex-C.F.A., very busy in the writing of short stories.

49

ALVIN R. KRACHT
Limerick Lane Poetryworks®, 5 Birch Ln.
Chappaqua, NY 10514; 914-238-0352

Hope your holidays were happy ones! Well, we've made it to 1991—now it's only 3060 days to our 50th. Save that date! Our belated congratulations to Dan Toll, who was elected by the alumni body to serve a four year term on the University's board of trustees. Dan, chairman of Corona Corp., joined the board at its Oct. meeting—he's a director of a number of corporations and civic organizations, and lives in Kenilworth, Ill.

The Nov. 12 issue of New York magazine ran a half page photo/feature on Chape's now-famous daughter, Mary-Chapin Carpenter, under the headline "Just A Good Ol' Ivy League Girl." Quoting the article: "When she straps on a guitar, she doesn't need to apologize for being from Princeton, N.J., instead of Butcher Hollow. She combines a voice that's like a warm fire burning in a wintry hillside cabin with songs she writes that tug at '90s heart-strings." After her recent bravura performance at the Country Music Assn. Awards, Minnie Pearl and Tennessee Ernie Ford came up to Mary-Chapin to say, "Honey, ya done good."

Dr. Harvey Rothberg writes: "Nancy and I enjoyed a marvelous vacation and art tour of Holland and Belgium this past Aug. We also attended an intl. cancer conference in Brussels, where I presented a paper on "Ethical Aspects of Oncologic Practice." And from Dr. Ward Griffen Jr. we hear: "Still executive director/secretary-treasurer of the American Board of Surgery, the specialty board responsible for certifying all general surgeons in the U.S. My wife, Pudge, and I are awaiting the arrival of grandchild number ten. If we had known they are so much fun, we would have had them first!"

It's retirement season! Howard Jones has retired from the presidency of Memorial Hospital in Johnstown, Penn., to live in the Dominican Republic. Dave Hughes says he's "retiring from the vice chairmanship of Hallmark Cards after 32 years." And Fred Hoyt tells us: "I retired from teaching at Sacramento City College in June 1990. Am presently recuperating from a minor operation on my foot. I hope to make it to Reunions in the future."

50

PETE BUCHANAN
151 West St.
Beverly Farms, MA 01915; 508-922-1650

Class children on campus have dwindled to eight, with none in the freshman class. They are Peter de Roett's Louisa '91, Bill Dippel's Tom '93, Peter Dodd's Daniel '93, Norm Moore's Patrick '92, Fred Schluter's Christine '92, Hugh Scott's Zander '92, and Phil Zabriskie's Alexandra '93. Incidentally, Peter Dodd became our last classmate to turn 60 just after the 40th in June. Our oldest members, born in 1923, are about to start celebrating no. 68.

Shortly it will be the grandchildren matriculating. Jack McKenna, who sold his printing company in 1988 and is a full-time consultant, now numbers 11 grandchildren, while Robin Little has ten. He is retired from Boeing, but teaching aerodynamics, dynamics, and management at Central Washington Univ. Newcomers to the grandparental ranks are Charlie Rose and Bill Van Cleve, each with granddaughters. The four parents are all class of '80 or '81—Christine and James Parham and Peter and Andrea Van Cleve.

Updating the Class architects, Harley Funk retired after 36 years of practice in Wilmington, Del. He and Pete have been married 45 years (one of two married freshmen to enter in 1946) and are looking forward to traveling and visiting their three children and five grandchildren. Chas King enjoys the practice more than ever after 32 years with the help of young talented associates. He and Louine feel fortunate to have their six grandchildren nearby. Bill Abrens, winner of the long distance award at the Scottsdale Mini, still has his shingle and welcome mat out for classmates in Rome.

John Colwell and Jane enjoyed their first real vacation in 11 years with a three-week rental on Nantucket. His involvement with the American Diabetes Assn., including the presidency, has occupied every spare moment for many years.

Remember to communicate your interest to Bob Schelling if you want to stay on the mailing list for the mid-May Montreal mini. If you were named in the Nov. mailing or subsequently sent an indication of interest, you'll hear all the latest details. We have memorials in this issue.

51

RICHARD K. PAYNTER
49 Wilson Rd.
Princeton, NJ 08540; 609-921-6720

Fifty-One's Fortieth Life Begins at the 40th June 6-9

Alumni Day on Sat., Feb. 16, comes first, however. This event, which the Class has emphasized for years, is well worth coming to: morning lectures, Class lunch at Jadwin Gym, and the moving and memorable Service of Remembrance at the Chapel, honoring all alumni who died last year. We will remember: Jim Anderegg, Tom Anderson, Dick Ferris, Clark Myers, Bruce Nichols, and John Preston.

After the service, a Class cocktail and dinner gathering will be held in the Joseph Henry Room in Jadwin Hall (not Gym) between Palmer Stadium and Washington Road.

As you know from committee mailings, plans for our 40th are advancing. Latest batch (as of Dec. 8): Aschmeyer, Brabam, Busbing, Fawcett, Harrington, Howell, Charlie Huber, Isley, Laitmer, Murphy, Henry Myers, Park, Russell, Schwartz, Rube Shaw, Starrett, Strauss, Supplee, Warren, Webster, Weeden, Weiland, and Zawadsky. Class children on campus are: Wen Fong's Serena '93, Howland Fowler's Amy '91, Don Hahn's Tobin '94, Jerry McHugh's Chris '91, Hal Urschel's Susanna '93, Ben Webster's Sam '92, and Joe Zawadsky's Jeff '93.

Andy Leb has attained nirvana. After 51 years of trying, he made a hole-in-one.

In Nov. Bruce Kennedy returned to the Soviet Union as part of a program to help the Russian alcoholism recovery effort.

Doris and Ellery Gay were eager participants in our mini-reunion in St. Louis last Apr. He has written that his lovely lady died Oct. 31.

We have memorials in this issue.

52

DON OSBANDON
4630 30th St., N.W.
Washington, DC 20008

Another big honor for George Garrett, who was awarded the third annual Pen/Malamud prize for short story writing in Dec. The two previous winners were John Updike and Saul Bellow. George has now written six novels, seven volumes of short stories, seven volumes of poetry, two plays and two screenplays. He was called "a brilliant, resourceful, magical writer of prose fiction" at the ceremony.

Becky and Darby Houston were featured in YANKEE magazine's Dec. issue posing with one of the beautiful natural Christmas wreaths sold by mail throughout the country and overseas by Darby's M. A. Clark Co. of Ellsworth, Me. About 5,000 individually-tied wreaths, "the freshest and most perfect money can buy," are shipped each year, the proud proprietor was quoted as saying. But "we never want to become the L. L. Bean of Maine wreath making."

Hal Saunders recently testified before Congress and was interviewed widely about the Persian Gulf situation. Hal is at Brookings Institution and finishing a book titled WHEN WALLS COME DOWN: THE POLITICS OF INTERNATIONAL RELATIONS. His daughter, Cathy, is a third-year Ph.D. candidate in the Princeton English dept.

Al Gilgen is in his 18th year as head of the Dept.

of Psychology at Univ. of Northern Iowa in Cedar Falls. He writes he recently turned 60 and found this rather difficult to accept. A query from Al: How have others dealt with this landmark experience?

In the next mail came word from Cliff Barr that he celebrated his 60th at the Princeton Club of N.Y. with Bruce Coe, Irv Cohen, Art Collins, George Dean, and Bill Murdoch helping him over that hump. Also helping was the arrival of Cliff's first grandchild, Nicholas Barr, earlier last fall.

I regret to report that Bill Service died of cancer in North Carolina Nov. 24.

53

PENCE J. LONERGAN
Box 18
Blawenburg, NJ 08504

As of this writing, Dave Brown has not been recalled to active duty in the Gulf. On the other hand, he is contributing to our efforts to maintain energy self-sufficiency. Pictured here, Dave is demonstrating a calibrated door blower, a key piece of equipment used by Yardley, Penn.-based Princeton Energy Partners, of which he is founder and president. Through the use of sophisticated devices such as the door blower and infrared lenses, P.E.P. locates the sources of energy loss in residences which in many cases amounts to 15 to 40 percent. According to Dave, the service is in great demand both for new housing and retrofitting of existing homes.

Class Dinner Alumni Day, February 16

Alex Brody, still toiling in advertising, is currently president of Ogilvy & Mather Worldwide and C.E.O. of intl. operations.

Still in Princeton, Bill Miller was re-elected to the Board of Trustees of Scripture, U.S.A. This organization is one of over 100 international movements ministering to children and publishes Bible meditation guides for people of all churches.

As if to underscore that we are not over the education hump, Dean Pringle notes that daughters Pam and Carol are at the Univ. of Louisville, Jody at M.I.T. grad school, and wife, Mary, in midwifery school. Dean is in charge of disbursements.

More grandparenting: Harry Kohn writes from North Wales, Penn. that he is catching up, as a result of being presented with a grandchild courtesy of daughter Beth. The Kohns also reported on a dinner in Sept. at their house with Peter Paul and Dave West and spouses, honoring the Wests' 40 years of service to Germantown Friends Academy.

54

DICK STAVINS
1 Valley Sq., Ste. 101
Blue Bell, PA 19222

Twenty years, 956 programs with 695 guests is both "enduring AND endearing," even if you start out looking like a rock star and wind up looking like George Washington. Lou Rukeyser lit twenty candles for "Wall Street Week" at Tavern on the Green (green for money... tavern because the stock market will drive you to drink) for an assemblage of the show's faithful. His favorite all-time guest was Meryle S. Rukeyser, who responded to Lou's question about American competitiveness (at age 90) with a classic remark: "Return to excellence." Post that on your refrigerator!

Kids on Kampus: Trevor Corson '93, Edward Eglin '92, Jacob Elkins '92, Julian Fischer '92, Cameron Mackey '91, Chris Parker '93, Virginia Ransom '93, Peter Reese '92, Stacy Rukeyser '91, Phil Troubridge '91, Jennifer Greene '94 and Prewitt Turner '94. Notice only two members of the Class of

'94. Is this it? Is this all there is? Going... going... gone.

Phil Jordan's sons are moving right along. Young Phil '89 is in graduate school at Harvard and John is a freshman at Colby. Phil has been president of Kenyon College for 16 years... a remarkable accomplishment for an industry that gives tenure to its faculty and major headaches and uncertainty to its senior administrators. Phil must be following Howie Swearer's three-point formula for success, i.e. winning football for the alumni, improved parking for the faculty, and sex for the undergraduates. We have memorials in this issue.

55

MIKE ROBBINS
40 E. 88th St.
New York, NY 10128; 212-722-7447

Here are the proprietors of Leon and Paul's bar supplies discussing the soft retail market and weighing plans for expanding their Dod Hall emporium.

Annual Class Dinner in Princeton Sat., February 16

Frank Creus has enhanced the Galveston law firm of Greer, Herz, and Adams with his admission.

Lew Barker retired from the Red Cross this summer and is now a full-time student at Johns Hopkins School of Public Health getting ready for his next career. "Lots of homework and late-night projects," writes Lew, "much tougher than working and more fun too!"

John Sibley is now with T. Anthony, Ltd., in N.Y., a leading purveyor of luggage, leather goods, and gifts.

Welcome to the '55 family to Eric Olson Snow, second grandson of Sandy and Bob.

Paul Wytbes has assumed the post of chairman of the board of trustees of Menlo School and College in Atherton, Calif. With new responsibilities for about 1,000 students, Paul is looking for a donor to "substantially increase our endowment."

Jerry Lambert recently chaired a national conference on "Gas Supplies for Independent Power Projects" in Washington. The conference addressed the supply problem, project financing conditions, transportation, long-term contracts, reserve acquisition, and drilling programs. Jerry just returned from New Zealand where he spoke at the Electricity Supply Assn. meeting.

56

DAVID M. JORDAN
410 Rodman Ave.
Jenkintown, PA 19046

Another sign of aging (as if we needed one): Princeton's Class of 1994 boasts only one child of the Class of 1956, Al Berlink's daughter, Marika Meimarakis Berlink. What has become of the hordes of '56 children of yesteryear, traipsing through our ivied halls? One of our Class offspring, Arnie Kroll's daughter Debbie, whose picture we ran last year, won the women's barefoot water skiing championship at the national tournament at DuQuoin, Ill. Tiger, tiger, tiger, etc.

Dick George reports having recently opened the first new commercial bank in the city of Pittsburgh in 15 years. Dick is in charge of marketing services for the new institution, which will serve individuals and small businesses in western Penn., eastern Ohio, and West Va.

Nancy and John Garth attended the wedding of their son Lee '87 to Catherine Walker on Dec. 29 in New Zealand. Andy DeMar's son Andrew Jr., is now chief resident in vascular surgery at U.C.L.A. medical center.

Old Nass has checked in again. By now Old Nass has become well known to all '56ers and to Joe Sugar '54, from whom he received a citation for mob control. We cannot divulge the identity of this arcane character, but it is rumored that he will participate in the Baseball Dunking Contest at Reunion HQ at Holder Hall on June 5. Old Nass also reports that approximately 150 Great Classmates have signed up and in, which answers the question as to how many angels can dance on the head of a pin.

We have memorials in this issue.

57

JACK SCHULSON
Box 6177, Yorkville Station
New York, NY 10128; 212-427-3575 (H)

If that end-of-year bonus is still burning a hole in your pocket, I can think of nothing more tempting than our late-winter Mini Reunion in Taos, the brainchild of Pete Adams as he lay on Eldon Mayer's Anguilla beach last winter. Lang Stevenson is the project's East Coast rep (914-591-8682), and Pete will coordinate the skiing/dining/living arrangements from his base in the Southwest (home, 505-758-8110; office, 1-800-336-4826).

Andrew Flaxman, director of Educate Yourself for Tomorrow, a seminar program in self-study and in the humanities, boasts a couple of endorsements you might recognize. Gregory Farrell, V.P. of Outward Bound, calls Andy's course "a kind of intellectual Outward Bound course, a way of using the great thinkers and artists to stretch the mind and spirit." Frederick H. Borsch, former dean of the University Chapel, sees it as "an excellent way for individuals and small groups to confront and deepen their understanding regarding many of the most important of human issues." Seminars are held under the auspices of Manhattan's 92nd Street Y and the Wainwright House, Rye, N.Y., and are given periodically at the Princeton Club of New York. For details, write Andy at 411 West End Ave. (14C), N.Y., NY 10024.

Norman R. Augustine, chairman/C.E.O. of Martin Marietta, heads a 12-member advisory committee on the future of the U.S. space program. If it's any guide as to how NASA might be reorganized, Norm has let it be known that among firms he admires most are Procter & Gamble and Delta Air Lines.

58

RALPH L. DeGROFF
7 Gracie Sq.
New York, NY 10028

Peter Leslie is viewing the nation's budget battle in microcosm as chairman of the Cape Elizabeth School Board. He is constantly trying to resolve the dilemma of taxes versus services.

Jack Perkins with wife, Joie, and daughter Mary (3), all dressed as witches, attended "A Tigertoned Halloween" party sponsored by the Princeton Alumni of Alabama and George Lynn '68.

Jim Farrin competed with son Jon (an 11th-grader at Exeter) in the Natl. Father and Son Grass and Clay Tennis Tournament. While they lost in the first round this year, Jim and his son intend to be a "force in the future."

Jack Cannell, Jim Bonthron, Dan Gotbie, Ted Parsons, and Scott Foster attended the 100th anniversary celebration of Tiger Inn on the weekend of the Harvard game. One attendee commented that the celebration was far more enjoyable than the football game.

Mike Love, while on adventure to Nepal last spring, wandered into downtown Katmandu and, to his great surprise, discovered a restaurant with a familiar shield portrayed in the window and a sign reading, "The Princeton Club of Katmandu meets here." Mike reports an excellent meal and the first '58er to sign the Princeton log book maintained by the restaurant.

Bob Nilson recently accepted a position as executive V.P., general manager of Roymal, Inc. in Newport, N.H. Roymal are international specialists in clear waterbase overprint coatings for paper converters and for the aluminum and film industries.

Your Class secretary hopes you all had a pleasant holiday season and wishes you good health and good fortune in 1991!

59 JAY M. SMOEN
11321 Rolling House Rd.
Rockville, MD 20852

Dave Appleton, with Saudi Aramco again, has been spending some time in Saudi Arabia lately. Dave notes that there is a lot of tension in the area, but that life goes on. He reports that Saudi Aramco is doing its best to pump oil at a maximum rate.

TIGER CUBS: Dave Dana's son Steve '94 led Princeton's varsity golf team to a record-breaking win at the Georgetown Hoya Invitational Tournament last Sept. Steve took top individual honors and was named by WPRB as Princeton's "Athlete of the Week." Reede Ryan's daughter Rebecca '94 tells dad that she loves her classmates, loves her professors, but does not love the long reading assignments.

Calling the prospect for student excellence "stunning and wholly unprecedented," U.Va. Law School's Dean of Admissions Al Turnbull last year reviewed a record 5,323 applications for admission to the law school's 380 spaces. Now in his 25th year at U.Va., Al has survived the stress of his job in part by "stumbling up and down rocky streams a lot."

Kite Singleton called our attention to the Apr. 1990 edition of PROGRESSIVE ARCHITECTURE. The cover story, replete with stunning photographs, undertakes a critical—and highly favorable—review of the Hillier Group's winning design for a 100,000-sq.-ft. addition to Arizona State's architecture school. On another project considerably closer to home, Bob reports completion of his new house on the Delaware River in New Hope, Penn., 2½ years in the making. Bob has been designated "Architect of the Year" by the N.J. Masonry Assn.; Bob's house has been designated as the official site of our 1991 Reunion dinner.

Though still behind in the "most grandchildren" race (see Duff, Lemp, PAW, Nov. 21, 1990), Judy and Dave Murtagh are closing the gap. They welcomed grandson number two (Ryan) last June, and grandson no. 3 (Joshua) in Sept. Dave was quick to point out that a different daughter was involved in each event.

Party reminder: Andy Steffan's, Jan. 25, 6 to 8 P.M. R.S.V.P. 212-698-6032.

60 MASON LOWANCE
100 Lincoln Ave.
Amherst, MA 01002

By now, most classmates will have read Geoffrey Wolff's THE FINAL CLUB, (Alfred Knopf; $19.95) which has been reviewed in the N.Y. TIMES, NEWSWEEK, and TIME. It is, of course, about bicker; not just any bicker, but our bicker back in 1958. Christopher Lehmann-Haupt snarls, "Is Geoffrey Wolff kidding? Does he really expect his readers in this age of falling barriers to take seriously a novel about rejection by an eating club? Well, yes, he

Project 68 Aids Students

INSPIRED BY THE SUCCESS of the Class of 1955's Project 55, the Class of 1968 has launched Project 68, a program to find summer jobs for undergraduates, under the leadership of R. William (Bill) Potter '68.

A partner in the Princeton law firm of Haveson, Otis and Potter, Bill Potter conceived the idea while leading a preceptorial at the university in the spring of 1989. Some of Potter's students in Politics 304, "Law and Society," approached him in search of summer jobs in the legal profession. While calling some of his classmates to assist his students, he realized that this network could become a formal class project. "I thought [our summer jobs program] was something that we could have benefited from when we were Princeton students," Potter says. "It always seemed unfair to me that students had to rely on their own personal contacts for work experience. Some of my classmates just didn't have the resources or the contacts that others had."

According to Potter's plan, '68ers can participate in the program in a variety of ways. Primarily, classmates can make internships available either personally or through their companies. Classmates also can assist in locating accommodations for the summer interns. Classmates with neither internship nor housing opportunities can contribute funds to the nonprofit Project 68 Foundation. These funds are used to defray the costs of the internships, either to the companies or the undergraduates (especially important because undergraduates who receive financial aid are required to earn a certain amount of money each summer). The program currently focuses on business and law opportunities, but Potter hopes to branch out to other fields, especially joint scientific research between '68ers and undergraduates. Positions available include work in marketing, law, financial services, construction, and even as a tour guide at the F. Scott and Zelda Fitzgerald Museum, in Montgomery, Alabama.

Bill Potter '68

PHOTO COURTESY OF PRINCETON PACKET

Potter, a "dyed-in-the-wool Westerner," was born in Oil City, Oklahoma, and grew up in Southern California. No stranger to community service projects, he devoted much of his time while at Princeton to Princeton-in-Harlem and the Princeton Cooperative School Program. Potter spent the summer after he graduated teaching on a Navajo reservation. Planning to become a teacher, he went to New York City to work in either Harlem or Bedford-Stuyvesant. The Board of Education rejected Potter's application, citing his lack of courses in education; this rejection convinced him of the "tyrannical institution" of the public school system.

After stints as a drug-addiction treatment counselor, a New York City taxi driver, a Texas ranch hand, and a would-be writer of the "Great American novel," Potter enrolled at Rutgers Law School. He was hooked: "I loved the Socratic method of teaching, something we didn't get at Princeton." Potter then practiced environmental and energy law with the Public Advocate of New Jersey, the only state-supported public-interest law firm (founded by former N.J. Governor Brendan Byrne '49). Potter eventually returned to Nassau Street, representing companies that produce alternative energy sources, in competition with public utilities. In his spare time, he writes political columns for the Trenton Times and runs triathlons. Potter still finds time to lead precepts in law and congressional politics, and brings his experience and his love of the Socratic method into the classroom with him.

Last year was, in effect, a "dry run" for Project 68, because responses to the first mailings were not ready until April. But with almost forty classmates participating, and even more donating funds, Potter has high hopes for the program's future. In his view, Project 68 will be "a process of mutual discovery" for his classmates and undergraduates, one in which "everybody benefits, especially Princeton."

does. His narrator explains, "We believe in this. This matters." There are, of course, echoes of Fitzgerald: "Perhaps the Princeton that Nathaniel attends is his dream of F. Scott Fitzgerald's dream." And one critic recommended that a scholarship to Michigan State be awarded the author! But the Times notes that, as in THE DUKE OF DECEPTION and BAD DEBTS, Geoff Wolff has turned autobiographical pain into powerful prose so that "the novel's music charms the reader. And finally, it shows us both sides of paradise, the beautiful and the damned."

Our honorary classmate, Prof. Charles Gillispie writes that Dan Sachs's daughter, Alexandra, was married Sept. 22. Gillispie attended the wedding and reception at the Larchmont Yacht Club. Alexandra (Harvard '88) was married to Brook W. Ablon (Amherst '89). She and Brook are now living in Boston.

Here are three who made it all possible during the past five years: Peter Williamson, Parker Harrell, and Quemby Williamson, who designed our new reunion costumes.

We have a memorial in this issue.

61

GEORGE BRAKELEY III
98 Winfield Ln.
New Canaan, CT 06840

1961 THIRTIETH 1991

"Have been making numerous trips back to Old Nassau lately, helping the University with its energy problems—a double pleasure, since it means more visits with son Chris '92," writes Rich Nelson.

Besides Chris, we have no fewer than 36 offspring on campus this year, including those of Jack Anderson, Jack Barsbay, Ralph Bennett, Steve Berger, Fred Bishop, John Bjorkholm, Peter Boer, Larry Brennan, Ketib Brodie, Walt Conrad, John Cooper, Steve Csejley, Vic Falkenheim, Dave Fisber, Dave Forney, Carl Gustafson, Rob Harrison, Tom Haskell, Jon Hlafter, John Hopper, Mike Iseman (two of them—OUCH!), George Landow, Frank Midgley, Tim Mygatt, Gerry Norton, John Pasalis, Tom Pulling, Spence Reynolds, Ed Rhea, Steve Schragger, Joe Segura, Jack Siegel, Huston Simmons, Jim Todd, and Felix Wong.

The DeNunzio Pool was christened in June, figuratively by a ceremony and literally by Art Smith, who swam in the "meet" on that occasion. "Wide lanes, deep water—a world-class facility," says Art. "Wish we'd had it," echo George Brakeley, John Greist, Jim Beattie, Gay Smith, Steve Ely, Frank Richardson, Hilton Jervey, and Bob Greenwood (our varsity swimmers and divers). A bit farther north in N.J., the M. Chrisina Geis Art Gallery exhibited the works of Ken McIndoe Nov. 1–28. Ken is "noted for his cityscapes" and is a member of the Street Painters, a group of artists who "record life as it is today." Ken's work has appeared in one-person and group exhibitions throughout the region.

We have a memorial in this issue.

62

ERIC W. JOHNSON
2221 Craig Ct.
Vienna, VA 22182; 703-280-9080

May each of you have a happy New Year and may 1991 not go by as fast as 1990 did!

Let us begin this New Year with a clean slate by correcting a number of regrettable omissions inadvertently made in my Dec. 5 column, reporting on sons and daughters of '62 currently on campus. Each year, as do other class secretaries whose classmates have children at Princeton, I compose a column based on an official list provided me by the University. This year I received an incomplete list which omitted nine members of the new Class of '94 and which I should have sensed was wrong but didn't. Here, belatedly but not forgotten, are the nine lost fathers and their progeny: Dick Dallow (Katherine), Linwood Davis (Linwood), John Hilschman (Johann), Jay Kaufman (Wendy), Dave Lee (Joshua), Bob Lukens (Alice), Jens Tellefsen (Jens), Martin Weber (Neil) and Buel White (Allison). I also failed to list Daniel Rogers (deceased) whose son Keith is in the Class of '92. Linwood is our first classmate, I believe, to have three children attend Princeton (Hannah '87, Jane '88, and now Linwood '94).

The statistics I include each year that led off the Dec. 5 column now read: Of the 46 sons and daughters on campus (one less than last year), twelve are '94, twelve are '93, twelve are '92, and ten '91. There are 23 daughters (up from 21) and 23 sons (down from 26) on campus, for a revised total of ninety-eight Class sons and daughters who have been to or are at Princeton. Also, contrary to what was reported Dec. 5, Class sons and Class daughters now appear to be on campus in equal number.

My apologies for the errors and omissions. Should any inaccuracies or omissions remain, please let me know so that I can correct my records, notify the University, and report in the column.

63

SILDEEN S. EDWARDS
Elgin Academy, 350 Park St.
Elgin, IL 60120

Every once in a while a piece of news comes in with a special ring of significance. Such is this report from Jay Ripps: "In March, I left my job at Aetna Life and Casualty after 26 years as an actuary and senior executive. Spent eight weeks in intensive training in Connecticut's Alternate Route to Teaching Certification and am now teaching seventh grade math at a public school in Hartford. Teaching is extraordinarily difficult—intellectually, physically, and psychologically; but it is supremely important work and well worth the effort." The teaching profession needs more such recruitments.

From College Park, Md., comes word that Steve Hurt has moved from Notre Dame to become dean of the Architecture School at Univ. of Maryland. And from even further south comes word that Allan McClain has just been elected to a two-year term as mayor of Martinsville, Va. Allan is president of Southwestern Virginia Energy Industries there.

And in another change, Robin Freer, an expert in federal regulatory practice, has left his partnership at Patterson, Belknap, Webb & Tyler and formed a new Washington law firm of Freer & Alagia, where he will be both president and C.E.O. Ted Anderson is still portfolio strategist at the Ford Foundation in N.Y.C. Rick Skillman is regional V.P. for the Health-west Foundation in Chatsworth, Calif.

From Binghamton, N.Y., Dave Gouldin reports that Jane and Steve Kaplan's son Laurence, a Princeton senior, recently spent a one-week internship in Dave's law office, which turned out to be a godsend because Dave was preparing a case relating to computer viruses, a subject on which young Kaplan proved to be an expert. George Randolph is still dentisting in Solana Beach, Calif. And Cdr. Peter Strow is circuit judge for the Navy's Transatlantic Judicial Circuit.

It is with the deepest sadness that I report the death of Clark Worthington on Dec. 1 in Raleigh, N.C., where he was academic dean at Ravenscroft School. A memorial will follow.

64

JOTHAM JOHNSON
Box 12
Blawenburg, NJ 08504

Bill Leigh, who has built over 1,000 estate homes in the Houston suburbs since 1974, was honored recently by the Texas Association of Realtors as the best custom-home builder in Texas for 1988–89. Bill reported also that he's attending law school at the South Texas College of Law in Houston for fun, and that his grandson, Bobby Austin Reade, born to daughter Sheri on Mar. 27, 1986, may make him the 1964 grandfather with the oldest grandchild. Any challengers out there?

Bill Mears is on the go again, having left Ernst & Young right after Labor Day to join Brown Brothers Harriman as senior V.P. doing estate planning, tax work, and administration. After many years, Bill finally earned his M.S. in accounting from Pace School of Business, making him one of the few to receive a degree in accounting seven full years after becoming a CPA!

Also on the go is John Lewis, who wrote that he and his family had moved back to Baltimore from St. Croix in the wake of Hurricane Hugo which wiped them out. John is now assistant commissioner for preventive medicine and epidemiology for the Baltimore City Health Dept.

No sooner had we published the names of 1964 offspring in the Class of 1994 when we got word that the Alumni Council missed a few. Sure enough, Steve Goldman wrote that son Peter is a freshman, as did George Minich whose daughter Megan is in '94. They missed Ashley Maddox and Philip Warren as well. Apologies to those who felt temporarily disassociated and congrats to all.

No news in years from RoRo Rogers, but at least we have word that his law firm, Stack & Rogers, has moved to One Buckhead Plaza, Ste. 920, 3060 Peachtree Rd. N.W., Atlanta, GA 30305.

Anyone know the whereabouts of Carl Newman, Demetrios Pandoulas, Peter Porietis, Jon Sanders, or Charlie Scribner? Please drop the secretary a note if you do.

ALUMNI DAY is Feb. 16 and the New Orleans mini-reunion is Apr. 11–14. Come one, come all!

65

J. MICHAEL PAREN
Winthrop, Stimson, Putnam & Roberts
1 Battery Park Plaza, New York, NY 10004

Perched majestically atop Mt. Princeton in the Rockies, which we all know is easily one foot taller than Mt. Yale (we're at 14,197) Doug Brady demonstrates one more use for the Reunions costume Charles Gibson showed off for the nation on "Good Morning, America" last June. Bill Watson looms at right. Doug says he's done about a quarter of the 14,000-foot peaks in the Colorado area, and has no plans to complete them all.

Bill Watson seconds that emotion with his own report of the Rocky Mountain Princeton Club Yale game party, where the selfsame garb adorned the chiseled physiques of John Farnbach, Lance Forstot, Joel Kaufman, Riddick Semple, Harley Shaver, and Bill. Having been in Southern Conn. that day in the driving rain, I believe they got the better of it at a distance.

Rick Ober, whose financial and organizational efforts helped make our Reunion so special, notes for the record that the fees paid by returning members provided funds that helped bring back 20 additional classmates who otherwise could not have attended.

Just to demonstrate that there's life in these old dogs yet, we have an outburst of marriages. In Sept., Charley Norris was wed to Diane Elizabeth Charyk, a Cambridge architect. Charley is currently a project manager for the architect/engineering firm of TAMS Consultants across the river in Boston.

66 JEFFREY N. McCOLLUM, A.T.&T. Products
5 Wood Hollow Rd., Rm. 1J19
Parsippany, NJ 07054

The Dec. 5 PAW included the names and fathers of 21 sons and daughters of '66 who are members of the Princeton classes of '91, '92, and '93. To that list, we proudly add the names of members of the Class of 1994 and their fathers: Peter F. Blosier (Dieter Blosier), Christopher Alexander Gogolak (Charlie Gogolak), Leigh C. Hall (William Hall), Carroll L. Magill (Dan Magill), Reuwai H. Mount (Gary Mount), Jennifer E. Moyse (Bill Moyse), and Edward Joseph Steube (Ed Steube). The total of 29 includes 13 sons and 16 daughters of 1966.

IN THE NATION'S SERVICE: In June, President Bush nominated Lee Rawls to be asst. attorney general for the Office of Legislative Affairs. At the time of his nomination, Lee was managing partner of the law firm of Baker, Worthington, Crossley, Stansberry, and Woolf in Washington. Prior to that, Lee held a number of positions in and around the federal government. He served twice on the staff of Senator Pete Domenici, with other law firms in Washington, on the staff of the Senate Committee on Environment and Public Works, and directed a Senate subcommittee for Howard Baker in the early 1970s.

BACK TO THE FUTURE: Jamie Spencer heads the Princeton Schools Committee in St. Louis. In addition to orchestrating applications to Princeton, he has also become president of the Bach Society of St. Louis.

Jim Merritt reports that he has 250 biographies for the reunion book and can still take more. Send them to him c/o PAW. Call him at 609-258-4931 if you need a biographical form.

67 PETER J. TUNICH
6503 Masefield St.
Worthington, OH 43085

Doug Parker and wife, Mary, recently moved to the San Francisco Bay area to work at a small civil engineering and surveying firm. Bob Grant invited ex-roommates Doug, John Nash, and Roger Rudolph to his Menlo Park home for Sun. dinner and reunion.

Dick Erdman sends word that he is back in the U.S. after four years in Portugal. He is now in Washington as the State Dept.'s deputy director for Northern Europe. Ken Zuckerman is also back, reports Peggy Zuckerman. He and brother Bruce '69 recently returned from Leningrad, where they photographed an ancient Old Testament, making it more available for study. Ken is a technical photographer (by avocation), and Bruce is a professor of ancient near eastern languages at U.S.C. Back from the more modern near east, Dave Foster writes: "Last spring, before the current troubles began, I was lucky enough to travel to Jordan and Syria. We found residents of Damascus, a city of three million, to be friendly, congenial, warm, and hospitable to us as Americans. This feeling was in significant contrast to what we had anticipated, for we had believed what the U.S. government and press had said about Syrian "terrorists." I'm glad I had the opportunity to form my own opinions based on contact with the people of those countries."

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO: Nehru's daughter Indira becomes premier of India. U.S. plane loses H-bomb over Spain. Stefan Cardinal Wyszynski says Polish Church will not be vanquished. "The Sound of Silence" is the top song.

68 JOE KLIMAK
Hartford Hospital, 80 Seymour St.
Hartford, CT 06115; FAX 203-524-7057

As we move into the new year, let's look back at some of the achievements of our classmates last year. Charlie Rice has been helping banks and S.&L.s comply with the new community reinvestment act through his company's expert system product, Expert Express C.R.A. Advisor. AMERICAN BANKER singled out Charlie's software as the "fore-front product." Charlie has also been helping international relations. In cooperation with CREED, he organized the creation of 1,000 Russian-language copies of C. S. Lewis's MERE CHRISTIANITY for mailing by Episcopalians to individuals in Russia.

Jan Warner produced a new Broadway musical, PHILCO BLUES. He and his wife, Diane, also produced a new baby to join daughter Millie. Jan shuttles between Calif., Conn., and N.Y., composing music along the way.

First children were produced by Jim Elgin and wife, Kate, who welcomed son Sam, and by Tom Robinson and wife, Ann, who inaugurated parenthood with their first child, William.

Tim McFeeley returned to Princeton for the first time since graduating to address lesbian and gay alumni at reunions. Tim is the executive director of the Human Rights Campaign Fund, the largest gay and lesbian political organization in the U.S.

Bruce Wayne is still a litigator, father, husband, and aging athlete in San Diego, enjoying a newly built log cabin in the mountains. Bruce invites anyone wishing to get back to basics to visit.

69 PAUL GEORGE SITTEFIELD
1854 Keys Crescent
Cincinnati, OH 45206

Sensational feature in the Sun., Nov. 4, Boston GLOBE focusing on Doug Foy and the Conservation Law Foundation he heads. At least from the picture, the guy not only accomplishes a lot but also ages gracefully. The essence of Doug's important message is reflected in one of the lead quotes: "People waste a lot. They aren't as careful as they should be. If I could change nothing else, I would change how careful people are." Nice thought for a New Year.

PRINCETON PROGENY: On the campus this year are Brent Henry's Adam and Steve Neumann's Lori, seniors; Bill Hardy's Susan, a junior; Bob Durkee's Shandara, a sophomore; and Rob Livesey's stepdaughter, Jessica Olin, a freshman.

Nifty news, also from Princeton, is the appointment of Randy Hackas head of PRINCO, the arm of the University which oversees all investments. A key post and a talented fellow to fill it.

Congratulations to Bruce Jenett who recently married Nola Masterson (Marymount '69). In addition to a lovely lady, he gained "a great step-kid, another dog, a cat, and three more cars."

70 JAN KURIK
113 Laurel Rd.
Princeton, NJ 08540

EXTRA, EXTRA, READ ALL ABOUT IT! The Alumni Council Committee on Reunions has unanimously judged "the great Class of 1970 as this year's winner of the Clancy Award... given annually to the major reunion class that did the best job in planning, organizing, and executing its reunion." Con-

Princeton Clubs and Alumni Associations

PC OF SOUTHWEST FLA. (Naples): Sat., Jan. 26: Asst. Prof. of Politics Charles Kupchan will speak at the annual luncheon. Please call Ted Van Buren '42 for information at 813-394-3667.

PC OF SARASOTA & MANATEE COUNTIES: Sun., Jan. 27: Asst. Prof. of Politics Charles Kupchan will speak at the club's annual luncheon meeting. For information, please call Fernand Baruch '44 at 813-966-4325.

PAA OF THE FLORIDA SUNCOAST (Tampa): Mon., Jan. 28: Charles Kupchan, asst. prof. of politics, will speak at the annual dinner. For further information, please call Jim Perry '57 at 813-837-3473.

PAA OF SOUTH CAROLINA: Tues., Jan. 29: President Harold T. Shapiro '64 will speak at the annual dinner in Columbia. Wed., Jan. 30: President Shapiro will speak at luncheon in Hilton Head. For information on both events, please call Keith Babcock '73 at 803-771-8000.

PAA OF AUSTIN: Thurs., Jan. 31: Asst. Prof. of Geological and Geophysical Sciences Tullis Onstott will speak at a luncheon. For information, call Charles Aubrey '60 at 512-472-3768.

PAA OF SOUTH TEXAS: Fri., Feb. 1: Asst. Prof. of Geological and Geophysical Sciences Tullis Onstott will speak at a luncheon. For information, please call Michael Stukenberg '73 at 512-888-9261 (B).

PAA OF HOUSTON: Sat., Feb. 2: Asst. Prof. of Geological and Geophysical Sciences Tullis Onstott will speak at an association seminar. For information, call Patrick Swearingen '83 at 713-651-0128.

CALIFORNIA REGIONAL CONFERENCES: Sat., Mar. 9 and Sun., March 10. Please save these dates as the PC of Southern California and the PC of Northern California will each host regional conferences on these respective dates. Featured speakers include President Harold T. Shapiro '64, Dean of Admission Fred Hargadon, Professor of Slavic Languages and Literatures Caryl Emerson and Professor of Astronomy James Gunn. California, Arizona, and Nevada alumni and parents will be invited and all Princeton alumni and parents are welcome. For information, please call Elizabeth Hunt in the Alumni Council at 609-258-3351.

Notices of activities for inclusion in this column should be submitted at least eight weeks prior to the date of the event to Elizabeth Hunt, Alumni Council, Maclean House, Princeton Univ., Princeton NJ 08544; 609-258-3351.

gratulations to the Big Bug, Gregg Lange, and all those who labored diligently to make our 20th such a success.

Hot on the heels of this announcement comes a frantic Save-the-Date notice from Jerome Coleman, our reunion chair designate for the next five years. Jerome continues to lord over our mid-winter dinner in N.Y., and he wants us all to attend Feb. 15, when Dr. Sandy Williams will be our keynote speaker. By popular demand, the Class will return to Jim McMullen's on Third Avenue, described in one guidebook with these words: "Attractive women (models and otherwise) hoping to contact basketball, football, and tennis players, and Robert Redford look-alikes congregate at this lively bar." Sounds just like us, huh?

Classmate Steve Forbes Jr. was recently profiled in a syndicated piece for Sunday magazines. Some might express surprise in the revelations of Steve's "passion for malls," where he, his wife, Sabina, and five daughters can be seen "browsing, and occasionally buying." The article noted that their acquisitions included a Nintendo game and a CD of the Rolling Stones' "Goat Head Soup."

George Sullivan, the legal profession's contribution to theater, is working on a Ph.D. in history, directing, and playwrighting at Indiana Univ., and his one-act play, WINNING, is scheduled for production at I.U.'s Winterfest '91.

Larry Klurfeld has joined Arthur Anderson as a senior manager in operational consulting in the Roseland, N.J. office, responsible for building the cost improvement/productivity practice in the manufacturing sector.

Finally, Peter Langer was spotted (with two children in tow), on the occasion of the Brown football game. Sources report that the youthful action in the end-zone seats was more interesting than the mishaps on the playing field.

71

STUART E. PICKERSON
Gracie Station, P.O. Box 1142
New York, NY 10028

RÉSUMÉS: Paul Papak, a professor of law at the Univ. of Iowa, taught a course this summer in Archon, France, in comparative criminal procedure. His wife, Krista, and children, Joel (12) and Claire (3), joined him for a six-week European holiday. Jeff Marshall is writing a book for Dow Jones-Irwin on community investment by financial institutions. Publication is scheduled for next spring. Jeff continues to work for AMERICAN BANKER, and does some freelance writing as well.

Ed Milne is one step away from obtaining his Ph.D. in history from George Washington Univ. He passed all the comprehensive exams, and now has only his dissertation on the French Revolution to go. Ned Scudder is a newly elected member of the board of trustees of the Princeton Day School. Ned is a principal of Investment Quality Automobiles, a consulting and sales firm; co-founded New Jersey MONTHLY magazine; and serves as a director of the Shelby American Automobile Club.

Chip Kaufman is working with Andres Duany (and his wife Lizz Plater-Zyberk '72), planning traditional towns. Thomas Shuler is a principal in Rosenthal-Shuler Realty Partners, representing foreign and domestic pension funds investing in commercial real estate. He and his spouse of 17 years, Jamie Nystron, have four children, Lucas (11), Michael (8), Nora (5), and Ryan (1).

Last year, Randy Meadows struck out on his own and is now president of Greenbrier Capital Management, Inc., which specializes in short selling strategies. One downside of running one's own business, Randy says, is that he is the janitor (and every other person in between) as well. Chris Nicholas has been promoted to associate general counsel at the Metropolitan Life Insurance Co. in N.Y.C. Barry Block was made partner in the Dayton, Oh. office of the law firm of Thompson, Hine, and Flory.

72

KIP HEWITT
21 Wildcat Rd.
Darien, CT 06820

Pictured is Rand Curtiss with his wife, Beth, and their two children, Laura and Cathy, at the celebration of Rand's 40th birthday. Rand heads a merger and acquisitions firm in Shaker Heights, Oh. The slow-down in the M. & A. business and the illness of his partner made for a tough year. However, Beth's work in Discovery Toys earned them a sixth consecutive incentive trip for the family, this time to the Caribbean. They will soon be off to Hawaii on another toy trip, and in the spring, plan to move into the house in which Rand grew up.

UPDATES: Chuck Wellman is practicing internal medicine in Mentor, Oh. Married, with three children, he manages to get in an occasional game of tennis and racquetball.

Chester Fisher, in Hartford, Conn., is beginning to think about college. He has three daughters, Victoria (13), Kristin (9), and Kathleen (7), and says he is now trying to focus heavily on the academic, as opposed to the social experience of college. Meanwhile, Hans Bonn in San Diego, Calif., is also thinking about college. His oldest son, Geoff, is a high school senior who is applying to Princeton. Hans was in Princeton for Tiger Inn's centennial anniversary in Nov. He and his wife, Andi, recently moved into a new house in Del Mar. Hans is a law partner at Sheppard Mullin, Richter & Hampton, specializing in corporate & tax law.

REUNIONS: Ian Lamberton writes that he is looking forward to the 20th in '92. Ian lives in Tacoma, Wash., where he works as a marketing writer for Frank Russell Co. He and his wife, Ines, have two children: Maria (5) and Johnny (2). Meanwhile, plans are underway for the 20th reunion. Among the many events, there will be a raffle for a free 20th reunion ticket, drawn at the time of our Class dinner, on Friday night of Reunions.

73

R. GREGORY PLIMPTON
Box 14545
North Palm Beach, FL 33408

Going solo seems a popular option for our legal types. Bill Goodman has opened his own office in San Antonio, Tex. To the north, Scott Replogle has done the same. His new office is not far from his old firm in Denver. Scott still lives in (beautiful) Boulder, Colo.

Joining forces, on the other hand, can be good too. Ron Fondiller and Rich Dabab met for this photo on a sampan on the Aberdeen typhoon shelter on Hong Kong Island. Rich and his wife, Carolyn, visited Ron and Jane last spring on a Far-Eastern vacation. Ron is on a three-year assignment in the orient as international counsel for Remy Martin, keeping sales of brandy strong. Rich has a pension fund consulting firm based in Islip, N.Y., with a satellite office in Orlando, Fla.

Just south of Orlando, where the warm winter sun shines, Brian Leary practices banking law at Ruden, Barnett in Ft. Lauderdale. Wife, Thana, is a paralegal at another firm, while sons Thomas and Christopher collect swimming trophies at Pine Crest School.

Tom Sweeting, in Miami, is a V.P. with N.C.N.B. Bank. Wife, Carmen, is a psychologist for the school system. They have two children: Frits (5) and Katie (2).

In the nearby Palm Beaches, Greg Plimpton continues to play the semi-retired entrepreneur and Class secretary. His latest venture for profit is a grocery-shopping and delivery service which is popular with the elderly population. The service is called Express Lane.

74

JOHN STRYCKER
15 Woodbine Rd.
Kendall Park, NJ 08824

TIGER CUBS: Pictured here is Theodore DeWitt Eyster, son of Diana Rae Newman and Jason Eyster. Teddy was born Sept. 26, 1990, and is named after his great-great-grandfather, Theodore DeWitt Swarts, a pioneer who organized the Wells Fargo route between Mount Idaho and Warren, Ida., and was wounded in the Battle of Whitebird during the Nez Perce Indian War of 1872. Teddy's dad, Jason, as president of Agtech Export, is a pioneer in developing trade with the Far East. Mom, Diana, is an attorney. Sister Athena Elizabeth is almost two.

Stu Breisch and his wife, Karen Glynn, have welcomed their third child in three-and-a-half years. Kali was born underwater in their hot tub at home, Nov. 8, 1989. In addition to chasing kids, Stu is the director of a hospital emergency dept. in Salt Lake City, Ut.

Brendan Travis Collett was born April 16, 1990, to Laurie Barclay Collett and her husband, Richard. The Colletts are still busy with competition ballroom dancing, and won Best Amateur Couple and ten first-place trophies at the Grand Nationals, when Laurie was four months pregnant. Laurie is now asst. prof. of neurology at the Univ. of South Florida, specializing in Alzheimer's disease and other memory disorders. She is also editing a textbook on geriatric neurology and helping to run an "Island Paradise" vacation rental in a beachfront villa, offering 10% discounts to Princetonians.

Steve Deutsch and his wife, Diane, celebrated their 13th anniversary with the birth of son Stephen Latala Deutsch the day before (May 14, 1990). Steve hopes that young Steve's birth weight of 9 lbs., 5 oz. will not disqualify him from joining siblings Joyanna Elizabeth (8), Andrew Samuel (6), and Kathryn Rose (4) as future Princeton coxswains. The Deutsch clan lives in Glenview, Ill. Steve continues to practice gastroenterology in nearby Oak Park.

75

MELISSA KERR MESSROBIAN
940 Riverside Ave., Berkeley Square
Trenton, NJ 08618

President Bush has appointed Jerome Powell to be assistant secretary of the treasury for domestic finance. Jay and his wife, Lissa Leonard, have moved from N.Y. to Chevy Chase, Md., with their children, Sam (3) and Lucy (1).

Also in Washington, Stephanie Shipman is assistant director for public assistance of the Program Evaluation and Methodology Division at the G.A.O., supervising studies of the country's poor and the federal government's ability to help them.

Mike Schiffres is with Citicorp as associate general counsel of the Citibank MasterCard/Visa division. He has two children, Erica (2) and Scott (5).

Jeffrey Nick has been named senior V.P.-corporate strategy of Lincoln Natl. Corp., the nation's seventh-largest multi-line insurance holding company, in Fort Wayne, Ind. Prior to joining Lincoln Natl. in 1989, Jeffrey, who has a graduate degree in finance from the Univ. of Chicago, held positions with Xerox Financial Services in Norwalk, Conn., and Chase Investment Bank in London. Charles Yeo and Theresa Ann Pluth were married May 19 and included the 15th reunion in their post-nuptial travels.

Drew Christie '74 and Alix Handelsman have provided two-year-old David with a little brother, Joshua Christie Handelsman (pictured), born June 27. In fact, the Class has had a bumper crop of boys: Patrick Augustus, May 1, to Mike Garvey and his wife, Mark Theodore, May 29, to Janet and David Layton; and Andrew John Joseph, Aug. 3, to Micbell Clayman and his wife.

76 JAMES L. MARKETOS
Lane & Mittendorf, 919 18th St., N.W.
Washington, DC 20006

Pictured at a mini-reunion are (l-r) Katie Roth, Bill Wilson (shouldering son Christopher), Luke Roth, Tom Hewson (with son Ben aboard), and Debbie Hewson. Luke and Katie are now the proud parents of a second child, Anne Elizabeth, born last Jan. in Des Moines, joining brother Luke Jr.

On Nov. 18, the television news anchor for Houston's Channel 13 (KTRK), Melanie Lawson, was the guest speaker at the annual ceremony for the Interfaith Religious Service Award, sponsored by the Natl. Conference of Christians and Jews. Melanie has been a member of the Conference's Houston region board of directors since its reorganization in 1987 and is active in many other community organizations. She received joint degrees in law and journalism from Columbia and worked for a Wall Street law firm before returning to Houston. She has been with Channel 13 since 1982.

This photo is of Howard Pfifer's son, Evan Andrew, born Mar. 30, 1989. Howard and his wife, Suzanne, live in Silver Spring, Md., where, until Evan's arrival, Suzanne was a teacher. Howard is an attorney with the Defense Fuel Supply Center and represents the U.S. in litigation and contractual matters.

After four years as a partner in an internal medicine practice, Jeff Faig has returned to academia as a fellow in endocrinology at Stanford Univ. Med. Center, beginning July 1989. He has a 35-ft. sloop he keeps in San Francisco Bay and encourages friends to come sailing.

"Falsettoland" Star

IN THE WORLD OF THEATER, there's no surer sign that an actor has made it than if he's caricatured by Al Hirschfeld in The New York Times—an honor that recently befell Stephen Bogardus '76, who's currently starring in Falsettoland, which Time called "the first great musical of the '90s."

When I saw Bogardus, in the role of "Whizzer," bound confidently onto the stage of New York's Lucille Lortel Theatre, in my mind I was seeing him bound with the same self-confidence onto the stage of McCart Theatre as the star of the Triangle Show Mugs Money back in 1976. Of course, he's become a more subtle performer in those fourteen years; I admired the way, with the barest tilt of his head and just the right look in his eyes, he could convey affection, mixed with tenderness and wistfulness.

Falsettoland is the third critically acclaimed off-Broadway musical in a trilogy by William Finn, and the third in which Bogardus has played Whizzer (in this one, Whizzer is dying of AIDS). Bogardus has grown attached to the role: when he starred in March of the Falsettos in 1981, he turned down repeated offers from the legendary director-choreographer Michael Bennett to appear—at several times his off-Broadway salary—in the Broadway hit Dreamgirls.

Despite this attractive proposition, Bogardus remained with March of the Falsettos, because he knew he had a meatier role in Whizzer. He has not been seduced by other similarly lucrative opportunities, turning down chances, for example, to take steady roles in soap operas, whose scripts he feels are not challenging. He has made guest appearances on the television shows Cagney and Lacy and Tour of Duty and will do more, but remains loyal to the theater.

Bogardus got bitten by the acting bug while at Choate, where he costarred in The Boyfriend. He admits that he wasn't "psyched" about applying to Princeton; he wanted a school with a stronger reputation for theater. But his father, Jack Bogardus '50, pressured him to go—and he's grateful for his dad's advice now.

The Triangle Club turned him down his freshman year, so he vowed, he recalls, "to punish them by withholding my services from them." He proved what he could do in the Nassoons, in Wilson College theater, and in the late Professor Daniel Seltzer '54's popular acting class. He joined Triangle, finally, as a senior. The day after graduation, he got on a bus to Rhode Island to do summer stock.

The high point of his career, which has included work in Broadway and off-Broadway productions of West Side Story, Umbrellas of Cherbourg, Les Misérables, and The Grapes of Wrath, was probably his starring role in No Way to Treat a Lady. A critic for The New York Times, Stephen Holden, devoted two paragraphs of his review to Bogardus's performance before he got around to the play itself. Bogardus remembers plenty of slack periods, too, when "I lived off peanut butter sandwiches and Campbell Soup, and took jobs at Lord and Taylor and Beefsteak Charlie's." But he hasn't been out of work a single day in the last year.

He didn't expect to make it big right away. He recalls that shortly after getting out of college, a fortuneteller who wanted to marry him told him, "You're going to have a good career and make some money—but not until your thirties." "Actually," Bogardus says, "I don't know what 'some money' is." But he's happy with the way things have turned out so far.

© 1990 Al Hirschfeld. Drawing reproduced by special arrangement with Hirschfeld's exclusive representative, The Margo Feiden Galleries, New York.

Bogardus by Hirschfeld

77

JAMES BARRON
15 W. 72nd St., Apt. 24-B
New York, NY 10023

LAWYERS LAWYERING—Wick Sollers became a partner in the Washington office of King & Spalding, specializing in white-collar criminal defense. Floyd Newton is a partner in the firm's office in Atlanta. Jim Neale was named a partner at Owen & Davis in N.Y. The firm's specialty is commercial litigation. Fred Rich, a partner at Sullivan & Cromwell in N.Y., continues to concentrate on third-world natural resource project financing. This takes him to places like Papua, New Guinea and Zimbabwe, which need the capital, and Tokyo, London, and Frankfurt, which have it.

PARENTS PARENTING—John Carton and his wife, Sally, had their first child, a boy named Sandy, last June 8. Leslie Ritts and her husband, George Sugiyama, had their first, James Elliot Sugiyama, last Aug. 23. Leslie changed law firms, became a counsel to Chadbourne & Parke in Washington, and bought a house. James Clarke reports that his third child, Emma Chandler Clarke, was born last May 29, joining Helen (6) and James (3).

WRITERS WRITING—Freelancer Joe Loughbran wrote an editorial-page commentary for the WALL STREET JOURNAL last Nov. 1. "Congress Dances the Special-Interest Polka" dealt with congressional pork-barrel politics in an age of what Joe described as "so-called fiscal austerity." He lives in Nashua, N.H. Associate Editor Jill Smolowe wrote a TIME magazine cover story about third-class mail and the Postal Service. She didn't have to track down every single one of the 63.7 billion pieces of so-called junk mail that landed in mailboxes across the country last year. But TIME did run a photo of Jill behind an impressive-looking pile of postal flotsam. The caption said she was "doing personal research on her subject."

Fred Matsb died last Oct. 23. A Class memorial will appear in a future issue of PAW. We will remember Fred at the Alumni Day chapel service commemorating Princetonians who died in 1990. Alumni Day is Sat., Feb. 16, in Princeton.

78

BOB PESKIN
Box 886
Middlebury, VT 05753

Congratulations to Alan Fletcher, who has been appointed associate dean of the New England Conservatory.

Last Feb., Mark Gabrielson left SmithKline in Philadelphia after a successful marketing career to join Prince Ventures, a Westport, Conn., venture investment partnership. To make 1990 an even more exciting year for Mark and his wife, Betsy, their daughter Lisa Ruth was born on July 20. She joins Ross (6), whose mom describes him as "a first-grade soccer star." The Gabrielsons' new address is 165 Lounsbury Rd., Ridgefield, CT 06877.

Zachary Isaac Goldman, son of Erica Lehrer '80 and Rich Goldman, was brought into the world on July 15, 1990, by Dr. Scott Hayworth. According to Rich, he and Scott "reminisced about Old Nassau during the speedy delivery." Pictured (l-r): Erica, daughter Zoe, Scott, and Rich, holding Zachary.

Ed Ianni and Ann Marie Johnson Ianni (Bryn Mawr '80) are also new parents, with the April 26, 1990, arrival of Lauren Johnson Ianni. Lauren attended her first Princeton football game last Oct., but unfortunately the visiting Harvard team prevailed. Ann Marie is a deputy attorney general with the Dept. of Justice, and Ed is a senior attorney with Columbia Gas System, Inc. He is also completing a four-year term representing Wilmington on the New Castle Cty. Council.

79

MARTHA KRAMER
27 Northhill St., Apt. 6-R
Stamford, CT 06907

BIRTH ANNOUNCEMENTS: John Boozan and his wife, Tracy, recently had their first child, Peter Meehan Boozan (pictured). John is an ophthalmologist practicing in Summit and Elizabeth, N.J. Jeanne Court- right and her husband, John, are also first-time parents. Their son, Philip Ryan Courtright, was born this fall, right around the time they were moving into their first home in Southern Calif. Jon Laramore and his wife, Janet McCabe, recently had their second child. Peter McCabe Laramore (pictured) joins his sister, Alice, in delighting his parents. One of the doctors on the maternity ward when he was born was Yvonne Gomez-Carrion.

HEARD FROM: Naomi Schalit notes that her two toddlers are "making sure I go straight to my 60s from my early 30s." She hastens to add, however, that she loves the view of the Pacific Ocean from her new home in rural Muir Beach and, overall, is happy and eager to see Princeton visitors. From the other side of the country, Ernesto Marrero Jr. notes that he has left private law practice to accept an appointment as deputy commissioner for trials for the N.Y.C. sanitation dept. Previously, he was an asst. district attorney in Brooklyn and an inspector general for the N.Y.C. investigations dept. Bill Fisher writes from his new home in Ontario, Canada, where he is V.P. for Gap Intl. He left San Francisco for this opportunity to open up the Canadian market for the Gap; 18 stores are in place, with 21 more planned by the end of 1991. Bill credits his wife, Sakurako, with making the move easy for him and their son, Sam.

80

RIK PARKER
25 Farmhouse La.
Furlong, PA 18925

CONGRATULATIONS: To John Rogers, now serving more than just the interests of '80, having been elected to the University's board of trustees. To Steve Meister, who, after playing professionally from 1980-86, was elected one of three player reps on the board of directors of the Assn. of Tennis Professionals. To Phillip Bland and Tamara Sue Owens (Indiana '86), who were married Mar. 26 in Indianapolis. Phillip has been elected an asst. clinical prof. at the U.S.C. School of Medicine.

CLASS ISSUE: Loren Pleiades Olson was born Dec. 13, 1989, to Eric and Beatriz Olson. Eric is completing his orthopedic sports medicine fellowship prior to moving to Washington, D.C. next spring. Beatriz will work for N.I.H., performing endocrinology research, and Eric will begin, after 11 years, his R.O.T.C. obligation. David and Christina Romer report the birth of son Paul Sherwood Jan. 11, 1990.

The spring of 1990 was a particularly fertile period for the Class. Among the new offspring was Andrew Austin Hawley, born to Bill and Tracy Austin Hawley on May 3 and pictured here at five months, with older brother Joey (2½). Marie Stoess Schwartz gave birth to her first child, Eric Philip, on May 23, and reports her surprise at his not being the youngest at our 10th. Ruben Diaz's wife, Lili, gave birth to their first child, Cecelia Beatriz, June 1. Now Ruben's only full nights of sleep come on business trips. Luckily, Ruben had already made partner at the Miami law firm of Steel Hector & Davis. Patty Shaw Sprague and husband, Hal, missed Reunions due to the birth of daughter Eliza. They all continue to enjoy their farmhouse in Hebron, Conn., complete with mice and bats, and Patty has now returned to fundraising at the Wadsworth Atheneum.

81

JEAN AMABLE TELLJOHANN
50 Riverside Dr., Apt. 9F
New York, NY 10024

John Berson, Linda Dunbar, Guy Jacobson, Tillie Lim, Steve Schwartz, Ken Telljohann, and Patty Vaughan attended the world premiere performance of ORFEO SUBURBANO. John Sichel was the composer and librettist of this chamber opera. Details of future performances will appear in an upcoming Class newsletter.

Meredith Beers, Katbryn Humphreys, and Tom Rassieur recently attended a going-away party for York Chi '82 and Stephen Harder '79, who are moving to Brussels.

Margaret Baldwin Dozier's son, John Edwin, was born Nov. 7, 1989. On Nov. 16, John Knox and his wife, Page Stevens Knox, (sister of Leslie Stevens) had John Dixon Knox Jr. John Sr. is still working at Morgan

Stanley Asset Management. Ira and Janice Starr had a son, William, Jan. 8, 1990. Bob and Marion Rutsch had their first child, Florence Jackson ("Poncie"), in mid-July. Leif Shiras and his wife, Maria, had a son, Emmett Livingston (pictured), born July 31. Leif is still playing the tennis circuit, as well as doing some sports commentary and tennis articles. Martin Lotito had a baby daughter, Lisa, Aug. 2. Martin is working at Merck & Co. and pursuing his master's at Villanova. Patrick and Audrey Kurth Cronin welcomed Natalie Elizabeth into the family Sept. 14. Natalie joins big brother Christopher, who is almost two. Peter and Sharon Kistler DeNunzio had their first child, Douglas Frost, Oct. 6. "Clearly a candidate for Princeton Class of 2012!" writes Sharon.

82

TERI DOOLEY KOQUZ
12409 Sadler Lane
Bowie, MD 20715

FIRST-TIME PARENTS: Pictured is Colin Smith McSwiggen, born June 5, 1990, to Tara Smith and her husband, Pat McSwiggen. Born to Stephen and Deborah Hicks Quazzo is Caroline Tyler Quazzo on May 26, 1990. Also Dave Sola and his wife, Alison Work (Pebble Beach, Calif.) had Katherine Shea Sept. 11, 1990. (They were married in Nov. 1989) On Sept. 26, 1990, Brian Martin Mechanick was born to Debra Subar and husband, Stephen. (They got married July 16, 1988).

SECOND-TIME PARENTS: Pictured are the two sons of Julia Herndon Reynolds and her husband, Steve '80. John James was born Sept. 29, 1990, and joins his brother, Matthew Thomas, who is over 4½ years old. Bill and Julia Hill Beck welcomed their daughter, Sarah Elizabeth Feb. 11, 1990, and she joins brother, Stephen (4).

Joy Leuchten Meyer and her husband, Dale, say they do not have any kids, but they have an adorable puppy. Last summer they traveled to Alaska and the Canadian Rockies before settling outside Albany, N.Y. Joy accepted a position as the urgent care physician in a nearby multispecialty health center.

83 GAIL FRANCK

345 West 87th St., Apt. 3F
New York, NY 10024

Myrna Rivera married Donald F. Dzurilla at St. Vincent Ferrer Church in N.Y.C. March 3, 1990. Pictured (l-r) are John '84 and Liz Sortano, Donald, Myrna, Bob Kaner, and Heather Liston. Myrna and Donald now live in Greenwich, Conn., and work in N.Y.C., where she is a senior business analyst with Citicorp and he is a search consultant with Haskell & Stern.

Henry Wessells recently completed a novel, GREEN NETWORK, a visionary tour de force, genetic engineering, ecological renewal, wild leaps of language... and is now looking for a publisher. Henry received his M.F.A. from Columbia's writing division in May of this year. He is a freelance translator—Arabic, French, and German, is learning Tibetan, participates in the Artists in the Schools program, and is a radio talk show host at WKCR 89.9 (N.Y.C.) reading poetry and fiction on Sunday evenings. If all this doesn't keep him busy enough, his wife gave birth Oct. 3 to their daughter, Alexandra Buchanan Wessells.

Henry writes that this will be a whole new language learning process!!!

This young man in John Jay Squires, son of Jay Squires. John was born May 22, 1990, weighing in at 9 lbs., 5.6 oz. In five months he has passed the 20-lb. mark and his dad is afraid he'll be too big to play lightweight when he reaches college.

Ellie Boynton wrote in to correct our recent Class newsletter. She moved to Boston in mid '87 to work in corporate real estate. She has just started a new job as assistant to the chairman.

84 TIMOTHY C. WU

Beacon Court, 175 Beacon St., Apt. 413
Somerville, MA 02143

HAPPY FIRST NEW YEAR TO CAROLINE, KIMBERLY, HENRY, SARA, AND... ELWOOD? Several classmates celebrated the new year with new additions to their families. Herbie Hecht and his wife, Dana, report that daughter Caroline Elizabeth (top left, in tiger suit) born Aug. 26, is the first girl born to the Hechts in 96 years. Herbie is at the law firm of Patton, Boggess, and Blow in Washington, D.C., where he works with Craig Kramer and Ben Chew. Another set of proud parents are Janice Levy Block and Brad Block, who celebrated the birth of daughter Sara Elizabeth (top right, holding doll) May 25. The Blocks are now living in Chicago.

Born the same week as Sara Elizabeth was Kimberly Brooke Heussner, daughter of Steve Heussner. Steve and his family are enjoying life in Garland, Tex. Kimberly (bottom left) is shown here modeling the latest in collegiate baby wear.

Talbot MacCarthy Payne and Henry Payne report the birth of a little baby with a long family history: Henry E. Payne V (bottom right, blue suit) born March 3. Rumor has it that Henry V has already asked Dad for his first sketch book. And finally, Happy New Year to Niki Pappas Lower, husband Wes, and Elwood the Cairn Terrier, who, Niki writes, is the "new addition... we thought we'd build up to the baby thing with a puppy."

85 ROB JIRANEK

1578 Oak Ave., Apt. 1
Evanston, IL 60201

Editor's Note: Rick Groel is a cartoonist in N.Y.

86 SALLIE KIM

2645 California St., Apt. 303
Mountain View, CA 94040

Reunions are less than six months away, so start making your plans now. Reunions chairman Doug Bootbe is leading an all-star cast of dozens of classmates who are working on various Reunions committees. It's not too late to join in, so if you want to help out, drop him a line at 60 Crescent Dr., Apt. 11, Stamford, CT 06906.

Wedding bells never stop ringing for '86ers this year. Pictured at the wedding of Garrick Groblert to Margaret Daniel (Harvard '85), in Richmond, Va., June 30, 1990, are (l-r): Ford Graham, Pete White, Jon Cole, Richard Pfohl, and Stephen Culbane. Garrick and Margaret both graduated from U.Va. law

Young Alumni Activities

PC OF CANADA: We have several fun get-togethers planned. If you are a young alumnus of Toronto, and would like to be on our mailing list, call June Higgins '88 at 416-250-6978.

PC OF NEW ENGLAND: Feb. 21: Boston Alumni Club's party at Venus de Milo or Club Land. Look for your fliers in January's mail. For more info., please call Adrienne Della Penna '88 at 617-861-8254, Sarah Helm '89 at 617-868-7808, or Mary Hermann '89 at 617-628-8825.

PC OF NEW YORK: Jan. 23: Fresh Air Fund community service project. Call the manager's office for further info., 212-840-6400.

PA OF DELAWARE: Happy hour at Water Works Cafe second Thurs. of each month. Please call Ann Linton '86 at 302-654-1888.

REGIONAL YOUNG ALUMNI CHAIRS: For more information about young alumni events in your area, contact your regional young alumni chair: Boston: Adrienne Della Penna '88, 617-861-8254; Canada: June Higgins '88, 416-250-6978; Central Connecticut: Whitney Repp '80, 203-677-1642; Chicago: Robert Jiranek '85, 312-951-0990; Dallas: Rosalind Hausmann '84, 214-353-4989 and Mathew Hertzog '87, 817-478-4006; Delaware: Ann Linton '86, 302-654-1888; Houston: Timothy Herbert '84, 512-469-9524; Los Angeles: David Huebner, 213-203-7900; Michigan: George Corser '85, 313-352-7514 and Michael Sklar '84, 313-568-9429; Minneapolis: Susan Wenz Prosapio, 612-370-9300; N.Y.C.: Mary Ciepiel, 212-840-6400 and Christa Weil '82, 212-751-0005; Oregon: Lori Irish Bauman '81, 503-226-1191; Philadelphia: John Lavelle '85, 215-851-8446 and Karen Bowdre '88, 215-687-8737; San Diego: Bill Van De Weghe '83, 619-239-8131; San Francisco: Ellen Friedman '82, 415-398-4700; Seattle: Jon Evans '88, 206-323-2932; Washington, D.C.: DeDe Waring '88, 202-342-7862 and Cynthia Addison '89, 703-739-5161.

school and are working in Washington, D.C. Ford is currently studying in Tulane's J.D./M.B.A. program; Jon is in his last year at U.Va. law; and Rich is at Harvard Law School.

Latest press releases tell us that Tina Vavasts graduated from Northwestern's Kellogg School of Management in 1990 and that James Fiscber, also at Kellogg, recently received a Council of Logistics Management Scholarship.

First comes love; then comes marriage; here comes Larry Kirschner with a baby carriage: pictured is Larry's and Evelyn's daughter Jessica Morgan Kirschner, born June 10, 1990. Jessica is busy "preventing her parents from getting too much sleep." Larry is working on his M.D./Ph.D. at Albert Einstein and plans to finish in three years.

87

MARY TAYLOR DENICO
1935 Seville St.
Santa Rosa, CA 95403

Danny Shapiro and Joe Zuffoletto found a new way to toast the groom. Lance Ketterer, pictured here with Danny, Joe, and pie on his face, wed Miriam Block (U.C.L.A.

'77) Aug. 12, 1990. Also at the wedding were Karen Schmidt and Bill Crandall. Lance and Miriam live in L.A., where Lance is a student at U.C.L.A.'s Anderson School of Management, also working on his M.F.A. in film and TV. Miriam heads a marketing consulting firm in L.A. Danny is in his second year with Berkeley's M.B.A. program. Joe, self-employed, consults for high-tech firms in the Silicon Valley. Bill is at Hewlett Packard in Palo Alto. Karen just left the West Coast for Newark, N.J.; she is in her fourth year at the Prudential.

Yvonne Gonzalez Rogers lives in Concord, Calif. She and husband, Matt '85, bought their first house in Aug. 1989. Trey Peacock is spending a year clerking for a judge in San Francisco after completing law school at the Univ. of Texas. Pablo Soto spent a couple of weeks on surgical rotations in S.F.; he is a fourth-year med student at Duke. Further south in Calif., Sam Yoon works for McDonnell Douglas Electronics Systems in Huntington Beach. Dan Scheffer is at U.C.-Santa Barbara's Dept. of Geological Science.

Matt Gantz is in the Persian Gulf. Send him a letter at E. Co. 2d BN 7th Marines, FPO San Francisco, CA 96608-5513.

88

CHRISTOPHER LU
206E Holden Green
Cambridge, MA 02138

The impact of the Middle East conflict has hit close to home. Bill Aberon and Greg Morzano were both sent to Saudi Arabia in Dec. as part of the Second Armored Cavalry Regiment. I know they would appreciate letters from classmates. Mail can be sent to: First Lieutenant (Name), Operation Desert Shield, S Troop 4/2 ACR, APO, NY 09759.

Another '88er in the military is Debbie Rawden, who married Brian Egloff (V.M.I. '88) last June 30 outside Rochester, N.Y. Pictured are: (bottom row) Laura Comay, Ann Sussman, Nicole Sandler Resnick, (top row) Kristin Seymour, Dan Resnick

'87, Brian, Debbie, Kate Scurria, and Tracy Morgan. Both Debbie and Brian originally were stationed in Germany with the Army, but unfortunately, Brian was sent to Saudi Arabia. According to Debbie, Paul Bobr and Tad Calkins are also Army lieutenants in Germany.

Closer to home and on a more festive note, Thankful Vanderstar performed in the professional production of "The Christmas Revels," which had 16 performances in Cambridge, Mass., during the Christmas season. Thankful has been working for the Nature Conservancy for the past two years. A happy note comes from Brian Bell, who writes that he and his wife, Dena, have been busy with their son, Nicholas Ryan. He was born Aug. 14, 1990, in Columbus, Oh. Finally, more happy news from Betsy Hilton, who is engaged to marry Jon Lasley Aug. 3 in Nashville, Tenn. Betsy is a third-year student at Duke Medical School.

Finally, the recipient of the first Class of 1988 Sam Mitra Scholarship is Namita Devidayal '91. Contributions to the scholarship fund can be sent to the address above.

89

DAVID MILLER
4698 S. 36th St.
Arlington, VA 22206

ARTS AND ENTERTAINMENT: Sofia Perez and her mom were recently the subjects of a WALL STREET JOURNAL article about "NBC Nightly News," where Sofia is a production assistant and assistant to Cheryl Gould '74. When the controversial new head of NBC News, Steve Friedman, nixed a meaty story on education in South Africa, his underlings protested, and he agree to restore it if they could prove "it would interest a housewife in Queens." So Sofia played the piece for her mom, a housewife in Queens, who WAS interested. The piece aired.

A production of Lewis Flinn's senior thesis, ANTIGONE: A MUSICAL DRAMA, will be staged in N.Y.C. the first two weeks of Feb. Lori Kurtz is living in Vail, Colo., performing at a cabaret dinner club called Club Majiks, and, oh yes, doing plenty of skiing. Debbie Hurwitz is playing piano and synthesizer on Broadway for the latest Andrew Lloyd Webber musical, ASPECTS OF LOVE, and working as an executive producer of R.K. Music in Manhattan. She has also played and produced two natl. commercials for Procter & Gamble. Also producing radio and TV ads is Kristen Maurer, living in D.C. with Lynne Bartolemeu and Cyndi Addison, and working at Podesta Associates, Inc., a media consulting firm that does work for non-profits. Betsy Roxby is living in N.Y.C. and working as the assistant to the curator of exhibitions at the Cooper-Hewitt Museum, the natl. museum of design.

Leigh Ornstein is currently a researcher, "soon to be asst. producer," at channel one in N.Y.C. This last comes courtesy of Andi Hild, a freelance writer in Greensboro, N.C., looking for a permanent writing position. She notes that Laura Cardillo is at Army Airborne School at Ft. Bonning, Ga.; after graduation in mid-Dec., she leaves for Ornsbach, Germany to begin her four years' service.

Also in the service is Second Lt. Andrew Blake, stationed with the Army in Tongduchon, Korea. He is a mortar platoon leader for 2/72 armor. "Korea is fantastic, and leading a 34-man platoon is the greatest challenge I've ever had," he writes. Before being shipped to Korea, Andrew completed Ranger School and the infantry officer training course.

90

BRYETT GOODMAN
22 Berkeley Terrace
Livingston, NJ 07039

First and foremost, congratulations to Colleen Doherty and Bill Minicozzi, who recently announced their engagement. Colleen and Bill are at Stanford, studying law and math, respectively.

Spanning the globe update: Ned Clayton and Gabriel Elkhatm are field engineers with Schlumberger Intl. in Egypt, while Jenny Davidson does field study in biology in Madagascar. Rob McNamara teaches English in Tangiers, Morgan Williams volunteers at a medical mission in Ghana, Joe Gershman is in the Peace Corps in Mali, Katie Bunge is in the Peace Corps in Latin America, and Don McCalmont quit his job in N.Y.C. to join a scientific expedition searching for prehistoric fossils in Antarctica.

And now for a few notes (no pun intended) about some musicians in the Class: Henry Wang spent the summer of 1990 at a conductors' institute in S.C. and is currently working with the Gilbert and Sullivan Society in Princeton, where he works for an environmental engineering firm. Bill Speed is studying biology at Yale, and he has been appointed organist of the Trinity Church in nearby Milton, where he plays an original Thomas Hall instrument dating to 1823.

91

ROCKY JOHNSON
152 Little Hall
Princeton University Campus

After a restful vacation, seniors are preparing for the long haul. With fall-semester exams under their belt, they will soon devote all of their time to their theses, which, for many, have been looming above their heads until now. Soon, seniors will come out only at mealtimes, spending the rest of their time buried in their carrels, slaving over their computer keyboards, or making plans to take a little break after their "due date." I'm sure all alumni can sympathize!

92

ROBERT FROBY HAMMOND
31 Little Hall
Princeton University Campus

A word to the wise from Pedro Mayrinck: "Money never sleeps." He explained that there is a subculture at Princeton that never sleeps; these motivated students stay up until dawn working on their J.P.s. It is these same students who try to get good grades who want to make a lot of money in their future careers, hence his advice. Gordon Bailey enjoyed watching Bart Kaulkestein and Mike Goldberg working their magic in Cleveland over Thanksgiving. Lars Florio thinks this University needs another Woodrow Wilson. Leslie Moscow is a poly-econ major.

After she graduates, Amy Gordinier wants to go into the cosmetics industry. Mike Gifto knows somewhere inside him is an ultimate skier. Justin Chat is right when he says that the Class of '92 serves a mean cup of hot chocolate. Debbie Peikes recently revealed that her hero is U.S. Trade Representative Carla Hill.

Don't drop any bananas around Elliot Fertik, as he just finished his J.P. on the slippery fruit. English major Robert Ladd thinks Chaucer and Shakespeare are great. Delphine Farber, Heather Busbnell, and Priscilla Glickman want everyone to imagine if they were combined into one person what a "raging" (and smart) person they would be. Dave Rothenberg said to give him a turkey hoagie and a couch and he will be happy. Jon Usuka is a religion major after having a religious awakening over Exodus 2:10. Carla Vernon wonders what she is going to do after graduation, while Gretchen Kucbarski is looking for a houseparties date.

93

OWEN KERR, MARK POAR
53 Holder Hall, 211 1940 Hall
Princeton University Campus

Last year Lisa Bryant was bored at football and basketball games because of a seeming lack of spirit among the students. After seeing a letter in the ALUMNI WEEKLY from a disgrun-ted alumnus who was concerned at the lack of school spirit at last year's Princeton-Yale football game, she decided to form a cheerleading squad. "I did it partly for selfish reasons and partly for altruistic reasons," Bryant said. "I had cheered for eight years, and decided to try to form a squad here." Following tryouts and weeks of practice, the squad cheered for the first time at the Princeton-Fordham game. After the success of the cheerleaders during the football season, Bryant held tryouts for the basketball season. The new squad will cheer at the first home basketball game in Jan. Other sophomore members of the squad are Dominique Isaac, Sari Coumert, Jill Williford, Charmaine Shryock, Daphne Nizza, and Rhonda Patterson.

The Class of '93 is now well represented in student government as well, since four sophomores were recently elected to the Undergraduate Student Government: Colin Fenton was elected V.P.; Paul McDonald was elected Undergraduate Life Committee chair; Jennifer Weller Polley was elected social and community affairs chair; and Campbell Hatcher was elected social chair.

GS
*01-59

Vernon G. Hershaw Jr. '45
1573 Kirkley Rd.
Columbus, OH 43221

PHYSICS: Once again from San Francisco, Ralph D. Bennett '27 reports, "I am well and happy as number 90 approaches, rejoicing in the good work of my son '61 and granddaughter '93, and keeping busy trying to help all four of the universities to which I am beholden—and get the grandchildren educated." And Marshall C. Harrington '32 tells us, "I am now living in the Collington Life Care Community in Prince George Cty., Md. I retired from the Air Force Office of Scientific Research in 1974." After completing 1½ years as chief scientist of the U.S. Dept. of Transportation, S. Fred Singer '48 writes, "Now back in the 'private sector,' directing a project on 'Science & Environmental Policy'—seeing how government uses science—or doesn't use science—or misuses science—in setting environmental policies that affect all of us." Meanwhile, John Toll '52 informs us: "I am now serving as president of the Universities Research Assn. (U.R.A.), while also continuing as prof. of physics and chancellor emeritus of the Univ. of Maryland. U.R.A. is an assn. of 72 major universities, including Princeton, that is responsible for building and operating the nation's present and future high energy accelerators (Fermilab in Ill., and the Superconducting Supercollider (S.S.C.) in Tex.)." To John go our heartiest congratulations! He also received a Doctor of Humane Letters degree from SUNY-Stony Brook and spoke at the 1990 commencement ceremonies for physics graduates.

Now back again to some of our distinguished old-timers. From Palo Alto, Calif., Conyers Herring '37 writes, "Have visited Univ. of Michigan fall 1988 and fall 1989 as Samuel A. Gondsmit Visiting Professor of Physics." And from Oxford, England, Francis V. Price '37 explains: "I was a lecturer in physics at Worcester College, Oxford, but am now retired. This gift in gratitude for my two years at the Graduate College has been accumulated over many years, and cannot, I fear, be repeated." From Lexington, Mass., John B. Sampson '40 writes us, "Working part-time in applied physics and technical writing for Raytheon. Recommend that A.P.G.A. back refresher instructional meetings about specific fields of knowledge..." Finally, Thomas Mariner '47 relates that he has just moved to Ocala, Fla., but that he still has his home in Penn. Since he is living on borrowed money in the interim, he cannot contribute to Princeton at this time. "I shall remember later," John promises.

Norris D. Jackson '17

NORRIS JACKSON died Sept. 29, 1990, in a hospital in St. Paul, Minn., a few days after falling and injuring a vertebra and his neck. He was born in St. Paul June 23, 1895, and lived his whole life in houses on Grand Ave. He attended St. Paul Academy and at Princeton roomed with Henry Dunn. He was a member of Ivy Club and prominent in many campus activities, including Senior Council and Class Day Committee. In senior year the Class placed him among the top votes as "Most Respected," "Most Thorough Gentleman," and "Best All Around Man Outside of Athletics."

In WWI he was second lt. pilot in the Army Air Force. He then joined Gordon & Ferguson Inc., in St. Paul, where he built a reputation for labor negotiations. In 1938 he was named to the new Dept. of Labor Conciliation by Gov. Harold Stassen. He was director of labor relations for Northwest Orient Airlines, retiring after 14 years. He spent the next three years as asst. to the president of Macalester College in St. Paul. In 1959 he gave up all "regular" jobs but dedicated his time to a long list of important activities from Community Chest to plans for Minnesota Zoo. He was an ever-curious and warm man who had a full and active life.

He is survived by two daughters, Leila Poullada and Catherine Wise, seven grandchildren, and eight great-grandchildren, to all of whom we sent our sincerest sympathy.

The Class of 1917

Thurston V. Lawshe '22

THURSTON ("FAT") LAWSHE died March 26, 1990, at age of 91. He was born Dec. 24, 1898, at Newark, N.J. He lived in Waterbury, Conn. He was the end of a Princeton '22 bund; the late Bryant H. Dixon '22 having married his surviving sister, Harriet, and the late Edmund B. Blake '22 having married his late sister, Aurelia. In 1928 he joined the A. J. Tilden Insurance Co., and stayed there the rest of his life. When he died, he was the owner. He married Hortense E. Volger, who predeceased him as did a son, Bernard, who died in 1947.

The Class of 1922

Julian Creighton '26

JULIAN CREIGHTON was, above all else, a scholar. He studied at Princeton, Harvard, and Yale. He spent 26 years in the N.Y. State Architect's office and retired as senior architect. He died at age 87 on Sept. 22, 1990, after a protracted illness, in a rest home near his residence in Rensselaerville, N.Y.

Elizabeth, his widow, wrote of Julian: "Throughout the years his interest in languages never flagged. He continued to read Latin and Greek and kept up with contemporary French, Italian, and German writers. He wrote something almost every day: thoughts on some subject, comments on events and scenery, and frequently poems. Never for print."

"He had spells when he painted water colors, and others when his interest in music was intense, even to the point of trying to compose for piano. But always the reading and writing went on."

Julian is survived by Elizabeth, whom he married in 1945, daughters, Julia and Virginia; son, Donald '57; and four grandchildren. We who knew him share their grief in the loss of this extraordinary man.

The Class of 1926

Eli T. Conner '27

SEVEN DAYS AFTER his 85th birthday, Eli died Sept. 20, 1990, after a brief illness, at Howard Cty. General Hospital, Columbia, Md.

His was an intensely active life of three careers. He had an extensive legal practice in Albany, Deer Park, and Port Jervis, N.Y., and Matamoras and Milford, Penn. He gave legal lectures, held several local public offices, and was a familiar presence in the U.S. Supreme Court, and an associate of the prominent law firm Wiswall, Walton, Wood & MacAfee in Albany.

During WWII Eli served as a lieutenant of the Quartermaster Corps, also in the J.A.G. dept. until July 1946. For distinguished service in the Military Justice Division, he was promoted to major and colonel, and awarded a commendation ribbon.

After the war Eli's interest shifted to travelers' service. In Port Jervis, with his wife and sons, he opened a motel, Painted Apron Lodge, which became familiar to 1927ers. He was interested in real estate, and owned apartments at Arlington, Va. He found time for clubs, and to crown his life, married Virginia Ruggles and raised two sons, Eli T. Jr. and Harry.

The Class of 1927

Merritt Burnham Low '29

MERRITT DIED June 25, 1990. He prepared for college at Bordentown Military Inst. At Princeton he was in the band and was undergraduate manager of the University Dining Halls. He was in Arbor Inn and roomed with Skip Wells.

He received a Harvard M.D. in 1933 and interned at Children's Hospital in Boston and in Philadelphia, then moved to Greenfield, Mass., and Deerfield, first as school physician at Eaglebrook School, and then in general pediatric practice. He was briefly in Burlington, Vt., and in Illinois, with the American Academy of Pediatrics, but returned to permanent practice in Greenfield.

In 1944 Merritt had a polio attack which put him on crutches for the rest of his life, but without the slightest interruption in his professional and humanitarian career. He was president of the American Academy of Pediatrics and is credited with the move for mandatory child seat-belts in cars.

His main travel ambition was to get to the Great Wall in China, which he did, crutches and all. He was an enthusiastic gardener and chess player.

Merritt married Marion Adriance Johnson in 1934 and Virginia Barr in 1962. In 1982 he married Ann Wild, and she survives, as do his sons, Robert and Richard; his daughters, Barbara Davies and Margaret; and his brother, George '31. The Class extends sincere sympathy to Merritt's family.

The Class of 1929

Frank Harris Johnson '30 '36

FRANK JOHNSON died in Princeton Sept. 22, 1990, of complications following a stroke. At the time of his death he was prof. emeritus of biology at Princeton. Frank was one of the large contingent of Gilman School graduates who came to Princeton in 1926. At Princeton he was a member of Quadrangle and roomed with Ed McLean.

Frank was best known for his work in establishing luminescence (the emission of light by living organisms, such as fireflies and especially fish) as a tool for research on certain biological problems.

Following his graduation from Princeton he obtained a master's at Duke and later a Ph.D. at Princeton. He joined the Princeton faculty in 1937. In 1939 he was a Rockefeller Foundation fellow in Holland. In 1942 he was one of three scientists to receive the annual prize of the American Assn. for the Advancement of Science. He was the recipient of two Guggenheim Fellowships. He was a fellow of the N.Y. Academy of Science and served as president of the N.J. branch of the Society of American Bacteriologists.

Survivors include his widow, Mary, three daughters, and four grandchildren. To them we express our sympathy on the death of this outstanding scientist.

The Class of 1930

John Hamilton Thatcher Jr. '30

JOHN THATCHER died in Santa Barbara, Calif., Sept. 10, 1990, after a sudden heart attack. He had moved to Santa Barbara from San Francisco in 1977 and was living in a retirement home there.

John came to Princeton from the Kansas City Country Day School. At Princeton he was a member of Theatre Intime, Triangle Club, Clio Hall, and Cap and Gown.

Following graduation, John joined the Standard Oil Co. of Calif. (Chevron) and spent his entire business career with that company, retiring 47 years later. In June 1941 he took a year off as a Sloan Fellow at the M.I.T. School of Business and earned an M.S. During the war he served as consultant to the War Production Board and for three years was executive secretary of the Petroleum Administration. At the time of his retirement he was president of three Chevron subsidiaries and assistant to the president of Chevron.

In the mid 1960s John was president of the Princeton Alumni Assn. of Northern Calif. for three years. He maintained a lively and generous interest in the geology dept. at Princeton, from which he had graduated Phi Beta Kappa.

He never married and is survived by a sister, Edith Hurd, and a brother, Nicholas G. '37. To them we extend our regret on the loss of this cherished friend.

The Class of 1930

Kenneth P. Wilson '30 '33

KEN WILSON died Sept. 1, 1990, in the Monroe Village Health Center in Jamesburg, N.J.

Ken came to Princeton from Exeter. At Princeton he roomed with John Austin junior and senior years, and was a member of Arbor Inn.

After graduation Ken engaged in geological research studies near Red Lodge, Mont. He obtained a master's in geology from Princeton in 1933. He then joined the Soil Erosion Service of the U.S. Dept. of Interior and spent the next 35 years as a soils expert, soil scientist, and soil surveyor. He worked on the World Soil Map in cooperation with the Military Geological Branch of the U.S. Geological Survey and the Army Map Service. He assisted in the development of the Comprehensive Soil Classification System of the U.S. Dept. of Agriculture.

Ken retired in 1970 and thereafter did consulting work. He was a member of the American Society of Agronomy, the Soil Science Society of America, the N.J. Assn. of Professional Soil Scientists, which he helped found, and the Soil Conservation Society of America.

Ken's wife died several years ago. He is survived by three sons, Arthur M., Christopher E., and Lewis N., seven grandchildren, and four great-grandchildren. To them we extend our sincere sympathy.

The Class of 1930

William H. Buffum '33 '34

BILL BUFFUM, who had been living in a nursing home in Arnold, Md., died May 28, 1990.

Bill was born Aug. 10, 1910, in Swansea, Mass. He lived in various towns in New England and N.J., and prepared at Providence Country Day School.

In college Bill was active in gym and wrestling, but his particular interest was rugby, which started as an organized activity while we were in college. Years later, Bill introduced and coached the sport at Annapolis. His roommate at college was Johnny Tompkins.

After college Bill got his M.A. at Princeton and then taught at Hill School. He returned to Princeton in 1939 for further study. In 1941 he joined the Naval Academy faculty, remaining there until retirement. During WWII he was in the Navy, emerging as Lt. commander.

On Mar. 30, 1946, Bill married Corniliver Boardman Robertson in Annapolis. She died in 1981. They had two children, John R. and Judith Ann, with whom he lived in Annapolis in recent years. The Class of '33 extends its sympathy to the children.

The Class of 1933

Harry Tipper Jr. '33

HARRY TIPPER, who had lived at Siasconset, Mass., on Nantucket, for a number of years, died there June 6, 1990. Harry was born Nov. 10, 1910, in N.Y.C. He prepared at South Kent School. He left college early.

Harry had a varied career in industry, research, journalism, freelance writing, and advertising. Before the war he was connected with the Old Sconset Inn on Nantucket. During WWII Harry was in the Army, becoming a captain, and serving in Africa and Europe.

After the war, Harry was an executive with the John B. Pierce Foundation. He then became director of the Building Research Laboratories in Princeton; still later he worked for the Hercules Powder Co.

Among Harry's books were: CONTROLLING OVERHEAD;

THE SYSTEM, described as a light, insider's guide to modern business bureaucracy; and THE STRUCTURED UNIVERSE.

On June 22, 1946, Harry married Marjorie Burns, in Somerville, N.J. She died in 1987. They had one son, Harry III. Harry and Marge were frequent attendees at reunions, and we came to know them well. The Class of '33 will miss them.

The Class of 1933

William Pagenstecher '34

BILL PAGENSTECHEER, who retired in 1971 as V.P. and senior investment officer of the Boatmen's Natl. Bank in St. Louis, died in that city Oct. 20, 1990, after a brief illness. Last June he attended his 60th reunion at St. Paul's School, and the summer he spent at his place in Vermont, where he enjoyed taking guests for a spin on Lake Champlain in his 1957 Chris-Craft mahogany runabout.

Bill often expressed his debt to Prof. Thomas Wertenbaker, whose courses in American history he took as an undergraduate, for having generated an interest in Colonial and Revolutionary history that became a major hobby. He was a past president of the Missouri Society of the Sons of the American Revolution and a natl. trustee representing Missouri. In 1960 he was awarded the S.A.R.'s gold Citizenship Award for "outstanding service." In Vermont he served on the advisory board of the Ft. Ticonderoga Assn. and became involved in what was the most important historical restoration in the area.

Bill was unmarried. There are no immediate survivors.

The Class of 1934

Thornton Lewis Jr. '35

THE REVEREND THORNTON LEWIS JR., retired United Methodist minister, died of cancer in Minneapolis, Minn., Dec. 28, 1989. Rev. Lewis was pastor emeritus of the Grand Rapids, Minn., church, and had worked part time as a supply minister at Hill City/Swatara and Kelly Lake, Minn. He was a member of the Florida Conference of the United Methodist Church, having moved to Minnesota following retirement.

Thornton left Princeton in Feb. of freshman year. He is survived by his wife, Darlilyn Lewis; three sons, Todd, Jonathan, and Jeffery, and one daughter-in-law, to whom goes the sympathy of the Class.

The Class of 1935

Benson B. Sloan Jr. '37

FRIENDLY, VIVACIOUS, INVETERATE REUNER Ben Sloan died of heart failure Oct. 29, 1990.

At Groton he was on the crew, debated, and was cheer leader. At Princeton he was on the freshman crew, majored in English, and was in Colonial Club.

Ben started as an investment analyst with City Bank Farmers before almost five years in the Army, starting as a private and ending up a captain. At Mather Field, Calif., as a Flying Cadet, he won his wings and became a lieutenant and navigator. Then came the South Pacific with the 435th Bomb Squadron in New Guinea, Papua, and the Solomons, participating in B-17 forays on enemy shipping lines and such Japanese strongholds as Rabaul. He was cited for meritorious achievement for over 100 missions, Sept.-Nov. 1942, and received the Air Medal with cluster and a Presidential Citation with cluster. His last assignment was as an air and radar inspector at Clovis, N.M., where he met and married Virginia Stephens in July 1945.

Ben's business career was as a highly successful stockbroker with Harris Upham, where he became a partner in 1954. He retired to Tequesta, Fla. in 1965.

Ben III arrived in 1947 and Stephanie in 1952, and later producing six grandchildren.

The Class of 1937

Joseph H. J. Applegate '39

WHILE DRIVING home to Pennington after a visit to Atlantic City in late July, Joe suffered a stroke. He was taken back to Atlantic City Medical Center, where he died Aug. 1, 1990. Joe's career was in design and engineering. After his retirement from the Homosote Corp. of Trenton, he continued his membership in the Engineers Club of Trenton, with which he was affiliated for 37 years, 19 of those years as executive secretary and director. He was also a member of the Trinity Episcopal Cathedral. In retirement Joe traveled widely and also took great pleasure in watching his family progress.

Joe is survived by his friend Virginia Tafta, who was with him at the time of his fatal stroke; his son, Edward; two sisters, Mildred Morgan and Doris Altemus; and two grandsons, Edward and William. We share their loss and offer them our deep sympathy.

The Class of 1939

Jacques Bramhall Jr. '39

JACK DIED July 2, 1990, at Morristown Memorial Hospital after a long illness. Happily, he had been well enough a month earlier to attend the Princeton graduation of his grandson Jacques IV '90. We have a photo of him saluting the cap-and-gowned graduate with happy pride. We recall him in our 50th P-rade, his wheelchair propelled by that same Jacques IV, with a loving family marching along, among them Jacques III '67, granddaughter Catherine '92, and, of course, wife Betsy Jane.

Until his retirement Jack had been public affairs director of the eastern division of the N.A.M. for 18 years, capping his long career as a public relations executive. A citizen of Morristown since 1922, he was an outstanding civic leader: trustee of MacCulloch Hall Historical Museum and the Washington Assn. of N.J., member of St. Peter's Episcopal Church, volunteer for Meals on Wheels, and a trustee of the Community Correctional Council, through which he was a volunteer tutor to Morris City Jail inmates.

To Betsy Jane, daughters Jane and Frances, sons Jacques III and Geoffrey, eight grandchildren, sister Frances, and brother George, we offer our sincere condolences.

The Class of 1939

Fitzhugh Green '40

WITH THE DEATH of Fitz Green at Newport, R.I., Sept. 5, 1990, the Class has lost a successful and unusual member. Constant inquiry, ready wit and humor, and continual stand out for answers to great problems of our times stand out in Fitz's thinking, writing, and actions.

Businessman, bomb disposal naval officer, unruffled Foreign Service officer in dicey situations, Republican candidate for Congress, U.N. staff officer, media and propaganda scholar, governmental consultant, environmental administrator, and author are a few of Fitz's roles. At the time of his death he was busy adding a sequel to his most recent book, GEORGE BUSH: AN INTIMATE PORTRAIT.

From St. Paul's School, Fitz was a devoted crewman all through college and at our recent 50th reunion rowed in the 1940 boat. He majored in English, roomed four years with Joe DuBarry, and was a member of Colonial Club. Fitz is survived by his daughter, Penelope; sister, Elizabeth Blue; and brother, Richard; who have the sincere sympathy of the Class. And so farewell to a friend and classmate whose final words to 1940 were, "Reviewing the past and drawing from it can be the crowning entertainment of our short run from Princeton to the great graduate school in the sky."

The Class of 1940

William Allen Bittel '41

BILL BITTEL, who was born Dec. 18, 1919, passed away at home in Monmouth Beach, N.J., Sept. 9, 1990, after a long illness.

Bill prepared for Princeton at the Hackley School in Tarrytown, leaving college at the beginning of sophomore year to join the advertising firm Kenyon & Eckhardt. In July 1940 he married Anne Pettit, sister of 1941's William D. Pettit.

Drafted into the Army in April 1944, Bill served with the First Division in the European Theater and fought gallantly as a R and I platoon leader in Hurtgen Forest, the Battle of the Bulge, and the Rhineland campaign. After the war he joined Knox Gelatin in Johnstown, N.J. He devoted his many talents to that company for most of his career, rising to senior V.P. of marketing and then V.P. of sales. Electing early retirement in 1978, Bill formed a special foods consulting firm. During this period Bill and Anne lived in Englewood, N.J. After Anne died in 1983, Bill lived in several places before finally moving to Monmouth Beach.

Bill Bittel loved Princeton and kept a host of friends from there for his entire life. He is survived by three sons: Michael, Bruce, and Steven; and by three grandchildren. To all of them, and particularly to his brother-in-law Bill Pettit, we extend our deep sympathy.

The Class of 1941

Irwin Albert Lewis '43

BUD DIED Aug. 18, 1990, at the Glendale Adventist Medical Center of liposarcoma, a form of cancer. He was 68. A graduate of Great Neck (L.I.) High School, he was a member of Charter Club while on campus. During WWII he served as a navigator in the U.S. Air Force, flying many missions over The Hump in the China-Burma-India theater.

Bud's career in business encompassed several forms of communications. He began in the Armed Forces Radio Network in West Germany, then turned from the spoken to the written word with United Press International. He later joined NBC as a writer for the original "Today" show with Dave Garroway. In 1966, Bud took charge of polling for NBC News, and in 1969 was made manager of election analysis. He first used the "exit poll," as it came to be known, to produce accurate election day forecasts of winners and losers. From 1979 until his death, Bud acted as director of the L.A. TIMES Poll.

He is survived by his wife, the former Allison Cummings; four daughters, Tracy, Allison, Catherine, and Jennifer; and a sister, Mrs. Robert Nelson. To the entire family we offer our most heartfelt condolences.

The Class of 1943

Thomas Patton Baird '45 '50

WHEN TOM BAIRD died of a sudden heart attack in Hartford, Conn., Mar. 28, 1990, the Class lost a member whose abilities, like his friendships, covered an exceptionally wide range.

Tom came to Princeton from Omaha. From V-12 he entered Naval service in the Pacific. After the war, he returned to Princeton to graduate as a history major. After a year in France, he returned again to Princeton to receive his M.F.A. degree from the Dept. of Art and Archaeology and teach in that dept. for several years. Tom was connected with the Frick Collection in N.Y., the Natl. Gallery of Art, Dumbarton Oaks, as associate director. In 1970 he joined the Dept. of Art History at Trinity College, Hartford, where he remained until retirement in 1989.

Meanwhile, Tom turned to writing fiction. Beginning with TRUMPAL ENTRY, he published ten novels, the best known being LOSING PEOPLE and VILLA APHRODITE. He also published four novels for young adults.

Tom was a genial and witty person—a civilized bachelor who loved dogs, hiking, music, and good food and wine to accompany conversation with his many friends.

Tom is survived by his sister, Mrs. Truman Morsman, to whom the Class extends its heartfelt sympathy.

The Class of 1945

Thomas Leicester Raleigh Jr. '50

THE CLASS and Princeton suffered a profound loss with the death of Tom Raleigh Sept. 16, 1990, after a stroke. As president of the Class from 1985 to 1990, Tom culminated a lifetime of service and dedication to many facets of Princeton life, including the establishment of a scholarship for future undergraduates.

Tom came to Princeton in 1946 from Andover, following a year in the Navy. He played varsity basketball, captained the tennis team, and belonged to Cap & Gown. In 1951 he received an M.B.A. at Syracuse and married Ann McChesney. After two years at Armstrong Cork he started a long and highly successful career at Price Waterhouse, retiring in 1988 as co-chairman and deputy senior partner.

Tennis has been a Raleigh family tradition for three generations, starting with his father, Tom '19. Tom served it well as president of the Friends of Princeton Tennis, of the New England Youth Tennis Foundation, of New England Lawn Tennis Assn., of Longwood Cricket Club, and as chairman of its U.S. Pro Tennis Tournament. He was highly ranked in New England tennis for many years, including No. 1 ranking in father-and-son doubles with son Tom. On retiring from Price Waterhouse, he moved to Jaffrey, N.H., where he joined the board of directors of YANKEE magazine.

In addition to Ann, Tom is survived by sons Tom '76 and John '82, daughters Katherine Thigpen and Nancy Van Siden '78, and five grandchildren. To all of them the Class extends its deepest sympathy.

The Class of 1950

Hugh Hamilton Wilson '50

HUGH WILSON died April 26, 1990. After a teaching career in English, which had taken him from the Univ. of Wisconsin, to Rutgers, to Wagner College on State Island, he had recently lived in Sherman, Conn. Before getting his Ph.D. at Wisconsin in the mid-1950s Hugh worked for Prentice-Hall and McGraw-Hill in N.Y.

While Hugh started with us in 1946 from Newman High School in New Orleans, he graduated in 1951 due to a year in the Navy. He was a member of Tower Club and was active in Triangle and Theatre Intime. The '50 NASSAU HERALD listed his future as an actor, but teaching students seemed to provide a good substitute where he could put his wit and stage presence to good use.

The Class extends its sympathy to his widow, Phyllis.

The Class of 1950

James Murray Anderregg '51

JIM DIED Oct. 9, 1990. For 27 years he had lived with and fought multiple sclerosis.

His painting, "Late Fall Practice," which he produced as a sophomore, made him famous throughout the country to generations of rowers. Indeed, over the last 47 years more than 7,000 copies were sold, with the buyer's college colors on the oar blades.

Jim was born in Chestnut Hill, Penn., and came to Princeton from the Hun School. He had spent almost three years in WWII as a boatswain's mate on LSTs in the Southwest Pacific.

At Princeton Jim majored in architecture, was a member of Colonial Club, a varsity oarsman, and art editor of the NASSAU HERALD.

Architecture, art, and boats were Jim's life and livelihood. After ten years as a salesman of architectural products, he formed Anderregg, Inc., in Detroit. His Architects' Library Service provided technical information to large architectural/engineering firms. His woodcuts and prints are prized by collectors.

Jim is survived by two sons and a stepdaughter. The Class and his many admirers will miss this courageous and engaging man.

The Class of 1951

John Richards Preston '51

JOHN DIED SUDDENLY Aug. 16, 1990, at his home in Boca Raton, Fla.

He was born in Washington, D.C. He was an artillery officer in the First Marine Division in the Korean War, working with Republic of Korea marines. He was a brand manager at Procter & Gamble for ten years, then a marketing V.P. at S.C. Johnson, Gillette, and Campbell Soup.

John changed careers in 1981 and became a stockbroker, first with Alan Bush Brokerage, then with Gulfstream Financial Associates, both in Boca Raton.

He prepped at Mercersburg Academy. At Princeton he majored in history, was on the editorial boards of the DAILY PRINCETONIAN and the NASSAU SOVEREIGN. He roomed with Chick Deyo and Carl Jacob. John was a member of Charter Club and the swimming team.

Swimming was a lifelong interest. At Mercersburg John was on a nationally ranked relay team, whose record is in the Swimming Hall of Fame in Ft. Lauderdale. He coached his two sons as they grew up. Unlike "dad coaches" in many sports, John's only concern, in his son Keith's words, was that "I do my best . . . sport was a great lesson-teaching activity, not a means of attaining personal glory."

John's precepts of hard work, honesty, and selflessness trailed him throughout his business career. He left many friends and those who live by the examples he set.

John is survived by his widow, Hildegarde, sons Keith and Bruce, and two grandchildren. The Class salutes a remarkable man and an outstanding member.

The Class of 1951

Larry James Loeffler '54 '61

LARRY DIED in Durham, N.C., after a courageous battle against Alzheimer's disease, May 7, 1990, the day after his 58th birthday.

Larry came to Princeton from Beaver Falls, Penn. He graduated from Princeton summa cum laude and Phi Beta Kappa in chemistry. After graduation Larry went to Rochester, N.Y., to work for Kodak. There he met and married Carol Ann Baker, in 1957. Larry earned a Ph.D. in organic chemistry from Princeton in 1961.

Larry had fellowships at the Swiss Federal Institute of Technology and the National Institutes of Health, and spent seven years at Merck, Sharpe & Dohme as a senior chemist, before joining the faculty at U.N.C.-Chapel Hill. He became known for his research in radioimmunoassay techniques, anti-cancer agents, and anti-fibrinolytic agents and was also named "Best Instructor" soon after his arrival. Larry retired as prof. of medicinal chemistry in the School of Pharmacy in July 1987, following diagnosis of his illness.

He faced his affliction with a courage that was an inspiration to his colleagues, family, and friends, and with the special care of his wife, Carol.

In addition to Carol, Larry is survived by two sons, Matthew '84 and Michael (U.N.C. '86); a daughter-in-law Anna; and a granddaughter Adelyn Michele. The Class shares this profound loss and extends its deepest sympathy to his family and friends.

The Class of 1954

Henry Thomas Heald II '56

HENRY DIED of heart complications in Miami, Fla., Oct. 7, 1990. He was born Dec. 9, 1933, in Grand Rapids, Mich., and grew up in Scarsdale, N.Y. An honors graduate from Deerfield Academy, Henry majored in sociology at Princeton. During his junior year, Henry changed his name from Leo Jiranek Jr., taking the name of his maternal grandfather.

After graduation and a brief career at Waste King Corp., Henry earned his Ph.D. in sociology from USC. He taught at the Univ. of New Zealand and at the Univ. of St. Thomas until health problems caused him to stop. Henry was an avid sailor throughout his life and sailed extensively in the Pacific.

Henry is survived by his mother, Alice Heald Updike, and his two brothers, Robert Jiranek '52 and James Jiranek '55. To all of them the Class extends its sympathy.

The Class of 1956

Richard Louie '60

"Dick" LOUIE is gone. He came to us from Lakewood, Oh., and majored in economics, joining Quadrangle Club and later, Wilson Lodge, and he roomed with Bob Tellander. On Oct. 7, 1990, Richard Louie, 51, associate director of the Smithsonian Institution's Arthur M. Sackler and Freer Art Galleries, died of injuries he had received when struck by a car. An authority on the Far East, Dick joined the Smithsonian in 1978, as assistant director of the Freer, which is internationally known for its Asian art collection. He was directing construction and renovation projects now under way at the Freer, scheduled for reopening in 1992. During his years with the galleries, he had worked in financial management, fund-raising, and personal matters. He also edited catalogs for museum exhibitions.

Following Princeton, Dick earned master's degrees in Far Eastern studies and in economics at the Univ. of Washington. He studied the Chinese language at the Inter-University Program for Chinese Studies in Taipei in 1963 and 1964. Before moving to the Smithsonian, he worked as a research economist with the Institute for Defense Analyses in Arlington and in private industry in Tokyo and N.Y.C. He had been a principal economist with the U.S. Postal Service.

Dick is survived by his wife, Katherine Preciado; his mother, Gam B. Louie; two sisters, Maie Lin Carrell and Sue Fay King; and his "spiritual brother," Bob Tellander, who was best man at his wedding. To all of them, the Class of 1960 extends its condolences.

The Class of 1960

H. Harris Funkenstein '61

THE CLASS of 1961 lost one of its most beloved and respected members when Dr. H. Harris Funkenstein died in a drowning accident May 4, 1990, at Miami Beach.

Born in Jacksonville, Fla., Harris was a Natl. Merit Scholar from Newton (Mass.) High School, graduated summa cum laude from Princeton in philosophy, and received a Rhodes Scholarship to Oxford. He graduated from Harvard Medical School in 1967, and joined its staff in 1975, after finishing neurological training at Mass. General Hospital.

Harris was a principal investigator in an important study on the prevalence of Alzheimer's disease. Indeed, his last days were spent discussing the disease at a professional meeting in Florida.

At the time of his death he was on the staff of Brigham and Women's Hospital, a director of the Learning Disabilities Clinic at Children's Hospital, and an associate professor of neurology at Harvard Medical School. As a teacher of neurology, he was much beloved and esteemed by students and residents.

His family, friends, colleagues, and patients will keenly miss Harris's warmth, gentleness, wisdom, and good cheer. To his wife, Karen, his daughter, Amy, his brother, Dr. Daniel L. '64, and his parents, Dr. Daniel H. and Hannah Bessie Funkenstein, we extend our deepest sympathies.

The Class of 1961

The Madison Blues: What Can Account For Princeton's Worship of Wilson?

JAMES MADISON 1771 has gotten a raw deal from his alma mater. Indeed, Princeton's treatment of the Father of the Constitution seems downright criminal when compared to the glorification accorded to the other alumnus who became President of the United States, the overrated and uptight Woodrow Wilson 1879. It's high time the university rehabilitated Madison and purged Wilson.

Heresy, you say? Discard your orange-and-black blinders for a moment, and take a long, hard look at the accomplishments of these two famous Americans. On the one hand, we have Madison. He was instrumental in framing the Constitution and getting it ratified. (Remember the Tenib Federalist?) He was a member of the Continental Congress and the U.S. Congress, was Thomas Jefferson's secretary of state, served two terms as President, and, late in life, served as the first president of Princeton's alumni association. Granted, the War of 1812 was a bit of a bore, but it's about the only blot on Madison's copybook.

Now let's look at Wilson. At Princeton, he was outmaneuvered by Andrew Fleming West 1874, the first dean of the Graduate School, on the location and size of the Graduate College, and his anti-club "Quad Plan" for undergraduates was squashed by alumni. He served only two years as governor of New Jersey before he was elected President. To be sure, his public career was marked by the enactment of a number of progressive measures, but he lost the most important fight of all when the Senate rejected the Versailles Treaty. By all accounts, Wilson was stubborn, inflexible, and uncompromising.

And yet consider the ways in which Princeton has honored its pair of presidents. As you can see, the ledger is clearly balanced in favor of Wilson.

Wilsoniana: Woodrow Wilson Lodge (later the Wilson Society and now Wilson College, which includes the Wilson Theatre); the Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs; Woodrow Wilson Hall (renamed Corwin Hall after Minoru Yamasaki built the Shinto-Grecian Gothic edifice now called Robertson Hall to house the Wilson School); Woodrow Wilson Plaza (facing the aforesaid building); and the Woodrow Wilson Award (the university's highest honor for an undergraduate alumnus). A full-length portrait of Wilson hangs in the Faculty Room of Nassau Hall, and a sculpted bust sits in the lobby of the Wilson School.

Madisoniana: James Madison Hall (previously part of the complex known as Commons, now the student lounge of Rockefeller College); the James Madison Society (a defunct university-sponsored alternative to the clubs); the James Madison Medal (the university's highest honor for an alumnus of the Graduate School, created ten years after the Wilson Award); the James Madison Preceptor (one of ten Bicentennial Preceptorships); and the James Madison Professor of Political Economy (who, naturally, teaches in the Wilson School). There's a small but nice portrait of Madison in Maclean House, although few people have seen it.

James Madison
1771

What's most remarkable about this comparison is that Madison's influence seems to have waned as Wilson's has waxed. Every day, Wilson's name is heard on the campus: students live in Wilson College, or study at the Wilson School, or frolic in the Wilson Plaza fountain. Meanwhile, Madison has sunk almost completely out of sight. A decade ago, you'd have heard "Madison" more frequently, because Madison Hall was the part of Commons that served hamburgers and hot dogs at lunch every day. (A cruel joke, in my opinion, to play on the Father of the Constitution.) But with the establishment of residential colleges for all underclassmen, both Madison Hall and the Madison Society vanished from the undergraduate lexicon.

Is this some insidious plot? What can possibly account for Princeton's worship of Wilson and maligning of Madison?

Permit me to advance some theories that may account for the disparity.

Football: As a student, Wilson was too small to play on the team, but he served as secretary of the Football Association, raised funds in support of it, and helped coach the players, who competed, he wrote in The Daily Princetonian, with a "gentlemanly spirit." In the fall of his senior year, the team was undefeated, tallying its most victories in a season (six) to that time. The only sport available to poor Madison was debating on behalf of the American Whig Society.

Rhetoric: Wilson was great on the stump. Probably more alumni recognize "Princeton in the Nation's Service" than the Fourteen Points. Of course, Wilson's rhetoric rarely produced the results it promised, like making the world safe for democracy. Similarly, his widely hailed preceptorial method was less a democratizing innovation to improve the education of students than a means of sloughing off the burden of teaching undergraduates onto "preceptor guys" (the original overworked T.A.s). Madison, a more retiring type, took lots of notes instead of making grand orations.

Wordiness: This point flows logically from Wilson's rhetorical prowess. The Papers of Woodrow Wilson, published by Princeton University Press, has filled sixty-three volumes—and that's only through 1919. By contrast, The Papers of James Madison, published by the University Press of Virginia, has consumed only about twenty (although the Presidential years are to come). The squeaky wheel gets the grease.

Timing: In 1920, at the end of his Presidency, Wilson was in the public doghouse, on account of his failure to convince the Senate to ratify the Versailles Treaty. Princeton's Wilson cult didn't really get started until after the Second World War, when his internationalist policies had been vindicated by history. This vindication coincided with the university's tremendous postwar expansion, when lots of new things needed names.

Madison was Princeton's first graduate student. Need I say more?

—David Williamson '84

David Williamson, formerly PAW's staff writer, neither lived in Wilson College nor graduated from the Wilson School.

The Question of Cost

Last month I had the opportunity to address the National Academy of Engineering about issues concerning the two-way relationship between the research university and the economy. This page is adapted from those remarks.—H.T.S.

One of the most vexing issues facing college and university administrators today is the cost of higher education. In contemplating this concern, I am reminded of John Maynard Keynes's comment, "Only one man in a thousand understands the currency question, and I meet him every day." The same thing can be said about college costs, an issue that currently has the potential to erode both public sympathy and political support for higher education.

Harold T. Shapiro

In this arena, only three "facts" seem clear: the costs of higher education have risen faster than the rate of inflation for at least a century; the interpretation of such a statistic is very difficult and usually muddled; and, the voices for cost control also demand an ever-expanding set of new services. We are expected to help solve the teaching crisis in America, respond to countless new regulations, restore the nation's economic leadership, ensure students' emotional welfare, and find cures for numerous diseases. While all of these are worthwhile goals, this expanding set of responsibilities is also costly.

Indeed, similar questions, concerns, confusions, and misunderstandings affect large areas of the increasingly important service sector of the economy. Because this sector does not produce physical products, it is often difficult to define output carefully and, therefore, to determine whether rapidly increased costs reflect vastly improved products or the lagging efficiency of the sector as a whole.

Regarding health services, for example, we are understandably interested in knowing if the rapidly increasing costs are caused by inefficiency, a focus on individual disease rather than public health, the market power of physicians, and an irrational system of third party finance, or, alternatively, are the result of society's wish to enjoy higher and higher quality health services made possible by the many startling developments in biomedical science and technology. Many observers are posing a similar set of questions regarding higher education: Do increasing costs reflect an enhanced and more valuable contribution to society, or do they reflect the inevitable tendency of relatively stagnant (in productivity terms) service industries to become more and more costly?

If society assumes the latter, we must face the possibility that its members may eventually choose a lower cost and/or more effective producer of education and research should one appear. To return to the health sector analogy, society may decide to respond to increasing medical costs by reallocating resources from "high-tech" tertiary care to health promotion and disease prevention. In the education sector, society could decide to reallocate its educational resources towards K-12 education and child care, or to devote more resources to all education sectors.

Professor William Baumol (Economics) pointed out to me that the postal service provides an interesting historical example. In mid-19th century Britain, postal delivery to urban dwellers hit a frequency of 12 times a day. Since that time, however, a number of developments have taken place, namely: (a) the number of deliveries per day has declined (it is too expensive to demand more); (b) other and more efficient means of transmitting information (for example, telephone, telegraph, computers, fax) have been developed; and (c) new types of specialized services, like Federal Express, have arisen.

This illustrates, in a simple way, the nature of some of the possible choices and/or potential reactions to a service that has become increasingly costly in dollar terms. With respect to higher education, this simple example suggests a number of questions for the coming years. Will more efficient producers arise? Will we need to become more efficient and/or repackage our services? Can advanced education and scholarship become more efficient without lowering quality? Will society actually decide to consume less or more of our particular bundle of services?

I would like to conclude with the thought that, although Princeton's tuition has increased substantially over the last decade, over longer periods of time (that is, most of this century) those increases have averaged only about two to three percentage points higher than overall inflation. In some respects these increases have not been out of line with other cost increases. For example, Princeton's tuition, room, and board in 1970-71 was $3,930; in 1990-91, it was $20,498, an increase of 421 percent over 20 years. But the sticker price of a typical family car—a 1970 Ford Fairlane and its 1990 equivalent—went up nearly the same percentage—400 percent—from around $3,000 to $15,000, and the average charge (in New York City) for an appendectomy increased almost 543 percent, from $280 in 1970 to around $1,800 in 1990.

Nevertheless, this is not a time for complacency with respect to costs. Higher education must do everything it can to contain its appetite for resources to the amounts strictly needed to meet our intellectual and civic responsibilities. This will undoubtedly require some change in the way we do things.

We hope that students—and their parents—won't think of education as a painful operation, but rather, as a valuable contribution to their lives and to society that is, nevertheless, costly to maintain.

"Do increasing costs reflect an enhanced and more valuable contribution to society, or do they reflect the inevitable tendency of . . . service industries to become more costly?"

It takes a special eye to appreciate it.

P E U G E O T
Beyond the obvious.SM

1991 405 models from $15,300 to $21,700.* Call 1-800-447-2882. In Canada 1-416-566-1900. *MSRP. Excludes tax, title, options, registration and destination charges.

How you see the Peugeot 405 S depends on how you look at it.

A glance will probably note the leather seats, but miss the two densities of foam used to eliminate seat springs which transmit road vibration. It might take in the six-speaker anti-theft AM/FM cassette stereo system, but miss the hydraulic-powered anti-lock braking system.

A more discerning eye will see Peugeot's passion for building cars which do not sacrifice any one element for another, but aim to provide the optimum balance of all aspects of the car.

Something which, if you haven't yet experienced, you are certain to appreciate.

PRINCETON
ALUMNI WEEKLY
FEBRUARY 6, 1991

Princeton Comes to California

March 9—Los Angeles

March 10—San Francisco

The Alumni Council and the Princeton Clubs of Northern California and Southern California are pleased to announce two regional conferences this spring. All Princetonians are invited and alumni and parents who reside in California, Arizona, and Nevada will directly receive invitations.

Each conference will feature President Harold T. Shapiro '64, Dean of Admission Fred Hargadon, and two faculty members: Caryl Emerson, who will speak on "The Current Revolution in Russia: Can the Soviet Union Survive?" and Jim Gunn, who will discuss "Mapping the Universe: The New Digital Sky Survey".

These conferences, held annually around the country, emphasize the role of Princeton's regional alumni associations and clubs: to help identify and recruit students through the schools committees; sponsor activities for alumni and parents; and raise money for Annual Giving. During the 1989-90 academic year, University representatives visited more than 70 associations and clubs, thus helping Princeton continue to be a presence throughout the country and world.

We encourage you to get involved with your local association or club. Listed to the right are the names of our California, Arizona, and Nevada club presidents. For further information on activities in these regions, please contact them directly. For information on other associations and clubs, please call Jim Jacobs, Assistant Director of the Alumni Council, at 609-258-5816, or write c/o: The Alumni Council, John Maclean House, Box 291, Princeton, NJ 08544-0291.

PC of Northern California (San Francisco area)

Paul E. Martin '80

B: 415-955-1640

H: 415-731-9829

Orange County PC

George T. Kearns III '52

B: 714-863-9400

H: 714-939-1629

PC of Southern California (Los Angeles area)

Peter F. Bastone '80

B: 213-201-6609

H: 213-470-6901

PAA of the Tri-County Area (Santa Barbara)

Richard D. Scheinberg '71

B: 805-682-1394

PAA of Northern Arizona (Phoenix)

Joel P. Hoxie '71

B: 602-257-7264

H: 602-840-7752

PC of Tucson

Christopher P. Demas '77

B: 602-323-7108

H: 602-529-0770

PAA of Nevada

C. Elizabeth Raymond '74 (Schools Chair)

H: 702-747-3608

Alumni
Princeton

Council
University

Digitized by Google

PRINCETON

ALUMNI WEEKLY

CONTINUING THE ALUMNI PRINCETONIAN, FOUNDED IN 1894

FEATURES

- 8 TEACHING FOR AMERICA
Wendy Kopp '89 Has Created a National Teacher Corps to Bring College Graduates into Public-School Classrooms
by Lydia Denworth '88

- 12 OF SQUIDS AND KIDS
Teachers and Children Benefit from Campus Summer Programs
by Justin Harmon '78

DEPARTMENTS

- 2 LETTERS

- 4 PRINCETON NOTEBOOK
War in the Persian Gulf Hits Home at Princeton

- 7 ON THE CAMPUS
Women "Unlearn" Conventional Behavior Through Self-Defense Courses
by Gayle Wald GS

- 15 BOOKS

- 17 SPORTS
Men's Hockey Strives to Rewrite Script; Marcoux Sets Tone for Women Skaters

- 23 CLASS NOTES

- 38 MEMORIALS

- 40 FIRST PERSON
Inner-City High School Educates the Teacher, Too
by Daniel Porter '88

PRINCETON

On the Cover

The Gulf War, which broke out on the first day of fall-term exams, has affected the campus as it has the nation. Graphic by Stacy M. Wszola.

FROM THE ARCHIVES

In 1960, Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr., whose birthday the campus celebrated on January 14, preached in the Princeton Chapel. At breakfast in the Chancellor Green Student Center, the chapel deacons had an opportunity to meet the famed civil-rights leader. The Reverend Ernest Gordon, then dean of the chapel, recalls King's "clear, ringing voice" as he spoke from the pulpit about "the nature of love as outgoing, reaching out, breaking out of the prison of the self." Can readers identify the deacons?

NEWARK NEWS PHOTO COURTESY OF ERNEST GORDON

J. I. MERRITT '66, Editor

ANDREW C. MYTELKA '85, Managing Editor
NUALA O'CONNOR '89, Associate Editor

STACY M. WSZOLA, Art Director
R. T. HOWELL, Production Manager
LORRAINE DONEKER, Graphic Assistant

NANCY S. MACMILLAN, Business Manager
LOLLY O'BRIEN, Advertising Director

BOARD OF EDITORIAL DIRECTION
EDWARD R. WIDLEIN '68, Chairman
LISA B. BELKIN GELB '82 • CHRISTOPHER V. CONNELL '71
LONDON Y. JONES '66 • ELLIOTT D. LEE '74 '77
PATRICIA H. MARKS '72 • JOHN A. MCPHEE '53

PUBLICATION BOARD
DOROTHY L. BEDFORD '78, Chairman
ROBERT K. DURKEE '69 • ROBY HARRINGTON III '51
WALTER H. LIPPINCOTT, JR. '60 • PETER O. PRICE '62
PETER G. SMITH '46 • DANIEL N. WHITE '65

NATIONAL ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVE

ROBERT F. SENNOTT, JR.
Ivy League Magazine Network
254 Fifth Ave., New York, NY 10001 • (212) 684-5603

LOCAL ADVERTISING/PRINCETON EXCHANGE

LOLLY O'BRIEN (609) 258-4886

The Princeton Alumni Weekly is an independent magazine supported by alumni class subscriptions and by paid advertising. Its purpose is to record news of the alumni and at the same time to review without partiality the achievements and problems of the administration, the faculty, and the student body of Princeton University. The views expressed in the Alumni Weekly are those of signed contributors or the editor and do not necessarily represent official positions of the university.

PUBLISHED BY

PRINCETON UNIVERSITY PRESS
41 William St., Princeton, NJ 08540
Telephone (609) 258-4885
TWX 510-685-2306 UNIV PRESS PRIN • Fax (609) 258-6305

ELECTRONIC PAW BBS: (609) 258-3602

Materials can be transmitted to our offices via telecommunications, using the upload facility in the file-transfer section of the Electronic PAW computer bulletin board system. Its protocols are 300/1200/2400 baud, eight data bits, one stop bit, and no parity. It is online 24 hours a day.

PRINCETON ALUMNI WEEKLY (ISSN 0149-9270)

Vol. 91, No. 9, February 6, 1991
Printed by William Byrd Press, Richmond, Va. Annual subscription $19.50 (foreign postage $5 extra); single copies $1.50. All orders must be paid in advance. Copyright © 1991 Princeton University Press. All rights reserved. Reproduction in whole or in part without permission is prohibited. Second-class postage paid at Princeton, N.J., and at additional mailing office.

POSTMASTER: Send address changes to PAW Address Changes, 3175 Princeton Pike, Lawrenceville, NJ 08648.

Coping with Global Change

In the December 19 PAW, President Shapiro writes with pride of his service as a member of the President's Council of Advisers on Science and Technology (PCAST). Yet it is sad to see the president of our university so coopted by one of the dishonesties of the Bush Administration.

In the area of "global change," President Shapiro notes the formation of a panel "to learn more about its nature and impact." This, of course, is a code phrase the administration uses to disguise an unwillingness to take any action against global warming. I'm sure that the "hard" scientists on PCAST could inform Mr. Shapiro that more than enough is now known about global warming to justify action in an area that most of the world considers a settled issue.

President Shapiro does add that global change is "a highly controversial area where much remains to be learned, but where policy actions need to be taken before all the necessary information is fully understood." May I respectfully suggest that the controversy lies in our president's area of expertise, economics—specifically the economics of the bottom line for many of President Bush's political supporters, particularly some of his Texas oil buddies.

True, we don't have enough information—we never will! But we've got to make a ruddy good go of it on the basis of what we do know. I wish President Shapiro and his PCAST colleagues all the luck in the world in bringing President Bush, kicking and screaming, into the last decade of the twentieth century.

LAURENCE DAWSON '42
Los Altos Hills, Calif.

Gays and the Military

In his letter in the December 19 PAW protesting the military's ban of gays and lesbians, John A. Eakes '75 urges that Princeton ban R.O.T.C. I do not.

After returning from Vietnam in 1969, I was assigned to an air-defense missile unit. At an NCO party, I had to leave the table when the staff sergeant in charge of intelligence put his hand on my knee and made unwanted overtures. Not wishing to jeopardize his career, I asked my sergeant major what one ought to do in such a case. He explained that inappropriate sexual behavior in public could expose an individual to blackmail or extortion, and thus possibly lead to the compromise of classified materials and the endangering of others. So I told him who was involved, and a check of the staff sergeant's records showed previous instances of behavioral problems. He was reassigned, supposedly after receiving some counseling.

If everyone behaved in socially appropriate ways toward others, there might be no need for discriminatory bans. Or for militaries.

Let I be accused of homophobia, I might add that a close friend at Princeton was a homosexual. (I won't say "gay," because his homosexuality brought him so much pain and anguish.) And yes, in those pre-AIDS days, we did once have a kind of sexual intercourse. I found it a curious experience, and one that held no further appeal for me.

The value in "taking a stand against bigotry and discrimination" is clear. But unrealistic stands can also be just as self-righteous as the claim that homosexuals could change their sexual orientation if they only wanted to.

PHILIP BLACKMARR '67
Pasadena, Calif.

John A. Eakes '75 criticizes the university for not banning R.O.T.C. in response to the clamor of a small group of homosexuals, whom he refers to as "gays." In my opinion, the university in recent years has leaned over backward in giving in to minority groups, and I see no reason to go any further.

Mr. Eakes bases his criticism on the grounds that the military will not knowingly permit homosexuals to serve. As a retired Army colonel, I know that the exigencies of military service require that its personnel be composed of healthy, normal individuals, capable of working and living together in a very open type of life. Homosexuals may be as healthy as anyone else, but they are certainly not normal, and their lifestyle would not be compatible with military life. For this reason, I do not believe that many homosexuals would wish to join the military.

Mr. Eakes also claims that, in spite of the ban, "10 percent of the military . . . is most certainly gay." After many years in the regular Army, most of it on troop duty, I would make an educated guess that the number of homosexuals in military service does not exceed 1 percent and is probably less. I am, of course, guessing, but my guess is based on observation and experience over a long period.

RICHARD D. SMITH '27
Sarasota, Fla.

Tiger Basketball

In his preview of Princeton's basketball season (PAW, December 19), writer David Williamson '84 tarred Sports Illustrated, along with Time and CBS-TV, with the brush of ignorance for having taken twenty-three years to "discover" Pete Carril. Had Mr. Williamson looked back at our issue of January 2, 1978, he would have found a rather long profile of Carril, titled "Blue-Collar Coach in a Button-Down League." Interestingly, in what I

John F. Kennedy at Princeton

The letter in the December 5 PAW on John F. Kennedy at Princeton caught my eye because I was certain our file on Kennedy here in the University Archives indicated that Princeton was the initiator in dropping him from its alumni rolls. Sure enough, I found a letter dated August 20, 1946, from Frederick L. "Bud" Redpath '39, the class's secretary, to Donald W. Griffin '23, the secretary of the Graduate Council (as the Alumni Council was then known), asking that Kennedy's name be removed. The letter reads in part, "I am under the impression that John F. Kennedy was at Princeton for a few weeks only in the fall of 1935. Although theoretically a member of the Class of 1939, he has never maintained an active interest in Class affairs—or, to the best of my knowledge, Princeton affairs. He transferred to Harvard after leaving Princeton, and graduated from there."

As a courtesy, Redpath wrote Kennedy several months later that, unless he wished otherwise, his name would be removed from the class roll. Kennedy responded, "While I will always have a very tender spot in my heart for old Nassau, the fact that I spent most of my college time at Harvard prevents me from dipping the crimson banner. I am sure that it would be much more appropriate for the Class Committee to have only those whose sole interest is in Princeton listed on its roster. Thus, I would reluctantly ask you to drop my name from the 1939 Class Roll."

The file also contains a really great Christmas card sent out by Kennedy and his roommates, Ralph Horton, Jr. '39, and K. LeMoyné Billings '39, in 1935. The greeting is taken from Fred As-

We're puttin' on our top hat,
Tyin' up our white tie,
Brushin' off our tails.

In order to Wish you

A Merry Christmas

Rip. Term. Ken.

taire's hit movie of that year, Top Hat, lyrics and music by Irving Berlin.

BEN PRIMER
University Archivist
Princeton, N.J.

consider a tribute to Pete's consistency and writer Kent Hannon's perceptiveness, the piece, save a few outdated stats, could be reprinted today and ring dead true.

B. PETER CARRY '64
Executive Editor, Sports Illustrated
New York, N.Y.

As an alumna of the women's basketball team, I found the cover line of the December 19 PAW both misleading and sexist. There is no question that the men's team is noteworthy and that Pete Carril is a great coach. But "Ivy League basketball" does not mean only men's basketball. If you are not going to acknowledge the existence of the women's team, at least be honest about it.

SARAH TANTILLO '87
Cambridge, Mass.

American Art

Your article in the December 5 PAW about John Wilmerding and the courses he teaches in American art was enlightening to those of us who graduated a half-century ago, and whose art-history courses ended with Cézanne and the Cubists. The only faculty member I recall with an interest in American art was Professor of History Clifton R. "Beppo" Hall, who collected the paintings of Charles Burchfield. It also comes as a surprise that a professor is also part of an important museum.

THOMAS F. GIBSON, JR. '42
Indianapolis, Ind.

EDITOR'S NOTE: Although John Wilmerding holds Princeton's first endowed professorship in American art, he is by no means the first member of the faculty to teach that subject. Beginning in the 1930s, Donald D. Egbert's courses in American art and architecture widely influenced the study of these subjects in this country.

Club Life

One drizzly and miserable evening in the spring of 1952, I walked down Prospect Avenue seeking admission to a Princeton eating club. As a hardship case at Princeton, I was quite paranoid about my chances. A committee was busy reviewing my case at Campus Club, so I had two hours to walk around in the rain. As I walked past the sacred entrance to Ivy Club, I decided to walk in. I was met by a very pleasant silence, so after a few furtive glances, I walked out. Fortunately, Campus Club took me off the street, and my career has progressed nicely.

Now that Ivy is no longer exclusive, white, blue blood, and dedicated to the male gender, we of the lower strata have lost a social thorn that has stimulated us to do better.

PHILIP D. DIGGDON '54, M.D.
Tulsa, Okla.

My wife, Sandi, and I attended the centennial celebration at Tiger Inn described in your Notebook of November 21. Some of the club members were backhandedly apologetic to Sandi in explaining to her their dedication to the fast-fading notion of freedom of association in private clubs. Sandi said without hesitation, "Don't worry, gentleman. I, as a woman, support you completely." Bully for Sandi! We male chauvinists are not alone.

DAVID M. "ITCHY" JONES '56
Philadelphia, Penn.

Last fall, I entered Ivy Club to meet my beloved, an alumnus. A gentleman inquired politely if he could help me, and when I said that my honey was a member, I was immediately made at home. Waiting upstairs in the library, I finished some research I had brought with me, surrounded by beautiful wood and beautiful young men. I was in heaven. And there wasn't another woman in sight.

Those days are sadly gone. And this was done in the name of equal opportunity? Nonsense! Where's the equal opportunity now? Ivy women will have far greater opportunities than women who aren't members—namely, to get an Ivy man!

COURTNEY N. LEMMON
New York, N.Y.

Royaloffsprington U.

I recently read in The Daily Princetonian that the university has decided to adopt gender-inclusive language. Department chairmen are now "chairs," freshman week is now "orientation week," and so on.

But why give a department chief a title that is the name of an inanimate object—and one that exists to be sat upon, no less? Surely "head" would be a better title, for at least it connotes something that is living and contains a brain.

Obviously we need a more sensible and universal system of gender-inclusive language. I propose what I call the "offspring" system: to change chairman to chairperson will not work because "son" is gender-specific. Therefore, substitute "offspring" for "son." Chairman then becomes the gender-inclusive chairperoffspring. Freshmen become freshpersons, which become freshperoffspring. (Happily, offspring is both singular and plural.) A freshwoman may become either a freshperoffspring or a freshwoperoffspring, depending on whether one prefers the truly gender-neutral or a feminist emphasis. Women can dispense with the inane spelling "womyn" by becoming woperoffspring. Females need not be mere fepersons; they can be feperooffspring. Fellowship becomes peroffspringship, and the manly arts become the peroffspringly arts. If this system were made mandatory (whoops—peroffspringdatory) at the university level, it surely would spread to all huperoffspringity.

Princeton, too, must modernize. A prince is, of course, a royal son. The obvious gender-inclusive new name is Royaloffsprington University. Its main undergraduate degree will no longer be the A.B. but the new A.S.P.—Singleperoffspring of Arts.

Although I make this proposal with tongue firmly in cheek, I almost fear that someone will wish to adopt it.

DIETER BLOSER '66, M.D.
Cleveland Heights, Ohio

PAW welcomes letters on topics of general interest to alumni. We reserve the right to edit for length and clarity. Our address is PAW, 41 William Street, Princeton, NJ 08540.

Exceptional Experiences for Selective Travelers.

Egypt	Ancient.
Greece
Asia Minor
the Aegean	Classical.
Carthage
Central Asia
the Kyber Pass	Mysterious.
India
Nepal
the Himalayas	Oriental.
Japan
Southeast Asia
Java
Borneo	Enigmatic.
Ceylon
Sumatra
South America	Primitive.
the Galapagos
the Amazon
Ancient Civilizations	Vibrant.
the Andes
Australia
New Zealand	Compelling.
New Guinea
Kenya
Tanzania	Exciting.
the Seychelles
Northern Italy
Burgundy	Artistic.
Southwest France
Alsace-Lorraine
the Rhine
the Moselle	Cultural.
Flanders
Scotland
Wales	Historic.

Highly acclaimed itineraries, especially designed for alumni of Princeton, Harvard, Yale, and other distinguished universities. For further information, please contact:

Alumni Flights Abroad

Department PR-171

A.F.A. Plaza

425 Cherry Street

Bedford Hills, New York 10507

TOLL FREE 1-800-AFA-8700

N.Y. State (914) 241-0111

STEWARTSON-DOUGHERTY
Real Estate Associates
366 Nassau Street
Princeton, N.J. 08540
PHONE: 609-921-7784

QUIET WESTERN BORO STREET

Light and airy contemporary boasting a comfortable floor plan. Recently renovated-new roof, thermopane windows, central air conditioning and bath. Recent kitchen. Four bedrooms, 3½ baths. Lovely patio and garden with mature trees and shrubs. This house is a must see! $525,000.

Robert Dougherty '50 Julie Douglas w/'41
Paul Douglas '41 Betsy Stewardson Ford w/'54
Georgia Graham w/'52 J. B. Smith '45
Diane Unruh w/'70 Barbara Broad w/'38
Betty McClelland w/'50 Judy Perrine s/'69

For no obligation—Information about real estate in the Princeton area call (609) 921-7784 or Outside of New Jersey 1-800-542-0067.

REALTORS

Representing Previews Executive HomeSearch

SVC ADMINISTRATOR

The Student Volunteers Council (SVC) seeks an Administrator to support SVC's student directors and volunteers.

Responsibilities include program planning, community relations, volunteer training and fundraising. Candidates should have community service experience and an interest in working closely with students.

This is an exciting opportunity for a young alumnus/a in college administration. Send resume to: D. Johnson, Human Resources, Clio Hall, Princeton University, Princeton, NJ 08544. Deadline: March 1, 1991.

Princeton University

Equal Opportunity / Affirmative Action Employer

Campus Girds for Conflict As U.S. Goes to War

ON WEDNESDAY, January 16—the first day of Operation Desert Storm and the first day of fall-term examinations at Princeton—students found themselves torn between studying and keeping up with events as they unfolded in the Middle East.

University officials characterized the mood of the campus as one of anxiety, confusion, and fear as students struggled with the political and moral issues of war and worried about what impact the hostilities might have on their lives. "I'm trying to study but end up reading the newspapers," Jennifer Zimmermann '93 told the Trenton Times. Said Katherine Eldred GS: "My attention is torn between something that's important for me and something that's important for the whole world."

On Thursday, the day after the allies launched their attack on Iraq, the campus seemed strangely quiet. Firestone Library, which during exam week is normally packed, appeared much less crowded as students stayed glued to TV sets in the clubs, the residential colleges, and their rooms. At noon, about sixty people gathered for an open-mike rally on Firestone Plaza to denounce the war. At 5 P.M., a larger rally on Palmer Square drew about two hundred participants from the town and the university, including about ten counterprotesters who supported the allied action in the Middle East. Some students hung American flags from their dormitory windows, and a banner posted on the exterior of 1938 Hall read, simply, "We support Desert Storm."

Meanwhile, university administrators mobilized to deal with the war's impact on the campus. President Shapiro designated several deans and his assistant, O. Carl Wartenburg, to assist students on war-related matters. "The situation in the Persian Gulf is difficult for all of us, especially for those members of this community who have family or friends directly affected by recent developments," said Shapiro in a prepared statement. "My hope is that the hostilities can be concluded in a way that minimizes casualties on all sides and maximizes prospects for long-term stability in the area."

Dean of the Chapel Joseph C. Williamson scheduled semiweekly peace vigils (5 P.M. Wednesday and 11:45 P.M. Saturday) to last for the duration of the conflict as well as an open meeting in the Chapel at noon on Saturday, January 19, to discuss ways of promoting peace. Denominational chaplains and Williamson's associate and assistant deans counseled students, several of whom called in the middle of the night to express their concerns about the war. "I think students feel shocked and vulnerable, and I think this is a very new feeling," Sue Anne Steffey Morrow, the associate dean of the chapel, told The Daily Princetonian. Wartenburg, a member of the administration during the era of the Vietnam War, said that some of the students he talked to were frightened by events in the Gulf region. "They haven't lived through this sort of thing. Vietnam is just something in the history books for them." He added that officers in the R.O.T.C. program "characterized this as a time of anxiety for the cadets, too. They have all the questions that everyone else has."

In an editorial, the Prince urged the administration to give students unable to study because of the war the option of rescheduling their exams. Associate Dean of the College Richard G. Williams '72 said that some flexibility was being allowed in certain cases.

The university's communications office girded for an onslaught of calls from reporters, who mostly wanted to know if Princeton has students from the Middle East. Among undergraduates, there are four Saudi Arabians, two Kuwaitis, and no Iraqis. One of the Kuwaiti students, the

The day after the allies attacked Iraq, about sixty people protested the war in a rally at Firestone Plaza.

Shrugging Off Stereotypes

ARNOLD RAMPERSAD, the new Woodrow Wilson Professor of Literature and director of the Program in American Studies, lived the fall semester, his first at Princeton, in a kind of limbo. The house he had bought on Stockton Street was being remodeled, and he had to lease another one. Because his office in the English department was also being remodeled, he moved into the American Studies Library, at 43 McCosh Hall. Adorning one wall of his temporary quarters, a W.P.A.-era mural depicts black people toting bales of cotton and performing other tasks associated with a stereotypical image from a time that seems long ago.

Rampersad, who came to Princeton from Columbia University, shrugs off the mural. He has other things on his mind. He will direct American studies for at least three years and this spring is teaching part of the survey course in American literature and a graduate seminar on race and American literature.

He hopes in the future to organize a team-taught course in Southern literature, a subject he taught for the first time last year at Columbia. Hundreds of students turned out at the start of the course, but the crowd soon dwindled. One dropout explained to Rampersad that he and others had lost interest when they realized that the course did not deal with the romanticized South and the Civil War. It was another stereotype to shrug off.

Rampersad has helped to explode other stereotypes. His two-volume biography of Langston Hughes, the foremost poet of the Harlem Renaissance, earned enormous praise in review after review. The consensus: compassionate but clear-eyed, extremely well written, and excellent social history as well as biography. The first volume (1986) was nominated for a National Book Critics Circle award, and the second (1988) was a finalist for a Pulitzer prize.

Rampersad was born and raised in Trinidad, where his father was a newspaperman. As part of what he calls "a nice Victorian education" at a Roman Catholic high school, he learned Latin, French, and Spanish. Like the best grammar schools in Great Britain, this high school gave him the equivalent of a junior-college education. He taught school for a while and then worked in radio journalism. In 1965, when he was twenty-four, he saw a notice in a newspaper that the U.S. Department of State was offering partial scholarships to attend American colleges. Rampersad applied and won a scholarship to Bowling Green State University, in Ohio. "I enjoyed it. It was the most conservative of the Ohio state colleges," he says. "It took me back to the fifties in America."

He majored in English, and after he graduated magna cum laude in two years, he stayed at Bowling Green to do graduate work. His master's thesis became Herman Melville's Israel Potter, published by Bowling Green University Press in 1969. By then, Rampersad was working toward a Ph.D. at Harvard. He had to make up his mind to specialize in either the English Renaissance or American literature. "I decided that it was the phenomenon of 'renaissance' that interested me," he says. "What causes an explosion of creativity in a culture? It could be the Harlem Renaissance as well as the English Renaissance." So he wrote his dissertation on the imaginative work—the fiction and poetry—of W.E.B. Du Bois, the black reformer, editor, and scholar who was active from the 1890s to the early 1960s. An expanded version of the dissertation that also analyzed Du Bois's political writing was published by Harvard University Press and has since been reissued by Pantheon.

After earning his doctorate, Rampersad taught at the University of Virginia for one year and at Stanford for nine. He liked Stanford but missed the East Coast, and when Rutgers offered him a job in 1983, he accepted. At Columbia, where he taught during the 1989-90 academic year, he held an endowed professorship and worked to establish an undergraduate major in American studies. At Princeton, Rampersad is preparing a book of his essays for publication and is helping to edit the works of the novelist Richard Wright, the author of Native Son, for the Library of America. Craven editors eviscerated Wright's strong prose, according to Rampersad, and this new edition will be the first to present his works the way he wrote them.

—Ann Waldron

Rampersad: Hughes biographer

Princeton Alumni Weekly

PRINCETON
ALUMNI WEEKLY

Reaching 56,000
upscale, sophisticated
readers with every issue.

Published more frequently
than any other alumni magazine in the world.

Why advertise with anyone else?

For details please contact:
Ms. Lolly O'Brien/Advertising Director
PRINCETON ALUMNI WEEKLY
41 William Street
Princeton, New Jersey
08540
(609) 258-4886

Grant A. Peacock '46
Kathleen Peacock

GRANT A. PEACOCK Inc.

*Fine Jewelry
Jewel Counselor
Estates Purchased*

Suite 2600
450 Park Avenue at 57th St.
New York, N.Y. 10022

(212) 753-4640

Wanted to Buy

Highest prices paid
for American and European Art,
including paintings, watercolors
and drawings, sculpture and prints
from 18th century to present.
Please contact Stuart P. Feld, '57

Hirsch & Adler
GALLERIES INC.

21 E. 70th St. NY 10021 • (212) 535-8810
Fax: (212) 772-7237

We're 3600 feet closer to Heaven than the sea.

1200-acre estate at 3600 ft. in the Blue Ridge Mtns. Golf. Tennis. Sail.
Fish. Hike. Children's pgms. Gardens.
Amer. plan. Also available: 2 & 3 BR vacation homes with daily maid service.

High Hampton Inn & Country Club

141 Hampton Rd ♦ Cashiers, NC 28717
800-334-2551 Ext. 141 ♦ 704-743-2411

The JOE BROWN Studio announces ...his artistic legacy

Princeton Professor Emeritus Joe Brown created over 400 pieces of sculpture which are found in both private and public collections all over the world. Certified bronze sculptures from original molds are available in limited editions. The studio and gallery is open by appointment only.

The Joe Brown Studio • Timothy Maslyn, Resident Sculptor & Curator
RD 1, Box 122 A
Princeton, NJ 08540
609-921-2868

THE Joe Brown STUDIO

Alumni Off to War in Middle East

FOLLOWING IS a list of alumni known to be serving with the United States forces or working for the news media in the Middle East. Besides these alumni, the U.S.S. Princeton, a guided-missile cruiser attached to the battle group of the aircraft carrier Ranger, is operating in the Persian Gulf.

ARMED FORCES

Capt. Robert C. Schwarze '84, Air Force	2nd Lt. William J. Aheron '88,
1st Lt. John K. Hurley '86, Army	2nd Armored Cavalry
1st Lt. Matthew J. Gantz '87, Marines	2nd Lt. Joseph L. Marshall '88,
1st Lt. Peter W. Huggins '87, Army	Army Engineers
1st Lt. Richard R. Smith '87,	2nd Lt. Gregory S. Morzano '88,
317th Engineering Battalion, Army	2nd Armored Cavalry
1st Lt. Thomas L. Springer '87, Army	2nd Lt. William J. Kilkenny '90,
1st Lt. James M. Hermens '88, Air Force	24th Mechanized Infantry

NEWS MEDIA

R. W. Apple '57, correspondent, The New York Times	Elizabeth B. Boyd '89, associate producer, Jerusalem bureau, Cable News Network
Donald Kirk '59, correspondent, U.S.A. Today son of a high governmental official, has taken a leave of absence and is now in Saudi Arabia, serving as an adviser to the U.S. military. A geographic breakdown of graduate students was not available.

The campus, like the nation itself, seemed divided about the war although not polarized by it. In a poll taken after the Congress authorized President Bush to use military force (but before the outbreak of hostilities), the Prince found that 61 percent of the surveyed students approved of the Congress's action, while 36 percent were opposed. Asked if Bush should wait until the end of January before going to war, 51 percent of the respondents said yes and 49 percent favored a continued reliance on economic sanctions.

But all such questions became academic on the evening of January 16, as word spread that the attack had begun. Katie Phillips '91 may have spoken for many students when she told the Prince, "I have a lot of friends stationed there. I've been worrying about exams and papers, but now, more than anything else, I feel blessed that I'm able to go to school here. I guess it's time for a prayer."

Edgar Gemmell '34 Dies

EDGAR M. GEMMELL '34, a former administrative vice-president of the university, died December 25 at the Princeton Medical Center after a long battle with Parkinson's disease and cancer. He was seventy-nine years old and a resident of Princeton.

Born in New York City, Gemmell attended Phillips Exeter Academy, and after graduating from Princeton he worked for public-relations firms in New York and Baltimore. In 1939, he joined the university administration as secretary of the Princeton University Fund. He was instrumental in the creation of the first Annual Giving campaign, in 1940.

After the United States entered World War II, Gemmell left the university, and as a naval officer he participated in the invasion of France. Following the war, he studied labor management at Yale and later joined E. I. du Pont de Nemours & Co. as a management consultant. He returned to Princeton in 1954 as administrative secretary and in 1959 became administrative vice-president, a position whose responsibilities included fundraising and alumni affairs. He initiated the Princeton Today program in 1956 and the Alumni College program in 1963. At Gemmell's retirement in 1965, then President Robert F. Goheen '40 '48 cited him for his "leadership and creative ability."

Gemmell also served many nonprofit organizations as a fundraising consultant, including Radcliffe, Williams, Sarah Lawrence, and Middlebury colleges, Cornell University, the Massachusetts Institute of Technology, Lincoln Center, the Folger Shakespeare Library, and the United Negro College Fund. In 1976, he joined Alcoholics Anonymous, a group to which he devoted much time and energy. Known to his lifelong friends as "Gem," he took delight in recognizing A.A. friends, who alone called him "Ed." He is survived by his widow, Isabelle McIntyre Gemmell; a sister, Janet Jainschigg; and two stepsons, Alan Agle and Austin P. Sullivan '64. □

Women "Unlearn" Conventional Behavior Through Courses in Self-Defense

"DO IT AGAIN without saying you're sorry!"

Complying with the order, one woman grabs another's arm and pulls her wrist around sharply, until the other exhales a deep ubss of pain. This deceptively simple move can break an arm quickly.

A second pair of women perform the same maneuver somewhat tentatively, each afraid of injuring the other. "He's got his hand on your breast!," comes the command, summoning the women's rage. "Do it!"

Teaching women at Princeton how to turn their fear into anger is an integral part of Linda Ranson's self-defense class. Held weekly in the martial-arts room in Dillon Gymnasium, the class attracts undergraduates, graduate students, and university employees who want to gain greater confidence in their ability to protect themselves. Self-defense, according to Ranson, is as much "knowing your surroundings, trusting your instincts, knowing how to be aggressive verbally" as it is knowing how to fend off attackers.

Ranson, a certified black belt in Fuji Ryu jujitsu, teaches the women in her class how to take advantage of an attacker's vulnerable areas. But "it doesn't necessarily mean that it has to come to a physical confrontation," she says. Verbal assaults—screaming in an assailant's ear, for example—can often prevent an attack.

Ranson teaches in part by example, demonstrating the aggressive, fearless behaviors she wants to instill in her students. When the women seem reluctant to practice hurting an attacker, Ranson, whose students call her Sensei (Teacher), yells encouragement, forcing them to imagine being attacked. In turn, Ranson teaches the women to use a kiai (yell) to summon up energy while practicing a move. When people are scared, she says, they hyperventilate, but a kiai turns that fear into power. Sometimes Ranson berates women who seem shy or afraid. "She chewed me out a couple of times," recalls Martha Farnelo, a second-year graduate student working toward a master's degree in public affairs. "It hurts your feelings . . . but my personal experience was that she made me believe in myself."

Like some of her students at Princeton, Ranson is the survivor of a sexual assault who initially took up martial arts because she wanted to learn how to defend herself. She teaches regularly in the Bronx and Manhattan, and has taught nationally and internationally. She also serves as a consultant to the New York City Task Force on Sexual Assault and the New York City Board of Education.

Princeton first began to offer self-defense classes for women through the athletics department's physical-education office in the fall of 1989. Before then, women could learn self-defense through various courses that were offered in the residential colleges. But because the classes cost a hundred dollars per student, and because students were each asked to purchase a gbee (a martial-arts practitioner's traditional white outfit, which can be expensive), registration for the classes was initially low. Subsequently, the physical-education office began to subsidize the course, and other university funds were obtained, so the cost declined to fifty and then thirty dollars, according to Eric Stein, the director of physical education. In addition, students formed a Public Safety Committee last spring and secured a thousand dollars to buy gbees for class members to rent.

Abby Schoenbaum '91, a history major and Women's Center participant who is also a member of the Safety Committee, says that the university's administration has been "very responsive" to devising ways of making the self-defense class more affordable. Ranson herself spoke of the need to make self-defense classes more accessible at last spring's "Take Back the Night" march, which educates students about sexual assaults on the campus.

Aggression against women, Farnelo explains, can include everything from physical beatings and sexual assault to verbal abuse. Many women take Ranson's self-defense course because they feel vulnerable to attacks from men, yet feel dependent on men to defend them from such attacks. As women, says Connie Charnas '94, "we're taught not to hurt people." Ranson's self-defense class is all about "unlearning" conventional behaviors. It "makes you realize that everybody has their weak points," says Charnas. "Even against a huge football player you're not helpless."

"It affects you in your outside life," adds Farnelo. "When you feel empowered in yourself physically, you're empowered in other ways. It increases your willingness to stand up for yourself in the classroom."

On the final day of each course, Ranson asks her students to bring their male friends to class to volunteer as "attackers." Last spring, Debby Rosenthal, a third-year graduate student in comparative literature, invited her fiancé Glenn Starkman, a postdoctoral physicist at the Institute for Advanced Study, to don leg, chest, and groin pads and a helmet so the women could simulate a counterassault. Having to attack women was "really strange," Starkman says. "It wouldn't have felt strange with guys because guys play like that a lot. It was like the way guys act on a football field."

But getting at the differences between the ways in which men and women are accustomed to behaving is precisely the point of women's self-defense. "It was really affirming to see that the techniques worked" when the men were there, says Farnelo. Women may have traditionally been taught to avoid hurting people, Charnas says, but after taking the self-defense course, she will "think twice about giving in."

—Gayle Wald GS

Gayle Wald is a graduate student in English from Elkins Park, Pennsylvania.

Wendy Kopp '89 Has Created a

TEACHING

Nationwide Organization to Bring Recent College Graduates

FOR AMERICA

into Public-School Classrooms

By Lydia Denworth '88

DESPITE ITS LOCATION IN A HIGH-priced Manhattan office building, the headquarters of Teach for America is decidedly low-budget. It is staffed entirely by people under thirty. Jeans and other casual attire are the norm. Hand-written charts on the wall keep track of recruiting and other activities. There's no receptionist, no waiting area with magazines on a coffee table. There is, however, Wendy Kopp '89, who exudes businesslike intelligence and a corporate demeanor. Her formal dress and heels stand out from the surroundings. She speaks cogently, articulately, and persuasively. Meeting her and watching the enthusiastic hubbub of the office, you're not surprised that Teach for America has come so far in such a short time. Teach for America's first 505 recruits entered classrooms last fall in New York, Los Angeles, New Orleans, Baton Rouge, and rural North Carolina and Georgia. They had experienced eight weeks of intensive training over the summer from some of the biggest names in education.

In return for a commitment to teach for two years in public schools, the recruits can defer repayment of student loans they may still owe for their undergraduate educations. To make good on this arrangement, Kopp and her staff of twenty-three other recent college graduates have raised more than $2 million. They've assembled an advisory board loaded with C.E.O.s and top educators. And now they've begun all over again, raising more money and recruiting more teachers for the 1991-92 school year. When she graduated from Princeton a year and a half ago, Kopp had a plan for making T.F.A. happen—her senior thesis was her blueprint. She hoped to create a national teacher corps, modeled after the Peace Corps, that would reestablish teaching as a valued and respected career choice for graduates of the best universities. She wanted to recruit the brightest students and install them as teachers in the neediest school districts. They would be hired and trained by T.F.A. but paid by the school districts in which they worked.

Kopp had laid much of the groundwork for Teach for America while still a student at Princeton. A call at Mobil gained her a seed grant of $26,000 (it arrived on the day she graduated), and Union Carbide lent her office space in New York City. During the summer of 1989, she traveled from one education conference to another, trying to drum up support for her idea. "I was wandering around with a piece of paper and saying, 'Hi, I'm Wendy Kopp, and I'm creating a teacher corps,'" she recalls. "I don't know what I was thinking."

Actually, she knew exactly what she was thinking, and expresses no surprise at having pulled it off. She believed in the power of her idea from the start. Kopp's thesis adviser, sociology professor Marvin Bressler, explains that she has "a really compelling gentle stubbornness." Her persistence paid off. She has seen her idea become a respected organization, one that an editorial in The New York Times suggested might become "a powerful force for education reform."

Teach for America was born in the fall of 1988 at a conference in San Francisco on the sorry state of public education in this country. Kopp, one of the conference's organizers, was part of a group of students given the task of thinking up ways to improve America's teaching force. Those attending the conference discussed the usual problems associated with our ailing public-school systems. The United States faces shortages of mathematics, science, and foreign-language teachers in inner-city and rural areas. The percentage of minority teachers is shrinking, while the percentage of minority students grows: by 2000, minorities will make up only 5 percent of the teaching force but 32 percent of the student population. The country also faces a rising number of teacher retirements. The National Center for Education Statistics predicts that the total yearly demand for new teachers will increase more than threefold by 1995.

T.F.A. founder Wendy Kopp '89:
"a compelling gentle stubbornness."

The San Francisco group discussed the usual solutions. Raise teachers' salaries to reflect the value of teaching and to attract people who might otherwise go into more lucrative fields. Make teachers more accountable by setting standards their students must meet; teachers who don't perform must go. Change teacher education programs so that prospective educators get a more solid grounding in the subjects they will teach, not just in methodologies of teaching.

These are all necessary changes, says Kopp, but they didn't have the impact she was seeking. As she sat there, however, Kopp listened to what the others were saying. These were top students from good schools, young people who might be expected to become bankers, lawyers, management consultants, or congressional aides. Or they'd go on to graduate school. But to Kopp's surprise, they were also willing to give teaching a try. "It hit me that we were staring at a solution," she says. "These sharp people in the group were saying they would teach. I thought we needed something that would get more people like them into teaching—something that would create an aura around teaching."

So why not an organization specifically designed to lure these students and others like them into teaching? If she identified and addressed the reasons the brightest students were not going into teaching, Kopp thought, she could change their minds. To get around the disadvantages of low pay and poor image, she would build a sense of service and commitment and maximize publicity and selectivity. To avoid the problems of a low awareness of teaching opportunities and a complicated system of accreditation, she would actively recruit and centralize training and placement. To attract students with other career goals, she would require only a two-year commitment.

Working to Kopp's advantage were the idealism and enthusiasm of the young and the uncertainty that often characterizes senior year in college. Idealism would attract students to something worthwhile like teaching, while the prospect of a two-year job would allay concerns about their immediate future.

The information center at T.F.A.'s training institute in Los Angeles last summer was a hub-bub of activity.

When she returned from the conference, Kopp still needed a thesis topic. As a major in the Woodrow Wilson School of Public and International Affairs, designing Teach for America seemed a natural choice. "I became more and more obsessed as I worked on the project," she says. "It was in January that I realized this was a not-for-profit I could actually do."

It all sounded great on paper—Kopp received an "A" on her thesis—but given the problems in the system she was trying to address, pulling it off was something else. Money was essential, of course, so Kopp began with an assault on the deep pockets of corporate America, an entity under pressure to do more for education. In the months before she graduated, she sent letters to many corporations explaining her plans. The $26,000 grant from Mobil allowed her to spend the summer pursuing her idea. Other contributions followed, and they became larger as word got out and her letterhead gained clout.

At the education conferences she attended in the summer of 1989, Kopp received a mixed reaction. "There were a lot of people who were very supportive but didn't believe it would work." Part of the problem was the reluctance of the education establishment to accept change, but Kopp found some people who shared her thinking. "There are some educators who are defensive," she says, "but also some who recognize the need to revamp and provide different ways of getting into the system. They see the need to get new pools and have higher-quality people." The school districts in which her first recruits are teaching were chosen from a group that applied to T.F.A. for help.

It's NOT EVERY TWENTY-THREE-YEAR-OLD WHO can extract so much money and commitment from leaders in business and education. Kopp clearly has the ability to communicate her idea. And despite her disclaimer that she wasn't sure the concept would work when she started her thesis, those with whom she has dealt say that it was her obvious commitment and belief in her idea that sold them on the project. Robin Hogen, a vice-president of the Merck & Company Foundation, calls Kopp "disarmingly effective" at opening doors in high places. His company anted up $100,000 early on. Rex Adams, who oversees the Mobil Foundation, took the trouble to read her proposal out of the hundreds he receives because it was "rather well written, persuasively done, and very concrete."

Kopp credits this success to her work with Princeton's Foundation for Student Communication, which publishes Business Today magazine and organizes "Business Tomorrow," an annual national conference of corporate executives and students planning careers in business. As a sophomore, she served as editor and publisher of Business Today, and as a senior, she was president of the foundation. Kopp says that this experience taught her how to plan and organize T.F.A. and how to package her idea so that corporations would buy into it.

Although the success of Teach for America can't be fully judged for some time, Kopp has racked up some impressive early statistics. Of the first five hundred recruits, 27 percent are minorities (compared to 10 percent in the existing teaching force) and their average total S.A.T. score is 1255 (graduates of teacher-education programs average 950). T.F.A. has proportionately more male teachers than the group graduating from education programs (44 versus 18 percent). And nearly half (47 percent) of T.F.A. recruits teach mathematics or science.

Yet not every observer thinks that Kopp's plan will work. Some educators have called it sweet but naive. Others have assailed Kopp and her corps members as "arrogant" for thinking they can solve the problems of public schools. Kopp admits that T.F.A. can only be part of the solution. Nonetheless, she says, "when you get hundreds of sharp, questioning people in one program, they talk to each other and demand changes." But "they are so respectful of the people in the system. They're not going into the schools to change the system—they're going in to be the most effective teachers they can be." Teach for America's summer training institute has come in for criticism, too. Held last summer at the University of Southern California, the program included intensive courses in education theory and student teaching in Los Angeles' schools, which operate year-round because of the city's enormous population growth. But some educators contend that eight weeks of instruction simply aren't enough.

Similar complaints have been levied against other programs that create new pools of teachers.

In 1984, New Jersey became the first state to develop an extensive "alternate route" that enables people without education degrees to teach in the state. Like T.F.A. recruits, "alternate routers" have high S.A.T. scores and a high percentage of them are minorities. By 1989, 29 percent of the state's teachers had come through this program.

But both the New Jersey program and Teach for America continue the training process after a recruit has begun work: new teachers are assigned to mentor teachers who provide supervision and support during the first year. Of course, Kopp argues, a training in pedagogical methods tends to be more effective if trainees already have experience in the classroom. But "the idea of our institute is not to give a crash course in teacher education," she says. "It's based on the fact that if you talk to new teachers, they all experience the same things—they are overwhelmed and isolated. So we focus a lot of our resources on ongoing support. We feel that you need to have experience in school before educational theory makes sense."

The two-year requirement has also come under fire from critics who believe that teaching needs a longer commitment. Not from everyone, says Kopp. "Two years of energy and enthusiasm are better than none." She also points out that the attrition rate among teachers is already extremely high. (In New Jersey, in fact, it's higher for those with traditional training than it is for alternate routers.) Far from worrying about the temporary commitment, Kopp actually prefers that a good number of her recruits eventually leave the field. "This experience will have shaped their interests," she says. "I'd like to get as many as possible to stay in teaching, but I think a lot might be able to have more impact outside the system, in whatever career they choose." She maintains that such fields as business, medicine, law, and government would be richer if their ranks included more former teachers. One T.F.A. member told her that, after the intensive training program, there was no way he would stay in teaching for more than two years. He still planned a career in law but said he thought that his focus would be totally different.

WHILE SHE WAS GROWING UP IN DALLAS, KOPP HAD many grand visions of what she would become, but she never stuck with any of them. In fact, she describes herself as having been basically directionless at the start of her senior year. Her only answer to that most worrisome of questions, "What will you do after graduation?" was a noble but vague "I want to have an impact." When the corporate recruiters came calling at Princeton, she applied to six companies: one in every sector of the business world. "I signed up for investment banking, consulting, branch management . . . It was a lame attempt at getting a job." She was full of the very uncertainty she now sees as an asset in recruits. Even now, Kopp doesn't know how long she'll stay with T.F.A., but she has no plans to leave anytime soon—certainly "not before it becomes institutionalized."

She sees a perpetual need for Teach for America. "In one sense, the most ideal thing would be for it to eliminate itself because it would make teaching so popular that high-caliber people would go into the field. But I can't envision a day when we won't have teacher shortages in certain areas." Although she doesn't have a corporate title (in T.F.A.'s literature, she is referred to as "founder"), Kopp would like to settle into a role like that of executive director, coordinating the whole. The last year has been filled with fundraising chores, and Kopp would like to turn her attention to other matters. Another staff member she hired last fall will help with the money, so this may be possible, but Kopp acknowledges that fundraising goes with the territory. Teach for America is investigating the possibility of long-term funding through government grants or profit generation, but for now, it is in a position familiar to the many not-for-profits that must recreate themselves every year.

In her original plan, Kopp called for ever-increasing numbers of recruits—she projected four thousand by 1994 and a total of seven thousand either in training or in the classroom. Now she's not so sure and worries about sacrificing quality for quantity. "If we can put together a flawless program with five hundred people, we may stay with that," she says. One thing is for sure: word has gotten out. She drew her original corps of teachers from 100 universities. This year, T.F.A. is providing information to 160 schools and is actively recruiting at 125. It is also accepting people who may have graduated from college years ago but are now seeking a change in career.

Kopp with a trainee last summer. T.F.A.'s corps has a much higher percentage of minorities (27 percent) and males (44 percent) than the nation's teaching force.

Despite her accomplishments, Kopp still feels that she's one of the directionless. "You can be completely driven and directionless at the same time," she explains. "I think there are tons of people like that." And, never one to let a good public-relations opportunity go by, she adds, "Let's get them into education. The country will be better for it."

Lydia Denworth '88 is a reporter/researcher for Newsweek.

Of SQUIDS and KIDS

Teachers and Middle-School Children Benefit from Princeton Summer Programs

By Justin Harmon '78

ONE DAY LAST SUMMER, BILL BONINI '48 '49 and Sheldon Judson '40, professors of geology at Princeton, were working with a class of middle-school mathematics teachers, plotting the dimensions of a collection of belemnites, the fossil remains of small squidlike creatures that swam in the sea that covered New Jersey seventy million years ago. The twelve third-to-sixth-grade teachers, all from New Jersey, had harvested the belemnites from the muddy sediments of Big Brook, near Freehold, during a field trip two days before. Now, measurements revealed that all the fossils were several times longer than they were wide—except for one lonely specimen in the collection of Kathy Korten, a teacher from Somerset. Her specimen had a diameter of 2.5 centimeters but a length of only 1 centimeter. "Does that suggest an anomaly?" Bonini asked.

"I thought it sounded wrong after I recorded it," Korten ventured, "but due to a lack of self-esteem, I didn't speak up."

The teachers, who among them have spent scores of classroom-years bolstering the sensitive egos of pre-teenagers, dissolved into laughter.

Bonini reminded the group that in science, a good way to find mistakes is to be alert to data that seem out of range. "You might check your sample to see if you flipped one of the specimens," he suggested. As the other teachers continued to plot the lengths and diameters of their most complete specimens, Korten pulled out the ziplock bag containing her fossils and remeasured them one by one. In short order, she confirmed that she simply had transposed the measurements of one sample.

Later, the teachers examined the graphs to look for the so-called "best-fit" line, showing the average ratio of length to diameter. Jay Glassman, of Skillman, observed that as the diameters of the samples increased, so did their lengths. The best-fit line sloped upward.

"Does the best-fit line enable you to make a prediction?" Bonini asked. "If you find a specimen that is one centimeter in diameter, what is its length likely to be?"

Darryl Owens, a fifth-grade teacher from Trenton, noted a difference in the rate of the belemnites' growth. Assuming that smaller specimens represented younger individuals, he said, "They seem to grow faster earlier on. The specimens of the younger belemnites are longer as opposed to thicker."

Judson, who retired in 1987 but has remained involved as a teacher, pursued the point further. "If you correlated the animals' ages at death with the diameters of their fossil remains, could you calculate their survival rates?" He raced to the front of the room and began an analysis that soon filled the blackboard with numbers. Teachers and professors launched into an animated discussion about the actuarial odds of ancient cuttlefish reaching old age. While the class calculated survival rates for belemnites, Bonini observed that they could perform a similar exercise using data from a local cemetery. "You'd take the ages from the gravestones," he said. "It would be best to pick an old graveyard, say from the 1700s. You want to be sure everybody in the cohort is dead!" (Of course, it wouldn't be possible—or necessary—to disinter and measure the human remains, as the class had just done with the belemnites.)

Judson stepped back from his figures on the blackboard, pleased at the direction the class had taken. "You can get a lot from these data," he said.

"This is so good we ought to publish it," offered Bonini. "We could have a multi-author paper."

"Just send the royalty checks!" said Owens.

"Unfortunately," replied Bonini, "they charge you to publish papers like this."

THE TEACHERS WERE SPENDING TWO WEEKS AT PRINCETON thanks to the university's Office of Teacher Preparation and Placement, through its Partners in Education Program. While they worked with Bonini and Judson on ways to teach mathematics using field techniques of geology, another eight were busy with biology professor Henry Horn, developing curricular materials in biology and earth science.

Since 1985, about 150 teachers—a third of them from Trenton—have participated in these summer "leadership institutes." Last year, the program was supported by a grant from Bristol-Myers Squibb. "Partners" is actually the rubric of a larger network fostered by the teacher preparation office among five hundred teachers in fifteen school districts throughout New Jersey. Along with the summer institutes and follow-up meetings on the campus during the school year, it offers a spring conference, publishes a newsletter, and administers a three-year program of Mellon-funded grants of up to $1,000 for teaching innovations.

A second program of teacher prep brings younger visitors to the campus each summer. Begun in 1979, the Middle School Summer Program offers intensive enrichment to forty-one talented ten-to-thirteen-year-olds, most of them from local school districts. They spend two weeks on the campus and another two weeks at the Blairstown Education Center, developing skills in mathematics, science, and the humanities. Teachers participating in this program must either have won or been nominated for the awards for distinguished teaching the university presents at commencement each June.

Last summer, the focus was on the environment.

George Dean, an English teacher from North Bergen and one of four secondary-school teachers who took part in the program in 1990, was talking with his students in a seminar room at Firestone Library about the polling project he had assigned them. What had been their experience, he wanted to know, when they had stopped people on the campus to ask them about the environment.

"Some of the responses were profanities," said one youngster.

"Well, maybe some people felt invaded," Dean observed. "You know, you get junk mail, you get computers on the telephone trying to sell you more junk. Did talking to people who didn't want to be bothered make you feel rejected?"

A red-headed lad talked earnestly about the national mood. He remarked that President Bush had done little to catalyze public discussion of pollution. "I suspect it's Sununu who's really behind the administration's stance on the environment," he said.

The students had interviewed more than 150 people in their survey, but they seemed more interested in talking about those who wouldn't cooperate.

One boy told how, suspecting a subject was automatically "yessing" his queries without thinking about them, he substituted questions on her. Instead of "Are you willing to boycott all products packaged in Styrofoam?" he asked, "Will you marry me?" The subject answered "yes" without blinking.

"Given that people are sometimes insincere," Dean deadpanned, "can you count on your results being completely accurate?"

The students had begun the day at the Engineering Quadrangle, where Kirk Alexander, the manager of the interactive computer graphics lab, demonstrated silicon graphics, Hypercard, and image processing. In the course of their campus visit, they also toured the Plasma Physics Laboratory, the Putnam collection of outdoor sculpture, the WPRB studios, and the Chapel. They would complete the program a week later at Blairstown, where they continued their academic classes while learning camping and survival skills.

In a class run by Mike Roche, a teacher from Manchester, the students designed self-contained ecosystems. One had drawn a model for what he called a Self-Sufficient Dome. "SESDOME" comprised eight sectors: forest, farmland, a pond with algae to produce oxygen, a bacterial breeding room to consume waste, a cesspool, a residential area, and a communal garden.

In the next room, two teams of students played a game called the $1.98 Pyramid. Contestants had to guess the name of an object from one-word clues provided by teammates about its structure or constituent parts. Among the clues for "Swiss Army knife," for example, were "blade," "scissors," and "corkscrew." "Football" evoked "laces," "leather," and "pigskin" as clues. Assisting in the game was Kate Bishop '92, a member of the teacher prep program who will receive her teaching certificate on graduation.

Princeton's Partners in Education Program helps secondary-school teachers teach mathematics using field techniques of geology.

Later that day, the students wrote about their experiences in journals. "We get to know them through these journals," said Liz Marquez, a teacher from North Brunswick who served as the program's coordinator. "The program represents a wonderful opportunity for these students. They are extremely talented, but in their schools they often have to hide their talents so they are not looked at as nerds or weirdos. Here they can have fun being smart and creative."

Marquez, who won a distinguished teaching award at commencement in 1984, enjoyed the program's seven-to-one student-teacher ratio. She also liked having the freedom to design an entire curriculum, to team-teach across disciplines, and to emphasize paired-learning and problem-solving skills.

The middle-school program has a devoted following. Last year, in the Franklin Township school district, fifty students applied for the ten places the district sponsors annually. Besides the full tuition ($875) of each pupil, Franklin pays a stipend to one of its own teachers to observe the program and bring back techniques and perspectives. In 1990, fourteen students from Franklin, Trenton, and other communities attended on scholarships funded by foundations, individuals, and corporations. (Last year, the main donor was Merck & Company, which granted $10,000.)

But scholarships and tuition fees don't cover all the costs, and finding grants each year to cover the scholarships has proven difficult, so teacher prep underwrites the shortfall. Ruth Wilson, who oversees the Middle School Summer Program, says she'd like to get the program's funding on firmer footing: "The ideal situation would be to have continuing funding for ten scholarship students; to have four or five districts paying full tuition; to have a part-time director who could follow up with guidance counselors at the schools; and to tie these students in with Community House [a university volunteer organization], where Princeton students could be their tutors and mentors."

In the meantime, both Partners in Education and the Middle School Summer Program enjoy the approbation of teachers and students alike. "This is the difference between fieldwork and a text," Judson said. "A text offers examples to demonstrate a concept, but the concepts are presented in a linear, isolated fashion. Our technique uses field examples and squeezes the concepts out in quick succession. It's a lot more fun."

Marquez said simply, "This is the most creative experience I have ever had as a teacher."

Justin Harmon, the university's director of communications, taught in New Jersey public schools for three years.

TEACHING HOW TO TEACH

IN 1967, THE UNIVERSITY FOUNDED THE PROGRAM IN TEACHER PREPARATION in the belief that a broad undergraduate curriculum with a concentration in one subject, combined with well-supervised experience as a student teacher, would prepare a person to teach.

Since 1969, students completing the program have received legal certification to teach in New Jersey's public schools. The certificate is valid in most other states through reciprocal agreements.

The study of teaching and learning takes a natural place in Princeton's curriculum, according to the program's director, Marue Walizer. "Education issues form part of the liberal arts," she says. "Some of our students are exploring the possibility of careers in education, but others are just interested in the issues."

In a senior seminar that is a requirement for the certificate, the majority of participants this semester will not be certificate candidates, Walizer says. "In last semester's group, one of the most energetic participants was an East Asian studies major who was researching a comparison between the Japanese and U.S. educational systems."

This year, fifteen seniors will earn teaching certificates, a number that fairly typifies the last few classes, Walizer says. A total of sixty sophomores, juniors, and seniors take part in the program each year, although some do not complete the requirements. These numbers have dropped since the 1970s, when as many as fifty seniors a year earned certificates, but they have risen somewhat since the mid-1980s. Next year, thanks to a new option that will allow busy seniors to defer their practice teaching and the senior seminar to a postgraduate semester, the number of students receiving certificates is expected to rise.

In addition to educating students, teacher prep helps them find jobs in teaching or school administration. Walizer estimates that each year the office accommodates as many as ninety seniors and thirty alumni who are hunting for jobs. "Sometimes we hear from an alumnus after twenty years, when he or she has decided to look for a job as head of a school," Walizer says. "We're often able to help."

Marue Walizer

An Elizabethan Murder Revisited

ENTERED FROM THE SUN

George Garrett '52 *85 • Doubleday, $21.95

THE MYSTERIOUS LIFE and violent death of the brilliant Elizabethan playwright Christopher Marlowe continue to intrigue modern readers. Sixteenth-century documents cloud any single view of Marlowe by implying that he might have been an agent of the Crown, a Catholic convert, a double agent, an atheist, a roaring fellow, or all of the above. Records show that in 1593 he was murdered by Ingram Frizer in an eating house in Deptford, apparently in a dispute over the bill. But while the historian might wish for a cleaner account of Marlowe's life and death, the novelist delights in such ambiguities. And clearly delighted by this material is George Garrett in the third novel of his Elizabethan trilogy, Entered from the Sun, a book that weaves around Marlowe's murder the juicy motives of religion, ambition, and politics.

Garrett's great strengths are his vivid image making and an ironic view of "truth" that appears at every level of the novel. As different characters attempt to re-create Marlowe's killing, for instance, the details and significance of that moment vary, yet each time, the young man's murder shocks and disturbs the reader. Garrett also succeeds in creating a lively version of late Elizabethan London, with its ubiquitous river traffic, St. Paul's, printing shops, and taverns, and its population of watermen, apprentices, tavern-keepers, thugs, aristocrats, soldiers, merchants, country gentlemen, playwrights, and poets. The two main characters are Joseph Hunnyman, a feckless but handsome and charming unemployed actor and impersonator, and Captain William Barfoot, a strikingly ugly, ferocious, battle-scarred veteran of all the big Elizabethan military campaigns. A different political faction has assigned each man to investigate the four-year-old murder of Marlowe, and the plot involves not only their parallel (although sometimes intersecting) investigations, but also the identities and motivations of their masters.

The book is worth reading for Captain Barfoot alone. Garrett gives him a psychologically interesting background, and by telling his story, he draws us more deeply into the culture and controversies of Elizabethan England. Barfoot comes from Catholic gentry of the north country, and his father was a participant in the ill-fated northern uprising of 1569, but as the Queen's loyal soldier, Barfoot fights in Ireland, the Low Countries, and France until he semiretires to serve his brother's financial and legal interests in London. His letters home carry part of the story, and if this narrative technique creaks a little, his canny accounts of the other characters and his own progress are quite enthralling.

The book's female characters are much less satisfactory than these strong, credible men. Because of the various narrative points of view, the main female character comes belatedly and incompletely into focus. Introduced as Hun-nyman's lover, the ambitious—and, inevitably, the lusty—widow and printer Dame Alysoun appears in the novel's most conventional scenes. We have to listen to Hunnyman address her continually as "woman," and to hear described only the merits of her blond hair and significant body parts. Of course, Hunnyman possesses limited powers of perception, as does another tricky narrator who admits, "Because she is a woman, and one blessed with beauty, she is, in some ways, more mysterious to me than the others . . ." And of course we assume that Elizabethan culture was profoundly patriarchal, but it would be refreshing for a contemporary author to imagine a woman beyond such ancient stereotypes. Eventually, Alysoun turns out to have her own agenda, but like Captain Barfoot's customary bedmates, the nameless "two Dutch whores," the widow Alysoun seems to derive largely from unexpurgated male fantasies, past and present.

This criticism aside, Garrett's handling of the interface between history and fiction is highly inventive, entertaining, and moving. He ingeniously includes in Entered from the Sun some of the "truth" left behind by Elizabethans—official documents and literary texts—and deftly mixes historical figures with fictional characters. Frequently, Garrett enfolds the reader, as the best historians and novelists do, in a vividly re-created past that is both sordid and luminescent.

—Elaine V. Beilin *73

Elaine Beilin is an associate professor of English at Framingham State College, in Massachusetts. Her first book, Redeeming Eve: Women Writers of the English Renaissance (Princeton University Press, 1987), was recently published in paperback.

Thespians on the International Scene

CENTERSTAGE: AMERICAN DIPLOMACY SINCE WORLD WAR II

L. Carl Brown, Garrett Professor in Foreign Affairs, ed.

Holmes & Meier, $49.95 cloth, $29.50 paper

THE APTLY TITLED Centerstage, a major review of American diplomatic history since World War II, derives from the 1987 Peter B. Lewis '55 lecture series that Princeton's Center of International Studies sponsored. Because 1987 marked the passage of four decades since the eventful year of 1947—which saw the establishment of the Truman Doctrine, the enunciation of the strategy of containment (in George Kennan '25's celebrated "Mr. X" article), the beginning of the Marshall Plan, and the creation of the Department of Defense, the Central Intelligence Agency, and the National Security Council—it was decided to call the series “Forty Years of American Diplomacy, 1947-1987.”

The series' twelve speakers cast their lectures into essays, and editor L. Carl Brown, Princeton's Garrett Professor in Foreign Affairs and a professor of Near Eastern studies, commissioned six more chapters for this book, which actually takes as its starting point 1945, the end of World War II. Although not all the contributors are alumni or members of the faculty, the table of contents does read like a Who's Who of Princeton; many of the authors are current professors in the Wilson School and the history and politics departments, and one is former President Robert F. Goheen '40 '48.

The essays, which do not form a continuous narrative but are each self-contained, cover an impressive range of geography and issues: the bipolar world of the superpowers, the global economy, decolonization, Western Europe, Latin America, the Middle East, South Asia, China, Japan, and Vietnam. Essays on Kennan, John Foster Dulles '08, Henry Kissinger, and the Realist School provide analysis of the theory and practice of diplomacy, and finally, we get a dispassionate look at covert action. Names and terms, some of which we have forgotten but will want to relearn, populate the book like identification questions on a final exam: Dien Bien Phu, Quemoy and Matsu, brinkmanship, Jawaharlal Nehru, the Belgian Congo, the Yalu River, Gamal Abdel Nasser, Joseph McCarthy, Cardinal Mindszenty, the Berlin Airlift, the Six-Day War, and the Rio Treaty.

How should I convince you to seek out this book, to read it, to think about it, to peruse it as background to unfolding world events? This excellent book, although not your “quick read,” costs less than dinner at a good restaurant and surely offers more enduring pleasure and edification. Here is a companion for the mind, a menu of dishes for our post-Princeton intellectual sustenance.

Curiously, the events that have so riveted our attention in these tumultuous last few years—Tiananmen Square, the opening of the Berlin Wall and unification of the Germanies, the collapse of the Warsaw Pact, the elections in Poland, the quiet revolutions in Hungary and Czechoslovakia, the noisier one in Romania—are not mentioned. There is barely a reference to Mikhail Gorbachev and nothing at all about Eduard Shevardnadze.

But then, of course, the editor and contributors could not have known of these events, or even guessed at them. Centerstage was written and edited before these astonishing transformations, and thus it reflects the status quo as we knew it just a short time ago. That is exactly why you should read it.

A central theme of Centerstage is that American foreign policy since World War II has been remarkably successful. This is not to say that our government has performed perfectly, the authors say; it has made mistakes. But Centerstage enlightens us with forceful, reasoned, and realistic criticism, not a polemic. It is not a strident book and does not moralize. Centerstage suggests that significant changes in the world are underway and that the United States must adapt its foreign policy accordingly—that we must debate it and find intelligent and sensitive people to formulate it.

While demonstrating the success of America's postwar diplomatic endeavors, Centerstage cautions us against self-righteousness and moralizing. It calls for realistic appraisal. The diplomatic history analyzed on these pages emerges as an endless, multipolar activity that requires clarity of vision, flexibility of purpose, an overriding sense of the long term, and, above all, an understanding of cost vs. risk. We seem to be at a watershed in our history, groping for a new strategy to carry us forward. What will that strategy be for the new century? Can we articulate one as good as the one that has served us for the last forty-five years? If you intend to participate in the debate, Centerstage is a good place to start.

—Eric W. Johnson '62

Eric Johnson, the secretary of his class, spent the 1988-89 academic year studying U.S.-Japan trade relations at the Northeast Asia-United States Forum on International Policy, at Stanford University.

Books Received

AMBER BLOSSOMS AND EVENING SHADOWS (poetry)
Hugo G. Walter '81
Dorrance, $6.95

MICHAEL GRAVES: BUILDINGS AND PROJECTS, 1982-1989 (professor of architecture)
Karen Vogel Nichols, Patrick J. Burke '82, and Caroline Hancock '82, eds.
Princeton Architectural Press
$49.95 cloth, $34.95 paper

PASTORAL CONVENTIONS: POETRY, LANGUAGE, AND THOUGHT IN SEVENTEENTH-CENTURY NUREMBERG
Jané O. Newman '83
Johns Hopkins University Press, $42.50

W. THACHER LONGSTRETH'S “delightful...extremely lively memoir.”*

From All-American football at Princeton to becoming Life's top salesman, from dealings with statesmen like Eisenhower to run-ins with Jimmy Hoffa, Richard Nixon, and Frank Rizzo, here's an enthralling tour through the twentieth century “by an extremely likable guy.”

—*Philadelphia Inquirer

“Enlightening reading.”

—Los Angeles Times

“An entertaining account of that consummation most devoutly to be wished: a happy life . . . Longstreth comes across as an honorable man with large reservoirs of spirit and good will.”

—Philadelphia Magazine

“Fascinating . . .

A warm and moving autobiography—insightful, humorous, and fun to read.”

—Drew Lewis, chairman,
Union Pacific Corporation

MAIN LINE WASP

One man's uproarious, adventuresome journey through the twentieth century

Written with DAN ROTTENBERG

Now at bookstores  NORTON 500 Fifth Avenue, New York, New York 10110

Digitized by

Men's Hockey Strives to Change Script of Long-Running Horror Show

WATCHING THE men's hockey team this season has been like watching a great "B" horror movie. Left for dead by the rest of the Eastern College Athletic Conference, the Tigers have come back to life to haunt league opponents. But like any antagonist in a horror movie, Princeton (currently 6-11-1 overall, 5-8-1 E.C.A.C.) won't be around at the end of the show, when the E.C.A.C. championship is decided in March.

When the season began, in November, Princeton was not considered much of a threat. The Tigers had lost eight players—including forwards who together had tallied more than fifty goals and more than sixty assists last year—to graduation, and that team had posted a middling 12-15 record (although it did host Princeton's first playoff game at home ever, a 5-1 loss to Yale). The first weekend of play this season confirmed this expectation, as the Tigers lost close games to Colgate (6-5) and Cornell (4-3) on the road.

Princeton displayed just how good it could be during its home opener, against Harvard. Before a standing-room-only crowd, the Tigers controlled their arch-enemy in a 4-3 victory, their first against Harvard since 1983. The Crimson, national champions two years ago, had a chance to make a dramatic comeback, but Princeton goalie Ron High '91 stood in the way, recording thirty-four saves. Twenty-four hours later, the Tigers mobbed Dartmouth, 9-0, behind center Andre Faust '92's four-goal contribution, and it looked as though Princeton might be for real in the E.C.A.C.

After a 7-2 loss to Boston University, however, the Tigers played weakly in a game against Army, a team that is planning to leave the E.C.A.C. because of its perennially poor play (this is the only E.C.A.C. school against which the Tigers have a winning record). Princeton won, 6-3, but Faust was held scoreless for the first time all season, and High and his defense gave up three soft goals late in the contest. In Princeton's next nine games, Faust scored just three goals, and Coach Jim Higgins pulled High and alternate goalie Mark Salsbury '91 from games more often than a dentist pulls wisdom teeth. Princeton went into a six-game slide, dropping league contests to Andre Faust '92, who leads Princeton in goals and assists, may be the first Tiger in six years to play in the National Hockey League.

R.P.I., Vermont, Clarkson, and St. Lawrence, and sinking from the penthouse to the outhouse in the E.C.A.C.

Faust's scoring drought, along with an ankle injury that sidelined Mike McKee '92, Princeton's top defenseman, played havoc with the Tigers' special teams and blueline corps. McKee, who was picked first in the N.H.L.'s supplemental draft last summer (by the Quebec Nordiques), got hurt in practice after the opening weekend of the season, and despite a medical clearance to play after the Army game, he missed half the season.

The Tigers stopped their losing streak by eking out a 4-3 win in overtime against Notre Dame, but their same problems persisted. They struggled to score against a weak opponent and then watched as the Irish erased their 3-0 lead in the third period. Matt Zilinskas '93's sudden-death goal saved the day. Perhaps Princeton's anemic game against Notre Dame foreshadowed its play the next weekend, the low point of the season (thus far). The Tigers lost to a tough squad at Yale, 6-3, and then played without any heart in a 6-1 defeat at Brown. These were Princeton's first road losses to both Ivy rivals in one season since Higgins's second season (1978-79).

But just when it looked like it was time for even diehard fans of Princeton hockey to turn their interest to basketball, the team returned to life. In a home game against league-leading Cornell, the Tigers outskated, outhit, and outscored the Big Red, 7-6. The game marked the return of both McKee and the goal-scoring exploits of Faust.

Faust, a ninth-round draft pick of the New Jersey Devils, showed in this game why many observers think he may be the first Tiger to play in the N.H.L. since Ed Lee '84. In one spectacular play that left the crowd (and Cornell) gasping, Faust beat Dan Ratushny, a first-team all-E.C.A.C. defenseman and future member of the Winnipeg Jets, at the Princeton blueline, slipped the puck between another defender's legs, and then poked it through the Cornell goalie's pads.

But whatever happens in the last few games of the season, Princeton once again seems to lack the consistency, the depth, and the reliable goaltending that are essential to success in the playoffs. High and Salsbury have both enjoyed hot streaks in goal this season, but neither has shown the ability to carry the team in the postseason. When they've played poorly, Higgins has been very quick to blame them individually for the team's troubles—which doesn't help a goalie's self-confidence.

Great save! Princeton goalkeeper Mark Salisbury '91 turns away a point-blank shot in a game against St. Lawrence at Baker Rink. Nevertheless, the Saints won, 6-3.

Moreover, opponents can win if they just concentrate on shutting down Faust, Rob LaFerriere '94, and Sean Murphy '91—Princeton's first line. Players like Mike Cole '91, Tom Shimabukuro '91, and Terry Morris '93 have had excellent seasons—they are strong defenders and good penalty killers—but they lack the size and scoring "touch" to take the pressure off the first line to score. Faust, LaFerriere, and Murphy have tallied twenty-five goals among them, as many as the rest of Princeton's forwards combined. A team with only one line that scores makes for a team that finds it difficult to come from behind: the Tigers have a 3-9 record when their opponents score first, and a dismal 0-11 mark when they trail after two periods.

Because so many teams in the E.C.A.C. qualify for the playoffs (ten out of twelve), Princeton seems likely to make it to the postseason. But if the Tigers are to break their horrendous 0-5 record in playoff games, they must show the heart and hustle they displayed in the victories over Harvard and Cornell. Princeton has demonstrated the potential to change the script of one of the longest-running horror shows in collegiate hockey. Will these playoffs be another rerun, or will the Tigers give the Baker Rink faithful something they have not seen in twenty-three years—an overall winning record and a postseason victory?

—Len Bardsley

Len Bardsley covers the hockey team for the Trenton Times.

Record-Setting Marcoux Sets Tone for Women Skaters, "Maidens of Pain"

THE BANNER HANGING from the press box at Baker Rink reads, "Princeton Women's Hockey: The Maidens of Pain." Pain? This may be an exaggeration, unless it refers to the psychological trauma that other Ivy League schools have suffered over the years at the hands of the Tigers, who have not posted a losing league record in the eleven seasons women's ice hockey has been played at Princeton.

As in the last three years, the centerpiece of the team and its chief "hit-woman" is Mollie Marcoux '91, a native of Ithaca, New York, whose hockey résumé is nearly as long as her senior thesis (on the L.P.G.A.). Marcoux, twice a member of the all-E.C.A.C. first team and perhaps the best female collegiate player in the nation, already holds the Princeton and Ivy League records for assists in a career, and is on the doorstep of such records for career goals and total points.

Unlike her first three years at Princeton, however, Marcoux is not joined on the ice this season by Sue Finney '90 and Shari Wolkon '91. Finney graduated last June, and Wolkon declined to play hockey in her senior year for personal reasons. In the three seasons they played together as a line, the trio scored 203 goals, an astronomical number; last year, they were three of the top six scorers in the Ivy League.

In an easy win over Yale, team captain Mollie Marcoux '91 shoots . . . and scores! Marcoux is on her way to owning career records in goals, assists, and total points.

But all is not lost. Coach Bob Ewell, who has guided Princeton to two second-place finishes in the Ivy League in the last three seasons, reeled in probably his best class of recruits this year since Marcoux, Wolkon, and others arrived in 1987.

Headlining the group is forward Lisa Mancke '94, who has been nicely assimilated into a line with Marcoux and Lyndsay Rowan '91. In a game against Cornell in mid-January, Mancke scored two goals in the final three minutes of play to stun the Big Red, 3-2, thus raising Princeton's record to 3-4-1 (2-1 Ivy). Marcoux set up both goals and thereby achieved her Ivy record-tying and record-breaking assists. Ewell, who is now in his sixth year as coach, has juggled his lines somewhat, but he seems to have decided to rotate the other freshmen—Caroline Bell, Holly Simonds, Whitney Rogers, and Corine Vriesendorp—through the second line. (Because the roster is not that large, Princeton operates with only two lines.)

One of the highlights of the team's schedule this season was to have been a tournament in Switzerland over the Christmas vacation, but shortly before the players were to depart for Europe, the tournament was cancelled. Not wanting to miss this long-planned trip, Ewell managed to arrange a slate of games in the land of Heidi anyway—two against Concordia College of Montréal (another would-be participant in the tourney) and one each against a pair of Swiss teams, Bergün and Zürich.

Although the Tigers emerged victoriously from only one of the four games (they trounced Bergün, 12-0), the series was most uplifting, in particular the contest against Zürich. This squad features eight members of the Swiss national team, two outstanding Americans, and two top Canadians, but it barely squeaked by Princeton, 5-4, in overtime. And if Ewell had heeded the advice of his star player at the end of regulation time, the Tigers could have escaped with a tie. "I said, 'Coach, they don't play overtime in Switzerland. Let's just get out of here,'" recalls Marcoux. "But Coach decided to play overtime, and we lost."

What made this game particularly interesting was that bodychecking was permitted. In American women's hockey, it is not. "I told the refs, 'We'll play by your rules, but if it gets rough, call it,'" says Ewell. "Then the Swiss went out and hit us from behind, into the boards, and they got no penalties."

Did the typically docile Tigers respond in kind? "No, we didn't really hit. We just played our game," says Mancke.

Two days after the players returned to this country, they were off on a road trip of a different sort—to Harlem, where they assist an afterschool program for nine- to fourteen-year-olds called the Upward Fund. Throughout the season, the Tigers visit the Big Apple occasionally to help young girls learn to skate. "I've been doing this since my sophomore year," says Marcoux. "The girls are much better skaters than when we first started with them."

The Tigers also raise money for the Upward Fund, and one way they did so was by scrimmaging with a team of adult men. This exhibition provided Ewell with an opportunity to pair Marcoux with assistant coach Lisa Brown, a 1988 graduate of Providence. Last year, Marcoux and Brown were among the players selected as members of the "Team of the Decade" for the 1980s by the Association of Women's Hockey Coaches of America. Both are strong candidates for the United States national team in future international competitions. How did they do? "They made some of the guys look silly," chuckles Ewell.

—Mike Jackman '92

Mike Jackman is a history major from Needham, Massachusetts, and writes for The Daily Princetonian.

Oxford Cloth Shirt Sale: Exclusively for PAW Readers

- 100% cotton @ 3/59.90
Size(s) _____
Color(s) _____
- 60% cotton/40% poly @ 3/49.90
Size(s) _____
Color(s) _____
- Pinpoint @ 3/76.90
Size(s) _____
Color(s) _____
Collar Style(s) _____

Take advantage of this special price on men's Oxford cloth shirts, offered only to readers of PAW.

100% cotton in white, blue, pink, or maize (mix or match colors in any combination), size 14½ to 17 neck, 32 to 35 sleeve. (14½ in 32 and 33 only; 16½ and 17 in 33, 34, and 35 only.) Reg. 3/$79.50, SALE 3/$59.90.

60% cotton, 40% poly, in white, blue, pink, or maize (mix or match colors in any combination), 14½ to 17 neck with either reg. (32-33) or long (34-35) sleeve (14½ in 32-33 only.) Reg. 3/$66.00, SALE 3/$49.90.

Pure cotton pinpoint Oxford cloth, in the same sizes as the 100% cotton shirt above. Reg. 3/$102.00, SALE 3/$76.90. Choose buttondown collar (avail. in blue or white) or reg. collar (avail. white only.) Mix or match colors and collar styles as you wish.

Add $4.25 shipping.

the
PRINCETON
University Store

Call Toll-Free
In N.J., 1-800-624-4236 36 University Place
Elsewhere, 1-800-631-0137 Princeton, NJ 08540
☐ U-Store ☐ VISA ☐ MasterCard ☐ AmEx
Acct. # _____ Exp. Date _____
Name _____
Address _____
City/State/Zip _____

SCOREBOARD

Men's BASKETBALL

(10-2 overall; 2-0 Ivy)
Princeton 55, Yale 27
Princeton 67, Brown 42

Women's BASKETBALL

(8-5 overall; 1-1 Ivy)
Princeton 61, Lehigh 29
Army 67, Princeton 47
Princeton 68, Yale 53
Brown 57, Princeton 53 (overtime)

Men's HOCKEY

(6-11-1 overall; 5-8-1 E.C.A.C.)
Yale 6, Princeton 3
Brown 6, Princeton 1
Princeton 7, Cornell 6
Princeton 2, Colgate 2 (overtime)
Princeton 6, Army 3

Women's HOCKEY

(3-4-1 overall; 2-1 Ivy)
Princeton 3, Cornell 2

Fencing

(0-1 overall; 0-0 Ivy)
Navy 19, Men 13
Navy 9, Women 7

Men's Swimming

(4-0 overall; 4-0 E.I.S.L.)
Princeton 140, Army 95
Princeton 164, Cornell 71

Women's Swimming

(5-1 overall; 5-0 Ivy)
Princeton 180.5,
Cornell 106.5

Men's Squash

(5-0 overall; 1-0 Ivy)
Princeton 9, Cornell 0
Princeton 8, Western Ontario 1
Princeton 9, Vassar 0
Princeton 9, Trinity 0
Princeton 9, Amherst 0
U.S.S.R.A. Team Tourney—4th place

Women's Squash

(1-0 overall; 0-0 Ivy)
Princeton 9, Franklin & Marshall 0

Men's Track

(2-2 overall; 0-0 Ivy)
Manhattan 69, Princeton 60
Princeton 60, Seton Hall 28
Princeton 60, F.D.U.—Teaneck 27
Navy 90, Princeton 45

Women's Track

(0-0 overall; 0-0 Ivy)
N.J. College Championships—4th place
Delaware Invitational—1st place

Wrestling

(6-5-1 overall; 0-0 Ivy)
Princeton 22, Franklin & Marshall 11
Navy 33, Princeton 5
Army 32, Princeton 0
Virginia Tech 22, Princeton 16
Princeton 34, Delaware State 8

FOR RENT

ENJOY THE LUXURY of your own villa, private pool overlooking the Caribbean, and staff of five to serve you. 3 BRs, 3 baths; exquisitely furnished; on one acre with terraced gardens in most exclusive residential neighborhood in Ocho Rios, Jamaica. Everyone should try this kind of living at least once. From $175/day, winter; $125/day, summer; $100/day, Sept.-Oct. B. Kaspers '70 (owner), 1165 Churchill Downs Rd., Atlanta, GA 30319; 404-255-0696.

ST. JOHN, USVI: 2 BR waterfront beachhouse amid tropical gardens. Spectacular view, excellent snorkeling. From $175/day, winter; $125/day, summer; $100/day, Sept.-Oct. B. Kaspers '70. 1165 Churchill Downs, Atlanta, GA 30319; 404-255-0696.

PARIS: Elegant small studio for two just off the Seine in the 6th. 2 min. walk to the Louvre, Notre Dame. 609-924-4332.

BARBADOS: Home of the late John L. Roe Jr. '34. West Coast on bluff overlooking Caribbean. Three air-conditioned BRs, cook, maid, gardener, laundry, swimming pool. 215-527-0585.

PARIS: Rue de la Paix, Elegant apartment. Suitable for 2 or 3. 7-days preferred. $200/night. 212-838-1731.

STOCKING ISLAND, Exuma, Bahamas: Octagonal wood and glass home, spectacular 360-degree sea view. All modern conveniences. $1000 weekly for two with boat. Sam Burns '46, 407-231-2822. Brochure avail.

SANIBEL ISLAND, FLA.: Delightful beachfront condominium. Magnificent gulf view. Spacious 2 BR, 2 baths, loft. Pool. Tennis. Will Smith '63. 908-842-2096.

BRITISH VIRGIN ISLANDS (Virgin Gorda): Elegant new villa directly on own private snorkeling beach. Spectacular, panoramic view of North Sound including Bitter-End (dive school, etc.) Perfect weather year round. 3 BR, 2 bath, magnificent LR, wrap-around deck, full mod. kit., microwave, dishwasher; marina, fishing, pool, tennis. (Restaurant, provisioning, staff, car, available extra.) $2,500/wk. 609-921-7872.

EXCLUSIVE LUXURY 4 BR, 4 bath villa at private Tryall Club in Montego, Jamaica. Private pool, staff of four, gorgeous grounds overlook Caribbean and championship golf course. Also private tennis, scuba, beach and club house. Available at 2 or 3 BR rate off-season. 203-254-0228 (h) or Carol Shaw at 203-929-6391.

LONDON LUXURY FLATS: In Knightsbridge, Mayfair, Chelsea, Kensington, Whitehall Court. One, two, three bedrooms. Furnished and decorated by owners. Rented by day, seven day minimum; reduced rates when exceeding six months. Call during office hours: 518-686-7841.

KAUAI, HAWAII: 4 BR, NaPali Coast beach house. $650-850/wk. 703-560-7900.

ST. MAARTEN: Elegant villa on blue Caribbean. Breathtaking views. Daily maid. All amenities. Sleeps 2-6. 201-271-0297.

ST. THOMAS: 2 or 3 BRs on the water, spectacular downsland view. H. Macaleer. 919-942-8439.

ITALY: Renting delightful holiday accommodations, each personally selected. Tuscan castles, Umbrian farmhouses. Seaside villas, lakeview cottages. Centrally-located apartments Venice, Rome, Florence. Week/month. 415-821-9345.

SANIBEL ISLAND: Gulffront 2 BR condo w/pool and tennis. Available weekly/monthly. Boozan '79, 201-522-8219

CENTURIES OLD FARMHOUSE at edge of Sabine hill town. Easy reach of Orvieto, Perugia, Assisi, Spoleto, Florence, Rome. Magnificent setting on 4 acres. Restored recently. Architect Ellen Jawdat of Washington, D.C., M.Arch. Harvard. Work executed by Valentini Ristauo of Rome. All modern comforts. C. Joseph, 1 Lincoln Plaza, New York, NY 10023, 212-873-5104.

PORT ANTONIO, JAMAICA: "Nirvana:" Fully equipped, staffed, 3 bedroom, 2 bath, beachfront villa on mile-long, mostly deserted beach. Surf, few tourists. $800/wk. in season. 207-359-4447.

LONDON RENTALS: Privately owned flats and houses in London's best areas offering comprehensive personal service at attractive prices. One week minimum stay. Call: A Place Like Home, London. 800-526-0215.

ST. BART'S, FRENCH WEST INDIES: Luxurious seaside villa surrounded by privacy, beautiful beaches and French restaurants. 412-687-2061.

PARIS. LEFT BANK APARTMENT: St. Germain, close to D'Orsay, Louvre, Rodin. Sunny. Fireplaces. Antiques. Luxuriously furnished. Memorable! 412-687-2061.

ROME, ITALY: 18th century estate villa. Great for families. Views!! 609-921-8595.

BRITISH VIRGIN ISLANDS: Our secluded beach house on beautiful Brewers Bay, Tortola. 3 baths, maid, bunk room. Weather perfect all year. Rates: R. H. Smith '42, Westover Park, Stamford, CT 06902; 203-323-2294.

MAD RIVER SUGARBUSH AREA: Comfortable farmhouse for up to 20 skiers. $350 per day. William Iler '51, 508-922-0010.

VAIL, CO: 3 BR plus loft. 5 min. from gondola and great skiing. $225/night. $275 during Christmas and spring break. Bruce Brookens '67; 303-761-8815.

VAIL-BEAVER CREEK: Rocky Mountain seclusion, minutes from skiing. Creek-side home sleeps six. No X-mas. 303-926-3907.

ST. JOHN: Fabulous private home near beach. Peaceful. Furnished. Box 12287, St. Thomas, VI 00801. 809-775-4266.

SUN VALLEY, ID: Luxurious, spacious, ski condo at base of Mt. Baldy in Warm Springs. 3 BRs, 3 baths, fireplace. Walk one block to lifts, restaurants, shops, apres ski. Bill Travers '71, 805-684-5473.

EXUMA, BAHAMAS: Magnificent hilltop view. Fully equipped, 4 bedrooms, van, private beach, housekeeper available. $1,000 weekly in season. 302-428-1455, evenings.

SEABROOK ISLAND, S.C.: Near historic Charleston, oceanfront 1 BR condo, 2 baths. Sleeps 4; great golf, tennis, restaurants, pelicans. Hugh Hanson '47. 215-649-7335. Princeton discounts!

SOUTH CENTRAL FRANCE. AUVERGNE near Romanesque Conques. Stone farmhouse: modern kitchen, sleeps 6. $900/mo. 703-960-6425.

SPAIN: Lovely 4 BR villa (pool) overlooking Mediterranean/village. Hess '64. 203-688-9333.

ST. JOHN, USVI: 2 BR villa at Lagoon Point, sensational views. Weekly $840-$1260 winter; $560-$840 summer. Valentine, 8 Fern Way, Madbury, NH 03820. 603-742-3063.

ELEUTHERA, BAHAMAS: Cotton Bay Club. Magnificent waterfront home. Trent Jones golf course 100 yards away. Snorkeling, terini, 3 bedrooms, Bertram sportsfisherman boat, pool, housekeeper. 617-722-7045.

IRELAND: Charming Georgian house in beautiful County Waterford. 4 BRs, 3 baths. Available all year. Low rental Nov. to June. 813-964-2465.

CASTLE HYDE: On the Blackwater River, County Cork, Southern Ireland. Exceptionally lovely 18th century Georgian house on 144 acres. 6 bedrooms, 5 modern baths, classic Renaissance gardens with fresh fruit and flowers. Fully staffed. Two miles of private trout and salmon fishing. Pheasant shooting. Available year round. Richard Kroon Y'64, 201-741-5692.

ITALY. CASTLES IN THE SKY or villas in the vineyard, the best city or country rentals all over Italy. American specialist based in Rome will design the perfect holiday. INTERNATIONAL SERVICES, Piazza di Spagna 35, 00187 Rome, Italy. Fax 011-39-6-684-0943. In U.S. 212-794-1534.

SCOTLAND—GLENEAGLES: Privately owned furnished, new 2-bedroom townhouse on grounds of Gleneagles Hotel estate. Central to highlands, St. Andrews, Edinburgh, Scottish links. $550/week. J. Murphy 513-281-0346.

JUPITER ISLAND, OCEAN FRONT HOME: P.O. Box 1546, Hobe Sound, FL 33475. 407-546-2571. Bush '50, '64, '75.

COME BACK TO JAMAICA! Enjoy the privacy of your own spacious 3 BR, 3 bath villa, "Clive House", at Tryall Golf and Beach Club near Montego Bay. Beautifully appointed and complete with it's own 20' x 40' pool. Cook, maid, laundry and gardener. Spectacular panoramic view of the Caribbean and our 18 hole championship golf course. Tennis, lovely sand beach and all water sports also on site for your enjoyment. Color brochure available on request. Call Liz Poley, w'55 or Susan Wylie weekdays 8-4:30. 612-339-1820.

PERFECT DESERT VACATION HOME: Bermuda Dunes, California. Elegant, 3 bedrooms, jacuzzi, private tennis court, swimming pool, mountain vistas, great weather and nearby golf. William Kopolovitz '66, 800-352-1144.

CENTRAL VERMONT: Restored 1830s home. 4 bedrooms, dormitory, 2½ baths. Fully equipped. Tennis, skiing, hiking nearby. $500/week. Mike Van Dusen '65. 202-244-3473.

MARTHA'S VINEYARD: New three bedroom contemporary, sleeps eight, waterviews, tennis, minutes to beaches, 609-924-7913 (office), 609-397-0147 (home).

NANTUCKET: Charming six bedroom Victorian, in-town, walk to beach. 617-449-4954.

ALGARVE, PORTUGAL: Luxury country villa. Sweeping seaviews, near beaches, golf, 3 BRs, 4½ baths. Swimming pool, staff. Available year-round with exceptions. 508-922-4763.

SANIBEL: Beach cottage 3/2 near Gulf & Gulf. Screened porches. Monthly, 609-737-1777. Backes '39.

ST. JOHN: Off-season rates. 2 bedroom villa, pool, spectacular view. 508-668-2078.

LONGBOAT KEY, FLORIDA: Right on bay. First floor condo. 2 BR/2 bath, tennis, pool. $2,600/month. Len Thomsen '56. 617-861-0796.

KEY LARGO, FLA.: 2 BR, 2 bath condo at the Anglers Club overlooking club marina on Card Sound. Tennis, par 3 golf course, croquet, and pool, $200/day. Frank Lovejoy '36. 305-367-2856.

KIAWAH ISLAND, S.C.: Fabulous beachfront house, 3 BR/bath, fully equipped. $1,500/wk Sept.—May; $2,000/wk June—August. 314-991-8768.

PROVIDENCIAS, TURKS AND CAICOS, BWI: Luxury "Villa Camilla" offers beauty, serenity on undiscovered tropical island. 3 bedroom/3 bath house fronts pristine 12-mile beach. Virgin snorkeling, diving. Sleeps 2—6. $2,000/wk high; $1,500/wk low. '71. 617-731-2194.

PERDIDO KEY, FLA.: Charming 2 BR, 2 B condominium 7th floor apartment, #706. Off-season rate Sept.—May 15. 800-338-2809.

COTSWOLDS: 17thC restored cottage. Historic Stanton Village, tour Stratford, Oxford, Bath, Broadway. Antiques, log fire, GCH, private garden, tv, washer/dryer, telephone, modern kitchen, sleeps four adults. Details: Tel: England 011-44-386-73-495; Fax 011-44-386-858-653. Whitfield House, Wood Stanway, GL54 5PG England.

NANTUCKET: New 3 BR, 2½ bath cape on 3 secluded acres; 914-779-1302.

MONTOLOKING, NJ: Adjacent beach, 4 BR, 2½. July $11,000. Aug. $12,000. 609-737-1150.

NEWPORT, RI: Victorian. 5/6 bedrooms. Families. Week, month, season. 401-846-5434.

WOODED CABIN on river, Valley of Virginia. $250/week. 703-348-5033.

VAIL TOWNHOUSE: Spacious 2 story, 2 BR, 2 bath. Fireplace, views. 5 min. to lift. $975/week. Brochure. 303-781-8048.

UNSPOILED AMELIA ISLAND (FLORIDA'S EAST COAST): Villas, homes/beach, golfside. Amelia Plantation, Summer Beach, Amelia Surf and Racquet, Amelia Retreat. From $84 daily/$504 weekly. Amelia Rental 800-874-8679. Brochure.

NANTUCKET ISLAND: Contemporary house, fully furnished. Near uncrowded beach. Six miles from town. Weekly. July through October. 216-721-2322.

BARBADOS: 6 BR, 5 bath villa on ocean, unique and secluded, private beach. Day 708-524-2055; evenings 708-441-5690.

CAPE COD, EASTHAM: Enjoy crowdless off-season rates in spectacular new lakeside home. Season 10. Available Sept. through June. 617-444-1339.

MARTHA'S VINEYARD: 4-bedroom, West Tisbury, waterview, private beach rights. Available June through September. No pets. Phone 414-352-2284.

VERMONT, MORETOWN: Remodeled farmhouse sleeps 10. 15 minutes to Mad River Glen, 20 mins. to Sugarbush, 40 mins. to Stowe. For rent week, weekend, month. 802-229-0051.

FOR SALE

GREAT CAMANOE, BVI: Secluded home, magnificent view on private island. 2 BR, baths. Land Rover and Whaler. Doug Martin '54. 203-426-2928.

MANHATTAN: If selling a co-op, condominium, or townhouse, call about our unique 200 brokerage firm multi-list program. Sharon Baum w/62, S.W. Bird & Co., 331 Madison Ave., New York, NY; 212-351-2416.

ISLAND HOUSE: See "For Rent, Stocking Island."

VAIL-BEAVER CREEK, COLORADO: Unique properties. 10% of commission proceeds donated, in your name, to the Yellowstone Bighorn Research Association in memory of my father, Professor Erling Dorf, Hon. '33. Bob Dorf 303-476-2421.

BOCA RATON, FLA., YACHTSMAN DREAM: Deep-water slip, 3,000 sq. ft. townhouse facing Boca Raton Hotel. Next to beach club and Boca Inlet. Magnificent home or investment. Phone 407-466-4219. 407-391-9072.

MANHATTAN, EAST 70s: Beautifully appointed 1 bedroom co-op. Completely renovated, modern appliances and windows, hardwood floors. Doorman. Perfect for personal or corporate use. $155k, low maintenance charge. 212-772-7135.

MANHATTAN/BATTERY PARK CITY: Two bedroom high floor corner condominium with spectacular Hudson River views. Walk to work downtown. Luxury doorman building. $335,000, maint. $621. Jennifer Jordan '78. Office: 212-969-6259, home: 212-945-3113.

PRINCETON TOWNSHIP, 31 acres (part of 18th century woodlots of University). Single owner since 1900. $1,500,000. L. V. Silvester, Jr. '45, Executor, Box 52, Princeton, 08542. 609-921-6171.

COUNTRY CLUB SETTING: Great South Florida location in one of Ft. Lauderdale's finest suburbs, 4 bedrooms, 2½ baths & sparkling pool overlooking the golf course! $264,900. Call Pat Hance & Co. Realtor, 800-445-3964.

ADIRONDACK ESTATE: Unique 3,000 acre forest preserve, with 150 acre private glacial lake, in northern Adirondacks. Extensive wildlife, including nesting loons. Six bedroom, 1890 main lodge, totally renovated. Boat house, guest house, and barn. Suitable as family compound or corporate conference center. Color brochure available. Call Kathy Gilligan, Merrill Thomas Realty, Lake Placid, 518-523-2519.

OAK FOREST, PENNINGTON, NJ: 4 bedroom Colonial, large 19th century barn, cottage, 3 acres, convenient to schools, shopping. $375,000. R. Michael Carr '72. 609-737-0710.

PRIVATE ESTATE/SMALL FARM NEAR PRINCETON: 1840 stone farmhouse on 45 country acres in Sourland mountains of Hopewell. Perfect blend of old and new. Must be seen to appreciate. Contact Vint Lawrence '77. 609-466-0630.

MARTHA'S VINEYARD LAND: 160 acres undeveloped land on Tisbury Great Pond. Privacy and beauty. Perfect for private compound. Principals only. Contact Vint Lawrence '77. 609-466-0630.

STONE HARBOR, NEW JERSEY: On the beach 3-bedroom luxury condo, indoor pool, jacuzzi, 2 car parking, exclusive 23 unit association. $360,000. Ralph C. Zagrabbe '72. 215-557-1740(w), 215-649-9899(h).

FOR SALE/FOR RENT

NANTUCKET—Come join the 400 happy Princeton families. We have large and small rentals, investment opportunities, estates and commercial enterprises. AND we give your investments TENDER, LOVING CARE—PREFERRED PROPERTIES. Nancie B. Taylor, w/43, Lucy T. Eaton, d/43. 508-228-2320, 800-338-7715.

WASHINGTON, DC, METROPOLITAN area, Northern Virginia, Maryland. Sales, rentals, land, property management. Colleen Finks w/61, associate broker, Pardoe & Graham, 6729 Curran St., McLean, VA 22101; 703-734-7020; evs., 703-821-2850.

GREENWICH VILLAGE LANDMARK SINGLE FAMILY TOWNHOUSE: Small but adequate size and with much charm. In convenient, vivid area—Bedford Street between Grove and Christopher. Three bedrooms, four fireplaces, dining room, patio, terrace, greenhouse, cellar. We've moved to suburbs. Asking $750,000 sale, $3,900 rent. 914-764-0840.

WANTED TO RENT

FRANCE—PROVENCE—VAR: House, sleep 4, May 25-June 22, 1991. Robert Lilien '48. 212-876-0733.

RESORTS & TRAVEL

LONDON, ENGLAND: Luxury self-catering apartments in the heart of Mayfair. British Breaks, Ltd., Box 1176, Middleburg, Virginia 22117. Tel. 703-786-6971. Fax 703-687-6291.

FLORIDA KEYS, BIG PINE KEY: Fantastic open water view, Key Deer Refuge, National Bird Sanctuary, stilt house, 3/2, screened porches, fully furnished, stained glass windows, swimming, diving, fishing, boat basin. 305-665-3832.

ITALY: INTIMATE, SMALL GROUP TOURS TO UNUSUAL DESTINATIONS: Tuscan Islands and Hill-towns; The Palio of Siena; The Riviera; Mythological Routes in Sicily. La Pergola, Tours Inc.: A special company for the special traveler. Call for 1991 schedule: 914-358-6035.

ARIZONA GUEST RANCH: Riding ranch-bred horses, tennis, pool, fantastic birding, shooting, all in a verdant valley surrounded by historic mountains. Season, Nov. 1 to May 15, limited to 40 guests. Brochure, Circle Z Ranch, Box 194 P-6, Patagonia, AZ 85624, winter 602-287-2091, summer 814-425-3768, Don Simmons P'49 manager.

SCOTLAND: Ardsheal House, historic home of the Stewarts of Appin, now a country house hotel owned and run by Jane & Bob Taylor (Princeton '53). Located on coast in magnificent West Highlands. Superb food. Brochure: Ardsheal House, Kentallen of Appin, Argyll PA38 4BX, Scotland. Tel.: 44-63174-227. Fax: 44-63174-342. Open Easter to Nov.

ENGLISH CANALS with historian-skipper. Good food, no schedule. $595 weekly, inclusive. Box 2083, Springfield, Mass. 01101. Tel. 413-562-9296.

ENGLAND-WALES WALKING TRIP: Welsh Coast, Welsh Border, Yorkshire Dales, Lake District, Cambridge, London. Day hiking, moderate pace, several sightseeing days. 18th year, 6th with adults. August 3—21, 1991. Lucy and Bill Farrar '40, Guilford, CT 06437. 203-453-5404.

BED & BREAKFAST

PRINCETON AREA: Alternative lodging in comfortable private homes. Bed & Breakfast of Princeton, P.O. Box 571, Princeton, NJ 08540; 609-924-3189.

CAMPS

THE SUSQUEHANNOCK CAMPS, founded 1905 by G. Carlton Shafer '03, still under same family management of E.H. Shafer '44, G.C. Shafer '51, Priscilla H. Shafer '83. Summer resident brother/sister camps on private lakes in northeastern PA. Top quality staff instruct team and individual sports, waterfront, riding, arts and crafts, ecology. ACA accredited camps. Write Box 71, R.D. 1, Brackney, PA 18812, or call 717-967-2323/215-356-2436.

Crapp Family Lodge

The flavor of Austria on a mountainside in Vermont

For information about one of America's most distinguished resorts, please call 1-800-826-7000
 in Vermont 802-253-8511
 or write Stowe, Vermont 05672

ATTENTION PRINCETON ALUMNI/AE

A new organization of progressive alumni/ae has been formed to support progressive students and issues at Princeton by:

- *directing students toward social change jobs
- *supporting student activists
- *informing alumni/ae of current student concerns
- *forging contacts among progressive alumni/ae

For More Information:
Progressive Princeton Alumni/ae
 8 Autumn Lane
 Trenton, NJ 08638
 (609) 882-8446

KINDRED SPIRITS

Confidential Partner Location
(213) 441-1518

For successful, discerning individuals, we conduct an extensive, personalized, regional, national, or international search for that special someone.

Owned and operated by Ivy League alumni.

WANTED TO BUY

RARE BOOKS AND FIRST EDITIONS: We are interested in purchasing libraries or single volumes from the 15th to the 20th century. Top prices paid. Also, expert appraisals for individuals or institutions. David L. O'Neal '60, Antiquarian Booksellers, Inc., 234 Clarendon St., Boston, MA 02116; 617-266-5790.

OLD TRAINS: Private collector interested in sets and collections. Contact David A. Hoffman, M.D. '54, 1330 Penn Ave., Wyomissing, PA 19610. 215-373-4271.

BUSINESS SERVICES

BUILD UP YOUR BUSINESS. To increase sales, you need professionally created brochures, ads, mailings, catalogs, logos, etc. Word-Wise Advertising, founded 1973, offers a complete creative service to the small and mid-size business. Building a business is tough enough — don't make things worse by using unsophisticated marketing materials. Word-Wise can give you Fortune 500 style at reasonable cost. Call 212-247-0124.

GOODS & SERVICES

NANNIES: Trained at Nannies of Cleveland School, available for positions nationwide. Call Monica Bassett w'61. 216-521-4650.

MEMBERSHIP COMPUTER SYSTEM for PC: Membership, letters, planning, attendance, billing, contributions for all clubs, societies, associations, foundations. 903-876-2224.

WEDGWOOD DINNER PLATES: Blue and white, various scenes. 1930's. Call 212-689-3991. Write: 64 Springwood Lane, East Hampton, NY 11937.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The Office of the Dean of the Chapel, The Alumni Council, AIDS Activist Coalition for Education, the Fund for Reunion and the Gay and Lesbian Alliance at Princeton would like to make contact with the family, friends, companions of Princetonians who have died of AIDS so that we might extend the support of the University community in the planning of a commemorative event. All information will be confidential upon request. Please write or phone: Sue Anne Steffey Morrow, Associate Dean of the Chapel, 21 Murray-Dodge Hall, Princeton University, Princeton, NJ 08544. 609-258-3049.

PLACE YOUR AD IN THE PRINCETON EXCHANGE

Name: _____

Address: _____

City: _____ State: _____ Zip: _____

Telephone, Work: _____ Home: _____

My ad should run _____ time(s), beginning the month of _____

Classification: _____

Text: _____

Payment for all insertions must accompany initial request.

My check for $_____ is enclosed. Rates per insertion: 1-5 insertions, $1.50 per word; 6-10 insertions, $1.45 per word; 11-17 insertions, $1.40 per word.

Send to: Princeton Exchange, Princeton Alumni Weekly, 41 William St., Princeton, NJ 08540 (609)258-4886. No phone orders please. Issues are published 17 times from September through July. Ads will appear five-six weeks after receipt. When calculating payment, multiply number of words X number of insertions X rate per word to arrive at total price. P.O. Box number counts as two words, phone number as one word. No charge for zip code or class numerals. We cannot accept PAW box numbers. Please make checks payable to Princeton Alumni Weekly.

12 ARTHUR C. HOLDEN Box 182 Washington, CT 06793; 203-868-7063

Reference to the 1912 NASSAU HERALD confirms the fact that our Class, in designating preferences, elected Rudyard Kipling as its favorite poet. Kipling gave us, particularly through his poems, an insight into the changes that were taking place in customs, ambitions, and effort. These have grown even greater and more significant since the time when 1912 was taking stock of its thoughts and experiences just before its graduation.

Recently we reread one of Kipling's most gripping pieces of verse. As late as 1935 he wrote a poem which I consider one of his greatest, entitled "Hymn of Breaking Strain." Today we should ask ourselves whether humanity has made adequate progress to be able, after failure, to "rise and build anew."

We have a memorial in this issue.

13 ALISON R. BRYAN Box F Frenchtown, NJ 08825

On Dec. 20 yours truly was made a proud great-grandfather for the fourth time. We are now blessed with two boys and two girls!

Richard G. Adams '63, son of Frank Dennette Adams, asks how to acquire a 1913 banner. Mrs. (Virginia) Adams, his widow, sends greetings from Chestnut Hill, Mass. She hopes to hear from us when we visit our daughter in nearby Gloucester.

Mrs. Charles A. Auger, a widow, has moved from Englewood, N.J., to 26 Nauyaug Point Rd., Mystic, CT 06355-3233.

Jim Harrington '47, son of the Rev. Burritt Harrington, who was famous along with Arthur Fox for his piano playing talents, has a granddaughter, Erin, who thoroughly enjoys piano playing. "Perhaps we'll finally have a descendant of my father who will approach him in ability at the piano," writes Jim.

Mrs. Laurance Day (Toni) Howell, a widow, sends December greetings from 250 Oakwood Ct., Winston-Salem, NC 27103. Her husband, Larry, was a special friend of mine. I well remember his cross-country running.

Greetings also come from Mrs. Alan F. (Dee) Randolph at 656 19th Pl. S.W., Vero Beach, FL 32962. William John Logan's granddaughter, an honorary 1913 Class member as well as graduate of the first Princeton class to graduate women, sends greetings, with a picture card of her husband, Stanley Smith, herself, and their four children. Marjorie lives at 1085 Light House, Hilton Head Island, S.C. Florence Bruder, daughter of Judge Joseph Smith, sends warm greetings from Fairlawn, N.J.

And so my wife, Edith, and I send warm greetings from Frenchtown, N.J., and may our readers have a blessed and happy new year.

17 IKE GRAINGER, c/o Chemical Bank 30 Rockefeller Plaza, Ste. 6100 New York, NY 10112

We recently received a letter from the son of our late classmate, Henry D. M. Sherrerd, Henry Jr. of the Class of 1950. With it he enclosed an article he submitted to the Bangor DAILY NEWS on Nov. 10 and 11, 1990, quoting excerpts from the letters his father wrote to his mother from France during WWI, when Henry first served as an ambulance driver with the American Field Service and subsequently at the Verdun front with the U.S. Army. The correspondence began Oct. 26, 1917, and continued through Nov. 13, 1918. The letters graphically portray the thoughts, emotions, and dreams of peace held by the WWI doughboys. Henry Jr. resides in Dexter, Me.; his mother Lois Reeside Sherrerd still lives in Haddonfield, N.J., where she and Henry resided during their married life.

Steve Hirsch spent the holiday season in Calif. with his two daughters and their families. The Grainger was in Wilmington, N.C., at which time he was blessed with a new great-granddaughter, Catherine Grainger, named for Ike's beloved Catchie.

We have received numerous letters from current recipients of 1917 scholarships, and as space permits in future issues, we will share the thoughts expressed with '17ers.

19 GEORGE B. LARKIN 14 Lake Forest Dr. Charlottesville, VA 22901

Casey Downing most kindly sent information of the following 1919ers. Paul Olmstead said a few creaks followed a car accident in May. He enjoys seeing his grandchildren get advance degrees. Doc Irvine's wife, Kitty, tells us that Doc is still playing nine holes but does not mention the score.

Burnham Hockaday gets around with a cane or a walker. His wife is a victim of Parkinson's. Their daughter is social events editor of the K.C. STAR.

20 SALLY S. McALPIN W'20 Box 670 Princeton, NJ 08542

A welcome letter from Katharine Dall mentions their pleasure in keeping in touch through the Class notes and encloses a fine collection of old snapshots Curt had stashed away hither and yon. She reports that he never puts photos in an album! I have asked her to identify several of them for us, and while we wait their return let us look at a letter from June Lee '94, a freshman who is a recipient of our Harold H. Helm Scholarship. She thanks us warmly and adds the following: "Now, I am enjoying Princeton to the fullest. The academics and all the University has to offer are everything I expected and more. I played on the Women's Golf Team in the fall. I am a member of the Freshman Singers and recently made the newly formed Princeton cheer-leading squad."

I will close with a quotation from a calendar: "Age is not important unless you're a cheese."

21 A. EDWARD CONOVER 331 Lower Dollington Rd., Apt. C-4 Newtown, PA 18940

Sat., Feb. 16 is Alumni Day. From past experience we should have a couple of representatives on hand. The more the merrier.

Back in the late thirties I was on a train (remember trains?) from Seattle to Chicago. In the middle of a Sat. afternoon we stopped at Gardiner, Mont. to pick up travelers from Yellowstone Park. I was relaxing in the club car when who should walk in but Shorty Seiberling with his wife, Hattie, and two teenage children. Needless to say we had a great afternoon refreshing ourselves and reminiscing. That's the find of socializing that you can't imagine doing on the flying movie theaters of today.

The Class extends warmest birthday greetings to Ben Benua, who will be 91 Feb. 13, and to Miller Scarborough, whose 93rd birthday will be Feb. 18.

Two seniors have written to thank for scholarship help. Bernard Hurwith lives in Penfield, N.Y., and is beneficiary of the Douglas Martin Littleton War Memorial Scholarship. He is a member of Tower Club. His concentration is political science, but his future plans are still open.

A recipient of the Class of 1921 Scholarship is David Shane of Hingham, Mass. His concentration is mechanical and aerospace engineering. His future plans have not yet jelled. Our best wishes to both these members of 1991.

22 JACK REYNOLDS, JOHN CARTER '60 103 East 84th St. New York, NY 10028

We recently received a probate notice that the Class of 1922 Foundation has received a generous bequest from Mrs. R. Sterling Mueller, the widow of our former classmate, who passed away July 28, 1990. Her generosity will enable the foundation to continue its wonderful support of widows and classmates who are in need. The foundation is operated by five trustees who are children of '22 classmates and the principal ultimately will be added to the Princeton Univ. general funds.

Unfortunately we have also learned that Dr. Francis Wood passed away in Dec. Dr. Wood was a co-founder of the foundation and served as president and trustee for many years. In addition, I am sorry to report that Mrs. Narcissa Hargroves, widow of Carney, also a former foundation president, died in Dec. Her daughter, Emily Hargroves Fisher W'57, is now serving on the foundation board.

From Annual Giving notes: "Although I don't swim in the beautiful Pacific any more, I do get out daily in my wheelchair and then do some walking in the park or along the beach. I just recently celebrated my 91st birthday with lunch at a lovely Hawaiian-type restaurant. Aloha, John H. Slauson."

A very good piece of news to accompany the attached photo. Jack Reynolds is scheduled to move to Leisure Park, 1400 Route 70, Lakewood, NJ 08701, 201-370-0444, after a long and tedious convalescence at the Princeton Nursing Home, recovering from a broken pelvis. Jack has served as secretary of the Class for four elected terms, after replacing Bob Bueckner in 1975. He would like to hear from all of you by letter or phone. We wish everyone a happy new year and look forward to receiving notes and photos for the column.

23 LIBBY GOOD 201 W. Evergreen Ave., Apt. 716 Philadelphia, PA 19118

Mrs. Paul Bargamin (Joan) has transformed a room in her house into "Princetoniana." Since her father, the late Rowland W. Nelson, lived with her until his death, his room was furnished with an orange and black tweed couch, a huge (2 ft. by 3 ft.) 1923 banner, and assorted Princeton glasses, ashtrays, and memorabilia.

Rogers I. Marquis declares that he has little to report on "this gloomy, tardy-letter-writing, bill-paying kind of day," but that he sends his regards to all. He reflects "if we have to accept aging, we are satisfied and reasonably happy to be doing it in these surroundings and circumstances."

Mrs. George Spottiswoode (Jean) is enjoying improved health and living in Falls Church, Va. She and her daughter spent two wonderful weeks in Scotland and England this fall, looking for "roots." She says, "We were thrilled to find George's ancestral acres... we found ancient foundation walls, went to church in the wonderful old church where Spottiswoodes of the 17th century may have worshipped. How he would have loved it!"

Mrs. Augustin R. Weisbaaer (Margaret) sums up the feeling of many Class members with this rather concise sentiment: "Still chugging along."

Final note: Due to a misprint on our '23 dues envelopes, many of the more obedient members of the Class made out their checks to the Class of '30! All's corrected now, thanks to a little extra work by Betty Gorman.

We regret to report the death of John Alan Hisey Oct. 6, 1990.

24 RICHARD H. HOBBS
862 Prospect Ave.
Winnetka, IL 60093

As we advertised earlier Dorothy and Paul Barringer were in Australia last fall for an important meeting. At our request Paul has prepared an outline which we paraphrase herewith. The Meteoritical Society consists of over 900 scientists from more than 30 nations and a handful of "lay" observers of which Paul Barringer is one. These specialized scientists are known as meteoritists and are engaged in the study of the extraterrestrial outer-space "junk" which has bombarded our earth and other planets since such mutual accretion formed our solar system five billion years ago. This year's annual meeting of the society convened in Perth, Australia, geologically the most ancient land mass on earth, containing seven identified meteoritic impact sites (craters or "astroblesmes").

On their return trip, Dorothy and Paul stopped in Canberra to see again the recently completed parliament house. One of their grandsons spent five years working on this quite unique and impressive structure as a young supervising architect. Built into and partially replacing a small hill, it is topped by an enormous flag pole from which flies and out-sized Australian flag. Ordinary citizens can literally walk over the heads of their sitting politicians for whom they openly voice limited respect.

A brief holiday followed in semi-tropical Queensland. Port Douglas, Cooktown, and the Great Barrier Reef, where Captain Cook nearly lost his vessel, were fascinating and refreshingly different from the rest of the world. The independent friendliness of the people in this sparsely populated region gives meaning to the phrase "Progress is a suspect word."

We regret to report that Raymond H. Maurice died Nov. 25, 1990. A memorial will follow.

25 JOHN L. K. JENNEY
Box 123
Montchanin, DE 19710

ALUMNI DAY: Join us at the Class table for lunch in Jadwin Gym Feb. 16.

At the meeting of the Class Executive Committee before the Class luncheon in N.Y., Treasurer Dill reported that the Class treasury was again solvent as a result of gifts by widows in addition to dues. A financial report of the 65th reunion was presented and showed a surplus of receipts over expenditures of $700 which has been added to the carry forward balance in the Reunion Fund. Although we are now members of the Old Guard we will continue with all previous Class events, including the dinner at the Nassau Club on Fri. night of Reunions (this year June 7). The Class will be invited to attend the Old Guard lunch before the P-rade on Saturday.

The long-distance award for the occasion was earned again this year by Harvey Phillips who made a three-day event of it—two nine-hour bus trips from and back to Bradford with two nights in N.Y. His contribution to the lunch was the recitation of two poems composed by President MacMillan (whose hidden talent Harvey had uncovered). He also reported the sale of his 1973 Mustang which had carried him 171,000 miles—"Louise and I took a final ride to Warren—top down, glorious fall color for a last ride." Since then Louise has had an eye operation from which she is recovering.

Phoebe Connor had the opportunity of looking over the building restoration now going on at the Princeton Club. It will be recalled that her husband, Frank, was president of the club at the time the move was made from the old clubhouse on Madison Ave. Jim Niels's son, Jim Jr., who had come down with his father, and Edith Eglin, daughter-in-law of Arch Eglin, also stopped by.

We regret to report the deaths of Dick Hunsburger Dec. 15 and Henry Steeger Dec. 25, 1990.

26 ROBERT WOLFORTH
57 Rockwell Rd.
Ridgefield, CT 06877

A bequest from the estate of Leticia McGovern, widow of our Dinty McGovern, has been received recently by the University. Under the terms of the legacy all funds have gone directly to the Class of 1926 Scholarship Fund.

Laid low by a stroke while alone in his N.Y. apartment last June, Chick Evans was luckily discovered by the pastor of his church, and after two months in the hospital, followed by therapy, is again at 15 East 82nd St., N.Y., NY 10028. Walking has now replaced Chick's former bicycling and swimming activities.

Pennswood Village, Newtown, Penn., gained another loyal Princetonian when Assoc. Mbr. Jane Silberfeld settled there recently near good friends Rita and Dick Post.

Ed Kase, who reports the arrivals of great-grandsons numbers four and five, spent some time last fall helping to barnstorm around Santa Fe for son Ed III '54, who was seeking re-election as a district judge—and won. Ed has made a remarkable recovery from a serious stroke of some years ago.

The graduation of his only granddaughter from the Emma Willard School on June 8 will keep Draper Lewis from attending our 65th reunion.

Assoc. Mbr. Ruth Buttrey reports on two other Princetonians in the Buttrey family: son Ted Jr. '50 '53, who is with the classics faculty at Cambridge Univ., England, where he is also keeper of the coins in the Fitzwilliam Museum and president of the Royal Numismatic Society; and son Jerrold '58, who is a history teacher at St. Andrews School, a tutor at Episcopal Seminary and director of the Central American Resources Center.

Stuart, Fla., is President Hazelwood's destination for the next months; back to Oldfield, L.I., in May.

We have a memorial in this issue.

27 NELSON R. BURR
36 Lexington Rd.
West Hartford, CT 06119

On Nov. 7 Ted Bachran reported that the response to our Class dues notice had been good "so far." He was beginning to doubt that we could reach the coveted 90%. Come on, sit down and sign that check!

From his son, William D., we learn that Donald R. McLean died Aug. 9. William notes that Don's great-great-grandfather was Samuel Finley, president of Princeton, 1761–1766, when it was called the College of New Jersey. His great-great-grand uncle, John Maclean Jr., was president, 1853–68.

Bill Flits announces that his new address is The Gables, 201 Granite Rd., Guilford, CT 06437. Col. Nick Nichols spent all summer in his vacation house at Grand Father Golf and Country Club, Linville, N.C. He will be at Bear's Paw Golf and Country Club, Naples, Fla., in Jan. and Feb.

W. Brace Krag suffered the loss of his wife, Judy (Dobbs '27, Smith '31), who had a stroke Oct. 25, after 55 years of marriage.

Nuala O'Connor '89, assistant editor of PAW, writing to the secretary, cheers us up! "The centerpiece of the Wilson College quadrangle is Clapp-1927 Hall, the newest addition to the college, and the most highly favored dormitory. It houses the Gadebusch Room, which is kept as a lounge for special events, though it has been used frequently for its TV and VCR components. We thank the Class of '27 for their role in strengthening the college system."

Classmate "Lam" Clifford has called to the secretary's attention an error in the Dec. 5 PAW. Lam is not in a retirement home in Penn., as reported, but rather, he is in his long-time home in Worcester, Mass. The secretary begs pardon for the error.

We have a memorial in this issue.

28 R. PARK JOHNSON
Box 28
Penney Farms, FL 32079; 904-284-8698

Some readers may have seen the newspaper accounts of the Breeder's Cup horse races at Belmont Park on Oct. 27, and the tragic accident which brought down the brilliant filly, last year's juvenile champion, Go for Wand. It was not until I read the account of the distaff race by William Nack in SPORTS ILLUSTRATED of Nov. 5 that I learned that the owner of Go for Wand is Mrs. Jane DuPont Lunger of Wilmington, Del., widow of our classmate Harry Lunger, who died in 1976. The breakdown and death of Go for Wand reminded me of a similar incident 15 years ago at Belmont Park, when another champion filly, Ruffian, suffered a broken leg and had to be destroyed. I associated Ruffian with Wilmington and some Princeton connection. So I wrote my condolences to Jane Lunger, and asked her about Ruffian. She replied that Ruffian was not a filly of the Lungers' Christiana stable, but was owned by the late Stuart S. Jenney '29.

Nancy and Stratton Wynkoop of Ponte Vedra Beach, Fla., have welcomed, via their daughter Susan and her husband Davied Killian, twin grandsons born Dec. 12 in Jacksonville. They wonder if these are the youngest grandchildren (not to mention twins) and maybe the last grandchildren of the Class of 1928. The two healthy six-pound newcomers are named Davied and Peter. Speaking of multiple-birth grandchildren, Andy McBride mentioned that last May he and his wife attended the fourth birthday of their youngest son's triplets, two boys and a girl.

We are sorry to report that Ralph Blank died Oct. 19, 1990, at his home in Summit, N.J. His wife, Grace, died in 1985. Our sympathy is with his daughters, Elizabeth Hartley and Barbara Danser. We have a memorial in this issue.

29 LOUIS F. KEMP
12 Winthrop Rd.
Guilford, CT 06437; 203-453-4646

Alumni Day will be Sat., Feb. 16. The University has planned a notable program—join the 3,000 alumni, parents, and friends for this special occasion. Our Class will have a table at the luncheon in Jadwin Gym. Bill Curtis continues to replenish the news pipeline, forwarding items from classmates. Buzz Irvine observes, "Only the GOOD die young." Put Goldsbury relates, "My bad hip has cut down on my walking and hiking. I'm no longer a 'bird watcher'—I am now a 'bird philatelist.' Otherwise, I'm in pretty good shape for 84." Charlie Thompson still operates between St. Louis and La Jolla on about a 50-50 basis. In the travel dept., Prof. Mac McMillan visited Portugal and Spain last June and did sailing off Maine in July. And Emily Ridgeway, Bill's widow writes that she's enjoying good health and spent last summer at Fisher's Island. Don Miller sagely reports, "At our age, any news is likely to be bad news, So I am glad to report, 'No news.'" Tom Willard last fall related that he continues working daily on his book, ADVENTURES OF THE CINEMATIC FRONTIER, and that Mary and he continue their hobby, ballroom dancing. Neut Noble had a great trip to Alaska on a Lindblad ship, SEA BIRD, with 70 passengers but no LOVE BOAT. Had all the family, including a 10-year-old granddaughter. A cheerful note from Skip Wells, "Old, sick, and senile."

30 HUBERT A. "RED" SCHNEIDER
8008 Westover Rd.
Bethesda, MD 20814

Don't forget the Class luncheon in Delray Beach on Feb. 12. For details, see the Jan. 23 PAW, or call Fred Frost at 407-272-6670.

Seen at the Yale game in New Haven in Nov. were Virginia and Don Sperry and Wally Ruckert. Wally drove down from the Cape and stayed with the Sperrys. After the game they all attended a party given by the Princeton Assn. of New England.

In an earlier issue we mentioned that Bill Roberts had taken a cruise with his daughter from N.Y. to Montreal. Since then we have learned that during a stop in Provincetown on Cape Cod Bill was able to visit Joe Hawtborne and his wife and to talk with Wally Ruckert at his home in Eastham. After attending a conference in Memphis in late Oct., Bill drove over to Hilton Head, S.C., to visit a cousin. While there he talked with Bill Clark and Herb Faber, who live there in retirement. Bill Clark has diabetes and has had a couple of heart attacks and strokes, but is getting along quite well and plays golf with Herb a few times a week. Herb is well but unfortunately his wife is in poor health and he can't leave her for any length of time.

The Alumni Council has admitted to a number of errors in the Class directory distributed last Oct. and is printing a correct one. You may have it by now.

Al Wood spent Christmas and New Year's with his son and family in the San Francisco area, following which they all went off to Hawaii for a few weeks. During the same holiday period your secretary took a cruise from Puerto Rico to Los Angeles via the Canal. After spending the summer in Sun City, Ariz., Norma and Dick Pieters cruised from Vancouver to Ft. Lauderdale via the Canal.

We have memorials in this issue.

31 HUGH T. KERR
15-01-U Meadow Lakes
Hightstown, NJ 08520; 609-448-4100

A Summit, N.J. newspaper pic of a '31 Ford station wagon comes from Arch Laurence, a Summite who describes himself as a "yo-yo patient at the local Overlook Hospital."

Recently, Jack Herrick attended the 25th anniversary of the Herrick Memorial Chapel, Occidental College. It was an interfaith celebration including a Sikh invocation, a Buddhist chant, Muslim, Jewish, and Hindu prayers, a Mormon and Sioux Indian reading, and much more. The chapel was named for Jack's parents.

HERE & THERE: Hugh Forbes (who sometimes signs himself as BBBB) corrects a previous report on musical '31ers to note that he sang in both the Glee Club and the Chapel Choir. Norrie Houghton advises that his memoirs will be published under the title ENTRANCE AND EXITS: A LIFE IN AND OUT OF THE THEATER.

A fine appreciative letter from Patrick G. Dean '92, present holder of the Eugene Homans Scholarship. He comes from Alabama, majors in politics, plans on medical school, and is, of course, in Gene's footsteps, a member of the varsity golf team. He says he feels very "fortunate to be attending Princeton, and this scholarship has helped me take advantage of an excellent educational opportunity." Gene died in 1965, but his name lives on in this scholarship. With Patrick on the scene, things look bright for the future. Remember, the reason why we blame things on the younger generation is because there's only one other alternative.

Alumni Day lunch at Jadwin Gym Feb. 16, followed by the Service of Remembrance in the Chapel.

32 MAITLAND A. EDEY
1199 Park Ave.
New York, NY 10128

As predicted in this column, the biography of William Paley by Sally Bedell Smith, Jim Rowbotham's daughter, is a hit. It got a front-page rave review in the N.Y. TIMES Sun. book section and another a few days later in the daily. Meanwhile, Jim has been in the news himself. Recently ARCO gave him one of its coveted awards for retired employees who have been outstanding in public service. Jim was cited for his work as a fundraiser for the Radnor Fire Co. and Ambulance, whose participation he has built steadily over a ten-year period.

The Class dinner at Princeton's Nassau Club was a grand success. Twenty-seven classmates, wives, and friends attended and were greatly entertained by a slide show presented by Joe Johnson, describing his boyhood home on the Gan River in China, which he revisited with his family 63 years later. What an experience that must have been.

Moody Alford is having a super time in Florida with golf (par-three holes), tennis (seniors only), swimming, and gin rummy, where he and his friends have worked out a mad game with five players on a side. Jay Chadwick, on the other hand, wouldn't go near Florida. He's still too busy with future, planning for his Maryland Midland Railway. By McCoy reports good health thanks to some replacement parts: pacemaker, hearing aid, and left eye implant; wife, Biddy, is all original equipment. Joe Nicholson is still practicing medicine. Bud Mof-fatt is still traveling (doesn't say where), Dan Richer is still kicking and breathing. Frank West has moved to smaller quarters in Carmel Valley Manor as a retirement step. Naibaniel Gardner, we are sorry to report, suffered a stroke two years ago and has been hospitalized since.

We are happy to note that our classmate Laury Rockefeller will receive this year's Woodrow Wilson Award at the Alumni Day luncheon in Princeton on Feb. 16.

We report with sorrow the deaths of classmates Norman Drey May 6, 1990, and Joseph Edgar Nov. 27, 1990, and also the death May 11, 1989, of Gil High's widow, Jo Amanda.

33 ARTHUR MOODY
600 E. Cathedral Rd., Apt. A314
Philadelphia, PA 19128

The weather cooperated beautifully on Dec. 20, when a substantial group of classmates, wives, and one widow gathered at the Nassau Club for the annual Christmas party. A number of regulars were missing, such as the Carters, the Greens, the Heusons and the Redpaths, but the following attended: Peg and Bill Cabn, Bettie and Charlie Davis, Frances and Maddy Haytbe, Hildy Hellerson, Connie and Ed Holschub, Justine and Bob Keidel, Sam Loveland, Rita and Dave Ludlum, Maevie and Curly Marsh, Becky and Art Moody, Elsie and Ray Paul, Jack Pyle, Naomi and Lou Reik, Weedy and Jack Stokes, and Fred Williams and Ilse Zeisel. Carols were sung, led by Curly Marsh, Ed Holschuh, et al. Bob Keidel asked for a show of hands in support of the planned mini-reunion at Sky Top next Oct. 15-17. The strong response indicates that it may be more maxi than mini.

Note to classmates in the Philadelphia area: Jim Rowbotham '32, has reinvigorated the monthly Old Guard luncheons at the Racquet Club on the first Wed. Bill Croul, Jack Bishop, and Sam Loveland are among recent attendees.

We are sorry to report the death Nov. 17, 1990, of C. B. Perryclear, at North Falmouth, Mass.

Several classmates have sent news of the death of Al Sieminski Dec. 13, 1990, in McLean, Va. Because Al graduated with '34, the University lists him with them, and they will prepare his memorial for PAW. We still look on him as a classmate, one of whom we are proud. He roomed with Sedg Snedeker, was in Tiger Inn, and played on the 150-lb. football team and rowed on the 150-lb. crew.

Don't forget Curly Marsh and Annual Giving.

34 RALPH K. FITCHIE
4347 Province Line Rd.
Princeton, NJ 08540

Nancy and Herb Burns are making plans to attend our spring lunch in Princeton Apr. 13. "Don't count me out," says Herb, although his poor eyesight "gives me a lot of trouble."

Arlene and Art Jones reuned with Anne and Chuck Reed for lunch last summer in Morrisville, Vt., en route to a board meeting of Vermont's Public Television (VT-ETV) at old Fort Ethan Allen, where Art learned to ride a Cavalry horse in 1930.

Phebe and Peo Maresi entertained Katie (the widow of John) Swigart last fall, "all the way from California" at their "very quiet place in the Scottish borders" (Greenlaw, Berwickshire). The Maresis often drive 20 miles to visit the nearest city, and see only two cars.

Arthur Solomon, who founded the Biophysical Laboratory at the Harvard Medical School in 1946 and who will continue full-time research there, will teach first-year medical students again for about two and a half months and lead a tutorial group.

Mary Blair (the widow of Ed) Wardrop died last year. Since Ed's death, in 1963, she has contributed regularly to Annual Giving in his memory. Now Ed's and her son, James R. Wardrop, is following her example, memorializing as well his grandfather, William Miller Wardrop '99, and his great-uncle, James Richmond Wardrop '01.

John Young spent two weeks last year in Belize (abutting Mexico and Guatemala) for the International Executive Service Corps (I.E.S.C.). He may return this year for two months.

Some class!

35 JOSEPH C. HAZEN JR.
94 Essex Rd.
Summit, NJ 07901

KUDOS. Don O'Meara was recently elected president of the Princeton Club of Vero Beach, Fla., one

Swimming Hall of Famer

ALBERT VANDE WEGHE '40 was inducted into the International Swimming Hall of Fame, in Fort Lauderdale, Florida, at ceremonies last spring.

At the Hun School, Vande Weghe became the first person ever to swim the 100-yard backstroke in less than one minute. He went on to set six world records, capture six A.A.U. championships, five N.C.A.A. championships, and establish nine American records.

At Princeton, Vande Weghe never lost a backstroke race in intercollegiate competition. Teamed with Dick Hough '39 *40 (breast stroke) and either Hank van Oss '39 or Ned Parke '41 (freestyle), he was part of an unbeaten medley team that won the A.A.U.s and N.C.A.A.s three years in a row. Vande Weghe's only loss in the backstroke occurred at the 1936 Olympics, where he took the silver medal behind Adolph Kiefer.

In addition to his competitive achievements, Vande Weghe is credited with introducing the backstroke flip turn at the A.A.U. nationals in 1934. This innovation revolutionized the event.

Captain of the swimming team his senior year, he won the William Winston Roper '02 Trophy for general proficiency in athletics. He also served on the board of athletics, as vice-president of his class, and as treasurer of Quadrangle Club. An engineer, Vande Weghe worked at DuPont until his retirement. He continues to compete in masters swimming events and consistently sets records for his age group. At a meet last August, he placed first in the 50-, 100-, and 200-meter backstroke. He joins Hough and Jed Graef '64 and Princeton coaches Howie Stepp h'39 and Robert Clotworthy in the Hall of Fame.

Al Vande Weghe '40 PHOTO BY ORREN JACK TURNER

—Jan Kubik '70

of the largest such organizations in the country—135 members. And Bill Cochran, former mayor of that community (sometimes called "Princeton South") was recently re-elected to the city council. Bill is also active in the local art community (he played a leading role in the building of Vero's outstanding art center) and was recently appointed a member of the Florida Arts Council. Don came to Vero from the Dept. of Commerce in Washington, D.C. and is now actively engaged in real estate. Bill came to Vero from N.Y.C., where he was president of Neptune Meter Co.

FAMILY MAN. Joe McCarthy of Duluth claims one wife ("the original model"), six children ("all married and productive"), 22 grandchildren ("two by marriage"), and three great grandchildren ("one by marriage"). "How things do accumulate!"

UNEMPLOYMENT CURE. On the Op-Ed page of a recent N.Y. TIMES, Purnell Benson of Madison, N. J. proposed that tax incentives be used to alleviate the unemployment problem. In brief, his plan would give employers credit against the unemployment insurance tax for each unemployed person hired or, better yet, give the employer a tax credit of 10-20% of salaries paid to unemployed people hired. Purnell claims the costs of such incentive would not be much more than the costs of prolonged unemployment. Instead of the idle receiving handouts of money, they would be paid for productive work. The increased payrolls would generate purchasing power, higher corporate profits and a healthier economy. The TIMES noted that Purnell is prof. emeritus of management at Rutgers graduate school.

IN MEMORIAM: Donald E. Kidd of Needham, Mass., Mar. 2, 1914-Dec. 25, 1990; Edward C. Kirkpatrick of Wilmington, Del., Nov. 12, 1914-Dec. 29, 1990; Michael D. Ridder of Peoria, Ill., Feb. 7, 1912-July 14, 1990; Duncan Van Norden of Palm Beach, Fla., Dec. 2, 1911-Dec. 15, 1990.

36 JAMES Q. BENSON
24 Aylesbury Cir., Windermere
Madison, CT 06443

In the Sept. 12, 1990 issue of the PAW, we reported that Dave Winton last spring received an honorary degree from Colby-Sawyer College and his daughter, Anne Winton Black, was presented the College's prestigious award for Distinguished Alumni Service. Pictured are the proud father and daughter.

Start planning to attend our 55th, scheduled for June 6-9. Betty Constable and Marnie Brown, with the help of the Menands, are already at work preparing for this great occasion.

Some 34 undergraduates are enjoying scholarships established by classmates, their families or friends: The Arthur Wellman Butler Jr. Memorial Scholarship (2); the William T. Ingram Memorial Student Aid Fund (1); the A. James Fisher Memorial Scholarship (1); the Haues Scholarship (2); the Frank A. Petito Class of 1936 Scholarship (3); the Frank A. Petito-Morgan Stanley Scholarship Fund (2); the R. Marvyn Brown Class of 1936 Scholarship (11); the James E. Bell Family Scholarship (3); the Nebri Memorial Scholarship (7); and the Princeton Club of N.Y. Sumner Rulon-Miller Jr. Memorial Scholarship (2).

Carl Peterson's granddaughter Alison Poe is now in the Class of 1994. The Wister Meiges and the Lee Masons recently celebrated their 50th wedding anniversaries. Dr. Dave Greene's daughter Constance, also a doctor, last Mar. married Dr. Mark Klocke. They are both on the hospital staff in pediatrics at the Buffalo Children's Hospital. Dave still practices cardiology but last July gave up surgery.

We regret to announce the death Dec. 25, 1990, of Rudolph Kauffmann II.

37 STANDISH F. MEDINA
250 Broadway, Rm. 2104
New York, NY 10007

We regret to report that Plymp Smith's Peter '68, moderate Republican, though backed by President Bush at a fundraising breakfast, lost his bid for reelection to Congress, hurt by his vote for the original congressional budget reduction package, which would have slashed an increased in proposed Medicare spending and raised gasoline and heating fuel taxes. He was beaten by a socialist candidate who argued that the government was a corrupt arm of a huge corporation and the wealthy, and who promised not to plug into the Washington, D.C. cocktail-party social scene.

You can buy Bill Rawls's son Tom '68's SMALL PLACES from Little Brown for $24.95, and his son Lee was appointed deputy attorney general of the United States. As to other chilluns and grandchildren: Harry Houston's granddaughter Noel was graduated last June from Mt. Holyoke cum laude, Ashley is a junior at Trinity, David a sophomore at Harvard and on the swimming team, while Melissa and Seth were on exchange programs to Belgium and Wales, respectively. Harry also took a raft trip down the Grand Canyon last Apr., "an exciting trip full of majesty, awesome rapids, and inspiring views," before boarding with Eddie the ARGONAUT for a circumnavigation of Italy and its islands of Elba, Sardinia, and Sicily, ending up in Venice, "a wonderful trip with history, archaeology, scenery, more scenery, sculpture, and painting, and gastronomy." Other travelers were Helen and Dave Stanley on an elder hostel jaunt to England and Scott and Bob Burger spending two weeks with roomie Al Edwards in Bermuda. Ollie Vanderbilt took a trip to Europe, ending up with a cruise to Russia, Bucharest, the Black Sea, and Istanbul. Gar Lotspeich's youngest son Doug was married to fellow actor Ritamarie Kelly last Nov. Doug is playing the part of Angela's boyfriend Andy on the TV show, "Who's the Boss?" He uses his mother's maiden name Ballard, as nobody could pronounce Lotspeich.

We regret to report the death of Jack Ruddy Nov. 17, 1990.

The Alumni Council's Maclean Fellow for 1990 is Sandra and Frank Smith's son Michael '65, a lawyer and director of the Vera Institute of Justice in N.Y.C. He recently spent four days in Princeton lecturing and leading conferences on the problems of crime control and the courts system. Mike was the subject of a long article in PAW a couple of years ago. Much of his work involves rehabilitation of offenders without putting them through the frequent interminable delays of the courts which militate against rehabilitation.

Suzanne and Steve Whitcomb have decided that 20 years of running a summer resort for 11 grandchildren and five great-grandchildren is enough and have left Hyannisport for a condo with only one guest room. Their address is Apt. 20-D, Village Square, 39 Tower Hill Rd., Osterville, MA 02655; 508-420-3557.

Jack Bitner represented Princeton and Dr. Shapiro at the inauguration Nov. 3 of the new president of Pace Univ. at Avery Fisher Hall in N.Y.C. He continues as capo of the '38 family on the P.C.N.Y. board of governors. Speaking of the P.C.N.Y., the first Thurs. luncheons continue there, with various and sundry Eight-Balls, their ladies and frequent visiting firemen in attendance. No reservations needed, just show up at noon.

Marion and Jim Hillhouse have published a small book of folk tales and photographs of Irian Jaya, Indonesia, as a part of the nationwide 1990-91 Festival of Indonesia. The stories were collected and the photos taken by their son, Larry, who lived with the natives in several villages of that region for 16 months before his untimely death in 1978 at age 32.

Jane and Jack Appel were in Sydney, Australia, and had lunch with the Ken Sandbachs '37 shortly before Ken's sad death. Jack is fine, but Jane beats him in golf regularly.

We regret to report the deaths of Edward Burns Dec. 3 and John McCulloch Dec. 30, 1990.

With Elkan Blout, we rejoice at the honors heaped on him in the closing months of 1990. First, at the White House on Nov. 13, President Bush presented to him the National Medal of Science, the nation's highest scientific honor. The citation noted his almost 50 years of searching out the three-dimensional shapes of proteins and the convoluted chains of peptides of which they are made. His solutions to these biological jigsaw puzzles contributed significantly to advances in basic knowledge and clinical medicine. His "devotion to the scientific enterprises of his nation" included, among many others, his service as treasurer, since 1980, of the Natl. Academy of Sciences, where he has increased that organization's endowment from $25 to $98 million.

Another honor had come to him in Oct., when Harvard announced that the Elkan Rogers Blount Professorship in the Biological Sciences has been established in recognition of his service to Harvard. The chair will be sited alternately at Harvard Medical School and Harvard School of Public Health, both of which Elkan has served with distinction for nearly 30 years. The fact that funds for the professorship have been donated by colleagues, friends, and family attests to the esteem and affection in which he is held by all. Elkan's distinguished achievement has indeed, as our Class of 1939 Award said of him in 1970, brought honor to Princeton and our Class. Elkan, we salute you.

Last call for reminder of Alumni Day, Feb. 16. We will have our own '39 tables at the Jadwin luncheon and awards ceremony.

With sorrow we report the deaths of Sam Clay, Joe Darlington, and Nick Quinn. Memorials will follow. We have memorials in this issue.

To cheer up those classmates spending this winter in surroundings of snow, cold, and overcast, we publish this photo of Chiz Anderson and Pops Yow thoroughly enjoying themselves in more hospitable circumstances at a Class gathering in Naples, Fla. Hopefully there will be more such pleasurable occasions in the future.

The preceding Class notes column posed a question as to who from a list of classmates at the Penn game had never, ever been in Palmer Stadium, even during undergraduate days. The answer: San Francisco resident Ray Schweitzer. Until 1990, Ray had never entered the stadium, for he was always fully occupied playing freshman or varsity soccer when football games were taking place. His return last fall to Princeton was his first since our 25th reunion.

According to Regional V.P. for the West Wall Pettit, Ray gave a dinner for Margaret and Bob Goeben and the Pettits this past Dec. and was in tip-top form. Ray continues to play expert bridge and tackle various hiking expeditions in the Sierra Mountains and in Switzerland. Walt also recently caught up with Charm and Dave Robinson, who still practices law in Pasadena. Walt has taken note of the Princeton Regional Alumni conference scheduled for his area Mar. 3-10, 1991, and is sending out special reminders to classmates that President Shapiro will be on hand, along with faculty lectures, etc. This should stimulate an active rally on the part of 1940ers living in Calif. and elsewhere.

Thanks to Bob Liebowitz for conceptualizing the logo for our 50th reunion. He collaborated fifty years ago with Brooks Wall on our perplexed tiger sitting on the bomb. This time the iconography is non-existent. Any resemblance to Nassau Hall is intentional. The palsied hand of a former Class architect pushed the pencil for Bob. The Cleaver entrepreneurial gene has evidently been passed on to Betty's and Clipper's daughter Mary who was prominently noted in a NEW YORKER magazine piece called "Gifts for the House," telling that the Cleaver Co., 229 West Broadway in Manhattan, can cater "what most families want for Christmas dinner... everything tastes like the food in a home where there is a pearl in the kitchen."

By year-end the following had signed on for the 50th: Adams, Agricola, Andrews, Armstrong, Bausch, Blern, Bissell, Boyce, Bradford, Bridgman, Broderick, Brokaw, E. T. Brown, K. Brown, Burdett, Burroughs, A. Clark, R. Clarke, Cobb, Cornwell, Dorrance, Douglas, Draudi, Duffy, Dulcan, Elfers, Elkins, Finch, Fuller, Goodfellow, Gordon, Grant, F. Haines, Hillman, Hobler, Hutton, Jacobs, H. Johnson, W. Johnson, C. Jones, Kendall, Kinder, J. King, Knauer, Krome, Krowl, R. Leibowitz, Longstreth, Love, MacDougall, Marcy, Meeker, Mercer, Mobler, Mueller, Murchison, Naylor, Page, Pettit, Pitts, Prince, Purnell, Quinby, Rich, Robinson, Rockwood, Rose, Samson, Sanders, Sanford, Schouler, H. Scott, J.T. Scott, Seiwald, Skidmore, Smart, H. Smith, Stevens, Bettie Stockton, Supplee, Tate, Tipson, Turner, R.G. Walker, Walsh, Watkins, Waugh, Williams, Williamson, W. Wilson, Alice Wingerd and Wurfel 91 so far.

We have memorials in this issue.

Sally Nevius sent the photo, along with note reporting a peripatetic summer (Oberammergau, London, etc.). "On return," she writes, "we finally got around to celebrating Jack's [70th] birthday with Phil Moore, Herdy Ulmer, and Mike Barrett at our cottage in Ponte Vedra." Pictured are (l-r) Phil, Herdy, Jack, Mike.

Ed Coale and Holly are taking it easier these days. Ed turned over the presidency of Readi-Bake last June, now handles only its intl. business—much of it via fax.

Some more dues/A.G. flaps from here and there: Clancy Stanard, in N.C.: "Was much moved by Topper Cook's video. It was interesting to see how our classmates look and feel after reaching 70 and beyond." Jack Huyler, summer Wyo., winter Calif.: "Margaret and I have made only one reunion, our 25th, but dead or alive we'll make the 50th!" Slade Innis, Calif.: "Still working at Bob Lowry's law firm but miss the almost daily contacts we had before he retired."

From George King in Oh.: "Twenty years ago Jane and I decided there was a need for post-secondary education. This resulted in the establishment of two business schools in Cleveland. Now we've recognized another need—a daycare center for 150 pre-school children. A lot of work, and a lot of fun."

A note from President Houie: Alumni Day, always special, is Feb. 16; '42 events make the day extra-special. Come!

Ray Ortelg and Bert Lippincott '45 have sent word that Bob Forgan died in Sarasota Dec. 10. To wife, Ruth, the Class sends our warm support.

On Dec. 15, note received from Dick Osann: "Am finally joining the snowbirds for good. Stayed with the Essenters in Va. on the way down to Fla. They will stay with me if we get this mini-reunion in the sun going in Mar. Enclosed is my new address for any and all who may wander this way: 166 Foxglove Dr., Naples, FL 33942; 813-643-3155."

 As a follow-up to the recent mention in the column of Charley Scribner's new book IN THE COMPANY OF WRITERS, the author himself wrote an interesting piece on the front page of the N.Y. TIMES book review section Dec. 9. In it, Charley describes how his father (P '05) never gave him any indoctrination into the publishing business. Instead, in his first weeks at Scribner's, Charley's assignment was to deal with Ernest Hemingway on an illustrated edition of A FAREWELL TO ARMS. It makes for interesting reading.

As relayed by Jim Tilford, the Christmas issue of TRAINS carried a lead editorial about Union Pacific's main line through Cheyenne, Wyo., concluding with "On the point was the world's largest operating steam locomotive; at the rear of the train were two U.P. business cars, the Kenefick and the Cheyenne." We are saddened to report Jim is, as he puts it, permanently grounded by diabetes and a partly amputated left foot.

Bob Billings noted Bob Hugins's departure for another Peace Corps stint in Lesotho, Africa, then continued, "My wife and I spent three weeks in Germany in May, centered around Oberammergau and the Passion Play. On Oct. 27 first grandchild bearing the name Billings (Joshua) graced our midst. Now have a modest four."

Add recent C./A.'s: Hank Allyn, Room A-113, 863 Central St., Framingham Centre, MA 01701; Tom Everist, Director, L.G. Everist Inc., P.O. Box 829, Sioux Falls, SD 57117.

We have memorials in this issue.

44

HERVEY S. STOCKMAN
1041 Matador Dr., S.E.
Albuquerque, NM 87123; 505-296-7057

Bob Brown has nailed down Wed., Mar. 13, 1991, for '44's annual N.Y.C. luncheon at the dazzling Princeton Club. We're looking for a speaker; suggestions are invited. Get that date on your East Coast calendars. Karl Harr Jr. on Oct. 4 chaired a one-day, 125-member space conference sponsored by the Eisenhower Inst. and the Smithsonian's National Air & Space Museum. "When the race with the Soviets ended," Karl said, "we lost much of our consensus as to the principal 'why' for space exploration and utilization." The distinguished assembly's challenge was, as he put it, "to re-establish the 'why.'" Leaders in theology, economics, education, and the environment addressed the 'why' and how best to proceed in the face of society's needs. Karl is concerned that the U.S., faced with 'real' national concerns, could become a mere "hobbyist" in space. No hobbyist, but a worker in space, astrophysicist and Bate Farnum Award winner Allan Cook of the Voyager Science Team, keeps one foot on the ground and the Princeton scene via daughter Frances '92. My apologies to the New Orleans Apr. mini-reunion host, Bryson Woods. I know it ends in "s." Senility and sloppiness are among my curses. Not so with our touring "senior," Dave Metcalfe. He and Nancy, after both play in a U.S. Seniors tournament in Lake Wales, Fla., Apr. 2-5, 1991, plan to make the ten-hour drive to New Orleans to join us late Sat. afternoon. Class spirit and vigor! Art Morgan and 33 Springdale were warmed by old roomie Jim Drorbaugh and family in P-ton from Hawaii for Eleanor and Wells Drorbaugh '43's son's Oct. wedding. Jim has retired from his medical activities and is happily building a new house on Kaneohe Bay.

Sadly we mourn with Eve and Lew Kraft the loss of their son, Steven (39), who passed away Dec. 15, 1990, in Baltimore, Md. Steven had a brilliant mind and a consuming love of tennis. His work with the U.S. Tennis Assn., particularly U.S. Junior Tennis, has been of great importance to the sport. The Class of '44 was well represented at the funeral service in Princeton. Bless him and all our youth on the line in Arabia. May they be at peace as this column goes to press.

We have memorials in this issue.

45

WARREN W. BENTON
U.S. Courthouse, 915 Lafayette Blvd.
Bridgeport, CT 06604

In the "Can you top this" category, here-with a four-generation photo featuring Karl Rugart Sr. (Drexel '17), and Eric Rugart (Penn. '83) smilingly observing Dr. Karl Rugart Jr.

holding grandchild Robert T. The earlier request is accordingly modified to encourage submissions of three- or four-generation photos!

Classmates are reminded that the annual Alumni Day will take place on Feb. 16. Activities will commence on Fri. evening, Feb. 15, at 7:30, with a presentation in Alexander Hall by Princeton's outstanding author and poet, Joyce Carol Oates, who will read and discuss some of her recent works. On Sat. there will be several interesting presentations by members of the faculty at 9:15, followed by a 10:30 presentation in Alexander by Woodrow Wilson Award recipient Laurence S. Rockefeller '32. Other faculty presentations will be made at that time also. Afternoon highlights will be the luncheon award ceremony in Jadwin, followed by the moving Service of Remembrance in the University Chapel, and a faculty panel discussion chaired by President Shapiro on the role of the modern university in transmitting values in an increasingly pluralistic and global society. As usual, the Class will be provided its own tables for the Jadwin luncheon.

We have a memorial in this issue.

46

ROBERT CAMPBELL JR.
Investors Security Services
636 Morris Tpk., Short Hills, NJ 07078

Our wives are sometimes our best source of news. Pat Neill (Dick Neill's better half) sent along the accompanying photo, from the Princeton Today weekend attended by many of our Class last Apr. As she says, "A group photo in PAW requires extremely good eyesight."

Iraq's Hussein claims historical rights to Kuwait. One fact omitted by Saddam but pointed out by Dave Finnie, writing in a Nov. issue of the N.Y. TIMES is "Iraq formerly renounced its claims (to Kuwait) 27 years ago. On Oct. 4, 1963, in Baghdad, Prime Minister Ahmad Al-Bakr of Iraq signed an agreement with the prime minister of Kuwait declaring that the Republic of Iraq recognizes the independence and complete sovereignty of Kuwait. This agreement was filed with the United Nations for all to see." We knew Dave would straighten Saddam out.

Bill Bixby writes from Indiatlantic, Fla., that he has been trying to find the whereabouts of Wally Latour. Hal Erdman tells me the current Class list from the University has no address. If anybody knows Latour's whereabouts, let us know.

Among the retiring we have John Peacock, who has "retired again." To prove it, he says he just got back from sailing the southern coast of Turkey. He now lives in Round Pond, Me. Dr. Bill McCarty says that he is "just about fully retired" and finally getting time to spend at family genealogy and more time for hot air ballooning. Tex Evershade boasts that his daughter, Julia '74, in Hollywood, Calif., has been sound editor for such movies as TOP GUN and BEVERLY HILLS COP II. Way to go Tex.

47

ASA BUSHNELL
Box 7034
Tucson, AZ 85725; 602-741-4715

As a campus pal of our late classmate Tom Brophy in the summer of 1943,

Philadelphia neurosurgeon Dick Davis was particularly interested in the recent release of FATAL VOYAGE, the compelling account of the sinking of the U.S.S. INDIANAPOLIS in July 1945. I am indebted to Dick for sending me a copy of the book by Dan Kurzman, for I too remember Tom well; he loved '47 and he was one of our early leaders. An ensign aboard the ill-fated cruiser, Tom died heroically—and then his bereaved father became a prime mover in the dramatic court-martial of the skipper blamed for "the worst sea disaster in American naval history."

Bob Woblforth, chairman of the special gifts committee for our 45th reunion, called an organizational meeting in Dec. and was encouraged by the spirited turnout in N.Y.C. Danny Haerther flew in from Chicago to join George Eggers, George Faunce, Arnie Fraiman, Charlie Metter, Tony Miller, and Ted Palmer in blueprinting the group's "contact plans" with the chairman. Two days later, Bob was equally enthused by the "floating" Princeton area luncheon that attracted Rye Herr, Kobe Kohatnuur, Karl Light, Sam McKeown, Metter, Palmer, George Pearson, and Val Wagner to the Rocky Hill Inn.

St Catbcart has retired as chairman of Illinois Tool Works and relocated to Lake Forest, with time spent in Cody, Wyo., and Hobe Sound, Fla. Mike Clark, who has retired from Campbell Soup Co. and moved to Skidaway Island (Savannah), is "finding playing every day not difficult." Tom Spoehr has retired as prexy of Fairchild Industries and wisely is departing the L.A. area in favor of San Diego.

Class condolences are extended to the families of Ben Barton, who died Sept. 18 in Hartford after a long battle against cancer; Art McMahon, whose death June 1, 1988, came to our attention only a few weeks ago; and Mil Hall, wife of Tad, who also lost her year-long battle to cancer at the end of Sept.

48

DAVID K. REEVES
106 Snowden Ln.
Princeton, NJ 08540; 609-924-3340

Should further urging be needed, our Class mid-winter dinner is Feb. 19 at the Princeton Club of N.Y. We are indeed fortunate in having Tom Buechner to grace our presence and regale us with tales of his painting (and possibly of what's going on in the art world). Last-minute deciders will ease Bob Meyer's life by a phone call to 609-298-1241. Alumni Day is Feb. 16 and is a grand occasion.

The roster of retirees continues to grow. There seems to be a sameness of the "but" theme that runs through news of retirements. Al Lowe is retired but busy with some consulting and chairs a human services capital fund drive. Chuck Welsh has been retired for five years but continues to consult. His daughter is due for high school graduation any moment now. Bart Stoner left the marketing business in 1987 but has taken assignments in marketing consulting. Lou Methfessel has just retired from American Olean but is consulting for them three days a week and wouldn't say no to anything interesting that comes along.

But there are no "buts" about Henry Parker. Forty-one years with Chubb & Son has served only to fuel his enthusiasm. Henry is senior V.P. and heads up their new ventures overseas, relationships with insurance companies managed by Chubb, and relationships with foreign governments. If that weren't enough, he serves on all sorts of industry boards (such as chairman of the International Insurance Council of the U.S.) as well as a trustee of Drew Univ. When not at their summer home at Amagansett, Henry and Audrey can be found during sailing weather on their Bristol 45.5 sloop.

49

ALVIN R. KRACHT

Limerick Lane Poetryworks®, 5 Birch Ln.
Chappaqua, NY 10514; 914-238-0352

Here's a challenge to all you adoring grandparents out there. John Stratton advises that the birth of Shannon Stratton in Feb. 1990 made him a GREAT GRANDFATHER for the second time, great-grandson Jeremy P. Tuttle having arrived in Aug. of 1988. John wants to know if the Strattons hold this Class record. Any other great-grandparent contenders out there? Chronologically speaking, it's very possible, but your secretary hasn't heard from any others that he can remember off-hand—let me know!

Hank Stifel, president of the American Paralysis Assn., writes that in early Nov. he attended the Wakeman Award dinner at Duke Univ. Medical Center, honoring individuals for research contributions in the field of spinal cord regeneration. This year the prestigious award was given to a group of researchers who demonstrated that appropriate high-dose steroid treatment could help people paralyzed by spinal cord injuries recover some sensation and movement—a breakthrough in neuroscience. While the research was conducted throughout the U.S., with major emphasis at Yale, three of the relatively small group of award-winning researchers, Hank points out, are Princeton alumni—Eugene S. Flamm, M.D. '58, hospital of the Univ. of Pennsylvania; Franklin C. Wagner Jr., M.D. '61, Univ. of Calif.; and H. Richard Winn, M.D. '64, Univ. of Washington. And James H. Semans, M.S. '32, professor emeritus, Duke Univ. School of Medicine, was award ceremony speaker. Way to go, Tigers!

Senior Judge John W. Kern III, chairman of the board of directors of the Judiciary Leadership Development Council Inc., sent this news: "With the help of Judge Tony Cotter '59, Joe Donner, Took Crowell '46, Bill Brown '51, Jerry Muys '54, Judge Terry Miller '58, and Harry Heber, we presented in Whig Hall on June 17-20, 1990, the Harold R. Medina Seminar on Law and the Humanities for trial and state judges," which provides continuing training in contemporary issues. Classmates interested should call him at 202-338-5513.

50

PETE BUCHANAN

151 West St.
Beverly Farms, MA 01915; 508-922-1650

Mid-winter seems an appropriate time to report on some Fla. classmates who always have the welcome mat out for visiting '50s. Hank Safarik resigned as treasurer of the Vero Beach Princeton Club and moved to Melbourne. Keith Loring went from Miami, where he was in the insurance business for 40 years, to Indialantic, a suburb of Melbourne. Both avid golfers, Hank lives on a golf course, while Keith is three blocks from the ocean. Quinn Barton is director of admissions at Bolles School, his old alma mater, in Jacksonville. Meanwhile, Reid Heuer has reversed the usual retirement direction. After many years of practicing law in West Palm Beach, he has settled in Blacksburg, Va., a short distance west of Roanoke and his mother's childhood home. George Riesz is another Va. retiree, from N.J. He and Maggie are discovering that even in retirement it's hard to take advantage of all the cultural and entertainment opportunities in the Washington area. And don't rule out Massachusetts as a place to retire. Harry Voorbees has settled in Cambridge to be near his son, take Harvard Extension courses, and enjoy the Boston Pops and Symphony.

The Faulkner Hospital in Boston, which Jack Dawson served for many years as treasurer and board member, has established the John E. Dawson Oncology Centre in his memory. This will provide a warm and discreet environment for patients and their families, reflecting some of the needs identified by Jack and Liz during his illness. And in Tom Raleigh's memory there has been a remarkable outpouring of gifts to his scholarship fund. As of mid-Dec., 187 people had contributed almost $23,000, with gifts still arriving. Anne and her children have similarly been overwhelmed with so many loving letters that they are unable to acknowledge them, but they want everyone to know how much each has meant to them.

Don't forget to mark Alumni Day (Feb. 16) on your calendars. The Class will be together in Jadwin for lunch, and the moving memorial service at 3:00 P.M. in the Chapel.

51

RICHARD K. PAYNTER

49 Wilson Rd.
Princeton, NJ 08540; 609-921-6720

Fifty-One's Fortieth "Life Begins at the 40th," June 6-9

Last call for Alumni Day, Feb. 16. Morning lectures. Lunch in Jadwin Gym with classmates. The Service of Remembrance. Class cocktails and dinner in the Joseph Henry Room (Jadwin HALL) afterwards.

The Class continues to award scholarships to outstanding undergraduates. This year the Theodore Gould III Scholarship went to Terence R. Boga '91, and Amie G. Klujian '91. Mr. Boga is from Buena Park, Calif. He is a politics major and plans to go to law school. Extracurricular interests are: Kung Fu, racquetball, basketball, computer programming, and Students Against Apartheid. Ms. Klujian is from Northbrook, Ill. Her major and future plans are the same as Mr. Boga's. Her interests: varsity softball, club rugby, camp counselor, and Armenian General Benevolent.

The Louis P. Kelly Scholarship went to Jeanine C. Dore and David A. McGranahan. Both are seniors. Ms. Dore is from Middletown, N.Y. She is in the Woodrow Wilson School and plans a career in international trade, specializing in the U.S.S.R. Her interests range from athletics (fencing, soccer, basketball, softball) to the PRINCETONIAN (staff writer), R.O.T.C., Elm Club (treasurer), Pre-Law Society, and the N.A.A.C.P. Mr. McGranahan, from Leesburg, Va., is a politics major. His interests: Whig-Clio, crew, basketball, and Wilson College resident adviser. More Class scholarship news next time.

The beat for our 40th goes on: Arrick, Doc Bell, Bergen, Bollman, Brothman, Ray Brown, Cracas, Darby, Donan Finch, Eb Gaines, Bruce Huber, Jabn, Jelks, Kepler, Look, Peters, Rauschert, Reed, Reynolds, Billy Rushton, Taylor, Van Dusen, and Perk Wilson.

Bob Keeley has "a new job in a different career as president of the Middle East Inst., and educational/cultural organization headquartered in Washington... founded in 1946 by Christian Herter and George Camp Keiser."

52

DON OBERDORFER

4630 30th St., N.W.
Washington, DC 20008

John Winton decided on a new career after 20 years of running an executive search firm in Seattle. The new one is management of ocean fisheries, and John is attending the Univ. of Washington School of Marine Affairs to get ready. He gets his M.A. next June, and finds the studies challenging and fun.

Jack Blessing also made a switch after retiring several months ago from General Electric after 38 years in financial management. Recently he joined Jackson, Grant & Co. in Stamford, Conn., specializing in long-term investment planning. Jack writes that "if I can encourage the younger set to save their money, I'll be very happy in my semi-retirement."

Another retiree from the financial field is Jed Damerel, who retired last fall after 27 years as a C.P.A. in the tax department of Coopers & Lybrand in Richmond. So far Jed and Anna have two grandchildren, Jordan (5) and Sophie (3).

George Lambrakis has a new "flat" in London, where he is director of development at the Intl. Inst. for Strategic Studies. He's keeping a weather eye on developments in Eastern Europe.

Still another original 60th birthday party, this one recently in Acapulco for Ira Helman with his wife, mother, four children, and grandchildren, of whom there are now four.

Wally Silver, who suffered a stroke last Jan., is well on the mend and was able to return to work last Aug.

Jack Ball reports that Jack Jr. is V.P. of Northern Trust Bank of Chicago, and is the papa of the recently arrived John F. Ball III. Meanwhile Jack's son, David, is with Philip Morris in N.Y. and daughter, Sheila '85, is (no suprise) an actress in L.A.

Your secretary, Don Oberdorfer, has returned to the Washington Post after being on leave for six months to write a book on U.S.-Soviet relations in 1983-90. Publication date is next fall.

I regret to report that Gary Andlinger's wife, Arntraud, died Oct. 28, 1990, after a long illness. Our sympathies to Gary.

53

FRANCE J. LOMBERGAN

Box 18
Blawenburg, NJ 08504

Class Dinner Alumni Day, Feb. 16

A last reminder: Our dinner will take place at the E-Quad. Cocktails will be at 5 P.M. after the Service of Remembrance, and dinner at 6 P.M., so that those who wish to attend athletic events can be accommodated. Our honoree and speaker this year will be John Spencer, professor of history at Middlebury College and authority on Africa. Undergraduate children and Class scholarship recipients will be our guests. Those of you who have not committed as yet, feel free to call Fred Crispin at 609-737-1880.

We last heard from Jim Moseley in Key West, Fla. He's still there, and now operating a luxury vacation complex in the heart of the city. Jim would enjoy seeing any classmates who are in the area. Phone: 305-292-1223.

Nels Runger is still very much involved in Recorded Books Inc. and has recorded an anthology of science fiction and horror stories. Continuing his theater activities, he recently played Professor Abraham Van Helsing in DRACULA in a Bucks County (Penn.) Community Theater production.

Tom Tobin spent most of last year living in France and helping his wife in her endeavors as a wine buyer. He's now back in Ariz. and continuing to practice law.

54 DICK STEVENS
1 Valley Sq., Ste. 101
Blue Bell, PA 19422

What better compliment could anyone receive that to make a profound impression on a young person at a time in life when it really counts. Ask any graduate of Hotchkiss School who that individual was for them and the answers come back... Mr. Torrey. Blair Torrey coaches football, administers, teaches, and probably does floors and windows. When he gets worked up (which is all the time), his English classes become a contact sport. Still suffering from a sunburned neck because of extensive red-light exposure in the early 1950s, Arch completes 34 years as the one who makes Hotchkiss a very special place.

Two Pittsburgh classmates, a lawyer and an advertising executive, are playing a major role in the Alumni Assn. of Western Penn. Jack Demmler is the president of P.A.A.W.P. and John Humpbreys (with that infectious smile still intact) is a director. President Shapiro spoke at their annual dinner and provided a superb mixture of intellectual stimulus and pride in Princeton's role in academia and the world. P.A.A.W.P. is one of the alumni flagships.

Mid-Winter Class Dinner Prospect House—Feb. 16

We have an all-star panel for the Class dinner. Noah Herndon, senior partner, Brown Bros. Harriman, will discuss the challenge of banking in the 1990s. Pru Turner, who runs cattle (by the thousands) in Colorado, will provide a rancher's perspective on the economy, and Mike Weatherly, the Swiss Army knife baron and, of late, a Broadway producer, will offer a few choice remarks... all under the experienced hand of the best M.C. in the business... who else... Louis R. Ruker. AMEN!

55 MIKE ROSEN
40 E. 88th St.
New York, NY 10128; 212-722-7447

Mid-Winter Dinner Sat., Feb. 16, Nassau Club

The Class of 1955 Award will be presented to Tom Graham at our annual mid-winter dinner Sat. evening, Feb. 16. This is at the end of Alumni Day. Tom's leadership role as general counsel to the U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency was crucial and intimate in the path-breaking and precedent-setting treaty signed this year.

The report that Paul Sigler had left Yale to return to the Univ. of Chicago was an error. He is currently a professor in the Dept. of Molecular Biophysics and Biochemistry and an investigator in the Howard Hughes Medical Institute at Yale. Presently, there is no plan to go to the Univ. of Chicago or anywhere else.

Tenor, businessman, high-liver Ray Fitzsimmons sang at the Reunions concert last June at Taplin Auditorium. Ray's artistry shone to particular advantage in the sublime duet from The Pearlfishers. Andy Schoettle was featured in the Minneapolis STAR AND TRIBUNE after his great performance in the Mallory Cup, the men's U.S. sailing championship.

Andy won the bronze medal. When out of docksiders, Andy is a professor of law at the Univ. of Minnesota. He returned to Harvard and received a Ph.D. in economics in 1983. Most of his work involves tax policy and some combination of law and economics. In Nov. Andy gave a paper at the National Tax Assn.'s annual meeting on the use of expert economic testimony in constitutional challenges to state taxes. The news clipping from the STAR AND TRIBUNE is particularly interesting and I will send copies to any classmates who drop me a line.

Jack Wallace, president and C.E.O. of N.J. Natl. Bank, has been inducted into the Junior Achievement Hall of Fame.

We regret to report that Tony Putnam died Dec. 4, 1990. A memorial will follow. We have a memorial in this issue.

56 DAVID M. JORDAN
410 Rodman Ave.
Jenkintown, PA 19046

Fred Cline reports a most enjoyable evening Oct. 30 at the Princeton Club of N.Y. at a semi-annual program sponsored by the Triangle Club Board entitled, "Of, By and For Princetonians in the Arts." Also there was Bill Rosser who has, says Fred, found the fountain of youth: "He appears to be about the age of his eldest son." Incidentally, we suggest you turn back to your Dec. 19, 1990 PAW for the archival photo on page one, of the kickline from the 1954 Triangle show, TUNES, ANYONE?, featuring Bill, Fred, Joe Knox, and the late Jim Walker among the Moroccan beauties.

Bill Howard recently left the Bechtel Corp. to join Inland Steel Industries in Chicago as V.P. of information technology. Bill says daughters Cathy and Julie have graduated from Berkeley and son Matt is a soph at Stanford.

Taking time off from Northwestern, Charlie Moskos went to Saudi Arabia in mid-Nov. (relaxing: "No telephones or academic politics"). Troop morale at the time was good, says Charlie, who junketed to Panama last Jan. to do a piece that came out in the Aug. ATLANTIC MONTHLY as "Army Women." Finally, Charlie has been selected through the good offices of Sen. Sam Nunn to be on the newly-formed Commission on Natl. Service.

WEDDING BELLS: Fred Sater reports his marriage on Dec. 9, 1989, to Susan Smith, "tearing her away from a sea-going life in the Med for the big event." In the same vein, longtime bachelor Charlie Gray is engaged to be married in Oct. to Pat Polermo, who teaches school in the Pittsburgh area. Charlie continues to receive plaudits for his work with the Pittsburgh Civic Light Opera. And Peter Ambler will be married this month to Lindsay Meredith Miller, a TV producer and a fellow in the U.S.-Japan Leadership program in Japan.

57 JACK SCHWAB
Box 6177, Yorkville Station
New York, NY 10128; 212-427-3575 (H)

"Greg Farrell's Contribution" reads the headline on the editorial page of the N.Y. TIMES. The article beneath chronicles the birth and growth of the Fund for the City of New York, the Ford Foundation's effort to help private philanthropy improve city management and offer small-scale financing to nonprofit agencies involved with city problems. Greg became the fund's first executive director in 1970—"a job he has filled ever since with extraordinary distinction. He found ways to give the city flexible support in areas where it could not tread. He financed trips by agency managers to study other cities, set up a pioneering executive search agency to fill vacancies in top and middle management, and established a municipal data bank.... He leaves behind a strong, vibrant organization and a 20-year record of unique service to the city and its people."

Step Davis: "Jo Ann Blair and I were married Aug. 17, 1990. Present were Tom Deuel and Freeman Burn. Jo Ann is a partner in the law firm of Clark & Starit, Virginia Beach, Va." Art Hulnick: "Into my second year of teaching at Boston Univ. New England is great, but where are all the '57 classmates?"

Greshley: "Have moved to a brand-new high school here in Utah, where I still thoroughly enjoy teaching math and computer science." Jack Kyle: "Our temporary seconding to Texas Commerce Bank has stretched to three years. Luci and I enjoy Houston, although we spent two weeks at the Jersey shore to cool off, joined by Amy '80, Susy, and Bobbi."

58 RALPH L. DeGROFF
7 Grade Sq.
New York, NY 10028

Civil rights advocate Sid Wolinsky was featured in an article in the RECORDER, an official newspaper of the legal world in the San Francisco area. The article recounted Sid's work as co-director of the Legal Education Clinic of the Berkeley-based Disability Rights Education and Defense Fund. With the passage last July of the Americans with Disabilities Act, Sid says, "We now have the most sweeping public policy mandate we could ever have dreamed of, but where it counts, at home, we're still struggling to enforce laws that have been in place 15 years." At one trial Sid argued that the lack of wheelchair access to a restaurant was no different than hanging a sign out front that said "no women allowed, except through the kitchen when accompanied by a male."

In the Class of 1994 are the following sons and daughters of classmates: Alexander Thomas, son of Frank Decker; Holly Margarita, daughter of Bernie Deichmann; Susan H., daughter of Wally McDowell; Andrew Howard, son of Dick Stern; Nicholas Gerhard, son of Duncan Van Dusen; Jennifer Michelle, daughter of Jerry Wider; and Thomas Jefferson, son of Gordon Wu. The Class of 1958 now has 32 sons and daughters of classmates at Princeton.

Paul Abeles reports that Adelaide, Australia is one of the world's better kept secrets.

Jan Winston's daughter Karen (Cornell '85, N.Y.U. Business '90) was married last June to David Norman. Eileen and Walter Fanburg joined the Winstons for the big celebration. Karen is a systems engineer with I.B.M. in New York and David is with Sotheby's.

Loyal Updegrave, currently a happy bachelor, is director of maintenance at the Utah State Prison.

Spencer Sherman gave rave reviews to Joel Kraus for his performance last Nov. at the American Ballet in Lincoln Center as one of the lead male swans in Swan Lake.

59 JAY M. SMOG
11321 Rolling House Rd.
Rockville, MD 20852

Rick Sarlin is coordinating promotion efforts on behalf of the refurbished and revitalized Princeton Club of N.Y. Skip McGuire, terming himself "countercyclical as always," reports passing several of the Class's empty-nesters going the other way in his move from N.Y.C. to the Larchmont suburbs, where he practices in an eight-lawyer firm. After years in Manhattan, Skip says that his family "has adjusted nicely to the notion that the natural color of the ground is not gray." Lew Holmes, just returned from Hong Kong, notes that although he missed seeing Lew Barringer during his brief visit, Lew B. put him in touch with the colony's premier tailor. In his new duds, Lew H. may now be the "tweediest" in the Class, ousting Dave Reydel, who has held the title for 31 years (see NASSAU HERALD, 1951, p. 371).

From La Paz, Bolivia, Dave Fringer writes that his regular schedule as a State Dept. medical officer includes visits to Santiago, Lima, Quito, Guayaquil, Bogata, and Barranquilla. During a return to native soil last year, Dave reports making contact with Fraser Barron and Joe Tonetti. Also traveling a bit, Carl Good spent a mid-Oct. weekend in N.Y.C. in company with Butch Kinnebrew, who had come up from Memphis for the occasion, and Sam Bowman, who came across town. Carl then proceeded to Berkeley, where he spent some time in Dec. with Fred Poumell, recently returned from a visit with daughters Perry and Allison in Granada, Spain.

The Regional Alumni Conference this year will be on the West Coast in the following locations: San Diego, Fri., Mar. 8, 1991; Los Angeles, Sat. Mar. 9, 1991; and San Francisco, Sun., Mar. 10, 1991. The program includes a talk by President Shapiro, faculty lectures, and opening and closing receptions. This is a great way to keep in touch with the University. Details can be obtained from the Alumni Council by calling 609-258-5836.

60 MASON LOWANCE

100 Lincoln Ave.
Amherst, MA 01002

Think "Big Apple!" As Ann River Siddons reminisces about New York in her novel PEACHTREE ROAD, we are reminded that certain members of our Class call the city "home," namely Clark Gesner here, who lives in Brooklyn Heights, when not perched on the steps of Nassau Hall. But Peter Prugh and Harrison (Zeke) Lazarus were enjoying a Broadway show and late supper in Greenwich Village on Sun., June 10, 1990, when they decided to walk north toward the Waldorf Astoria. As Peter put it, "We talked of taking a cab, but enjoyed the walk too much. I suggested that anyway, N.Y. was much less dangerous than its image. After a remark like that, you know what has to happen! Shortly after saying goodbye, I got mugged, within half a block of Macy's. My wallet got lifted, but the two guys missed the traveler's checks and some other items of value." Now Robin Prince, who commutes every morning on the 7:05 from his home in Greenwich to his office at Morgan Stanley in the city, has never been mugged. We enjoyed a splendid French lunch at a restaurant in midtown, also in June, and I felt perfectly safe walking back to the Princeton Club with Robin at my side, all 6'3" of him. The Princeton Club is completely renovated inside and is quite elegant. The security guards there are good, but caution that you should put $5 in your shoe just in case!! Give me a break! Chicago, by contrast, is to die for! Ravinia, the C.S.O., Orchestra Hall, the Goodman Theater, 18 miles of public waterfront on Lake Michigan, the Chicago Art Inst., all those incredible skyscrapers, the "Magnificent Mile," and friendly people, not to mention the Newberry and Univ. of Chicago. What more could you possibly want? Go west, at least as far as Chicago!!

61 GEORGE BRANLEY III

98 Winfield Ln.
New Canaan, CT 06840

On Oct. 1, Paul Dorfman was elected exec. V.P. of Bank of America. From Larry Buell (not heard from for many a moon). "After 24 years in Ohio I've moved from Oberlin College to Harvard, where I'll continue teaching American literature." The Jay McCabes visited Leslie and Bob Epsen in Calif. recently. "The newlyweds look wonderful and are looking forward to our 30th," says Jay. Gil Omenn is the new president of the Assn. of Schools of Public Health (he's dean of the Univ. of Wash. School of Public Health) and has been appointed to a new Natl. Commission on the Environment.

1961 THIRTIETH 1991

The N.J. law firm of McCarter and English has a new partner, Mike Horn, who left the investment banking firm of Ryan, Beck & Co. last May. Mini-reunion in Des Moines last summer: Stew Hudnut was in from Minneapolis for a rowing regatta and got together with Steve Roberts. The 1990-91 Medieval Studies and Folklore Catalog includes a review of the book TILL EULENSPIEGEL, HIS ADVENTURES, edited and translated by Paul Oppenheimer.

"Moved to Tucson—in the Univ. of Arizona M.B.A. program, want to teach at the university or junior college level and engage in entrepreneurial ventures in Tucson," reports Walt Petrallitis. Also on the move is Lew Neisner, who, having spent his entire life in Rochester, now teaches marketing at Morgan State U. in Baltimore, while his wife runs a teaching institute at nearby Towson State. From Senator Tim Wirth of Colorado comes yet another copy of the Congressional Record of Oct. 10 which reports on the nomination of Fred Hitz to be inspector general of the C.I.A.

The memorial to Harris Funkenstein in the Jan. 23 PAW was prepared by George Boolos.

62 ERIC W. JOHNSON

2221 Craig Ct.
Vienna, VA 22182; 703-280-9080

Jack Moore writes: "Half a century of life, daughter Anne a soph at Colgate (and survivor of the rugby season) and yet entering Princeton in the fall of '58 seems like yesterday!" He reports that he spends about 80 percent of his time at his company's Detroit and Taylor, Mich. plant, managing the development of North America's first array camera surface inspection system on a steel finishing line. He co-authored a paper describing the work which was presented at Vision '90 in Nov.

Steve Rieber reports that Cal Cotner, Cal's wife Sharon and his wife, Sue, had drinks together at the Royal Hawaiian last Nov. "Cal was on a business trip. Sue and I were celebrating our 15th wedding anniversary. No children were there!"

Bill Clayton writes that his two sons, Dusty '92 and Bucky '93, both go out for Lightweight Crew. "Both were on their respective first freshman teams, which won the Eastern Sprints. Dusty was in the second varsity boat, which came in second at springs last spring."

Dave Warner is still teaching economics and health policy at the L.B.J. School of Public Affairs at the Univ. of Texas. Dave Entin was in Moscow and Leningrad in May. In Apr. he became dean of the College of Arts and Sciences, Wentworth Inst. of Technology, Boston, and is finding his new responsibilities challenging.

Clifton White recently became Florida bar board certified in estate-planning and probate. Of 46,000 attorneys in Florida, only 132 are board certified in this field. Clifton practices in Sarasota and Venice.

Jan Sarnecki spent last Feb. in Liberia during the revolution. "It didn't involve Monrovia (the capital)." At the time, Jan was teaching orthopedic surgery as a volunteer on a program called Orthopedics Overseas. "Because of the political problems, I was the last volunteer to go."

63 SILDEN S. EDWARDS

Elgin Academy, 350 Park St.
Elgin, IL 60120

The hot new book from the College Board, entitled INSIDE COLLEGE: NEW FREEDOM, NEW RESPONSIBILITY is written by bona fide authority, Harvard's dean of freshmen, Hank Moses, a 20-year veteran of helping students deal with the challenges of college and make the most of themselves. One review says, Hawk's theme is "the importance of exploring, imagining, and questioning. Whether addressing the issue of course work, grades, campus social life, family relationships, or choosing a major, he encourages students to think of their education as an opportunity for discovery." Jay Schroeder calls it "must reading," and says you can get a copy for $10.95 at local bookstores or from the College Board, Box 886, N.Y., NY 10101-0886.

Harry Maguire reports the good news that "after 16 years in the San Francisco bay area in the corporate world, rising to director of information systems for a large electronics company, I have moved the family to Bainbridge Island, Wash., and started a private consulting practice as a Macintosh computer specialist." Boa and Gerry have two daughters, Susie (17) and Deanna (12). And Mike Curci is still practicing pediatric surgery in Portland, Me., where he delights in a more rustic life than N.Y.C. ever offered. He has two daughters, Stephanie (13) and Meghan (12).

If you happened to watch Vanderbilt's thrilling upset victory of Georgia back in Dec. on ESPN and noticed a handsome Vandy sophomore point guard named Daunic, it was indeed our own hoop ace Joel's son Willy. A multi-talented student-athlete, Willy was drafted by the Calif. Angels out of Florida high school so will pursue a professional baseball career when he graduates. Joel's other son Rhys, also a good basketball player, is one of the best cross country runners in Florida, at Luther H.S., where his mother Ann is assistant principal.

64 JOTHAM JOHNSON

Box 12
Blawenburg, NJ 08504

After a lengthy illness punctuated by hopeful surgeries, Jim Avary died at home in Lanett, Ala., on Dec. 16. Bailey Bishop traveled down from Boston and joined Scotty Andrews in representing 1964 at the funeral, and the Class extends its condolences to Leewood and to their daughters, Scottie and Pye. A memorial will follow.

Alan Kors, assoc. prof. of history at Penn, was among a group of academics who attended the second conference of the Natl. Assoc. of Scholars in N.Y.C. last June, according to a report in the CHRONICLE OF HIGHER EDUCATION. Alan and others contend that American higher education is being "contaminated" by political interests. "Ours is an uneasy alliance," he said, "of traditional liberals, libertarians, neo-conservatives, and cultural conservatives who share the belief that there are groups seeking to undermine open and rational discourse." Many in attendance argued that too many colleges and universities are employing unqualified women and members of minority groups to fulfill affirmative action goals; are caving into demands by feminists, minorities, and others that they stop teaching classic texts and the value of Western culture; and are stifling the free exchange of ideas on sensitive issues of race and gender. "Become the monasteries of a new dark ages, preserving what is worth preserving amid the barbaric ravages in the countryside in terms of academe," Kors exhorted in a speech that received a standing ovation from many in the audience.

Norm Cantor, a prof. at Rutgers Law School in Newark, was recently named the school's first Jacob Scholar. Named after the late state Supreme Court Justice Nathan Jacobs, this scholarship program is dedicated to supporting research initiatives. A professor at Rutgers since 1970, Norm plans to use these funds to research the legal aspects of death and dying. "My particular concentration in-

Valuing Social Work

SERENDIPITY IS THE ONLY EXPLANATION for Elizabeth Duffy '88's job as coordinator of the Student Volunteers Council at Princeton. A molecular biology major as an undergraduate, she played ice hockey during her freshman year. Channeling her interest in sports into the S.V.C., she coached football and soccer at the Katzenbach School for the Deaf and, as a sophomore, initiated the Special Olympics at Princeton. As a junior and senior, she served as the S.V.C.'s student administrator, and following graduation, she became the council's first paid coordinator when the position was created out of an endowment from the Chapel office.

The Student Volunteers Council began as part of Princeton's Student Christian Association and in 1967 became an independent organization. Although its offices are in Murray-Dodge Hall, it is wholly secular. The group's mission, according to Duffy, includes meeting community needs, developing student leadership, and "broadening the definition of education" to include public service. Apart from Duffy's role, the S.V.C. is student-run, with undergraduates coordinating and staffing most of its projects.

Outreach programs that take place during university vacations and breaks allow between ten and twenty-five students to participate in urban and rural renewal projects. Last fall, students worked in West Virginia; projects in Philadelphia are planned for the spring, and in Mexico for the summer. Students raise money for their own meal and travel expenses. The Urban Action program, now in its fifth year, takes about sixty freshmen to nearby urban areas to work during the week before school opens in the fall.

The S.V.C. is also involved with Recording for the Blind and with the University Brothers and Sisters program, which pairs underprivileged children from Trenton with undergraduates who act as big brothers and sisters. It offers courses in sign language, and Duffy hopes to expand its involvement with the Katzenbach School. Other projects include work with elderly groups and autistic children. The Princeton community has a growing number of Latinos, many of whom cannot speak English. Duffy would like to see students serve as interpreters in hospitals and in local elementary and secondary schools, where they could tutor in English language courses and other subjects.

The S.V.C. will be hard pressed to replace its first full-time coordinator. Duffy, who is also an assistant master at Rockefeller College, plans a career in nonprofit administration and so will leave the university in June to get a master's degree in business administration. She will leave behind an organization that has imbued students with a sense of the value of social service: "I believe that social work is an important part of an education," says Duffy, adding that it must remain extracurricular and voluntary to have meaning. "Social work should be valued for what it is."

—Eric W. Muhlheim '91

Liz Duffy '88

cludes things like the legal effects of living wills and the legality of assisted suicide and euthanasia."

65

J. MICHAEL PARISH

Winthrop, Stimson, Putnam & Roberts
1 Battery Park Plaza, New York, NY 10004

Matters of Record: "Georgia Lee and George Shenk, a N.Y. partnership, are pleased to announce the creation of a new affiliate on Oct. 26, 1990, Michael Lee Shenk: initial capitalization eight pounds. Although this new affiliate is expected to exhibit rapid growth characteristics, it is anticipated that it will remain closely held for some time."

Farther along in the family-raising dept. is Bill

(W.) Scott: "Very settled in Hingham, Mass., with wife, Ronnie, and kids Darcy (Dickinson '88), Bill (Colgate '92), Peter (Milton Academy), and Kate (Derby Academy)." An added bonus is that as of the first of this year Bill became president of M.F.S. Financial Services, a mutual fund sales company.

Also adding to the New Year's Day excitement was the election of Dick Woodbridge as mayor of Princeton Township at the organization meeting of the Township Committee. A fireman himself, Dick also assumed the position of fire commissioner, making it all the more appropriate that the post-meeting reception was held at the firehouse.

For all of the above-referenced fireworks, probably no one had a closer brush with the same 1990 than Dave Madison, who had just left the dugout to take the field in Nov. at the U.S. Chamber of Commerce softball game in Santiago, Chile, when an explosive charge hidden in a bat, allegedly by the Chilean branch of the P.L.O., exploded, knocking Dave to the ground. Although Dave was not seriously injured, the explosion killed a Canadian teammate.

66

JEFFREY N. McCOLLUM, A.T.&T. Products
5 Wood Hollow Rd., Rm. 1J19
Parsippany, NJ 07054

The NEW YORKER boasts, in a full-page ad in the N.Y. TIMES that "It's been a very good year." The year, from the snows of Jan. to the sparkle of Christmas, is encapsulated in the pen strokes of Mike Witte, who drew each of the 12 cartoons in the ad. Shown is the drawing for Feb., complete with heart for Valentine's Day.

Word arrives from Lance Cbilton, a pediatrician in Albuquerque, that he has reconnected to Princeton and the Class of 1966 as a result of his daughter Annelise's decision to enroll at Princeton. Lance left Princeton after two years "anxious to get on with my medical education (having been accepted to Johns Hopkins) . . . and less than enchanted with the idea of spending two years in what I considered an artificial and often unwelcome social situation."

As a result of Annelise's interest in Princeton, Lance was reminded of the educational opportunities at Princeton and was impressed with the quality of the admissions process ("better done than anywhere else by far"). He concludes with the thought that he is happy to be back in the Princeton fold and best wishes for the entire Class. Welcome back, Lance!

Having moved from corporate to private practice, Howard Fredman recently won his first appeal (Travelers Indemnity v. Madonna) before the Ninth Circuit Court of Appeals. He enjoys being lead counsel and "on the line" much more than his corporate work which kept him the role of back room strategist.

Nelson Hendler reports that Annual Giving is going well. The Class has set a goal of $3.5 million and a new record for the 25th reunion class. It will take help from all of us.

67

PETER J. TURCH
6503 Masefield St.
Worthington, OH 43085

For this issue, we have the accompanying mystery photo: family and/or friends enjoying sun, sand, and surf, but no identification (or news). Somebody please claim these good-looking folk.

CLASS DINNER: Feb. 28 at the Princeton Club of New York, 6 P.M. Call Roger Liddell 212-269-7894.

Along with the Dec. 19 PAW, which included a list of Class offspring on the Princeton campus, we received, under separate cover, a new, corrected listing (and request for indulgence) from the Alumni Council. We are actually up to 19 students: Nathan Averill '93, Meghan Barber '92, Jennifer Beart '94, Scott Blinder '93, Shannon Bonner '94,

Catherine Bramball '92, John Burstein '93, Christopher Davidson '94, Beth Delaney '94, Christopher Hinsley '92, Gwendolen Jones '94, Stephen Oxman '94, Jason Plaks '93, Nora Salaverria (Poma) '94, Noah Rhys '92, Leif Torhelsen '91, Janita Turcibi '91, Amy Wanklyn '94, Nicholas Weber '94. In a note just in from Jim Bonner, we learned that his daughter Shannon was unfortunately involved in an auto accident, so she will actually be in the Class of '95. She may then be joining Jon Dyer's son, Alex, who has just been accepted by early decision. Jon also writes that: "I am one of two equal partners in Space Design Inc., a Philadelphia architectural firm specializing in corporate interior design, struggling to cope with the current East Coast economy."

Twenty-five years ago, Soviet Luna Nine achieves soft landing on moon. First Apollo test flight a success. President Johnson and Premier Ky talk about winning war. U.S. to sell 200 tanks to Israel to balance Soviet and American shipments to Arabs. Moslem extremists charged with plot to kill Nasser.

We learned recently of Luke Buxton's death. A memorial is being prepared.

68

JOE KUMBEK

Hartford Hospital, 80 Seymour St.
Hartford, CT 06115; fax 203-524-7057

Sometimes our avocation and vocation interact and complement each other in unexpected ways. On work days, Charles Starke practices internal medicine in Briarcliff Manor, N.Y., and works on the staff of Phelps Memorial Hospital Center and Cty. Medical Center in Valhalla, N.Y. Charles had had a HAM radio license for about 30 years, but became actively involved in shortwave radio transmission only about three years ago. Six months ago, the HAM network broadcast a call for help from the Soviet Union which may not only save a man's life but also increase medical cooperation between the two countries. Charles and several other amateur radio operators/physicians have consulted with Soviet doctors on an almost daily basis about the condition of a 25-year-old Soviet man seriously injured in an auto accident. Through a complicated international hookup, using Caribbean relays and San Francisco interpreters, Dr. Starke has helped nurse the patient back to health. "It's a real joy to help a brother HAM," says Charles, noting another twist in the story—the patient was injured on his way to a Soviet HAM Radio Operators Convention. More important, he notes that "the success of glasnost has spread to the airways." Charles's wife Mary and children Katherine (13), and Robert (12), all have HAM radio licenses, but had used them only to communicate when the children went to camp or the family went on vacations.

Ron Nath, a vascular surgeon in Winchester, Mass., was recently elected to membership in the New England Society for Vascular Surgery. Sons David, a fifth grader at Belmont Day School, and Tom, a seventh grader, are both already aiming toward Princeton.

Finally, an appeal: The chances of your name appearing in the Class notes can be greatly enhanced if you (1) use the "News for Class Secretary" flaps on your dues envelopes, (2) call, write, or fax me with news, or (3) send or fax me copies of articles written about you and your activities. I welcome all of the above.

69

PAUL GEORGE SITTFELD

1854 Keys Crescent
Cincinnati, OH 45206

Alumni Day is slated for Sat., Feb. 16. Join some classmates there.

Chuck Freyer, Class treasurer, is pursuing back dues and most of us have received word of the number of dollars needed to make us current from 1969. Please participate.

Congratulations to lawyers Marc Miller, now of the law firm of McLeod, Watkinson & Miller in Washington; to Doug Yeager, who has joined Ungerman Hill in Dallas; and to Jeff Leon, now of Russell Reynolds Associates' N.Y. office, where he will focus his recruiting efforts on general management and information technology.

Since graduation, Jim Alferts has worked in aspects of U.S.-Japan relations. For a number of recent years, he has served as exec. director of the Japan Society of Northern Calif. Last Jan., he joined a start-up company called U.S. Mercantile Corp., an intl. trade services company working in Pacific Rim markets. Its services are tightly focused on telecommunications and data communications industries and he is responsible for clients' activities in Japan. His daughter, Katie, turned eight recently; is a third grader; and knows the words and dance steps to an impressive range of musical theater offerings.

70

JAN KUMBEK

113 Laurel Rd.
Princeton, NJ 08540

Your Secretary's frantic appeal for news has happily prompted quite a few notes of interest:

Sandy Greenberg is spending the year in South Bend, Ind., clerking for a federal judge, where he reports the work is challenging and interesting, providing yet another look at the American govt., having previously worked in Congress, the Texas legislature, and the Texas Attorney General's office.

Two more lawyers receiving well-deserved honors are Bill Schopf and Peter Baugher, whose firm, Schopf and Weiss, was given the Chicago Volunteer Legal Services 1990 Distinguished Service Award. In making the award, it was noted that "As a rule, they will accept any case, no matter how difficult or last minute it is. They go above and beyond what most law firms will do."

Ray Gibbons has been named co-chairman for the 1992 Scientific Session of the American College of Cardiology, a small gathering of 20,000! (With experience like that, perhaps he can assist Jerome Coleman at our 25th!)

Michael Hirschfeld has joined the Chesapeake Bay Foundation's Environmental Defense Program as a senior science adviser. As a scientist, he frequently becomes involved in debates on government policy issues, something he encourages his colleagues to do, noting that "I'd like to try to harness some of their tremendous ability as advocates for the Bay as well as educators."

Another fine man of many talents, Bill Heyman, was appointed by the U.S. Securities and Exchange Commission to its Emerging Markets Advisory Committee, and served as a member of the U.S. delegation for the re-opening of the Budapest Stock Exchange. As if that weren't enough, about a year ago Bill visited Kuwait on business, before it became a daily news item!

71

STUART E. PICKERSON

P.O. Box 3108
Del Mar, CA 92014

RÉSUMÉS: Mike Ladra, Brad O'Brien, and Brad's wife, Judy, are all partners in the Palo Alto law firm Wilson, Sonsini, Goodrich & Rosati. Since 1981, the firm has had explosive growth, from 25 to 185 law-

Princeton Clubs and Alumni Associations

PAA OF FT. LAUDERDALE: Wed., Feb. 20—Professor of Physics George Reynolds will speak at a dinner. Please call Stephen C. Buckley '76 for info. at 305-492-4509.

PAA OF MONMOUTH AND NE OCEAN COUNTIES: Tues., Feb. 12—Don Betterton, director of the Undergraduate Financial Aid Office, will speak at a luncheon. For information, call Doug Hahn '34 at 201-528-6116.

PC OF SOUTH FLORIDA (Miami): Thurs., Feb. 21—Professor of Physics George Reynolds will speak. Please call Nancy Copperthwaite '78 at 305-579-0444 for info.

PC OF ST. LOUIS: Sat., Feb. 23—The club will host a seminar on the topic "Tradition and Modernity in the Near and Far East." Professor of East Asian Studies and History Martin Colcutt and Professor of Near Eastern Studies Norman Itzkowitz '59 will speak. For info., please call Tom Deuel '57 at 314-362-8807.

PC OF CHICAGO: Sun., Feb. 24—The club will host a seminar on the topic "Tradition and Modernity in the Near and Far East." Professor of East Asian Studies and History Martin Colcutt and Professor of Near Eastern Studies Norman Itzkowitz '59 will speak. For info., please call Bob Loveman '69 at 312-525-653.

PC OF SAN DIEGO: Fri., Mar. 8—President Harold T. Shapiro '64 will speak in San Diego. For information, please call Tilden B. Reeder '68 at 619-286-1010.

CALIF. REGIONAL CONFERENCES: Sat., Mar. 9 and Sun., Mar. 10—Please save these dates as the PC of Southern Calif. and the PC of Northern Calif. will each host regional conferences on these respective dates. Featured speakers include: President Harold T. Shapiro '64; Dean of Admission Fred Hargadon; Professor of Slavic Languages and Literatures Caryl Emerson; and Professor of Astronomy James Gunn. Calif., Ariz., and Nev. alumni and parents will be invited and all Princeton alumni and parents are welcome. For info., please call Elizabeth Hunt in the Alumni Council at 609-258-3351.

yers. Brad sees Tim Tosta frequently, and stays in touch with Rush Rehm, who received his doctorate at Stanford several years ago and is now an asst. prof. of theater at Emory Univ. Brad says, "I make a point to attend high school reunions too, so I can catch up with Ron Roedel, who is a prof. of engineering at Arizona State Univ."

Mark Ebbidge is publisher of the BUSINESS JOURNAL OF CHARLOTTE, a weekly business newspaper. He also owns a publishing consulting company. Gary Hubbs is a systems analyst in Manama, Bahrain on the Arabian Gulf, after spending the last two years in Jeddah, Saudi Arabia. Before the Kuwait invasion, he wrote that "Bahrain is heaven compared to Saudi (booze is legal here)," but that he is "still considering packing it in to buy a bar in Bangkok when my present contract expires next year."

Things weren't boring for the Ray Palmer family in 1989. In July, Ray was named V.P.-northeast operations for Puget Energy Services, a subsidiary of Puget Power. In Oct., a new baby, Anthony, joined the family. And in Nov., they moved into a new house they built in Hopkinton, Mass. Joe Hoare is now the president of the Princeton Alumni Assn. of Northern Ariz. Marshall Burack is practicing law in Miami, where he is partner in Matzner & Zisking. Gail and he have two children, Seth (6) and Lindsay (3). He attended a recent program at which Scott Berg spoke.

72

KIP HEWITT
21 Wildcat Rd.
Darien, CT 06820

CLASS DINNER ON ALUMNI DAY: '72 will hold its annual dinner Feb. 16 at Prospect. Cocktails, 6 P.M.; dinner 7 P.M. ($25 per person) with a faculty speaker. For those of you who have never attended, this is one of the most enjoyable events of the year, including the Woodrow Wilson, James Madison, and Pyne Prize award ceremonies, the Service of Remembrance, and the Class luncheon and dinner. Call Fritz Cammerzell for Class of '72 dinner reservations (609) 683-0066.

TRANSITIONS: Tim Howard, after 15 years with the same law firm in Peoria, Ill., has moved to a larger firm. Noting there must be a relation between turning 40 and taking new risks, he says he is challenged and invigorated by the move. Meanwhile, Stan Ewing, who has had an idyllic and busy life as a pediatrician in Halifax, N.S., says he is feeling out the market for a change in jobs.

After nine years with First Boston, Rich Sun has left to start his own financial advisory firm—Sun Associates. He starts with a solid book of over $1 billion in contracted project financings and leases. And Brian Stockmar has moved back to Denver, Colo., after a 1½ year stint in Japan. He had contracted encephalitis in Japan and had a few complications, but hopes to be 100% recovered soon. Brain says he'd love to hear from old friends.

Finally, Hal White has recently moved into the field of artificial intelligence—more specifically, artificial neural networks—at the U.C.—San Diego. He must be doing extremely well at it, as he was recently invited to be the keynote speaker for the Intl. Joint Conference on Neural Networks, sponsored by the I.E.E.E. and Intl. Neural Network Society.

GET-TOGETHERS: Max Matzels met up with Louise and Jim Wetner from Chicago and Diana and Tom Jones from McLean, Va.—at the Bar Mitzvah given by Susie and Mark Eig for their oldest son, Adam, in Chevy Chase, Md.

74

JOHN STRYKER
15 Woodbine Rd.
Kendall Park, NJ 08824

David Luther married Rebecca Shappert (Auburn '85) on Dec. 9, 1989, in Knoxville, Tenn. A large contingent of Princetonians were on hand to celebrate, as shown here. First row: Tom Escott, Dave and Becky, Ted

Luther '37, Botwell Lee. Second row: Bob Moore, Scott Kirkley, Gerry Ward '73, Jerry Raymond '73. Third row: Ted Nixon, Brad Hume, Rich Thaler '73, Greg Plimpton '73. Fourth row: Alan Stone. Dave is president of Industrial Gas & Supply Co. in Knoxville. He is also the regional Annual Giving chairman, and one of four '74 regional chairmen to lead their regions to 60% or higher participation in the 1989-90 campaign. The others are Fred Strobel in Nashville, Tenn., Paul Sanson in Hartford, Conn., and Marty Mooney in Cincinnati.

Alan Stone was inspired by Dave's wedding, and in May 1990, he married Dorothy Young (U.Va. '75 and N.Y.U. Law). He says Dorothy "is, fortunately, well enough educated and employed to keep me in the lifestyle to which I've become accustomed." On hand for the wedding were Matt Singleton, Rob Walkingsbaw, Walter Moore, Dave Luther, Brad Cann, Gerry Ward '73, and David Thompson '48. Alan and Dorothy live in Richmond, Va.

NEWS FROM THE FAR EAST: Cornelius Gildes is now living in Seoul, where he is the president and managing director of Goodyear Korea Co. He has previously worked from Goodyear in Taiwan, France, Germany, and Belgium.

75

MELISSA KUBER MISSEBRIAN
940 Riverside Ave., Berkeley Square
Trenton, NJ 08618

Due to a production glitch, the '75 column did not appear in the Dec. 5 issue. Here, then, is what you would have read: the news from the West Coast, moving south to north.

Frank Runyeon appeared as the recurring character Jovan Dmytrk, intl. chess champion, on FALCON CREST last winter, and continues as cop Michael Donnelly on SANTA BARBARA on NBC.

If you watch the new CBS series TRIALS OF ROSIE O'NEILL, you may notice that our own Ron Ramin is the composer of the music. Ron wrote some of the music for CAGNEY & LACEY, and he is working with the same producer on this series.

Having done a three-year stint as resident fellows in Stanford's East Asian Studies theme dorm, Anne and Thomas Hare and their children John (4), and Emma (2), are moving back to their house in Palo Alto, Calif. Tom now holds a joint appointment as assoc. prof. in Asian languages and in comparative literature at Stanford.

After nine years in the Development Office at the University, Peter Little has moved to Calif. as V.P. for development at the Asia Foundation in San Francisco. The foundation is an independent, grant-making agency which seeks to build democratic institutions and promote economic development in over twenty countries around the Pacific Rim. Peter is particularly pleased at being able to combine his background in nonprofit fund development with his longstanding personal interest in Asia.

Also in S.F., Hal Candee is a senior staff attorney with the Natural Resources Defense Council, which this year celebrated its 20th anniversary.

76

JAMES L. MARKETOS
Lane & Mitterdorf, 919 18th St., N.W.
Washington, DC 20006

Exactly 100 years after the birth of his great grandfather, Frederick L. Doar IV was born Apr. 23, 1990, to Fred and Marianne Verbeke Doar. He's pictured here with sister Maddie. Marianne has returned to work as V.P./manager of San Francisco and Hawaii corporate lending at Wells Fargo in S.F. She and Fred, a consultant, live in the home they've built in Mill Valley, Calif.

Ron Wilson and his wife Margaret (Colgate '77) have two boys, Scott and Eric, and live in Nashville. Ron finished his M.D. at Vanderbilt, did neurology and neuropathology training, and was appointed asst. prof. of neurology in 1986. Last Apr. he lectured at the Inst. for Experimental Medicine (Pavlov's lab until the Russian revolution).

A son, William Jacobs, was born to Carolyn Douglas on Aug. 21, 1990.

From Abington, Mass., Cindy and Fran Allen report that they have three children, Katie, Amanda, and Christian. Fran is managing director of U.S. operations for Hummel, a soccer-equipment manufacturer.

In June 1989 Anthony Carminaro left the law department of Pittsburgh's P.P.G. Industries, Inc., where he'd been since graduating from the Univ. of Pittsburgh School of Law in 1980, and joined Gefsky and Lehman, P.C., where his business law practice emphasizes mergers and acquisitions, exempt securities transactions, international trade, and computer law.

Thayer and Chip Adams have had a third child, Marjorie Potts, born Feb. 21, 1990. Two days later (and in the same Stanford, Calif. hospital), Travis James Boyce was born to Sandy and Dick Boyce, their first child.

77

JAMES BARNON
15 W. 72nd St., Apt. 24-B
New York, NY 10023

I DO DEPT.—Tom Hess married Elizabeth Anne Perry at the Island Chapel on Upper Saranac Lake, N.Y., last July 7. The photo, taken at the reception in Lake Placid, shows the Princeton contingent. Surrounding Tom and Beth (St. Lawrence '81) are George Cohen '82, Lisa Abeles '86, Charlie Milligan, Rich Schifter, John Frye and Henry Westmoreland '76. Beth is in charge of professional development programs at Price Waterhouse in Boston. Tom is an architect with Graham/Meus Inc.

A FIRST, A SECOND, AND TWO THIRDS—Jonathan Jaffin became a father on Sept. 21 with the birth of James. Jonathan, who is spending the year as a student at the Army Command and General Staff College, is already teaching him "Old Nassau." Sarah Florence McWilliams, born Sept. 6, is the second child of Curtis McWilliams and wife, Betty Ann '78. Sarah and brother Austin "have brought us so much happiness, although we do feel a little like June and Ward Cleaver," says Curtis. Gay Mills reports that baby No. 3, August Slade Conwell, was born on May 31. Jane Hughes and husband Jerry '78 also became parents for the third time with the birth of Caroline, joining Alex (6) and Zach (4). Jane is an economics prof. at Brandeis Univ., and Jerry is labor counsel for General Cinema Corp. Jane recently represented Princeton alums in a spelling bee to benefit Wellesley public schools. "We crashed and burned," she says, "but at least we beat out the Harvard and Yale alumni teams."

78

BON PERRIN
Box 886
Middlebury, VT 05753

Pamela Dippel has been elected a partner of Wellington Management Co., a Boston-based investment management firm. Pam has worked there for six years, since graduating from Harvard Business School.

Barcey Thurston Levy completed medical school last May at the Univ. of Iowa. She is now in a family practice residency at the university, where husband, Steve, is an assoc. prof. in the College of Dentistry's preventive and community dentistry dept. They have two children, Lauren (7) and David (4). As if careers, schooling, and parenthood haven't been enough, Barcey and Steve have been active Alumni Schools Committee volunteers for Princeton, with Steve currently serving as coordinator of A.S.C. activities for Eastern Iowa.

Josh Minkin spent last fall working as the deputy campaign manager for a Democratic candidate for the N.Y. State Senate. "Unfortunately," Josh writes, "the incumbent won, but we gave a good effort."

Lee Shelley was married last Sept. 14 to Janet Skorupa (Univ. of Dela. '80). Lee commutes into N.Y.C. where he is a V.P. at Frank Crystal Co., a Wall Street insurance brokerage firm. Janet is a buyer for Macy's. Last June, Lee and Janet attended the wedding of Cauleen Liston and Jon Meckling.

Ed Tiryakian moved to London from Durham, N.C., last Sept. to begin a new job with the Union Bank of Switzerland. Ed writes, "London is great, and I love the various accents. Sometimes I even understand what the English are saying."

79 MARTHA KRAMER
27 Northhill St., Apt. 6-R
Stamford, CT 06907

RECENT ARRIVALS: David M. Reed reports the birth of his daughter, Victoria, who joins her brother, Nicholas (3). David is keeping busy in the M. & A. dept. of Paine Webber in N.Y.

79 IN COMMUNITY SERVICE: Boston-area members of our Class are well-represented in a Princeton Club project to help secondary-school students. Jon Laramore, Gina Dailey, David Sand, and Phyllis Fonseca are all mentoring students at a Boston public high school. If anyone else is involved with this or similar volunteer projects across the country, please let us know.

HEARD FROM: Eric Meyer reports that he has completed his Ph.D. in history and the philosophy of science at Indiana Univ., has taught for two years at the Univ. of Okla., and writes computer "shareware" for the I.B.M. P.C. on the side. Despite these moves, he says he still considers home to be Boulder, Colo. Elizabeth Shannon and Kevin Weiss have moved to Buffalo, where Kevin is the manager of I.B.M.'s local branch.

DID YOU NOTICE? Peter Altschul was mentioned in a recent PAW article on Reading for the Blind (R.F.B.). Winner of an R.F.B. Scholastic Achievement Award, Peter majored in music and composed a Mass as his honors thesis. After working for the Internal Revenue Service and Bank of New York, he is now in graduate school at the Columbia School of Social Work.

ALUMNI NEWS: Alumni Day, which will be held on Sat., Feb. 16 is a great chance to come back to Princeton. The events will begin on Fri. evening with readings by author Joyce Carol Oates from her recent work. Lectures will span subjects as diverse as theoretical physics, opera, computer design, and education and ethics. Don't miss it!

80 RIK PARKER
25 Farmhouse La.
Purlong, PA 18925

WEDDING BELLS: Despite the rigors of drumming up money for the school, former Class Agent Jim

Tausche found time to wed Jane Kamenz last Apr. Pictured are: (front row) Jim Farnwall, Jane, and Jim; (back, l-r) Bryan Miller, Donna Packard '79, Jim Shapiro, Dennis Love '78, Robbie Dick, Rich Becker, Brink Brinkley, Winston Weinmann, John Williams, and Calvin Maurer. Jane is in the process of transferring her corporate and commercial law practice from Montreal to Atlanta where Jim still consults with McKinsey & Co.

Shalom Bresticker married Chaya Zilber in Jerusalem on July 5. Among the attendees were Alan Wecker '82 and Joel Yisraeli '79. Shalom was discharged from the I.D.F. in Sept. 1989 and returned to Motorola Semiconductor Israel as a staff engineer.

NEW ARRIVALS: Winston reports that his daughter, Ginny, was born three days after the P-rade on June 12, and that older brother Tucker thinks she's great. Andrew Kobayashi Chou was also born June 12 to Sumire Kobayashi and Phil Chou. Sumire says that she felt her first contractions as soon as she got home the Saturday night of Reunions! They have now moved back to Menlo Park, Calif., and Phil works at Xerox's Palo Alto Research Park. A few days later, on June 18, Jason Fish and Courtney Benoist '81 became parents to Genevieve in San Francisco.

81 JEAN AMABLE TELLJOWANN
50 Riverside Dr., Apt. 9F
New York, NY 10024

Beth Shortridge Haak writes: "Though still going by Dr. Shortridge, pediatrician-at-large, within hospital walls, I have otherwise taken the big plunge. I became Mrs. Beth Haak, marrying John Haak (Brown '80) last spring. We make our home in Chestnut Hill, Penn."

Several classmates are already making plans to return to Princeton for the tenth. Carey Crutcher Smith writes: "Just tied the knot with David Eugene Smith Aug. 25! We've moved to Seattle. I'm working for U.S. West Cellular as manager of new product development. Hope to see you at our tenth!" Martin Flaberty has moved to Washington, D.C., for a year to clerk for Byron White on the Supreme Court. Martin has been in touch with Phil Ponebshek '82, who is living in Va. and is the father of a new son, Alex. "Looking forward to the tenth if I can make it," Martin writes. Lydia Fox sends word that she received her Ph.D. in geology from U.C.-Santa Barbara in 1989, a few months after her son, Matthew Landon Fox-Humphreys, was born on Feb. 17, 1989. Lydia recently joined the faculty of the Univ. of the Pacific in Stockton, Calif., as an asst. prof. in the Dept. of Geology and Geography. The campus is modeled after the Ivy League and the mascot is a tiger! Lydia is looking forward to the tenth. Her husband, David Humphreys, and son, Matthew, will be joining her. Joe Woods is in the middle of his plastic surgery residency at Vanderbilt Univ., where he reports running across other Princeton alumni, especially from Tiger Inn, almost daily. Joe and his wife, Lara, are looking forward to the tenth and to settling back in Atlanta after Joe's residency is completed. Arnie Breitbart will complete his general surgery residency this year and will begin training in plastic surgery at N.Y.U. in July. Arnie writes that he and his wife, Viviane, are enjoying their son, Morris (2). Bob Sommer has accepted a faculty appointment at the Mount Sinai Hospital in N.Y. in pediatric cardiology.

82 TERN DOOLEY KOGUT
12409 Sadler Lane
Bowie, MD 20715

Anyone still watching TWIN PEAKS? Now that we know who killed Laura Palmer? Maybe '82ers should continue watching to see if they can identify who's playing Denise, the transvestite D.E.A. agent.

The answer is our own Dave Duchovny.

In the theater we have Mark G. Warren, actor, director, and playwright. He has recently written two N.Y. productions called LUST AND THE UNICORN and MEXICO. The N.Y. Post called MEXICO a "two-character blue jeans and T-shirt drama... a compact, quite witty, often sharply intelligent piece of writing." (It ran for 82 performances.) Mark is currently a visiting artist at Isothermal Community College in Spindale, N.C.

In newsprint we have Joel Achenbach. After working for eight years with the Miami HERALD, Joel recently got married (on a Miami pier at dawn to Mary Stapp), went to Europe for a month, and started working for the Washington Post. His column, "Why Things Are," is syndicated in dozens of newspapers. Next summer Valentine will publish a collection of these works.

Pictured is the Apr. 7, 1990, wedding of Katherine Brokaw and Steven Russ (U.S.N.A. '82). In Prospect Gardens (l-r) are Frank Strasburger '67, Caroline Brokaw Tucker '85, Jake Sun, Loraine Wood '81, Sandy Maxwell '39, Barbara Quackenbos Ben-Asber, Becky Updegraph (kneeling), Thomas Kean '57, Marion Wood, Daniel Carbery, Katherine, Steven, Jordan Becker, Bill Bandon '83, Maureen O'Shea Carbery (kneeling), Jack Henneiman '83, Sherry Wheaton Wert '83, John Wert, Mark Hornung '80, Lauren Jones '81, Stuart Essig '83, John Philip '76, and Susie Enright. Also present was Tiffany Trunko '87.

83 GAIL FRANK
345 West 87th St., Apt. 3F
New York, NY 10024

Maria Canclan Klutey sent in this picture of her wedding, May 27, 1990, to Rick Klutey '85 in Hyan-nisport, Mass. Maria and Rick are finishing their M.B.A.s at Michigan. Pictured are (l-r) Linda Hattani, Bill Yaman, Christopher Sherry, Lee Stewart (hidden), Monique Villars (also hidden), Harry Wonham, Tammy Rountree, Warren Whitlock '81, Maria, Rick, Frank Trinity '85, Laura Forese, Tia Doggett, Ed Byrns '85, Margot Bodine, Michaela Kasbgarian, George Oyler '84, Susan Parker, Marcus Romani '85, Rich Brown '85, Bill Thompson '85, and Scott Peeler '85.

Richard Demmler married Nannette Hyde (Skidmore '83) on July 22, 1989, at Hammersmith Farm in Newport, R.I. Princetonians in attendance and col-

Young Alumni Activities

PC OF NEW ENGLAND: Feb. 21—Boston Alumni Club's party at Venus de Milo or Club Land. Look for fliers in January's mail. For more info., please call Adrienne Della Penna '88 at 617-861-8254, Sarah Helm '89 at 617-868-7808, or Mary Hermann '89 at 617-628-8825.

PA OF DELAWARE: Second Thursday of each month happy hour at Water Works Cafe. For more info., please call Ann Linton '86 at 302-654-1888.

ALUMNI DAY: Young Alumni Reception on Alumni Day, Feb. 16, sponsored by the Committee on Young Alumni and Undergraduates. 5:00, Betts lobby, free. To R.S.V.P. or for more info., please call Debbie Bredael at 609-258-3353. Contact Debbie Bredael at the Alumni Council with notices of events for inclusion in this column at least six weeks prior to the event. Call or write: the Alumni Council, Maclean House, Princeton Univ., Princeton, NJ 08544.

lected above are Barry Welch '79, Julie Robbins Greenwald, Dan Greenwald '81, Richard, Nannette, best man Davis Jenkins '81, usher Bill Clack '81, Richard's father Jack Demmler '54, and Don Gerlach '55.

84

TIMOTHY C. WU
Beacon Court, 175 Beacon St., Apt. 413
Somerville, MA 02143

DO YOU REMEMBER THAT TIME IN SEPTEMBER? This column is devoted to classmate weddings in Septembers past and present. Greg Ruffa, an associate at the N.Y.C. law firm of Simpson, Thacher & Bartlett, married Lisa Gallagher (Boston College '83) in Boston Sept. 29. Princetonians on hand: Jim Dinneen, Stu May, Sam Buttrey '83, Oliver Griswold, C.J. Voss, Chris Stauffer, Dave Zucker, Eleanor Moseley Pollnow, Charlie Pollnow, Blair Effron, Greg, John Golfinos, Lisa, Jeb Burchenal, Tom Nagorski, Minard Hamilton '85, Terry Pflager, Mark Califano, Sandy McGrath, Patrick Wall '85, Laura Carson, John Banas, Dave King, Margarethe Laurenzi '83, Mark Laurenzi, Nabeel Malik, Zareen Malik, Susan Dunn, and Eddie Dunn.

From Sept. 1989 and the Old Married Couples' Gallery is this photo of the marriage of Lise Rybow-ski to Kevin Abikoff. Classmates present (standing, l-r): George Grimalis, Bonne Wagner, Susan Belfiglio Grimalis, Marcy Levinson Williams, Michael Katz '81, Lise, Kevin, Mindy Henigsblub Hauptman, Bill Hauptman, Michael Stabile, Jill Dubin Stabile, (kneeling, l-r): Wyman Williams, Tim Wu, Elliott Sterensfeld, and Jeremy Ben-Ami.

The Abikoffs are currently living in Fairfax, Va., and working in the D.C. area.

85

ROB JURANEK
1578 Oak Ave., Apt. 1
Evanston, IL 60201

SHARP STICK IN THE EYE: Missie Zales recently wrote in to say, "Would you mind giving us more Class news and less illumination of your literary genius. A column containing either more than one personal update, or any information about someone who isn't one of your closest friends would be very much appreciated." Right. In alphabetical order:

Susan Basso is a biology grad student at Harvard, where she is experimenting on the greenhouse effects on tree species.

Jim Boniface and his bride, Chris, are living in Columbus, Oh., where he is in orthopedics residency at Mount Carmel Hospital. He's organizing a Mont. trout excursion this summer for all interested.

Dave Dargis graduated from Philadelphia College of Osteopathic Medicine and has entered an internship in Michigan. He writes that "Al 'Rebel Wrath' Brown got married Sept. 1, leaving a trail of destruction from San Francisco to Key West."

Dina Bistinger and Marc Lange were married on Dec. 27, 1987. Dina completed her medical internship and Marc received his Ph.D. in philosophy from Pitt. He is now an asst. prof. at U.C.L.A., where Dina is a medical resident.

Jeff Hammer is at Morgan Stanley with fellow '85ers Steve Belgrad, Paul Chamberlain, Jan Morgan, and Dave Ramsey. Jeff adds that "Paul's new locale (London) has done little to diminish his three-year, Calif.-based tan."

Christian Hammorskjold is working for a small start-up that manufactures office chairs and transportation seating outside Philadelphia. He just bought his first house.

Dave Holland recently became engaged to Alison Berlinger (Trinity '85). He reports that "life is very good right now."

Jill Hubbell writes that ex-roomie Catherine Patrick Sullivan recently had a 9-lb., 14-oz. baby boy—Wm. Robert (the large) Sullivan III. Take note: Jill is now asst. director of admissions at Harvard Business School.

Lisa Reeves is a first-year medical student at Penn.

Deborah Rubin married Dr. Howard Herrmann (Harvard '77) on Aug. 26. In attendance were Dr. Daina Dorfman Deutsch and Ms. Marties Hobman.

86

SALLIE KIM
2645 California St., Apt. 303
Mountain View, CA 94040

Santa Fe Community College. Robert Chesler reports that "after giving D.E.C. four years and one patent," he is now working at Concurrent Computer and is still motorcycling. Michael Fecci is working at A.C.I., a computer software house in Omaha, Neb., and invites anyone traveling through to look him up.

Yong G. Lee graduated from Harvard Law School last year and is in Korea performing his mandatory military service in the Legal Affairs Office of the Ministry of Natl. Defense. Next year Yong will work in N.Y.

Ricardo DeLeon received an M.B.A. from Washington Univ. and is now working for Proctor & Gable finance in Cincinnati. George Van Hoomissen is at Harvard business school and "hopefully" plans to graduate this coming June. Rob Shepardson got his M.B.A. from the Tuck School at Dartmouth in June and is working for Morgan Stanley in N.Y.

The latest in the line of wedding photos is the marriage of Lauren Battai to Bill Gerson '85 on May 6, 1990.

Pictured are (top, l-r) David Milberg '85, David Chaumette '89, Tom Gerson '89, Bill, Lauren, Rich Buchband '85, Jeff Rosalsky '85, Michael Froman '85, (bottom row) Anna Gelpert '88, Katharine Norris, Tina Vavavis, Arlene Ketzer, Emily Liman '85, and Gail Shuttlesworth. (Not pictured is Philip Goldman.) Lauren is a first-year resident in internal medicine at the Children's Hospital in S.F.

87

MARY TAYLOR DENCKO
1935 Seville St.
Santa Rosa, CA 95403

Cliff Stein married Rebecca Ivry (Penn '86) on Aug. 19, 1990, in Newton, Mass. Those at the wedding were (seated, l-r) Jeff Melnick, Rebecca, Cliff, Phill Swagel, and (standing) Lorraine Chou, David Chasman '86, Tom Cormen '78, Nicole Cormen '78, James Park '85, Trevor Jim, Shimi Antsfeld, Jon Frenkel, Howie Jacobson, and Jesse Witten. Trevor and Cliff study computer science at M.I.T.; Rebecca is an attorney practicing in Boston. Shimi studies chemistry at M.I.T., Jeff works hard in his M.D.-Ph.D. program at Duke, and Jesse is a 3L and Lorraine is in her second year at the B-school, both at Harvard. Jon is a 3L at U.C.L.A., and will clerk in Salt Lake City next year. Howie teaches Hebrew and juggling in the Princeton area. Phill studies economics at Harvard (not at M.I.T. in computer science as originally reported).

Don Veatch returned to Princeton early in Nov. to conduct a "Gold Medal Clinic" at West Windsor-Plainsboro High School's swimming pool. Dan is currently ranked fourth in the world in the 200-meter backstroke.

Rob Smith, a lieutenant in the Army, left for Saudi Arabia on Dec. 4. Write to him at SSN 539-58-9654, HHC 317th Engr. BN, Operation Desert Shield, APO NY 09760-0610.

Are there any other '87ers deployed? Please let me know.

Lisa Janm married Marco Reatequi on July 28, 1990. Pictured are: (bottom row) Jennifer Hirsch, Marco, Lisa, Michael Jimenez (honorary Class member); (middle row) Dan Paradis, Caitlin Halligan, Laura Lazarus, Kathleen Clark, Kalbryn Clutz; (top row) Lawrence Severt, Liz Duffy, Jerry Pearlman '60, Ann Fraher, and Peter Reilly. Lisa and Marco live in Washington, D.C., where Lisa works for the Agency for Intl. Development.

BEHAVE IT OR NOT: On the subject of weddings, does it seem like everyone is getting married? I did some checking and found that since our senior year, 47 weddings or engagements have been announced in the PAW or the Class newsletter. Of these 47, ten are weddings or engagements in which both people are '88ers. And according to my incomplete records, at least 64 people in the Class are married.

AND ONE MORE: Seung Minn writes in with news that Mark Balloun married Lisa Pizura on Oct. 13, 1990. Seung works for the DAIS Group, an investment management and research group in N.Y.

SOUTHERN LAWYERS: Don Evans, a third-year at Tulane Law School, was one of the four winners in the first round of Senior Appellate Moot Court. He will argue in the finals before the Louisiana Supreme Court in Mar. Vianet Lopez, in her last year at Univ. of Texas Law School, has accepted a job at Bracewell & Patterson in Houston. Jane Elizabeth Davis, who will graduate from Duke Law School this year, will work at Miller & Chevalier in Washington, D.C. And Elizabeth McLean, a second-year at Emory Law School, will work in Cleveland this summer.

NEW NUPTIALS: Elizabeth Russell, just starting law school at the Univ. of Chicago, is engaged to be married to Ken Simpler next summer. Teri McCari is engaged to Sam Hellings '87 and plans to wed in spring 1993. In the meantime, she is in her second year at Vanderbilt Medical School. Diane Fingar, engaged to Martin Myers '88, is planning a June '91 wedding in the Princeton Chapel. She recently transferred from Johns Hopkins Medical School to Harvard Medical School, where she is pursuing a Ph.D. in developmental biology.

Bucking the consulting trend, Linda Smolka has left Arthur Andersen to take up bridge engineering with Steinman, Boynton, Gronquist & Birdsall in N.Y.C. She expects to spend the winter "freezing my buns off on a bridge near J.F.K. airport." Kristen Bjorkholm has also switched jobs, moving from Public Financial Management in Philadelphia to Chicago, where she has joined LaSalle Partners, a consulting firm. Her Princeton roommate, Sally Love, is also in Chicago, where she and Homer Livingston are first-year law students at Northwestern.

Laura Cattivera has continued her running career. She runs track and cross-country for Nike Coast and is training with U.C.-Irvine's team. She has also begun at the Big Five Sporting Goods Management Trainee program and live in Balboa, Calif., with a former rival from Columbia. Joe Lemay, studying mechanical engineering at Penn State, also runs for Nike. Jeff Merkowitz, a former runner, is serving in the Peace Corps in Costa Rica.

Stephanie Siegel has finished her master's in intl.

relations at the London School of Economics and is now "settling in" for three years of law school at U.C.—Berkeley, joining Doug Renert and Jim Govert. In between she traveled in Eastern Europe for three months. Doug spent last year in Aspen, Colo., skiing by day and bartending by night with Greg Difelice, who is now in his first year at N.J. Med School in Newark.

Well folks, here it is—the official Reunions logo of the Class of '90, thanks to the artistic mastery of our own Peter Mesnick. Get psyched, classmates, because June 6-9 should be quite a weekend, indeed, and reunions co-chairpersons Kathy Fox and Lauren Siegler have promised to show us a good time. Look for further information coming soon to a mailbox near you.

PARTY TIME: The recent holiday season saw many classmates get together. In Edison, N.J., a slew of '90ers gathered at the home of Lisa LaCourse and Elaine Morales, including Juke Lenagban, who works in an ancient-art gallery in N.Y.C.; Lauren Siegler, who is studying for her Psy.D. in clinical psychology at Rutgers; and Dimitri Steinberg, who is employed by Morgan Stanley in the Big Apple. As for the hosts, Lisa makes soap for Proctor & Gamble and Elaine studies history at Rutgers. Elaine recently announced her engagement to Moose Bramball, who is with Price Waterhouse.

WE LOVE YOU, MOM: You know that classmates are busy when their mothers double as their correspondence secretaries. Mark Healey's mom writes that Mark is studying at the Univ. of Barcelona; Daniel Robinson's mom tells us that he is in Israel writing travel guides about Andorra, Cambodia, France, and Vietnam, not studying as was reported here before; and Dave Blüchenstoffs mom writes that Len Cardinal, Jeff Felt, and Mark Rubin gathered at Dave's house to send him off to Zimbabwe, where he will meet Joe Gannon and travel with him throughout Africa, Asia, and Australia.

AERO. ENGINEERING: Renzo L. Caporali '64 has been elected chairman, C.E.O., and president of Grumman Corp.

AERO. & MECH. SCI.: Paul Francis Jacobs '66 presented a paper on "Fundamentals of Stereolithography" at the 1990 CLEO conference on lasers and materials processing. Paul is currently director of process technology at 3D Systems, Valencia, Calif.

ARCHITECTURE: Aliye Pekin Celile '70 has been with the U.N. for the past nine years, first in Nairobi in the HQ for six years, and now at the U.N. Centre for Human Settlements, N.Y. office, trying to solve the problems of homelessness and inadequate shelter for all the world.

CHEMISTRY: Bill Hurley '67 has been named laboratory director for Dupont's electronics dept. in Circleville, Oh. Charles E. Kolb '71 was elected chairman, Northeastern section, American Chemical Society, for 1991; co-chair of the 1991 Gordon Conference on atmospheric chemistry; and chairman, Natl. Academy of Science/Natl. Research Council committee on atmospheric chemistry.

ECONOMICS: David Shapiro '72 recently returned to Penn State from a year's sabbatical leave spent at the Univ. of Kinshasa in Zaire. Supported by a Fulbright research grant and the Rockefeller Foundation, he worked with Zairian colleagues on a survey of over 2,400 women, focusing on "Employment, Education, and Fertility Behavior."

ELECTRICAL ENGINEERING: After working three years in Brussels, William B. Smith '63 has returned to N.J. as executive director of the network management division of A.T. & T. Bell Labs. His daughter Laura is a junior at the Univ. of Maryland (physics/English major), and son Will is a junior at Red Bank High School. Both got a lot out of three years in a French-speaking environment, he reports.

GEOLOGY: Carl Bowin '60 writes that two trips this year, to Cuba and the People's Republic of China, for collaborative research projects, were particularly interesting. An unexpected event in Cuba gave Carl an opportunity to "play diplomat and help be a bridge to improve relations." Marvin E. Kauffman '60 recently became executive director, REWAI Learning Center of Applied Environmental Technology, R. E. Wright Associates.

GERMAN: John A. Schwartzburg '67 was recently named to the Bunn Family Distinguished Teaching chair at the Lawrenceville School, Lawrenceville, N.J. It is his 23rd year teaching there. Charles H. Helmeisag '68 presented a paper entitled "Christoph Meckels Krahe als Symbol des Fremden" at the Eighth Congress of the Internationale Vereinigung für germanische Sprach- und Literaturwissenschaft (Tokyo, Aug. 1990). In Aug. 1988 he completed three five-year terms as chairperson of the dept. of modern languages and literatures at Villanova.

MECH. & AERO. ENGINEERING: Last Aug., Christopher A. Hart '69 '71 was sworn in as a member of the Natl. Transportation Safety Board. He was the managing partner of Hart & Chavers, a Washington law firm. He is listed in "Who's Who in Aviation" and "Who's Who in American Law" and belongs to the Lawyers-Pilots Bar Assn.

MUSIC: Robert Marshall '68 is chairman of the music dept. of Brandeis. His book, THE MUSIC OF JOHANN SEBASTIAN BACH: THE SOURCES, THE STYLE, THE SIGNIFICANCE (Schirmer, 1989, $35), has been awarded the Deems Taylor ASCAP award for 1990. Samuel Rhodes '68 is the violist of the Julliard String Quartet and has been on the faculty of the Julliard School since 1969. On Jan. 24, 1991, he is giving a viola recital at Julliard which will include the world premiere of a work by Milton Babbitt '42, Madison medalist and longtime member of the Princeton music dept. faculty.

PHYSICS: Donald Knudsen '65 writes that he is interested in contacting his former fellow graduate students in physics who entered in Sept. 1959. Anyone who can help, please be in touch with Donald at 23 Anderson Hill Rd., Bernardsville, NJ 07924. From Tex., Stephen A. Pulling '72 reports publication of his book, ASPECTS OF QUANTUM FIELD THEORY IN CURVED SPACE-TIME (Cambridge Univ. Press, 1989, $50 & $20).

POUTICS: Last summer, as part of a new program at Rutgers, Benjamin R. Beede '62 taught a course on research methods for minority students (college juniors) heading for graduate school. Currently, Benjamin is editing a specialized encyclopedic volume for Garland Publishing on the Spanish-Cuban/American War of 1898 and subsequent interventions in the Far East and Caribbean into the 1930s.

PSYCHOLOGY: Phillip J. Best '65 left the Univ. of Virginia in 1988 after 20 years to become psychology dept. chair at the Univ. of New Orleans. This fall he left there to assume the same position at Miami Univ. of Ohio.

RELIGION: John E. Booty '60 is now retired from the Univ. of the South to N.H., where he remains active as historiographer of the Episcopal Church, editor of the works of Richard Hooker, visiting prof. at the Episcopal Divinity School 1990-91 and the General Theological Seminary in 1992, preaching, leading retreats, keynoting, and more!

GS CHRISTOPHER KRAHE *86
31183 Lakemont Dr.
San Ramon, CA 94583
76-*90

ASTROPHYSICAL SCIENCES: From Ill. comes the happy news that Donna and Bradley J. Micklich *84 had their first child, Laura Christine, on Nov. 11, 1990. Brad is currently working in the Applied Accelerator program at Argonne Natl. Laboratory.

ELECTRICAL ENGINEERING: Robert Kender *86 writes that he is currently an intermediate consultant in the area of pensions for William M. Mercer, an employee benefits consulting firm in N.Y. Bruce Broder *90 is working on various signal processing projects at Analytic Systems Corporation in Reading, Mass.

CHEMISTRY: Rick Jagdmann *81 was recently appointed senior research associate in the organic chemistry department at Burroughs Wellcome Co, Research Triangle Park, N.C. Rick has been with Burroughs Wellcome since early 1990.

HISTORY: Douglas M. Arnold *76 writes that since Mar. 1990 he has been program officer for the editions category in the Division of Research Programs, Natl. Endowment for the Humanities.

PHYSICS: Todd Fansler *78 is continuing his work on laser diagnostics for turbulent flow and combustion at General Motors Research Labs in Mich. He also was appointed assoc. editor of the journal Applied Optics in 1989 and received the Colwell Award from the Society of Automotive Engineers in 1990. In further news of physicists from Ill., Sadri Hassani *80 recently had his book FOUNDATIONS OF MATHEMATICAL PHYSICS published by Allyn and Bacon. Sadri is currently in the physics dept. at Illinois State Univ.

ROMANCE LANGUAGES AND LITERATURES: We are pleased to hear that Julia V. Douthwaite *90, has had her book manuscript, tentatively titled WRITING THE OTHER AS WOMAN: EXOTIC HEROINES AND LITERARY STRATEGIES IN THE EARLY FRENCH NOVEL, 1670-1786, accepted for publication by the Univ. of Penn. Press. She recently received a Released Time Award from the humanities program at Ariz. State Univ., where she is an asst. prof. of French. With this award she plans to spend the spring 1991 semester completing the final revisions to her book.

SOCIOLOGY: Rosanne Martorella *89 recently had her book CORPORATE ART published by the Rutgers Univ. Press. This text delves into the interesting question of what corporations buy for art and why they buy it. We hear that since 1987 William G. Lebrman *89 has been an asst. prof. in the department of management at Virginia Polytechnic Inst. and State Univ.

WOODROW WILSON SCHOOL: Congratulations are certainly in order for N.Y. TIMES reporter Sberyl WuDunn *88, who shared a 1990 Pulitzer Prize in Journalism and the Arts with her husband Nicholas D. Kristof (also of the N.Y. TIMES) for their "knowledgable" coverage of the democracy movement in China and its subsequent suppression in spring 1989. The pair were cited for a series of articles chronicling the tragedy, many of which were written under perilous circumstances after Chinese troops attacked demonstrators near Tianenmen Square. They are also the first husband-and-wife team to win simultaneous Pulitzer Prizes in journalism.

We have a memorial in this issue.

Memorials

W. Roberts Kruse '12

THE REV. W. ROBERTS KRUSE DIED at the Presbyterian Home in West Philadelphia at 100 years of age. He was born Mar. 8, 1890, at Elwyn, Penn.

After graduation from Princeton in 1912, he continued studies at the Princeton Theological Seminary, receiving his degree in 1915. At the start of his career he was a minister in churches in Cincinnati and later in Columbus, Oh. He had a brief broadening experience in the Girard Trust Bank in Philadelphia and then went into executive and clerical work at the Elwyn Training School in Media until his retirement in 1963.

Mr. Kruse was the widower of Esther Leek, who died in 1984. He is survived by his sons, David and Donald.

His ministry was never confined to a particular church but to the experiences which he encountered in life. He is the second member of the Class of 1912 to have the distinction of reaching 100 years of age.

The Class of 1912

Lamartine Varnedoe Lamar '18

"SHORTY" LAMAR DIED June 22, 1990, at his home in New Orleans. He was born Mar. 28, 1896, in Valdosta, Ga., and spent his youth in Pensacola, Fla. He graduated from St. Paul's School in Concord, N.H.

He left Princeton in his junior year to become one of the early naval aviators. After the war he returned and graduated in 1919. He became an investment banker with the N.Y. firm of Harris, Forbes and Co. and moved to New Orleans to manage their office there. Eventually he co-founded his own firm, Lamar, Kingston and Labouisse, in Crescent City.

At the outbreak of WWII, Shorty got back into Naval aviation and served on Guadalcanal in the South Pacific. At his death at age 94 he was the second-oldest living naval aviator in the United States. He was married to Stephanie Levert and is survived by one son, Albert '54, four grandchildren, and ten great-grandchildren. Shorty had an amazing capacity for making lifelong friendships, and he was one of the most beloved members of our Class. We salute that grand gentleman!

The Class of 1918

Theodore B. Bird '26

TED BIRD of the Scranton area, Penn., died Aug. 22, 1990, at age 86. In college Ted was a member of Elm Club. Following graduation he entered the insurance field and was active in his own agency in Scranton during most of his life. A loyal Princetonian, Ted was a former president of the Princeton Alumni Assn. of Northeast Penn.

Ted had numerous interests, including the Elm Park United Methodist Church, of which he was a member for more than 75 years. He was an avid stamp collector and also left an interesting collection of jazz records, many of ancient vintage.

Ted and the former Helen J. Scudder were married in Oct. 1929. Their son, Capt. Charles S. Bird, U.S.N., died in 1987. Ted is survived by Helen, three grandchildren, and two great-grandchildren, to whom we extend our deep sympathy.

The Class of 1926

Carl F. Fayen '27

CARL DIED Sept. 29, 1990, in retirement at New Canaan, Conn. There he read, walked, golfed, played tennis, and enjoyed the senior men's club. He became a confirmed New Englander by joining the local Congregational church. He had an unusually varied career as a manufacturer, manufacturer's representative, broker, engineer, and inventor, the holder of several patents. And along with all his active business interests, he was a veteran traveler in the U.S.A., the West Indies, Europe, Canada, and elsewhere.

Most of all, Carl enjoyed being a gentleman farmer and cattle rancher at his "Utopia Farms," 600 acres at Oatlands, near Leesburg, Va. Carl evidently found solace there after the deaths of wives Alice Parsons Fayen (1936) and Nancy Purchase Gilpin Fayen (1953).

When asked, for a Class book, about his hobbies, Carl replied "My family"—especially his sons, Carl Frederick Jr. ("Rick") and Frederick George Herman Fayen, and a stepdaughter, Nancy Gilpin Robertson. To them and their families the Class extends greetings and sympathy.

The Class of 1927

Harry Crockett Grumpelt '28

HARRY GRUMPELT died June 25, 1990, at his home in Salisbury, Conn. After graduating from Englewood (N.J.) High School, he majored in English at Princeton, and was a high jumper on the track team.

Harry followed his father in the accounting business. He obtained his certificate in accounting in 1938, and worked for many years with the accounting firm of Arthur Young & Co., later known as Ernst and Young. A managing partner of that firm said, "Harry Grumpelt was considered as one of the most brilliant accountants of his day." Harry had acquired the Cedar Ridge Farm in Salisbury in 1963, and he retired there in 1965. He loved the outdoors and wanted to do something productive, so he raised Christmas trees and continued to work until shortly before his death.

Harry belonged to the Bankers Club of N.Y., and attended the Episcopal Church.

Harry was married to Muriel ("Billie") Whelan in 1933. There are three daughters, Shirley Schindler, Laura Cann, and Constance (Susan) Deeks, and seven grandchildren. After this marriage ended in divorce, Harry was married to Ann Zitzelberger in 1958. His classmates remember Harry from college days as a companionable friend, and the sympathy of the Class is extended to Ann, their daughters, and their families.

The Class of 1928

Abraham Merkle Beitler II '30

MERK DIED as the result of his second heart attack July 10, 1990. The earlier attack in Mar., although serious, did not slow him down. He and his wife, Helen Morris Halsey, whom he married in May of 1943, continued their weekly Sunday trip to the Black Angus Antique Market. Helen liked to work along with Merk, and states, "In 47 years of marriage I never knew a dull moment."

Merk was born in Philadelphia. He attended the Hav-erford School, and at Princeton was active in 150-lb. crew, single sculling, BRIC-A-BRAC, NASSAU HERALD, and Colonial Club. After Princeton, Merk went into advertising, and soon had his own agency. During the war he served 46 months in the Navy, a third of the time on the U.S.S. SOUTH DAKOTA in the Pacific, rising to rank of Lt. commander.

The Beitlers had no children. Merk's survivors are his widow, Helen; two sisters: Barbara, Mrs. Harcourt N. Trimble, and Eleanor, Mrs. Nathan D. Cortright. To them we extend our sincere sympathy in the loss of this interesting man.

The Class of 1930

William Louis Johnston '30

BILL DIED July 21, 1990, at the Heritage Convalescent Center in Atlanta, Ga., after an extended illness.

Bill prepared at Columbus Academy, Oh. At Princeton he played basketball, worked for several publications and was manager of Terrace Club.

In 1930-31 Bill spent a year promoting the N.Y. TIMES at prep schools and colleges. Later Bill spent a year with the War Production Board in the section on metals and critical materials. Bill's principal career was in manufacturers' representation and for thirty-some years he was president and owner of the Wm. L. Johnston Co., dealing mostly in plastics.

In 1943 Bill married Marianne Fogg. She survives, as do two nieces and seven nephews. We extend our sympathy in their loss.

The Class of 1930

Robert Stevens Forman '39

BOB FORMAN, a distinguished Long Island lawyer and public servant, died of cancer July 25, 1990, in Sands Point, N.Y., where he had lived for over 60 years.

Entering Princeton from St. Paul's School, Garden City, he played golf and basketball in college and was a member of Cloister Inn. He majored in classics, graduating with honors. He received his L.L.B. at Columbia in 1942, then served four years in the Army Corps of Engineers. He retired from the Reserve in 1979. After WWII he started his own law firm and continued practicing for the rest of his life. "I intended to teach," he once wrote, "became a lawyer instead, and have not regretted it." Bob was dedicated to his community, serving numerous civic, political, educational and health-care organizations on the Long Island he loved.

His first wife, the former Mary Klingsmith, died in 1974. He later married the former Marcia Willis. She survives him, as do his four sons: Robert Jr., Michael, Guy '77, and Christopher; two step-daughters, Patricia and Cynthia Willis; his sister, Kathryn; brother, Alexander; and five grandchildren. To all of them we send our deepest sympathy in their loss.

The Class of 1939

John Wise Moffat '39

AFTER A LONG struggle with Parkinson's disease, Moff died Aug. 2, 1990, at his home in Delray Beach. He had moved there in 1975, when he retired from Babcock and Wilcox Refractories as district sales manager. He had also served four years with the U.S.N.R. in the Pacific in WWII and was discharged as a lieutenant in the Navy.

Moff's lingering illness prevented him from being with us on his 50th, which he had hoped to be able to do. But in our 50th Yearbook he recalled how much he had enjoyed our 30th which happened to coincide with the Princeton graduation of his son Duncan '69.

Moff married Anne Duncan in 1941 and they had five children: Elizabeth Anne, John W. III, S. Duncan '69, J. Gary '78, and Martin W.; and ten grandchildren. To Anne and all their family we offer our sincere sympathy and our continuing friendship.

The Class of 1939

Taliaferro Anderson '41

NEITHER PRINCETON nor the Class had known the whereabouts of Taliaferro Anderson for many years. Knowing that he had been in the Woodberry Forest school's Class of 1936, a letter was written which brought back the sad news that he had died May 27, 1978.

"Andy" was born May 20, 1919, in Galveston, Tex. Following Woodberry Forest, he spent a year at Lawrenceville, where he was active in football, wrestling, and track. At Princeton he was a member of Key and Seal, played 150-lb. football, majored in politics, and was commissioned in the R.O.T.C.

Immediately following graduation he went on active duty as a second lieutenant assigned to the 43rd Infantry Division. Serving in the Pacific theater for 37 months, he earned a Silver Star and rose to the rank of captain. Andy's life as a civilian was not resumed until Mar. 1950 when he took up study of the law in Washington, D.C. During the 1960s he lived in Los Angeles.

We extend belated sympathy to his sister, Caroline.

The Class of 1941

Raymond W. Drake Jr. '41

ALTHOUGH WE HAD lost track of Ray in the 1950s, recently we learned of his death June 19, 1970, in Lincoln, Neb. The son of Raymond W. Drake '06, Ray came to Princeton from Newark Academy and Lawrenceville.

Ray left Princeton after sophomore year. He married Gay Klipstein in 1946. Ray's family relates that he was especially proud of his war record, for which he received the Silver Star.

Ray was happily married to Beverly Ward who had four children by a previous marriage. Then they increased the number to five with the birth of Ray III, now a junior at the Univ. of Nebraska. Ray's efforts in the business world were directed towards merchandising and sales. His hobby was raising German Shepherds.

We extend our belated condolences to Ray's widow, Beverly, son Ray III, four step-children, and sister.

The Class of 1941

James Albert Green III '41

PRINCETON LOST one of its most loyal sons when the powerful voice of Big Jim Green was stilled June 9, 1990. Jim's death resulted from the onset of Alzheimer's, combined with diabetes.

Jim inherited the tall, erect frame and handsome features of the late R. M. Green '13, who sent six sons to Princeton: Bob '40, Jim '41, John '42 (deceased), Charles '49, David '51, and Bill '63. Such an array of Princeton progeny was matched only by John Prentice Poe, Class of 1854, who produced the six famous Poe brothers.

Big Jim's buoyant nature attracted us freshman year in Brokaw Pool when he sprinted "the fifty" in 25 seconds flat with nothing on but his watch! He never lost his competitive spirit—53 years later he was winning senior championships in the U.S. and Canada.

Jim was our biggest voice and most piercing whistler. He carried the 1941 banner to lead our Class every year in the P-rade. Weaving, swinging, and dancing down Prospect St., his gyrations would evoke a ripple of exultant roars from the crowd.

Despite his impetuosity and uninhibited lifestyle, Jim managed to work for I.B.M. his entire career, after serving as a naval officer in WWII.

His passing leaves a big gap in the Class, which sends its heartfelt sympathy to his brothers; his sister, Louise Dunham; his children: James IV, Lauren, Nicholas, Matthew, and Beth; and four grandchildren.

The Class of 1941

John Albert Williams '43

WE LOST JOHN, a distinguished physician and open-heart surgery pioneer, to the ravages of cancer Sept. 11, 1990. He was 68. Just five months earlier, Jane, his wife of 45 years, had died in the same New England hospital.

John graduated as a junior, Phi Beta Kappa in chemistry. While on campus, he proved to be a versatile athlete as a member of Dial Lodge, in intramural and inter-club track, wrestling, and cross country.

Harvard Medical School and multiple surgery residencies were interrupted by Navy duty in Newfoundland and Argentina from 1946 to 1948. Later, John taught surgery at Harvard and served as asst. chief of surgery at the Roxbury (Mass.) V.A. Hospital. John devoted his free time to flying, sailing, and golf, which he played to a 13 handicap at the Dedham Golf and Polo Club.

He is survived by four daughters: Jane W. Haynes, Mary-Louise Williams '75, Sarah W. Gingrich, Priscilla W. Bercovici; four granddaughters; and a sister, Mary-Louise Sutherland. To the entire family, we extend our deepest sympathies.

John's three-year roommate, Duke Rehm '42, wrote: "We shall miss Doc, with his dedication to medicine, sensitivity toward humanity, and affection for Princeton."

The Class of 1943

Doug Marquand Dimond Jr. '44

DOUG DIED of a massive heart attack June 25, 1990. He and his wife, Dawn, had returned to the U.S. from Switzerland to attend his 50th reunion at St. Marks and see family and friends. Henry Patterson reported that Doug looked very fit, thoroughly enjoying himself at the reunion. He suffered the deadly seizure shortly thereafter while changing courts during a tennis match! He leaves his charming wife of recent years, Dawn Charmaine Bloss; two daughters, Lavinia M. Glick and Marianna M. Boccardi; and three grandchildren.

Doug roomed as a freshman with Harry Haskell and his sophomore year with Reg Rowe. He saw service as a U.S.N. aviator, lieutenant, j.g., 1942-45. He attended the Wharton School of Business, 1946-48. As a C.P.A. he was a partner with Farquhar & Heimbucher, San Francisco. He moved to Switzerland in the 1960s, serving as general manager of Executive Jet Aviation of Geneva and Basel; from 1977-87 as asst. director, International Air Transport Assn. in Geneva. Upon "retirement," he set up his own office for financial consulting specializing in American taxation for expatriates. To his family and friends we extend our deepest sympathies and our regrets at not seeing more of Doug over the years.

The Class of 1944

Brooks Hall '44

BROOKS, AGE 68, passed away July 7, 1990, at the Baptist Hospital, Oklahoma City, following a brief illness. Our Class and Princeton have lost a loyal, responsive friend. His active involvement with the Princeton Club of Oklahoma City continued right up to the time of his death. A handsome man inside and out, blessed with wisdom, warmth, and humor, he loved his family, church, and country, and the rough and tumble of the oil business.

Brooks majored in geology, graduating with honors in 1943. He played freshman football, rowed on the varsity crew; served on a number of undergraduate committees. Pete Wells and Don Hirschberger were his roommates; Tower his club. "Cowboy" joined the U.S.N. Submarine Service in 1943. At the end of his 3½ years of duty he was a lt. commander. Gaining an M.B.A. at Harvard, he began a successful lifetime career in oil development. He formed the Hall-Jones Oil Corp., later the Brooks Hall Oil Corp. Golf and thoroughbred racing were his long-term hobbies.

He is survived by his widow, Jackie; his brother, Brad; sons Fred, Brooks Jr., and Kirkland; four grandchildren; and two stepsons, Jay and Russell Phillips. To all we extend our sincere sympathies.

The Class of 1944

David Carew Huntington '45

DAVE HUNTINGTON died suddenly of heart failure at his Ann Arbor home Sept. 29, 1990. Professor of art history at the Univ. of Michigan for the past 24 years, Dave had served as chairman of that department for four years. Dave, 67, was born in Scarsdale, N.Y., and prepared for Princeton at the Taft School. Dave's Princeton career was interrupted by service with the Army Air Corps as a bomber pilot in various training commands throughout the U.S. Returning to Princeton, he became president of Charter Club before graduation in 1947. Dave then obtained a master's in art history at Yale in 1953 and a doctorate in 1961. Dave married Gertrude Enders (Swarthmore '47) in 1951 and taught for 11 years at Smith College before moving to the Univ. of Michigan in 1966.

In addition to serving as a fellow of Yale's Natl. Humanities Inst., Dave devoted a lifetime of specialization to the founder of the Hudson River school, the painter Frederic Edwin Church, leading the campaign to save "Olana," the magnificent Church estate at Hudson, N.Y., now a state park.

In addition to his widow, Dave is survived by a daughter, Abigail Mueller; sons Daniel and Caleb; a brother, Thomas '42; two sisters, Alice Allen and Mary Huntington; and four grandchildren; to all of whom the Class expresses its deep sympathy.

The Class of 1945

George Meriman Parks '55

CHIP DIED suddenly while scuba diving off Bermuda this past summer. His death takes a truly unforgettable character from our Class. Exuberance was the hallmark of his personality, and his outgoing, friendly face enlivened any gathering. However, what one saw belied an inner toughness. He set his sights in the academic business world, gaining a master's from Stevens Institute of Technology and doctoral degrees from U.C.-Berkeley. Chip served on the Wharton School faculty for 15 years, later as director of the M.B.A. program, and was dean of the Emory Univ. School of Business. At the time of his death, he was dean of Pace Univ.'s prestigious Lubin School of Business in Manhattan. Chip was the author of over 20 books and papers on industrial engineering and management science. His friends and classmates will miss him. Unique, one of a kind, accomplished professional and bon vivant—Chip Parks was it all.

He is survived by his widow, the former Virginia Schlain; two daughters, Elizabeth and Amanda; two sons, Stephen and Christopher; and a sister, Ann Widmer.

The Class of 1955

Eric Huang Wefald '85

ERIC WEFALD died in a car accident near Bordeaux, France, on Aug. 31, 1989, along with his wife, Mary Mansfield, and his mother-in-law, Margaret Mansfield. Eric obtained an M.A. in philosophy from Princeton in 1985 and was completing a doctorate in artificial intelligence at U.C.-Berkeley at the time of his death. Found among Eric's effects was a partially completed translation of Aeschylus's AGAMEMNON, upon which he had been working. Eric had studied at both St. John's College, Annapolis, and at Cornell Univ. He is survived by his parents, Emile Huang and Harold Ellingson Wefald; his sisters, Verna and Susan; and his brother, Franklin '81. Eric is remembered by many who shared their years at Princeton with him as an individual of rare kindness, intelligence, and principle.

The Graduate School

Inner-City High School Provides Education for Teacher, Too

TO MANY PEOPLE, inner-city public schools are a hyperbolic nightmare of drugs, violence, and teenage pregnancies. As the popular media would lead us to believe, urban classrooms are filled with students unwilling to learn and destined for lives without opportunity.

In the second year after I graduated from Princeton, I taught at Clara Barton High School, an inner-city public school in the Crown Heights section of Brooklyn. Teaching social studies and music to ninth, tenth, and eleventh graders, I dealt with students of all levels of ability, from those needing special education to honors classes. The experience highlighted for me the human side of a slew of depressing statistics and images. It attached faces and names to what I had learned at Princeton in the abstract, and made real for me theories and ideas about poverty, race relations, and education. But most of all, it reminded me that for every problem student we hear about, there are hundreds of others working hard in the face of tremendous social, economic, and educational obstacles.

Using society's standard classifications, my students would have been referred to as blacks and Hispanics. Yet these facile distinctions belie a complex web of individual identities and ethnic relationships. The term "Hispanic" can apply to students from Puerto Rico, the Dominican Republic, or Central America, while "black" can mean students from Guyana, Jamaica, Trinidad, Panama, Haiti, or the United States. The main difference between the American-born black students and the immigrant black students involved their sense of ethnic identity: immigrant black students tended to form tight bonds based on their countries of origin, while native-born black students did not have an equivalent measure of American identity. Unfortunately, there was often a great deal of tension between the different groups, and conflicts were drawn along ethnic lines—Puerto Ricans against Dominicans, for example, or Jamaicans versus Haitians.

In many ways, the students at Clara Barton High were no different from high-school kids anywhere in the country. Yet in addition to struggling with the usual problems of adolescence and school, they had to cope with crime, drugs, violence, poverty, and racial injustice. The best teachers learned to be flexible in dealing with students' problems, although solutions were not easy to come by. What can you say when a student misses class because her baby is sick? What can you do when a student fails to do his homework because he shares a one-bedroom apartment with eight other people and cannot get any space to himself or quiet? How do you help a student to pass when she misses three weeks of school because her brother was shot? How can you reprimand a student for being absent when he lost his bus pass and couldn't afford the subway fare to and from school?

How do you help a student to pass when she misses three weeks of school because her brother was shot?

Good teachers also learned to be flexible when it came to teaching their subjects. Early on, I realized that for the curriculum to be relevant to the students, it had to represent the full ethnic diversity of the United States, a diversity that is left out of most textbooks. Yet diversity does not mean just token references to Martin Luther King, Jr., and George Washington Carver. The students would groan and raise their eyes skyward whenever the same three or four notable black Americans were mentioned. To really teach, you had to bring into the classroom all types of stories and people, from Toni Morrison to Roberto Clemente to Langston Hughes to César Chavez.

Before I began teaching, I imagined that my biggest problem in the classroom would be the differences in race and class between me and my students. Yet the students never harbored the tendency to think of the world in terms of black and white, the facile distinctions so easily embraced by mainstream America. Instead, we respected each others' differences while building on the experiences and attitudes we shared. Although we came from different backgrounds, many of us listened to the same music, watched the same television shows, and felt a common antipathy for the principal and most of the school's administration. One female ninth grader put the matter into perspective when she said, "I'm tired of all this talk about black and white. Look at my shoes. They're black, and I'm not that color. Look at my socks. They're white, and you're not that color. We're all something in between."

There are many ideas about how to improve our educational system, among them giving parents a choice of which schools their children will attend, involving parents and students in the management of schools, and eliminating "tracking," the practice whereby students are separated based on their abilities. Implementing these and other ideas can make a difference, yet it is naive to believe that by themselves such reforms can solve the problems of inner-city schools. The failure of many students in these schools implies not only a failure of the schools but also a social and economic failing of the United States. What is needed is a change in the schools, yet that change will mean nothing unless it is accompanied by a shift in cultural attitudes.

As a nation, we must face the fact that people of color will constitute almost 40 percent of the school-age population by the early twenty-first century. It is fatuous for this country to address the needs of these ethnically diverse students with token gestures—February, the shortest month of the year, is dedicated to black history—while movies and TV are filled with black and Hispanic caricatures and delinquents, politicians evoke racist "Willie Horton" images, and public-school curriculums emphasize the same outdated approaches. If I learned anything from my teaching in Brooklyn, it is that the students in my classes were smart and that they understood all the messages about race and class that our society conveys. If we want to change, we must look beyond the schools and toward the way in which we operate as a country.

—Daniel Porter '88

Daniel Porter recruits public-school teachers to train people at Teach for America's summer training institute.

Universities and Economic Development

The following observations are adapted from an address that I presented recently to the National Academy of Engineering. Copies of the full address are available from my office. — H.T.S.

There has been a good deal of national discussion recently about the impact of universities—or of new science and technology—on economic development, but the discussion most often takes place with little historical context.

For example, very few of the participants in the debate stop to ponder the reasons for emerging American economic leadership during the first half of this century. Was this superior science and technology, a newly revitalized system of higher education (the land grant university and/or the nascent research university), the flood of new immigrants, the development of our natural resources, the work ethic, or what?

Alternatively, consider the ahistorical nature of current discussions that portray the future as uniquely characterized by the emerging importance of technology, the trend toward globalization, and the ever-closer relationship between science and technology and product development. The debate shows little awareness that these trends, however accelerated at the current time, have been part of Western history for a millennium!

As an economist, I have been interested in understanding why some societies grow rich and others do not. Why are some societies able to mobilize themselves to achieve a long period of sustained growth and others are not? Why, for example, beginning in the twelfth century, did a remote corner of the globe—now known as Western Europe—begin to generate greater economic growth than other centers of medieval economic activity? Was superior science and technology the source of this distinction?

There is little doubt that technical progress has been one of the most potent forces in our history and that science and technology will continue to be of vital importance to the health of our society. Indeed, a relatively advanced capacity in science and technology may be a necessary condition for economic leadership. But it is crystal clear that leadership in science is not enough—it is only effective implementation of new scientific and technological ideas that counts. Further, meaningful dividends only accrue to those with a continuing capacity for effective innovation and implementation, since the payoff to a single innovation is usually small. As we head toward the twenty-first century, many social, political, and cultural capacities will be required for economic leadership; the critical issue for us is which of the major elements are currently lacking and what does this portend for the future.

Some have argued that our economic competitiveness requires that university research be transformed in a more market-oriented direction. But it is not obvious to me that such a blurring of the distinction between industry and university-based research is in anyone's interest. What may be required instead is a new set of relationships among university-based researchers, industry-based researchers, and the government. I have often considered whether a variant of the academic health center model—a partnership that protects the independence of each partner—might make certain types of mutually supportive joint ventures more natural and more useful. Although this particular hypothesis needs a lot more careful analysis, it does respond to the American tradition of more open interaction between universities and the communities to which they are responsible.

The history of universities demonstrates quite convincingly that under existing arrangements the odds of a particular university faculty generating commercially profitable research are remote. I readily acknowledge that this record could be changed if universities were to adopt more market-oriented incentives. Such a shift, however, would bring other major changes—changes that would impact both education and research—and these implications have not been given serious attention. It is naive to assume that a major change could take place within university research or that universities could expand their portfolio of responsibilities without affecting the nature and quality of the university's other activities, including its key functions of criticism and education.

Properly understood, the university's potential contribution to national economic leadership is not confined to science and engineering, but encompasses a much broader array of disciplines. In science and engineering, the role of the university is critical, but narrower than often claimed; while in the social sciences and humanities the potential contribution is both more critical and wider than the current debate suggests. Since meaningful change requires a broad spectrum of capabilities, our capacity for economic growth depends as much on our ability to institute critical new social, political, and cultural commitments as on new advances in science. We must begin to focus our attention on the various commitments that have made us what we are, and on an assessment of what transformations of these commitments may be necessary as we strive for economic and/or cultural leadership in the twenty-first century.

There is little doubt that this leadership will require an advanced capacity in science and technology. Further, there is little doubt that if America is to mobilize its scientific capacity effectively, universities will have to be a part of this effort. Among other things they will have to contribute: (a) education and advanced training, (b) quasi-independent scientific agendas, and (c) assistance in continuing to explore the human condition and in helping us address a broad set of historical/cultural/political and value questions that create the continuing social capabilities that are the sine qua non of any position of economic leadership.

In the final analysis, it is a society that is full of hope rather than fear, trust rather than alienation, knowledge rather than ignorance, honesty rather than cynicism, confidence rather than helplessness, that will survive and prosper. It is to these issues that the nation and the universities must address themselves.

Harold T. Shapiro

"As an economist, I have been interested in understanding why some societies grow rich and others do not."

A L U M N I C O M E J O I N U S !

FRIDAY, FEBRUARY 15, 1991

AS A PART OF OUR ALUMNI WEEKEND 1991
CELEBRATION

" THE ENGINEER AND THE GREENHOUSE EFFECT "

FACULTY PANEL:

Jerry D. Mahlman, Director, Geophysical Fluid Dynamics Laboratory James A. Smith, Civil Engineering and Operations Research Robert Socolow, Director, Center for Energy and Environmental Studies, Richard Golden, Associate Dean, School of Engineering & Applied Science - panel facilitator

4:30 pm to 5:30 pm
TAPLIN AUDITORIUM, JADWIN HALL

RECEPTION IMMEDIATELY FOLLOWING

AT FINE TOWER, 5:30 pm TO 6:00 pm

CALL (609) 258-6122 FOR MORE DETAILS

PRINCETON

ALUMNI WEEKLY

FEBRUARY 20, 1991

WPRB AT FIFTY

1492

Columbus: The Next 500 Years On Campus Alumni College June 23-29, 1991

"...on the third of August 1492, a Friday, I left Palos and stood out to sea, half an hour before sunrise."

1992

So began Christopher Columbus' incredible journey across the uncharted oceans to that "line of unimaginable coasts."

The three tiny ships that appeared on the edge of the Americas that autumn brought a fiercely diverse mixture of ideals and traditions, of motives and desires. From these, they created their vision of the New World: "a paradise, fresh, innocent, wild, and empty," a contrast to the teeming, decadent civilizations of the Old World.

In the centuries that followed, the Old World "civilized" the New World, bestowing upon its natives "proper Christian faith, humane values, and decent ways of behaving." Five hundred years later, the New World is a "chaotic jumble" of visions, of myths and realities, of unresolved tensions.

No less ambitious than Columbus, the faculty of our 1991 On Campus Alumni College, June 23-29, will look at America in 1492, today, and in 2492. Our journey begins with such questions as: How much do we still have in common with the Pinta sailors, and how have we become different? Do we, as the conquistadors did, sail for God, gold, and glory? In 2492, will we look less like ourselves and our predecessors, or have we reached our evolutionary zenith? What is the American agenda for the next 500 years, even the next 50? How will we meet challenges to our nation in education, in science and health, in the environment, and in the values we hold in our ever-changing multi-cultural society?

We encourage K-12 educators who play such a vital role in preparing our next generation of citizens, to see this Alumni College as an invaluable opportunity for new ideas and inspiration. In addition to the regular alumni college curriculum, we plan special symposia to address critical issues affecting our schools.

Our popular On Campus College has been remodeled and refurbished to present its own New World. Families who like unique vacations can experience the stimulation and fun of learning together. Tuition: $100; educator's discount, $50. Room and board, $250-$500, depending on preference for campus residential college or Nassau Inn. Children's program (3-14 yrs.), $200 total per child.

2492

Please return to Debra Wharton, the Alumni Council, Box 291, Princeton University, Princeton, New Jersey 08544-0291 (Telephone: 609-258-5854; Fax: 609-258-1281)

Columbus: The Next 500 Years

June 23-29, 1991

Name(s) _____

Address _____

Telephone (day) _____ (evening) _____ Princeton class or affiliation _____

Please reserve places for _____ adults _____ children ☐ Please send additional information

I enclose a check payable to Princeton University for $ _____ ($50 per person deposit).

ALUMNI COLLEGE

"Learning is the enterprise of a lifetime." —Woodrow Wilson, Class of 1879

PRINCETON

ALUMNI WEEKLY

CONTINUING THE ALUMNI PRINCETONIAN, FOUNDED IN 1894

FEATURE

6 WPRB AT FIFTY

Princeton's Student Radio Station Keeps Its Listeners Attuned with Music You Can't Hear on the Radio
by Caroline Moseley

DEPARTMENTS

2 LETTERS

4 PRINCETON NOTEBOOK

*U.S. Supreme Court Refuses to Hear
Tiger Inn Appeal; Last All-Male Club Will Admit Women*

5 ON THE CAMPUS

*Pro or Con on War with Iraq,
Students Have to Take Final Exams*
by Larry Zygmunt '92

10 BOOKS

11 SPORTS

Men's Squash Strives to Overtake Harvard and Yale

16 CLASS NOTES

32 MEMORIALS

On the Cover

Broadcasting around the clock and all year long, radio station WPRB is celebrating its fiftieth anniversary. Graphic by Stacy M. Wszola.

Founded in the fall of 1940 by H. Grant Theis '42, radio station WPRU—forerunner of today's WPRB—piped music and news to campus listeners via the university's wiring system. A few people off the campus could pick it up, too: one Princeton resident complained he received WPRU on his dentures. The "studio" was 411 Pyne Hall, Theis's dormitory room. In our picture, which was probably taken in early 1942, Theis (center) confers with Peter Prouse '42 (right) and an unidentified staffer.

PHOTO COURTESY OF WPRB

J. I. MERRITT '66, Editor

ANDREW C. MYTELKA '85, Managing Editor
NUALA O'CONNOR '89, Associate Editor

STACY M. WSZOLA, Art Director
R. T. HOWELL, Production Manager
LORRAINE DONEKER, Graphic Assistant

NANCY S. MACMILLAN, Business Manager
LOLLY O'BRIEN, Advertising Director

BOARD OF EDITORIAL DIRECTION

EDWARD R. WEIDLEIN '68, Chairman
LISA B. BELKIN GELB '82 • CHRISTOPHER V. CONNELL '71
LONDON Y. JONES '66 • ELLIOTT D. LEE '74 '77
PATRICIA H. MARKS '72 • JOHN A. MCPHEE '53

PUBLICATION BOARD

DOROTHY L. BEDFORD '78, Chairman
ROBERT K. DURKEE '69 • ROBY HARRINGTON III '51
WALTER H. LIPPINCOTT, Jr. '60 • PETER O. PRICE '62
PETER G. SMITH '46 • DANIEL N. WHITE '65

NATIONAL ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVE

ROBERT F. SENNOTT, JR.
Ivy League Magazine Network
254 Fifth Ave., New York, NY 10001 • (212) 684-5603

LOCAL ADVERTISING/PRINCETON EXCHANGE

LOLLY O'BRIEN (609) 258-4886

The Princeton Alumni Weekly is an independent magazine supported by alumni class subscriptions and by paid advertising. Its purpose is to record news of the alumni and at the same time to review without partiality the achievements and problems of the administration, the faculty, and the student body of Princeton University. The views expressed in the Alumni Weekly are those of signed contributors or the editor and do not necessarily represent official positions of the university.

PUBLISHED BY

PRINCETON UNIVERSITY PRESS
41 William St., Princeton, NJ 08540
Telephone (609) 258-4885
TWX 510-685-2306 UNIV PRSS PRIN • Fax (609) 258-6305

ELECTRONIC PAW BBS: (609) 258-3602

Materials can be transmitted to our offices via telecommunications, using the upload facility in the file-transfer section of the Electronic PAW computer bulletin board system. Its protocols are 300/1200/2400 baud, eight data bits, one stop bit, and no parity. It is online 24 hours a day.

PRINCETON ALUMNI WEEKLY (ISSN 0149-9270)

Vol. 91, No. 10, February 20, 1991
Printed by William Byrd Press, Richmond, Va. Annual subscription $19.50 (foreign postage $5 extra); single copies $1.50. All orders must be paid in advance. Copyright © 1991 Princeton University Press. All rights reserved. Reproduction in whole or in part without permission is prohibited. Second-class postage paid at Princeton, N.J., and at additional mailing office.

POSTMASTER: Send address changes to PAW Address Changes, 3175 Princeton Pike, Lawrenceville, NJ 08648.

Digitized by Google

Buddy, Can You Paradigm?

Richard Challener '44's review of Bound to Lead: The Changing Nature of American Power (PAW, December 19) was very thoughtful, but he misses an important point: the author, Joseph S. Nye '58, and his primary target, Paul Kennedy, are asking the wrong questions. It matters not that America's share of global production shrank 10 percent between 1950 and 1970, but that it has held steady ever since. Nor does it matter that the percentage growth of our G.N.P. is still 2 percent . . . or only 2 percent.

While Nye and Kennedy debate esoterica, a national snapshot shows that their discussion about American decline is beside the point. In most business transactions, the natural world is still considered a resource to be exploited or a sump for waste products. Increasing numbers of people are still without homes. A look at our national diet reveals that most of us are still killing ourselves and plundering our environment through a meat-centered diet, while many people (Americans included) go hungry. Our system of public education, central to the long-term success of our democratic republic, is struggling to make itself relevant. Crime and drug use are on the rise. There is little or no movement on many of the issues crucial to human survival in the next millennium.

If America is to enter the third millennium as a viable entity, we need to shift the paradigm with which we view our world and ourselves. This new paradigm will embody radically different views on global economics and growth: in a more just and therefore peaceful world, those who have historically controlled less than their fair share of the world's resources will need more equitable access to those resources, so it logically follows that a wealthy nation like the United States will lose its dominance. This would represent a "decline" as traditionally measured, but growth cannot continue forever: Earth is a closed system, and we humans have taxed it to its limits.

It is not simply that American power will be measured in new terms in the next millennium; the game will be different. As we know it today, power—as defined by military strength, economic might, population, etc.—will be irrelevant. American health will be what matters.

We will need to monitor our nation's health by asking different questions, ones that have qualitative rather than quantitative answers: What are we producing? What contribution do our products make to the world? What resources are we using? How efficiently are we producing? What impact do we have on our planet and on our global neighbors? How well are we providing the basic needs of food, shelter, and love?

From our vantage point within the current paradigm, decline is a tragic occurrence, to be feared and fought much like death. It is easy to believe that we must hang on to what we've got, to save the last cups of grain (or drops of oil) for ourselves. It is not so easy to let go of the old systems that have led us into this situation.

But from within the new paradigm, the picture is different. Justice replaces power, while cooperation supersedes the competitive modus operandi. Sustainability replaces growth as we come to view Earth as the one home for our common humanity. Less is more. "Decline" is merely a maturation process that will leave the United States an equal participant in an egalitarian world system and that will free Americans to become citizens of the world.

So, are we going to the dogs? Yes, but only so long as we join Nye and Kennedy in believing that the patient's vital signs determine the quality of its life. We must prepare to let go, to trust in ourselves, each other, the creative process, the universe; we must embrace the new paradigm. We must ask different questions.

CHRIS PACK '84
Sonoma, Calif.

Predicting Elections

It is tempting to think that the alleged review of our book, The Thirteen Keys to the Presidency, that appeared over the name of the university's registrar, C. Anthony Broh, in the October 24 PAW was the work of an impostor. The reviewer clearly either had not bothered to read the book or had done so incompetently, and it is hard to believe that anyone in Princeton's employ could be capable either of such intellectual dishonesty or of such ignorance.

The distortions and misconceptions are too numerous to correct in this space, but a few examples should give readers of PAW an idea of the deception involved.

The most egregious misrepresentation is that our prediction system, "the thirteen keys to the Presidency," accounts for election results only retrospectively. "Postdiction" is not prediction," the reviewer harrumphs, blithely ignoring the actual record of the keys. To summarize:

In an article entitled "How to Bet in '84," published in the April 1982 issue of The Washingtonian magazine, we reported that, despite the deep recession underway at the time, the keys disclosed "Ronald Reagan's superior prospects" for a second term. That was two and a half years before the election. Six years later, in the spring of 1988—when George Bush trailed Michael Dukakis by double digits in the polls and was widely considered an unelectable wimp—we wrote that Bush was "a shoo-in for the Presidency" ("How to Bet in November," The Washingtonian, May 1988).

Would that we could breed elections like fruit flies, but the simple fact is that the keys have correctly predicted well ahead of time—and without reference to any polls—the outcomes of the only two presidential elections held since their development. (As for "postdiction," no other election model accounts even retrospectively for the winners of every presidential election since 1960; our keys to the Presidency correctly "anticipate" the winners of the popular vote in every election since the Civil War.)

Moreover, with different but similarly derived keys for senatorial elections, we predicted the Democrats' surprise recapture of the Senate in 1986 ("Democrats Take Over the Senate," November 1986) and accurately forecast thirty of the thirty-three winning senators in 1988. And early last fall, when all the talk was of an anti-incumbent tide, we correctly called the tune—and the winners of thirty-two of the thirty-five Senate races—two months before Election Day ("Incumbent Senators Are Sitting Pretty, According to the Keys," October 1990). These results, which represent an accuracy rate of better than 90 percent, are reliable at levels of statistical significance far beyond conventional standards in social science.

Except for the 1990 predictions for the Senate, this information—critical, one would assume, to an evaluation of the prediction system—is discussed at length in the book, yet it is ignored in the review.

Similarly, the assertion that "the authors ignore the sizable body of research on this topic that antedates their own" itself ignores the book's extensive citations, the very first of which alone lists thirteen works by sixteen social scientists. Works by the two authors we are specifically accused of ignoring, V. O. Key, Jr., and Donald E. Stokes '51 '52, are cited within lines of each other on page 428. Compounding his error, the reviewer mischaracterizes the work of both men.

V. O. Key did argue, as we do, that the electorate acts rationally, but he never set out specific indicators of election results. And many of the factors that Key and others have considered to be important—ideology, party loyalty, candidates' positions on issues, and campaign strategy—the keys indicate are of little or no relevance to the outcome of presidential elections.

Dean Stokes, our critic claims, proved that presidential elections are random events—so why bother trying to predict them at all? But what Stokes and other scholars have shown is that conventional political science can't predict election results (we agree); no one has come close to proving that presidential elections are decided by an inherently random mechanism. And the record of our keys to the Presidency clearly demonstrates that they are not.

The theory underlying the keys holds that presidential elections are not contests between competing candidates, parties, or ideologies; they are, instead, essentially referenda on the performance of the incumbent party during the preceding four years. We clearly state and reiterate this thesis throughout the book, but the reviewer never even hints at it.

In attacking our finding that general-election campaigns don't count, Mr. Broh deploys an assortment of unrelated incidents, mostly from primary-election campaigns. The keys, he claims, "are part of the essential contingency of campaigns, and that is precisely the reason they are so often associated with electoral success." But he neglects to mention that the keys clearly anticipate the outcome of the popular voting in every presidential election since 1860—on the basis of events that occurred prior to the start of each general-election campaign. This leads to the obvious, if unconventional, conclusion that, no matter how hard candidates try to improve their prospects, what they do or say on the campaign trail matters little. A party in control of the White House retains or loses power based primarily on how well it has governed, not on how well it campaigns.

This is just one of many surprising, albeit eminently sensible, lessons to be gleaned from The Thirteen Keys to the Presidency—if one is interested and open-minded enough actually to read it. We hope that, Mr. Broh's curious broadside notwithstanding, PAW readers will do so and see for themselves.

KEN DeCELL '72
ALLAN J. LICHTMAN
Washington, D.C.

Anthony Brob responds:

The points of agreement between Ken DeCell '72 and Allan J. Lichtman and me are considerably greater than their letter might suggest. I agree with their major premise, that elections are referenda on the incumbent party's performance. I also agree that virtually all their thirteen "keys" to the Presidency are important factors in voters' Election-Day decisions. Our agreement accounts for probably 95 percent of the text.

But we disagree on two fundamental points. First, the authors pretend that the "keys" to the Presidency are totally independent of campaigns. Having correctly predicted the outcomes of elections, they argue that "election campaigns don't count." This is a little like saying that I bet the Giants would win the Super Bowl, and that because my prediction was correct the first half of the game was unimportant. The DeCell-Lichtman data, in fact, are evidence that campaigns do count, for virtually all the keys closely resemble important elements of presidential campaigns.

Second, rejecting numerous combinations of political factors that potentially predict election outcomes in favor of one combination of factors that successfully postdicts election outcomes violates fundamental procedures of science. Virtually all social scientists understand this point.

In addition, Lichtman and DeCell argue that their method of postdiction was further substantiated by their correct prediction of the results of the 1984 and 1988 elections in advance of those campaigns. Let's look at this accomplishment statistically and with the same advantage of hindsight that the authors had for all the elections through 1980. In Ronald Reagan's landslide victory in 1984, almost any model could have predicted the outcome. That DeCell and Lichtman announced their conclusions before 1984 does not add to their credibility. Predicting George Bush's victory in 1988 was indeed an impressive accomplishment, yet the flip of a coin could have done the same thing half the time. Two correct predictions are not, in themselves, enough evidence to validate a theory. We therefore need more cases to see if the theory stands on the basis of luck or its predictive ability.

The Thirteen Keys to the Presidency has some valuable insight into presidential elections. The authors' historical analysis of so many elections and their description of important factors in presidential campaigns should draw readers to this book.

CELEBRATE WITH 'AMERICA'S FAVORITE UNDERDOGS'

Exclusive Full Color Action Photos of Princeton Tigers 1990 Ivy League Champions

Four 11x14-inch full color photos by award-winning photographer Vince Walsh • Each photo includes full typeset caption describing game action and giving other significant information • Elegantly mounted on white foam core backing, ready for framing

Shown: (1) 1990 Ivy Champs Celebrate and (2) Capt. Kit Mueller '91

Also available: (3) 'We're Number One' - Tiger regulars cheer reserves as 1990 title-clinching moment draws near. (4) Tiger 'D' - Unusual two-photo sequence shows why Tigers lead nation in defense.

Order @ $35.00 per 11x14 color photo ($25.00 without foam core backing). Specify photo title or number. Or order set of all four captioned color photos @ $120.00 per set ($85.00 per set without foam core backing). Prices include taxes and shipping.

Send check or money order to:

Princeton Desktop Publishing, Inc.
30 Mark Twain Drive, Trenton, NJ 08690
609-587-7618

Wrap Yourself Up for a Warm
Winter Night...

With our plush Tiger Throw.

Thick, soft and 'furry.' Machine washable, acrylic and cotton. Blacktones. 60" x 80". Tiger $32.00 plus tax; by Biederlack. ($3.00 shipping and handling)

Mail and phone orders welcome.
Use your H. Gross Charge, Visa, MasterCard or AMEX.

STORE HOURS
Mon-Wed 9:30-6:00
Thurs-Fri 9:30-9:00
Saturday 9:30-6:00
Sunday 12:00-5:00

One Palmer Square
Princeton, NJ 08542
609-924-6088

At the sign of the goose...®

Supreme Court Refuses T.I. Appeal; Last All-Male Club Will Admit Women

TIGER INN LOST its last bid to remain all-male on January 22, when the United States Supreme Court declined to hear the club's appeal of last July's ruling by the New Jersey Supreme Court that T.I. and Ivy Club must admit women. As a result of the court's denial of the appeal, Tiger Inn made plans to include women in its bicker sessions scheduled for the week of February 3.

The court's decision appeared to close the last avenue of appeal for Tiger Inn in the twelve-year-old case that Sally B. Frank '80 brought after T.I., Ivy, and Cottage Club refused to admit her as a member (see chronology in PAW, September 12, 1990). Frank said she was pleased by the outcome but is keeping it in context. "I feel a real sense of relief that is tempered by the fact that people are dying in the Persian Gulf," she told The Daily Princetonian.

In a press release, Tiger Inn asserted that the refusal to review the New Jersey court's ruling reflects the U.S. Supreme Court's crowded docket, not the merits of the club's case. According to Russel H. Beatie, Jr. '59, T.I.'s attorney, the Supreme Court typically accepts only two hundred of the five thousand petitions for review it receives each year. Said Stuart E. Rickerson '71, a member of the century-old club's board of governors, "Tiger Inn and its members have always believed and still believe that we are a strong example of the type of organization entitled to the constitutional right to freedom of association."

Frank, an assistant law professor at Drake University, in Des Moines, Iowa, said that three times since 1974 the U.S. Supreme Court has sanctioned states' broad powers to ban all-male clubs. In recognition of the sweeping nature of the New Jersey court's decision, the National Interfraternity Conference, which represents scores of fraternities across the country, had filed a brief in support of T.I. with the nation's top court. It remains to be seen if fraternities and sororities will now be sued on the same grounds as Princeton's single-sex clubs.

Stockton S. Williams '91, T.I.'s undergraduate president, said that the club will comply fully with the orders of the N.J. Supreme Court and "will consider women and men as equally qualified candidates for admission as members." The mood among the club's undergraduate members, he told the Prince, "is one of disappointment but not bitterness. . . . we want the best women out there, and we're going to make every effort to ensure a fair bicker."

Meanwhile, Ivy Club, which admitted its first women last September, is pursuing a different strategy. Ivy conformed to the state court's ruling but is appealing it in federal district court. Because the U.S. Supreme Court did not rule on the merits of T.I.'s appeal, Ivy's case is still open to a possible review by the high court. The Nassau Club, a private club off Nassau Street to which many alumni belong, opened its doors to women members in November.

Another remaining loose end in Frank's long legal struggle is the compensation—damages and legal fees—due her from Ivy and T.I. This compensation, which must still be negotiated, will not exceed "six figures," Frank told the Prince. She said she expects to donate the proceeds of the settlement to the American Civil Liberties Union.

Student Fees Top $21,000 in 1991-92 Budget

AT THEIR MEETING in January, the university's trustees approved a budget of $450.9 million for fiscal year 1991-92. This budget, the second in a row to be balanced, calls for a 6.7 percent increase in undergraduate fees, the same percentage rise as last year. The cost of tuition, room, and board will total $21,881 next year.

One of the problems in developing this budget was anticipating energy costs at a time of war in the Middle East. In a report to the faculty, Provost Paul Benacerraf '52 '60 said that energy costs could run between $500,000 and $2 million higher than projected, depending on the war's outcome. The university will deal with this contingency by charging $1.5 million against its Energy Reserve Fund, which was set up after the oil embargo of 1973 to cope with abrupt increases in fuel costs. The fund accrues money in years of gentle winter weather and periods of relatively inexpensive energy, such as the oil glut that persisted through much of the 1980s.

In keeping with the economic uncertainties in the nation at large, the budget reflects a cautious approach. At a press conference following the trustees' meeting, President Shapiro said that any academic initiatives will now have to be funded by reallocating existing resources rather than by raising new revenues. The university will continue to fund academic initiatives to which it has already made commitments, including salary increases, library acquisitions, and computing needs. The Princeton Plasma Physics Laboratory, which is included in the university's overall budget but is underwritten entirely by the federal government, will operate in 1991-92 at the same level as the last two years, $94 million.

In the nonacademic part of the budget, the only new expenditure will be for a $44,000 program to provide day care for the children of employees at the low end of the salary scale. One casualty of the lean budget is Dormnet, a project to wire dormitory rooms for cable television and for linking students' computers to the university's mainframe. Although the underground cables for Dormnet have already been laid, the project has been placed on indefinite hold.

Regarding the increase in student fees, Shapiro said that he could "understand parents gulping—I gulped myself." He added: "The costs of quality are high. We have not found a way to sustain the quality of this place without raising costs." The university's budget for financial aid will be increased to cover the higher fees.

Correction

IN THE STORY titled "From Slip to Chip" in our issue of November 21, we did not properly credit two pictures that appeared on page 12. The credit should have read: From K. M. Elisabeth Murray's Caught in the Web of Words. Copyright © 1977 by Yale University Press. □

Pro or Con on War with Iraq, Students Have to Take Final Exams

THE IRONY SEEMED so macabre that it was difficult not to imagine that some malevolent force was playing a sort of twisted, cosmic joke. Tuesday, January 15, 1991, was both the United Nations' deadline for Iraqi troops to quit Kuwait and the birthday of Martin Luther King, Jr. The soon-to-be-realized threat of war stood side by side with memories of King's message of nonviolence, and with that profoundly peaceful man's own death by violence. It was quite a load for Princeton's philosophically inclined—if, that is, they had time for grand thoughts, for the deadline also fell on the same day as a local moment of truth. As if there were not already enough to think about, it was Dean's Date.

As the world watched the Middle East, Princeton students watched the clock, hurrying to meet the university's 5 P.M. deadline for the submission of fall-term written work. The next day, as the allied forces began their air strikes against Iraq, students here began final exams. At about 6:30 P.M., word spread that war had broken out, and immediately students began gathering in front of TVs. Crowds that ordinarily turn out only to view campus fads like Twin Peaks and The Simpsons assembled in thick, unaccustomed silence to wait for details to emerge slowly from the Middle East. The throng reappeared at about 8 P.M. on Thursday, when news arrived that Iraq had attacked Israel. At least for a few days, a campus notorious for its isolation from the "real world" turned its attention outward. Cable News Network gained an uncommon sway over TVs at the clubs, while residents of the colleges, which are not equipped with cable TV, made do with a combination of Dan, Peter, and Tom on the networks.

Students were not content just to observe. A few days before the deadline, the Princeton Student Action Coalition—the new incarnation of Students for Social Responsibility—distributed fliers listing the telephone numbers of the White House Comment Line and the Capitol Hill switchboard. About a hundred students attended a pre-deadline forum sponsored by the antiwar Teach Peace group, the pro-intervention Students for a Lasting Peace, and Hillel. Even the university's lengthy celebration of Martin Luther King Day—an observance moved to January 14 to avoid a conflict with exams—was punctuated by comments on tensions in the Middle East. On Tuesday afternoon, as the deadline neared, about four hundred students, professors, and townspeople attended a peace rally at Firestone Plaza. The outbreak of war prompted more antiwar meetings. About twelve students attended a demonstration in Washington on January 19 that called for an end to the U.S. presence in the Persian Gulf region, and Pat Cox, of the local Coalition for Nuclear Disarmament, said that more than sixty students had signed up for bus transportation to a rally planned for January 26 in Washington.

Despite this flurry of antiwar activity, gauging the true sentiments of Princeton students remains difficult. Antiwar elements, perhaps somewhat subdued by the pressures of final exams, are clearly more vocal, but a sizable group of Princetonians apparently supports the military action. While a banner hanging from Lockhart Hall reads "Peace" and one in Holder Courtyard exhorts "Bring our troops home," a sign outside 1938 Hall says "We support Desert Storm" and one in Butler College reads "Go troops." About ten to fifteen additional American flags now hang around the campus, apparently in response to fliers that urged people to display it in support of "our troops in the Gulf." A "QuickPoll" conducted by The Daily Princetonian on January 13 found that 61 percent of respondents supported Congress's authorization of the use of force and 49 percent supported military action by the end of January, but this poll was based on an extremely small sampling. In a Whig-Clio debate entitled "Crack Iraq," Clio's resolution that "Princeton University students should stand united behind the President" was defeated by a 57-53 vote, but Jeff Trost '92, the society's president, said that the debate dealt more with longstanding issues of free speech versus national unity than with the specifics of Operation Desert Storm.

After the first three or four days of war, however, many students seemed to slip back into their usual end-of-semester concerns. Exams reclaimed the attention of students, and while universities like Berkeley, Harvard, and Yale saw protests involving civil disobedience, academic life at Princeton continued without apparent interruption. A few students requested more time to complete their fall-term work due to concern about the war—some mentioned fears for family members in the Middle East—but West College noted no significant increase in pleas for academic clemency. "I had a very small number of students—I think three—who called me at home immediately with reasonably high anxiety," said Assistant Dean of the College Diane Balestri, who handles Dean's Extensions for juniors. Even the members of Princeton's R.O.T.C. remained unruffled. "Life really hasn't changed at R.O.T.C., except for the realization that you're about to join a serious organization," said Jeff Golden '91, who commands the Tiger Battalion.

Yet no matter how normal things might seem, global events create their little local ironies. The night the assault on Iraq began, the Wildcats, one of Princeton's many singing groups, were finishing a rehearsal in the arch of 1879 Hall when a bicyclist stopped and asked if they knew any songs about peace. The Wildcats decided to try a long-shelved, never-quite-right arrangement of John Lennon's "Imagine." As hopes for peace dissolved, the song came off perfectly.

—Larry Zygmunt '92

Larry Zygmunt, a junior from Arlington Heights, Illinois, is majoring in English.

WPRB at Fifty

*Princeton's
Student Radio Station Keeps
Its Listeners Attuned with Music You Can't Hear on the Radio*

By Caroline Moseley

ONCE UPON A TIME, THERE WAS A little radio station called WPRU. It was established in the fall of 1940 in the Pyne Hall room of H. Grant Theis '42, and you could hear it on the campus via the electrical wiring system in the buildings.

Fifty years later, that station is WPRB, which delivers music, news, features, and—with appropriate fanfare on autumn Saturday afternoons—"the excitement of Princeton Tiger football" to an estimated twenty thousand listeners in a fifty-mile radius of Princeton. With most college stations broadcasting at between a hundred and a thousand watts, WPRB is a seventeen-thousand-watt powerhouse. It claims to have been the first student-operated commercial FM station in the country (1955) and the first to broadcast in stereo (1963).

You can find WPRB at 103.3 on the FM dial around the clock, and, unlike many student-staffed stations, around the year as well. Whenever you tune in, you will hear music you don't hear on other stations, and probably music you have never heard at all. "We are an alternative music station," explains David Mills '91, who last year was WPRB's program director. "We offer unusual variety in music and in artists. We think people should hear different types of music—old and new, popular and obscure. If you listen to your favorites all the time, you don't learn anything. We want to challenge and educate our listeners; we want our listeners to interact with the station."

WPRB's programming is varied enough to satisfy Dead Heads and Mozart Heads, though the E-Z Listenin' crowd may set its dial elsewhere. In addition to regular, longish programs of classical, jazz, and rock music, there are numerous specialty-music shows, each hosted by a knowledgeable student disc jockey. You can hear programs featuring blues, reggae, traditional, oldies, World Beat (African), and hip-hop (rap).

There is "Music on a Silver Platter," offering new releases of classical music on compact disc. There is "Sangeet," featuring classical and popular music of India, Bangladesh, and Pakistan. There is "Musical Odyssey," with traditional and contemporary Greek music. There is "Sunday Matinee," four full hours of opera, and the station's long-running folk show, "Music You Can't Hear on the Radio," hosted by John Weingart '75 (see box, page 8).

Even on the specialty shows, however, generic distinctions are blurred. WPRB bills its rock segments as "free form" to encourage experimental programming. A recent rock show included bluesman Howlin' Wolf's "Morning at Midnight," the New York Philharmonic Orchestra playing Rossini's overture to William Tell, and Sonic Youth, an alternative rock group, performing "Computer Age." Where else but on WPRB would Bob Wills and His Texas Playboys, a country band, spin on the same turntable, in the same hour, as groups called Jane's Addiction, My Dad Is Dead, and Dinosaur Jr.

In fact, it is far easier to say what WPRB doesn't play than what it does: no classic rock, no Top Forty. But almost anything else from any corner of the recording world might find its way onto the air: computer-composed chansons, a piece for twenty porcelain cups filled with water, The Marriage of Figaro—all are received warmly and played respectfully.

And there is always room for innovation. "The station management is totally open to new ideas," says Vanessa King '93, whose "Classics for Kids" airs on Sundays. King chooses music "that is descriptive or that evokes a mood." On a recent musical "trip to Scandinavia," she featured Grieg's "In the Hall of the Mountain King" and Sibelius's Finlandia, creating an imaginary landscape for her listeners. King sees her program as an introduction to classical music for "children of all ages, though I know that sounds corny. But lots of today's parents grew up in the fifties' and sixties' rock-and-roll explosion and aren't that familiar with classical music themselves."

In addition to music, the station broadcasts local and national news, and it recently affiliated with ABC's Direction Network to beef up its news coverage. WPRB also broadcasts all Princeton football and men's basketball games, men's hockey games that don't conflict with basketball coverage, and selected other sporting events. In WPRB's sports reporting, partisanship occasionally overcomes professionalism: a sportscaster in 1989 reported a 31-31 final score as "Princeton's tie over William and Mary."

Among WPRB's features are "Time Out" (sports news and commentary that is heavy on post-mortems of Princeton games) and "Perspectives," which airs interviews with "newsmakers that affect New Jersey." Guests have included President Shapiro and Professor of History Nell Painter.

WPRB is clearly a Princeton University station in other ways. Its rent-free studios are in the basement of Holder Hall, and all its approximately ninety staffers (except Weingart) are university students.

You can tell the broadcasters are young, because their voices betray youth and, sometimes, inexperience at the microphone. They may stumble over the pronunciation of technical or foreign phrases in announcing classical music or reporting news events. They have the typically short cultural memories of undergraduates: their "oldies" are the progressive rock music of a mere ten years ago. One deejay played a B-52's cut "in honor of all the older alumni on campus for the Harvard game." And it is unlikely that programmers over twenty-five would be so self-consciously eclectic.

SO WHAT? WPRB DOES HAVE THE MOST VARIED PROGRAMMING available in central New Jersey. When you turn on your car radio after work, you won't hear the same song you heard that morning. Depending on when you tune in, however, it would be possible to listen to the station without being aware of its Princeton affiliation. Every hour, the station is identified as "WPRB in Princeton"— usually no mention of New Jersey, never any mention of Princeton University. Mills explains: "We don't want to create the impression that we're a university station and other people just happen to listen in. We serve a community of which Princeton University is an important but small part." In fact, he believes, "not very many Princeton students listen to PRB because we are too cutting edge."

WPRB is definitely far more than just a college station. Advertisements and public-service announcements cover WPRB's entire listening area, and the varied programming has an appeal far beyond any campus. "Morning Classical," for example, airs from 6 A.M. to noon, five days a week, and probably attracts older, upscale listeners. Scott Crater '91, the station manager last year, believes that "most of our classical listenership is over thirty-five." Advertisers clearly think so, too, because, he says, "it's easier to sell ads on the classical show."

Many WPRB alumni have gone on to careers in broadcasting, but for most staffers, time in the studio is not professional training. Yet students vie for the opportunity to spend from three to thirty hours a week in WPRB's underground labyrinth, where the sun never shines and where, according to Crater, "your feet get wet every time it rains." Why do they do it? Because, Crater says, "you meet a lot of intelligent, open-minded, and creative people at WPRB. It's fun being able to listen to every new record that comes out, free. It's a great feeling when you play an obscure record and someone calls up and says it's the best thing they've ever heard."

"WPRB plays music that isn't played anywhere else, so we help a lot of new artists get started. There's nothing wrong with making music and making money, too, but popular music today is so corporatized that there's very little room for new artists. We're flooded with records—that's one expense we don't have. We receive about thirty albums a day, and somebody at the station listens to each one. We ignore press kits, we ignore record company hype. We just listen to the record, and if we like it we play it." Crater's criteria? "It's different and it's good."

One group popular with the station deejays is Sonic Youth, whose sound is characterized by chordal dissonance and such electronic effects as distortion and feedback. The sound, says Mills, "keeps you a little on edge"—which is where WPRB likes its listeners to hang out.

While Rebecca Erwin '92 spins a request, Joseph Cho '94 looks through WPRB's tape collection of station I.D.s, public-service messages, and advertisements.

Rap music, with its relentless rhythm, purposefully distorted sounds, and insistent social and political discourse, has a strong presence on WPRB. "You love it or you hate it," observes Crater, "but it is interesting because it takes advantage of new technology—'scratching,' for instance, where you play a record and manipulate the turntable to the beat of the song. Also, rap deals with issues." The station plays rapper L. L. Cool J., whose message of urban black pride "has content," according to Mills, but not M. C. Hammer, because "he's all packaging," and not 2 Live Crew, despite their recent acquittal on obscenity charges, because "they're obscene and they're not very good."

A good deal of what plays on WPRB would not please Tipper Gore, but "community standards" are notoriously difficult to define. And, as Mills

JOHN WEINGART '75 IS THE DIRECTOR OF coastal resources for the New Jersey Department of Environmental Protection. He is responsible for regulating the development of shorelines, riverfronts, flood plains, and wetlands. He is also the host of "Music You Can't Hear on the Radio," a long-running folk-music show that airs on WPRB from 6:30 to 10 P.M. on Sundays. His show is among the station's most popular, and as WPRB's senior deejay, he is probably the only staff member whom colleagues have ever addressed as "Mr." A native of New York City, Weingart says he "was brought up on Pete Seeger, the Weavers, and protest songs. Sometimes I wonder what Pete Seeger would say about some of the permits I approve."

While a graduate student in the Woodrow Wilson School's M.P.A. program, he hosted WPRB's "The Folk Thing" on Sunday evenings. "When I graduated in the spring of 1975," Weingart recalls, "I left the station and had no plans ever to be in New Jersey again. But come November, there I was at the D.E.P. in Trenton. In 1976, when Paul Robeson died, I felt a need to do a show in tribute to him and called up the station. It turned out they had never found anyone to continue the Sunday-evening folk show, and before I knew it I was on the air again."

In 1977, WPRB decided that, because he was no longer a student, he should not be on the staff. The prospect of Weingart's departure from the airwaves caused a tri-state panic among lovers of folk music, and the station received hundreds of letters pleading that he be kept on. Uwe Reinhardt, an economics professor, declared that he could not teach on Mondays if he did not hear John Weingart on Sundays, and urged his students to petition the station. By a special dispensation, Weingart has remained on the staff and on the air.

JOHN WEINGART '75

On the Air with WPRB's Venerable Folk Deejay

This experience, says Weingart, "changed the way I thought about my show. Before that, I knew somebody listened, because a lady called in to say, 'Young man, this is not Nashville, this is Princeton!' But mainly I just played music I liked to hear."

Weingart, whose signature as a broadcaster is thought-provoking medleys that focus on particular themes, says he's unsure "how much to talk about myself and my own ideas on the air." He concentrates on "making a coherent musical presentation. There's a satisfaction, a clarity in that I can enjoy."

Now married and with a five-year-old daughter, he finds the domestic hearth more appealing of a Sunday evening than in his grad-student days. Last summer, Weingart took a sabbatical from WPRB to spend more hours on weekends with his family. "I thought I might feel miserable when I quit for the summer, or miserable when I went back, but both were just fine. I loved returning to the studio this fall. I asked myself, 'Is this a silly way for a grown-up to spend time?,' and I guess I answered, 'No.'" points out, "something that sounds objectionable at noon might not sound objectionable at midnight. We don't play anything we think might be offensive to the majority of our listeners, but we don't have any arbitrary standards. All our deejays play what they want to play."

It is part of the station's commitment to "interactive" radio to honor requests. Listeners can call in twenty-one hours a day with requests and suggestions by dialing 609-258-1033 (easy to remember: 103.3 FM). No calls between 3 and 6 A.M., please. Mills believes that requests "encourage listener participation, and increase the variety on a show." Few commercial stations take requests during so much of the day, but WPRB seems to honor such suggestions, where possible, within about ten minutes. When you phone in, you speak directly to the deejay at the controls. It may take a few rings, but in a world of "Can you hold?," WPRB provides almost instant listener gratification.

To find a requested piece of music, the deejay must leave the control booth and search WPRB's enormous library of LPs, EPs, and CDs, which are arranged by composer for classical music and by performer for other musical genres. "I just put on a long song and move fast," says Darwin Neher, a graduate student who hosts "What the Folk—WPRB's Other Folk Show."

All this interactivity makes for busy moments in the control booth, where the broadcaster plans the program, announces the material, plays the records and CDs, logs selections on the daily playlist maintained so that deejays do not repeat each other, answers the telephone while the music is airing, chats with listeners, makes and logs public-service announcements, and acts as engineer. No problem, according to Neher: "Occasionally you do things you wish you hadn't done with the knobs, but basically it's not that different from operating a stereo."

All new staffers receive training from station veterans in the use of the equipment, including the F.C.C.-mandated Emergency Broadcast System. Among WPRB's equipment at present are two turntables, two CD players, three microphones, and four "cart machines," which play the tape loops of public-service announcements and advertisements.

CDs notwithstanding, disc jockeys still jockey vinyl discs most of the time, says Crater, and that's where the fun is. "With vinyl, you put your hands on the record, you lay it on a turntable, you put on headphones and browse through it for a good cut while your other record is playing. You can actually do something physical and mental with a record. CDs are boring to play; you just slide them in, press, and go."

John Shyer '78 is the president of Princeton Broadcasting Service, Inc., which holds the station's F.C.C. license. He claims that WPRB is the only student organization authorized and regulated by the federal government. The F.C.C.'s principal interest, explains Shyer, is technical: "They want to make sure the station is broadcasting on the proper frequency at the assigned power level, and not causing interference with other broadcasters. They also want programming to meet community standards, but they have never interfered in any way."

Shyer's board and the station management meet four times a year to review staffing and programming, but especially to monitor the station's financial status. According to Shyer, the station is "very healthy. It is entirely supported by advertising, with advertisers located from New York City to Philadelphia." WPRB's only ancillary source of funds is the sale of T-shirts ("in psychedelic white or classic black").

Statistical and demographic information on WPRB's listeners is harder to come by. Arbitron ratings, which compare the audiences of stations in a region, cost money, and WPRB has chosen not to buy the service. WPRB assesses its "listenership" impressionistically, mainly on the basis of who calls in to make requests or suggestions and where they're calling from. So long as enough people listen to maintain the interest of advertisers, numbers don't matter. Which isn't to say that WPRB doesn't want more listeners. Scheduled for the near future is an upgrade, to thirty thousand watts, that will dramatically increase the station's listening area.

To celebrate WPRB's fiftieth anniversary, Adam Rosen '91 has compiled a history of the station that incorporates the recollections of such early broadcasters as Theis and Jim Robinson '43. On December 15, WPRB aired "music of all genres from the past fifty years" and "moments from the station's history." A festive gathering of WPRB alumni is planned for Reunions 1991.

In fifty years of student broadcasting, there have been more than a few changes, technological and aesthetic. Guy Lombardo and Tommy Dorsey may have yielded the airwaves to Dinosaur Jr. and Sonic Youth, but WPRB continues to be a strong Princetonian voice, one heard farther and farther from Nassau Hall.

Stay tuned.

But If He Had Only Stuck to Math . . .

IN THE COMPANY OF WRITERS: A LIFE IN PUBLISHING

Charles Scribner, Jr. '43 • Scribner's, $22.50

At first glance, the memoir of a publisher might seem like the sort of gossip potboiler that, strewing scandal left and right, will quickly journey from the checkout counter to the remainder bin. In the Company of Writers is not one of those. Charles Scribner, Jr. '43, whose family has produced a raft of alumni and given Princeton a lot of money, has written a frank, witty, vivacious account of his life and career, which stretched from the family publishing company's golden age (F. Scott Fitzgerald '17, Ernest Hemingway, et al.) to the merger-mad world of communications conglomerates of the 1980s. Here is an excerpt from the book.

WHEN I ARRIVED at Princeton in the fall of 1939, I was impressed by the maturity of the life and the education. It was like passing out of one room into a much wider one—into the real life of the mind. It was wonderful. Besides Latin and Greek, I had a good grounding in English literature, and was able to take nothing but sophomore courses—with satisfaction and success. I decided to major in classics.

At that time, the university was enjoying something of a humanistic revival. The undergraduate curriculum provided programs and courses designed to give a broader view of the arts. Whitney Oates '25 '31 and Eugene O'Neill, Jr., had written a textbook called Greek Drama in Translation, and it formed the basis of Oates's course called "Classics in Translation," which I found a very good introduction.

Whitney Oates was a committed humanist. With Theodore Meyer Greene, Francis Godolphin '24 '29, and Asher Hines, he was a founder of the Divisional Program in the Humanities. Those were all big names at Princeton, and they drew me into their orbit. It was an enormous feast of the intellect to be there.

My only disappointment was that I really had wanted to go into mathematics, deeply if possible, and no place could have given me better mathematics than Princeton. But I went to an introductory session, and the instructor spent the entire time explaining how the course was going to be graded, what weight would be attached to the different parts of the tests, and so forth. It was so off-putting that I dropped math once and for all and went into a creative-writing course taught by Allen Tate.

Nothing came of my writing class, because I obviously wasn't meant to be a creative writer. I have written a lot, and have had a great deal of fun; I have tried to write with style, but it is clear that if I had had a more decided writing ability, I would have pursued it.

I did not greatly like my class with Allen Tate. It was the heyday of the New Criticism, which sought to downplay the older literature in favor of the new, exemplified by Ezra Pound, T. S. Eliot, and their school, and Tate was their advocate. He was always scoring off on Shelley and Byron and Browning and giving Edmund Wilson '16 his share of hard knocks; if only the Agrarians (as the new school was also known) had reason and virtue on their side.

This doctrine gave me no pleasure or profit. I came to feel that one of the blessings of learning literature through the classics was that it protected me from the New Criticism and its aesthetics. Its adherents defined literature so narrowly that only a few writers were allowed in the gate. By contrast, reading Horace and Vergil and the Greek tragedians with Princeton's outstanding classicists gave me a broader conception of literature, and this in turn was a liberating experience.

In the rest of what went on at Princeton, I was not involved. Far Hills was less than an hour away, and I went home to my family every weekend. Consequently, I missed all the real college life. My Princeton years were exclusively academic. I loved the place for its learning and its faith in the life of the mind. I am not without some sentimental memories, but acquiring knowledge is what meant most to me.

During my Princeton years, Reinhold Niebuhr was a Scribner author, just then writing his Nature and Destiny of Man. Being myself interested in the history of ideas, I had bought a copy of Arthur Lovejoy's Documentary History of Primitivism and Related Ideas in Antiquity, and I gave it to Niebuhr as possibly useful in the writing of his book. He was grateful and said to me, "This book is going to be the most wonderful grist for my mill." I must say that Niebuhr had a tremendous influence on me. I was asked once to name the five books that had meant the most to me in my life, and one of the five was Niebuhr's Moral Man and Immoral Society.

Because of the nature of my studies, I had an opportunity—in fact an obligation—to write a senior thesis of greater length than usual. It was on Stoicism and Epicureanism as factors in seventeenth- and eighteenth-century literature and philosophy, and it was almost a small book. I researched it in the library, and although I was supposed to be guided from start to finish, I preferred to be a free lance, and put the thing together in my own way; my sponsoring professors allowed it.

Phi Beta Kappa meant a lot to me when I got it—in my junior year. This and other honors were signs that I had had a good career at Princeton. What I most appreciate is that, without Princeton, my subsequent career would not have been possible. Looking back on those undergraduate years, I see them as a golden period, a period in which I fell in love with learning. These words have a pompous air, no doubt, but being true and important, they had better be set down.

Books Received

EQUALITY TRANSFORMED: A QUARTER-CENTURY OF AFFIRMATIVE ACTION

Herman Belz '59

Transaction Publishers

$32.95 cloth, $19.95 paper

FROM ISOLATION TO WAR, 1931-1941
(second edition)

Justus D. Doenecke '66 and John E. Wilz

Harlan Davidson, 3110 N. Arlington Hgts. Rd.,
Arlington Heights, IL 60004-1592. $9.95 paper

COOKING CRAYFISH (cookbook)

Nelson Handler, M.D. '66, ed.

Pyramid Farms Crayfish, 4340 Egypt Rd.,
Cambridge, MD 21613. $7.95 plastic-comb binder (profits go to Johns Hopkins Hospital)

RECLAIMING THE SACRED: LAY RELIGION AND POPULAR POLITICS IN REVOLUTIONARY FRANCE

Suzanne Desan '79

Cornell University Press, $33.50

THE NATION, 1865-1990: SELECTIONS
FROM THE INDEPENDENT MAGAZINE OF POLITICS AND CULTURE

Katrina vanden Heuvel '81

Thunder's Mouth Press, 54 Greene St.,
New York, NY 10013. $21.95

As Usual, Nothing Stands Between Men's Squash and Title but Harvard and Yale

SITTING IN HIS OFFICE, Coach Bob Callahan '77 beams with pride as he reads aloud a letter he recently received from an alumnus in Atlanta. The alum had witnessed Princeton's performance at the United States Squash Racquets Association tournament, an exhibition of five-man teams, and wrote that he was impressed by the Tigers' sportsmanship, discipline, and talent. The team had played well in the tournament, advancing to the semifinals before succumbing to a powerful squad from Harvard, 3-2. Like all coaches, Callahan understands that winning is the bottom line, but he is equally concerned that his players appreciate the traditions of Princeton squash. "There are a lot of alumni who care about the program, and I want the guys to be aware of that," he says.

The men's squash team has traditionally been among the top two or three programs in the country, and this year's edition is no different. The Tigers opened their season by defeating a perennially tough squad from Western Ontario, 8-1. In their next match, they crushed Cornell, 9-0, in Ithaca—a contest that was one of the first since the Big Red returned to varsity play in squash. Princeton also triumphed easily over Trinity, Vassar, and Amherst by 9-0 scores. Although their early-season opponents did not really test the Tigers, these blowouts testified to the strength and depth of the team.

Four experienced and evenly matched upperclassmen occupy the top slots in Callahan's lineup. Co-captain Chris Stevens '91, a native of Toronto, is Princeton's number one for the second straight year. At the end of last season, Stevens was ranked as the nation's best collegiate player and was named to the all-Ivy team. According to Callahan, "Chris has had to battle partially torn ligaments in his ankle and the high expectations that were placed on him. But he looks strong for the big matches" later this season. Bob White '91, the other co-captain and another all-Ivy performer, plays at number two for Princeton. This native of Haverford, Pennsylvania, is best when he "gets aggressive and takes over the court," says Callahan. Alex Marx '92, who's also from Haverford, has jumped up to the third spot since last year, when he played at number five. "Alex has always had tremendous talent; this year he's learned to play with his head and with more confidence," the coach says. Senior Nick Guethe provides consistency and savvy from the number-four spot. Callahan describes this native of Brooklyn as a "tough competitor who has become more focused and more mature every year."

Co-captains Chris Stevens '91 (left) and Bob White '91 (right) constitute Princeton's one-two punch. Last year, both won all-Ivy honors and Stevens was ranked as the nation's top collegiate player.

Not surprisingly, strong recruiting has long been the lifeblood of Callahan's program, but the competition to attract the top players is getting tougher. "With Brown and Cornell returning to varsity action, and other programs trying to upgrade themselves, the talent is getting spread around," says Callahan. But Princeton squash has two distinct advantages over its rivals: only Harvard has enjoyed greater success over the years, and Callahan's coaching credentials are second to none. He has produced nine winning records in his nine seasons at the helm of the Tiger program—he's the Ivy League's senior coach—and he currently serves as the director of the U.S.S.R.A.'s junior development program, which fosters young squash players nationwide.

This season, Callahan bolstered his program by bringing in three outstanding recruits. Alec Decker '94, the top-ranked junior player in the nation last year, is his blue-chip recruit. Decker has great speed on the court, and according to Callahan, he performs well "when he dictates play rather than just responding to his opponent." Along with two other highly ranked junior players, Eddie Fishman '94 and Bill Taylor '94, Decker adds depth to this year's lineup; the trio will form the nucleus of the team in years to come.

The squash season is long and arduous, beginning with informal workouts in October and not ending until the first week of March. The players must contend with fall-term examinations, which occur in the middle of the season, as well as a schedule that provides for a month-long hiatus in play in December. Callahan must devise ways of keeping

RESERVE NOW!
CLASS REUNIONS
 June 6th – 9th

SVC ADMINISTRATOR

The Student Volunteers Council (SVC) seeks an Administrator to support SVC's student directors and volunteers.

Responsibilities include program planning, community relations, volunteer training and fund-raising. Candidates should have community service experience and an interest in working closely with students.

This is an exciting opportunity for a young alumnus/a in college administration. Send resume to: D. Johnson, Human Resources, Clio Hall, Princeton University, Princeton, NJ 08544. Deadline: March 1, 1991.

Princeton University

Equal Opportunity/Affirmative Action Employer

his team focused, especially during the exams, in January. "I would prefer that we had exams before Christmas, but it's an issue that we have to deal with. We just try to maintain a level of fitness and rhythm." Over the last several seasons, the Tigers have spent the Christmas break in such places as Toronto and San Francisco to prepare for the second half of the season. These trips, says the coach, afford the players a chance to practice in a different atmosphere and to meet supportive alumni. "They're really wonderful trips. We are very thankful for the alumni who attend the banquets and put us up at their houses."

Success for the Tigers this season will be defined by their performance in three crucial matches in February. Over the years, Princeton and Harvard have won or shared nearly every Ivy League crown and Intercollegiate Squash Association team championship; in league play, they have not won or shared the title only four times since 1956, and the winner of three of those four championships was Yale. The Crimson appear as formidable as ever this year, and Callahan considers Princeton to be the slight underdog in their match. And after many years of mediocrity, Yale has risen to prominence in the last three. The Bulldogs lost several standout players to graduation from last year's championship team, but they still look tough, as do the raucous fans who populate the gallery in New Haven. In an exhibition earlier this season, Princeton defeated Yale in New Haven. "It was the first time in four years that we had beaten Yale at their place," says White. "That gives us a lot of confidence for when we play them later." Finally, the Tigers hope that the advantages of depth will give them an edge in the I.S.A. Championships, to be held late in the month.

—Scott Donahue '92

Scott Donahue, a politics major from Haverford, Pennsylvania, is a sports-writer for The Daily Princetonian.

SCOREBOARD

MEN'S BASKETBALL
 (11-2 overall; 2-0 Ivy)
 Princeton 82,
 Elizabethtown 45

WOMEN'S BASKETBALL
 (9-5 overall; 1-1 Ivy)
 Princeton 73, Rider 58

WOMEN'S HOCKEY
 (3-5-1 overall; 2-2 Ivy)
 Cornell 4, Princeton 3

MEN'S SWIMMING
 (5-0 overall; 5-0 E.I.S.L.)
 Princeton 135,
 Dartmouth 105

WOMEN'S SWIMMING
 (6-1 overall; 6-0 Ivy)
 Princeton 191,
 Dartmouth 100

MEN'S SQUASH
 (6-0 overall; 1-0 Ivy)
 Princeton 7, Navy 2

WOMEN'S SQUASH
 (2-0 overall; 1-0 Ivy)
 Princeton 8, Yale 1

Princeton Alumni Weekly

Reaching 56,000
 upscale, sophisticated
 readers with every issue.

Published more frequently
 than any other alumni magazine in the world.

Why advertise with anyone else?

For details please contact:
 Ms. Lolly O'Brien/Advertising Director
PRINCETON ALUMNI WEEKLY
 41 William Street
 Princeton, New Jersey
 08540
 (609) 258-4886

FOR RENT

ENJOY THE LUXURY of your own villa, private pool overlooking the Caribbean, and staff of five to serve you. 3 BRs, 3 baths; exquisitely furnished; on one acre with terraced gardens in most exclusive residential neighborhood in Ocho Rios, Jamaica. Everyone should try this kind of living at least once. From $175/day, winter; $125/day, summer; $100/day, Sept.-Oct. B. Kaspers '70 (owner), 1165 Churchill Downs Rd., Atlanta, GA 30319; 404-255-0696.

ST. JOHN, USVI: 2 BR waterfront beachhouse amid tropical gardens. Spectacular view, excellent snorkeling. From $175/day, winter; $125/day, summer; $100/day, Sept.-Oct. B. Kaspers '70. 1165 Churchill Downs, Atlanta, GA 30319; 404-255-0696.

PARIS: Elegant small studio for two just off the Seine in the 6th. 2 min. walk to the Louvre, Notre Dame. 609-924-4332.

BARBADOS: Home of the late John L. Roe Jr. '34. West Coast on bluff overlooking Caribbean. Three air-conditioned BRs, cook, maid, gardener, laundry, swimming pool. 215-527-0585.

PARIS: Rue de la Paix, Elegant apartment. Suitable for 2 or 3. 7-days preferred. $200/night. 212-838-1731.

STOCKING ISLAND, Exuma, Bahamas: Octagonal wood and glass home, spectacular 360-degree sea view. All modern conveniences. $1000 weekly for two with boat. Sam Burns '46, 407-231-2822. Brochure avail.

SANIBEL ISLAND, FLA.: Delightful beachfront condominium. Magnificent gulf view. Spacious 2 BR, 2 baths, loft. Pool. Tennis. Will Smith '63. 908-842-2096.

BRITISH VIRGIN ISLANDS (Virgin Gorda): Elegant new villa directly on own private snorkeling beach. Spectacular, panoramic view of North Sound including Bitter-End (dive school, etc.) Perfect weather year round. 3 BR, 2 bath, magnificent LR, wrap-around deck, full mod. kit, microwave, dishwasher, marina, fishing, pool, tennis. (Restaurant, provisioning, staff, car, available extra.) $2,500/wk. 609-921-7872.

EXCLUSIVE LUXURY 4 BR, 4 bath villa at private Tryall Club in Montego, Jamaica. Private pool, staff of four, gorgeous grounds overlook Caribbean and championship golf course. Also private tennis, scuba, beach and club house. Available at 2 or 3 BR rate off-season. 203-254-0228 (h) or Carol Shaw at 203-929-6391.

LONDON LUXURY FLATS: In Knightsbridge, Mayfair, Chelsea, Kensington, Whitehall Court. One, two, three bedrooms. Furnished and decorated by owners. Rented by day, seven day minimum; reduced rates when exceeding six months. Call during office hours: 518-686-7841.

KAUAI, HAWAII: 4 BR, NaPali Coast beach house. $650-850/wk. 703-560-7900.

ST. MAARTEN: Elegant villa on blue Caribbean. Breathtaking views. Daily maid. All amenities. Sleeps 2-6. 201-271-0297.

ITALY: Renting delightful holiday accommodations, each personally selected. Tuscan castles, Umbrian farmhouses. Seaside villas, lakeview cottages. Centrally-located apartments Venice, Rome, Florence. Week/month. 415-821-9345.

ST. THOMAS: 2 or 3 BRs on the water, spectacular downisland view. H. Macaleer. 919-942-8439.

SANIBEL ISLAND: Gulf front 2 BR condo w/pool and tennis. Available weekly/monthly. Boozan '79, 201-522-8219

LONDON RENTALS: Privately owned flats and houses in London's best areas offering comprehensive personal service at attractive prices. One week minimum stay. Call: A Place Like Home, London. 800-526-0215.

KAUAI LUXURY CONDO on the ocean in sunny Poipu. Fully equipped. 2 BRs, 2 baths, free tennis at Waiohai Tennis Club. $600/700 per week. 213-681-6869.

ST. BART'S, FRENCH WEST INDIES: Luxurious seaside villa surrounded by privacy, beautiful beaches and French restaurants. 412-687-2061.

PARIS. LEFT BANK APARTMENT: St. Germain, close to D'Orsay, Louvre, Rodin. Sunny. Fireplaces. Antiques. Luxuriously furnished. Memorable! 412-687-2061.

ROME, ITALY: 18th century estate villa. Great for families. Views!! 609-921-8595.

MAD RIVER SUGARBUSH AREA: Comfortable farmhouse for up to 20 skiers. $350 per day. William Iler '51, 508-922-0010.

MONHEGAN ISLAND, MAINE: 4 BR, 2 bath. Panoramic island, ocean view. Available June-September, $700/wk. Bill Walker '64. 215-687-3271.

VAIL, CO: 3 BR plus loft. 5 min. from gondola and great skiing. $225/night. $275 during Christmas and spring break. Bruce Brookens '67; 303-761-8815.

VAIL-BEAVER CREEK: Rocky Mountain seclusion, minutes from skiing. Creek-side home sleeps six. No X-mas. 303-926-3907.

ST. JOHN: Fabulous private home near beach. Peaceful. Furnished. Box 12287, St. Thomas, VI 00801. 809-775-4266.

SUN VALLEY, ID: Luxurious, spacious, ski condo at base of Mt. Baldy in Warm Springs. 3 BRs, 3 baths, fireplace. Walk one block to lifts, restaurants, shops, apres ski. Bill Travers '71, 805-684-5473.

EXUMA, BAHAMAS: Magnificent hilltop view. Fully equipped, 4 bedrooms, van, private beach, housekeeper available. $1,000 weekly in season. 302-428-1455, evenings.

SEABROOK ISLAND, S.C.: Near historic Charleston, oceanfront 1 BR condo, 2 baths. Sleeps 4; great golf, tennis, restaurants, pelicans. Hugh Hanson '47. 215-649-7335. Princeton discounts!

SPAIN: Lovely 4 BR villa (pool) overlooking Mediterranean/village. Hess '64. 203-688-9333.

CARIBBEAN PARADISE: Luxury 4 BR, 3 bath villa. Perfect 2-6 people. Enjoy heavenly views, gardens, privacy. Walk to 2 spectacular beaches. Tortola, British Virgins. Clipper Cleaver '41, Box 356, Adamsville, R.I. 02801. 401-635-4725(h), 617-742-8310(o).

HANA, MAUI: One-bedroom executive getaway house with panoramic ocean/mountain views on 7.5-acre orchard/flower garden. $95/day, 4-day minimum. 213-654-2765.

ST. JOHN, USVI: 2 BR villa at Lagoon Point, sensational views. Weekly $840-$1260 winter; $560-$840 summer. Valentine, 8 Fern Way, Madbury, NH 03820. 603-742-3063.

IRELAND: Charming Georgian house in beautiful County Waterford. 4 BRs, 3 baths. Available all year. Low rental Nov. to June. 813-964-2465.

CASTLE HYDE: On the Blackwater River, County Cork, Southern Ireland. Exceptionally lovely 18th century Georgian house on 144 acres. 6 bedrooms, 5 modern baths, classic Renaissance gardens with fresh fruit and flowers. Fully staffed. Two miles of private trout and salmon fishing. Pheasant shooting. Available year round. Richard Kroon Y'64, 201-741-5692.

ITALY. CASTLES IN THE SKY or villas in the vineyard, the best city or country rentals all over Italy. American specialist based in Rome will design the perfect holiday. INTERNATIONAL SERVICES, Piazza di Spagna 35, 00187 Rome, Italy. Fax 011-39-6-684-0943. In U.S. 212-794-1534.

JUPITER ISLAND, OCEAN FRONT HOME: P.O. Box 1546, Hobe Sound, FL 33475. 407-546-2571. Bush '50, '64, '75.

COME BACK TO JAMAICA! Enjoy the privacy of your own spacious 3 BR, 3 bath villa, "Clive House", at Tryall Golf and Beach Club near Montego Bay. Beautifully appointed and complete with its own 20' x 40' pool. Cook, maid, laundry and gardener. Spectacular panoramic view of the Caribbean and our 18 hole championship golf course. Tennis, lovely sand beach and all water sports also on site for your enjoyment. Color brochure available on request. Call Liz Poley, w'55 or Susan Wylie weekdays 8-4:30. 612-339-1820.

PERFECT DESERT VACATION HOME: Bermuda Dunes, California. Elegant, 3 bedrooms, jacuzzi, private tennis court, swimming pool, mountain vistas, great weather and nearby golf. William Klopovitz '66, 800-352-1144.

CENTRAL VERMONT: Restored 1830s home. 4 bedrooms, dormitory, 2 1/2 baths. Fully equipped. Tennis, skiing, hiking nearby. $500/week. Mike Van Dusen '65. 202-244-3473.

VERMONT: Caspian Lake, Greensboro. Spacious lakeside home; golf, tennis. John Stone '53. 802-728-4846.

PORTUGAL, ALGARVE: Villa overlooking sea. Sleeps six. Maid. Available April through November. Harison, P.O. Box 6865, Providence, RI 02940.

MARTHA'S VINEYARD: New three bedroom contemporary, sleeps eight, waterviews, tennis, minutes to beaches, 609-924-7913 (office), 609-397-0147 (home).

NANTUCKET: Charming six bedroom Victorian, in-town, walk to beach. 617-449-4954.

ALGARVE, PORTUGAL: Luxury country villa. Sweeping seaviews, near beaches, golf, 3 BRs, 4 1/2 baths. Swimming pool, staff. Available year-round with exceptions. 508-922-4763.

ST. JOHN: Off-season rates. 2 bedroom villa, pool, spectacular view. 508-668-2078.

LONGBOAT KEY, FLORIDA: Right on bay. First floor condo. 2 BR/2 bath, tennis, pool. $2,600/month. Len Thomsen '56. 617-861-0796.

KEY LARGO, FLA.: 2 BR, 2 bath condo at the Anglers Club overlooking club marina on Card Sound. Tennis, par 3 golf course, croquet, and pool, $200/day. Frank Lovejoy '36. 305-367-2856.

STEWARTSON-DOUGHERTY
Real Estate Associates
366 Nassau Street
Princeton, N.J. 08540
PHONE: 609-921-7784

BATTLE ROAD

In perhaps Princeton's finest residential location between the Graduate College and the Institute for Advanced Study is a most attractive Mathews-built Colonial on a quiet and beautifully groomed half acre. A center entry hall adjoins a step-down living room w/fireplace, solarium/study w/bluestone floor and views through wide windows to the terrace and garden, plus a kitchen, breakfast room, first floor bedroom and bath, and powder room. Upstairs, there is a master suite with its own dressing room and bath, plus three other bedrooms and three baths. For the gardener, a small modern greenhouse off the dining room plus a heated potting shed off the two-car garage. Offered at $895,000.

Robert Dougherty '50 Julie Douglas w/'41
Paul Douglas '41 Betsy Stewardson Ford w/'54
Georgia Graham w/'52 J. B. Smith '45
Diane Unruh w/'70 Barbara Broad w/'38
Betty McClelland w/'50 Judy Perrine s/'69

For no obligation—Information about real estate in the Princeton area call (609) 921-7784 or Out-side of New Jersey 1-800-542-0067.

REALTORS

Representing Previews Executive HomeSearch

HOW DO YOU GET THE PAW?

You get your PAW, year in and year out, thanks largely to class dues. If you haven't been paying your class dues, act now!

Dues make the difference!

THE ALUMNI COUNCIL

KIAWAH ISLAND, S.C.: Fabulous beachfront house, 3 BR/bath, fully equipped. $1,500/wk Sept.—May; $2,000/wk June—August. 314-991-8768.

ST. JOHN: Off-season rates. 2 bedroom villa, pool, spectacular view. 508-668-2078.

LONGBOAT KEY, FLORIDA: Right on bay. First floor condo. 2 BR/2 bath, tennis, pool. $2,600/month. Len Thomsen '56. 617-861-0796.

KEY LARGO, FLA.: 2 BR, 2 bath condo at the Anglers Club overlooking club marina on Card Sound. Tennis, par 3 golf course, croquet, and pool, $200/day. Frank Lovejoy '36. 305-367-2856.

KIAWAH ISLAND, S.C.: Fabulous beachfront house, 3 BR/bath, fully equipped. $1,500/wk Sept.—May; $2,000/wk June—August. 314-991-8768.

PERDIDO KEY, FLA.: Charming 2 BR, 2 B condominium 7th floor apartment, #706. Off-season rate Sept.—May 15. 800-338-2809.

COTSWOLDS: 17thC restored cottage. Historic Stanton Village, tour Stratford, Oxford, Bath, Broadway. Antiques, log fire, GCH, private garden, tv, washer/dryer, telephone, modern kitchen, sleeps four adults. Details: Tel: England 011-44-38-673-495; Fax 011-44-38-6858-653. Whitfield House, Wood Stanway, GL54 5PG England.

NANTUCKET: New 3 BR, 2½ bath cape on 3 secluded acres; 914-779-1302.

NEAR GENEVA in charming French village, 20 min. from city. Exceptional lakefront apartment. Splendid view over 180°. Sleeps 4. Available April through July. $900/wk. Tel: 609-924-6240.

NEWPORT, RI: Victorian. 5/6 bedrooms. Families. Week, month, season. 401-846-5434.

WOODED CABIN on river, Valley of Virginia. $250/week. 703-348-5033.

UNSPOILED AMELIA ISLAND (FLORIDA'S EAST COAST): Villas, homes/beach, golfside. Amelia Plantation, Summer Beach, Amelia Surf and Racquet, Amelia Retreat. From $84 daily/$504 weekly. Amelia Rental 800-874-8679. Brochure.

NANTUCKET ISLAND: Contemporary house, fully furnished. Near uncrowded beach. Six miles from town. Weekly. July through October. 216-721-2322.

BARBADOS: 6 BR, 5 bath villa on ocean, unique and secluded, private beach. Day 708-524-2055; evenings 708-441-5690.

CAPE COD, EASTHAM: Enjoy crowdless off-season rates in spectacular new lakeside home. Sleeps 10. Available Sept. through June. 617-444-1339.

VERMONT, MORETOWN: Remodeled farmhouse sleeps 10. 15 minutes to Mad River Glen, 20 mins. to Sugarbush, 40 mins. to Stowe. For rent week, week-end, month. 802-229-0051.

MARTHA'S VINEYARD: 4-bedroom, West Tisbury, waterview, private beach rights. Available June through September. No pets. Phone 414-352-2284.

BRECKENRIDGE, COLORADO: 5 bedroom home on 2 acres with the Blue River. Superb year around. $375/night. Weekly discounts available. Wayne Harding '45. Call Ian (daughter) 303-530-0852.

NANTUCKET: Comfortable historic home, convenient in-town location, sleeps 8, some bikes. 201-543-2867.

NANTUCKET: Wide selection of summer rentals. $1,000-$3,000 per week. Nantucket Vacation Rentals. 800-228-4070.

FOR SALE

MANHATTAN: If selling a co-op, condominium, or townhouse, call about our unique 200 brokerage firm multi-list program. Sharon Baum w/'62, S.W. Bird & Co., 331 Madison Ave., New York, NY; 212-351-2416.

ISLAND HOUSE: See "For Rent, Stocking Island."

VAIL-BEAVER CREEK, COLORADO: Unique properties. 10% of commission proceeds donated, in your name, to the Yellowstone Bighorn Research Association in memory of my father, Professor Erling Dorf, Hon. '33. Bob Dorf 303-476-2421.

GREAT CAMANO, BVI: Secluded home, magnificent view on private island. 2 BR, baths. Land Rover and Whaler. Doug Martin '54. 203-426-2928.

PLACE YOUR AD IN THE PRINCETON EXCHANGE

Name: _____

Address: _____

City: _____ State: _____ Zip: _____

Telephone, Work: _____ Home: _____

My ad should run _____ time(s), beginning the month of _____

Classification: _____

Text: _____

Payment for all insertions must accompany initial request. My check for $ _____ is enclosed. Rates per insertion: 1-5 insertions, $1.50 per word; 6-10 insertions, $1.45 per word; 11-17 insertions, $1.40 per word. Send to: Princeton Exchange, Princeton Alumni Weekly, 41 William St., Princeton, NJ 08540 (609)258-4886. No phone orders please. Issues are published 17 times from September through July. Ads will appear five-six weeks after receipt. When calculating payment, multiply number of words X number of insertions X rate per word to arrive at total price. P.O. Box number counts as two words, phone number as one word. No charge for zip code or class numerals. We cannot accept PAW box numbers. Please make checks payable to Princeton Alumni Weekly.

BOCA RATON, FLA., YACHTSMAN DREAM: Deep-water slip, 3,000 sq. ft. townhouse facing Boca Raton Hotel. Next to beach club and Boca Inlet. Magnificent home or investment. Phone 407-466-4219. 407-391-9072.

MANHATTAN/BATTERY PARK CITY: Two bedroom high floor corner condominium with spectacular Hudson River views. Walk to work downtown. Luxury doorman building. $335,000, maint. $621. Jennifer Jordan '78. Office: 212-969-6259, home: 212-945-3113.

ADIRONDACK ESTATE: Unique 3,000 acre forest preserve, with 150 acre private glacial lake, in northern Adirondacks. Extensive wildlife, including nesting loons. Six bedroom, 1890 main lodge, totally renovated. Boat house, guest house, and barn. Suitable as family compound or corporate conference center. Color brochure available. Call Kathy Gilligan, Merrill Thomas Realty, Lake Placid, 518-523-2519.

PRIVATE ESTATE/SMALL FARM NEAR PRINCETON: 1840 stone farmhouse on 45 country acres in Sourland mountains of Hopewell. Perfect blend of old and new. Must be seen to appreciate. Contact Vint Lawrence '77. 609-466-0630.

MARTHA'S VINEYARD LAND: 160 acres undeveloped land on Tisbury Great Pond. Privacy and beauty. Perfect for private compound. Principals only. Contact Vint Lawrence '77 609-466-0630.

STONE HARBOR, NEW JERSEY: On the beach 3-bedroom luxury condo, indoor pool, jacuzzi, 2 car parking, exclusive 23 unit association. $360,000. Ralph C. Zagrabbe '72. 215-557-1740(w), 215-649-9899(h).

ANDERSON, SOUTH CAROLINA: Classic traditional southern estate. 10 bedrooms, 15 acres, pool, many extras. Baron Agency, John Sullivan, 803-224-0014.

FOR SALE/FOR RENT

NANTUCKET—Come join the 400 happy Princeton families. We have large and small rentals, investment opportunities, estates and commercial enterprises. AND we give your investments TENDER, LOVING CARE—PREFERRED PROPERTIES. Nancie B. Taylor, w'43, Lucy T. Eaton, d'43. 508-228-2320, 800-338-7715.

WASHINGTON, DC, METROPOLITAN area, Northern Virginia, Maryland. Sales, rentals, land, property management. Colleen Finks w'61, associate broker, Pardoe & Graham, 6729 Curran St., McLean, VA 22101; 703-734-7020; evs., 703-821-2850.

WANTED TO RENT

FRANCE—PROVENCE—VAR: House, sleep 4, May 25-June 22, 1991. Robert Lillen '48. 212-876-0733.

RESORTS & TRAVEL

LONDON, ENGLAND: Luxury self-catering apartments in the heart of Mayfair. British Breaks, Ltd., Box 1176, Middleburg, Virginia 22117. Tel. 703-786-6971. Fax 703-687-6291.

ARIZONA GUEST RANCH: Riding ranch-bred horses, tennis, pool, fantastic birding, shooting, all in a verdant valley surrounded by historic mountains. Season, Nov. 1 to May 15, limited to 40 guests. Brochure, Circle Z Ranch, Box 194 P-7, Patagonia, AZ 85624, winter 602-287-2091, summer 814-425-3768, Don Simmons P'49 manager.

ITALY: INTIMATE, SMALL GROUP TOURS TO UNUSUAL DESTINATIONS: Tuscan Islands and Hilltowns; The Palio of Siena; The Riviera; Mythological Routes in Sicily. La Pergola, Tours Inc.: A special company for the special traveler. Call for 1991 schedule: 914-358-6035.

SCOTLAND: Ardsheal House, historic home of the Stewarts of Appin, now a country house hotel owned and run by Jane & Bob Taylor (Princeton '53). Located on coast in magnificent West Highlands. Superb food. Brochure: Ardsheal House, Kentallen of Appin, Argyll PA38 4BX, Scotland. Tel.: 44-63174-227. Fax: 44-63174-342. Open Easter to Nov.

CAMPS

THE SUSQUEHANNOCK CAMPS, founded 1905 by G. Carlton Shafer '03, still under same family management of E.H. Shafer '44, G.C. Shafer '51, Priscilla H. Shafer '83. Summer resident brother/sister camps on private lakes in northeastern PA. Top quality staff instruct team and individual sports, waterfront, riding, arts and crafts, ecology. ACA accredited camps. Write Box 71, R.D. 1, Brackney, PA 18812, or call 717-967-2323/215-356-2436.

WANTED TO BUY

RARE BOOKS AND FIRST EDITIONS: We are interested in purchasing libraries or single volumes from the 15th to the 20th century. Top prices paid. Also, expert appraisals for individuals or institutions. David L. O'Neal '60, Antiquarian Booksellers, Inc., 234 Clarendon St., Boston, MA 02116; 617-266-5790.

BUSINESS SERVICES

PROFESSIONAL TAX PLANNING, ACCOUNTING, AUDIT REPRESENTATION. Personal and business. Enrolled to practice before IRS. By appointment. 212-947-6031. Virgil M. Cummins '67 (EA), 430 West 34th Street, New York, NY 10001.

GOODS & SERVICES

NANNIES: Trained at Nannies of Cleveland School, available for positions nationwide. Call Monica Bassett w'61. 216-521-4650.

MEMBERSHIP COMPUTER SYSTEM for PC: Membership, letters, planning, attendance, billing, contributions for all clubs, societies, associations, foundations. 903-876-2224.

EDUCATION

ANXIOUS ABOUT COLLEGE OR GRADUATE SCHOOL APPLICATIONS? Former Ivy admission officer will help you right from the start. College Planning Associates: 212-496-2656.

ANNOUNCEMENT

The Office of the Dean of the Chapel, The Alumni Council, AIDS Activist Coalition for Education, the Fund for Reunion and the Gay and Lesbian Alliance at Princeton would like to make contact with the family, friends, companions of Princetonians who have died of AIDS so that we might extend the support of the University community in the planning of a commemorative event. All information will be confidential upon request. Please write or phone: Sue Anne Steffey Morrow, Associate Dean of the Chapel, 21 Murray-Dodge Hall, Princeton University, Princeton, NJ 08544. 609-258-3049.

IT'S LONELY AT THE TOP

FAVORITE NEW T-SHIRT

Our "Lonely At the Top" shirt, introduced in our 1990-91 catalog, was an instant success on and off campus. The back of the shirt shows the seals of seven Ivy League schools, surmounted, of course, by Princeton's. (The front features a more modest design on the left chest. See inset.) 100% cotton, M-L-XL, $16. Add $4.25 shipping and handling.

36 University Place, Princeton, N.J. 08540

Call toll-free: From N.J., 1-800-624-4236
Elsewhere in the U.S., 1-800-631-0137

☐ U-Store ☐ VISA ☐ MasterCard ☐ AmEx
Acct. # _____

Exp. Date _____

Qty _____ Size _____

Name _____

Address _____

City, State _____ ZIP _____

ST. CROIX

Everything you expect
from a vacation paradise.

Beaches, Tennis, Golf, Dining,
Entertainment, Shopping,
Relaxation

Ralph Locke Islands, Inc.

P.O. Box #800

Waccabuc, N.Y. 10597

Toll Free Nationwide

(800)-223-1108

The Buccaneer
ST. CROIX, U.S. VIRGIN ISLANDS

12 ARTHUR C. HOLDEN Box 182 Washington, CT 06793; 203-868-7063

Recently we have received the gratitude of a Princeton upperclassman, who apparently bears a foreign name, for the scholarship which he says made it possible for him to get the benefit of a Princeton education.

In this he makes a reference to the benefit that he gained from membership in one of the upperclass eating clubs at Princeton. Back in the days when the members of 1912 were enjoying similar benefits, the clubs had been under attack by the president of the University, Woodrow Wilson, because it appeared to him that the upperclass clubs were both undemocratic, as well as the cause of dissension among the students. Certainly one of the advantages in the Princeton eating clubs is that they comprise small circles which promote an unusual type of intimacy among the students.

Would it not be possible to make more of this type of intimacy among the students? Could not the clubs be asked to assist the University library in keeping valuable records of some of the friendships that have been promoted by the eating clubs? Such a service could be commenced if special effort was made by the clubs to provide through their own libraries some unique records of the personalities which met together as upperclassmen.

13 ALISON R. BRYAN Box F Frenchtown, NJ 08825

Letters from scholarship students, sons, daughters, and families of classmates are always welcomed by the secretary. Among those received during the last few months of 1990 was one from Caroline E. Bell '93, of Montreal, Canada, received Dec. 14. Her degree program is geology; her concentration, economics. Caroline plays ice hockey and was to leave with the team on Dec. 26 for an international tournament in Switzerland. She is a member of the Class of '93 council and also loves to dance classical ballet. In closing she promises to tell us about her hockey as well as skiing in Switzerland. We welcome Caroline as a 1913 scholarship recipient of the Percy Francis Burrage War Scholarship Award.

On Oct. 15, Mrs. John (Helen Dunlap) Weeks wrote from her home in Clearwater, Fla. Mrs. Weeks tells of her early introduction to Princeton by her father, Charles Cornell Dunlap, our varsity football player. She recalls sitting on her father's shoulders at Reunions. Mrs. Weeks says that her father used to mention Nat Furman as a special friend.

Robert W. Richards '43 wrote Dec. 3, asking how to get a copy of a poem by Cam Hawkins.

14 C. EARL MOORE Rosemont Plaza, Apt. 117 Rosemont, PA 19010

Continued from the Dec. 19 PAW is an outstanding letter from Josephine Billings, widow of our classmate, George Billings. Mrs. Billings had returned from a trip to England:

"I spent a very pleasant Sunday out in the English countryside with several of my friends and ended up seeing Oxford and Shakespeare's home, which, of course, gave me a terrific thrill. In fact, I enjoyed London so much that I went back again last spring, also on business, and flew over to Paris, my first visit, for 3½ days. Unfortunately, it was spring vacation time for so many college students that Paris was very crowded and some of the places I had longed to see over the years had such long lines of people waiting that I decided not to stand in line and look at something else. It is an extraordinarily beautiful city and the city fathers have been so wise in not allowing skyscrapers and ugly buildings to be put up as we have allowed in N.Y.C., which is now overbuilt in my opinion.

"Several years ago, seven hospitals in N.Y., including ours, formed an offshore insurance co. to try to reduce the very high premiums that we were having to pay. It is proving to be helpful, but the meetings have to be held outside the country, so once a year a meeting is held in London. The people at Lloyds of London said they would like to meet the chairman of the board of the Brooklyn Hospital Center, and that happens to be me. That is why I made the two trips to London.

"I enjoy the ALUMNI WEEKLY and think it is exceedingly generous of them to send it to the widows of the classmates. I am so happy that you have kept in touch with me and I shall try to write you again in a few months if I have anything of interest to tell you."

Word has been received from Harvey H. Meeker Jr. '41 that his father and our classmate, Harvey Meeker, died Jan. 7, 1991, in Hawaii. A memorial will follow.

17 IVE GRAMMER, c/o Chemical Bank 30 Rockefeller Plaza, Ste. 6100 New York, NY 10112

Your secretary would like to share with the Class a note received from Henry H. Hoyt Jr. '49, son of our late classmate, Harry Hoyt: "Thank you very much for your kind letter of sympathy to me on the death of my father. I have conveyed to all members of his family your sincere condolences at our loss. My father, as you know better than most, truly loved Princeton and the Class of 1917. He will be sorely missed by everyone in the Princeton community. Your thoughtful letter meant a great deal to me."

We have learned that Jane Joeck, widow of our classmate, Thomas Dudley Joeck, has received an honorary bachelor of arts degree from the Rhode Island School of Design. Jane graduated from this most prestigious art school in 1926. Congratulations from all '17ers.

Among the readings from the memorial service held for Kent Colwell on Dec. 1 at the Grace Church in Madison, N.J. was the following excerpt from the diary written by Kent on April 25, 1919, in Paris, France, when he was 21 years of age: "To nourish an ambition of honorable distinction. To serve others with justice. To stand for the good things of life. To live with my family in a cultured and refined atmosphere. To appreciate more than my own point of view.

"To base my work on principles from which nothing shall deter me. To anchor myself firmly to wife, house, and community, so that my basic grip on life may never be dissipated by dilettantism. These are a few of the things for which I intend to strive as I stand on the threshold of manhood."

Would that all mankind would follow these principles. What a different world we would be living in.

18 JARVIS CROMWELL Meadow Lakes, Apt. 3108 Hightstown, NJ 08520

News is slim from members of '18. Why not drop a note, or have one of your family do so? News of grandchildren or great grandchildren (any "great-greats" yet?) is of interest to all of us. And one or two items will stimulate more. Send to Jarvis Cromwell's stepson, Alan G. Kirk II, 827 Turkey Run, McLean, VA 22102, who is happily helping Jarvis with this column.

Have we any limerick buffs among our classmates? If so, let's hear from you. I recently came across a totally charming (and occasionally bawdy) collection of these very English stanzas. The source of most of these five-liners is hidden in the mists of time, although it appears that Queen Bess (the first one) had a hand in developing this art form. In the little anthology titled THE LURE OF THE LIMERICK: AN UNINHIBITED HISTORY, by William S. Baring-Gould, one reads that "far and away the best-known of all limerick sequences was that touched off by a five-liner in the Princeton TIGER" over 70 years ago. This ditty, which bred many imitators, went thusly:

"There was an old man of Nantucket
Who kept all his cash in a bucket;
But his daughter, named Nan,
Ran away with a man,
And as for the bucket, Nantucket.

We are sad to have to report that Albert Reidinger died of pneumonia last July at his home in Cokesbury Village in Hockessin, Del. This news came from one of his twin sons, Raymond '45. Albert, a veteran of major battles in WWI, spent his career with the DuPont Co. He is survived by three children, 13 grandchildren, and six great-grandchildren, to all of whom we send condolences. A memorial will, of course, appear in a future issue, but there is quite a backlog so do not expect it soon.

19 GEORGE B. LANKIN 14 Lake Forest Dr. Charlottesville, VA 22901

A very good telephone chat with Nat Aronson found him, as before, getting along but needs proper care. He likes to hear about news of 1919ers, and, of course, counts on these notes.

Eric S. Piasta '91, wrote us to advise that he received the Newlin Memorial Scholarship, without which he could not have been able to attend Princeton. He is interested in Eastern Europe and works with groups working in this area. After graduation, he expects to study law.

20 SALLY S. McALPIN W'20 Box 670 Princeton, NJ 08542

For today I am giving the Class of 1920 the best thank-you letter to Princeton I have ever read.

"Dear Mrs. McAlpin, Happy Holidays to you and all the members of the Class of 1920. My name is Paul Harrington and I am writing to express my gratitude at being named a recipient of the Samuel Webster Eldwood War Memorial Scholarship. I cannot say enough how helpful this scholarship is to me and my family. Without it, I do not think that my education at Princeton would be possible. I am so thankful that Princeton is lucky to have such thoughtful alumni like the Class of 1920 who are willing to give so that people like myself may have the benefit of the Princeton experience.

I am a twenty-year-old junior from Boston, who is the youngest of four boys. I am a sociology major and a member of Colonial Club. After 2½ years at Princeton, I'm still having a great time. My academic work has been challenging and interesting, while on the social side I have made a great number of friendships which I hope will last throughout my lifetime. I also serve as a volunteer for Special Olympics and am working two jobs to pay for my education. I work as a supervisor in the circulation division of Firestone Library and I am also a dishwasher at my eating club on the weekends. Sometimes the jobs become a pain, but in the end I know that it will be worth it.

Again, Mrs. McAlpin, I would like it if you will pass on my thanks to all the members of the Class of 1920. Also, it would be great to hear from you and some members of the Class. I would really look forward to hearing from them. My address and phone number are: Paul Harrington, 321 Henry Hall, Princeton Univ. 08544; 609-258-9081. Don't be shy about writing or calling! Again, my deepest thanks and my best wishes for the New Year. Yours truly, Paul M. Harrington"

21 A. EDWARD CONOVER
331 Lower Dollington Rd., Apt. C-4
Newtown, PA 18940

We have a thank-you letter from Kenneth Romero '94 upon his receipt of the Wells Bradley Cummings War Memorial Scholarship.

Kenneth is a Native American from Cochiti Pueblo, New Mexico. He is a full-blooded Pueblo Indian who has lived on the reservation all his life. He was Valedictorian of his class at the Santa Fe Indian School, a top-rated secondary school.

His goal is a B.S.E. in electrical engineering and computer science, with grad school in the future.

Our best wishes for the success of this young man whom we believe to be the first full-blooded American Indian to receive a '21 scholarship.

22 JACK REYNOLDS, JOHN CARTER '80
103 East 84th St.
New York, NY 10028

Here is a photograph of a new lounge in Louise Love Hall, in Butler College. Seated are current undergraduates, members of the Butler College student government.

Jack Lewis, Robert Scholl, Jim Scarff, other '22 classmates, and the assistant secretary are all planning to attend the Alumni Day luncheon on Sat., Feb. 16. Our guests will be Prof. Frank Calaprice, master of Butler College; students from his college; and relatives of '22 members who are attending Princeton now. We hope that others will join us at Alumni Day. The University will honor Mr. Lawrence Rockefeller '32, who will receive the Woodrow Wilson Award. The program also includes the Service of Remembrance in the University Chapel at 3:00 P.M.

Jim Scarff forwarded several more correspondence flaps from the dues mailing. Incidentally, Jim celebrated his 90th birthday on Nov. 13 with his family and friends. We all wish Jim and Iris well on this wonderful occasion. His enthusiastic leadership and guidance of the Class of '22 is well known by all of his classmates and their wives and children. From Robert Scholl, Class V.P., "A couple of months ago my children gave a party celebrating something or other for which the whole family gathered around at my son Dan's place in Westchester, Penn. We had a ball!" Dated Nov. 6, 1990: "Joe (Joseph C. Platt) turned 92 last month—still up and about."

23 LARRY GOOD
201 W. Evergreen Ave., Apt. 716
Philadelphia, PA 19118

A front-page article in a recent issue of the Trenton Times describes how the Princeton Univ. Art Museum is "in raptures over the most significant gift of post-war American art ever made to its collection." The article refers, of course, to Lally and H. Gates Lloyd's recent gift of BLACK FRIDAY, a prized painting by Willem de Kooning. As the article points out, the gift is all the more generous since recent cuts in tax incentives have caused a sharp drop in art donations. "Such generosity," museum director Allen Rosenbaum says, "has become a heroic act."

Andrew Todd Wollen '92 has written to the Class to express his appreciation for the Andrew J. Kirkpatrick Jr. scholarship that is helping him attend Princeton. He writes, "Princeton has unquestionably been one of the most important and formative experiences of my life, and I am grateful for the help that this scholarship provides. I hope that, at some point in my life, I will have the opportunity to do the same for some future Princetonian."

We regret to report the death of John H. Moulton Jr. on Oct. 31, 1990.

24 RICHARD H. HOMES
862 Prospect Ave.
Winnetka, IL 60093

Imma and Fred Moble are both fine. They are back at Ponte Verde, Fla., after spending the summer at Highlands, N.C. Fred has received letters from Wally McClenaban and Marvin Rick, which he has shared with us. Wally, who lives in Barnstable, Mass., is recovering slowly from the replacement of both knee joints about a year ago and from an auto accident last Jan., which resulted in a fractured neck from which he has fortunately recovered. His wife, Sallie, carries on in good shape. Their children and grandchildren are doing well. One of their granddaughters is a freshman at Yale. They see Louise and Lee Austin, who are near neighbors, quite often. They recall the good old days and solve the world's problems with them.

Marvin Rick phoned Fred from San Diego where he and his wife are rattling around in a big house. Marvin had to give up golf several years ago because of poor eyesight. He cannot get around for any distance without help. Under these circumstances, Reunions are out of the question. He has a son living in St. Petersburg and a brother in Brooklyn. Howie Sadler, who also lives in Ponte Vedra, spent a few weeks in Maine recently with his son John and his in-laws. He and his wife, Vivienne, are doing well.

The University advises that the latest recipient of the Stephen Knox Little Scholarship is Irene C. Chang '93.

25 JOHN L. K. JENNEY
Box 123
Montchanin, DE 19710

"A Charity that Breeds Success" was the title of an article on the editorial page of the WALL STREET JOURNAL, Dec. 31, 1990: "Heifer Project Intl. is perhaps the only funny name in the serious business of hunger relief. It makes some people smile in a puzzled way, then ask, 'Heifer like in cow?' Precisely. The oddly named, Arkansas-based organization has fought hunger and poverty for almost five years by giving livestock and training to the rural poor in 33 states and 110 countries... Its $8-million annual income comes from churches and individuals... The first utterly 'WILD' conference (Women in Livestock Development) was premiered at Heifer's ranch in Ark. last summer. They were from Kenya to Kentucky, China to Maine... The organization also deals with other livestock and hoofless sources of food such as poultry and fish... Holy Cow indeed, Heifer Project! Give milk to the world." Avid readers of Two Brrs will remember Charlie Taylor's article in the 1989 edition. He is one of the two directors on the board representing the Episcopal Church and is very active in the organization.

The funerals of two of our most loyal and distinguished classmates were held in Dec. A large attendance of friends assembled in the first Presbyterian Church in New Canaan in honor of Bill Oliver. Leu Mack's son, Rev. John '64, assisted in the ceremony, and Ed Peckerman attended. The service for Harry Steeger was held at the Brick Presbyterian Church in N.Y.C. Ernie Heyn was an honorary pallbearer and Pete Street rendered a tribute. The MacMillans, Dilks, Ethel Heyn, Estelle Ives, and Hella Street were present.

Frances Chadwick and Bob Wilson were married on Oct. 20 in the Palo Alto Friends Meeting and are "at home" at 1050 Newell Rd., Palo Alto, CA 94303. Amongst other accomplishments, Frances is an classical pianist and poetry teacher.

We regret to report the death of Dick Hunsberger Dec. 15, 1990.

26 ROBERT WOHLFORTH
57 Rockwell Rd.
Ridgefield, CT 06877

Leu Rumford turns up with a model paw news item: "My 86th birthday was New Year's Day, 1990 was a good year for us since we were lucky as well as active. We have lived now for six years at Broadmead, a lifetime care center that is great. Travel took us to Williamsburg and Irvine, Calif., then to Bavaria, Austria, and Hungary. We were visiting our children in Washington, D.C., for both Thanksgiving and Christmas. Now we look forward to attending the 65th reunion of 1929 in June."

Another Slattery—this time our "Slatts" Slattery's grandson and namesake (nicknamed "Quint")—is headed for Old Nassau as an early entrant for the Class of 1995, joining his Princetonian sisters Mary '86, Sara '90, and Julie '92, all daughters of Frank P. Slattery Jr. '59, who wishes 1926 all good luck for our 65th reunion this June.

POTPOURRI: Niven Busch, who has three grandsons all born within one month of each other, had a family reunion last fall in Kauai, Hawaii. Barbara and Fred Wolff recently checked in with the message that "we are still perking, but more slowly every day." Reed Hartel rejoices "that he is still ambulatory as of Sept. 1990." Pres. Ted Beck has a grandson in the freshman class. Sherm Brown is still taking life easy in a nursing home in Colo. and reports seeing Bill Moore every year or so. Bill Master hopes he will be with us at the 65th reunion. His wife, Lucy, is under nursing care at their home in Waverly, Penn. Walt Schob reports the addition of another granddaughter to his family last Aug.

We report with much sadness the death of Frank Trunkley on Nov. 5, 1990, in Alhambra, Calif. A memorial will follow. We have a memorial in this issue.

More Elis in the Chapel

Architects MacKinnon (left) and Cram (right) immortalized on the Chapel's portal.

PHOTOS BY JOHN W. H. SIMPSON '86

MANY PRINCETONIANS ALREADY KNOW that discreetly hidden on the south side of the University Chapel is a gargoyle in the shape of a Yale bulldog. The offending mascot was inserted there by Yale alumni in the architectural firm of Cram & Ferguson, which designed the Chapel. But Charles H. Detwiller, Jr. '39, has uncovered two more audaciously self-aggrandizing gargoyles.

After retiring to Cape Cod several years ago, Detwiller joined the Pilgrim Congregational Church, near his home in South Harwich, Massachusetts. His own architectural expertise was soon put to good use during a renovation of the 135-year-old church building. In researching the original plans for the church, he found that one of its early architects, Clifford MacKinnon, age ninety-six, was still living in the area. When Detwiller called on him to look for some missing plans to the church, MacKinnon also mentioned that he had been an assistant architect on the Princeton University Chapel, and shed new light on the chapel's sculptings.

MacKinnon told Detwiller that, in addition to the well-known bulldog, he had designed a sculpture of his own head, which hangs above a niche to the left of the front portal, and, to the right, one of Ralph Adams Cram's head—both complete with their eyeglasses. Cram, the firm's chief architect, was a Yale alumnus.

Before now, neither the campus Orange Key Guide Service nor the Chapel office had ever heard the story of these two sculpted heads, each just a few inches across, that peer down at entering churchgoers. While Albert M. Friend, Jr. '15 '17, writing in PAW just before the Chapel was dedicated in 1928, praised the religious themes in the sculpture and stained-glass windows, he made no mention of this hidden secular theme in the Chapel's design, and not since the Chapel's dedication has anyone realized the extent of Cram's and MacKinnon's tongue-in-cheek contribution. Detwiller's detective work has added another facet to the Chapel's Princeton, or should we say Yale, lore.

—Nuala O'Connor '89

George F. Schmucki, recording secretary of the University, has reported on the seven beneficiaries of five scholarships sponsored by the Class or by relatives of members: Jennifer A. Wellerpolley '93, José I. Vasquez '93, Eric D. Aradon '94, Rajish Krishnan '94, Melissa R. Landers '94, Miro M. Pasic '94, and Matthew J. Colley '94. The Secretary will give details upon request; the report is too long to include and will be sent to the Class archives.

28

R. PARK JOHNSON

Box 28

Penney Farms, FL 32079; 904-284-8698

After Jack Wallace died almost two years ago, his widow, Peg, and their two sons, John '55 and Bill (Kenyon '58) established at Princeton the John H. Wallace Jr. '28 Scholarship Fund, to be used for students pursuing scientific studies. Jack took his Ph.D. from Princeton in chemistry, was in the pharmaceutical business, was director of the Forrestal Research Center, and was active in many sorts of University, civic, and church affairs in Princeton through the years. He was also a leader in many of our Class activities, including serving as co-chairman of the 55th reunion. Peg has written about being pleased to meet President Shapiro and receive his personal thanks for this appropriate scholarship gift. The first award of this scholarship is expected to be made in 1991.

Roger Brigham, who lives in the rural community of West Sumner, Me., has written of the death of his wife, Yvonne, after a long and gallant battle against emphysema. She died on Mar. 14, 1989. He keeps busy with the chores of cooking, lawn-mowing, garden, woodlot, and snow shoveling, although getting considerable help on the outdoor jobs from a young man who is a neighbor. He enjoys his large collection of musical classics on tapes. His daughter Helen and her two children live about 60 miles away and have given him a lot of support by their frequent visits. Roger and Yvonne had a good 56 years of married life together.

Don Kipp and his wife, Willa, had dinner in Hobe Sound, Fla. a few days before Christmas with Rebecca and Don Agnew, and reported that the Agnews were taking off the next day on a cruise to the islands. (I presume these are the nearby Bahamas—perhaps Don can fill us in with some news about the cruise.)

29

LOUIS F. KEMP

12 Winthrop Rd.

Guilford, CT 06437; 203-453-4646

Our Class luncheon was held Jan. 17 at the Nassau Club. Spence Marsb reports that 18 attended: Beasley, Breuer, Hague, Logan, Marsh, McPherson, Meeker, Mole, Smith, Updike, Willard, and wives and friends, with a good spirit of camaraderie pervading.

Erik Barnouw and his wife Betty returned last fall from a fascinating visit to the U.S.S.R. He recounted that they met in Riga, Latvia, for a seven-day meeting of 45 U.S. and 45 U.S.S.R. documentarists, viewing and discussing nonfiction films—half theirs, half ours. Since they had seen little of each others' work for several decades, it was very enlightening. Erik delivered short "keynote" opening remarks. After Riga, some spent several days at Leningrad studios, then home via Helsinki.

Charlie Arnt's passing last Aug. brought this recollection to mind for Date Smith: "He and I had a very special relationship: it was through Charlie that I met my Dorothy. We had gone to a Vassar prom together—Charlie as Dorothy's date, and I with a girl whose name I now scarcely remember. I always claimed that the reason Charlie and Dorothy did not keep on was because the picture of him she took home to show her family showed him as 'Tsar

27

NELSON R. BURN

36 Lexington Rd.
West Hartford, CT 06119

Walt Newbouse attended an autumnal elder hostel in Verona, Italy, and found it "a fascinating and delightful experience." Last winter he went to Hawaii. "Between trips," he says, "I do a lot of volunteer work—two days a week at the Greenwich Hospital, as a driver for Meals-on-Wheels, manning the phones for Hot Line, etc., etc. This keeps me out of mischief (usually). Regards to all '27ers." Roger Stugg, studious as ever, has been reading a biography of C. S. Lewis and hopes the secretary has time to—but he doesn't! He sends "warm regards" to all.

Stu Steinbrink is still in excellent health, and "enjoying tutoring foreigners in English on a one-to-one basis as a volunteer three days a week." He and his wife travel now and then—including a cruise to Alaska last July on the Royal Viking Line, and a motor trip to Richmond, Va. in Sept. to visit the newest grandchild—the third, a boy, following two girls. He plans a trip to St. John in Dec. one to Paradise Island in Feb., and Bermuda in Apr.

Fyodor Ivanovitch' in an Intime show!"

I regret to announce that we lost Carl Longstreet Darnell in 1988, John Stewart Vbay on Mar. 22, 1990, and John A. Welsh in Nov. 1989. Our sympathy to their families. Memorials will follow.

30 HUBERT A. "RED" SCHNEIDER

8008 Westover Rd.
Bethesda, MD 20814

After the death of his wife last year, Phil Steinmetz gave up his home in Ashfield, Mass. He now lives with his older daughter in the summer in Bradford, Penn., and in the winter with his younger daughter in Marietta, Ga. While enroute to Marietta this year, Phil stopped off to see his college roommate Charlie Hertz in Pocono Lake Preserve, Penn. He reported Charlie to be in good shape, probably the result of playing platform tennis every day. Phil also visited Genevieve and Al Covolo in N.Y. on the way south. Phil's late wife had a great interest in conservation and ecology, and just prior to Phil's trip south a plaque commemorating her efforts was dedicated in Ashfield, where they had lived for many years prior to her death. Phil has nine great-grandchildren (a Class record?) and he says that keeping track of them solves part of his leisure problem.

Bill Ridginton's wife, Edith, writes that Bill is in an advanced stage of Alzheimer's disease and has been transferred to a nursing home in Belfast, Me., where one of his daughters lives. Edith is also not well, cannot be of help to Bill, and is living with another daughter in Ala.

Tom Miles attended an Alumni College in Russia in Oct. and had wonderful experiences, including standing in a grocery line for hours.

Betsy and Charlie Stevenson had a rough time last fall being laid up with a strange virus closely related to Legionnaire's Disease. Charlie's case required hospitalization for a month. Both are now doing well.

As of this writing, Laddie Koebn holds the record for having shot his age at golf the most times; 14 times so far. Can anyone top that?

Having completed a cruise over the holiday season from Puerto Rico to California via the Canal we wish to express our thanks to those who sent us birthday and Christmas greetings.

We have a memorial in this issue.

31 HUGH T. KERN

15-01-U Meadow Lakes
Hightstown, NJ 08520; 609-448-4100

Remember this high-flying, martini-with-olive, group of '31ers? It's part of our 50th yearbook logo, designed by Wbu Darrow in his inimitable style. Do you suppose that W.B. Yeats was thinking of '31 when he wrote about "the balloon of the mind"?

HERE & THERE: Buck Huxley has his physical problems but he still plays some golf and bangs away at the flying geese around his Easton, Md., wetlands. Grandson William P. Huxley III, making all of us proud, is headed for Loosotho with the Peace Corps. Long time no hear, John ("Zonk") Lanzillo, up Vermont way, reports "all is well." (His Mary's nickname? "Big Shorty.")

Robbie Robinson lunches regularly at the Piping Rock Club with Arthur Crocker and Bill Miller. Bob Sayre and wife, Alma, celebrated their jubilee with a sail to Bermuda on the Nordic Prince. St. Louis guests at The Tides on the Rappahannock: George Roudeshub and Dorothy with Dick Shelton and Kay.

Tom Snackman, who oversees 70 acres of farmland in Lancaster Cty., tells us that his local post-office address was once considered as a possible site for the U.S. capital. Washington won out, but maybe things would have been better if the White House were located on the Susquehanna River at Peach Bottom, Penn. We can dream, can't we?

Stew Sternbach is still "on the floor" of the N.Y. Stock Exchange, where he's been for over 50 years. Well, as they say, it's not the bulls and the bears you need to avoid, it's the bum steers.

Hear about the public-relations person who asked John V. Fleming of the English department if he had read John Updike's latest novel, and when he said no, she said, "Really? It's been out several weeks." To which Fleming responded: "Have you read Boethius' CONSOLATION OF PHILOSOPHY? It's been out for 1400 years."

32 MANTLAND A. EDEY

1199 Park Ave.
New York, NY 10128

For an unprecedented second year in a row, the Woodrow Wilson Award, Princeton's highest honor, has gone to a member of the Class of 1932. Last year it was Jimmy Stewart. This year it is Laurie Rockefeller, who certainly has carried forward in his life the principle by which qualification for the award is measured: Princeton in the nation's service. Laurie is perhaps best known for his lifelong identification with cancer research through his connection with the Sloan-Kettering Institute in N.Y., and with an enormous range of philanthropies in many fields, not least of them Princeton itself. Less well known is his role in sponsoring new ventures, particularly in the field of aviation. Many credit him with playing a major role in the development of the aviation industry in this country. But, from this corner, it is as a conservationist that Laurie should be best remembered. For more than 50 years he has worked quietly and effectively on innumerable boards and commissions to preserve land. The results are all around us, in the Hawaiian Islands, in the West Indies, in N.Y.'s Palisades, most notably in the Grand Teton in Wyo., to name just a few. The Natl. Park System has been made healthier and its thrust coherent because of him. Colonial Williamsburg owes its existence largely to Laurie. It is not too much to say that he has been the most effective conservationist in the U.S., and at the same time one of the quietest. Laurie, we are very proud of you.

CORRECTION: When we passed on Tom Fernley's generous invitation for classmates to drop in on him in Florida, we reported him as living in Vero Beach. He is actually at Ponte Vedra Beach, and the welcome mat is still out. It is hoped that nobody made a fruitless trek to the wrong spot.

33 ARTHUR MOODY

600 E. Cathedral Rd., Apt. A314
Philadelphia, PA 19128

At this time of the year, we have lots of news from classmates reporting on: 1) cruises and other trips; 2) 50th wedding anniversaries; 3) 80th birthdays; 4) children and grandchildren; 5) honors and awards. We will give some samples here and save most for future columns and the summer newsletter.

1) Cruise: Ann and Josh Billings had a cruise on the Danube, Vienna to Istanbul, along with Giff Agnew. Giff, we hear, also visited Tom Johnston's hideaway, Moonhole, on Bequia.

2) and 3): 50th wedding anniversary and 80th birthday: Harriet and Doc Ward. A report which appeared, with photograph of the smiling couple, in newspapers in Belleville, Nutley, and Bloomfield, N.J., written by their daughter Patricia Ward Snyder, gave a comprehensive review of both their careers (medicine and nursing). It also mentioned Doc's approaching 80th birthday, now past.

4) If you thought all our children were through college, hear this: Ellen Lee and Art Meigs's son and daughter are both starting business school, Mary (Univ. of N.H. '80) at Univ. of Md., Edward (Occidental '84) at Northwestern.

5) From the Chester, Conn., Historical Society, a lavishly printed invitation and tribute to Barbara and Ed Delaney. The society has planted a Platanus Acerfolia Bloodgood (London Plain), henceforth known as the Delaney Sycamore, on the town green. Two Prunus Sargentii (Flowering Cherry to you) have also been planted in honor of Barbara and Ed.

We have memorials in this issue.

34 RALPH K. FITCHIE

4347 Province Line Rd.
Princeton, NJ 08540

Gay and Ted Murray, after 41 years in Port Washington, N.Y., have settled in "a fine retirement community, Crosslands, near Kennett Square, Penn. . . and enjoying our life with a very stimulating and friendly group of fellow residents." The Murrys continue to keep an apartment at Gay's family farm in Mass.

Jack Palmer, Class president from 1984 to 1989, has taken a part-time job in Stamford, Conn., not far from his and Sally's home in Old Greenwich.

Lank Seibert, who has served for many years as a director of the Visiting Nurse and Health Services of Elizabeth, N.J. (he lives in nearby Westfield), is still at it, regularly attending meetings of the board.

Florence (Flor) and Mort Silberfeld celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary with a cruise around South America. They were especially impressed with "the spectacular transit of the Straits of Magellan."

Kay and Stan Williams are back in their winter home in Daphne, Ala., after their usual summer on a farm in Adell, Wisc. They occasionally see Ethel and Milt Englert and Winifred and Bill Lee Sanders.

Jack Bales, Art Lane, Bill Weaver, and Art Wood celebrated their birthdays last month (two of them were 80ths) by entertaining a happy and appreciative group of well-wishers at the Nassau Club in Princeton. Guests included: Jeannie Bales, Lonnie and Gordy Brown, Adra and Ken Fairman, Alex Keer, Nancy (the widow of Rog Kirkpatrick), Bob Kuser, Sally Lane, Addie and Ralph Ritchie, Weasel and Bayard Roberts, Margie and Frank Van Dusen, and Rosemary Weaver.

Some class!

35 JOSEPH C. HAZEN JR.

94 Essex Rd.
Summit, NJ 07901

HONORS. The Medieval Studies Library at the Univ. of Conn. has been named after Charlie Owen of Storrs, Conn., emeritus English professor and distinguished Chaucerian. . . Bill Hewitt of Whittier, Calif., has been made a diplomate of the American Board of Sexology and a Certified Sex Counsellor.

MILESTONE. '35's first child, Hugo Huettig '60, son of Ellen and Gus Huettig, is now a grandfather. He is a partner in a Boston engineering firm.

OLD FRIENDS. Many close friendships have had their origin in the matriculation of the Class in 1931, but the friendship of John Alexander and Chris Donner predates that by 12 years. They were in the first grade together in Philadelphia and still keep in close touch with each other. John's career was in internal medicine, which he practiced and taught at U.Penn. He still lives near Philadelphia in Bala-Cynwyd. Chris, too, was a professor and for a long time lived in nearby Ambler. He taught sociology at Penn State, but has long since retired to Miami, Fla.

NON-COINCIDENCE. Among the 11 undergraduates who last year benefited from the six scholarships sponsored by the Class and the families of classmates is John Frederick Weaver '92. But, believe it or not, he is not related to the late John Frederick Weaver nor to his son, John Frederick Weaver Jr.

CLASS STATS. Eight classmates have contributed a total of $125,000 to Princeton's Annual Giving in the form of bequests and life income trusts . . . 27 widows of classmates made gifts last year to Annual Giving in memory of their husbands . . . The activities of 174 different classmates have been reported in the 62 PAW columns and two summer newsletters published since Sept. 1988. The goal is 307, the current Class roll. Help!

36

JAMES Q. BENSEN
24 Aylesbury Cir., Windermere
Madison, CT 06443

Sid Silleck last June photographed Class President Paul Hancock and past presidents Seaver Jones and Gus Groel, shown above.

Decide now to attend our 55th next June 6-9. Betty Constable and Marney Brown, with help from the Menands, are planning an exciting program of events, about which we will all soon be advised. Floridian Dil Kerr is one of the first to announce his intention to attend.

Another attendee is Pete Schwartz of Johns Island, S.C., who keeps busy by teaching illiterates and working for a local soup kitchen.

Hamp Silcox is proud of his grandson Todd Crockett '92, who was starting offensive left guard and then center on our varsity football team last fall.

Last Sept., Bob Erlen and Jane flew to Rohnert, Calif., to visit Lyman Moore and Evelyn, and then went on to Lake Tahoe and San Francisco.

We regret to report the death of William George Rodgers, who died back on May 14, 1987, and that of Charles Clement English Jr. Dec. 24, 1990.

37

STANDISH F. MEDINA
250 Broadway, Rm. 2104
New York, NY 10007

John Farley's memorial, which was within the required length, mentioned his quixotic wit and gave several examples, all of which PAW in its wisdom saw fit to cut out of the Oct. 21, 1990, issue, so here they are. Enjoy. On July 14, 1945, he married Patricia Bridges and his Ten Yearbook questionnaire, under children, read, "Check again after April 15 . . . When asked why he couldn't attend the 20th, Farley took the fifth, not the amendment, not the Four Roses, but baby Mary Elizabeth. Next June expect recreation and reunion to take precedence over procreation . . . Still baking in the euphoria of our 45th, tho' nursing lacerated shins from those sharp-edged stairs at Wilcox! . . . War service was made a bit more pleasant by my association with some very swell Princeton men, who kept popping up in the damndest places."

MEDICAL FOOTNOTES. Jim Foran was back in the hospital last fall for a left-hip replacement, to be walking by Christmas, while Bud Staub came from the hospital in Oct. after his hip revision, hoping for a few more strokes on the golf course, perhaps from Johnny Byrne and Bev Warner when he sees them in Naples this winter. Don Lynch recovering from an accident totalling his new Lexus, then typhus for two months. Phil Neary with mild angina in July, not requiring the hospital.

OF GOLFERS. Snapper Long bemoans the old bicker days, particularly after a congenial golf outing with himself (Elm), Rollie Hartzell (Tower), Burt Parker (Tiger Inn) and Don Rose (Quadrangle). Marjorie and Frank Dick with daughter Betsy were enjoying a quiet dinner at Dornoch Castle, Scotland last Sept. when in walked Gus Hart with his three sons. They were doing the entire Scottish golf circuit from Troon through Aberdeen to St. Andrews and saw Percy Pyne at North Berwick. Another vacationer in Jan. 1990 was Edgar Neubouse, at Treasure Key, Abaco Island, Bahamas.

38

WILLIAM P. TAMS
Box 25217
Jackson, WY 83001; 307-733-5193

Dorr Newton has retired from the business of putting on reunions, after doing one in San Antonio for his 27th Fighter Group, which he commanded in Sicily and Italy, and a 50th for his flying school in 1989. What with his 50th wedding anniversary and our 50th reunion, he says enough is enough!

Ram de Murias reports on the reunion of the L.S.M. 500, a ship he commanded in WWII. It had a happy history; he picked her up in Houston, sailed through the Panama canal, and was half way between Hawaii and Guam when Japan surrendered. Having been in the invasions of Normandy and southern France, he was happy to have missed out on the expected invasion of Japan.

Jessie and Fred Henze left shortly after our 52nd for three weeks in Switzerland and France, playing golf and visiting some of their haunts of yore, including the house they had lived in near Fontainebleau in 1951-2, while Fred was serving as an Air Force major with N.A.T.O. under General Norstad.

But Carolyn and Ray Emrich are staying home in Bethlehem, Penn., having had to forego the Class trip to Spain because of a conflict with one of Carolyn's many volunteer duties. Ray is enjoying his third year of retirement as physics prof. at Lehigh Univ.; he has an office and laboratory where he can continue research on how the molecules behave in a drop of oil falling in air—Brownian motion, which you remember from your housemaid's chemistry course.

Anne and Bill Rudel have sold their Cape Cod place and moved to a condo in Punta Gorda, Fla. Mail address: P.O. Box 1223; zip code 33951-1223. Dorothy and Jim Kerr have abandoned the bustle of Fort Lauderdale and can be contacted via P.O. Box 296, Skyland, NC 28776.

39

RICHARD R. UHL
12 Charlotte Ct.
Briarcliff Manor, NY 10510

Honors of all kinds continue to be conferred upon our classmates. But what honor could be more deeply satisfying than that bestowed on Sam Coggeshall last Oct., when at the age of 74 he finally retired from his 41-year pediatrics practice in Morristown, N.J.? "Hundreds of his former patients," reported the N.Y. TIMES, "some still toddlers and some as old as 46, gathered with their families to honor him at a party . . . an old-fashioned party with balloons, a clown, a piano player, and a hot-dog cart. Patient families met one another and shared their memories of him, a man who not only cared for sick children but also encouraged and consoled parents, was available on Sundays and holidays and in the worrisome pre-dawn hours whenever his patients needed him."

Was this retirement party the end of Sam's active medical career? Not on your life. Since 1975, when he and Mary spent two weeks in a small village in the Philippines as part of an intl. team of consultants, they have been visiting and working with poor families in undeveloped areas under the auspices of the Inst. of Cultural Affairs, which seeks to give the villagers ideas on health and nutrition that could improve their lives. Mary is on the institute's intl. board. True to form, within a week of his retirement party, Mary and Sam were on their way to a conference in Taipei.

Closer to home, Ed Cone was honored with the A.S.C.A.P.-Deems Taylor Award for his book MUSIC: A VIEW FROM DELFT.

With sorrow we report the death of our old friend Nat Boynton. A memorial will follow.

40

BENJAMIN FULLER
6119 Vernon Terr.
Alexandria, VA 22307; 703-329-1961

1940 SKI RALLY EARLY MARCH 1991. Contact Bob Pierson 216-650-0585. Herewith an overdue report on Al Vande Wegbe's induction last May into the Intl. Swimming Hall of Fame. At the ceremony Al is flanked by Princeton roommate Bob McEldowney and Class Treasurer George Cadgene. According to Bob, "Al made the best acceptance speech of the five Americans honored, and was a real credit to Princeton and the Class." Al's past accomplishments include a 1936 Olympic silver medal; six world records; six A.A.U. natl. championships; five N.C.A.A. championships; and nine American records. Furthermore, he continues to compete in masters swimming and sets records for his age group.

Superbly organized by Dick Wells, close to 100 classmates, wives, and guests gathered for our annual N.Y.C. Class dinner in early Dec. The evening's very special treat was a delightful and thoughtful talk by Amey DeFriez, wife of Dr. Ivy DeFriez. Amey, former chairwoman of the Radcliffe College board of trustees, spoke of her warm associations with Princeton, and then discussed from the standpoint of higher education "... changes we've seen, some results, including challenges, and how and with what tools we might try to meet those challenges." She also stressed the important impact of "volunteerism" in coping with today's social and educational problems. At future dinners we will look forward to hearing of the experiences and achievements of other 1940 wives.

41

BILL WILSON
Box 1420
Bridgehampton, NY 11932; 516-537-2458

Neil Carothers has a niche in history as the person from the Natl. Science Foundation who, on Feb. 1, 1958, had the honor of informing President Eisenhower that the U.S. had put a satellite in orbit. Not a place in history books, however. Following a comedy of errors, "Ike" announced that it was Dr. J. Wallace Joyce who had told him. Neil relates that "as a dedicated Republican" his only option was to pretend that it had been Joyce—thereby missing out on a "Meet the Press" spot and the rest of the publicity hoopla. Sam Zeigler says that his Edinburgh is reputed to be the most livable city in Britain and that he'll be happy to bird-watch and/or pub-crawl with visiting '41ers. Virginia and Dave Campbell are living in a house they built in Glen Cove, L.I., where Dave is president of Nassau Cty.'s Family Service Assn. and treasurer of the Episcopal Health Services, which owns and operates two hospitals and three nursing homes. Dr. Gary Piccione still practicing Family Medicine in Manhasset, L.I. Dave Cowan, retired from teaching and running a cemetery business with his brother, Stu '39, lives in Babylon, L.I.

As of Jan. 14, we have 130 signed up for the 50th, counting these additions: W. Alexander, Angus, Bliss, Detweiler, Dey, Jean Gorman, Haffner, Hargrave, S. Hutcheson, Lanaban, Larsen, Lippincott, MacNichol, Maynard, McCandlish, McCarthy, McManus, Mead, Mount, A. Rice, Richardson, Rounds, Schmucki, Sease, Sbenk, Short, Tenney, Warfel, Weeks, and S. Young. Help Lynn Tipton by replying now.

We have a memorial in this issue.

42 ARMSTRONG HUNTER

R.R. 1, Box 250, Perkinsville, VT 05151
802-263-5361; (fax 802-263-9263)

Bob Gensler sends the sad word that Gordon Evans's widow, Doletha, died in Mass. last Apr.

Charlie Crandall was cited in a recent Annual Giving newsletter for his now-11th year as chairman of A.G. in the Essex Cty. (N.J.) region.

At '42's Jan. luncheon in N.Y.—remember, they're at noon, second Thurs. of each month, Sept. through June, Princeton Club, everyone invited—Bob Peters was guest of honor: he and Jackie are retiring to Charlottesville, Va., after holiday in France and summer on Nantucket. Paul Busse presented gifts in appropriate spirit, Ira Wheeler presented a poem similarly, and Howie Armstrong, Jeff Jones, Ray Ortelg, and Don Vreeland represented us all in extending best wishes.

A note from Knobby Rodgers in Fla. in Sept.: "Will celebrate the big 70 Nov. 29 with Kay and up to 12 children and 19 grandchildren in my great-great grandfather's house, now an inn, in Lancaster County, Penn." A Jan. report: the event was two happy days and nights with 25 family members and Matt and Rosie Gaulk, Bob and Jackie Peters, Ann [Rose] Reed, and Polly and Ed Green '40.

Jack Wuerth wrote from Mass. some months ago: "Our family all love Martha's Vineyard so much that our fourth and final daughter will come from Calif. with her fiancé and 15 friends from grade school to be married in Edgartown in Sept." That event turned out happily, too—even bringing a second matron of honor from Germany.

Random notes: Henry Frick's stepson Richard duPont '91 is '42's one remaining next-generation on campus. Len Fitzgerald writes that Frank Pyle, needing to be nearer the medical facilities in Dallas, has moved there from Kilgore, Tex. Gordon McLeland, golfing with him, reports that Jack Stevenson made a spectacular hole-in-one at Chevy Chase Club on Jan. 14.

43 JACK LAFIN

10 Vardon Rd.
West Hartford, CT 06117; 203-523-8929

Barney Williamson wrote, in a welcome Christmas card: "We're off to Tokyo for Christmas and New Year's Eve. Taeko is now Prof. Williamson in the language department of Shippensburg Univ., and Barney is the oldest grad student on the campus. "What will I do when I grow up? Plastic!"

The Class extends its belated group condolences to Hank Canda, whose mother passed away late last July, well into her 90s. Hank also received a letter from Pres. Bush, on White House stationery, expressing sympathy from the Bushes. Mrs. Canda and the president's mother were close friends in Greenwich, Conn., and often played bridge together.

Bob Hugins, back for an encore performance with the Peace Corps, spent two months in language training, then on Jan. 16, took up residence in a roundel, or mud hut, in a village somewhere in Lesotho. We don't have that address yet, but will pass it along when available.

We regret to inform you, via wife Pauline, that Jim Pittinger is ill with Parkinson's disease and a return of cancer. If you wish to drop him a line of encouragement, the address is: 20616 Audette, Dearborn, MI 48124.

Bud Rogers writes: "Published a new book in 1990, ORLANDO SHOOT-OUT, the story of my three-year war with Ted Turner and Pat Robertson over an Orlando TV station. RAW mentioned book but did not review. Vantage Press, New York, $14.95."

Living the life of a typical retiree in Ocala, Fla., Frank Crawford, usually not so laconic, messaged: "Jack—still hanging in there. Haven't seen anyone!"

Dick Pond, reminiscing about the late Bud Lewis, recalls that he roomed with Bud freshman year at 16 Dickinson St.

Remember P.C.N.Y. Class dinner Thurs., Feb. 28, 1991.

44 HERVEY S. STOCKMAN

1041 Matador Dr., S.E.
Albuquerque, NM 87123; 505-296-7057

January is a nifty time to think about the past as well as the future. A warm moment for me occurred some years ago when Pril and the late Pem Drinker flew into New Mexico to visit Jan and Andy Jones in Santa Fe and then peek in on a fading Dick Vaughan. Pem recounted an infectious tale of a ship loaded with baled wool which went down in a storm about Cape Cod, never to be salvaged. Pem said that raw wool had unbelievable durability and might well have value if recovered. He knew where the vessel lay and his dream was to salvage her cargo. Whatever happened? Pril, is there more to this fascinating story? While I'm at it, I urge you ladies who take the RAW to write with word of what you're doing.

I've come across a clip on Nils Kindwall from the Jan.-Feb. 1989 NATURE CONSERVANCY magazine announcing Nils as a recipient of a 1988 Conservancy Oak Leaf Award for his successful efforts in negotiating an end to a long-standing threat of development within the Devil's Den Preserve. Nils was able to eliminate all preserve in-holdings and involve the town of Weston, Conn. (his home) as an active participant in the conservancy's efforts at Devil's Den.

DUES NEWS: Moose Meese says he'll be there, New Orleans that is, for the Apr. 4-7, 1991, '44 mini. Pete Hazekwood, on Aug. 11, 1990, after 60 years of golf, finally hit the perfect shot, making a hole-in-one on a 199-yd., par-three hole, using his three-metalwood. Ken Gilpin's son Jack (Harvard '73) is an actor currently in "Reversal of Fortune" and doing well. Son Kenneth is a financial reporter with the N.Y. TIMES; and son Tommy '75 and his wife, Jean '75, live close by in Boyce, Va., with Tom working for his Dad in Lenoir Co. Inc. This fall, Ed Bennett was appointed chair of psychology/sociology dept. as he begins his 17th year at Orange Co. Community College, Middletown, N.Y. Last spring he received the State Univ. of N.Y. Chancellor's Award for Excellence in Teaching. Ed and Inge have grandchild #9, Jake Zachary, born this past June. Number ten is expected shortly.

Peace.

45

WARREN W. EMMON
U.S. Courthouse, 915 Lafayette Blvd.
Bridgeport, CT 06604

No, it isn't the sun that is dazzling Bill Douglas; it is the bright light in the eyes of his new bride, Adele. Bill and Adele were married the day after Thanksgiving and are about to relocate from the Chicago area to Colorado. Bill notes that he had to miss the 45th reunion for a very good reason, since his buddies from the tenth mountain division, Italian Campaign, were holding their first reunion in 45 years, and that had to be a command performance for Bill. Not incidentally, the new Mrs. Douglas is a Princetonian of many years standing, widow of Phil Manker '39. We hope Bill will promise to make the 50th, if not before, to introduce Adele to the Class.

Speaking of reunions, two more who did not sign the book have turned up, so their presence at the 45th is now duly noted. John Law and Jack Schmid were both on hand last June. Don't be bashful—if you did not sign the book and your name has not yet appeared in the column, please let the secretary know about it and the oversight will be corrected.

Returning to wedding news, Dr. Frank Brumback reports that he has left the ranks of widowers and has married Dr. Elizabeth Gurganus, who was a bridesmaid at his wedding to Mary. Frank and his new bride have both finished distinguished medical careers and enjoy retirement in N.C. Bruce Silver reports from Akron that he has married Jean Dunn Smith. Remarriage of Stormy Knight is reported, but no details yet. We wish all the newlyweds much happiness.

We have a memorial in this issue.

46

ROBERT CAMPBELL JR.
Investors Security Services
636 Morris Tpk., Short Hills, NJ 07078

I ran into John Coward in ladies' lingerie at Lord & Taylor the other day. John looked happy as a clam surrounded by panties and bras, as far as the eye could see. He recounted to me how last summer on his way to Martha's Vineyard he met up with Marty Horner. To verify this momentous occasion, the two are pictured here.

Bob Donovan has retired from the Smithsonian, where he was advertising manager of the institute's magazine and a founder of that publication in 1969. His timing is perfect, for Bob is Mr. 45th Reunion Chairman. Chuck Schibener was short term in the ranks of the unemployed after his employer of 28 years belled up. Undaunted, he started his own sales distributorship and is only "semi-retired." Another in the retired battalion is Allan Gilbert who retired as V.P.-manpower development at Emerson Electric in St. Louis. He is still a consultant to Emerson and hopes to teach in a graduate business school. He also promises to be in evidence at our June reunion. Phil Bell, who moved to Boston Univ. not too long ago, continues to enjoy teaching and writing. He and June will travel around the world this winter during which trip he will be a resident fellow at Auckland and Canterbury universities in New Zealand. Don Sprague is backing into retirement, and in the process he has an interesting involvement with a tennis complex in Nottingham, England "which should be U.K.'s largest outside of Wimbledon." Jim Shenfield and Mary were in attendance at the Agatha Christie 100th Anniversary bash last fall in Europe, but he says he couldn't find Agatha anywhere.

We have memorials in this issue.

47

ASA BUSHNELL
Box 7034
Tucson, AZ 85725; 602-741-4715

Retirement living obviously agrees with Jeane and Graeme Whyllaw, shown enjoying their trip to San Francisco five months ago for '47's Megablast. If they can tear themselves away from their pool and boat in Cape Coral, perhaps we'll see them again seven months hence at the Kohler/Chicago Kaper.

The Class of 1946 has instituted a memorial fund with a touching twist: If there is no available or eligible undergraduate scholarship recipient who is related to a member of '46, trustees "search for a '45 or '47 connection because of our close friendships in those classes." Thus, such an award has been made to Peter Forsey's son, Charles '91, a history major and the editor of the PROGRESSIVE REVIEW. If any '47er would like to send a memorial gift to honor a specific '46 friend, the fund address is P.O. Box 2011, Princeton, NJ 08543.

Two other classmates still have offspring on campus. Louise Andrews '92, daughter of Peter, is one of the six Andrews children who took Joan and Peter for a "surprise" cross-country ski holiday to celebrate their 35th wedding anniversary New Year's Eve. Stephen Garrett '92 is the son of Tex.

The grandkids just keep a-comin'. Jack Madden says John Patrick Wineman, born Dec. 13, is his fourth grandson. Orse Munn has a new grandchild—a girl with quite a handle: Sascha Desaix Munn.

Coordinator Bob Woblforth reports the happy highlight of the Jan. 4 edition of the "First Friday" Princeton-area luncheon: the re-emergence of Tom Zawadzki, who relies on a cane but is "recovering nicely" from two serious strokes. Other rejoicers at the Next Chapter Cafe near Pennington: Jack Hughes, Sam McKeown, Ted Palmer, and George Pearson.

48

DAVID K. REEVES
106 Snowden Ln.
Princeton, NJ 08540; 609-924-3340

As they say in Hebrew: B'lee Ayin Ha-rah. Which roughly means that may our mentioning all these good happenings not bring the Evil Eye upon us. And the best good happening is that our own Rabbi and Princeton's first, Joel Dobin, is happily ensconced in Livermore, Calif. He has found a part-time semi-retirement pulpit (read full-time work for half-time salary) and a growing, active congregation with a busy religious school. The Temple in Amarillo fell on hard times along with the Texas economy, which triggered the move to Livermore. To add to the good happenings Joel is planning some teaching at the local community college and is completing a new book on the concept of balance—balance in personal life, in community life, in international life. His concepts spring from Jewish mystical writings as found in the Kabbalah. All he needs now is a sprightly title.

Og Tanner has two books coming out in Mar.: the N.Y. BOTANICAL GARDEN: AN ILLUSTRATED CHRONICLE OF PLANTS AND PEOPLE, a celebration of N.Y.B.G.'s 100th Anniversary, and BARNES, AN AMERICAN ENTERPRISE, a historic profile of the Bristol, Conn. manufacturer. He is working on HUDSON VALLEY GARDENS: AN ILLUSTRATED GUIDE TO HISTORIC LANDSCAPES FROM NEW YORK TO ALBANY. Og is just the person to call should you want your corporation, institution, or region immortalized.

Ken Fitzgerald is working on his autobiography: GREAT PRISON BREAKS FROM BELFAST TO BEIRUT INCLUDING KENYA.

49

ALVIN R. KRACHT
Limerick Lane Poetryworks®, 5 Birch Ln.
Chappaqua, NY 10514; 914-238-0352

Profound apologies are in order! These columns run five weeks after I file them, and we're supposed to be allotted 375 words. Since '49 has a lot of news, I submit at least that much, and sometimes, when other classes run "lean," we get lucky. I've been checking to see that our columns are always present, but haven't been re-reading them thoroughly enough—the editors have been nipping at our copy. We've lost submitted items from Nimick, Jarrell, Lipkin, Winchell, Coyle, Johnston, M. Brock, and W. Doyle. More critical, notices of the deaths of Ray Compton (died Aug. 12) Bill Hilliard (July 1), Francois Houghton (Oct. 3), John Kunkowski (Sept. 24), John Schuler (June 23), and Harry Hoyt's dad, Class of '19 (Nov. 5) were lopped off the bottom of various columns. The editor states that prevailing opinion is that "live" news is more time-sensitive than "death" news. Sad. A Class memorial to Ray did appear Nov. 7. All I can do is apologize, shorten our columns, put the death info nearer the top, and make sure I re-read each. Nuts! You guys who were cut get priority in appearance, starting now—I'm running the items with any updating received since, via A.G. or dues flaps.

Frank Jarrell writes: "Getting covered up with grandchildren—four in all, ages one to six. They really have made this a happy year for us. Our Labs are getting older, now have retired from field trials and hunting tests. Still working as hard as I have to at Williams Printing Co., and enjoying life and family." And Gus Nimick tells us: "One of the great pleasures here is being treasurer of the Princeton Club of Sarasota and Manatee Counties, Fla. (Don't misread that statement with respect to 'being a pleasure'—the Honor System still prevails!) I note that '49ers, heretofore sparse, are gradually settling in the area, at least as 'snowbirds.'"

With great sadness we record the death of Jim Blessing on Dec. 17, 1990, at his home in Washington, D.C. A Class memorial will follow.

50

PETE BUCHANAN
151 West St.
Beverly Farms, MA 01915; 508-922-1650

Bert Wolfe, a G.E. veteran based in San Jose, received the Walter H. Zinn Award for outstanding contributions to the advancement of nuclear power. He was honored by the American Nuclear Society for his knowledge and leadership in the field of nuclear science with the observation that he had worked in almost every phase of nuclear energy, from reactor design to fuel supply to waste management to development of new reactor concepts. The award was made at the summer meeting in Nashville, Tenn.

Also recently honored in Nashville was Hugh Morgan, who was recognized as 1990 distinguished alumnus of Vanderbilt Law School. Since his 1987 retirement as vice chairman of Sonat he has served Birmingham in a number of ways and is currently chairman of the Natl. Bank of Commerce. Fellow law school alumnus Vaden Lackey promised to attend the awards ceremony to report on whether H.J.M. was properly introduced to the assembled crowd as Coonhead. Another Birmingham attorney, Tom Carrubers, was the graduation speaker at the Univ. of Montevallo. He spoke on the need to take a chance for a good cause without being concerned that you might fail, citing the Birmingham mayor's plan to provide voluntary affirmative action.

Sidney van den Berg was awarded the Killam Prize of the Canada Council and the H.N. Russell Lectureship of the American Astronomical Society.

Many of you undoubtedly saw Dave Billington's name more than once in the N.Y. TIMES in Nov. A feature concluded that Dave, who is a faculty member in the architecture dept. as well as engineering, has been successful in putting engineering in every student's curriculum. He received one of the $50,000 Charles A. Dana Awards for scholarship and teaching that enlighten liberal arts and engineering students about the significance and beauty of modern technology. The same day the TIMES, on a separate page, carried a report on Phyllis Billington's lecture and piano recital, entitled "Chopin—Poet and Patriot."

51

RICHARD K. PAYNTER
49 Wilson Rd.
Princeton, NJ 08540; 609-921-6720

Life for these '51ers will get a jump-start at our 40th: Dave Adams, Albert, Alexander, Dan Anderson, Bards, Birmingham, Biggs, Burkelman, Cabot, Close, Coleman, Colwell, Cover, Currey, David, Davison, Degener, Dodge, Downs, Driver, Eddy, Ellcott, England, Finney, Freeman, Frey, George Gaines, Gambee, Ganoe, Goldman, Griswold, Hall, Hamill, Hammer, Happer, Hardie, Helm, Herrin, Hoffberger, Holstein, Hoyt, Iler, Ill, Iz, Joline, Waring Jones, Kain, Klipsstein, Koch, Kurrus, LaViers, Lee, Logan, May, John Mead, Mott, Art Mudge, Andy Neely, Orser, Patrick, Post, Rafner, Rea, Rheinstein, Jud Rogers, Jim Rose, Don Scott, Semontie, Shafer, Shaver, Sbeedy, Cul Smith, Spencer, Sullivan, David Syles, Taggart, Ted Thomas, Thorpe, Van Vleck, Vivian, Walstrum, Nick Wilson, Cab Woodward, Ralph Woodward, Wes Wright. The total, as of Jan. 12, is 176. Our record-breaking goal is 250.

"Life Begins at the 40th" June 6-9

A nominating committee (Chandler, chairman; Bud Brown; Bogle; Ganoe; Rube Shaw) formed under our new by-laws by President Wright has named the following slate of 1991-96 Class officers: Bill Brown, president; Nick Wilson, V.P.; Dick Paynter, secretary; Joe Howell, treasurer. They will take office at the end of our 40th, unless floor nominations reach Wes by May 15 with at least 25 classmates' signatures per office.

This year's recipients of the William Wilson Miller Class of 1951 Scholarship are Edmund Polubinski '92 and Camille Pacheco '94. Mr. Polubinski comes from Concord, Mass., went to Groton, and is majoring in anthropology. His interests: heavy-weight crew, harpsichord, backpacking. Ms. Pacheco comes from Puerto Rico. She is an equestrienne and a volunteer in a program of therapeutic horseback riding for the handicapped.

52

DON OVERHOFER
4630 30th St., N.W.
Washington, DC 20008

Ray Baldwin has a new place in the world oil scene as manager of Intl. negotiations for Maxus Energy of Dallas, formerly Diamond Shamrock. "After-the-cent-oil-crash-in-Texas & elsewhere," or ATROCITE as Ray puts it in acronym, he formed Lonesome Petroleum Ltd., but found it not very hearth warming. Working for a big company, he finds the intl. scene fascinating and challenging—as well it has been lately.

Also in Tex., Dave Smith is chairman for annual giving of the Princeton Alumni Assn. of Houston. Dave's daughter, Mara '88, was an attendant at the recent wedding of Bill Pierson's daughter in Chicago.

Dick Kazmaier will accept the 1989 "Distinguished American of the Year" award from the Walter Camp Football Foundation at a banquet this month. Kaz was unable to appear at the awards banquet last year.

Bill Vega has retired from the aerospace industry to Durango, Colo., where he has built a home overlooking the Animas River and hopes to enjoy nature, skiing, hiking, and relaxing.

Dave Freeman recently became the grandfather of two future tigresses: Hannah Rose George, daughter of Bari (Freeman) '83 and Jacob George '82; and Sonya Freeman, daughter of Phillip Freeman '75 and Dr. Jill Goldstein.

Jim Crutcher also became a grandfather of Elizabeth Crutcher, daughter of Jim Jr. '79 and his wife, Jill. Jim Jr. is an orthopedic surgeon in Seattle.

Reinhard Loosch, still working for the German govt., has been busy with German unification following the recent dramatic changes.

53

PRINCE J. LOWENMAN
Box 18
Blawenburg, NJ 08504

Word from the upper Midwest, Bill Ogden reports on a local Class reunion luncheon last Nov. in Minneapolis. Joining Bill were Tom Brandt, Hal Pilskan, John Selover, Tom Jamison, Dick Cantwell and John Cochran. Unfortunately, Ed Robrecht was out of town and unable to attend. He notes that many had not seen each other since graduation. Hal, by the way, is pulling up stakes there and relocating to Martha's Vineyard.

A recent article in the N.Y. TIMES tells us that Tom Hoving, former parks commissioner of N.Y.C. and director of the Metropolitan Museum of Art, has stepped down as editor-in-chief of CONNOISSEUR magazine. D. Claeys Bahrenburg, president of Hearst Magazines, the owner of Connoisseur announced that Tom would remain with the organization as a consultant "because of his expertise in the art world, he will be a consultant to me and work on some other magazines where his unique knowledge will be of use."

One of our classmates is making a major contribution to our goal of becoming energy independent. In 1988, Sun Co. spun off its exploration unit, Oryx Energy, and Bob Hauptfuhrer, one-time president of the parent, became chairman. Bob saw this as an entrepreneurial opportunity, and indeed it was. Since taking over, he has reorganized the company, cutting discovery costs by two-thirds and greatly expanding oil and gas reserves. Since the spin-off, Oryx shares have doubled in value.

54

DICK STEVENS
1 Valley Sq., Ste. 101
Blue Bell, PA 19422

When you think of Don Reutlinger, you think of a tough, aggressive N.J. basketball center constantly moving towards the basket regardless of who gets in the way. Surprise! Ruet is now in the placid backwoods of New Salem, Mass., working a 100-acre farm squeezing sap from rock maple trees (2000 taps) and producing the finest maple syrup in the state. Fifty gallons of sap equals one gallon of maple syrup and it all happens (or doesn't happen) over a four day period in late Mar. or early Apr.

Good weather and good luck will do it again this year for '54's master sugarmaker.

It was 40th-reunion time in Minneapolis for the Blake School, and they came from all over . . . Bill Bergbruts (Toronto), Kelth Fischer (N.Y.C.), Larry Corbett (San Francisco), and Doug Lowe and Bob Slocum (local). That's an impressive '54 gathering for a great prep school.

Steve Chase, prof. of mathematics at Cornell, is on his way to Vienna to visit his daughter Lisa, who is a dancer in the European company of PHANTOM OF THE OPERA. Paul Kopperl is a money manager in N.Y.C., but his passion is serving as a director and co-chairman of the nonprofit Manhattan Theatre Club. Each season the M.T.C. presents nine plays at the City Center Theater in N.Y. They also sponsor 12 readings a year by novelists and poets. M.T.C. has a reputation for producing challenging, quality plays with such household names as Holly Hunter, Glenn Close, and Colleen Dewhurst. Challenging plays produce challenging budgets and with federal funds drying up, Paul and the other directors pledged "northward" of $500K in an aggressive four-year campaign to raise $9.8 million. After all, M.T.C. is worth it . . . it's a national treasure.

55

MIKE ROSEN
40 E. 88th St.
New York, NY 10128; 212-722-7447

Nancy and Bill Ames are glowingly shown at our record-setting 35th reunion.

The William B. Nash and John Alan Swabey Memorial Trophies were presented to Naiden Kremenliev '93, Brian Donohue '91, and Robert Hutchinson '90. An unconfirmed, anonymous report indicates that Hutchinson was the first person in the DeNunzio Pool.

Steve Glaser continues to stay busy at I.B.M., concentrating on the microcomputer industry, and stays fit on the tennis court. Daughter Ann is selling computers for I.B.M. in Miami and exceeds her objectives on a regular basis. Son Gary, a flight instructor and commercial pilot, is currently looking for another flight job, either with corporate or charter planes. Gary can be reached at 203-374-2324.

An interview with Stan Rubin in the N.Y. POST highlights his career and leadership in the preservation and presentation of "swing." Stan appears Wednesdays from 9 P.M. to 1 A.M. at the Red Blazer Too, 349 West 46th St. in N.Y. His band is preceded by the Tigertown Five from 5:30 to 8:30.

From our very first column in the PAW, written by Joe Hochstein on Sept. 23, 1955 (Joe's quaint telephone number was ALgonquin 4-7309): "John Morton was discovered in Washington Sq. on his day off from temporary employment as a reporter for the Stamford ADVOCATE. Noel Stace and Pratt Thompson are sharing an apartment and working for Irving Trust Co. Hunter Ingalls, Dick Rauls, and Don Miller spent the summer at a N.H. girls camp—250 women and nine men in the place—this after four years at Princeton must represent two extremes of something or other. Hunter instructed in boating, Dick in riflery, and Don in nature and hiking."

56

DAVID M. JORDAN
410 Rodman Ave.
Jenkintown, PA 19046

Old Nass reminds us that there are only 100 days left until our 35th reunion, which will take place, no matter what Reunion Chairman Bob Rodgers (who probably thinks Sept. 7 is Pearl Harbor Day) tells us, on June 6-9.

Dave Phillips hasn't checked in for some time,

"Do You Want Peace of Mind in an Uncertain Market?"

Philanthropy and peace of mind? Certainly. A growing number of alumni and friends have invested in Princeton's future, and their own, by establishing a life income trust. Here's what their gift "gives" them:

- Life income from a fund that is managed as part of Princeton's highly successful endowment
- An income tax deduction—and a lower tax bill
- The ability to increase current income with no capital gains cost

You can establish a life income trust with a gift of $10,000. Write or give us a call. We'll be glad to describe how a Princeton-managed trust can provide peace of mind and for the University's future.

Planned Giving Program

Princeton University
Box 39
Princeton, NJ 08544-0039
(609) 258-6318
(609) 258-6320

Director

Daniel H. Jamieson, Jr. '74

Associate Directors

Jane Rae Bradford
Robert B. Turner

but he reports that he visited Dean Holbrook and his family in N.Y. in early Apr. Dave would be happy to see any classmates passing through the Denver-Boulder area of Colo. Also out west now is Alex Uble, the new headmaster of Rowland Hall-St. Mark's School in Salt Lake City. "A nifty school," Alex says, "and a nifty city."

Diamond Communications has recently published Dave Jordan's new book A TIGER IN HIS TIME: HAL NEWHOUSER AND THE BURDEN OF WARTIME BALL, a look at the career of the old Detroit lefty and the times in which he pitched, the 1940s and 50s.

Our Reunion Attendance Committee wants to thank these networking teammates for our strong response in registrations for the 35th: Cornelius Bond, Laurie Castleman, Collins Denny, Joe DiRenzo, Charlie Elliott, Lew Galtch, Ben Hill, Chipper Hoff, Whitney Kerr, Dick Kluger, Sol Rosenthal, Fred Sater, "Black Jack" Thompson, and George Tsilibes.

Bob Card had a significant 1990: daughter Cynthia was married, son Andy '85 became head coach of lightweight crews at Yale, and Bob himself started a new dental practice in Kennebunkport.

57

JACK SCHLEGEL

Box 6177, Yorkville Station
New York, NY 10128; 212-427-3575 (H)

Freeman Bunn: "Had a terrific time at Shep Davis's Aug. wedding to Joanne Blair in Va. Beach. Ruthmary and Tom Deuel were among the celebrants.

Our Oct. trip to Russia with the Alumni Council group happily included Jeanne and Chuck Ellis as well as Harriet and Howie Nelson.

Howard P. Colboun: "Had some great trips in 1990, including rafting the Grand Canyon for 20 days; horse-packing in the Tetons for a week (great trout fishing), and ranch riding in Tucson, Ariz., mountains; powder skiing in Alta, Ut.; bicycling on Me. coast; sailing a 45-ft. sailboat through the Grenadines with some scuba thrown in. Yes—I work hard, too. In my 20th year doing "Wall Street Week," the most popular program on public TV."

Hodding Carter: "Let's see. I'm a grandfather. Daughter Catherine Carter Sullivan '80 produced Margaret Elizabeth Sullivan in Jackson, Mich. She is a beauty, naturally! Had a good sail in Aug. with Eldon Mayer in Penobscot Bay, but missed his earlier cruise with Ted Foote."

ONE YEAR AGO: '57's mid-winter reunion was "sponsored, supervised, coordinated, and otherwise run by Sally and Eldon Mayer," according to Ann and Fred Reynolds. Also present: Shirley and Jan Brecknitz, Nicole and Ken Demarest, Florence and Philip Felig, Lili and Bill Goldstein, Judy and Peter Gott, Teresa and Chuck Hauser, Gerry and John Henneman, Nan and Bart Reitz, Mary and Lang Stevenson, and Georgia and John Storm. "Tenure as wives ranged from 30 years to 4½ days—Susan and Horsie Zweiback," said Fred.

58

RALPH L. DEGROFF

7 Grace Sq.
New York, NY 10028

Dave Badger, an executive with Mars Corp. (M&Ms, etc.), is now living in Vienna, where he has responsibility for Eastern Europe.

David Carr has been assigned as economist to the U.S. AID Mission in Honduras. On Oct. 6, 1990, David's daughter Cynthia '85 was married to Mark Scherer in Cambridge, Mass. Both Cynthia and Mark are nearing completion of their Ph.D. degrees in molecular biology at M.I.T.

Jan Holmquist, after massive layoffs at his past employer, Bozell Advertising, has become advertising director for an auto discount firm—the oldest and largest in the country. Jan's relatively recent partnership with a Julliard School of Music graduate has led to 64 concerts in the Southwest. Quoting from his brochure, "Over 100 million viewers have watched Jan play the piano. The occasion: a global telecast from the 1988 Superbowl, where 88 pianists performed on 88 grand pianos. That spectacle capped a large intl. career. Jan has toured four continents, during which he represented our country at the Tchaikovsky Competition in Russia. London critics praised his debut at the famed Wigmore Hall. In Manhattan, the N.Y. TIMES spoke highly of his pianism at Lincoln Center's Alice Tully Hall."

Scottie Sudduth reports a fortuitous meeting last summer with Charlie Cebestnut in Seattle, where he discussed with Charlie, a prof. at the Univ. of Washington Medical School, his publishing of very important articles on calcium metabolism.

Howard Zeff's son Dan '90 is a student at Indiana Univ. Law School, while son Andy is in the Class of 1992 at Haverford College.

59

JAY M. SEGEL

11321 Rolling House Rd.
Rockville, MD 20852

If you were tuned to CNN on the night of Jan. 16, watching events unfold in the allied strikes against Iraq, you heard the voice of Don Kirk live from Baghdad. Don, a foreign correspondent for USA TODAY, was phoning in a story from the U.S. embassy when the first wave of aircraft struck. When the line went dead he took a taxi to the Al Rishad Hotel and made his way to a CNN audio broadcast facility on the 14th floor, where he was immediately put on the air. We heard him at approximately 11 P.M. Eastern time (5 A.M. Baghdad time). Don's story, under the headline "Air raid cuts off Iraq dispatch," and his subsequent observations in the streets of Baghdad, appeared a few hours later in the morning edition of USA TODAY.

Who's the fellow standing next to Rear Admiral Hank McKinney? None other than Ernest Borgnine, upon whom Hank bestowed the title of honorary master chief during Milwaukee's annual Circus Parade last summer. Bob Taylor, who was a guest of "the admiral," reports that his old roomie "hasn't changed a bit."

Elibu Inselbuch forwarded an obituary notice for Axel Peterson, who died last Aug. at the age of 80. Axel had retired as a proctor from the University in 1975. Memories of Axel, clad in snap-brim hat and raincoat, are indelible in the memories of most of us. With his passing goes a part of our Class.

The Class mourns also the passing of two of its own: Dick Furman, who died Dec. 8, 1990, and Dick Johnson, who died Dec. 22, 1990. Memorials will follow.

60

MASON LOWANCE

100 Lincoln Ave.
Amherst, MA 01002

Pictured here are Ron and Peggie Hillegass talking with George Lowell of Longmeadow, Mass. Ron and Peggie are expert sailors and cruise the New England coast from their home in Rhode Island, when he is not in the operating room repairing fractured limbs. Another doctor, Don Casino reports from New London, N.H., that he took fourth place in the Natl. Sprint Triathlon Championships in Montreal, just 50 seconds out of second place. On the executive front, Rob Warne has been appointed president of the Korea Economic Inst. of America in Washington, D.C. Adlai E. Stevenson (not '60) is on his board, and the K.E.I. promotes Pacific Basin economic opportunities, coordinating American business interests with Korean management and government agencies. Thomas and Flore Trumpy send as their new address, 23 Ave. Ernest Cambier, B-1030 Bruxelles, Belgium (Tel. (32-2) 216-2059) where Tom is an attorney, or "international legal counsel." He offers to provide advice for "anyone seeking wisdom on EEC-92" who will fax questions ahead!! Finally, the sixth annual Sons and Daughters Dinner on Alumni Day will be held on Feb. 16, 1991. These gatherings have been immensely successful in the past, and the 60-plus siblings from our classmate families usually come in force. In Apr., John Cartier will host the annual N.Y.C. Class dinner, with guest speaker Senator Kit Bond. Be there!

61

GEORGE BRAKELEY III

96 Winfield Ln.
New Canaan, CT 06840

1961 THIRTIETH 1991

Most of us are fussing about tuitions or grandchildren or maybe even retirement. Phil Johnson, on the other hand, is just getting started; Kathy presented him with Nicole Michelle Johnson last Oct. 10. After many years at Rockefeller Univ., George Scheele became a professor of medicine at Harvard Med in 1989. He serves on the M.D.-Ph.D. program selection committee, while continuing his research into how genes regulate pancreatic adaptation in response to changes in diet and hormones. He notes with sadness the death of his colleague Harris Funkenstein last Apr. Last year Lowell Feuster participated in a memorial service in Rochester for James Morris Hatch '62, who, Lowell reports, matriculated with us.

MITRE Corp. has named John Quilty to be senior V.P. and general manager of its Washington "C3" Center. Since joining MITRE in 1962, John, pictured here, has become "an expert in strategic command, control, and communications systems" (hence "C3").

John Schulz continues as senior environmental counsel for Bechtel in San Francisco where "name confusion and spelling problems abound, with more prominent alumnus George Schultz '42 also in residence." John lives in nearby Marin County, where "quiet garbage service and great curbside recycling are special, but lily-white racism in the primary schools is a real negative."

REMINDER. Class dinner, Mar. 7, 1991, P.C.N.Y.

62

ERIC W. JOHNSON

2221 Craig Ct.
Vienna, VA 22182; 703-280-9080

A BEACON: Winslow Myers, head of the art dept. at Bancroft School, this past May received the fifth-annual Beacon Award from the Unitarian Universalist Church of Worcester, Mass. Winslow is an activist in the intl. Beyond War Movement, which stresses taking the initiative to resolve conflict before it leads to violence.

A BANKER: John Dunn a year ago Dec. moved to Price Waterhouse after a long career in commercial and investment banking. As a senior managing director, he is responsible for corporate finance and mergers and acquisitions for a region stretching from Philadelphia to Miami. "Atlanta is still home."

A FEW LAWYER BOOK MAKERS: Several years ago, as those of you who memorize each column may recall, Al Barr wrote a handbook for Maryland lawyers called MARYLAND ESTATE PLANNING, WILL DRAFTING, AND ESTATE ADMINISTRATION—FORMS. The book was sufficiently successful to cause the publisher to approach several lawyers to modify it for use in their states. It turns out that John Clymer, with two law partners, did a two-volume version for Mass., which was published in 1989 by Aspen Publishing, known mostly for publishing medical books. John is still at Hutchins & Wheeler in Boston after 25 years, and visited with Dave Aufdenschnepper last summer, when Dave was up from Atlanta visiting John's firm on a law case. On a separate note, Forde Medina has been elected to the prestigious American College of Trial Lawyers.

EARTHSHAKING NEWS: Van Sloan reports that repairs were finally completed to his home in Portola Valley, Calif., about Reunions time last year, after it had suffered substantial damage from the Oct. 1989 earthquake. "We believe more than ever in earthquake insurance!" To get away, Van and his wife took their four children to Hong Kong and Bangkok at Christmas 1989 and to the south of France last July.

63

SELDEN S. EDWARDS
Elgin Academy, 350 Park St.
Elgin, IL 60120

CLASS TRAVELERS: Alan Chesler reports, "Ran 4:05 in the 1990 N.Y. Marathon. My wife, Carol, and I had an exciting four-week trip to South America in July, including Easter Island, Machu Pichu, the Nazca Plains, and the Galapagos Islands. Still an attorney with AT&T, specializing in real estate and environmental matters." Jim Swire sends along a report of a reunion last July in Stockholm of Bruce Hermelee, Dimmy Goldberg, himself, and their wives. Earlier in their trip Jim and his wife, Edie, had arranged dinner with Gro and Jeff Wood in Oslo, meeting at that time the Wood daughters Kirsten '91 and Karen (Yale '94). Jim is a N.Y.C. lawyer with Townley and Updike. Mike Otten is not planning a trip himself but reports that his son, a Princeton freshman enjoying first-year Japanese, is looking for a way to get "practical exposure this summer in Japan."

And finally, when delivering their oldest son Bob to U.Va. this fall, Carol and Dave Gouldin stopped off in Charlottesville to visit Sunny and Dave Ibbeken, who were just getting ready for a trip to Europe. Ibbeken, you will remember, is exec. director of the U.Va. Law School Foundation.

John Andrews still works with the Strategic Decisions Group in Menlo Park, Calif. Bruce Florsheim continues as director of long-range planning for Boeing in Seattle. He lives on Mercer Island. And Bill Hill is director of the Center for Applied Math at Allied Signal in Buffalo, N.Y.

The Class of 1963 Scholarship is currently going to Gregory I. Sewell '93, a sophomore from Friendswood, Tex., who plans to be a computer scientist or musician after graduation.

Eric Shults will represent the Class in the Alumni Day memorial service, a sadly poignant one for us since we lost six classmates in 1991: Tad Ballantine, Steve Macaleer, Frank Nesbitt, Frank Engel, Paul Lippincott, and Clarke Worthington.

64

JOTHAM JOHNSON
Box 12
Blawenburg, NJ 08504

Pat and Dave Driscoll cordially invite all classmates and their wives/friends to a cocktail party on Thurs., Feb. 28, from 6-8 P.M. at 141 W. 17th St., Apt. 6-E, in Manhattan. If you can make it, give the

A Desert Tiger

John Hurley '86 (left) was commissioned a second lieutenant by his father, Brigadier General Alfred Hurley '61, in 1986.

PHOTO COURTESY OF PRINCETON UNIVERSITY ARMY R.O.T.C.

ARMY FIRST LIEUTENANT JOHN K. HURLEY '86 had almost finished his four-year R.O.T.C. commitment when, in mid-August, on his last day of active duty, he learned that his division was being sent to the Middle East. Without hesitating, he decided to extend his time on active duty in order to go, too.

Hurley, age twenty-six, is a son of Dr. Alfred F. Hurley '61, a retired Air Force brigadier general and the president and chancellor of the University of North Texas. At Princeton, the younger Hurley majored in history, was a member of Tower Club, and was chairman of The Daily Princetonian. Since graduation, he has fulfilled his R.O.T.C. obligation as an artillery officer in South Korea, and, more recently, at Fort Hood, Texas. He plans a career in business, but for the time being has put off entering Stanford Business School, which accepted him for its class of 1992.

In a recent article in the Dallas Morning News, Dr. Hurley was quoted as stressing the sense of obligation his son felt: "From talking to him and the letters we've received, he had strong feelings about camaraderie . . . he believed he could help and was needed by those in his unit." The only word the Hurleys have received from John are two letters, dated December 26, 1990, and January 3, 1991. In his December letter, which was sixteen pages long, Hurley reaffirmed his belief in the U.S. commitment of forces to the Persian Gulf—that Saddam Hussein would have to be stopped sooner or later. He detailed the troops' daily routines and some of their pressures under which they live—coping with the climate, being separated from families, anxiety over the uncertain future.

In a letter to PAW, his mother, Johanna, wrote, "John's dad, brother Al '76, and sister Claire '82 agree that John's decision to serve in the Gulf Crisis exemplifies the motto, 'Princeton in the Nation's Service.'"

—Nuala O'Connor '89

Driscolls a call at 212-924-5719.

According to an article in the Dec. 11 WALL STREET JOURNAL, Recognition Equipment, Inc. in Dallas expected to report its fourth quarter loss narrowed to about $14 million. Robert A. Vanourek, co-C.E.O., was quoted as saying that after a year of re-structuring to pursue the fast-growing image-processing market—in which documents and graphics are stored and retrieved electronically—he expects the company to return to profitability in 1991.

Briefest of notes from Paul Bjorkholm, who has recently relocated from Boston to Newport Beach, Calif., as director of R&D. for E.G.&G./Astrophysics; Norman Brenner in Mount Vernon, N.Y., who has two sons in school: Lucas (3) in pre-K and Daniel (5) in kindergarten; John Proctor, who has changed law firms in Washington from Bishop, Cook et al to the local office of Chicago's Winston & Strawn; and David Watt, who writes that he was named assoc. prof. of management at the Univ. of N.D. in Grand Forks and is enjoying teaching courses in engineering management, and cold weather, no doubt.

Bob Bedford writes that he has recently resigned "my high-stress job as chairman of anesthesiology at Sloan-Kettering in favor of the bucolic life in Charlottesville. I'm teaching part-time at U.Va. Medical School and doing a little private practice to cover the kids' tuitions... Mostly, however, Faith and I are trying to smell the flowers and otherwise participate in meaningful activities."

"In the interest of being around to watch Karen Elizabeth Rothschild (born Mar. 5, 1989) grow up, I have lost 90 pounds," writes Elliot Rothschild from Philadelphia. "I feel terrific and weigh about 40 pounds less than during football and rugby days!"

65

J. MICHAEL PAREN

Winthrop, Stinson, Putnam & Roberts
1 Battery Park Plaza, New York, NY 10004

Dave Vail, a member of the Bowdoin faculty since 1970, has now assumed the Adams-Catlin Chair of economics at that distinguished institution. His inaugural lecture, in which he made a case for greater social control over technology, was entitled, "Sustainable Agriculture: Ecological Vision of Technological Fix?" This demonstrates that he preserves one of the most priceless gifts of a Princeton education, i.e., the knowledge that anything worth listening to or reading in the academic realm requires both a colon and a question mark in its title.

Early indications that there may be life after life are found in communiques from Gus Blanchard and Morgan Shipway. Gus has just retired from A.T. & T. and has started a six-to-nine-month sabbatical before beginning a new career, "feeling great and looking forward to the future." For his part, Morgan ran a 3:05:22 N.Y.C. Marathon on the blistering day last Nov., finishing in the top 4% of our age group. "This may be part of a 'mid-life crisis' as well, but I am running out of secondary school teaching, after rounding off a quarter of a century, with a won't-go-away case of weariness of adolescents. Though I don't know what's after NEXT June, I'm in cheery, optimistic spirits and looking forward to fishing for that next, still enigmatic, career. Why not?"

Those who remember Dave Madison's near-miss with mortality (see previous column) will be gratified to hear more positive news from his 1990 curriculum vitae: "Jan. 26, 1990: Annette Madison born (better late than never) and July 9, 1990: new job as financial controller of N.M.B. Bank Chile (Dutch)."

66

JEFFREY M. McCOLLUM, A.T.&T. Products
5 Wood Hollow Rd., Rm. 1J19
Parsippany, NJ 07054

The members of the Class of 1966 seem to be a peripatetic lot. The most recent surge of Class dues envelope flaps is filled with comings and goings.

So HERE IT GOES: Carlos Outiano, after 24 years abroad, has returned to the U.S. and settled in Camden, Me. He is president of Varied Directions Intl., an independent film producer specializing in PBS documentaries. His firm's first major series, "Making Sense of the Sixties," began airing in Feb. on PBS. Carlos is also a grandfather (as reported by Turk Thacher). Is he our first?

'66's "Once in a Lifetime" 25th reunion marks another opportunity to make sense of our part of the 60s. Catch up with friends, rekindle memories, and use the panel discussions, focused on life issues of those in their late 40s. Then watch PBS.

COMING TOO. One person who will clearly benefit from Reunions events in making sense of the 60s is Wallace Judd. He is "looking forward to talking to anyone who can tell me anything about those years 1962-66. Was I always that unconscious?" Although our years at Princeton may be foggy to Wally, the years since have been marked by prolific activity. After taking his Ph.D. at Stanford, he has written books (25), taught school (5 years), married (once), fathered (twice), and given birth to two companies—one offering computer training programs and one in software performance testing.

GOING. Brian Dickson was recently appointed Canada's ambassador to Guatemala and El Salvador and has moved his family to Guatemala City. He plans to be in Princeton for our 25th. Mark Fleder is off to rural Mexico as a youth adviser to 30 high-schoolers who are going to build a house as a part of a mission project.

COMING TO PRINCETON. Mike Barrett, Dallas Dickinson, Wil Kaffenberger, and George Weikner report that their son, son, daughter, and son, respectively have been accepted to the Class of 1995 under Princeton's early action program.

67

PETER J. TUNICH

6503 Mascfield St.
Worthington, OH 43085

The two young ladies on the mountaintop are Katie and Lizzie Prenke, and grace this year's holiday greetings from the land of Twin Peaks.

Considerably elsewhere on the continent, we have news from John Pitts, who is "having a great time getting settled south of the border" as first secretary at our embassy in Mexico City. John will be "honchoing" our participation in free-trade talks, and invites classmates to call anytime through the embassy. Out in La Cañada, Calif., Van Standhe writes that he is living "with wife, Barbara, her daughters, Sara, Rachel, and Courtney, and our daughter, Caroline." He is now asst. manager of Greater L.A. Agency of CIGNA Individual Financial Services Co., and credits Nai Phillips and John Fowler "for bringing me back" to the Princeton fold. After 18 years in Calif., Rich Plumridge has moved to New Canaan, Conn., and now heads up the N.Y. office of a new law firm, Brobeck Hale & Dorr Intl., "working on domestic and intl. corporate law matters, particularly those involving technology companies." His son, Andrew, is now a freshman at Dartmouth.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO. V.P. Humphrey tells Pakistan that U.S. will resume aid. In India, 34 national leaders charge Gandhi's rule is "constitutional dictatorship." Wilt Chamberlain breaks N.B.A. career scoring record with 20,884 points. Petula Clark's "My Love" takes top spot from Beatles' "We Can Work It Out."

68

JOE KLUMBE

Hartford Hospital, 80 Seymour St.
Hartford, CT 06115; fax 203-524-7057

* Craig Stone unveiled his entry for the 25th reunion uniform at his hunting cottage in the Penn. woods on the occasion of the Princeton-Bucknell game. Fashion consultants on hand included Bob Maulerstock and Mary, and Bill Eberington and Moonie. I can forward your critiques or your own suggestions to the Reunion Committee for consideration.

Marty Bauer and Ann have been busy in the Ore. woods. Marty has been real estate manager with Portola Lumber Co. for 17 years. Portola is selling off its 4,000 acres of timberlands and recently sold its rental properties to the Bauers. Marty is now landlord of apartment projects, office buildings, retail space, and commercial land in southern Ore. Inquiries encouraged.

Bob Hodge recently moved to Charlottesville after three years as program director at the Kellogg Foundation. Bob is now V.P. of the Commonwealth Health Alliance, pursuing a new concept in managed healthcare utilizing a primary care pathway.

69

PAUL GEORGE BITTENFIELD

1854 Keys Crescent
Cincinnati, OH 45206

NEW HEIR-RIVALS: Mike Porter and family welcomed second daughter Sonia Teal last July 25. Marian and Dick Bott announce the Dec. 28 birth of daughter Christina Stewart. The little girl is Honorary Classmate Harold Bott's first grandchild.

MUCH MOTION: Jane and Ted Garcia have moved to Minneapolis with Grant (5) and Erin (nearly 3). He is with Grand Metropolitan PLC as V.P.—Operations Strategy for Food Sector.

John Raintree notes his move to Bangkok, where he has taken a position as the network social scientist in the Asian Multipurpose Tree Research Network. "Bangkok is an exciting place to be—even after spending the last ten years in Nairobi. We get back to the States every summer. Does anyone know of a nice vacation spot on the coast of Maine?"

Multi-mile move for Bruce Everett, who notes his transfer from Gillette, Wyo., to Hong Kong with Exxon Coal and Minerals.

On leave from Boston Univ. is Steve Crane, who is with Barbara and their Rusty (11) and Britt (7) in Washington, D.C., with the Assn. and Foundation for Health Services Research. He looks forward "to more frequent visits to Lake Carnegie."

70

JAN KUMBE

113 Laurel Rd.
Princeton, NJ 08540

From Arnie Holberg, head of the Louisville Collegiate School, comes a report on Meir Ribalov's role as "writer in residence" where "he did a splendid job of helping our students develop and hone their skills as playwrights." Another source reported that Meir was "still getting by writing plays, screenplays, books, and whatever comes to mind... also teaching at Fordham and at the School for the Visual Arts, playing softball, and 20 years later, still avoiding law school."

ANOTHER HEADMASTER IN THE NEWS is David Hicks, usually found at the St. Mark's School in Dallas. However, last summer he was in the Aegean Sea pulling an oar aboard a reconstruction of a fifth-century B.C. Greek trireme. For those who skipped Prof. Frank Bourne's courses, this is a wooden ship, powered by three banks of oars, 120 feet long and weighing 40 tons, and driven by 170 oarsmen. Dave is well prepared for this naval duty—last spring he won the master's skulls competition at the Heart of Texas Regatta.

Sharp-eyed John Rutchie sent along a wealth of clippings on various Class members, including the following: John Hilley, formerly Democratic staff director for the Senate Budget Committee, has been named Chief of Staff for Senate Majority Leader George Mitchell (D-Maine), which the Washington Post calls "one of the most important staff positions in Congress." D.C. Superior Court Judge Henry H. Kennedy Jr. also appeared in the Post after he halted court proceedings and threw out a videotaped statement of the defendant, citing a Supreme Court ruling that had been issued less than 24 hours prior.

71

STUART E. RICKERSON

P.O. Box 3108
Del Mar, Ca 92014

Dale Neuburger has done it again. At the annual meeting of U.S. Swimming, Indiana Univ.'s Natatorium, managed by Dale since the early 1980s, considered one of the "fastest" pools in the world, was selected by a wide margin over Nashville, Tenn. to host the 1992 Olympic Team Selection Meet. The spokesman for the site selectors was quoted in the press as saying, "We're really looking forward to going back to Indianapolis. There's nothing like a Dale Neuburger meet. He's got the Midas touch. We just hope the gold carries over to Barcelona (the site of the 1992 Summer Games)." Yet to be selected later this spring are the sites for the diving and synchronized swimming Olympic Trials, which were held at Dale's facility in 1988. No doubt, Dale is hoping for a clean sweep. Dale also consulted with Princeton's athletic dept. and architects on the new Ralph DeNunzio '53 Pool, where 1971's Class dinner will be held during our 20th reunion. His suggestions resulted in several significant improvements that were not obvious, but based on Dale's vast experience on what can improve the performance of swimmers, divers, and meet directors.

IN PRINT: Linda Carroll published a book with G.K. Hall in the entitled ANGELO BEOLCO IL RIZANTE, about the 16th-century comic playwright. She also published an article on gender and power in Italian Renaissance culture recently. Watch for Jeff Marshall's book on community investment at financial institutions. It is due out this spring. Jeff says that writing it would have been impossible "without my personal computer."

72 KIP HEWITT

21 Wildcat Rd.
Darien, CT 06820

NEW STUDIES: Jim Weinrich is managing the expenditure of $4 million in AIDS research funds at U.C.-San Diego, where he works as a research biologist. In his spare time he ponders such questions as "Why are there foot fetishists but not hand fetishists?" On the other hand, it doesn't affect Joshua Greene. Joshua is an economist with the Intl. Monetary Fund in Washington, D.C. He has been studying currency convertibility issues with respect to Eastern Europe, particularly Romania. Joshua is also active in community affairs, serving on the boards of directors of his homeowners assn. and the Jewish Community Ctr. of Northern Va., where he also chairs the committee on adult education.

NEWSMAKERS: Dick Hinchliffe and Katherine Margaret Stone were married Dec. 29, 1990 in N.Y. Katherine is special-events manager of the March of Dimes; Dick is news director at WNYC public radio.

A recent WALL STREET JOURNAL article on Japanese acquisition and investment activity in U.S. companies included extensive quotes from Dan Schwartz. Dan is managing director at Ulmer Bros., a N.Y. investment bank, and provided insights into the changing buying strategies of the Japanese.

NEW BOOKS: Gayle Delaney has finished a new book, BREAKTHROUGH DREAMING: TAPPING THE RESOURCES OF YOUR 24-HOUR BRAIN, scheduled for printing in Apr. by Bantam. Gayle is now working on another book, DREAMS AND SEXUALITY, so if you have any memorable dreams to offer, give her a call. A chapter entitled "Sexual Dreams of the Class of 1972" might help sales. Meanwhile, Gayle says she recently had a wonderful dinner in Lyon with Steve Pausner and Steve Clausen.

Harold Bursztajn and Rob Hamm co-authored MEDICAL CHOICES, MEDICAL CHANCES, which is now being reissued by Routledge. Harold was just promoted to clinical associate prof. of psychiatry at Harvard Medical School, where he continues to do-direct the Psychiatry and Law program of the Mass. Mental Health Ctr. Harold and Patricia are expecting their first child in Mar.

73 R. GREGORY PLIMPTON

Box 14545
North Palm Beach, FL 33408

Jon Farber is in Alexandria, Va., doing general pediatrics, with some consulting work in developmental pediatrics. He has written a chapter on autism and communications disorders for the recently published DEVELOPMENTAL DISABILITIES IN INFANCY AND CHILDHOOD.

If Jon could just pick up Deb and Dick Walker's account in nearby Potomac, Md., he'd have it made. There are four little Walkers now, and they just keep coming. Pictured are Jessica (4), Brian (7), Lauren (born June 25, 1990) and Matthew (9). While there are lots of them, Dick reports they are much too healthy to generate any serious medical revenues. Matthew has started at Landon School in Bethesda, so he rides to work with Dad.

Other recent additions to the '73 family include: William Hudson Kapler, born Apr. 15, 1990, to Lee and Diana; Carsten David Blackmon, second son to Dan and Claire on May 31, 1990, in Princeton, Fla.; Alexis Bard Johnson, firstborn Feb. 9, 1990, to Tim and Valerie Wiley.

Dave Martin reports in on his and Sally's sixth-born, David Alvah, born Oct. 6, 1990. Dave is practicing law in Chicago with Righeimer, Martin & Cavanaugh. The family has moved to the suburb of Barrington Hills, home also to Rob Mancuso and his various and exotic car dealerships.

74 JOHN STRYKER

15 Woodbine Rd.
Kendall Park, NJ 08824

RED LETTER DAY: Dec. 2, 1990, is a date Jeff Rosenzweig is not likely to forget. First, he received a medal from Sen. Dale Bumpers as one of eleven Arkansas Heroes of 1990, selected by ARKANSAS TIMES magazine. An attorney in Little Rock, Jeff was honored for his work in fighting the death penalty. He has handled twelve death penalty cases. Two hours after receiving his award, Jeff got married to Frances Fendler, who teaches law at the Univ. of Arkansas-Little Rock law school. Shown here at the wedding are Mike McCaffery '75, Mike Quilter, Frances and Jeff, and Mal Howard '75. Also on hand were Nick Allard and James Aronson '71.

NEWS FROM AROUND THE GLOBE: Martin Schell has completed a program of study at the Asian Institute of Gemological Sciences in Bangkok, and has now joined the staff there. Tigers in Thailand are invited to contact him at the AIGS. Martin might take you to one of the Princeton-Harvard-Yale lunches that are held at the Regent Hotel. Martin reports that Princeton usually has the largest contingent there, and that it sometimes includes Terdkiat Vitayayasi, who works for Hong Kong Bank.

Scott Endsley has received a doctorate in epidemiology, and is now working with Pritech Project, which is for intl. diarrhea disease control. He came to Pritech after a stint at the Centers for Disease Control, where he served as a consultant to the Ministry of Health in the Central African Republic.

75 MELISSA KISER MESROBIAN

940 Riverside Ave., Berkeley Square
Trenton, NJ 08618

Janet Morrison Clarke has been elected senior V.P. in the documentation services group of R.R. Don-

Grant A. Peacock '46
Kathleen Peacock

GRANT A. PEACOCK Inc.

Fine Jewelry
Jewel Counselor
Estates Purchased

Suite 2600
450 Park Avenue at 57th St.
New York, N.Y. 10022 (212) 753-4640

Wanted to Buy

Highest prices paid
for American and European Art,
including paintings, watercolors
and drawings, sculpture and prints
from 18th century to present.
Please contact Stuart P. Feld, '57

Hirsch & Adler
GALLERIES INC.

21 E. 70th St. NY 10021 (212) 535-8810
Fax: (212) 772-7237

SUMNER RULON-MILLER III '61
261 Madison Avenue, Suite 1200
New York, New York 10016
212-661-8660
executive financial planning
RULON-MILLER, INC.

The JOE BROWN Studio announces ...his artistic legacy

Princeton Professor Emeritus Joe Brown created over 400 pieces of sculpture which are found in both private and public collections all over the world. Certified bronze sculptures from original molds are available in limited editions. The studio and gallery is open by appointment only.

The Joe Brown Studio • Timothy Maslyn, Resident Sculptor & Curator
RD 1, Box 122-A
Princeton, NJ 08540
609-921-2868

Google Joe Brown STUDIO

Princeton Clubs and Alumni Associations

PAA OF FT. LAUDERDALE: Wed., Feb. 20—Prof. of Physics George Reynolds will speak at a dinner. Please call Stephen C. Buckley '76 for info. at 305-492-4509.

PC OF SOUTH FLORIDA (Miami): Thurs., Feb. 21—Prof. of Physics George Reynolds will speak. Please call Nancy Copperthwaite '78 at 305-579-0444 for info.

PC OF ST. LOUIS: Sat., Feb. 23—The club will host a seminar on the topic "Tradition and Modernity in the Near and Far East." Prof. of East Asian Studies and History Martin Colcutt and Prof. of Near Eastern Studies Norman Itzkowitz '59 will speak. For info., please call Tom Deuel '57 at 314-362-8807.

PC OF CHICAGO: Sun., Feb. 24—The club will host a seminar on the topic "Tradition and Modernity in the Near and Far East." Prof. of East Asian Studies and History Martin Colcutt and Prof. of Near Eastern Studies Norman Itzkowitz '59 will speak. For info., please call Doug Schmidt '81 at 312-630-5680.

PAA OF WORCESTER CITY: Fri., Mar. 1—Prof. of English Bill Howarth will speak at the annual dinner. For info., please call Ted Gallagher '67 at 508-756-6264.

PA OF NEW ENGLAND: Mon., Mar. 4—Prof. of English Bill Howarth will speak at a luncheon. Please contact Frank Giovino '56 for info. at 617-329-0001.

PC OF SAN DIEGO: Fri., Mar. 8—President Harold T. Shapiro '64 will speak in San Diego. For info., please call Tilden B. Reeder '68 at 619-286-1010.

CALIF. REGIONAL CONFERENCES: Sat., Mar. 9 and Sun., Mar. 10—Please save these dates as the PC of Southern Calif. and the PC of Northern Calif. will each host regional conferences. Featured speakers include: President Harold T. Shapiro '64, Dean of Admission Fred Hargadon, Professor of Slavic Languages and Literatures Caryl Emerson, and Professor of Astronomy James Gunn. Calif., Ariz., and Nev. alumni and parents will be invited and all Princeton alumni and parents are welcome. For info., please call Elizabeth Hunt in the Alumni Council at 609-258-3351.

Barge Beautiful Canal du Midi or Burgundy aboard "La Tortue".
Cruising Spacious, comfortable. Large sundeck, lounge, 3 twin staterooms/baths. Notable cuisine, 10-speed bikes, minibus. Seasoned, agreeable British crew. Weekly charters Apr.-Oct. Color brochure: "LaTortue", Dept. P, Box 1466, Manchester, MA 01944 nelley & Sons Co., North America's largest commercial printer. Janet, who is also Princeton's A.G. chairman, joined Donnelley in 1978.

Michael Wymes is a child psychiatrist in the U.S. Army, running a busy consultation-liaison service at Letterman Army Medical Center in San Francisco.

Lynn Patne writes, "It's been a big year, starting with a chance to see Princeton beat Michigan State (where I work) in late Dec. 1989. 1990 included knee surgery, getting tenure, and summer research projects in the U.K., Hong Kong, and China, the highlight of which involved spending a month in rural Shandong, P.R.C. East Lansing isn't directly on anyone's route, but we welcome visitors who get lost in Michigan!"

Robert Devaty has received tenure in the Dept. of Physics and Astronomy at the Univ. of Pittsburgh. Franklin Lowe is now associate director of the dept. of urology at St. Luke's Roosevelt Hospital Ctr.

The beautiful baby pictured is Songkanda, now 10 months, daughter of Usa and Bantboon Lamsam. Her name means "a beloved girl who flourishes," and Bantboon notes a resemblance of that phrase to the Princeton motto. David Cheng has relocated to Rochester, N.Y., where he is practicing cardiotoracic surgery and is on staff at the Univ. of Rochester Medical School.

Also in Rochester is Bill Watson, assistant prof. in psychiatry and associate director of the Family and Marriage Clinic at the Univ. of Rochester Med. Ctr.

76 JAMES L. MARKETOS
 Lane & Mittenfior, 919 18th St., N.W.
 Washington, DC 20006

Connie Melrose was married to Mark Beatt on Sept. 15, 1990, in N.Y.C. Yeates Conwell's third child, August Slade, was born May 31, 1990. Ed Krauland is partner at the Washington, D.C., law firm of Steptoe & Johnson. He is a second dan in tae kwon do and an officer and director of the Salzburg Seminar Alumni Assoc. Marcia and Russ Haven, who live in Sherman Oaks, Calif., have a new daughter, Laura, born Apr. 6, 1990. Lisa Lee and Alan Morgan have added a son to the family, William, born Feb. 12, 1990, joining sister Grace.

Sue Haig is in the third season of her three-year appointment as staff conductor of the Calgary Philharmonic Orchestra. On Dec. 21, 1990, Mike McCurry and his wife Debra (Colgate '81) received an early Christmas delivery, a son, William Henry. Laura Petrucci was made partner at the Marketing Corp. of America last June. Peter Shapiro has 2 sons, Daniel (5) and William (1). Russell DaSilva and his wife, Peggy, live in N.Y.C. and have a daughter, Ellen. Russell practices intl. financial law as a partner of Christy & Viener. Peggy is an investment banker with Chemical Realty Corp.

Steve Elson began a new job with Colonial Realty of West Hartford, Conn., where he does commercial real estate acquisitions and syndications. In Dec. 1989 Mark Soich returned to the Prudential Investment Corp. in Newark, having spent the prior four years running Prudential's London investment office. Kendall Crotius has been at J. Walter Thompson in N.Y.C. for eight years. She is now the account director on Ragu Foods and runs the training program for entry-level professionals. Continuing a '76 tradition, she's been named graduate secretary of the Triangle Club, following Victor Simpkins and Charlie Stone. She lives in Brooklyn with her husband Stephen Stout, an actor, and their son Trevor, born Mar. 28, 1988.

77

JAMES BARNON
 15 W. 72nd St., Apt. 24-B
 New York, NY 10023

THE EYES HAVE IT—Maryellen McShane has been awarded master's degrees in vision rehabilitation and in education for the visually handicapped by the Penn. College of Optometry in Philadelphia. Robert Kleiner has been promoted to asst. surgeon on the retina service at Wills Eye Hospital, also in Philadelphia. He is also on staff at several other hospitals there, including the Scheie Eye Inst., and is a clinical asst. professor in ophthalmology at U.Penn.

COLD, HOT AND IN BETWEEN—Debbie Clarke Modrow, husband, Mark, and children, Andy (7) and Hannah (5), send warm greetings from Alaska. That's no oxymoron: she'd welcome visitors at any time of the year. "The winters are long and wonderful for skiing, running dogs, or other snowy escapades," she says. "Of course, the fishing and back-country travel can't be beat in the summer."

Joanne Muratori has moved to the Orlando, Fla., area. She endured those long summer days with the help of central air-conditioning, "a luxury we never had in Boston and N.Y.C., which could use it, if only for one week." Kerry Lanham now lives in Gaithersburg, Md., with wife, Laurie, and the two avid PAW readers pictured: David (4) and Kristen (7). Kerry, a financial market regulator at the U.S. Treasury Dept., is still a runner and competes in a dozen 5-K or 10-K races a year.

AH, NOSTALGIA—This item is for those of us who can't quite believe that our 14th reunion is just around the corner. Elise van Oss went to Wellington, New Zealand, in Dec. for her twentieth eighth-grade reunion.

78

BOB PESKIN
 Box 886
 Middlebury, VT 05753

WEDDING BELLS: Deborah B. Oliver was married Oct. 13, 1990, to Steven James Sartorius, in Princeton. Deborah, who earned a master's in architecture at Princeton and a law degree at Columbia, is an associate in the N.Y. law firm of Dewey Ballatine. Her husband, a graduate of the Univ. of Virginia and the holder of an M.B.A. degree from N.Y.U., is a V.P. and options trader at the Security Pacific Merchant Bank in N.Y.C.

Kate O'Brien and Bob Peskin were married the following Sat., Oct. 20, in St. Paul, Minn., the bride's hometown. They met at the June 10, 1989, wedding of Kate's cousin, Tim O'Brien '81, who sang in the Nassoons with Bob. There was lots of singing at the reception, with Nassoon alumni and the Fat Tones, the professional a cappella trio Bob sings with now, making the trip to Minnesota for the festivities. Pictured (l-r) (standing): Leslye and Joel Rood '80, Francine and Tim O'Brien '81 (best man), Travis Emery, Jonathan Greenberg, Linda Eastman Hammond '79, Bill Hammond '77, Kevin Massey '79.

Frank Plant '34, Mary Plant (the bride's aunt), Steve DeCoster '55, Dave Dieck. Front row, Tim Heidmann '80, Julia Heidmann, the bride and groom, Eugenie Dieck.

Congratulations to Ann Daniels, who has been honored for her pro-choice activism by her local Planned Parenthood chapter and San Francisco's N.O.W. chapter, the latter naming her an "Out-standing Feminist Activist." Ann was also singled out by Congresswoman Barbara Boxer at her annual "Women Making History" celebration.

79 MARTHA KRAMER
27 Northhill St., Apt. 6-R
Stamford, CT 06907

KUDOS: Rene Gonzales was recently promoted to the academic rank of associate prof. of anesthesiology and critical care medicine at the Univ. of Pittsburgh Medical Center, where he was already chief of the anesthesiology dept. He also is the proud father of a second daughter, Christina. David Foster has been voted a partner in the law firm of Latham & Watkins. He has been a commercial litigator in the Chicago office since 1984, and his wife practices environmental law. Gerry Breuster has been elected to the Md. state legislature, joining our classmate, Bob Ebrlich. Glenn Paul, founder and president of the Clancy-Paul/Valcom computer co., has been named V.P. of the product strategy group at its parent company.

HEARD FROM: Nick Sciacovelli writes that he is working for the Hongkong and Shanghai Bank in N.Y., where he recently transferred from the treasury systems to corporate banking areas. He and his wife, Linda, have two daughters, Kristina (5) and Erika (18 mos.). Armand D'Accordo is now at Bankers Trust in N.Y., having left Citibank. After living Munich for two years, Mel Mummert has returned to the U.S. to run the U.S. office of a German investment bank. Laura Godfrey Janda is an asst. prof. in the Univ. of Rochester foreign languages, literatures, and linguistics dept.

REPRISE: Contrary to an earlier column, Charles Riley has not left the magazine business; he is a writer and editor for ART and AUCTION, as well as an English prof. at Baruch College. In further news, he has recently married Ke Ming Liu, an English prof. that he met abroad.

80 RIK PARKER
25 Farmhouse La.
Furlong, PA 18925

NUPTIALS: Valerie Winters passed along this photo from the June 2 wedding of Jonette Nagai to Stephen O'Brien (Harvard '83) in Roslindale, Mass., showing Valerie, Stephen, Jonette, and Susan Lipincott Ludwigen. Valerie is a senior production editor for AMSE Technical Publishing in N.Y.

The not-so-little guy pictured here is Jonathan Whalen, son of Susan Mlot and Samuel Whalen. He's ready to follow in dad's footsteps as an oarsman—intrepid in the water and doing chin-ups on the shower railing already. Look at those biceps!

After eight years in Europe, including an M.B.A. from INSEAD in France, Jonathan Sibley now works at American Express in N.Y.C., which he confirms is dirtier, noisier, and much more fun than Switzerland. Edith Canter keeps herself happy and busy in Chicago representing plaintiffs in commercial class actions (securities fraud, consumer fraud, etc.), working with a feminist advocacy group, and going to lots of theater and concerts. Patricia Thomas notes that talking to prospective members of the Class of '95 while working on the San Diego schools committee is amusing. David Gorchov is now an asst. prof. in the botany dept. at Miami of Ohio, where he continues his research of forest regeneration in the Peruvian Amazon. Marc Safran and family have moved from Baltimore to Chicago to Peoria, Ill.

81 JEAN AMABLE TELLJOHANN
50 Riverside Dr., Apt. 9F
New York, NY 10024

Congratulations to Emily Preyer Fountain and her husband, Richard, who had a girl, Mary Norris, Aug. 21, 1989. Emily and Richard are both lawyers in Raleigh, N.C. Michael Rivers, M.D., and Magda Barini-Garcia (Yale '79) have twin sons, Justin Albizu and Drew Alejandro, born Sept. 10, 1989. Michael has a retina fellowship in Iowa City; however, he and his family will move to the Washington, D.C., area in June 1991. Kirsti Abo writes that Susan Reidy Forrow had a baby girl, Melissa Reid, in Sept. 1989. Ruth Hobler Joachim had her first child, Katherine Windsor. Katie was born Sept. 11, 1989. Andrea and Glenn Tongue had a son, Gregory Matthew, Sept. 29, 1989. Margaret Baldwin Dozier and her husband, John, had a baby boy, John Edward ("Teddy"), Nov. 7, 1989.

James Parham III and Christine Rose Parham '80 have a daughter, Christine Elizabeth Marie, born on Apr. 24, 1990. Jim completed his doctorate in church music at Northwestern in 1988, and is now director of music at Edison Park Lutheran Church in Chicago. Jim also teaches at St. Gregory's School, an Episcopal boy's choir school. Christine is home as a full-time mom.

Please send information and photos to June and Larry Fletcher-Hill for our tenth reunion directory. It will be a wonderful opportunity to update classmates on your activities over the last ten years, unconstrained by the space limitations of this column.

82 TERI DOOLEY KOGUT
12409 Sadler Lane
Bowie, MD 20715

We have at least two '82ers who regularly compete in grueling triathlons. They are Ed Sberline and Amy Snyder. Pictured is Ed's finish at the Ironman Triathlon World Championships in Kona, Hi., Oct. 6, 1990. He swam 2.4 miles, biked 112 mi., and then ran 26.2 mi. His time was 11:31.43, placing him 517th out of 1350 competitors. Ed is an asst. prof. of philosophy at the Univ. of Wyoming in Laramie. Amy said she caught the "bug" when she was living in Marin County, Calif., after graduation. Now she's in Boston (after receiving her M.B.A. from Stanford) working for Braxton Assoc., an intl. management consulting firm specializing in strategic development. Her job takes her from Pawtucket to Paris and points in between.

Thomas C. Edwards is managing an aerodynamics research branch at NASA Ames Research Center. He's still globetrotting, most recently to India and Nepal. Tonya Chisolm Miles graduated from Wharton in May '87 and received her M.B.A. in finance and strategic planning. She's accepted an appointment as director of strategic planning for Baltimore City Public Schools. In Oct. 1989, Tonya married Harold Miles.

Jose Nicot reports that Luigi Campana was appointed director of general services for the City of Newark. Jose is studying at the New School for Social Research and hopes to get his graduate degree in June, 1992. This past fall Ken Boese started a Ph.D program in computer science at U.C.L.A.

83 GAIL FRANCK
345 West 87th St., Apt. 3F
New York, NY 10024

April Oliver married Jay Schulken Mar. 24, 1990, at the Chapel. Princetonians at the Prospect House reception included: (l-r, standing) Vanessa Wendenburg, Alan Questel (P.U. theatre professor), Ruffin King '75, Susan Kellie '82, Louisa Kellie '89, Andrea Nelson, Seth Harrison, Wade Hampton King '77, Vera Trojan '82, Eu Franle, and (seated) April and Jay.

Debbie Principato Lindsey and Brink Lindsey '84 announce the birth of their son Matthew Brinkley Lindsey Oct. 15, 1990.

Bill Van De Weghe writes that he is now located in San Diego after living in four different states and in Germany. (West at the time.) Bill is an attorney with Klinedinst & Fliehm, with a civil litigation practice. He'd like to hear from any classmates in or traveling through the San Diego area.

This little guy is Matthew Bret Herbst, born Dec. 4, 1990, to Jeffrey Herbst and his wife, Sharon Polansky. Jeff is now in his third year as an asst. professor at the Wilson School and in the politics dept. His book

STATE POLITICS IN ZIMBABWE was recently published by the Univ. of California Press. Sharon (Ph.D., U.N.C.-C.H.) is a V.P. in a local Princeton market research firm.

84 TIMOTHY C. WU
Beacon Court, 175 Beacon St., Apt. 413
Somerville, MA 02143

NOW THAT YOU MENTION IT, I THOUGHT IT REMINDED ME OF THE MAPPLETHORPE EXHIBIT... Naomi Yavneb Shattenkirk sent in this photo of her daughter Shoshana with the considerate instructions that, "If you're worried about possible withdrawal of N.E.A. funding from the PAW, crop the picture; and if I get arrested for sending in photos of nude babies through the mail, I'll let you know so that you can print it." Naomi and husband, Ray, live in Berkeley, where Naomi teaches at the Univ. of California, and Ray composes music. Shoshi, as the baby is called, spent most of her pre-natal nine months in Rome, where Naomi was on a Fulbright Scholarship studying Renaissance tempresses at the Vatican. Naomi writes that as a result of her stay in Italy, "I became determined to have a girl when every single museum guard said, 'I bet you're hoping for a boy.'" She adds, "Please tell anyone who

Young Alumni Activities

PC OF NEW YORK: Mar. 7 & Apr. 4—Thursday Night Club—Young alumni get-together in the Tiger Bar & Grill. Mar. 18—Movie Night—REVERSAL OF FORTUNE, 7:30 P.M. Free.

PA OF DELAWARE: Second Thursday of each month Happy Hour at Water Works Cafe. For more info., please call Tracey Morgan '86, 302-761-9432.

PA OF NEW ENGLAND: Mar. 8-10—Young Alumni Ski Trip, Waterville Valley, N.H. $150 includes lodging, lift tickets, breakfast & lunch for two days. Contact Adrienne Della Penna '88, 617-861-8254, or Heidi Ludtke '89, 617-868-7808. Mar. 27—Boston Alumni Clubs Volunteer Opportunities Night at Rabb Planning Center, the Garage—3rd floor, Harvard Square. Contact Sarah Helm '89, 617-868-7808, or Mary Hermann '89, 617-628-8825. Contact Debbie Bredael at the Alumni Council with notices of events for inclusion in this column. Please submit info. at least six weeks prior to the event. Call or write: the Alumni Council, Maclean House, Princeton Univ., Princeton, NJ 08544; 609-258-3353.

needs advice on being pregnant and/or finding toilets in Italy to contact me."

MORE GOOD NEWS . . . Celebrating their first anniversary next month are David Kalmar and his wife, Lianna. The couple was married on Mar. 17, 1990, and now reside in N.Y.C., where David is working on his Ph.D. in psychology from Yale, and Lianna, a graduate of Yale Law School and M.I.T. '86, works in the intellectual property division of Fish & Neave. David sends this picture of the wedding showing (l-r): Michelle Browdy '86 (Yale Law '90), Lianna, David, and Victor Gonzalez, who is doing his residency in ophthalmology at Doheney Eye Inst. in L.A.

85 ROB JENAMER
1578 Oak Ave., Apt. 1
Evanston, IL 60201

Anatomy of an Engagement

The pace with which this Class becomes engaged and married is Olympic. Recently a column staffer queried as to how it happens. We immediately dispatched a reporter to investigate.

In Nov. Jerry Rizzleri secretly disclosed an intention to propose to Miss Melissa Dinardo. In a dubiously romantic, but decidedly covert move, Jerry chose Paris as his venue for proposition. Our trusty reporter, wearing false nose and glasses, followed four rows back on the plane.

Jerry, who originally met Miss Dinardo in Tribeca's Raccoon Lodge, selected a French restaurant this time. "It seemed to fit," he says, although originally I considered issuing an ultimatum from the top of the Eiffel Tower. There was no way she could refuse, but then I remembered that I'm afraid of heights. Our reporter, this time cleverly disguised as a waiter, delivered a crepe suzette for two just as Jerry entered into his proposition babble. "Will you . . . uhhh, how old did you say . . . ummm I mean burrrb . . . I'm martin used . . . you know?" (ring).

We know not whether through sympathy or amusement that Miss Dinardo accepted the blubber. Jerry proudly recounts, however, that "afterward we strolled along the Seine with our pants rolled up. Things were going great until I stepped on a piece of glass and cut my foot. I spent the next week in the hospital nursing the infection."

Now back stateside, far from clean, well-lit Parisian nights, Miss Dinardo looks forward to a lifetime of Mets baseball with Jerry the Romantic. "He says we might even go to spring training in Tampa next year," she laughs.

86 SALLIE KIM
26934 Dezhara Way
Los Altos Hills, CA 94022

By now you should have received the registration packet for our fifth reunion, June 6-9, 1991. If not, please call Esther Hsieh at 212-735-5734. We have many events planned from Thurs. night to Sat. night. Check-out from on-campus housing is Noon on Sun. (June 9), so please make plans accordingly. It's still not too late to register for the fifth! Please mail your completed registration packet to Esther at 205 E. 95th St. Apt. 12G, N.Y., NY 10128.

Pictured here is Beth Broman and her husband, Martin Appel. Beth and Martin were married Aug. 5, 1990, and Beth will now be officially "Elizabeth Miriam Appel Broman." Beth is finishing her doctorate in mathematical sciences from Johns Hopkins, but spending the year at Cornell, where Martin is a post-doctoral fellow.

Beth also reports that also at Cornell are Nibal Wijeyesekera, working on his Ph.D. in electrical engineering, and Peter Wayner, completing his Ph.D. in computer science.

Canadians Greg Gilbooly and John McKinlay studied for the Ontario Bar together after graduating from law school. Also in Canada is J. Brian MacFarlane, who is with a Vancouver law firm after graduating from McGill Law in 1990.

Regina Thomas and Rose Pinkney are roommates in L.A. Regina received her M.B.A. from U.C.L.A. and is working at Columbia Pictures, and Rose is working for Twentieth Century Fox Television and "totally pleased that Bart beat Bill last Thur."

Lisa Greenberg spent the summer as a volleyball coach with Sport for Understanding. Lisa led her team to the Soviet Union, where she coached, translated, mothered, and had a fantastic time. Lisa's team had a perfect record—no wins.

87 MARY TAYLOR DEMKO
1935 Seville St.
Santa Rosa, CA 95403

CLOISTER INN SETS SAIL: These folks spent last Memorial Day on the Chesapeake Bay. Sailors present were (standing, l-r) Laurie Balfour, Drew Cronyn, John Crimaldi, Tom Meyer, (middle) Debbie Moss, John Marshall, Hans Kriefall, Pam Ranta Doran, Tom Doran, (front) Mitch Meicall, and Alan Kennedy.

Lawrie works for Congressman Sikorski (Minn.) in D.C. Drew is taking pre-med courses as U.C.—San Diego. John Crimaldi is in the aerospace industry in Southern Calif. Tom sells computer systems to businesses in N.J. Debbie is a 3L at Georgetown. John Marshall is at Tuck B-School. Hans toured nationally as a dancer in ME AND MY GIRL and A CHORUS LINE. Mitch researches for ABC's PRIMETIME in N.Y. Not pictured, Dave Bibi sells insurance in Camp Hill, Penn.

Cindy Lao is engaged to Dave Gitter (Penn '85). Cindy is in publishing in Philly. The wedding is planned for Aug. 1991. Kristen Lamendola, presently studying education policy at G.W.U., will wed John Carl (Ill. State Univ. '86) in summer 1991.

Susan Detwiler is a fourth-year med. student at U.C.—San Diego. Valerie Piper started a mgmt. degree in govt. from Penn this past fall. Gary Weisglass is a 2L at Fordham.

88 CHRISTOPHER LU
206E Holden Green
Cambridge, MA 02138

SEND COOKIES: Two more of our classmates are now in Saudi Arabia as part of Operation Desert Shield. Joe Marshall, an Army engineer, was sent in Nov., and Jim Hermens, an Air Force intelligence officer, was sent in Jan. Letters can be sent to: First Lt. Joe Marshall, D Company 5th Infantry Battalion, 274-54-0841, APO, NY 09657; and First Lt. Jim Hermens, 542-72-3372, U.S.A.F. Contingent, A/202nd MI Battalion, 513th MI Brigade, APO, NY 09852.

BELEATED CONGRATULATIONS: Andi Suess married Jonathan Taylor '86 on June 16, 1990, in Cleveland, Oh. Pictured here are (back row) Brad Abernethy '87, John Feldman '86, Jared Silverman '86, Tom Bailey '94, Bart Addis '86, Jonathan, Andi, Paul Taylor '60, Dan Ronel '86, Zizzy Zenowich, John Bucchieri, Lyle Suess '91, Lori Garrett '93, Sondra Hausner '91, (front) Monte Benaresh, Brad Brock '91, Barb Broderick, Barb Cestero, Dave Anticoli '87, Matthew Taylor '93, Allison Gordon '90. Not shown: Quentin Quereau '60. Andi works at the Inst. of Politics at Harvard's John F. Kennedy School of Government, where Jonathan is getting a master's in public policy.

RANDOM TIDBITS: Lydia Denworth is a reporter/researcher for NEWSWEEK in N.Y. Susan Schwartz, also in N.Y., is working as a production assistant and script-reader for Tribeca Films. Catherine Roberts is a securities analyst for a large mutual fund co. in S.F. Her college roommate Jennifer Donnelly is in business school at Berkeley.

Letter of the month comes from Sara Randell. "After a year in Paris, I'm back in Chicago, working for a marketing research firm. I used to sell bags of Fritos for six bucks in a French specialty store that I managed, and now Frito Lay is one of the clients at my marketing firm. Coincidence or destiny?"

NOT-SO-NEWPTIALS: Susan Lynch (center) wasted little time after graduation, marrying William H. Foster III (Penn '87) on June 11, 1989, in the Princeton Chapel. The bridal party included Catby Cullicott (far left) and Regina Biscoglio (fourth from left). Susan spent last year living in Durham, N.C., working as a research assistant and taking some classes at Duke, as well as studying karate. Since the fall she has been studying English at Cornell on a Mellon Fellowship.

Jeff Wilke and Liesl Frodsbam were married last Dec. 29 in Charlotte, N.C. They are living in Durham, although Jeff works for Anderson Consulting in Raleigh, as does Owen Davies. Liesl attends Duke Law, as does Carol Hammarstrom. Ketib Mancus is active in space-station related robotics at McDonnell-Douglas Space Systems in Houston, spending most of his time at the Johnson Space Center. He recently received certification for both scuba diving and flying. Catherine Knight is "working hard (and enjoying it at least half the time)" as a Woodruff Scholar in her first year at Emory Law.

Jim Martin is working at Amoco's Salt Lake City refinery and says that rumors of price gouging are greatly exaggerated. He has gotten engaged to Jane Chapman who, you'll recall, is editorial assistant at the U. of Chicago alumni magazine. Joining Jane in the alumni racket is David Miller, who has become the staff writer for PAW. '89ers now constitute 40% of the magazine's editorial staff. Polly Blakemore is staff writer for the Natl. Center for Literacy in Louisville, Ky.

ENDS' NOTE: Starting with the next issue, '89 Class Notes will be featured separately at the front of the magazine.

The dead of summer. Here's a great picture that finally sees the printed page about seven months after it was taken: Last summer, (l-r) Solange Brown, Georgie Boge, Elizabeth Seay, Lucinda Robb, Sue Chi, and Heather Gordon backpacked through the wild west, and here they are in the Grand Canyon. A close look reveals that 5 of the 6 members of the merry group are wearing—what else?—Princeton t-shirts!

Today, however, the winter is definitely upon us, and a few classmates are enjoying the snow and cold in Vt. Scott Fulmer works the 11 p.m.-7 a.m. shift at a ski resort in Killington, and Rob Parker and Scott Whitaker are skiing in Stowe because "we think those 9-5 business suit types are deluded."

News from the Big Apple comes from Glen Pier-son, who works for East/West Network, a magazine publisher in N.Y.C. Glen spends time with Rich Ott, who is at Columbia Med School; Julie Lewis, who is trying to get a job in pharmaceuticals; Jim Armstrong, who works for a benefits consulting company in N.J.; and Betsy Hill, who works for an art gallery in Manhattan.

Add the names of Jennie Thompson and Glenye Cain to the list of classmates in the sports world. Jennie worked at the N.Y.C. Marathon, the Super Bowl, and various golf events for A.B.C., and Glenye is a columnist for the THOROUGHbred TIMES in Lexington, Ky. Glenye also reports that Pavan Heard is at Duke's Fuqua School of Business, Michael Braxton is at Columbia Law School, and Lydia Itoi studies Japanese literature at Stanford.

ENGLISH: Updating his career, Monroe K. Spears '40 reports, "Retired in 1986 as Moody Professor of English, Rice Univ. Now living in Sewanee, Tenn. Last book: AMERICAN AMBITIONS, Johns Hopkins Univ. Press, 1987." In the same vein, William H. Taft III '41 tells us: "I'm still around, although I lived at the Graduate College way back in 1937-1940 and received my Ph.D. in English in 1942 and taught rather briefly, in 1940-41 at Maryland, 1941-42 at Haverford, and 1945-48 at Yale before joining the Marshall Plan and Foreign Service. I still write essays occasionally and look back on Princeton days with pleasure, although I scarcely know a soul among my classmates other than Bob Super '41 at Michigan; he did well to move to Trollope from Landor. My own thesis on Bulwer-Lytton may have told me to desert the field of English Lit and the novel." Meanwhile, Richard J. Schoeck '49, writing us in Mar. 1990, says, "Published in 1988, ERASMUS GRANDDESCENS; and in 1989, a collection of poems, A RAGING AGAINST CHAOS. Volume one of my biography of Erasmus is due for 1990 publication by Edinburgh Univ. Press. After three years in West Germany, I shall be returning to the States in the fall: Box 1614, Lawrence, KS 66044."

GEOLOGY: From Upper Nyack, N.Y., Cecil H. Kindle '31 discloses that a "portion of the C.H. Kindle collection of trilobites is described by Young and Ludvigsen in Bulletin 392 of the Geological Survey of Canada. It is entitled "Mid-Cambrian Trilobites from the lowest part of the Cow Head Group, Western Newfoundland." We were pleased to learn that Donald L. Blackstone Jr. '36, Univ. of Wyo. professor emeritus of geology, was named to receive honorary membership in the American Assn. of Petroleum Geologists (A.A.P.G.). The honor recognizes Donald's "distinguished service to the science and profession of petroleum geology, and was presented during A.A.P.G.'s annual meeting in June in San Francisco. Our heartiest congratulations to Donald! Meanwhile, John James Prucha '50 tells us that he retired from full-time service to Syracuse Univ. on July 1, 1990. He spent 27 years as a professor of geology (1962-1990) and two years as dean of the College of Arts and Sciences (1970-72). John then spent 13 years as vice chancellor of academic affairs (1972-1985). He likewise served as chairman of the geology dept. (1963-1970) and 1988-1990. To John our heartiest congratulations for his years of academic service!

MATHEMATICS: Henry M. Cox '33, director emeritus, Univ. of Nebraska's Instructional Bureau, writes, "I am a life member of the Nebraska Academy of Sciences, the Mathematical Assn. of America, the Nebraska Historical Society, and the National Society of the Sons of the American Revolution." And Hartley Rogers Jr. '52 sums it all up in his own way, "Teaching math at M.I.T. since 1955."

MODERN LANGUAGES AND LITERATURE: We learn that

Russell Major '49, Candler Prof. of Renaissance History at Emory Univ., retired at the end of the academic year 1989-1990.

NEAR EASTERN STUDIES: T. B. Irving '40 reminds us that it has been over five years since he published the first American translation of the Qur'AN (Amana Books, Battleboro, VT), after 23 years of work.

ORIENTAL LANGUAGES AND LITERATURE: Finally, Thomas A. McGregor '33 writes us, "Although I am retired, I am active as minister of visitation (in a voluntary capacity) at the First Presbyterian Church of Miramar, Fla., 6701 S.W. 25th St., Miramar, FL 33023. My hobbies are bowling, swimming, organ playing, and art work for the Church."

APPLIED AND COMPUTATIONAL MATHEMATICS: Robert Almgren '89 was recently awarded an N.S.F. Mathematical Sciences Postdoctoral Research Fellowship. He plans to carry out full-time research under this award for the next two years, after which he plans to begin teaching.

ARCHITECTURE: Hunt McKinnon '76 is currently director of operations for the architectural engineering and planning firm of R.S.H. He is also teaching architecture at the the School of Design at N.C. State Univ.

CHEMICAL ENGINEERING: Louis Manzione '79 is currently supervising the plastics processing research group at A.T. & T. Bell Laboratories in Murray Hill, N.J. His second book, PLASTIC PACKAGING OF MICROELECTRONIC DEVICES, was published in Nov. 1990. Kevin Davis '89 writes that his wife, Jamie, is expecting their first child in May 1991.

GERMANIC LANGUAGES AND LITERATURES: David P. Schluchebier '85 enrolled at the Univ. of Michigan Law School in Sept. 1990.

MECHANICAL AND AEROSPACE ENGINEERING: A number of Princetonians were in attendance at Todd Quackenbush '87's wedding on Nov. 3, 1990, in Lawrenceville, NJ. Among those present were Paul Antaki '86, Al Ferri '85, Eileen Foy '82, Bonnie Heck '84, Chris Keane '86, Ken Kousen '86, Rob Taylor Dan Wachspress '82, and Pete Willett '87. Also in a cheery vein Elizabeth Wilczek '83 relates that she is collecting math and science jokes for a forthcoming book to be published by Simon and Schuster. Should any publicly presentable limericks, riddles, etc., come to mind, she encourages everyone to send them to her at 112 Mercer St., Princeton, NJ 08540.

PSYCHOLOGY: Bob Strecher '85 reports that he and his wife, Ulla Larsen '85 (sociology), are currently both working at S.U.N.Y.-Stony Brook. Previously they had post-doctoral appointments in Lund, Sweden, and served in research positions at U.C.-Berkeley. Their first daughter Laura was born in Oct. 1985, and their second child was expected around Christmas 1990.

WOODROW WILSON SCHOOL: Min Zhu '88, currently in the economics dept. at Johns Hopkins Univ., recently shared the 1990 Award in Distinguished Applied Research sponsored by the National Tax Assn. Akibiro Sawa '87 is currently deputy director of the information service industry division at the Ministry of International Trade and Industry, where he is in charge of promoting the software industry in Japan. He notes that Japan will probably not close the market in this area due to the overwhelming demand for software there. Also from the Pacific Rim, N. Ranjan Pal '84 writes that he moved to Hong Kong from Philadelphia in Apr. 1989 to take a new position with Business Intl. He is the regional economist for the Asia/Pacific region, and "enjoys his job and travels a lot."

George Frederick Blackburn '26

FRED BLACKBURN, mathematician and outdoorsman, died in his sleep at a nursing home near Bethesda, Md., Oct. 5, 1990, at age 88. At Princeton Fred majored in mathematics and went on to earn an M.A. He moved to Washington in 1929, when he became a mathematician with the Bureau of Standards, which he served until retirement in 1963. In 1930, Fred married Ruth Miller, and with her raised a family and as well was able to pursue his hobbies of photography and the outdoors.

Fred grew up in central Penn. An active backpacker and hiker, he was an early supporter and user of the Appalachian Trail. He served for nine years as secretary of the Appalachian Trail Conference and was a 60-year member of the Potomac Appalachian Trail Club. In 1983 a cabin near the trail, in northern Va., was dedicated in Fred's honor as the Blackburn Trail Center.

Fred is survived by Ruth and their sons, Frederick and William, by five grandchildren, and three great-grandsons, and by a sister, Helen Kniseley, to all of whom we extend our sympathy.

The Class of 1926

Edwin Allen Lightner '30

AL LIGHTNER died Sept. 15, 1990 in Belfast, Me. With his death the nation lost a distinguished Foreign Service officer and the Class lost one of its most illustrious sons. Al came to Princeton from Taft School. At Princeton he participated in a variety of activities including the Triangle Club, Glee Club, the Undergraduate Council, J.V. baseball and hockey, and Cottage Club.

Immediately upon graduation Al joined the Foreign Service. His career included service in 18 countries in Latin America, Europe, Africa, and Asia. From 1963 to 1965 he was ambassador to Libya. Al's most memorable experience occurred while serving as the State Dept.'s representative in Berlin from 1959 to 1963. After the Berlin Wall was erected, Al was twice detained by communist police after crossing into East Berlin. He was released only after U.S. troops crossed the border to free him. He later was deputy commandant of the Naval War College, retiring in 1974.

Survivors include his widow, Dorothy, two sons, John B. and E. Allen Jr.; a daughter, Babette; a brother, Lawrence; and one grandchild. To them we offer our deepest sympathy on the loss of this outstanding man.

The Class of 1930

Walter A. Compton '33

WALT COMPTON, described by the N.Y. TIMES as "a doctor who rose to head Miles Laboratories," died in Elkhart, Ind., Oct. 11, 1990.

Walt was born Apr. 22, 1911, in Elkhart. He prepared at Elkhart High and at Mercersburg. In college he was a member of Dial Lodge, and roomed with Chuck Hellerson. After college Walt went to Harvard Medical School, receiving his M.D. in 1937. In 1939 he joined Miles Labs as medical and research director. His work led to many well-known products, including One-a-Day vitamins and Bactine. He retired in 1981 as chairman and was named honorary chairman.

During WWII Walt served in the Army Medical Corps in Japan as a Lt. colonel. He was awarded a medal by the Order of the Rising Sun for his work in Occupied Japan. He became interested in Japanese and Oriental art, eventually forming a notable collection.

On June 22, 1935, Walt married Charlie Emerson's sister Phoebe, in Indianapolis. She survives him, as do their children, Cynthia Mosher, Joan Compton, Phoebe Brandt, Walter, and Gordon. A sister, Dorothy Barkey, a brother, George, and seven grandchildren also survive. The Class of '33 has suffered a severe loss. To the family we express our deep sympathy.

The Class of 1933

John M. Dickey '33 '35

JOHN DICKEY died at home in Westtown, Penn., Sept. 19, 1990. John was born Jan. 9, 1911, in Chicago. He lived in Germany and in Oxford, Penn. He prepared at Odenwald Schule in Germany, and began college at Swarthmore. He transferred to Princeton before junior year. In college he played in the University Orchestra.

John remained at Princeton to study architecture, and received his M.F.A. in 1935.

After college John worked in a number of architectural offices before forming his own partnership, Price and Dickey, in 1947. After designing buildings for the Penn. and N.J. educational systems, he became interested in restoring old buildings. Among his projects were the Walnut St. Theater and the Morris Arboretum in Philadelphia and the Frelinghuysen House in Raritan, N.J. John was a founding member of the Philadelphia chapter of the Society of Architectural Historians.

On Oct. 11, 1941, John married Harriet Hunt, in Wyoming, Penn. She died in 1982. They had three children, Samuel, Alice White, and John Jr. There are four grandchildren.

The Class of '33 has lost a distinguished member, and extends its sympathy to the family.

The Class of 1933

John F. Kerkam '33

JACK KERKAM, who retired to Sea Pines Plantation in Hilton Head, S.C., 19 years ago, died there Sept. 10, 1990. A service was held at St. Luke's Episcopal Church in Hilton Head Sept. 15.

Jack was born June 12, 1911, in Washington, D.C. He prepared at St. Alban's School. In college he was in the Band and the Instrumental Club, and a member of Dial Lodge. He roomed at first with his twin brother, Bill '32, and senior year with Harry Cropper.

After graduation Jack went to George Washington Law School, graduating in 1936. He joined his father's firm, Cameron, Kerkam and Sutton, and remained with them until retirement.

During WWII Jack served in the Army Air Corps for 4½ years, becoming a major and receiving the Army Commendation Medal.

Jack was active in community and St. Alban's School affairs. He enjoyed fishing and sailing.

On June 29, 1936, Jack married Dorothy Eleanor Beck, in Ft. Meyer, Va. She survives, as do their children, Donna K. Grosvenor and John F. Jr. There are two grandchildren. His brother Bill also survives.

We are terribly sorry that Jack is gone. Our deep sympathy goes to Eleanor and to Bill.

The Class of 1933

Thomas Hughes Ingle '41

THE CLASS had lost touch with Tom way back in 1950 when he asked that Princeton not send him mailings. Adding a final note to this sadness, we have now learned that he passed away some time in 1978—and we know not where.

Tom was born March 31, 1920, in Evansville, Ind., and went to the Georgetown Preparatory School where he was on the golf and tennis teams, and was active in debating and publications. As a freshman he lived in musty-but-raucous old 11 Dickinson St. along with Walt Hugins, Bob Livesey, Mort Wright, Bill Wilson, Alex Hargrave, and Dick Plumer. He is remembered as a rather quiet but gentlemanly and scholarly man. The following year he roomed in Pyne Hall. Tom majored in English and was graduated with high honors.

To those who knew and loved Tom Ingle, the Class extends deep sympathy.

The Class of 1941

William F. Weigel '45

BILL WEIGEL DIED in N.Y.C. July 13, 1990, from the effects of a stroke. Bill entered Princeton from Lawrenceville, where he had roomed with Maj Cunningham and Jim Dean, and roomed in 51 Holder with Joe Smith, with whom he had played football at Lawrenceville. His Princeton education was cut short by Navy service in the Pacific, and upon his return he entered Lehigh, from which he received a degree in business administration in 1948, followed by a law degree from N.Y.U. In 1951, Bill became a lawyer with Rogers, Hoge and Hills in N.Y.C., where he was the senior partner at the time of the firm's dissolution in 1988, after which he became of counsel to the N.Y. firm Abelman, Frayne, Rezac & Schwab. Commuting to N.Y.C. from Pelham, Bill became mayor of Pelham Heights and the chairman of the Republican Party for Westchester Cty.

Bill and his former wife, Frances Perry, have a son, Breck, and three daughters, Madeline Ludlow, Amy Minor, and Patricia Blank. In addition Bill is survived by two sisters, Madeline Weigel and Barbara Muther, and one brother, Peter, as well as by six grandchildren. To all of them the Class extends its sympathy.

The Class of 1945

Frederick Billings '46

FREDERICK BILLINGS, man of amicable wit, died June 13, 1990. Rick arrived at Princeton from Berkshire School in 1942, majored in English (and George Bernard Shaw). He quickly enlisted in the Marine Corps. During the Princeton V-12 program and boot camp, he kept his comrades laughing through the rigors of Marine Corps training with his spontaneous and cheerful sense of the ridiculous.

Returning to Princeton after WWII, he was a member of Cottage and active in the Triangle Club. In later years, Rick, with his photographic memory and total recall of dialogue, would regale his classmates with hilarious, almost "live" replays of our undergraduate days and escapades. He was our Class historian.

Rick worked briefly in N.Y.C., Lewiston, Ida., (his hometown), and San Francisco. In 1952 he was sent to Korea as a first lieutenant. He later joined the Weyerhaeuser Co., in assignments in pulp and lumber mills in Aberdeen and Longview, Wash., finally becoming director of community and public relations. He and his wife, Jerry, represented Weyerhaeuser and Washington state when they presented a Christmas tree to President Kennedy. Rick served many years on the boards of a dozen community organizations and charities.

To his widow, Jerry, and daughter, Ellen, the Class extends our deepest sympathy. Rick gave us and leaves us with happy memories.

The Class of 1946

J. Wilding Thompson '46

JIM THOMPSON left us July 17, 1990, succumbing to pancreatic cancer. Jim came to Princeton at age 17 following a year at Hotchkiss. Upon turning 18 in June 1943, he enlisted and served in the Army Air Corps in Europe.

After WWII, he returned to Princeton, played 150-lb. football, and met and married his wife, the former Michal Isbell (Vassar '48).

After graduating with a degree in geology, Jim joined Homelite, becoming a successful district manager in Charlotte, N.C. In 1971 he founded Huskipower, which distributed chainsaws and outdoor power equipment throughout the southeastern U.S. By dint of Jim's dedication to service and fair pricing, this company prospered, and remains ongoing.

Jim was a private person who believed in the plain virtues of applying one's self and living within one's means. His example of honest and persistent endeavor was a strong influence in the lives of his numerous employees and proteges. His avocations were tennis, skiing, and travel, all of which he did too little in recent years as the burgeoning business often took precedence.

Jim's sons, Peter '70 and Bruce '72, followed him to Princeton and majored in geology as well! His widow, his boys, and his two grandchildren have lost a lodestar, and Princeton and the Class of '46 have lost a stalwart son.

The Class of 1946

The University Center for Human Values

It is my pleasure to turn the president's page over to Amy Gutmann, director, University Center for Human Values.—H.T.S.

Why create a University Center for Human Values at Princeton? After all, most university teaching and scholarship already concerns itself with human values. More often than not, however, this concern is implicit rather than explicit. Fundamental questions about the meaning and value of human life remain, and controversial assumptions about the relationship of individuals to society remain unstated. The University Center was created to stimulate and support teaching and research of high quality that is explicitly and centrally concerned with some of the most fundamental questions concerning human values, the nature of human flourishing and social justice, the objectivity or relativity of values, the responsibility of individuals to society and society to individuals, moral issues of war and peace, democracy and education, environmental preservation and conservation, toleration and mutual respect amidst human diversity.

Why create a University Center for Human Values now? Unprecedented powers of creation and destruction are at the disposal of human beings. Individuals and societies with remarkably diverse religions, economies, governments and cultures are increasingly interdependent. Colleges and universities like Princeton have themselves become increasingly pluralistic communities. At the same time a widespread skepticism about the defensibility of ethical principles accompanies this pluralism. Just when so many moral problems have been thrust upon us, the will to deal with them in a reasonable way has been radically challenged.

The profound and urgent ethical issues of our global society pose a challenge to any university committed to an educational mission that is more than the development and dissemination of empirical knowledge and technical skills. Princeton has rightly prided itself on being a model for such a university. And Princeton students have always wanted more, and gotten more out of their education. They are eager to address the moral challenges posed by social injustice and individual impoverishment, to consider alternative ways of thinking and living. I share with you an example of what one Princeton student wrote to his father about his educational aspirations while at Princeton:

You suggest that the greatest benefit from college is to be found in the formation of habits of intellectual diligence and application—and of course until these are established one's abilities must remain practically ineffective. However important all this may be, I am nonetheless putting my chief emphasis on the study of right and wrong, even though such a procedure must first lead me through a period of confusion, and conflicting desires and actions . . .

The letter was written in 1931 by Laurance S. Rockefeller '32 to his father, John D. Rockefeller, Jr., who recognized that his son's values were indeed vital ones.

Such student aspirations harmonize with a distinguished educational tradition at Princeton that seeks to ally intellectual diligence with (in Woodrow Wilson's words) "an elasticity of faculty and a breadth of vision." More recently, President Shapiro has emphasized "the modern university's primary role . . . not to proclaim a certain set of doctrines for society, but rather to ensure that students and faculty keep the important problems of humanity clearly before us—and always keep up the search for alternatives."

The need for a University Center to support teaching and research on vital questions of human values is perhaps even greater in 1991 than it has ever been, because so many pressures, including increasing academic specialization among professors and career orientation among students, are pushing universities in the opposite direction. Laurance Rockefeller's endowment of the University Center for Human Values better enables Princeton University to resist these pressures and, judging from the enthusiastic response outside Princeton, also encourages other colleges and universities to bring the study of human values to the center of higher education.

What will the University Center do? The University Center aims not to supplant but to supplement academic specialization by, for example, co-sponsoring new courses with departments that appeal to a wide range of students interested in addressing some of the most profound and perplexing questions of human existence. The Center has begun on a small scale this spring by co-sponsoring six new courses (with the Departments of Anthropology, Classics, English, Philosophy, and Religion, as well as the Freshman Seminar Program). The Center is also co-sponsoring with the Woodrow Wilson School a new interdisciplinary Program in Ethics and Public Affairs, which brings multiple philosophical perspectives to bear on significant public issues of our time.

Starting next year, the Center will add more freshman seminars to the undergraduate curriculum, a small step on the way to putting into practice our commitment to supporting high quality teaching that spans disciplinary boundaries. Another step in this direction will be the Center's support for collaborative teaching and research projects that examine ethical issues from different disciplinary perspectives. We will continue to co-sponsor courses throughout the curriculum and encourage students to supplement their disciplinary concentrations with a set of courses on human values. The Center will reach beyond Princeton by inviting several Laurance S. Rockefeller Visiting Fellows to campus as resident scholars and teachers. To invest in future generations of scholars and teachers, the Center will offer graduate prize fellowships and sponsor seminars for graduate students whose interests lie in this area. To help recruit several new senior professors and stimulate vigorous public discussions on a broad range of ethical issues, the Center will sponsor public lectures and colloquia, beginning with an inaugural lecture in the fall to which you are invited.

The positive response to the creation of the University Center reinforces our conviction that it can serve as a hospitable forum for students, faculty, and the broader community to address both the enduring questions of human existence and the most urgent moral challenges of our time. The Center may not satisfy anyone with certain answers, but it will foster far-ranging deliberation and exchange. Better answers to some questions, wiser understandings of others, are likely to emerge from such an open interdisciplinary search.

Amy Gutmann

"The Center may not satisfy anyone with certain answers, but it will foster far-ranging deliberation and exchange."

USE YOUR CORPORATE CLOUT

TO MULTIPLY YOUR ANNUAL GIVING GIFT

Let your company match your gift and watch your investment grow . . .

In recent years, matching gifts have brought in $2 million annually to Princeton. Maintaining at least that level is especially critical now, as the cost of educational excellence continues to climb. Your investment also supports financial aid—no student is turned away from Princeton because of inability to pay.

More than 1,000 companies participate. Like you, they believe in the value of a Princeton education. So much so that they'll match your Annual Giving gift to Princeton by one, two, three—as much as five times. Many of these same companies will also match your spouse's gifts. Or gifts by retirees. For details, call Liz Ritchie at Princeton (609-258-3374) or your personnel office.

You—and your corporate clout—can help Princeton continue to be the best. Won't you do what you can now for your University?

Annual Giving
pays for quality at Princeton

PRINCETON

ALUMNI WEEKLY

MARCH 6, 1991

Of course, this isn't to say there hasn't been much talk about Lexus automobiles. On the contrary. In Car and Driver's New Car

Buyer's Study,*

Lexus

owners helped the LS400 achieve the highest customer satisfaction rating the magazine has ever seen. An accomplishment rivaled only by our showing in the J.D. Power and Associates Initial Quality Survey, where owners ranked Lexus the most trouble-free nameplate on the road today.

To find out more about both the LS400 and the ES 250, visit your local Lexus dealer. We're sure he'll have a few encouraging words of his own.

LEXUS
The Relentless Pursuit Of Perfection.

Where Seldom

elders Heard A Discouraging Word.

© 1990 Lexus, A Division Of Toyota Motor Sales, U.S.A., Inc. Lexus reminds you to wear seat belts and obey all speed laws. For more information, call 800-872-5398 (800-USA-LEXUS).
*November 1989 luxury-car registrations. J.D. Power and Associates 1990 Initial Quality Survey. *Based on owner-reported problems the first 90 days of ownership.

Digitized by Google

Alumni Trustee Candidates 1991

Vote for the alumni trustee candidate of your choice. Look for your ballot in the mail after April 1. You can vote for one candidate in each category—

At Large and Region I—and all alumni may vote. Mark your ballot and return it to the Alumni Council promptly to make sure your vote is counted.

At Large

Selden S. Edwards '63
Headmaster,
Elgin Academy,
Elgin, Illinois

Karl E. Hammonds '73
Physician, Progressive
Health Associates,
Washington, DC

Richard W. Kazmaier, Jr. '53
President, Kazmaier Associates,
Key Largo, Florida

Region I (Northeast)

John E. Bjorkholm '61
Applied Physics
Research, AT&T Bell
Laboratories,
Holmdel, New Jersey

Cheryl Gould '74
Senior Producer,
NBC Nightly News
with Tom Brokaw,
New York, New York

Robert C. McCartney '56
Attorney, Eckert,
Seamans, Cherin &
Mellott,
Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania

Coming up—elections in 1992: At Large and Region II (Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Texas). Use this form to forward nominations to the Committee to Nominate Alumni Trustees, c/o The Alumni Council, Box 291, Princeton, New Jersey 08544-0291.

Nomination Form for Alumni Trustee—1992

At Large

Name _____ Class _____
Name _____ Class _____

Region II

(Nominees must reside in Maryland, District of Columbia, Virginia, North Carolina, South Carolina, Georgia, Florida, West Virginia, Kentucky, Tennessee, Alabama, Mississippi, Louisiana, Arkansas, Oklahoma, Texas.)

Name _____ Class _____
Name _____ Class _____

Please return to Committee to Nominate Alumni Trustees, c/o The Alumni Council, Box 291, Princeton New Jersey 08544-0291.

Committee to Nominate Alumni Trustees: Elihu Inselbuch '59, chair, Nicholas W. Allard '74, Arthur B. Carey, Jr. '72, Edward S. Felsenthal '63, David N. Lawyer, Jr. '68, Suzanne R. Perles '75, Peter G. Smith '46, Evora A. Thomas '74, Susannah Wolfson '88

PRINCETON

ALUMNI WEEKLY

CONTINUING THE ALUMNI PRINCETONIAN, FOUNDED IN 1894

FEATURES

14 PORK-BARREL POLITICS AT WOODY WOO

Graduate Students Simulate the Great Budget Debate of 1990
by William L. Driscoll GS

17 MESSRS. ROSEN AND WILLIG GO TO WASHINGTON

Two Professors on Leave Get "Real-World" Experience as Government Economists

DEPARTMENTS

5 LETTERS

9 PRINCETON NOTEBOOK

Hugo Sonnenschein Named New Provost; Sachs Scholarship Goes to Andrea Richter '91

12 ON THE CAMPUS

Era of All-Male Clubs Ends as First Women Bicker at Tiger Inn
by Matthew T. Henshon '91

22 BOOKS

25 SPORTS

Bill Burke '91 Smashes Four-Minute Mile, Leading Men's and Women's Track Teams

30 CLASS NOTES

45 MEMORIALS

48 FIRST PERSON

Watching Operation Desert Storm
by George Reiger '60

On the Cover

Wilson School graduate students square off in their roles as executive and legislative budget-makers. Our story begins on page 14. Drawing by Henry E. Payne IV '84.

FROM THE ARCHIVES

Our recent obituary on Eric M. Rogers, who taught physics at Princeton for thirty years, drew our eyes to this photograph, which is undated but appears to be from the 1950s. The rapt attention of the students and the dramatic cast of Rogers's shadow speak to his forcefulness as a teacher. The setting is one of the lecture rooms in Palmer Hall, but as for the demonstration in progress, we can only guess.

J. I. MERRITT '66, Editor
ANDREW C. MYTELKA '85, Managing Editor
NUALA O'CONNOR '89, Associate Editor
D. W. MILLER '89, Staff Writer
STACY M. WSZOLA, Art Director
R. T. HOWELL, Production Manager
LORRAINE DONEKER, Graphic Assistant
NANCY S. MACMILLAN, Business Manager
LOLLY O'BRIEN, Advertising Director
BOARD OF EDITORIAL DIRECTION
EDWARD R. WEIDLEIN '68, Chairman
LISA B. BELKIN GELB '82 • CHRISTOPHER V. CONNELL '71
LONDON Y. JONES '66 • ELLIOTT D. LEE '74 • '77
PATRICIA H. MARKS '72 • JOHN A. MCPHEE '53
PUBLICATION BOARD
DOROTHY L. BEDFORD '78, Chairman
ROBERT K. DURKEE '69 • ROBY HARRINGTON III '51
WALTER H. LIPPINCOTT, JR. '60 • PETER O. PRICE '62
PETER G. SMITH '46 • DANIEL N. WHITE '65

NATIONAL ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVE
ROBERT F. SENNOTT, JR.
Ivy League Magazine Network
254 Fifth Ave., New York, NY 10001 • (212) 684-5603
LOCAL ADVERTISING/PRINCETON EXCHANGE
LOLLY O'BRIEN (609) 258-4886

The Princeton Alumni Weekly is an independent magazine supported by alumni class subscriptions and by paid advertising. Its purpose is to record news of the alumni and at the same time to review without partiality the achievements and problems of the administration, the faculty, and the student body of Princeton University. The views expressed in the Alumni Weekly are those of signed contributors or the editor and do not necessarily represent official positions of the university.

PUBLISHED BY
PRINCETON UNIVERSITY PRESS
41 William St., Princeton, NJ 08540
Telephone (609) 258-4885
TWX 510-685-2306 UNIV PRSS PRIN • Fax (609) 258-6305

ELECTRONIC PAW BBS: (609) 258-3602

Materials can be transmitted to our offices via telecommunications, using the upload facility in the file-transfer section of the Electronic PAW computer bulletin board system. Its protocols are 300/1200/2400 baud, eight data bits, one stop bit, and no parity. It is online 24 hours a day.

PRINCETON ALUMNI WEEKLY (ISSN 0149-9270)

Vol. 91, No. 11, March 6, 1991
Printed by William Byrd Press, Richmond, Va. Annual subscription $19.50 (foreign postage $5 extra); single copies $1.50. All orders must be paid in advance. Copyright © 1991 Princeton University Press. All rights reserved. Reproduction in whole or in part without permission is prohibited. Second-class postage paid at Princeton, N.J., and at additional mailing office.

POSTMASTER: Send address changes to PAW Address Changes, 3175 Princeton Pike, Lawrenceville, NJ 08648.

Extending into the Zone.

Suddenly you totally control the game with the new Prince Extender™. The innovative, teardrop design increases the string bed and sweet spot for relentless power. You feel it instantly. Its lightweight, aerodynamic frame gives you the maneuverability that turns tough gets into winners. Point after point. More touch, more power, more racquet. It gives you unbounded confidence, taking you and your game one step further... "extending" you into a dimension we call the zone.

Mark Talbott, World Hardball Champion

© 1990 Prince Manufacturing, Inc.

The new Prince Extender Series. Four distinct models for every level of play. Extend into the zone by seeing your dealer, or calling 1-800-2-TENNIS.

prince®
Digitized by Google
Playing in the Zone.™

Taking Shots at Wilson

The January 23 issue of PAW purports to give us a "new look" at Woodrow Wilson. The "new look" turns out to be a three-pronged revisionist attack on a great Princetonian. It begins with a cover showing a painting of Wilson by an artist of the "Ashcan School," the original of which hangs, incredibly, in the President's office. It concludes with a flip put-down by a recent graduate, David Williamson '84. Both are to be deplored, but both can be forgotten, if not forgiven.

The main thrust of the attack—the story "Princeton in Whose Service?" by Dean of the Graduate School Theodore J. Ziolkowski—is not so easily dismissed. It is a scholarly but patronizing article on what Wilson meant by his famous phrase "Princeton in the Nation's Service." I do not question the dean's explanation, but I do object to his attitude. Wilson, we are told, although a charismatic orator, an extremely popular teacher, and a nationally acclaimed (albeit unscholarly) lecturer and writer, as an educator was a traditionalist, enamored of the classics and the humanities, disdainful of modern languages and science, and hostile to the new scholarship imported from Germany. He was a conservative, rooted in the past and fearful of the future. In short, he was an elitist, a forerunner of the likes of Allan Bloom and Lynne Cheney.

I think there is more at stake here than a dispute over Woodrow Wilson. To me, Ziolkowski's essay is another skirmish in the war being waged on campuses across the country concerning the nature and goals of higher education in America, a conflict that has bitterly divided faculties, and the outcome of which is still very much in doubt. There can be little doubt where the dean's sympathies lie.

Fortunately, the same issue of PAW presents a more authentic portrait of Wilson in the form of tributes from Arthur C. Holden '12, who knew Wilson first-hand, and from Professor Arthur S. Link, who has devoted more than forty years to Wilson's life and letters. Both testify, with a few reservations, to Wilson's charm, magnetism, sincerity, brilliance, and depth. Let theirs be the last word, for the present at least, concerning a great man, a great president of Princeton, and a great President of the United States.

ROBERT S. PASLEY '33
Professor of Law, Emeritus
Cornell University
Sarasota, Fla.

What was the motive behind the features about Woodrow Wilson in the January 23 PAW? Was it to parade a sense of humor by shooting spitballs at a sacred cow? Or was it to show that a prophet is not without honor, save in his own land, among his own people?

The cover portrait was mildly amusing. No, Wilson didn't smoke. He used to say that his father, a heavy consumer of stogies, had smoked enough for both of them. He did drink, probably never to excess, but he liked good Scotch. He opposed Prohibition, and he vetoed the Volstead Act, which led to the Eighteenth Amendment—a futile gesture, since Congress overrode the veto.

David Williamson's complaint about Princeton's neglect of Madison and overattention to Wilson was apt up to a point. As an undergraduate, I used to grouse that the only two alumni anybody ever heard about were Woodrow Wilson and F. Scott Fitzgerald '17. What about Adlai Stevenson '22, James Forrestal '15, Edmund Wilson '16? True enough, but there was a point to Wilson's and Fitzgerald's overweening prominence. They alone had really made their reputations through Princeton, by embodying luminous and antithetical social and cultural ideals in the place. All honor to other great alumni, but neither they nor Princeton meant as much to each other as did Woodrow and F. Scott.

All this is good, clean fun, but what is more serious business is Dean Ziolkowski's iconoclasm toward "Princeton in the Nation's Service." He is entirely correct in pointing out that Wilson meant something radically different from what he is usually taken to have meant (although not completely different—he did recruit such nonacademics to the faculty of the politics department as the journalist Henry Jones Ford and the lawyer-politician Harry Garfield). Where Dean Ziolkowski errs is in depicting Wilson as an academic reactionary and social elitist. It is true that he criticized the natural sciences and fetishistic imitation of them in other fields, that he distrusted the model of the German research university, and that he wanted to preserve virtues of older classical, humanistic education. But, like McCosh before him, Wilson wanted to eat his academic cake and have it, too. He had himself entered academic life not to be a teacher, but to be a writer and commentator. As the president of Princeton, he enlisted Henry B. Fine 1880 as his chief lieutenant and gave Fine free rein and strong backing to assemble one of the two or three best scientific faculties in America. Fine put it best when he said, "Wilson made Princeton." What he meant was that "Princeton University" was a fancy mantle dropped on the scrawny shoulders of an old-fashioned college until Wilson transformed it into a front-rank academic institution. Wilson may have been partly an academic conservative, but he was always a highly progressive one, never a reactionary.

As for Wilson's elitism, that charge contains an element of truth, but only an element. He was frank about wanting to train leaders at Princeton, and he once wrote that the criteria for the newly established Rhodes scholarships admirably described his ideals for Princeton students. But what he wanted was an elite of talent and ability, not wealth or social background. His favorite students, such as Raymond Fosdick '05 '06 and Norman Thomas '05, came from middle-class families in non-metropolitan areas and were at once serious students and popular fellows. In fact, such favorites were often ministers' sons who resembled Wilson himself. Wilson may have favored an elite of white males, but it was an elite open to and, ideally, composed mainly

Children's Photographs from $75.00

Bachrach

Photographers since 1868

We're Now in Greenwich

Boston 617-536-4730 Chicago 312-642-5500
Greenwich 203-869-6922 Morristown 201-267-2006
New York 212-755-6233 Philadelphia 215-563-0551
Washington, D.C. 703-548-2111

Something of permanence for home and office.

THOS. MOSER

CABINETMAKERS

ALEXANDRIA
703-548-3447

PHILADELPHIA
215-922-6440

CATALOG $9
415Y1 CUMBERLAND AVE. PORTLAND, ME 04101
207-774-3791

Discover The Retirement Choice Of Princeton Grads

MEADOW LAKES, New Jersey's first and finest continuing care retirement community has been a vital part of the active, independent lives of distinguished Princeton alumni for over 25 years.

Located on 103 scenic acres just 11 miles from Princeton, with residences woven around a pristine lake, Meadow Lakes reflects the gracious era of the estate on which it was built. Its comfortable lifestyle gives you more time to enjoy life's satisfying pursuits – time to catch up on your reading, swim in the heated outdoor pool, hike nature trails or swap stories with former classmates.

Most importantly, you get the satisfaction of knowing that you have made the smartest decision of your life. That's because Meadow Lakes – a continuing care community – assures that any long term health care needs which you might face in the future will be taken care of.

Find out what many of your classmates have already learned. Discover Meadow Lakes. Mail the coupon below or call (609) 448-4100.

Meadow Lakes

P.O. Box 70 • Etra Road
Hightstown, NJ 08520

- ☐ I'd like to see for myself. Please call and invite me to lunch and a tour.
☐ Please send more information.

Name _____

Address _____

City _____ State _____ Zip _____

Telephone _____ PILM-1

Meadow Lakes is another non-profit, non-sectarian Continuing Care Retirement Community managed by The Presbyterian Homes of New Jersey Foundation whose 75 years of experience assures you of high quality care.

of the upwardly mobile. Nor was that elite necessarily exclusively Protestant: he appointed the first Catholic and the first Jew to the Princeton faculty, and among his closest associates in government were Jews and Catholics.

The best feature about Wilson in the January 23 PAW was neither spitballing nor iconoclastic. It was the story about Professor Arthur Link's discovery of Wilson's medical records. This is real news about Wilson, and it also highlights the finest tribute that Princeton has paid to his memory, The Papers of Woodrow Wilson, which is now nearing completion. These sixty-plus volumes make Wilson's life and work more of an open book than any other modern American leader's—the sweet and the sour, the rough and the smooth, the pearls and the warts. They show the way to know, honor, and enjoy Wilson.

JOHN MILTON COOPER, JR. '61
Chairman, Department of History
University of Wisconsin
Madison, Wis.

Thank you for your interesting and different perspectives on Woodrow Wilson, especially Arthur C. Holden '12's reminiscence.

I would like, if I may, to take issue with a comment made by Professor Arthur S. Link in that issue. Referring to Wilson's cerebrovascular disease, Professor Link notes that the man "most responsible for building support for the idea of a league of nations was struck down . . . by events over which he had no control." Not true. Look at the portrait of Wilson on your cover. Notice the cigarette between his lips.

Cigarettes are a major cause of strokes, the third-leading cause of death in the United States. According to the 1989 Surgeon General's report on the health risks of smoking, male smokers over the age of thirty-five suffer 2.24 times as many strokes as men of the same age who don't smoke. Male smokers run a risk of dying from stroke 1.2 to 1.5 times that of male non-smokers.

Of course, Wilson lived in an era when the dangers of smoking were largely unknown. And, of course, he might well have suffered from cerebrovascular disease even had he never smoked. Wilson also suffered from high blood pressure, another major cause of stroke (Edwin A. Weinstein, Woodrow Wilson: A Medical and Psychological Biography, Princeton University Press, 1981). I would argue, nonetheless, that it is not quite accurate to say that Wilson's health problems were beyond his control.

In fact, most of the ailments that plague Americans—heart disease, cancer, stroke, hypertension, diabetes, accidents, abuse of alcohol, tobacco, and illicit drugs—can, in varying degrees, be controlled by changes in lifestyle and diet and the proper use of medications.

Because fewer people smoke and we have better control over blood pressure and cholesterol, mortality from strokes has declined steadily in the U.S. for several decades. Too late, unfortunately, to have helped Woodrow Wilson.

STEVEN L. BERNSTEIN '81, M.D.
Forest Hills, N.Y.

Was Woodrow Wilson a cigarette smoker, as your cover painting depicts? If so, that can scarcely have helped his cerebrovascular disease. If, as Professor Link suggests, the disease accounted for his inability to sell the League of Nations to the Senate, and if, as Professor Link further has it, American membership in the league might have challenged Hitler's aggressions (conceivable, although I doubt it), then perhaps the tobacco industry is guilty of even more than it's commonly accused of.

JOHN F. HELLEGERS '62
Jenkintown, Penn.

Professor Arthur S. Link has been toiling at Princeton since at least 1947, not 1959 as stated in your Faculty File about him. It may have been as early as 1945 that I attended a precept led by Link in one of Eric Goldman's courses. Professor Link was the mentor of my distinguished classmate Robert P. Sharkey '48, who later studied with C. Vann Woodward at Johns Hopkins and went on to a career as an economic historian. All these southern gentlemen-historians deserve to have their personal facts kept straight.

CHARLTON R. PRICE '48
Kansas City, Mo.

EDITOR'S NOTE: We received several letters commenting on Wilson's smoking, as portrayed in our cover painting. John Cooper is correct in stating that Wilson, in fact, did not smoke, so tobacco would not have influenced his health. This point raises obvious questions about the authenticity of the portrait—whether the subject, despite a marked physical resemblance, is actually Wilson, and whether Robert Henri was the artist. We should have said that the portrait is “doubtfully attributed” to Henri, whose records do not indicate that he ever painted Wilson. Readers should also know that in reproducing the painting, we inadvertently reversed the image, so that “Wilson” is looking to the right rather than the left. The reproduction opposite shows him looking in the right direction.

Regarding Arthur Link's tenure at Princeton, Charlton Price's memory is correct. Link joined the faculty here in 1945 but left in 1949 to take a position at Northwestern University. He was appointed editor of The Papers of Woodrow Wilson in 1959 and rejoined the Princeton faculty in 1960.

As a footnote to Arthur C. Holden's observation about Woodrow Wilson's lack of an “innate sense of humor that enables an individual to view himself as others see him,” let me offer the following limerick, attributed to Wilson himself:

My face has nary a scar
It doesn't look bad from afar
I really don't mind it
For I am behind it
It's people in front that I jar.

PETER J. TURCHI '67 *70
Worthington, Ohio

David Williamson '84's sophomoric essay on Princeton's treatment of James Madison and Woodrow Wilson exudes the decidedly biased and not very tenable thesis that Madison's accomplishments were real, but those of Wilson were largely illusory. Not only is this unconvincing, but it also diverts attention from an undeniable fact. Princeton is indeed fortunate to have had two great presidents among its alumni. Just consider how a comparable essay would have to be written in New Haven: the author would not argue which of Yale's two presidential alumni (William Howard Taft and the current incumbent) was better, but instead would have to explain which one was worse!

KENNETH SEVERENS '58
Portland, Me.

Lost Bird Found

The publication in the October 24 PAW of my photograph of Princeton N.R.O.T.C. midshipmen on their 1948 summer cruise brought forth the name of the unidentified Princetonian. He is George R. “Birdie” Quail '50, who now resides in England and Austria.

JAMES D. SHEPPARD '50
Greenville, S.C.

Author's Query

I am writing a biography of my grandfather Douglas Goldring (1887-1960), a novelist and travel writer. Goldring was a prodigious correspondent, and I am seeking letters he wrote. My address is 49 Oakhurst Grove, East Dulwich, London SE22 9AH.

POLLY BIRD
London, England

PAW welcomes letters on topics of general interest to alumni. We reserve the right to edit for length and clarity. Our address is PAW, 41 William Street, Princeton, NJ 08540.

Alumni and friends who wish to consider supporting Princeton through gifts such as artwork, manuscripts, or rare books, now have a “window of opportunity” to do so.

For the first time in four years, a gift of personal property to supplement Princeton's valued collections will make you eligible for a charitable deduction for the full fair market value (based on a qualified appraisal) without being subject to Alternative Minimum Tax (AMT).

The window of opportunity is assured only for 1991, so if a review of your personal holdings and your intentions for Princeton warrant further informations, please call or write:

Gary Dicovitsky, Director of Planned Giving
Princeton University, P.O. Box 39, Princeton, NJ 08544-0039
(609) 258-6318 or 6354

In 1990, Forbes went in a different direction than any other major business magazine.

Last year, when ad budgets were squeezed tighter than ever, how come Forbes had its all-time record year in advertising? Because when times get tough and the chips are down, it is the gutsy editorial of Forbes that counts. In fact, we had the kind of year that our competitors would envy.

For instance in 1990:

- Forbes is the only major business magazine up in advertising pages.
- Forbes is the only major business magazine up in revenues.
- Forbes is the only one that's up in computer advertising.
- Forbes is the business leader in many categories. Such as automotive, travel, business services, and luxury goods.
- Biweekly Forbes ranks second among all magazines in total advertising pages. The only one ahead of us—for now—is a weekly.
- Forbes has a higher ratio of edit to ads than either Business Week or Fortune.

- Forbes is the winner of the prestigious Gerald Loeb Award For Distinguished Business Journalism.

So why in such a difficult year has Forbes continued to surge ahead? Because Forbes has hard-hitting, gutsy reporting.

Once we tackle a story, other magazines often follow our lead. But none of them offers the insight that Forbes does.

In fact, Forbes gives the upper echelons of American business more company stories, better information and more penetrating analyses than any of our major competitors.

So if you want your ads to work harder at reaching the executives who really count, give them the right direction. Forbes.

No guts. No story.

Forbes
Capitalist Tool
1100 Avenue of the Americas, New York, NY 10020

Shapiro Names Sonnenschein As University's New Provost

HUGO F. SONNENSCHN, an economics professor at Princeton from 1976 to 1988 and currently the dean of the School of Arts and Sciences at Penn, was appointed the university's provost in early February. He replaces Paul Benacerraf '52 *60, who announced last October that he would step down, citing a desire to devote more time to his family. Sonnenschein will take office July 15.

The provost is Princeton's second-ranking officer, responsible for the day-to-day operation of the university and all aspects of academic and nonacademic planning. The provost's foremost duty is chairing the Priorities Committee (PriCom), the body of faculty members, administrators, and students that recommends how the funds of the university's operating budget should be spent. As deputy to the president of the university, the provost is often regarded as the president's heir presumptive; the last provost to fulfill this scenario was William G. Bowen *58.

Sonnenschein, fifty, received his A.B. from the University of Rochester in 1961 and his Ph.D. from Purdue in 1964. He taught at Northwestern, the University of Minnesota, and the University of Massachusetts at Amherst before joining the Princeton faculty in 1976. He was named to the Class of 1926 Professorship in 1987. While at Princeton, Sonnenschein served on the PriCom and earned acclaim as the director of graduate studies in the economics department. Members of the university community greeted his appointment with glowing praise of his teaching and administrative talents.

Sonnenschein, Princeton's seventh provost, will be the fourth economist appointed to the post since it was created in 1966. His academic specialty concerns the economics of incentives. "I'm very interested in how people work together to be more than they are individually," Sonnenschein said of his new duties. "I like to think about how people interact most productively. That's what my research as an economist was about."

This background should stand him in good stead in a job so greatly concerned with the university's $427 million operating budget. Budget issues were not, however, a part of the selection process, according to President Shapiro. Shapiro,

Hugo Sonnenschein

also an economist, acknowledged that the university ideally seeks an administrative team of diverse academic viewpoints, but he expressed confidence that the new tandem would not be narrowly focused. It is the first time since Albert Rees served under President Bowen from 1975 to 1977 that economists have occupied the university's top two offices.

In his three-year stint as Penn's arts and sciences dean, Sonnenschein oversaw 500 faculty members and 8,400 students. His abbreviated tenure leaves him regretful. "A wise friend said to me, 'you can't always pick the times when opportunities come along,'" Sonnenschein said. "There's a part of me that said I needed another couple of years to finish things." The arts and sciences school is one-third of the way through a $250 million fundraising campaign.

Shapiro appointed Sonnenschein on the advice of the six-member Faculty Advisory Committee on Appointments and Advancements. With Dean of the Faculty Robert C. Gunning *55 serving as secretary, the committee interviewed six finalists culled from a field of about ninety. John M. Cooper, the chairman of the philosophy department and a member of the committee, said that Sonnenschein had all the right qualities: exceptional scholarly standing, extensive administrative experience, and broad views about education, research, and the general intellectual life of the university. Sonnenschein is married and has three grown children.

Notebook continues on page 10

More Alumni in Middle East

SINCE THE ISSUE of February 6, we have learned of several more alumni who are serving in the armed forces or working as journalists in the Middle East because of Operation Desert Storm. Their names follow. In that issue, we printed the wrong ranks for three alumni in the Army: William Aheron '88, Joseph Marshall '88, and Gregory Morzano '88 are first lieutenants, not second lieutenants.

ARMED FORCES

Capt. Arthur L. Clark '83,
197th Infantry Brigade, Army
Capt. John Lowry III '84, Marine Corps
Capt. William S. Nagle '85, Marine Corps
1st Lt. Charles L. Carrick '86,
1st Armored Division, Army
2nd Lt. Brian D. Wiley '87,
18th Airborne Corps, Army

Ens. Michael E. Engels '88,
U.S.S. Ranger, Navy
2nd Lt. Robbie L. Fazen '89,
Signal Corps, Army
2nd Lt. Paul W. Mapp '89,
Field Artillery, Army

NEWS MEDIA

Judith Miller *72, correspondent,
The New York Times

Jonathan C. Karp '85, correspondent,
Jerusalem bureau, Reuters

University Awards Sachs Scholarship

ANDREA RICHTER '91, an economics major from Bethesda, Maryland, has won the Daniel M. Sachs Class of 1960 Graduating Scholarship. She will use the scholarship for two years of study at Oxford University.

Established in 1970 to honor the memory of Sachs, a Rhodes Scholar and star athlete, the scholarship provides a stipend for either a year of field research anywhere in the world or two years of study at Oxford. The scholarship is awarded annually to a senior in whose future career it would be most likely to benefit the public. Richter will receive a total of $33,000 toward her pursuit of a master's degree in development economics.

Richter plans to work on ways to adapt traditional economic theories, devised to explain conditions in the industrialized world, to the economies of the developing world. Oxford boasts one of the world's strongest faculties in development economics, as well as a student body in which less-developed countries are well represented. She is particularly interested in private-sector development of emerging economies; after receiving her M.A., she intends to pursue either a Ph.D. or an M.B.A. in preparation for a career with international economic institutions.

In her senior thesis, Richter, who has a 3.8 grade-point average, is examining the effects of economic policies and public works on seasonal rural-urban migration in Thailand. A member of the International Relations Council and the Student Volunteers Council at Princeton, Richter interned last summer in the Trade and Industry Division of the World Bank.

"We picked Pine Run so we wouldn't have to leave anything behind, including our way of living."

Pine Run Residents

☐ Pine Run is the retirement community created for people who want room to be independent. With 1,000 square-foot two-bedrooms and spacious one-bedroom-and-den apartments, that's easy.

- ☐ There's space enough for your favorite family heirlooms. And walk-in closets so big, you'll be tempted to create an extra room.
- ☐ There is no entry fee at Pine Run. Just a monthly fee that includes housecleaning, utilities, maintenance services, a meal each day and more. And there's 24-hour skilled nursing care if you need it.
- ☐ When we say you'll fit in at Pine Run, we mean more than you and your treasures. From hobbies at the Crafts Barn to intellectual pursuits with book groups and continuing education courses, you can be as active as you want. See for yourself why the smart people pick Pine Run. Call 1-800-992-8992.

Ferry & Iron Hill Roads, Doylestown, PA 18901

Mail to: Marketing Dept.
Pine Run, Ferry & Iron Hill Roads
Doylestown, PA 18901
Tell me more about Pine Run, one of the best retirement values around.

Name _____
Address _____ Apt. _____
City _____ State _____ Zip _____
Telephone (____) _____

PAW Welcomes New Staff

WITH THIS ISSUE, PAW welcomes to its staff David W. Miller '89, our new staff writer and associate editor in charge of campus news and sports. Readers may recall Miller from his contributions to PAW as an "On the Campus" writer during his senior year. Miller majored in politics and was a co-founder and co-editor-in-chief of The Princeton Sentinel, a semi-monthly newspaper of political affairs.

Miller comes to PAW from International Economic Insights, a bimonthly policy journal published by the Institute for International Economics, in Washington, D.C. As a freelance writer he has contributed articles on economics and business to the Sunday Independent, a newspaper in London. Miller replaces David Williamson '84, who left PAW for a senior position on the writing staff of The Nature Conservancy.

We also congratulate Nuala O'Connor '89 for her promotion to associate editor. As every class secretary knows, O'Connor handles the prodigious task of coordinating, editing, and laying out the pages of the class notes and memorials, and she is responsible for developing the features that appear in the class notes department.

PRINCETON FORRESTAL CENTER

- 2,200 acres situated in an unspoiled, natural environment
- Corporate residents include Merrill Lynch, IBM, Siemens, American Re-Insurance, First Boston, GE-RCA, and Squibb
- Ready-to-develop sites with all infrastructure in place
- Located just an hour away from New York and Philadelphia, with convenient access by air, ground, and rail transportation
- Scanticon-Princeton Executive Conference Center and Hotel
- Princeton Forrestal Village features:
 - 300 room Marriott Hotel
 - over 100 shops and restaurants
 - child care facility
 - professional office space
- Recreational amenities:
 - jogging trail/bike paths
 - picnic areas
 - organized softball and volleyball leagues
- First-class office space available for immediate occupancy

*For more information
call or write:*

Princeton Forrestal Center
105 College Road East
3rd Floor
Princeton, New Jersey 08540
(609) 452-7720

Princeton
Forrestal Center

Era of the All-Male Club Ends as Tiger Inn Bickers Its First Women

AFTER TWELVE YEARS, four lawsuits, one countersuit, and scores of pickets, protests, dialogues, discussions, and disagreements, the sun set on the era of all-male eating clubs in early February. Tiger Inn, which had remained defiant despite increased pressure to admit women over the past decade, finally yielded to a ruling by the New Jersey Supreme Court in the suit by Sally Frank '80 against the last two all-male clubs, Ivy and T.I. Ivy accepted women last fall.

On January 22, the United States Supreme Court announced a series of cases it would and would not review; by failing to accept T.I.'s petition for a writ of certiorari, the court denied the club its last chance to stay all-male. On February 3, coed bicker began, and five days later, T.I. officially admitted its first twenty-seven female members.

Because T.I. members had long insisted that their constitutional right of free association was being violated, and because the club's undergraduates had voted in October against coeducation (reversing a vote of last spring), few people knew what to expect before Bicker Week. Some observers warned that female candidates for membership would be insulted or taunted (or worse), or that recalcitrant members would blackball all the women to keep the club all-male. Despite these dire predictions, the process passed without incident. In the final analysis, the most notable feature of the new T.I. was how quickly coeducation became a virtual "non-issue."

On a balmy Sunday at the beginning of the week, members of the four selective clubs in the central part of the Street—Ivy, T.I., Cottage, and Cap and Gown— assembled on the stone walls in front of their clubs to welcome the parade of prospectives making their way toward the first bicker sessions. In recent years, protests in support of coeducation had preempted the festive atmosphere, but this time, an unofficial competition emerged among the four clubs. Like freshmen during Orientation Week, sophomores tend to stroll to bicker in nervous packs of five or six. As each group of candidates arrived at their club of choice, loud cheers went up from the membership. T.I. men greeted sophomore women not with jeers and boos but with handshakes, hugs, and "high-fives"—as they did the male candidates.

Coed bicker was "just like any other party at T.I.," one senior member of the club told me, "except that you go out of your way to meet as many sophomores as you can." The senior noted that T.I.'s bicker process, which The Daily Princetonian has referred to as "notoriously bacchanalian," was toned down, but, he said, this moderation would have occurred in any event because of the university's increased concern over alcohol abuse. Stockton Williams '91, T.I.'s undergraduate president, agreed: "numerous members have told me—and sometimes to their own surprise—that the essence of T.I. bicker remains."

Tiger Inn: women now welcome.

But even as bicker proceeded, students continued to debate the justness and implications of the courts' decisions. (In fact, Ivy is still pursuing its case in federal district court.) In an editorial in the conservative Princeton Tory, publisher Anna Bray '92 drew parallels between the battle over the coeducation of all-female Mills College, in California, and that of Tiger Inn. She wrote, "It seems that many of the women who are trying to force society in a gender-neutral mold have no problem at all with all-female organizations." Both Mills and T.I. have "valid arguments," Bray concluded, but "only one side is protected by the courts."

Jennifer Weiner '91, a self-proclaimed "activist on the issue of coeducation," wrote in the Prince that she "greeted the news of Tiger Inn's impending coeducation with surprisingly mixed feelings." Weiner said that she had hoped the "members would admit women because they saw that it was right, not because they saw that they had no other choice." But in an essay published in the Prince, Williams and Richard Thomas '66, the president of T.I.'s graduate board, wrote that "For those who have disagreed [with us], we have always respected your position" and acknowledged that "a bygone era is bygone." After defending T.I.'s course of legal action over the last decade as "honorable" and "the position of Tiger Inn" as "rightful if not right," Williams and Thomas asserted that "To a man, we are positively committed to the new era at TI without a hint of regret or reservation."

The coeducation of the last all-male club seems to have had a beneficial effect on all five selective clubs, which showed a collective increase in the number of prospective members of 17 percent over 1990. T.I. and Ivy enjoyed the largest upswings, as both clubs attracted more than double the number of candidates from last year, when both were still all-male. Williams attributed T.I.'s increased popularity to the presence of both women candidates and some men who might previously have avoided the club because it was all-male or because there was social pressure to not bicker there. The sophomore women I spoke to typically said that they were bickering at T.I. because many of their friends were members or were attempting to join.

With the first coed sign-ins at all the eating clubs this week, a sense of normalcy returned to Prospect Avenue. The pickets and protests that marked bicker in years past gave way to a sense of relief and celebration. For better or worse, the clubs are all coed now, and there's a good chance that within four years few undergraduates will remember (or even care about) the contentious debate that polarized the campus for most of the last decade. "That's probably true," said Williams. "I certainly hope it is."

—Matthew T. Henshon '91

Matt Henshon, a senior from Wilbraham, Massachusetts, is majoring in the Woodrow Wilson School and plays on the varsity basketball team.

In 1832 Princeton hired the most famous scientist of his day by offering him $1,000 a year, $100 for equipment, a house, and a cow...

According to Dean of the Faculty Robert Gunning, things have changed a lot since then, especially the cost of faculty excellence.

“Joseph Henry was the leading American scientist after Benjamin Franklin. The unit of inductance in electromagnetism is called the ‘henry’ after him. Believe it or not, the College recruited him by offering him $1,000 a year, a house, a cow, and $100 for electrical equipment. Now it can cost millions instead of hundreds, to set up a lab...

“A decline in faculty support means we simply won’t be able to get first-rate laboratory research scientists. If we can’t offer these people the equipment they need, they’ll go elsewhere. Of even greater importance, we’ll lose an opportunity to educate undergraduates and graduates with the most up-to-date equipment. We could still produce good students, but their training would be out of date. We wouldn’t be offering them the best...

“In some ways, Princeton’s working arrangement is superior to many of its competitors. The emphasis is on teaching: The faculty teaches both graduates and undergraduates. In fact, many Princeton faculty are as noted for the students they have produced as for their own scholarship. There is deep appreciation here of the importance of passing on knowledge to the next generation.”

Your gift helps Princeton attract—and keep—top-notch faculty, faculty members who are committed to teaching and pursuing important research. Won’t you do what you can to help?

Annual Giving
pays for quality at Princeton

EARLY IN DECEMBER, IN THE BASEMENT of Princeton University's Robertson Hall, Democratic leaders in the Congress were holding a summit meeting with their Republican counterparts and Bush Administration officials to hammer out the fiscal-year 1991 budget. Tempers were on edge. A budget agreement crafted in a summit meeting a few days earlier had been narrowly rejected by the House Republicans, who were now developing their own budget proposal. But the summiteers were trying again, knowing that no budget could pass without the support of both the Democratic majority and the Administration. On a chalkboard the Democrats had just finished writing their "Revised Preliminary Deficit Reduction Estimates."

"We're going to stick with our opening position," said Nicholas Brady, the Secretary of the Treasury. "Our opening position was a compromise from where we wanted to be."

"That's totally unacceptable," shot back Representative William Gray (D-Pennsylvania).

Representative Leon Panetta (D-California), chairing the meeting, objected further. "You've called our proposal an ideological proposal, and not a compromise proposal. But if we stay with your capital-gains measure, we'll see a $78 billion loss, not a $55 billion gain."

"May I be recognized by the chair?" asked John Sununu, the White House chief of staff.

"No sir, you may not," said Panetta. "There're more comments I have to make."

Senator George Mitchell (D-Maine) joined the fray. "We can prove that all of our numbers have program cuts behind them. We have defense programs offered by Secretary Cheney in February that he would be willing to cut."

"These represent serious proposals, not bargaining positions," continued Panetta. "My colleagues are urging that we walk out of this room."

Now Sununu had the floor. "I'll try to be briefer than the chairman. The numbers you had yesterday were drawn out of thin air. You're cutting domestic spending by $10 billion over five years?"

"You have $50 billion in revenue from a capital-gains cut—that's laughable!" retorted Mitchell.

A MOMENT LATER, "SUNUNU" AND "MITCHELL" TOOK A break from their role playing to pour cups of soda at a side table and relax in their true identities as Jonathan Meyer and Greg Felker, first-year students in the Woodrow Wilson School's master's program in public and international affairs. But the action continued around them, with Brady, Gray, and Panetta played, respectively, by students Michael Hood, William Kincaid, and Nelson Fernandez.

"These cuts up here represent a lot of debate," said Panetta. "We're ready to play ball. If you won't negotiate, we'll pass a bill like this."

"... and get vetoed," interjected Sununu.

"That's the President's decision, if he wants to shut down the government."

"No, that's your decision."

Hours later, the meeting ended in a stalemate.

PORK-BARREL W POLITICS AT WOODY WOO

Grad Students at the Wilson School Simulate the Great Budget Debate of 1990

By William L. Driscoll GS

The summit had broken down. But there was much more work to do. The students had been given the task, as part of their core course in political and organizational analysis, of producing by the Christmas vacation a budget package that met the Gramm-Rudman deficit-reduction targets.

Professor John Ellwood, of the University of California at Berkeley, developed the budget game at the Wilson School in 1983 and has since taken it to the Amos Tuck School of Business at Dartmouth and the Hubert H. Humphrey Institute of Public Affairs at the University of Minnesota. He returned to Princeton for two weeks in December to help advise students on the project, and during a break in the summit meeting he emphasized the difficulty of the task. "When I've run this with business students and business executives, they say, 'Hey, this is easy—I can balance the budget.' Most Americans think that if they wiped out all welfare and foreign aid, they could eliminate the deficit. In fact, that would only meet one-third of the deficit—and then they'd run into programs they like." Cutting the deficit, he said, "involves real pain for citizens and corporations that receive government benefits." To drive his point home, Ellwood added, "The one program this group will never cut is student aid."

The simulation of Congress's budget deliberations, now an annual event at the Wilson School, began in early November, when students requested the roles they wanted to play. Each student then researched his or her assigned politician, using the Almanac of American Politics, transcripts of Congressional testimony and debates, and contacts with the politician's staff. On a university-sponsored trip to Washington, students attended presentations on the budget-setting process and met with Congressional staffers. On occasion, the learning process can go both ways: last year, a staffer working for Representative Bill Frenzel (R-Minnesota) asked the student playing the congressman to send in a copy of her proposed budget, so the Republicans could glean ideas for their own deliberations.

Once the newly minted politicians knew how they should think, in order to faithfully represent their roles, they pored over the Congressional Budget Office's report Reducing the Deficit: Spending and Revenue Options, looking for spending cuts and tax increases that could balance the budget in a manner least painful to their constituencies.

Then it was time to negotiate. Earlier in the course, students had learned negotiating techniques by reading Getting to Yes and other texts on negotiations, and by role playing some negotiation scenarios. The idea is that a public manager, to be effective, must know how to negotiate with various interest groups.

Some of the most critical negotiations went on within each party during the summit proceedings. Sylvia Martinez, a summit participant in her role as Senator Jim Sasser (D-Tennessee), took pains to reach out to all twenty-nine Democratic representatives in order to maintain party unity behind a progressive package. Lael Sharp, as Representative Les Aspin (D-Wisconsin), reported later, "You knew the leadership knew what you thought, but you didn't know if that made a difference." Annamaria Watrin, playing Representative Mike Espy (D-Mississippi), reflected, "With real-life situations, usually a small group is making the decision. How you as someone with less seniority are going to work with those leaders—that's an important skill to learn."

In the midst of negotiations, the professors teaching the public-management course could not resist joining the game. In an attempt to simulate the political and economic changes to which politicians must respond, Dean of the Wilson School Donald Stokes '51 '52, Professor John DiIulio, Professor Mark Hughes, and Ellwood concocted two dramatic news reports. The first was that a coup had overthrown Mikhail Gorbachev; with tanks ringing the Kremlin, the Soviet military command had promised to turn over the government to Communist party hard-liners. Faculty members also fabricated remarks to Congress by Alan Greenspan, the chairman of the Federal Reserve Board: "It will be very difficult to avoid a deep recession without a budget agreement that truly meets Congress's stated goal of a $500 billion reduction in the deficit. The use of overly optimistic economic assumptions or accounting tricks is likely to lead to further declines in the equity markets." The stories were published by students acting as journalists in the budget exercise, but they had little impact. "As far as news

"Democratic legislators" plot strategy during a pause for caucusing in the budget debate.

While floor leaders marshaled their votes, last-minute
wheeling and dealing took place, appropriately enough, in the lobby of the Woodrow Wilson School.

from Greenspan, nobody paid much attention to it," said Mike Hood.

After the summit broke down, negotiations took a different tack, as authors of five different budget proposals competed for support. Coalitions kept shifting until the final vote.

One of the new budgets began with a commitment by one Democratic and one Republican representative to work together on a bipartisan bill. Ben Steinberg, as Representative Frenzel, had seen why the summit had failed. At first, he said, "Democrats wanted Republicans to lay a package down so they could escape the tax onus." That strategy led to "many hours of fruitless negotiations, with people growing increasingly upset." At this point, Frenzel thought it would be wise to deal one-on-one with Representative Panetta and design a middle-of-the-road budget intended to pass the Congress and avoid a Presidential veto. As Steinberg put it, "There was one lonely football on the field, and we picked it up and ran with it."

Meanwhile, many Republicans and a few conservative Democrats had rallied behind the Penny-Kasich budget, drafted by students Irene Skricki and Jonathan Mitchell. Liberal Democrats favored a plan put forth by students Yee-Woo Guo and Naoshi Hirose, or an even more liberal bill prepared by Peter Cannavo. Republicans proposed a second conservative bill after "it dawned on us," said Mitchell, "that Penny-Kasich could die without even a vote," because a Democratic parliamentary maneuver was holding up Penny-Kasich until all other bills had been debated and voted upon.

ON THE FINAL DAY OF THE BUDGET EXERCISE, students donned their dresses and suits and, as representatives and senators, met in Dodds Auditorium to testify about taxes, food stamps, and the space program, all the while trying to keep track of how much support each bill had. Administration officials lobbied hard for the Penny-Kasich budget, threatening a veto of Panetta-Frenzel and the more liberal plans. But after the liberal packages failed and the Administration players saw that Panetta-Frenzel had enough votes to override a veto, they withdrew their threat. The Panetta-Frenzel bill passed by a vote of thirty-one to fourteen. The students' budget reduced the deficit by raising corporate taxes, cutting farm subsidies, and shifting the burden of funding social services to the states. It was close to the bill that President Bush actually signed last fall, although it had fewer defense cuts.

In an evaluation of the exercise three weeks after the final vote, students recalled the long, frustrating hours of negotiations, but they were unanimous in their enthusiasm for the project. "I learned so much about the budget, and about negotiations," said Meg Murray. Benjamin Chan, noting the preponderance of liberals among his classmates, said, "It's a good experience to play somebody with convictions diametrically opposed to our own." Sylvia Martinez said she felt that she and her classmates had done as well on the budget as the real Congress had. And Jonathan Rapping went so far as to say, "I learned a lot. I'd like to do it again."

William L. Driscoll is completing his second and final year in the Wilson School's master's in public affairs program.

MESSRS. ROSEN AND WILLIG GO TO WASHINGTON

Two Economists on Leave from Princeton Deal with "Real-World" Tax and Antitrust Issues

By Stephen R. Dujack '76

IN ECONOMICS, THERE IS THE WORLD OF theory and there is the "real world" of people, businesses, markets—and politics. The two merge in the nation's capital, where two professors from Princeton's economics department have taken leaves of absence to serve as advisers on their academic specialties in the Treasury and Justice departments.

In Washington, problems arise at a moment's notice and often have to be resolved just as quickly. Just before the elections last fall, for instance, Harvey S. Rosen, now the deputy assistant secretary of the treasury for tax analysis, had to come up with the Bush Administration's response to reports that hundreds of high-income Americans had paid no income taxes in 1987. Rosen heads a team of nearly fifty economists in the tax-analysis bureau at Treasury. In less than a day, the answer went up to the top floor: some had suffered large financial losses, some had paid taxes overseas, some had significant medical bills. Back to policy work until the next emergency.

Six weeks later, the press reported that two major airlines were exploring a merger. Robert D. Willig, currently the deputy assistant attorney general in the antitrust division, had to examine the two carriers' notification of intent to merge to see if governmental action might become necessary. Like Rosen, Willig heads a team of nearly fifty economists. Depending on his review, he might have initiated an investigation into whether Justice would intervene in the proposed merger.

Economist Harvey Rosen moved from Princeton to Washington, and his blackboard went with him.

He had more time to respond than Rosen, but his caseload, of about a hundred investigations a year, means that he, too, has to make a major decision every few days.

There are more similarities between Rosen and Willig than that they are both full professors from Princeton on leave in Washington, where they work for the executive branch at the deputy-assistant level in cabinet departments and lead almost identically sized teams of economists paired with similarly sized teams of lawyers. Both specialize in microeconomics, the field concerned with the price system and resource allocation. Both use the word "efficiency" frequently when discussing policy. ("The concept of economy is in a large measure a concept of efficiency," reads the preface of my old microeconomics textbook.) And both seem honestly to believe that the government's recent economic policy is achieving greater efficiency in the marketplace. But their academic specialties have landed them in different departments in Washington, about six blocks apart along Pennsylvania Avenue.

"EFFICIENCY, ALONG WITH FAIRNESS, WAS THE DRIVING force behind the 1986 Tax Reform Act," says Rosen. This epochal reform bill was produced by a coalition between a conservative president, Ronald Reagan, and liberal Democrats in Congress, including Senator Bill Bradley '65 (D-New Jersey). That such a pact could be made means that "tax philosophy has changed an awful lot," according to Rosen. "The prevailing philosophy before was that high marginal tax rates didn't matter and that taxes were primarily a way to redistribute income and to create countercyclical effects—a tax cut to stimulate a sluggish economy, for instance. The philosophy now is that tax incentives do matter. The philosophy of the 1986 act is that individual investment decisions should be guided by market prices and personal preferences—that's efficient. If the cost of vanilla and chocolate ice cream are the same, people will buy the one they like best. But if vanilla is taxed high enough, a number of people who prefer it will buy chocolate instead—that's inefficient. In industry, the taxes on such capital as equipment and structures were guiding investment decisions and producing inefficient business practices.

"In many respects," he adds, "the tax reform was a great success. First, to a substantial extent it has succeeded in leveling the playing field with respect to different types of investments. Second, it lowered the marginal tax rates on individuals, which is desirable for incentive reasons. Third, it took millions of low-income Americans off the income-tax rolls altogether. In sum, it is a more efficient and fair tax structure."

When he's asked about the effects of the 1981 tax act, the huge cutback in rates that Reagan theorized would actually generate greater revenue, Rosen, forty-one years old and built along the proportions of a dollar bill, gets up from his seat in his third-floor office that looks north across Pennsylvania Avenue. Ever the professor—he has a blackboard scrawled with microeconomic equations in his office—he pulls down a copy of the federal budget, a paperback the size of a telephone book, and thumbs through it to the right page to illustrate a point.

"Revenues aren't the only thing you look at when you set tax policy," he says. "Put another way, tax policy could be designed to yield higher revenues through higher rates, but does that mean it would be good? I think most economists would say the tax cuts didn't pay for themselves. But that's not necessarily a bad thing. The net effect of the cutbacks has been beneficial to the economy. Incentives, compliance, efficient allocation of resources—these can all be negatively affected when tax rates are too high.

"You sort of get the impression that Reagan came in and all of a sudden there were no tax revenues left. That's not borne out by the facts." Here he points to a column of figures. "Federal tax revenues as a proportion of gross national product have been relatively constant through the eighties. In fiscal-year 1980—before Reagan—they were 19.4 percent. In fiscal 1989, they were 19.2 percent. Taxes have indeed increased in real terms, but not compared to G.N.P. There's simply no drama in these numbers."

Rosen believes that financial decisions should largely be left to the market rather than be pushed artificially through the tax system, but he does allow that taxes can create greater efficiency in certain cases where the market fails to work adequately. One of these cases is the environment. As John Kenneth Galbraith wrote in Economics and the Public Purpose: "By internalizing such external diseconomies—by requiring the producer and thus his customer to pay the costs of preventing pollution or by taxing to pay for the eventual cleanup or to compensate for the eventual damage—the defect in the market is eliminated and the problem is thereby solved."

According to Rosen, "one of the major contributions of economics in general is to get people to think of externality problems as efficiency problems that can be dealt with by quasi-market solutions. One part of the new Clean Air Act attempts to take that into account with the Bush Administration's proposal for a marketable pollution-permitting system. The old act relied solely on what is called command-and-control—strict regulations of what can be emitted by a particular plant. That has proven to be not only inefficient but ineffective as well. But you have to put the tax on the externality-producing activity. That's more efficient in making the price of various commodities reflect the full social cost. If you want to combat the externality caused by the use of boom boxes, you could put a tax on all radios, but that would punish everybody instead of just those who irritate other people."

How to tell a Princeton prof if he's not in tweed? For Robert Willig, the pipe is a dead giveaway.

WILLIG LOOKS MORE POLITICIAN THAN PROFESSOR, WITH a ready smile and an ebullient manner that could tell you to go to hell in such a way that you actually would look forward to the trip, to borrow a phrase. His specialty is industrial organization. "That's where the bottom line is—the business-government relationship. How government should relate to business to make the economy work as efficiently as possible."

Corporate acquisitions and combinations that tend to substantially diminish competition are illegal, Willig declares in his third-floor office, which looks south across Constitution Avenue. "That's because such mergers produce markets that are less efficient, and therefore less beneficial to consumers. If competition is so robust that it will not be diminished by a merger, we do not seek to impede. Some mergers, in fact, involve efficiencies because they combine complementary assets."

"The Hart-Scott-Rodino Act holds that parties involved in sizable mergers have to notify the government thirty days before consummation. The Department of Justice and the Federal Trade Commission get copies of the forms filed by the corporations. These filings increased tremendously during the 1980s. They got as high as five thousand in 1989 but now are down to two-thirds of that level. Of the thousands of notifications, however, each agency will decide to investigate only about a hundred cases."

Willig adds that he doesn't want to give the impression that all the economics division does is analyze mergers. "We also have a strong regulatory role in what is called competition advocacy because it promotes efficiency. What we do is try to persuade regulatory agencies in the federal government—the Interstate Commerce Commission, the Federal Communications Commission, the Commodities Futures Trading Corporation—to use better policies from the point of view of enhancing competition."

"In one case, the F.C.C. was going to have a proceeding on proposed new rules for regulating A.T.&T.'s long-distance business, and our staff felt that the outcome of that would have a significant impact on competition in the telecommunications industry. So we intervened by testifying in the proceeding."

If any industry can be said to be merger prone, it is the airline business. "In airlines, we are continually faced with the need to investigate acquisitions, asset transfers, and pricing behavior." The economist nonetheless says that the deregulation of the industry is an example of how efficiency is enhanced by allowing the market to work: "Before deregulation, there was a high level of direct subsidies to a relatively few airlines and a system of price regulation in return for an agreement that they would service low-volume areas. That traded service for competition, though. As the market began to work, deregulation at first dispersed the service to new providers; any carrier could now get involved. That was good. Then the architecture of the routes changed dramatically, and in ways that no one expected. Before deregulation, there were linear routes—A to B to C and on up to F, say, then back to A. Now the airlines use a system of hubs with service to the spokes. This is more efficient and more cost effective because you don't need the same size plane going out to the spokes as you do going from hub to hub.

"The fears of some that deregulation would isolate low-volume areas have not proved true. As a result of the change in architecture, small places are better served even with diminished subsidies and, more recently, a fallback in the number of carriers." There have, however, been some trade-offs. "Even though more places are served, and at lower costs, many passengers cannot get nonstop service where they used to. On the whole, though, the consumer is still well ahead."

BOTH PROFESSORS SAY THAT THEY HAVE BENEFITED FROM their tours in government—and hope that the government has benefited in return. "Having a boss is the biggest change, but it's all been positive," says Willig. "He allows me to teach him the economics he doesn't know, and he teaches me how to live and survive in Washington."

"Not that I haven't learned a few things, but when it comes to how Washington works, I'm not overly surprised," Willig continues. "I was very well informed in advance. I had many interactions with the division as a professor, since economics is a policy-driven field. And the work of so many of my colleagues is in the air here. The debates that I'm experiencing firsthand are very much the same debates that I experienced at Princeton. I would not have been shocked to find that everything the Woodrow Wilson School teaches about Washington was based on mythology, but that turns out not to have been the case." (Willig holds an appointment at the Wilson School, too.)

Rosen also says that the biggest change for him was getting used to having a boss. That aside, "in government, I've become much less concerned with theoretical and methodological issues and much more with day-to-day questions. I've learned a lot more about tax institutions and the tax-making process. But most people reading the modern literature on governmental decision making would not be grossly surprised by how things are done here." One discovery, Rosen says, was the level of interagency disagreement. "Any given agency seeking to promote its agenda may find it useful to propose a tax incentive. The Treasury's institutional interest is to maintain the integrity of the tax code. We're the junkyard dogs of the Administration. I learned how to shake my head 'no' a lot."

Any final thoughts? "While Washington can be addicting, the loss of income and research time overcome the addiction," says Professor Willig. "It was a nice change of pace, but I'm eager to get back," says Professor Rosen.

Stephen R. Dujack '76 is editor of The Environmental Forum, in Washington, D.C.

Moral Education in the University

In the last issue, Professor Amy Gutmann wrote about the University Center for Human Values. My thoughts on the role of moral education in the university are taken from this year's Report of the President.—H.T.S.

From many quarters in contemporary society, there is growing concern about the lack of principled and responsible behavior in both public and private life, and about the continuing vitality of those moral, spiritual, and cultural commitments that bind us together as a community and give focus and meaning to our lives. The sources of this concern—examples of unprincipled and irresponsible behavior, both on and off campus—are only too easy to identify. Within academic communities, students, faculty, and administrators do not always exhibit a shared commitment to such fundamental values of a community of learning as honesty, respect for evidence, and sustaining thoughtful communication despite disagreement. Moreover, in any pluralistic society there will always be anxiety about whose ethics should prevail or about how we should take into account the interests and commitments of those with traditions or values that are different from our own. In this context, the place of moral education in the university curriculum becomes an intriguing, and important, question.

Harold T. Shapiro

A student's moral education comes not only from the curriculum, but from the behavior of the institution. What values are reflected in the university's rules and procedures? How fairly does the university treat its students? How fairly does it treat its employees? How does the university relate to the community? How faithfully do faculty and administrators keep their promises and defend the values of open debate that are central to a learning environment? Does the university remain a symbol of enlightenment and tolerance, or is it an institution committed to the status quo and its own privileges? Is feedback to students a thoughtful exercise in judgment and honest criticism, or is it punitive or patronizing?

The answers to these questions convey important messages about how we perceive our obligations to each other and our life as a community, but they do not relieve us of the responsibility to think hard about the role of ethics in the curriculum itself. I recognize that many are apprehensive about the establishment of any particular moral orthodoxy, and that many feel it is no longer appropriate for an institution to decide what or whose ethics ought to be taught. In my judgment, this concern is valid, but it need not prevent us from addressing this issue. The avenues to moral education that are of greatest interest to me focus the responsibility for making moral choices not on the institution but on each individual student.

For example, there is much to be said for a curriculum that offers students an opportunity to develop their capacities to identify and analyze ethical issues and reinforces the fact that we can learn a great deal from our disagreements on moral questions. A worthy objective is achieved if we can convey an understanding that the capacity to choose is a critical aspect of being a moral person. If students then begin to focus on which constraints they will decide to accept as their individual choices, the university will have made a major contribution to its students' moral education. Clearly, complex moral reasoning is not a substitute for moral behavior, but it is a beginning; if we unite this capacity with a commitment to democracy and concern for others, then a great deal has been accomplished.

Once again, some historical perspective is helpful. Ever since the founding of the American republic, there has been some level of anxiety on moral issues. It has never been clear how to balance the tensions between biblical faith and rationalism, between self interest and community interest, and between individual liberty and communal values. At the moment, many thoughtful observers seem to be searching for ways to reduce what they perceive as an increasing fragmentation of the social order that results from greater emphasis on individual liberty, private property, market competition, and due process than on self restraint and communal concerns and responsibilities.

Within universities, there was a time when the president and trustees adopted a moral consensus for the institution and insisted that students and faculty members adhere to it. This was comforting for many, oppressive for others, and had little to contribute to the broader national community that was excluded from the life of the campus.

Although I am certainly not recommending a return to "the good old days," there are valuable traditions and insights available to us from those days that can help us address the moral dilemmas of our time. The university should continue to play a role in helping us find meaning and moral significance in our lives; it should help us identify contemporary interpretations and applications of "the golden rule"; and it should prepare us for the inevitable fragility and anxiety of any society that chooses pluralism and democracy rather than official orthodoxy or totalitarianism and that lacks either a dominant religion or a strong kinship tradition.

In my view, the response of today's university to the desire for greater stability and moral significance in our lives must be different from the responses of earlier times. The contemporary university must ensure that the great questions of human existence are before its students and faculty and that students have an opportunity to gain experience in addressing these questions. Further, we must try to exhibit—by word and deed—an exemplary commitment to ethically informed principles, and a fundamental attachment not to our privileges, but to our underlying values and responsibilities.

"A student's moral education comes not only from the curriculum, but from the behavior of the institution."

Dressed for Krill

THE TOTAL PENGUIN

James Gorman '71 • Prentice Hall, $29.95

Left: The rockhopper penguin, the author's favorite penguin species, is as aggressive as it looks. Right: The author with a few thousand king penguins.

IF YOU LIKE PENGUINS, those appealing, flightless, cold-water birds in white ties and tails, then James Gorman's The Total Penguin is your dish. Most of us must share the author's warm spot for penguins because, as he reminds us (and seems to have fun doing), advertisers for years have used penguins to sell us cigarettes, coffee, tea, soft drinks, books (the publisher Penguin Books), greeting cards, and tickets to the Pittsburgh Penguins' hockey games. Only dogs, cats, mice, and rabbits seem to run ahead of penguins in cartoons, comic strips, movies, and advertisements. Gorman does not mention that one of Batman's nemeses is The Penguin, a diabolical tuxedoed character who walks with a waddle, but—never mind—he covers practically everything else.

The Total Penguin is based on a recent trip Gorman made to the Falkland Islands, Antarctica, and several subantarctic islands. His delightful narrative style, often interlaced with humor and gee-whiz facts, makes for easy reading. The reader is also treated to color photographs by Frans Lanting, a gifted nature photographer with a long list of credits in books, calendars, and National Geographic. There are also a few images by other photographers, notably two by Anna E. Zuckerman '80, who as a staff member of Society Expeditions has made many trips to the timeless White Continent.

Gorman is not a penguin expert, nor does he claim to be, but as a writer on scientific subjects he knows which experts to interview and how to gather data. He also has a keen eye in the field. As a result, the reader learns the latest penguin lore, from the egg to the grave, on systematics, territorial claims, courtship, habitats, and conservation. Gorman tells us that there are sixteen to eighteen species of penguin (depending upon whether you're a "lumper" or a "splitter" of species and subspecies) divided among six genera, and they live not only in Antarctica but also in the Falklands, on the circumpolar subantarctic islands, around the capes of Good Hope and Horn, in New Zealand and southern Australia, and along the Humboldt current. The Galápagos penguin even survives astride the equator, on the western side of these islands, swept by the cold waters of the Humboldt.

We learn that penguins range in size from the sixteen-inch, two-and-a-half-pound little blue penguin of Australia and New Zealand to the four-foot, sixty-plus-pound emperor penguin of Antarctica and several subantarctic islands. Penguins spend most of their lives at sea, coming ashore only to breed and, later, to molt. Awkward on land, they are superb swimmers at sea, where, says Gorman, they are "transformed." Aided by a torpedolike shape, excellent insulation, powerful paddlelike flippers (wings), and heavy, solid bones for ballast, they can "fly" underwater. When breaking the surface to gulp air, they resemble small porpoises.

On land, some penguin colonies number into the millions—penguins as far as the eye can see, amid guano-encrusted rocks. Speaking of one such colony, Gorman writes, "God has failed to restrain himself and has gone altogether too far." A classic Far Side cartoon by Gary Larsen shows one penguin in a vast throng of lookalikes singing, "Oh, I gotta be me, I just gotta be me." Strangely, they all seem to be rugged individuals. They are also not "Disneyed" characters, according to Gorman. "Real penguins have too much grit. They defy scorn. They thrive in incomprehensible abundance in environments so harsh that the noise and odor of the birds become, after a while, welcome." Penguin noises, depending on the species and the mood, can be brays, squawks, nasal bleats, barks, or trumpet calls. The Adélie cries "Ark! Ark!" Penguin parents use sound, not sight, to locate their young and to communicate with others.

These birds are anything but docile. Their courtship antics, territorial squabbles, and day-to-day waddling about certainly invite our amusement, but, Gorman reminds us, they are really like many of us—determined, feisty, noisy, ill-tempered, and self-absorbed. He describes how they peck each other and batter one another with their flippers for a variety of reasons, in particular lunging at any who pass too close to their nests or young. Emperors are so aggressive in their desire to be parents that they will incubate egglike pieces of ice, steal eggs, or lie in wait to "chick-nap" another's offspring. But the penguin's major goals (like most of ours) are simply to eat, mate, and survive.

Do penguins, living as they do in such remote and often harsh environments, have enemies? In Antarctica, several species of skua, a predacious, gull-like bird, are relentless in grabbing penguin eggs and young. Meanwhile, in the water, ferocious leopard seals take adults, often lying in wait to ambush them along well-traveled routes—a lethal version of the old swimming-pool game of fox and the chickens. Other predators of penguin eggs and young are the giant petrel and the kelp gull. The all-white sheathbill, a pigeonlike bird, goes for eggs and sometimes manages to gobble up the krill penguin parents regurgitate for their young. Outside Antarctica, the introduction of such animals as foxes, cats, dogs, and rats to islands has added to the natural predation of various gulls, seals, sea lions, ferrets, and raptors.

Johnny-come-lately human beings are a different story. Early explorers ate penguins and gathered eggs, seal hunters slaughtered hundreds of thousands of them for their oil, and other exploiters took their skins for leather. Surprisingly, these practices have had little overall effect on penguin populations. In southern Chile and Argentina, Magellanic penguins are still used as bait for king crabs, but so far this practice has not put the species in danger. The same is true of guano mining, which in Peru threatens the Humboldt penguin by robbing it of nest sites, and construction, which in Antarctica is sometimes at the expense of rookeries. Tourism to Antarctica has yet to greatly affect penguin colonies, but this could change as more ships visit the continent; one new ship can accommodate several hundred passengers. (Tour sponsors and cruise operators have pledged to support a program of "conservation ethics.") Spills of crude oil continue to be the greatest threats to the penguin, and recent spills off the Cape of Good Hope, Cape Horn, and Antarctica have taken their toll. On the positive side, Gorman notes that perhaps thanks to our slaughter of whales, there may be more food for penguins, which like these mammalian leviathans feed on krill (as well as fish and squid).

Gorman's favorite penguins are the foot-high rockhoppers (erroneously printed as "rock hoppers"), "aggressive birds with a personality reminiscent of a small male terrier, or of Kipling's indefatigable mongoose, Rikki-tikki-tavi" (Gorman's favorite character in literature). This yellow-crested penguin with red eyes has "an almost military bearing, as if its eyebrows were the braid on a dress uniform." Unlike other penguins, who dive, they jump into the water. Few others are as rugged, fearless, or combative as this subantarctic species. They can ascend four-hundred-foot-high cliffs by hopping upward from rock to rock, both feet together as if the bird was a permanent contestant in a sack race. True grit. Then they return to the sea by jumping and, perhaps, falling or sliding (they're solidly built and thus rarely harmed). Some life.

The Total Penguin makes for armchair exploration at its best. If you're not a penguin aficionado at first, you will be when you finish.

—Thomas C. Southerland, Jr.
Tom Southerland, the director of Princeton Nature Tours, has twice visited Antarctica and observed birds on all seven continents, including the four on which penguins are found in the wild.

Books continues on page 24

The U-Store Offers the Best in Business Books:

Power Shift. Alvin Toffler. Bantam, $22.95.

In this sweeping new work, the author of Future Shock argues that today the very nature of power is changing, and that seemingly unrelated conflicts and changes in our lives actually result from what he calls a "new system for wealth creation."

Hoover's Handbook: Profiles of Over 500 Major Corporations, 1991 ed. Gary Hoover, Alta Campbell, and Patrick J. Spain, eds. The Reference Press, paperbound, $19.95.

At last! A detailed consumer's guide to major corporations at an affordable price. Easy to read, and remarkably complete, this is an invaluable guide for investors, executives, and job applicants.

Managing the Nonprofit Organization: Principles and Practices. Peter F. Drucker. Harper Collins, $22.95.

Drucker presents clearly and directly the tasks, responsibilities, and practices that must be followed for the effective management of hospitals, churches, universities, foundations, and other nonprofit organizations.

Please send
 _____ Power Shift @ $22.95
 _____ Hoover's Handbook @ $19.95
 _____ Managing Nonprofits @ $22.95
 Add $4.25 shipping. NJ residents add 7% sales tax.

Call Toll-Free
 In N.J., 1-800-624-4236
 Elsewhere, 1-800-631-0137
☐ U-Store ☐ VISA ☐ MasterCard ☐ AmEx
 Acct. # _____ Exp. Date _____
 Name _____
 Address _____
 City State Zip _____

PRINCETON
University Store

PRINCETON
University Store

PRINCETON
University Store

Digitized by Google

ALUMNI FLIGHTS ABROAD

Exceptional Experiences for Selective Travelers.

Egypt	Ancient.
Greece
Asia Minor
the Aegean	Classical.
Carthage
Central Asia
the Kyber Pass	Mysterious.
India
Nepal
the Himalayas	Oriental.
Japan
Southeast Asia
Java
Borneo	Enigmatic.
Ceylon
Sumatra
South America	Primitive.
the Galapagos
the Amazon
Ancient Civilizations	Vibrant.
the Andes
Australia
New Zealand	Compelling.
New Guinea
Kenya
Tanzania	Exciting.
the Seychelles
Northern Italy
Burgundy	Artistic.
Southwest France
Alsace-Lorraine
the Rhine
the Moselle	Cultural.
Flanders
Scotland
Wales	Historic.

Highly acclaimed itineraries, especially designed for alumni of Princeton, Harvard, Yale, and other distinguished universities. For further information, please contact:

Alumni Flights Abroad

Department PR-172

A.F.A. Plaza

425 Cherry Street

Bedford Hills, New York 10507

TOLL FREE 1-800-AFA-8700

N.Y. State (914) 241-0111

Kinnell's Manhood Quartet

WHEN ONE HAS LIVED A LONG TIME ALONE

Galway Kinnell '48 • Alfred A. Knopf, $18.95

IN GALWAY KINNELL'S new book of poems, When One Has Lived a Long Time Alone, one finds a man speaking to men about themselves. Probing "the pathos one finds in the penis," Kinnell conjures up the eighties male: economically exploited, agnostic yet superstitious of the father, given to Oedipal fantasies, misanthropic, and mortally frightened, but a man nonetheless, painfully conscious of his isolation. These poems are distributed into four sections or movements: memorials to the father, black-humored tales of death and the afterlife, hymns to the beloved, and a song cycle on solitude. Kinnell employs a single amoebic stanza for each poem or poetic division, and writes in a plain-spoken, lowly charged American. He composes in sentences, more than in words or lines, often keeping subjects from their verbs with lengthy dashes, as the farmer from his bottle in "Auction":

*On the shelf stands a band-blown whiskey bottle from the old days, blown askew by the gray lungs of the Czechoslovak, which a farmer—after a week of dragging stones into the error of walls, of squeezing and resqueezing
the exuberance of udders into the squawking foam, of smiting maple and ash into flame-chunks—seized and doled to himself in slow swigs through most of a Sunday . . .*

In this breathtaking sentence, the work week only delays the Sabbath, the day the farmer drinks himself into oblivion from a bottle blown by an exploited laborer's lungs. But if work no longer gives man's life meaning, the vacation provides him with no Thoreauvian alternative. Kinnell's title sequence seems itself a misshapen cabin: eleven poems, eleven sentences, of thirteen lines, or eleven not counting its framing refrain, "When one has lived a long time alone." In Kinnell's song of himself, Whitman's "I celebrate myself, and sing myself" has withered into the neutered "one refrains"; to sing means to withhold oneself. This "one" speaks for no one and speaks to no reading, loving "you." Becoming "one" with Nature entails becoming two within oneself: "one finds one likes / any other species better than one's own, / which has gone amok, making one self-estranged." "One" fondles his snake instead, "who stops trying to get to the floor and lingers / all across one's body, slumping into its contours, / adopting its temperature—and abandons hope / of the sweetness of friendship or love." The flaccid Dantesque forgetfulness of this diminished ninth poem cannot be recollected in Kinnell's last, inconclusive song; the "kingdom come" of consummated love sounds like wishful writing.

The limitations of Kinnell's masculinist mythology are revealed in the group of poems in praise of "woman." In "Flower of Five Blossoms," for instance, "woman" is interchangeable—"and now your blossoms could stand for five of them— / any five"—and most abstract when most closely anatomized: "and at the center, in the little crown, / the clitoris leans, above / the vestibule opening into the center of being." Unnamed and unconscious, woman is merely the vehicle of a man's self-completion. For communion with one's kind, one must turn to "Farewell," Kinnell's elegy for the poet and Whitman biographer Paul Zweig and easily the best poem in the volume. Kinnell placed this poem, interestingly enough, at the end of his praises of "woman." But Paul Zweig, on the contrary, is a named, lamented individual whose words the poem records. In Kinnell's rendition of Haydn's Farewell Symphony, the oboist's "reliable A," renewing Zweig's Z, echoes "inside flames wobbling on top of stalks in the field, / and in fireflies' greenish sparks . . . / and in gnats whining . . . / and in crickets . . . / and in the golden finch . . ." In this Whitmanian crescendo, tempered by a Keatsian diminution, Kinnell's kinship with one "camerado" is reaffirmed, and one man's struggle to redeem his masculinity is momentarily successful.

—John Shoptaw

John Shoptaw, an assistant professor of English, teaches courses on contemporary poetry and on Whitman and Dickinson.

Books Received

THE WILSON ERA: ESSAYS IN HONOR OF ARTHUR S. LINK
John Milton Cooper, Jr. '61, and Charles E. Neu, eds.

Harlan Davidson, $24.95 cloth, $18.95 paper

REGULATORY PROCESSES IN BIOLOGY:
A Festschrift in Honor of
DR. CLAUDE A. VILLEE
Richard E. LaFond, '72 and Dorothy B. Villee, eds.
Saunders, $24.00 paper

Burke Smashes Four-Minute Mile as Track and Field Teams Rely on Juniors

THANKS TO BILL BURKE, 1991 will go down as a milestone for Princeton track and field, regardless of the team's overall performance. On February 1, senior co-captain Burke became the first Princetonian—and the first Ivy Leaguer—to break the four-minute mark in the mile, crossing the finish line at the Millrose Games in an astonishing 3:58.70.

Burke's feat, the collegiate track equivalent of hitting four home runs in a game, came just weeks after he had clocked 4:01.3 to break the previous school record of 4:01.8, held by Craig Masback '77. As it happened, Masback, a commentator for Turner Broadcasting, was on hand at Madison Square Garden when Burke ran his sub-four-minute mile. No current collegiate miler has ever clocked a faster time, so Burke must be considered a favorite for the N.C.A.A. championship in March.

Burke, who also captained the cross-country team, is capable of dominating any track event from 800 to 10,000 meters. His accomplishments surely rank him as one of Princeton's all-time best individual athletes in any sport. Burke had been closing in on the four-minute benchmark all season, but after the race, he seemed surprised that it had come so early. "I just planned to go out and run hard," Burke said, "but I really didn't expect to do so well." According to Fred Samara, the head coach for field events, Burke followed his race strategy perfectly. "He's been told that it's better to run a fast pace than get tangled up in a tactical race," Samara said. At the Princeton Indoor Relays, on January 27, Burke also qualified for the N.C.A.A. tournament in the 3,000-meter run. His time of 7:58.66 established a school and meet record.

Burke, a native of Burke, Virginia (no connection), majors in the Woodrow Wilson School and belongs to Princeton's Air Force R.O.T.C. program. Samara describes him as a hard worker who has a great influence on the team. Burke says his personal goal for the remainder of the season is to "keep improving," but confides that he would be disappointed if he did not achieve all-American status. Beyond graduation, his four-year commitment to the military casts uncertainty on his running career, but Masback says Burke would be on schedule to prepare for the 1992 Olympics.

Left: Out in front of the pack is normal for co-captain Bill Burke '91, shown here running in the Princeton Indoor Relays. Right: Missy Hake '92, a jill-of-all-trades, has excelled in five events: shot put, twenty-pound weight throw, discus, javelin, and hammer throw.

The men's and women's track and field programs have long measured the success of the indoor season based on their performance at the Heptagonal League championships, held at Cornell February 22-23, after this issue went to press. Throughout the 1980s, the men dominated both the indoor and outdoor Heps, which features the teams of the Ancient Eight, in addition to Army and Navy. This winning tradition carried over into 1990, when they captured the outdoor event and took second in the indoor Heps. The women hope to improve on last year's disappointing sixth- and fifth-place showings by regaining the form that earned them both Heps crowns in 1989.

The men have good reason to be optimistic about their prospects for the season. The Tigers have been hard pressed to replace such standouts as all-American long jumper Al Dyer '90, sprinter and long jumper Vince Smith '90, and hammer thrower Pete Seley '90. But they've gained a talented group of freshman sprinters and jumpers to compensate for these losses.

The men's record of 0-2 (0-1 Ivy) is deceiving. They lost a tight meet to Penn, 71-65, on February 2, when both the one-mile and two-mile relay teams were snake bitten by freak accidents. In the one-mile relay, the second Princeton runner was surging into the lead when he dropped the baton and fell hopelessly behind. In the two-mile, Princeton's anchor man tripped only a few steps from the finish line. He had run a spectacular final leg, but the tumble cost the team the victory. The Tigers must avoid such mishaps at the more important meets, like the Heps. Samara does not overly concern himself with losses in dual meets: "We suffer from a lack of depth, which hurts us in the dual meets," he says, "but our quality performers should shine at Heps, where depth doesn't really matter."

The women's hopes for 1991 depend upon avoiding injuries, which crippled the team in 1990. And since last year, the Tigers have lost an invaluable trio of sprinter/hurdlers in LaDonna Gooden '90, Val Manning '90, and Nabatanzi Bewayo '90. Coaches Peter Farrell and Ann Pierson hope that freshmen Lauren Chang, Lisa Anderson, and Jennifer Heisinger, along with sophomore Melissa Langlois, can fill the void in these events. Sprinter Tricia Lennox '92 and Becky Wells '91, who holds Princeton's 800-meter record, will bolster the young squad if they stay healthy.

The women's record of 0-1 (0-1 Ivy) includes a loss to a powerful squad from Penn, 80-38, but several extenuating factors lessen the sting of defeat. Lennox and Wells sat on the sidelines with injuries, and long-distance star Katy McCandless '92 came down with the flu. Two other long-distance runners were attending a national competition in Florida and were unable to race against the Quakers. In short, the Tigers must remain healthy or risk exposing their lack of depth. Pierson admits that the team is pinning its hopes more on the outdoor season than on the indoor. It should be noted, however, that Princeton's record does not include a fourth-place finish at the New Jersey College Championships and a first-place showing at the Delaware Invitational.

Both the men's and women's teams this year will rely on a nucleus of outstanding juniors and sophomores. Omar

Simmons '92 has become one of the best middle-distance runners in the East. Last season, he ran a scorching 1:51.1 in the 800 meters to capture third at the outdoor Heps. This season, he's trained diligently to come back from stress fractures in his legs he suffered last summer. As a testament to his explosive speed, he ran a remarkable 47.7-second quarter in the final leg of the mile relay against Penn. At this year's Heps, Cornell's fast track may provide Simmons with the perfect venue to exploit his potential.

Jay Richards, another junior and the team's field captain, has been a stellar performer in the high jump since his freshman year. Richards spent the entire fall recovering from a shoulder injury that threatened to erase his indoor season. But Samara and Richards devised a training program that allowed him to mimic every step of the jump without actually jumping. Richards believes that he might actually have benefited from the injury, because it prevented him from wearing out early in the season and forced him to improve his technique. "I feel like I picked up where I left off last year without jumping all fall," he says. Indeed, Richards has already soared above seven feet several times this year. On two separate occasions, he narrowly missed breaking Princeton's indoor record of 7'1 $\frac{3}{4}$ ".

Last spring, junior Missy Hake accomplished a rare feat by qualifying for the Eastern championships in the shot put, the javelin, the discus, and the hammer throw. She's no slouch during the indoor season either, excelling in the shot put and the twenty-pound weight throw. Against Penn, she put the shot 44'8 $\frac{3}{4}$ ", just shy of her personal goal of 45'. She surpassed her own expectations by hurling the weight 51'6 $\frac{1}{4}$ " at the Princeton Indoor Relays. The Tigers count on Hake to score consistently in several events, and Hake often finds herself switching among her events in the course of a meet.

Nicola Springer '92 owns the women's indoor and outdoor records at Princeton for the triple jump and the high jump. This season, she has high jumped 5'8 $\frac{1}{2}$ ", just under her personal best of 5'10", and has triple jumped 36'3 $\frac{3}{4}$ ", a little below her own standard of 40'9". The aptly named junior has had to contend with a tender knee, as well as the demands of majoring in architecture.

—Scott Donahue '92

Scott Donahue, a politics major from Haverford, Pennsylvania, is a sports-writer for The Daily Princetonian.

SCOREBOARD

Men's BASKETBALL

(18-2 overall; 9-0 Ivy)

Princeton 64, Dartmouth 52
Princeton 75, Harvard 59
Princeton 60, Penn 47
Princeton 84, Cornell 40
Princeton 65, Columbia 47
Princeton 79, Brown 63
Princeton 59, Yale 54

Women's BASKETBALL

(15-6 overall; 7-2 Ivy)

Princeton 74, Dartmouth 49
Harvard 58, Princeton 55
Princeton 86, Penn 75
Princeton 71, Cornell 54
Princeton 64, Columbia 52
Princeton 70, Brown 67
Princeton 77, Yale 64

Men's HOCKEY

(7-16-1 overall;

6-13-1 E.C.A.C.)

Princeton 5, Dartmouth 2
Harvard 7, Princeton 0
Vermont 4, Princeton 2
R.P.I. 8, Princeton 5
St. Lawrence 5, Princeton 4
Clarkson 11, Princeton 1

Women's SQUASH

(5-0 overall; 3-0 Ivy)

Princeton 5, Harvard 4
Princeton 8, Trinity 1
Howe Cup—1st place
Princeton 9, Penn 0

Men's SUMMERS

(9-0 overall; 9-0 E.L.S.L.)

Princeton 138, Harvard 105
Princeton 180.5,
Columbia 100.5
Princeton 150, Navy 87
Princeton 130, Yale 113

Women's SUMMERS

(7-1 overall; 7-0 Ivy)

Princeton 163, Harvard 137

WRESTLING

(10-9-1 overall; 2-3 Ivy)

Princeton 21, Columbia 19
Brown 22, Princeton 10
Harvard 23, Princeton 15
Princeton 28, Yale 8
Princeton 24, American 13
Princeton 24,
James Madison 15
Cornell 26, Princeton 9
SUNY-Buffalo 20,
Princeton 13

Women's HOCKEY

(3-10-1 overall; 2-6 Ivy)

Dartmouth 3, Princeton 2
(overtime)
Harvard 3, Princeton 2
Providence 7, Princeton 2
Dartmouth 6, Princeton 4
Harvard 3, Princeton 2

Men's FENCING

(7-5 overall; 4-0 Ivy)

Princeton 21, Cornell 6
Princeton 24, Harvard 3
Notre Dame 20, Princeton 7
Princeton 15, Brown 12
Princeton 16, St. John's 10
Princeton 17, N.C. State 10
Duke 14, Princeton 13
N.Y.U. 14, Princeton 13
U.N.C. 16, Princeton 11
Princeton 14, Penn 13
Princeton 18, Rutgers 9

Women's FENCING

(5-7 overall; 3-1 Ivy)

Princeton 9, Cornell 7
Princeton 10, Harvard 6
Notre Dame 14, Princeton 2
Princeton 11, Brown 5
St. John's 9, Princeton 7
Princeton 11, N.C. State 5
Princeton 9, Duke 7
N.Y.U. 9, Princeton 7
U.N.C. 12, Princeton 4
Penn 13, Princeton 3
Rutgers 10, Princeton 6

Men's SQUASH

(11-1 overall; 5-1 Ivy)

Harvard 6, Princeton 3
Princeton 9, Dartmouth 0
Princeton 5, Yale 4
Princeton 9, Brown 0
Princeton 9, Williams 0
Princeton 9, Penn 0

FOR RENT

ENJOY THE LUXURY of your own villa, private pool overlooking the Caribbean, and staff of five to serve you. 3 BRs, 3 baths; exquisitely furnished; on one acre with terraced gardens in most exclusive residential neighborhood in Ocho Rios, Jamaica. Everyone should try this kind of living at least once. From $175/day, winter; $125/day, summer; $100/day, Sept.-Oct. B. Kaspers '70 (owner), 1165 Churchill Downs Rd., Atlanta, GA 30319; 404-255-0696.

ST. JOHN, USVI: 2 BR waterfront beachhouse amid tropical gardens. Spectacular view, excellent snorkeling. From $175/day, winter; $125/day, summer; $100/day, Sept.-Oct. B. Kaspers '70. 1165 Churchill Downs, Atlanta, GA 30319; 404-255-0696.

PARIS: Elegant small studio for two just off the Seine in the 6th. 2 min. walk to the Louvre, Notre Dame. 609-924-4332.

BARBADOS: Home of the late John L. Roe Jr. '34. West Coast on bluff overlooking Caribbean. Three air-conditioned BRs, cook, maid, gardener, laundress, swimming pool. 215-527-0585.

PARIS: Rue de la Paix, Elegant apartment. Suitable for 2 or 3. 7-days preferred. $200/night. 212-838-1731.

STOCKING ISLAND, Exuma, Bahamas: Octagonal wood and glass home, spectacular 360-degree sea view. All modern conveniences. $1000 weekly for two with boat. Sam Burns '46, 407-231-2822. Brochure avail.

SANIBEL ISLAND, FLA.: Delightful beachfront condominium. Magnificent gulf view. Spacious 2 BR, 2 baths, loft. Pool. Tennis. Will Smith '63. 908-842-2096.

BRITISH VIRGIN ISLANDS (Virgin Gorda): Elegant new villa directly on own private snorkeling beach. Spectacular, panoramic view of North Sound including Bitter-End (dive school, etc.) Perfect weather year round. 3 BR, 2 bath, magnificent LR, wrap-around deck, full mod. kit., microwave, dishwasher; marina, fishing, pool, tennis. (Restaurant, provisioning, staff, car, available extra.) $2,500/wk. 609-921-7872.

EXCLUSIVE LUXURY 4 BR, 4 bath villa at private Tryall Club in Montego, Jamaica. Private pool, staff of four, gorgeous grounds overlook Caribbean and championship golf course. Also private tennis, scuba, beach and club house. Available at 2 or 3 BR rate off-season. 203-254-0228 (h) or Carol Shaw at 203-929-6391.

LONDON LUXURY FLATS: In Knightsbridge, Mayfair, Chelsea, Kensington, Whitehall Court. One, two, three bedrooms. Furnished and decorated by owners. Rented by day, seven day minimum; reduced rates when exceeding six months. Call during office hours: 518-686-7841.

KAUAI, HAWAII: 4 BR, NaPali Coast beach house. $650-850/wk. 703-560-7900.

ST. MAARTEN: Elegant villa on blue Caribbean. Breathtaking views. Daily maid. All amenities. Sleeps 2-6. 201-271-0297.

ST. THOMAS: 2 or 3 BRs on the water, spectacular downisland view. H. Macaleer. 919-942-8439.

ITALY: Renting delightful holiday accommodations, each personally selected. Tuscan castles, Umbrian farmhouses. Seaside villas, lakeview cottages. Centrally-located apartments Venice, Rome, Florence. Week/month. 415-821-9345.

SANIBEL ISLAND: Gulffront 2 BR condo w/pool and tennis. Available weekly/monthly. Boozan '79, 201-522-8219

CENTURIES OLD FARMHOUSE at edge of Sabine hill town. Easy reach of Orvieto, Perugia, Assisi, Spoleto, Florence, Rome. Magnificent setting on 4 acres. Restored recently. Architect Ellen Jawdat of Washington, D.C., M.Arch. Harvard. Work executed by Valentini Ristauero of Rome. All modern comforts. C. Joseph, 1 Lincoln Plaza, New York, NY 10023, 212-873-5104.

LONDON RENTALS: Privately owned flats and houses in London's best areas offering comprehensive personal service at attractive prices. One week minimum stay. Call: A Place Like Home, London. 800-526-0215.

ST. BART'S, FRENCH WEST INDIES: Luxurious seaside villa surrounded by privacy, beautiful beaches and French restaurants. 412-687-2061.

PARIS. LEFT BANK APARTMENT: St. Germain, close to D'Orsay, Louvre, Rodin. Sunny. Fireplaces. Antiques. Luxuriously furnished. Memorable! 412-687-2061.

BRITISH VIRGIN ISLANDS: Our secluded beach house on beautiful Brewers Bay, Tortola. 3 baths, maid, bunk room. Weather perfect all year. Rates: R. H. Smith '42, Westover Park, Stamford, CT 06902; 203-323-2294.

VAIL-BEAVER CREEK: Rocky Mountain seclusion, minutes from skiing. Creek-side home sleeps six. No X-mas. 303-926-3907.

ST. JOHN: Fabulous private home near beach. Peaceful. Furnished. Box 12287, St. Thomas, VI 00801. 809-775-4266.

EXUMA, BAHAMAS: Magnificent hilltop view. Fully equipped, 4 bedrooms, van, private beach, housekeeper available. $1,000 weekly in season. 302-428-1455, evenings.

SEABROOK ISLAND, S.C.: Near historic Charleston, oceanfront 1 BR condo, 2 baths. Sleeps 4; great golf, tennis, restaurants, pelicans. Hugh Hanson '47. 215-649-7335. Princeton discounts!

TORTOLA, BVI: 6 acres, 4 BR, 3 bath, noted architect-designed villa with pool on spectacular promontory jutting over sea and own beach on undeveloped N.E. coast. Two-week rental minimum. Charles Sommer, 11 Upper Ladue Rd., St. Louis, MO 63124; 314-982-2690(w), 314-991-5527(h).

TAOS, NM: 2 BR, 2 bath condominium overlooking Kit Carson Park. $400/week, April 15-Nov. $575/week, Dec.-April 15. Lupita Mares, ERA Taos Realtors, 127 Bent Street, Taos, NM 87571; 505-758-0112.

ENGLAND, COTSWOLDS: Thatched cottage. Near Stratford, Oxford, London, 3 sitting, 3 bedrooms, 1½ baths. Central heat. Oscarsson, Rockport, ME 04856.

IRELAND: Charming Georgian house in beautiful County Waterford. 4 BRs, 3 baths. Available all year. Low rental Nov. to June. 813-964-2465.

SPAIN: Lovely 4 BR villa (pool) overlooking Mediterranean/village. Hess '64. 203-688-9333.

CARIBBEAN PARADISE: Luxury 4 BR, 3 bath villa. Perfect 2-6 people. Enjoy heavenly views, gardens, privacy. Walk to 2 spectacular beaches. Tortola, British Virgins. Clipper Cleaver '41, Box 356, Adamsville, R.I. 02801. 401-635-4725(h), 617-742-8310(o).

ST. JOHN, USVI: 2 BR villa at Lagoon Point, sensational views. Weekly $840-$1260 winter; $560-$840 summer. Valentine, 8 Fern Way, Madbury, NH 03820. 603-742-3063.

CASTLE HYDE: On the Blackwater River, County Cork, Southern Ireland. Exceptionally lovely 18th century Georgian house on 144 acres. 6 bedrooms, 5 modern baths, classic Renaissance gardens with fresh fruit and flowers. Fully staffed. Two miles of private trout and salmon fishing. Pheasant shooting. Available year round. Richard Kroon Y'64, 201-741-5692.

SCOTLAND—GLENEAGLES: Privately owned furnished, new 2-bedroom townhouse on grounds of Gleneagles Hotel estate. Central to highlands, St. Andrews, Edinburgh, Scottish links. $550/week. J. Murphy 513-281-0346.

ST. BARTHÉLÉMY HOLIDAY, FWI: Superb 3-bedroom beachfront villa. Complete services. 203-255-9299.

COME BACK TO JAMAICA! Enjoy the privacy of your own spacious 3 BR, 3 bath villa, "Clive House", at Tryall Golf and Beach Club near Montego Bay. Beautifully appointed and complete with it's own 20' x 40' pool. Cook, maid, laundress and gardener. Spectacular panoramic view of the Caribbean and our 18 hole championship golf course. Tennis, lovely sand beach and all water sports also on site for your enjoyment. Color brochure available on request. Call Liz Poley, w'55 or Susan Wylie weekdays 8-4:30. 612-339-1820.

CENTRAL VERMONT: Restored 1830s home. 4 bedrooms, dormitory, 2½ baths. Fully equipped. Tennis, skiing, hiking nearby. $500/week. Mike Van Dusen '65. 202-244-3473.

MARTHA'S VINEYARD: New three bedroom contemporary, sleeps eight, waterviews, tennis, minutes to beaches, 609-924-7913 (office), 609-397-0147 (home).

NANTUCKET: Charming six bedroom Victorian, in-town, walk to beach. 617-449-4954.

ALGARVE, PORTUGAL: Luxury country villa. Sweeping seaviews, near beaches, golf, 3 BRs, 4½ baths. Swimming pool, staff. Available year-round with exceptions. 508-922-4763.

ST. JOHN: Off-season rates. 2 bedroom villa, pool, spectacular view. 508-668-2078.

LONGBOAT KEY, FLORIDA: Right on bay. First floor condo. 2 BR/2 bath, tennis, pool. $2,600/month. Len Thomsen '56. 617-861-0796.

KEY LARGO, FLA.: 2 BR, 2 bath condo at the Anglers Club overlooking club marina on Card Sound. Tennis, par 3 golf course, croquet, and pool, $200/day. Frank Lovejoy '36. 305-367-2856.

KIAWAH ISLAND, S.C.: Fabulous beachfront house, 3 BR/bath, fully equipped. $1,500/wk Sept.-May; $2,000/wk June-August. 314-991-8768.

STEWARTSON-DOUGHERTY
Real Estate Associates
366 Nassau Street
Princeton, N.J. 08540
PHONE: 609-921-7784

HARTLEY AVENUE

This pretty pre-war Colonial protected by University lands is full of great surprises. A raised entry porch leads to a front entry hall, a powder room, library with fireplace, a marvelously large living room 20' x 22', formal dining room, and convenient kitchen. Upstairs, there is a master bedroom and bath plus four other bedrooms and bath. Two-car garage; full basement. A spacious raised deck off the living room provides the extraordinary vista of a private University-owned, tree-encircled meadow—your own bucolic world just three minutes from Nassau Street. At the front, mature shade trees and a view of the lake across the road. NEW PRICE.....$369,000

Robert Dougherty '50 Julie Douglas w/'41
Paul Douglas '41 Betsy Stewardson Ford w/'54
Georgia Graham w/'52 J. B. Smith '45
Diane Unruh w/'70 Barbara Broad w/'38
Betty McClelland w/'50 Judy Perrine s/'69

For no obligation—Information about real estate in the Princeton area call (609) 921-7784 or Out-side of New Jersey 1-800-542-0067.

REALTORS

Representing Previews Executive Homeseach

Grant A. Peacock '46
Kathleen Peacock

GRANT A. PEACOCK Inc.

*Fine Jewelry
Jewel Counselor
Estates Purchased*

Suite 2600
450 Park Avenue at 57th St.
New York, N.Y. 10022

(212) 753-4640

The JOE BROWN Studio announces ... his artistic legacy
Princeton Professor Emeritus Joe Brown created over 400 pieces of sculpture which are found in both private and public collections all over the world. Certified bronze sculptures from original molds are available in limited editions. The studio and gallery is open by appointment only.

The Joe Brown Studio • Timothy Maslyn, Resident Sculptor and Curator
RD1, Box 122 A
Princeton, NJ 08540
609-921-2868

THE Joe Brown STUDIO

PERDIDO KEY, FLA.: Charming 2 BR, 2 B condominium 7th floor apartment, #706. Off-season rate Sept.—May 15. 800-338-2809.

COTSWOLDS: 17thC restored cottage. Historic Stanton Village, tour Stratford, Oxford, Bath, Broadway. Antiques, log fire, GCH, private garden, tv, washer/dryer, telephone, modern kitchen, sleeps four adults. Details: Tel: England 011-44-38-673-495; Fax 011-44-38-6858-653. Whitfield House, Wood Stanway, GL54 5PG England.

NANTUCKET: New 3 BR, 2½ bath cape on 3 seclued acres; 914-779-1302.

MANTOLOKING, NJ: Adjacent beach. 4 BR, 2½. July $11,000. Aug. $12,000. 609-737-1150.

NEWPORT, RI: Victorian. 5/6 bedrooms. Families. Week, month, season. 401-846-5434.

NANTUCKET ISLAND: Contemporary house, fully furnished. Near uncrowded beach. Six miles from town. Weekly. July through October. 216-721-2322.

BARBADOS: 6 BR, 5 bath villa on ocean, unique and seclued, private beach. Day 708-524-2055; evenings 708-441-5690.

CAPE COD, EASTHAM: Enjoy crowdless off-season rates in spectacular new lakeside home. Sleeps 10. Available Sept. through June. 617-444-1339.

MARTHA'S VINEYARD: 4-bedroom, West Tisbury, waterview, private beach rights. Available June through September. No pets. Phone 414-352-2284.

NANTUCKET: Comfortable historic home, convenient in-town location, sleeps 8, some bikes. 201-543-2867.

NANTUCKET: Wide selection of summer rentals. $1,000-$3,000 per week. Nantucket Vacation Rentals. 800-228-4070.

PONTE VEDRA BEACH, FLORIDA: Furnished waterfront condo; walk to ocean, golf, Inn, Club. 3 bedrooms, 2 baths. 904-285-5786.

MAINE COAST: 3-room cottage overlooking Penobscot River. Close to beach, boat launches, lakes. Sleeps four comfortably. Full bath. Ideal retreat. Photos available. June-October $250/week. 207-567-3772.

SOUTHWEST HARBOR, MAINE: Shorefront cottage. Spectacular views. Acadia Park mountains over Somes Sound. Accommodates five. Weekly/monthly 301-652-2356.

ST. MAARTEN: Waterfront hideaways. Luxury, affordable. Pool, maid, unique and sensational. Maria Licari 201-832-6655.

SOUTHAMPTON, NEW YORK: Summer rental Memorial Day—Labor Day $20,000. Great water views, beach rights, 3 bedrooms, 2½ baths. Pool. Central air conditioning. Fireplace. Wash/Dry. 718-463-1782.

MARTHA'S VINEYARD: Fabulous Cape Cod cottage. Waterfront beach. Private. Sweeping views. Lake, creek, large deck. Sleeps 6. Modern conveniences. 1 mile to VH. June—Sept. $10,000 per month. 212-581-2750.

TAHOE: 3 BR redwood home at golf resort. Pool, club, winter downhill & cc ski areas. $1,000/week; $2,000 Xmas week. Mary & George '57. 800-344-3741.

CAPE COD, PLEASANT BAY, WATERFRONT: Charming three bedroom three bath home. Attractively appointed; completely equipped. Dock and mooring. $2,400 per week. Trit Johnson 508-255-2886.

PORT ANTONIO, JAMAICA: "Nirvana." Fully equipped, staffed, 3 bedroom, 2 bath, beachfront villa on mile-long, mostly deserted beach. Surf, few tourists. $800/wk. in season. $600/wk. off. 207-359-4447.

GREENSBORO, VERMONT: Large shingled 5 bedroom summer house right on peaceful Caspian Lake, private dock, canoe, sailboat. Golf and tennis nearby. Available July. Nat Smith '57 508-475-1209 or Susan Baldwin 609-921-8089.

LAKE CHAMPLAIN, VERMONT: Beautiful shoreline home. Magnificent view. 4 bedrooms, 3 baths. Furnished, 10 acres. Monthly June, August, September $3,000/mo. R.P. Smith '39, RR 2 Box 2506, Charlotte, VT 05445. 802-425-3747.

CHATHAM, CAPE COD: Waterfront. Sleeps six comfortably. Charming, private, well-equipped. Ellis '53. 414-351-0001.

BAY HEAD! A perfect vacation spot for Princetonians. East Ave. five bedroom house for rent. Call Andy Brown '69 at 609-924-5100.

NEW YORK. SAILOR'S WATERFRONT HOME: Built 1930's, Connetquot River, Long Island. Commute city from Oakdale station. Sail Great South Bay. Protected shoal anchorage, beach, porch, garage, beautiful view. Completely furnished. Two bedrooms. Available June 1 for season at $1,500/mo. Nonsmokers. No pets. Charles Arnolds, 305-667-1043 evenings.

GREECE, HYDRA: Artists, writers paradise. House sleeps 5/6, 2 baths, pool, gardens, three mins. sea. $800 week. EDGARTOWN, IN-TOWN HOUSE: 4 beds, 3 baths, $1,100 week. $8,000 July/August. Call Kim Crozier in London 011-44-71-499-1344, fax 011-44-71-499-2173.

FLORENCE COUNTRY HOUSE on 54 acres, fantastic views, $100 day. 219-874-8740.

DIVING, FISHING, NATURE: Brand new luxury Big Pine Key deepwater home. 3/2, jacuzzi, dock, wildlife view. 30 miles Key West. 407-241-1053.

FRANCE: Experience village living in heart of Provence. Biking, hiking, marketing, wine tasting, luscious food. Small 16th century house, with panoramic view of mountains and wine country. July, August $500/week, $800 bi-weekly. Special rates September-May. 213-473-7530.

FOR SALE

MANHATTAN: If selling a co-op, condominium, or townhouse, call about our unique 200 brokerage firm multi-list program. Sharon Baum w/'62, S.W. Bird & Co., 331 Madison Ave., New York, NY; 212-351-2416.

ISLAND HOUSE: See "For Rent, Stocking Island."

VAIL-BEAVER CREEK, COLORADO: Unique properties. 10% of commission proceeds donated, in your name, to the Yellowstone Bighorn Research Association in memory of my father, Professor Erling Dorf, Hon. '33. Bob Dorf 303-476-2421.

BOCA RATON, FLA., YACHTSMAN DREAM: Deepwater slip, 3,000 sq. ft. townhouse facing Boca Raton Hotel. Next to beach club and Boca Inlet. Magnificent home or investment. Phone 407-466-4219. 407-391-9072.

MANHATTAN/BATTERY PARK CITY: Two bedroom high floor corner condominium with spectacular Hudson River views. Walk to work downtown. Luxury doorman building. $335,000, maint. $621. Jennifer Jordan '78. Office: 212-969-6259, home: 212-945-3113.

MANHATTAN, 93rd & 2nd AVE.: Sunny one-bedroom, 1½ baths in new luxury doorman condominium. L-shaped dining/living area, high floor, East River views, washer/dryer, balcony, mint condition. Asking $275K. 212-607-5720.

PRINCETON: Riverside, walk to town and University. Jogging. 5 BR, 4 B. Potential home office or $1,300 income apartment. $425,000. 609-924-6240.

"MISTRAL," VERMONT: 86 private acres, including 20 pasture. 9 room, 2 1/2 bath architect designed contemporary. Trout pond, brook, views, stone-walls, superb riding country, easy accessibility. 12 miles south of Woodstock. Asking $590,000 by owner. Henry Riley '42. 802-484-5547.

NEW HAMPSHIRE, SEACOAST REGION: Charming antique colonial farmhouse on state road. Eight rooms. Move-in condition. Twelve wooded acres, barn. 1 1/4 hours to Boston. Dick Minesinger '53. Call evenings 603-942-8768.

FOR SALE/FOR RENT

NANTUCKET—Come join the 400 happy Princeton families. We have large and small rentals, investment opportunities, estates and commercial enterprises. AND we give your investments TENDER, LOVING CARE—PREFERRED PROPERTIES. Nancie B. Taylor, w'43, Lucy T. Eaton, d'43. 508-228-2320, 800-338-7715.

WASHINGTON, DC, METROPOLITAN area, Northern Virginia, Maryland. Sales, rentals, land, property management. Colleen Finks w'61, associate broker, Pardoe & Graham, 6729 Curran St., McLean, VA 22101; 703-734-7020; eves., 703-821-2850.

RESORTS & TRAVEL

LONDON, ENGLAND: Luxury self-catering apartments in the heart of Mayfair. British Breaks, Ltd., Box 1176, Middleburg, Virginia 22117. Tel. 703-786-6971. Fax 703-687-6291.

ITALY: INTIMATE, SMALL GROUP TOURS TO UNUSUAL DESTINATIONS: Tuscan Islands and Hill-towns; The Palio of Siena; The Riviera; Mythological Routes in Sicily. La Pergola, Tours Inc.: A special company for the special traveler. Call for 1991 schedule: 914-358-6035.

SCOTLAND: Ardsheal House, historic home of the Stewarts of Appin, now a country house hotel owned and run by Jane & Bob Taylor (Princeton '53). Located on coast in magnificent West Highlands. Superb food. Brochure: Ardsheal House, Kentallen of Appin, Argyll PA38 4BX, Scotland. Tel.: 44-63174-227. Fax: 44-63174-342. Open Easter to Nov.

BED & BREAKFAST

PRINCETON AREA: Alternative lodging in comfortable private homes. Bed & Breakfast of Princeton, P.O. Box 571, Princeton, NJ 08540; 609-924-3189.

CAMPS

THE SUSQUEHANNOCK CAMPS, founded 1905 by G. Carlton Shafer '03, still under same family management of E.H. Shafer '44, G.C. Shafer '51, Priscilla H. Shafer '83. Summer resident brother/sister camps on private lakes in northeastern PA. Top quality staff instruct team and individual sports, waterfront, riding, arts and crafts, ecology. ACA accredited camps. Write Box 71, R.D. 1, Brackney, PA 18812, or call 717-967-2323/215-356-2436.

WANTED TO BUY

RARE BOOKS AND FIRST EDITIONS: We are interested in purchasing libraries or single volumes from the 15th to the 20th century. Top prices paid. Also, expert appraisals for individuals or institutions. David L. O'Neal '60, Antiquarian Booksellers, Inc., 234 Clarendon St., Boston, MA 02116; 617-266-5790.

Classified Ads Work Better for You In the PRINCETON EXCHANGE

OLD TRAINS: Private collector interested in sets and collections. Contact David A. Hoffman, M.D. '54, 1330 Penn Ave., Wyomissing, PA 19610. 215-373-4271.

FINE ARTWORK: American, European, Canadian, and Western oil paintings, watercolors, drawings, and bronzes purchased for immediate cash. Gallery of the Masters, Inc., 9918 Clayton Road, St. Louis, MO 63124; 314-993-4477; fax 314-993-4478.

BUSINESS SERVICES

PROFESSIONAL TAX PLANNING, ACCOUNTING, AUDIT REPRESENTATION. Personal and business. Enrolled to practice before IRS. By appointment. 212-947-6031. Virgil M. Cummins '67 (EA), 430 West 34th Street, New York, NY 10001.

GOODS & SERVICES

NANNIES: Trained at Nannies of Cleveland School, available for positions nationwide. Call Monica Bassett w'61. 216-521-4650.

BENTLEY 1960 SII RHD: Burgundy, very good condition. Estate sale, Class '48. Days 212-237-1560. Evenings 908-322-5223.

EDUCATION

NONTRADITIONAL PREMEDS: Expert advice for older students, career changers, second round applicants. Counseling by former director and founder of the Post-Baccalaureate Premedical Program at Bryn Mawr College. Dr. Patricia Pruett, 215-525-4607.

APPLYING TO COLLEGES? Educational consultant will help your son or daughter choose wisely, do the job right. Former dean, 30 years experience. Dodge Johnson '59. 215-647-6755.

ADVERTISING YOUR VACATION GETAWAY

Now is an opportune time to advertise domestic vacation rentals. If you have a house, cottage, or other attractive vacation alternatives, and you are interested in advertising it through the PAW, please send your ad to the Exchange, PAW, 41 William St., Princeton, NJ 08540. $1.50 per word, per insertion. Or fax your ad with credit card information to 609-258-6305, attention Lolly O'Brien. For more information call 609-258-4886.

Wherever you go you need ACCESS!

"In a radical approach to the genre, Access Press has reinvented the wheel with a series of compact volumes that open cities through striking graphics, terse copy, and a tight format." —Time

"Beautiful to behold, yet practical as a hammer and screwdriver."

—Travel and Leisure

All new editions: London, Rome, Boston, Los Angeles, San Francisco.

Also available: Paris, Washington DC, Hawaii, New York City

$16.95

HarperPerennial

A Division of HarperCollinsPublishers

Digitized

12

ARTHUR C. HOLDEN
Box 182
Washington, CT 06793; 203-868-7063

This coming June will be the 79th reunion of the Class of 1912. In June 1908 L.W. Arbur made his first acquaintance with the Princeton Reunions. In June 1908 he was taken to the 35th reunion of the Class of 1873. This was the class of Walter B. Devereux, who brought L'il Arthur, as well as his son Alvin, to his 35th reunion. Among those present was Henry vanDyck, who was to be our professor of English at college and later ambassador to the Netherlands during WWI.

That same June, Alvin Devereux's uncle, James Barr, entertained us at his 30th reunion.

This coming June, 1912 will share with the 50-year class, 1941, their place of reunion, Forbes College on Alexander St.

We shall hope to have an even larger delegation of our Class progeny this coming June.

13

ALBION R. BRYAN
Box F
Frenchtown, NJ 08825

From Mrs. Richard H. (Ann) Staehle of Arizona City, Ariz., we had a recent Season's Greetings. She writes that she enjoys her distant residence in Ariz.

Last month mention was made of Katherine K. Hill '91, an Allan Wood Lukens 1913 Scholarship student. She was honored by being sent by professors in her dept. for research in Istanbul, Turkey last month.

We heard last month of two sons of classmate J. L. Hutton: the elder son, J. Laurence Hutton Jr. '41 (Schoolhouse La., Morristown, N.J.) and William L. Hutton '43 (East Hampton, N.Y.). They both followed their father's footsteps in the engineering school. It is good to be reminded of our highly valued classmate J. L. Hutton. Did we not call him "Jack" Hutton?

Ross J. Bunker '94, a freshman who holds the Wrestling Cabot Brewster War Memorial Scholarship, has written, thanking the Class for the high honor of receiving this 1913 Class scholarship. He is from Eugene, Oreg. One of his special interests is computer programming.

Alumni Records informs us that George O. Morgan '38, son of our classmate George Morgan, is in Switzerland. He told us in 1986 that he was retiring there, but expected to return to the U.S. eventually. If his address is needed, write to alumni records.

14

C. EARL MOORE
Rosemont Plaza, Apt. 117
Rosemont, PA 19010

A most interesting and informative letter has been recently received from Louise Bruce, daughter of our classmate Jim Bruce. Her letter reads as follows:

"It gives me happiness to write you that the collection of papers belonging to my father, James Bruce, a graduate of the Class of '14, has been donated to the Archives of the Univ. of Maryland. Although my father attended Harvard Law, he graduated from the Univ. of Md. Law School.

The Princeton Class of 1914 was outstanding. The names that come to mind are John C. Hughes, ambassador to NATO; Allen Dulles, chief of the C.I.A.; General Julius O. Adler of the N.Y. TIMES;

Henry Laughlin, president of Houghton Mifflin publishing; Donald Douglas from Chicago, whose wife, like my mother, went to Farmington; George Phillips of Buffalo; James Montgomery Beck from Newport; A. Herman Stump of Baltimore; William Armour, brother to Ambassador Norman Armour, also a Princeton graduate; Thomas Armstrong from Armstrong Ranch, Tex.; Jackson Boyd, Edward Lloyd, as many other men of ability and manners.

My father went to Princeton from Gilman School, from which he graduated in 1910 as valedictorian and recipient of the William A. Fisher Award. Although his father, Sen. William Cabell Bruce of Md., went to the Univ. of Va., his mother's family were Princetonians. My father's uncle, David Kirkpatrick Este Fisher Sr., recounted quite a tale about leading a cow up the steps into the cupola of Nassau Hall, an extraordinary feat if I remember correctly, and even more so on the descent.

My father loved his days at Princeton, and he went to all Reunions until failing health made travel prohibitive. While he was at Princeton, he was editor-in-chief of the DAILY PRINCETONIAN and he was elected V.P. of his Class for life.

17

IRIS GRAMMER, c/o Chemical Bank
30 Rockefeller Plaza, Ste. 6100
New York, NY 10112

We are distressed to report the passing of two members of the 1917 family. Jack Stoltze, a beloved classmate, died Jan. 16. He is survived by his daughter, Carolyn Benepe, who resides at 762 Stage Coach Trail, Afton, MN 55001. Katharine Annin, widow of our classmate, Bill Annin, died Nov. 16, at the age of 97. She is survived by her daughter, Margaretta Keith of Richmond, Va., one grandson and two great-grandchildren. To all of these family members, 1917 extends its heartfelt sympathy.

We want to share with the Class excerpts from letters received from recipients of 1917 War Memorial Scholarships. James F. Blue '91 writes: "Thanks to your classmates for your outpouring of generosity to support my senior year at Princeton. I am a major in the Woodrow Wilson School and plan to enter television news upon my graduation." Christie E. Dunnivant '93 writes: "Thank you for the generous scholarship. I cannot tell you how much I love it here at Princeton and how thankful I am that I have the opportunity to be here. I am a sophomore struggling through organic chemistry in order to major in biology and later go to med school." In future Class notes we will carry excerpts from other recipients.

We have memorials in this issue.

18

JAMES CROMWELL
Meadow Lakes, Apt. 3108
Hightstown, NJ 08520

One of the contributions which this Class has made to our wonderful old Princeton keeps coming back to us each year in the form of letters from undergraduates who are able to attend the University only because of scholarship support from the Class. We have three letters all at once and will relate their contents to you over the next few issues. The first is from a sophomore named Shawn Nauton, who writes to thank your secretary and his classmates for the boost from the Class of '18 Memorial Scholarship. Shawn is a Baltimorean who graduated first in her class from Calvert Hall College High School in Towson, Md. She tells us that she was apprehensive on two counts after being accepted: first, she worried over the tough academic load ahead of her and second, she displayed a responsible concern over the "astronomical cost" of the four years. Both of her parents work and had put her brother through college. "Needless to say, I would not be able to attend Princeton were it not for the generosity of the Class of '18 Memorial Scholarship." Shawn has a good handle on the academic problem; she sports a 3.5 G.P.A. (I suspect that is what we would know as a very solid "2" or better!) She covers sports for the PRINCE, coaches a local basketball team, and works in the financial aid office. Gentlemen, we have a winner!

We just saw in the N.Y. TIMES notice of the death on Jan. 11 of our great classmate and longtime president, Frank Baker. Frank was a grand person, a man of many talents who led a fascinating life, and how we will miss him. A memorial will appear in some future issue.

19

GEORGE B. LAWREN
14 Lake Forest Dr.
Charlottesville, VA 22901

We received a nice letter from Leon Kenin '92, advising that he had received the Paul Ledbetter Hargreaves War Memorial Scholarship, without which he would not have been able to attend Princeton, where he finds the Woodrow Wilson School is hard. He states, "But for all the differences from California, my home, I love many things about Princeton."

It is with the deepest sorrow that we report the death of Dr. Bradley C. Downing on Jan. 10, 1991, at Sun City West, Ariz., where Casey was spending the winter.

We have a memorial in this issue.

20

SALLY S. McALPIN W'20
Box 670
Princeton, NJ 08542

Martin Luther King Day reminded me of my only contact with this truly great man, a graduate and board member of Morehouse, the men's college of Atlanta Univ. Center. I sat on the board of the women's college, Spelman, and once in a while attended Morehouse board meetings as an interested onlooker.

On one such occasion I took my place along the wall, looked across the well-filled long board table right into the eyes of Martin Luther King. And what eyes! They held so much: they were intelligent and calm; they had the steadiness of a strong faith; they suggested friendliness; but their look held one special quality—the eyes were luminous.

And now to the heroes of the Class of 1920, the six who took the trouble to write Nelson Dane on their envelope flap. The first note is from our president Eli Wolf, via his secretary, Frances Wolf!

"Nelson: It was good to see you two last spring. Elias is in good health (physically!) We plan to spend the cold winter months (Jan.-Feb.) in Ariz. at the Ariz. Inn. Eli and I can then walk and be outdoors. Best to you and your wife, Frances Wolf '20."

The second note is from our former president, Frank Dixon, wintering as usual at Rancho Mirage in Calif.: "I am 94 and spouse Helen is 84. NUF CED.

We owe it all to Princeton. Frank A. Dixon '20."

A lost record of the Class of '20 has just emerged from Princeton's files. Frank Dixon has received from Joe Bolster, Annual Giving, a handsome book entitled PRINCETON REFLECTIONS, in honor of Frank's having contributed to the opening A.G. Campaign, launched in 1940-41. That first year the college raised $80,002. In 1989-90, the 50th anniversary of A.G., an all-time high of $18,605,030 was raised. Three cheers for Frank!

Don't FORGET that Nelson Dane is striving hard for another 100% of A.G. from the loyal Class of 1920. We have built up six years straight of 100% from our class. (A record launched by Bill Savage and taken up by Nelson. Need I say more?) We have memorials in this issue.

21 A. EDWARD CONOVER
331 Lower Dolington Rd., Apt. C-4
Newtown, PA 18940

McClure Kelley returned a negative card about his prospects for attending our 70th reunion in June. He included his best regards to all.

John McCaull can't make Reunions either, but only because his "old legs" keep him from traveling much. Fortunately, he says "all else seems to be in fairly good shape."

There are about six of us sitting around with our fingers crossed hoping we will be able to make that June date in Princeton. Stay tuned for details.

Alex Sloan's widow, Margaret, has moved from Brick, N.J., to 140 Windsor Park Dr., Apt. 306, Carol Stream, IL 60139.

John Gagosian '91, now a senior, writes again in appreciation of the financial help he has received from a Class of 1921 Scholarship. His home is in Torrance, Calif. He is a member of Quadrangle Club and is looking forward to a B.S.E. degree. His concentration is mechanical and aerospace engineering. We wish him success.

22 JACK REYNOLDS, JOHN CARTER '80
103 East 84th St.
New York, NY 10028

The photo of Jim Scarff and his family was omitted from the previous column.

Bauldy Maull wrote us a nice letter in Nov., noting that he and Flora visited Struss Hensel at his new Fla. residence. Unfortunately, Bauldy suffered a mild stroke in mid-Dec. and spent 10 days in N.Y. Hospital. He is at home now and resting comfortably. His doctor unfortunately no longer permits his daily ration of Mount Gay Rum. Bauldy and Flora are planning to attend Alumni Day. Their two children and two grandchildren visit regularly. Both his son and grandson attended Princeton, '53 and '88 respectively. His loyalty to Princeton and '22 are legendary, and we applaud and thank him for his efforts.

We apologize that the Alumni Day announcement appeared after the fact. However, Prof. Calaprice, master of Butler College, has extended an open invitation to all classmates to visit the college whenever they are in Princeton.

We have received more notes from the A.G. flaps: "Spent the summer again in New Hampshire, still perking along but at a slower pace. No contact with any other '22ers. I guess they are pretty scarce here in Braid Cty.," writes Albert Barnes.

We are nearing the end of this year's Annual Giving campaign and we still are short of our 100% participation goal. Please keep the gifts and news coming.

24 RICHARD H. HOMES
862 Prospect Ave.
Winnetka, IL 60093

Howard F. Baer, a longtime civic leader in health, welfare, aviation, economic development, and the arts, was honored last Nov. 30 by the City of St. Louis with their Civic Cooperation Award. In announcing the recipient of this award, Aldermanic President Thomas A. Villa, said: "Howard Baer symbolizes the rekindling of regional cooperation at a time when it is most needed."

Among his other achievements, Howard played a key role in developing the concept of the Zoo-Museum District and in campaigning for its passage. The St. Louis Zoo has become world famous.

Martin R. Everett now resides at Somers Manor, Somers, N.Y. We have memorials in this issue.

25 JOHN L. K. JENSEN
Box 123
Montchanin, DE 19710

A postcard from Julie and Hank Wilson sent in Nov. shows a statue of Lenin in front of the Cosmos Hotel in Moscow and reports, "We attended the Alumni College with mostly (much) younger Princeton graduates. Prof. Chance was fascinating in her lecture on Russian literature and the sights and sounds of Russia were fabulous." Incidentally, Hank, who was the founder of the Class Foundation, has recently sent in an additional gift. Attention: anyone who knows of a classmate or widow needing a bit of help should write in.

Your secretary accompanied George Phillips to a nice and well-attended Princeton Club of Philadelphia luncheon and sat next to Calvin Cheston '32, who reported that his brother Morris, still showing the effects of his stroke, is getting along nicely and is being well cared for by his two daughters and son Morris Jr. '59. The Phillipses set forth on Jan. 5 for a cruise to the Orient on the Vistaford Star (not the QEII, their usual home away from home.)

John Bogle '51, chairman of the Vanguard Group of Investment Funds, recently gave an interesting talk on business ethics to the Christ Church Business Men's (and Women's) lunch at the Dupont Hotel in Wilmington. He was accompanied by his wife, Eve (Smith '55), who stated that she had approved the text of the speech. She is the daughter of Bill Sherrerd and also the sister of Jay Sherrerd '52, University trustee.

Russ Ross writes "Keeping fit. Still jogging." Ran Sawyer writes from Lafayette Hill, Penn., that he hopes to bring his grandson deer hunting.

Bob Wilson sent in a quote (written before his recent marriage), "Hard to believe that I am 87. I had a beautiful trip to Polynesia and a week in Yosemite with my son Andrew."

26 ROBERT WOODFORTH
57 Rockwell Rd.
Ridgefield, CT 06877

Latest report from the 65th reunion committee is "all signs are that we will establish a new attendance record at a 65th reunion. The old record of 33 classmates was set by 1922 in 1987. Help us nail down a new one." Further, an interim Annual Giving report of Jan. 18 listing goals, gifts, and pledges to date, plus percentage of attendance participation, places '26 with over 70% of its goal in hand on pledges and gifts and with 33% Class participation signed on. Seems as if the "Flagship Class" can still get up a good head of steam.

Readers of our 1988 SUMMER SUMMARY will recall the story about Adele and Don Goddard and how Don successfully conquered his longtime alcohol addiction, later building a fine clinical record with Adele as mentors and counselors in Phoenix, Ariz., to other senior citizens who were addicted. It is worth re-reading as Adele, who has been legally blind for some years, never let her hardship affect her devotion and effectiveness in their joint therapeutic work. Now news comes that Don has become very nearly blind, a condition that came on suddenly and which apparently does not lend itself to surgery or other treatment. Nonetheless, Adele and Don are still continuing their joint work at St. Luke's Hospital in Phoenix and Don says it provides him with a valuable outlet for his energies.

John Kreckner '55, son of our Preston Kreckner, who was killed in WWII in 1943, handed us what seemed to be a puzzler. John says there are still family memories about Preston's acquaintanceship, while he was on campus, with a member of the Japanese Imperial family, also an undergraduate at the time. All '26 lists and records revealed no clue, but Bob Ward laid a likely trail when he recalled Y. Osawa '25, "who was highly connected in Japan" and who invited his whole class in the late 1950s to be his guests.

We have memorials in this issue.

27 NELSON R. BURN
36 Lexington Rd.
West Hartford, CT 06119

A tear-off for news on the Class dues notice reminds us that Jim Pitcairn died on Aug. 18, 1989. A memorial for him already has appeared in PAW, but any 1927ers who have not yet known, or sent condolences, are reminded that his widow, Ellen C. Pitcairn, lives at 5049 Amberson Pl., Pittsburgh, PA 15232.

There is growing evidence that the elderly sometimes are anything but eager to take refuge in retirement homes. One witness is Ed Colladay, who reports that he and wife May enjoy their quiet life and "have no thought" of going to one. Instead, they are getting a chair lift in their house and he is satisfied with a cane. Their health is "good but not perfect." Looks like you'd better believe it.

Al Wolfe writes "No news worth publishing" and then contradicts himself by adding that he and his spouse are "well and happy and are looking forward to our 65th reunion in '92." Fred Wardenburg has moved to a retirement village in Scottsdale, Ariz. "Still play golf," he says, "a couple of times a week, less well than a few years ago."

Dear friends of 1927! If the news seems rather brief, your secretary reminds you that he believes you are neither lazy nor illiterate. My thanks to those who recently have mailed some news!

We have a memorial in this issue.

28 R. PARK JOHNSON
Box 28
Penney Farms, FL 32079; 904-284-8698

Audrey and Win Hersey, who divide their time between Lake Wales, Fla., and Marlborough in southern N.H., recently had dinner with Rita Moeser, widow of Charlie Moeser and mother of our first "Class baby," in Ponte Vedra Beach, Fla., at the Vicar's Landing retirement community. Park Johnson also had a pleasant conversation with Rita recently at the Jacksonville Civic Center where they were attending the Princeton Triangle Show shortly before Christmas. Rita is enjoying the busy life at Vicar's Landing, where there is a considerable contingent of Princetonians. Charlie died in 1987 while they were living at Sea Island, Ga.

Shortly after the Class luncheon in Dec., Don Liddell came down with a problem with the Achilles tendon in his left foot. He is not completely lamed, but needs a walker or crutches to get around. He goes out to a few business or social meetings, but it is difficult. We hope for early news that the problem has been overcome.

At the time of the Class luncheon on Dec. 3, there was an Executive Committee meeting of the Class. It was reported that 94 members (64%) had sent in Class dues. Bill Renchard, treasurer, hopes that this percentage figure can be increased.

Plans for a spring picnic are being made and will doubtless be announced before long. Arrangements for the 63rd reunion, June 7-8, will probably be similar to last year, with the Fri. evening dinner at the Townhouse Motel in Hightstown and the Sat. luncheon at Prospect House on campus. It was decided to publish a new Class Directory, and Jim Lee agreed to continue as editor. The directory will probably be ready around mid-1992.

Announcement appeared in the Jan. 23 issue of the deaths of Dick Huckin and Walt Bennett. Dates have now been ascertained: Dick died on Nov. 9, and Walt on Nov. 13.

We have memorials in this issue.

29 LOUIS F. KEMP
12 Winthrop Rd.
Gulfport, CT 06437; 203-453-4646

Our poet laureate, Inky Boyd, brings sunshine into our lives with the following inspiration, done when Jim Lawrence and Jim Carey were still alive:

"The Class is proud of Harvey Mole,
The Class is proud of Carey,
We're very pleased with Joe,
and all of us love Mary,
and when you mention Lawrence,
the accolades arrive in torrents.
Tho' '29 may take its lumps,
It's not for long we're in the dumps,
So courage boys and never fear,
There's nothing like reunion beer.

Vernon Mangold meditates on our lot with these thoughts. "So much time goes for body repairs, but does keep us in the race while medical techniques and drugs advance daily. Now there is a non-invasive substitute for the Angiograms we endured and survived! I often regret that I was unable to return for Reunions, tho' possibly memories of my six years at Princeton are the best reward; and too many of my classmates will only be memories." Sorry to report that Win Gottschalk has had serious health problems, compelling the Gottschalks to move from Belmont, Mass. to Wolfeboro, N.H., to be near their children. Not much news from Bub Duryea but he's proud to have two sons and a daughter. Betty Daley Ballenger tells us that William S. IV is now at Lawrenceville—on his way to Princeton, we hope! Sadly we lost Rev. E. Chester Crabb on Feb. 6, 1990. A memorial will follow.

30 HUBERT A. "RED" SCHNEIDER
8008 Westover Rd.
Bethesda, MD 20814

We goofed. Apparently most of you did too. We missed completely the picture on page three of the Nov. 7 issue of the WEEKLY which showed a Class of 1930 stage coach enroute to the Columbia football game in 1939. Fred Smith, who organized the event as advance publicity for our tenth reunion, called it to our attention. Shown in the picture were Horse Dickerson, Wally Ruckert, and Joe Wright, among others. Can anyone identify the other characters in the picture? Fred says he was inside the coach, which, lacking other proof, we will have to accept. The stage coach started at the Waldorf Astoria and proceeded all the way up Broadway to Columbia's Baker Field where it circled the field to the cheers of the crowd. Needless to say there were suitable refreshments on board, the imbibing of which was accompanied by song and the waving of banners. Let's plan to repeat this event the next time we play Columbia in New York. Who will volunteer to drive and who will pour the drinks? Gordon Gavan, you take it from there.

The Dec. issue of POTOMAC LIFE, published in Potomac, Md., carried an article on "The Golden Spirit of Holidays Past." Featured were Lloyd Free and his wife who recalled their favorite holiday, their Christmas in Rome in 1952 when Lloyd was counselor in the American embassy there.

Roger Whitman has given up his place on Martha's Vineyard and is now living year-round at their place in Gulfport, Fla.

Charlie Ellis continues to be active as an oriental carpet expert. Last July he spent a week in Chicago reviewing the holdings of the Art Inst. In Nov. he was in S.F. at an Intl. Congress of Oriental Carpets where he was the honored guest and speaker.

On Jan. 30 Wally Ruckert and Red Schneider drove down to Boca Grande, Fla., where Red has leased a cottage for Feb. and Mar. If anyone happens to be down that way call Red at 301-964-0243 for a drink, a meal, or even a bed.

We have a memorial in this issue.

31 HUGH T. KERR
15-01 U Meadow Lakes
Hightstown, NJ 08520; 609-448-4100

Presiding over our N.Y. Princeton Club lunch, Jan. 16, Grace and White Mountain. Joining in for one of our biggest and best gatherings: Mary Atwater, Mike Bosak (with Ruth Freidenburg), Frank Froment (who made all the arrangements, and, so to say, prepared the lunch for the bunch), Nancy and Al Genung, Norrie Houghton, Dolly Humphrey, Tim Kerr, Punch and Dave Kreidler, Lydia and Gib McCabe (stopping off between Fla. and New Canaan), George McKee, Bill Newman, Francine and Pen Reed (stopping off between Boston and Paris), and Frank Woodfin.

Mike took pictures; Bill hinted at a record 60th; Norrie had a dust jacket of his new book; Gib gave a great pep talk; some sang the old songs while others made a joyful noise; Dave and Pen led us in "Old Nassau."

A dozen of us converged at Hightstown to board a rented van to and from N.Y. It rained cats and dogs but was a great way to travel. Speaking of transportation, did you hear of the woman who got on the Fifth Avenue bus and said she had no money? The driver kept the door open and wouldn't budge. Some of the passengers took up a collection which they gave to the woman. She said "Thanks" and promptly stepped off the bus.

Plan ahead for our early spring lunch at the Nassau Club in Princeton, Apr. 9. We'll have a preview of our super-60th and details about the program and other events.

We regret to report the death of Robert H. Sayre. A memorial will appear later.

32 MANTLAND A. EDEY
1199 Park Ave.
New York, NY 10128

As we settle into our eighties we are becoming aphorists and poets. Recently Suede Harmon and Don Randall have written poems (too long for inclusion here, but maybe next summer). Others go for more pithy statements. Don himself sums up his philosophy thus: Try to do nothing that will come to haunt you later.

Dwight Hollenbeck observes darkly: "Old age and treachery will overcome youth and skill."

Paul Smith remembers a quote from '31's Josh Logan: "Beauty is not truth as Keats has said. It's living life completely until you're dead." Paul lives by that maxim daily. With metal rods in his back, he still gets around. He hasn't driven a car for six months, but despite some pain walks a lot.

Cbruck Findley is also walking, but at a slower pace. He admits to having traded in his five-iron for a cane.

Fred Wemyss, by contrast, boasts perfect health and weighs in with this maxim: "Keep busy, it's good medicine. Age is a state of mind, not body."

Lee Blyler is clearly listening to that. A recent scare from bladder cancer has not prevented him from making plans to attend our 60th.

Pete Schwed—no aphorist he—has given up writing full-length non-fiction books and is trying his hand at a novel. Ah, Pete, aren't we all secretly doing that?

Meanwhile the trek to retirement homes continues. As reported, Ty Kennedy has moved to Meadow Lakes, N.J. Hugh Handsfield, now widowed, has picked a retirement home near La Jolla. Dave Schaeffler, also widowed, may move into one near Bellevue, Wash., where his daughter lives. And speaking of daughters, Carter Goodpasture has one who is now training race horses on a horse farm near Princeton. Surely (sorry for this) there must be good pastures there. A lot of to-ing and fro-ing between classmates will be reported on in the next column. No room for it here.

We have a memorial in this issue.

33 ARTHUR MOODY
600 E. Cathedral Rd., Apt. A314
Philadelphia, PA 19128

In a recent column (Dec.19) we told about the Garrett mansion in Baltimore, Harry Garrett's family's house. Now for one in Princeton: the Princeton PACKER, in its Jan. 17 issue, has a lengthy report on the work of the Lawrence Township Historic Preservation Comm. They recently presented a certificate to Weedy and Jack Stokes, recognizing their house on the Lawrenceville Rd. Thanks to the warm hospitality of Weedy and Jack, many classmates have visited the Stokes house, especially at reunion time. Originally known as the Merston House, it dates from 1740, with a wing that was added about 1800. It is stated to be one of the best preserved in both interior and exterior of the old houses in Lawrence Township.

Unfortunately we must report that Dodo Wilson died Jan. 12, 1991, in Costa Mesa, Calif. Dodo had recently written to Dave Ludlum reminiscing about various things, including this: "Maybe someday I should write up my barnstorming days and the experience flying through 17 European countries alone in 1937 through 1939." Dodo also expressed regret at missing the Broadmoor event because of previously having booked passage on a cruise. Two lessons may be learned from this: One, don't put off writing up memoirs of interesting experiences and sending them to Bob Keidel; two, don't delay making reservations for Sky Top, Oct. 15-17, 1991, as soon as you hear from Frank Townsend.

Another sad note: Gordon Taylor's wife, Jane, has died. She had many friends in the Class as she attended houseparties with Gordon in 1932 and 1933. They were married late in 1933, and had nearly 57 years together.

Be sure to support Curly Marsb and Annual Giving.

34 RALPH K. FITCH

4347 Province Line Rd.
Princeton, NJ 08540

Frank Constantine missed the N.Y.C. lunch in Jan., explaining to host Mal Johnson, "As you fellows are sitting down to lunch on the 16th, Barbara and I will be starting the second week of our three-month vacation in Grenada. I'll face north and toast '34 with a sip of Grenada rum punch." "At exactly the same time," Mal reports, "we faced south and toasted Frank and Barbara."

Tex Elliott's appetite remains good, says his wife, Helen. He can walk "with assistance," she says, "but does not do so with any degree of enthusiasm. When on occasion he breaks through with a smile, it makes the whole world brighter."

Greta and Stan Intins celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary last fall in Bermuda. A month earlier they celebrated the 50th of "a couple of old pals" in Cincinnati.

Margaret and Bentley McCloud are back in their winter home in Naples, Fla., after a busy summer: a week at the Garden of the Gods in Colorado Springs and at the Kissing Camel golfing resort, then on to Rancho Santa Fe and the Laguna Miguel, where they saw their children and six grandchildren.

Libby (the widow of Jim) McGiffert moved in Dec. from Easton, Penn., to Baltimore to be near her daughters Jan in Baltimore and Lyn in Washington and their families.

Dick Skillman had to give up his driver's license permanently, "so I sulk a lot." He suffered a "slight stroke" but had a good recovery, and after three days in the hospital says, "I feel as good as ever."

Bob Waddell, a longtime golf enthusiast in Houston, managed to shoot a 76 shortly before his 78th birthday.

Remember Annual Giving.

We have memorials in this issue.

35 JOSEPH C. HAZEN JR.

94 Essex Rd.
Summit, NJ 07901

PARADISE-FOUND Lou Blissard of Honolulu: "I'm still practicing law (with this much practice I ought to get it right some day), but part of my time is spent on the island of Molokai, where I have a house on an ocean fish pond. I raise papaya, bananas, coconuts, mangoes, breadfruit, and lilikoi, or passion fruit. I don't really raise them, because they just grow naturally there, and I pick them. After a week of gardening, I have to return to my office in Honolulu to get rested up. My secretary of 29 years takes care of all the details of running my law office, and by this time she can practice law better than I can!"

"About 20 years ago I was one of three developers of a beach-bungalow hotel on the island of Moorea in French Polynesia. Tahiti was a paradise then, and I used to go there every two months or so. But all that has changed—unbelievably. That's why whenever someone wants to build something on the eastern end of Molokai we turn out in force in opposition. No hotels, no golf courses, no shopping malls out there. We even succeeded in delaying for six years the strengthening of a bridge over a stream which was dangerous for busses. We didn't want busses coming out there. They finally fixed the bridge, but still no development—just deer, pheasant, quail, shore fishing, canoe paddling, surfing and gardening." Lou adds that he has "had the good fortune to enjoy good health," and, obviously, he enjoys a good life.

GOLD MEDALISTS. Pat and Bud Morehead of Houston, Tex., celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary in Aug. with the help of their three children (one from Germany) and the best man, Bud's brother Clay '32. Before retirement, Bud was a professor of architecture at Rice Univ. At another party of family and friends in Oct. Jane and Gordon Craig of Plainfield, N.J. were similarly toasted. Gordon is still busy running his own business, a food brokerage company serving the N.Y. metropolitan area.

We have a memorial in this issue.

36 JAMES G. BENSON

24 Aylesbury Cir., Windermere
Madison, CT 06443

Warming up for our 55th! Shown above are Jean and Jim Benson with Bettie Anne Osborne (who supplied the photo) at our great mini-reunion in 1988 at Sebasco Lodge on the Me. coast.

All about parties and fun: Plans have been made by our 55th Reunion Committee to cover the following events during June 6-9: Thurs. dinner at our tent at the Graduate College; Fri. Class dinner and meeting in Proctor Hall, Graduate College; Sat. supper and dancing at the home of Betty Constable and Sun. brunch at the home of the Bill Scheldes. Continuing details for this terrific weekend will be forthcoming.

Our campaign with a goal of $550,000 for Princeton is aimed at surpassing the current 55th Reunion record of $517,000 set by the Class of 1933. As of mid-Jan. our goal seems attainable. Please heed the pleas of Class Agent Ned Williams and Special Gifts Chairman Van Richard and his committee. Let us repeat our setting a new record at our 50th back in 1986.

Ted Keller continues as a consultant for Dosch-King Co., Inc., a road construction company at Whippany, N.J. with which he has been associated for some 52 years. He is a hospital volunteer, plays golf, and spends some time in Florida. He enjoys a large family, including great grandchildren.

We regret to report the death Jan. 15, 1991, of John Davis Gray.

37 STANFORD F. MENDINA

250 Broadway, Rm. 2104
New York, NY 10007

The latest recipients of scholarships have been: Jim Cross Scholarship—Amy E. Benton '93, Spence Hackett Scholarship—Michael G. Chang '92, and Princeton Class of 1937—Bill's grandson David R. Hunter '92. Dave Hunter hails from Colorado Springs, Colo., is concentrating on mathematics, and on the side plays varsity volleyball, intramural soccer, and is a student manager in the Department of Food Services. Speaking of scholars, John Shipley Jr. '91 has won the history dept. prize, while sister Lauren continues as tennis captain and #1 singles in her junior year at Rollins College, Winter Park, Fla.

Jof's son Edmund Hendrickson III was married in Jan. to Jeanne Elizabeth Jennings, beaten to the altar by Bob Middlebrook's daughter Leslie, singer and actress, married Oct. 6 to Lee Moore, actor. Chalk up a fourth grandchild for Hank Slauson, a boy to second son Francis.

Having just reported Bud Staub's hip revision, we now find that he and wife Dilley celebrated their 50th wedding year by taking over a whole barge with 18 people, all children, spouses, grandchildren, her brother and wife and kids in northern France, with a three-star chef yet, trained at LaVarrenne in Paris. Another family mob scene was by Chape Hawley for his 75th birthday, with kids and eight grandchildren. Just before he'd spent Sept. in Germany, Austria, Hungary, and Italy and then in Dec., ten days in Jamaica-Negril. Other travelers were Sally and Bill Renwick on a trip to India and Nepal "via a dumb cruise from Bangkok to Bombay. Nepal fantastic, India a marvelous experience. Got gout in process, cleared up in half a day by an Indian doctor."

Floridians should mark down Tues., Mar. 12 for a Vero Beach mini-reunion run by Fred Blatcher, dinner that night, next day golf, and watching the L.A. Dodgers.

We have memorials in this issue.

38 WILLIAM P. TAMS

Box 25217
Jackson, WY 83001; 307-733-5193

Eithne and George Ross had a great trip to Scandinavia last Aug., staying in elderhostels in Finland, Denmark, and Norway, with a brief trip to Stockholm to visit the huge room in the city hall, the scene of Nobel Prize banquets. A trip aboard a ship up the coast of Norway gave them the opportunity to sunbathe north of the Arctic Circle, courtesy of the Gulf Stream.

This trip followed George's 75th birthday party, attended by, among others, Sy Alexander and Charley Price and their wives.

George has come across a Frenchman's description of his journey across America in 1793-98. He describes Nassau Hall in some detail; is quite critical of its unkempt surroundings; and adds, "It would be pleasant to be able to speak highly of the college's curriculum, but when one has not been brought up in the American way, praise is difficult. Any system that indulges in its students the customary indolence of Americans cannot but produce vicious results . . . at Princeton College, where sport and [bleep] habits are said to absorb the pupils more than study." Whew! But tuition was only $100 a year.

On a happier note, the last of our undergraduate children, Scott Crater, will graduate in June. He has enjoyed Princeton, and has been busy as manager of radio station WPRB. His stepfather, Prof. Emeritus Henry A. Jandl, will march in the academic procession at Scott's graduation.

Tom Gilson is another Elderhostel traveler. His trip took him to Wales, Scotland, and Ireland after ten days in London doing plays and museums. He continues to keep busy with labor arbitration in the Northwest and Hawaii from his home on Bainbridge Island, Wash., and his base for many years, Hawaii.

Mary Helen and Chuck Williams celebrated their 50th year together in Oct. with many relatives and friends, including Tish and Dave Dort, who were in their wedding party.

We have a memorial in this issue.

39 RICHARD R. UNA

12 Charlotte Ct.
Briarcliff Manor, NY 10510

Up in Dorset, Vt., Bob Thum has just settled down for a long winter's nap. Macduff, Bob's best friend for the past five years, looks sleepy, too.

Bob deserves a winter rest. His "retirement" years have been unusually active. As a trustee of Hildene, the Manchester summer home of Robert Todd Lincoln, he has been instrumental not only in the restoration but in helping build tourist attendance to the record-breaking 50,000 in the 1990 season. He has also written a weekly newspaper column, "THUMprints," and served as trustee of the Vt. Symphony Orchestra.

Honors to '39ers continue. Last fall at the Wooster School in Danbury, Conn., a library was dedicated to the memory of John Verdery, headmaster 1943-76, and headmaster emeritus at the time of his death. And last Nov. at the College of Saint Rose in Albany, N.Y., Carl Toubey received the Lewis A. Swyer Community Renaissance Award.

Our progeny in the news: Kate Livack, Bill Roston's daughter, was mayor of Princeton Township the past two years. Her successor is Dick Woodbridge's son Dick '64. Jim French's daughter Rebecca Hess has been invited to join the Princeton Inst. for Advanced Studies in June, her field, social sciences. And Hannah Fox says it is such fun having grandson Gabriel Cardona Fox at Princeton. "I see him at least every other week, when he comes here to do his laundry and eat everything in the kitchen." We have a memorial in this issue.

40 BENJAMIN FULLER
6119 Vernon Terr.
Alexandria, VA 22307; 703-329-1961

Class Trip June 23-July 1, 1991

Lakes, mountains, glaciers of Canadian Rockies, Calgary, Banff, Lake Louise, Jasper; plus daytime train trip, Jasper to Vancouver. Overnight in Kaloops, three nights in Vancouver. Option to attend Calgary Stampede. U.S. $1950, not including airfare. For full info, contact Bucky Turner, 4 Beechdale Rd., Baltimore, MD 21210; 301-323-3220.

While the winds of war and other distressing events at home and abroad impact heavily on each and everyone of us, it is comforting to present these six classmates making the most of our 50th reunion. The lineup (l-r) consists of Tom Kennedy, Duke Davies, Ted Sauer, Ted Trimble, Dick Purnell, and Doc Haigbi. Unique about this collection of 1940 stalwarts is that they all came to Princeton from Kent School, have nurtured this bond over the ensuing years, and continue to loyally support Kent in a variety of ways. However we sadly remind you that Duke died shortly after this picture was taken. Two other Kent School products still going strong, but absent from this reassuring scene, Chitz Anderson and Deef Keys (who lives and works in England), were also very much in evidence at the 50th.

Retired Princeton geology prof. Sbel Judson was married last Oct. to the Hon. Pamela Hemphill of Cheyney, Penn., who recently retired from her post as prof. of art history at West Chester Univ.

Classmate Dick Franklin died Jan. 7, 1991.

41 BILL WILSON
Box 1420
Bridgehampton, NY 11932; 516-537-2458

George Gordon is on schedule and budget with our 50th yearbook, which will be unique in that all of us, both the quick and the departed, will be included in synoptic biographic form. Even with his MacIntosh and the best of help from Jean Gorman (pix) and Wells Hobler (memorials) this has been a huge task. The book will be mailed out not later than Mar., says George.

Paul Douglas presided over a Dutch-treat lunch of our Executive Committee at the N.Y.C. Princeton Club on Jan. 3, 1991. Barker, Broderick, Chubb, Finch, Gordon, Gorman, Jacobs, Leibowitz, Pettit, Piney, Quinby, Rounds, Schmuckl, Short, Smart, Tipson, Williamson, Wilson, and Su Young came. Listing their official titles would have consumed the rest of this column.

The Bill Johnsons spent last May and June playing 35 different golf courses from Land's End in Cornwall to John O'Groats in northern Scotland. "What a hike!" says Bill.

1941 has been outstandingly generous with scholarship money over the years. Our honorary member Turk Thacher '66 reports that the following undergrads benefit from the Thacher Memorial Fund this school year: Leigh C. Hall '94 concentrates on English lit. Her father is a colonel in the Army and they have lived "all over." Wendy A. Hassan '91, from Belmont, N.Y., majors in English. Philadelphia's Robert G. Marks '91 is in the Woodrow Wilson School and Reuwai H. Mount '94, from Princeton, is undecided. Her dad was Turk's classmate.

42 ARMSTRONG HUNTER
R.R. 1, Box 250, Perkinsville, VT 05151
802-263-5361; (fax 802-263-9263)

Minor Barringer (Penn.) on an A.G. flap: "Celebrating my 70th in good health. Appreciated the Toll tiger birthday card. New grandson in Nov. Good raps with Dave Dennison and Bomber Elmer this fall." Barringer's note recalls a question often asked: Who sends out those cards, anyway? The sender has always requested some cover, but we'll allow a clue: the name was among those italicized in this column in last PAW.

Sam Schreiner and Don Stroetzel put all-but-final touches on copy for '42's Fifty Year Book at Don's home in Conn. Jan. 15. The day was vastly upset by a call bringing word that Diana's mother, Adelaid Poel, had died that morning, but at the end of it, just before mail deadline, Sam got 99.44% of the book parceled for shipping to production man Herb Bailey in N.C. Next day Sam was off to Washington to start work on yet another book, the story of Everett Alvarez, eight-and-a-half years a P.O.W.—the longest held in North Vietnam—and now a lawyer and sometime government official. Text is due in midsummer with publication expected by the end of the year.

Pat Howell in Dallas is another who scarcely stops. Sending a W. W. Norton list of books of Saybrook Publishing Company, he writes that though his five-year tour of duty at the helm of Saybrook Publishing is completed (the Norton/Saybrook list now includes 23 titles), he's been named secretary of a committee set up by the Tenth Annual Intl. Conference on Human Science. Representing several disciplines, its task is to prepare a "manifesto of human study for a new world." First meeting was in Dec.; prospects are promising, he reports.

As this column was being readied for transmission to Princeton Joan Mattheus called from San Francisco with the sad news that Bill died late afternoon Jan. 29, at home while napping after a busy day. The Class has lost a warm and thoughtful friend. To Joan and the family we send our full support.

43 JACK LAPLIN
10 Vardon Rd.
West Hartford, CT 06117; 203-523-8929

At the beginning of last Oct., Tom Bakewell journeyed up to Cape Cod for Earl Biscoe's big 70-celebration." Grey Dayton was also expected to attend. Prior to that, Tom had gone to Viareggio, Italy, to compete in the 17th F.I.S.A. Intl. Rowing Regatta. We competed as a member of the City of Cambridge Rowing Club. Tom concludes: "Won our four with cox, got noosed out by .6 seconds on double sculls. The regatta was called off in latter stages due to high wind and waves, so didn't get to row in singles."

Tom Knapp has joined the swelling list of Fla. dwellers, such as Headley, Van Buren, et al. As of last Nov., Tom makes his HQ at 201 Sandpiper Point, Vero Beach, FL 32963.

Stever Aubrey's son, Stever H. Aubrey, was recently named senior V.P. and management supervisor at Lawner, Reingold, Britton & Partners, Boston.

Fledgling playwright Ted Rockwell sends the news that one of his plays had a cold reading at a theatre in Alexandria, Va. In Jan., another play was due to have a staged reading at an Equity theatre in downtown Washington, D.C. According to Ted, "This is kind of a new game for me. Interesting and sometimes frustrating."

John Douglas, who was an asst. attorney general in both the Kennedy and Johnson administrations, wrote an incisive commentary for the Philadelphia Inquirer of Nov. 7, 1990. In it, John dealt with the early Oct. resolutions by House and Senate commending Pres. Bush for his speedy deployment of troops in the Persian Gulf, as well as his leadership in marshaling intl. opposition to Iraq. Thus, John reached the conclusion that the Congress "dealt itself out of any American decision to start a war with Iraq."

Bob Applegate still working, he says "without salary for a group engaged in a valuable work."

44 HARVEY S. STOCKMAN
1041 Matador Dr., S.E.
Albuquerque, NM 87123; 505-296-7057

As of Jan. 15, 1991, John Ware is carrying 26 classmates, 24 wives, and three Class widows on his rolls for '44's New Orleans mini-reunion Apr. 4-7, 1991. Betsy and Brisson Woods will be welcoming Accola, Batcbelor, Bell, Chester, Conwell, Gibbs, Gordon, Huston, Ivins, Koeman, Kelley, Korth, Lee, Macdonald, McManus, Messa, Metcalf, Miller, Murdock, J. Myers, G. Palmer, Shafer, Soudon, Ware, Watts, and Woodbridge. There is still time to make this Easter extravaganza.

The '44 luncheon at the P.C.N.Y. is GO for Mar. 13, 1991, noon, cash bar. Join us.

A live-wire couple from '80 & '81, Frances Mills and Jon Wonnell, headed for Singapore to labor for VISA. They were urged by various Princetonians to contact our own Richard Eu, whose daughter, Helen Ho, was in '74. They did, one thing led to another, and Singapore now has a Princeton Alumni Assn. Richard, returning to Singapore in 1948, found he was the only alumnus of P. It was his hope that more would follow. They have. In Aug. 1990 the Eus hosted a dinner at the Tanglin Club for 32 Princetonians, families, and friends. Quoting a blurb that followed that event, "Moved by the same spirit that prompted Richard to host the dinner, a group of alumni have been meeting regularly to actualize the vision shared during that momentous gathering." The legalized offspring: "The P.A.A. of Singapore"; Frances Wonnell is its interim secretary.

Brad Bradford suggested we note in the column Bob Hack's son, Randall '69, assuming the presidency of PRINCO, as covered in the Dec. 19 PAW. It's probably poor form to wish an investment head good luck, but we'll do it anyway. Brad is finally gluing together his decade-long project on the impact of communications revolutions on man's progress throughout history. He solicits classmates' thoughts and suggestions on the subject.

Gordon Whitman died Dec. 10, 1990. A memorial will follow. The Class mourns with his family. Sadly we report the death of Scott Mason's wife, Ginny, who died of cancer Nov. 27, 1990. She loved our reunions; she'll be missed at our 50th.

45 WARREN W. BENTON
U.S. Courthouse, 915 Lafayette Blvd.
Bridgeport, CT 06604

N.Y.C.-area classmates are reminded to save Tues., Apr. 30, for the 5-8 P.M. cocktail reception at the Princeton Club. Details to follow.

Photo depicts the extended and handsome family of Rodie and Paul Funkhouser. Standing in the rear are son John '76 and son-in-law Michael Doar '78, who is in turn the son of John Doar '44, so the marriages have been kept in the Princeton family. Seated are daughter-in-law Julie, Paul, Rodie, and daughter Eleanor Doar '79. The five members of the third generation are (l-r) Paul '07, Parker '05, Rodie Doar '05, Ann Doar '11 and Will Doar '08. They may not all matriculate at Princeton but with that number the percentages should be pretty good!

Hope you all noted that the Jan. 23 issue of PAW contained no less than two letters to the editor by '45ers. T. R. Febrenbach weighed in from Texas to express appreciation of W.R. Connor's '61 Oct. 10 PAW book review of TENURED RADICALS by Roger Kimball, while noted intl. newsmagazine John Law commented on the Nov. 7 PAW photograph of Jim Baker '52 with Prince Saud '64, which reminded John of his own interview with the Prince in 1974, when the prince was Saudi deputy minister of petroleum. The prince advised John that at that time his attentions were directed to the energy crisis at Palmer Stadium. That must have been a year much like 1990 for Princeton on the football field.

46 ROBERT CAMPBELL JR.
Investors Security Services
636 Morris Tpk., Short Hills, NJ 07078

1946's 45th
On the retirement scene we have Bill Elks, who recently retired from law in Columbus, Oh. He and his wife, Jane, now devote more time to their 1100-acre "Crane Hollow," which they provided to the state as a nature preserve. Jack Merrell writes from New Canaan, Conn. In his post-Mobil days he finds himself filled with a variety of activities: first, with a direct-response marketing firm, and as representative of an Eastern European artist gaining recognition in the U.S. Ed Classen says he is retired, but still enjoys the clear, dry air, open spaces, and light traffic of Casper, Wyo. "Louise and I go East a couple of times a year to visit our children and grandchildren in Del. and Va., but every trip convinces us how lucky we are to live in Wyo." John Snyder says he is finally going to try semi-retirement. "If anyone gets close to Naples, Fla., this spring, stop by." In a middle state approaching the retired, Norm Thompson writes, "Just sailed my 42-ft. boat from Long Island to Miami 'outside.' Then progressed to Fort Meyers via the Keys. Plan to sail to Bahamas single-handed Apr., May, and June. I have stopped doing open-heart surgery, but continue as dept. chairman at St. Francis Heart Center in Roslyn, Long Island."

47 ASA BURNHILL
Box 7034
Tucson, AZ 85725; 602-741-4715

Former Class President George Faunce bade adieu to Marsh and McLennon Companies Jan. 31 and looked forward to retirement sans train rides. For the record, he counted "about 9,000 round trips to N.Y.C. on the New Haven Railroad over a 40-year period, which is more than 21 times around the world and equal to a round trip to the moon with a little to spare."

Tom Pellett, who recently retired as senior veep for administration and corporate affairs at Pet Inc. (after career stops at Johns-Manville, Lehman Bros., and Red Owl Stores), will remain in the St. Louis area, where he and Anne are building a new house. J.P. Ross, who retired Oct. 1 as director of insurance at the Siemens Corp., is now an insurance consultant and broker—"I enjoy being back in sales again," working out of his and Patty's homes in Summit and Loveladies.

Jim Harrington, after viewing an old film, THE PHILADELPHIANS, asked if anyone ever has proposed its star, Paul Newman, 65, who "certainly seems to be a very decent chap," for honorary membership in the Class (no one has—before). Jim offered this logic: the actor's character in the movie had a DAILY PRINCETONIAN indicating he was in the Class of 1947. "He then went on to Penn Law School and eventually was a success—of course."

Charley Hardiman reported that he and three other '47ers were on hand in Burlington last June for the gala first meeting of the Princeton Alumni of the Republic of Vermont. Phil Pope and Bill Koch were there with Charley in support of the group's founding president, Bill Wright (who also is our able Annual Giving chairman and needs support from all classmates in the next four months). Incidentally, Charley noted that the "Republic" in the title refers to Vermont's status as an independent nation from 1777 to 1791, when it became the 14th state.

48 DAVID K. REEVES
106 Snowden Ln.
Princeton, NJ 08540; 609-924-3340

Just when it seemed that Russ Neuton had disappeared, or at least hadn't been heard from in ages, it turns out he is devoting his considerable talents to Hampden-Sydney College in Va. as a trustee. H-S has 1000 students, all male, a great reputation and a small endowment. With Russ's experience as a Princeton trustee and a most effective participant in the Campaign for Princeton, it would seem that H-S has chosen wisely in having Russ on the scene, and their endowment will surely be healthier.

Don Maggin continues to lecture at such august institutions as Cooper Union and to guide his 45-acre development at Bridgehampton on Long Island. His greatest pride is daughter Alice, who is a super student at Connecticut College as well as editor-in-chief of the college paper and top scorer on the track team.

Paul Sullivan is surviving in the investment business and 40 years with Shearson Lehman but is now at the retire or "taper off" status. Walt Donabue retired many years ago which allows him and Beverly to divide their time between Saunderstown, R.I. and Delray Beach, Fla. They have a grandchild in medical school at Johns Hopkins.

Jane and Buzz Merritt and Schyler (age 4 1/2) would seem to be the perpetual travelers. Recently they visited Kenya and Masai friends as well as Egypt (Lucor and Aswan).

We have a memorial in this issue.

49 ALVIN R. KNAUTH
Limerick Lane Poetryworks®, 5 Birch Ln.
Chappaqua, NY 10514; 914-238-0352

She doesn't say, but we suspect we owe Bebe Ansell thanks for this news sent in Mel's name along with his Class dues: "Tho' eligible for retirement, Mel can't find anything he'd rather do than be an appellate judge—that is, unless his first grandchild, Ariela Kate Nitka, needs him to babysit. She was born Oct. 2, 1990, just hours before his 65th birthday. His youngest son, Gordon, is an asst. editor in L.A.—watch for his credits. Mel is still married—it will be 40 years in June—to Bebe. They travel a lot, and spend their summers at their home in East Hampton."

Harking back to the news item sent by Prof. John Poli (PAW Dec. 5, 1990), John Brodbeck writes: "John mentions Allison Bunkley—do you remember him? He was my preceptor in Latin American history, and the youngest professor at Princeton. Brilliant. Prior to Princeton, he was attached to the U.S. embassy in Argentina in 1946 under Spruille Braden, our ambassador. Perón threw them both out, and Bunkley came to Princeton after two years in Paraguay writing their official history. In 1952 he was so bored he blew his brains out in a game of Russian roulette, in Elm Club as I recall. Does anybody remember him? I do."

Jerry Jordan sends this happy word: "Have been lucky enough to find and marry (on Oct. 27) another lovely lady, Jean Kniest, whom you may recall was my guest at our 40th reunion. I have known Jean for nearly 15 years, and she was a close friend of both my late wife, Barbara, and me. I feel I am a very fortunate man. We had a wonderful month's honeymoon in Africa." And from Will LeBourveau we hear: "Enjoying retirement here in Cincinnati. Doing some part time accounting work when not playing golf or making furniture. Four grandchildren here in town keep Phyllis and me busy as well."

Ken Doak tells us: "Have recently left job of intl. marketing for high temp, high vacuum systems after 17 years. Need advice from Lew Miller on career changing at this stage!"

We have a memorial in this issue.

50 PETE BUCHANAN
151 West St.
Beverly Farms, MA 01915; 508-922-1650

Montreal Mini reminder—Apr. 1 is the deadline for booking the bargain rate rooms at Manoir Le Moyne. Phone 800-361-7191 (from the Northeast) or 514-931-8861.

Catching up with some accumulated news on Class children, Steve Halliday's daughter Stephanie

THE TIGER

The Tiger marks items appearing in the Class Notes that, in the Editor's opinion, are of more than usual interest. Without passing judgment, it seeks to call the attention of all our readers to particularly noteworthy pieces of alumni news.

married Leigh Giroux. She works in financial management with Avon while Leigh is a lawyer with Brown & Wood in N.Y. Another marriage was Doug Raymond's Elizabeth (Duke '87) to Joseph Dougherty, who is an alumnus of Georgetown and Temple Law School. The Class was well represented by Bob Wagner, Bob Ryan, Dick McClelland, Tex Lamason, and Charles Johnson. Russ Spencer's namesake, Class of 1983, is a former CBS anchor in Scranton, Penn. He has moved to Guatemala, where he teaches math and science at the American School. Godfrey Savage's Heidi graduated from the Naval Academy, where she was captain of the swimming team and a three-time All-American. Jack Rathman's son John, a Middlebury grad, has completed the academic side of his Ph.D. at Stanford and is involved with set and light designs for productions in the Bay area. After Barnard, Carol has moved to Italy where she's working in Milan. Sister Lisa, who went to Tufts, is a professional engineer in Wilmington, Del., and also the mother of Jack's first grandchild. Apologies are due to Phil Zabriskie, as the earlier published list of undergrad children omitted Philip Gray Zabriskie '94. So we still do have freshman representation as well as a two-undergrad parent, Alexandra Zabriskie being in 1993. Peter Dodd, another current parent, sent Christmas greetings from Islamabad, Pakistan.

Charlie Brumback has been a name often in the news, both before and after he became C.E.O. of the Tribune Co. of Chicago in mid-1990. He successfully dealt with a strike by three unions of the Chicago TRIBUNE in 1985, several years after arriving from Florida. More recently the strike at the DAILY News in N.Y. has been on center stage. Charlie has won wide respect for his tough approach, oriented toward strengthening the bottom line.

We have a memorial in this issue.

51

RICHARD K. PAYTNER
49 Wilson Rd.
Princeton, NJ 08540; 609-921-6720

"Life Begins at the 40th" '51's 40th—June 6-9

Classmates are getting the word. We are shooting for 250—the record for a 40th. The count is closing in on 200. The latest sign-ins are: Larry Becker, Buck, Diwall, Frederick, Jay Harris, Bruce Kennedy, Mettler, Lew Mudge, Pentz, Al Rushton, Zahn.

John Campbell has retired to Fla.—Sanibel Island, whereon are Joan and Wally Kain. Dick Loveland, though he retired after 25 years as headmaster of Crystal Springs and Upland Schools in Hillsborough, Calif., and traveled for a year, is now interim head of Colorado Academy in Denver. After some four years as a widower, Pinky Cobill married Sandra "Sam" Moore of Medford, N.J., last Aug. Bill Babson has retired from the Hartford (Conn.) Natl. Bank, still consults for the bank and works on two volunteer programs for the state.

Paul Schleyer is internationally recognized as a leader in physical organic chemistry and last fall he received an award from the American Chemical Society as the most cited physical scientist working outside the U.S. He is co-director of the Organic Inst. of the Univ. of Erlangen-Nurnberg, Germany.

Ken Dake has retired from Union Oil in Ill. and moved to Virginia. He and Beverly will spend winters on St. Thomas, summers in Wisc. Bob Erdody, recently retired from duPont, is "looking forward to the greatest 40th ever." Gina and Sandy Lyman have retired to the Nevada side of Lake Tahoe. He had been budget director of the Office of Nuclear Energy, U.S. Dept. of Energy.

Jack Davis reports that two of his more popular books, THE GUGGENHEIMS and MAPA KINGFISH, have been optioned for the movies.

52

Don Omsundorff
4630 30th St., N.W.
Washington, DC 20008

Philadelphia Beckons Mini-Reunion April 25-28

Class President Bill Murdoch celebrated his 60th at a surprise party at the Nassau Club on Jan. 19. The occasion, arranged in style by Mary, included several classmates, among them Al Ellis. Thereby hangs a tale.

After "Buzzer" Hall, our honorary classmate, retired from teaching, a written tribute to him was presented with the signatures of all class presidents from 1913 to 1952. The Certificate of Appreciation and Affection thanked the Buzzer for 39 years of loyal friendship; the lesson of Garibaldi; his rebellious spirit; for insisting that "the rock bottom thing about life is to keep on going when we don't want to keep going, and the rock bottom thing about life is to be willing to give it up when it is necessary." The only trouble was that the signature line for the Class of 1952 was empty, since Al Ellis had left the campus before the certificate was drawn up, and could not be found.

Al was finally presented with the original document at Murdoch's party. With his signature, the certificate is complete and will be displayed at the Princeton Club of N.Y.

Another very memorable thing about the party was the unveiling, if that is the word, of the earliest known portrait of our class president, taken at the age of four months, displaying the penchant for clean living and strength of character that would be so dominant later in life. In the interest of history, the photo of Bill is reprinted here.

Joe Handelman still runs at least 40 miles per week, and enters marathons. The Marine Corps marathon here in D.C. last Nov. was his 30th marathon. Since he is now along the youngest in the over-60 age bracket, Joe is able once again to finish consistently in the top three. He continues to race a few times every month.

53

PENCE J. LOWENMAN
Box 18
Blawenburg, NJ 08504

In Nov., Vic Sidel was honored with the Haven Emerson award of the Public Health Assn. of N.Y.C. Vic still labors as distinguished univ. prof. of social medicine at Montefiore/Einstein College of Medicine in the Bronx.

From time to time we receive notes of appreciation from those undergraduates who are the beneficiaries of our Class scholarships. In the most recent instance it seems more than appropriate to present this outstanding letter from David Ben-Zvi '94:

"I am greatly honored to be a recipient of the Class of '53 Scholarship. I never dreamed of attending a school such as Princeton and being able to study with some of the greatest minds alive. This grant has enabled me to partake in what I expect to be an immensely rewarding experience. Let me tell you something about myself. I was born in Palo Alto to Israeli parents on sabbatical at Stanford. We soon returned to Israel where I remained until the age of six. I spent my early grades in Stony Brook, L.I., N.Y., learning English and violin. I developed a keen interest in mathematics and began studying on my own, especially in the fields of fractals and chaos. I found the Israeli school system very limited and restrictive and was thus extremely surprised and overjoyed at the freedom and opportunities offered here. I became a Westinghouse Science Talent Search Finalist, participated on an academic quiz bowl team, and played violin in orchestra and chamber music groups.

I was suddenly engulfed in the Great College Hunt, and the race to the Ivy. Princeton seemed to me the ideal in many respects, especially with its superlative math dept. Financial considerations, however, seemed to rule out Princeton. My family just did not have the resources to send me here. I would not have had access to the broad education of Princeton had it not been for this financial assistance. I would never have been able to work as I do now for someone like Professor William Thurston, world-renowned expert in topology. There is really not much more I could have wished for. Thank you very much for making all this possible. Sincerely, David D. Ben-Zvi."

54

DICK STEVENS
1 Valley Sq., Ste. 101
Blue Bell, PA 19422

Thinking of a hip replacement? Go directly to HUP (Hospital of the Univ. of Penn.) and ask for Marv Steinberg, who not only does them, but also wrote a 1200-page book, THE HIP AND ITS DISORDERS, just published by Saunders. Be sure to get the family rate. An accomplished orthopedic surgeon, Marv is a prof. and vice chairman of the dept. His four children are all out of the nest, married and producing grandchildren at a rapid rate... five to date. His wife, Delores, is working on a Ph.D. in folk life and folklore, to give the family another sheepskin to add to their collection.

Ham Brown and Amanda run their own travel agency in Brownwood, Tex., and they are all willing to Fed.Ex. tickets to any classmate anywhere in the U.S.A. Their son Paul is a TV news producer at WROC in Rochester, N.Y. Gordy Grossman's son Earl married Suzanne Tassie recently in the Princeton Chapel (reception at Prospect House). Gordy insisted that his chapel card be punched for credit... imagine. Connie Stout took an early retirement from the Princeton Plasma Physics Lab and turned to, what else... consulting. He is getting heavily involved in site planning and permitting for underground storage tanks. If you need to raise some hard money, talk to Anna and Jim Connors, who ran the United Way campaign for their community and raised a healthy $5.3 million. Also healthy are two new granddaughters making a 1990 appearance. Bob Golembiewski was named a "management laureate," one of 25 distinguished researchers and theorists. Bob is a heavy hitter in mathematics, organization, and other esoteric management disciplines. From his base at the Univ. of Georgia, Big "G" moves around a great deal, has a great time, has published numerous books, and has hunting and fishing licenses in six states in the same year. Now that's living!!!

We need to hear about '54 family members who are the thunder and lightning of Desert Storm... keep those faxes coming...

We have a memorial in this issue.

55

Mike Rossmore
40 E. 88th St.
New York, NY 10128; 212-722-7447

Gene Wong is on leave from Berkeley, serving as associate director of the White House Science Office.

When the 1990 Nobel Prize for Medicine was awarded to kidney transplant surgeon Dr. Joseph E. Murray of Harvard Medical School, it was noted that a Princeton surgeon co-authored one of the seminal

Preserving Mayan Culture

THE SENIOR THESIS of Robert M. Laughlin '56 turned out to be prophetic. Laughlin, who majored in English, wrote on W. H. Hudson's Green Mansions, a novel about a young man who seeks refuge in the jungles of Venezuela and winds up living among the Runi Indians.

As an anthropologist, Laughlin has spent most of his adult life on the fringes of the jungle of southern Mexico, studying and writing about the Mayan Indians. For years he has lived during the winter and summer in San Cristóbal de las Casas and during the spring and fall in Washington, D. C., working year-round for the Smithsonian Institution.

The son of a steel executive with a love for natural history, Laughlin grew up wanting to be a naturalist. Before entering Princeton, he had studied birds in Panama for a summer, published an article on the nesting of the double-toothed kite, birded in Venezuela, and worked for a summer with ornithologist Alexander Skutch in Costa Rica. He gave up the idea of becoming a naturalist when he realized that to get a job in a museum he would have to "collect" birds (i.e., shoot them). So, following graduation from Princeton, he enrolled at Harvard to pursue a degree in anthropology.

His first summer as a graduate student, he joined the Harvard Chiapas Project. Based in San Cristóbal in the Mexican state of Chiapas, the project documented cultural change in a Mayan community. He worked in Zinacantán, a village outside of San Cristóbal that has been "the center of my interests ever since," Laughlin says.

Laughlin's main interest was ethnography, and as a newly minted Ph.D., he collected myths and folk tales. This led him to focus on Tzotzil, one of thirty Mayan languages and the predominant tongue of the region around San Cristóbal. As he learned more about the Tzotzil, he added words to a provisional dictionary that had been compiled by another anthropologist and existed only in typescript. Over the next fourteen years, the typescript grew into The Great Tzotzil Dictionary of San Lorenzo Zinacantán, which was published in 1975 by the Smithsonian to scholarly acclaim.

Robert M. Laughlin '56

PHOTO BY ANN WALDRON

After completing the dictionary, Laughlin returned to folk tales and dreams, writing several books, including The People of the Bat: Mayan Tales and Dreams from Zinacantán.

By the early 1980s, Mayas were reawakening to their own culture and history but were frustrated in their efforts to learn more about these subjects, because most of the books about them were written in foreign languages. So they turned to Laughlin with an idea for a writing project in their native language, which few of them knew how to read and write. Laughlin taught some of them very quickly, and the Indians began to write down stories in Tzotzil.

Laughlin called the project a writers cooperative, and he named it Sna Jtz'ibajom, House of the Writer. The seven men and four women who comprise the cooperative gather daily to write down history, folklore, and customs in Tzotzil. The co-op translated from Spanish into Tzotzil Bernal Diaz del Castillo's sixteenth-century chronicle of the conquest of Chiapas, as well as the account of one of the first Spanish friars to come to Zinacantán.

Laughlin sees the project as tremendously valuable to Mayas and to the world. "So much of their culture survived the Conquest, and when they write it down in their own language, it shows the outside world that Maya culture is still alive," he said. "It demonstrates the value of that culture to non-Indian Mexicans. And it gives the Mayas tremendous self-respect."

The cooperative has generated other projects, including a literacy program that has taught more than seven hundred Mayas to read and write Tzotzil; a puppet theater, which presents didactic shows on family planning and alcoholism; and a live theater group that dramatizes Mayan folk tales in Spanish.

He worries about the future of the cooperative and its many projects. "Foundations have helped with grants," he said, "but foundations want projects to become self-supporting. A weavers' cooperative might become self-supporting, but how can a writers' cooperative support itself?"

—Ann Waldron

Mayan children reading in Tzotzil

PHOTO COURTESY OF ROBERT M. LAUGHLIN

research papers cited as the basis for the Nobel selection. Our Roger Moseley, senior attending surgeon at the Medical Center of Princeton, worked with Dr. Murray for four years investigating the basis for the body's immunological mechanisms—research that resulted in a paper entitled "Analysis of Mechanism of Immunosuppressive Drugs in Renal Homotransplantation." The success of these pioneering studies ultimately led to the widespread use of organ transplantation in humans.

Jack Smith spotted the news on Roger and added a personal note: "As for me, I am about to commence my tenth year of retirement, disproving my mother-in-law's oft-stated contention "that bum will never hold a steady job!" I do not miss for one minute the daily commute to N.Y., the travel and pressure and tension of the corporate world. Jane still works and we get to spend sufficient time with our grandkids (ages 5 and 8) to spoil them rotten."

John Lankester writes, "Since my retirement at the end of 1989 I have been sailing down the chain of Caribbean islands in my yacht. I am taking enough time at each to discover something of the history, the culture, and the economy. As I write this I am in Domenica headed next for Martinique. My sailing companion, Sandra, is an Aussie so we have our sights set on visiting that continent in 1991 (we'll go by plane).

With sadness we record the passing of three classmates. Tony Putnam died of AIDS Dec. 4. Brad Orbeson died of cancer Dec. 5, 1990. Charles Zanes was felled by a heart attack Sept. 19.

56

DAVID M. JORDAN
410 Rodman Ave.
Jenkintown, PA 19046

Tappen Soper lives in Switzerland, but he spent Christmas 1990 back in the U.S.A.—on Maui, in Hawaii, to be precise. In the photo Tappen is flanked by his daughter Laura and her fiancé, Scott Budd, who plan to marry the week before our 35th reunion in June. They "did their gift shopping at the U-Store," Tappen says.

Another Class author has checked in. Dick Johnson has just finished a textbook, ASSESSMENT IN COUNSELING: A GUIDE TO THE USE OF PSYCHOLOGICAL ASSESSMENT PROCEDURES, which will be published by the American Assn. of Counseling and Development. Dick is still associate director of the univ. counseling service and adjunct prof. of counseling psychology and counselor education at the Univ. of Wisconsin-Madison.

Temp Lowry was recalled to active duty in the U.S. Army in late Aug. and, at last word, was practicing in the emergency dept. at Womack Army Hospital at Fort Bragg, N.C., preparing for the potential receipt of casualties from the war with Iraq.

Bob Royes reports that his daughter Katherine was married on Sept. 8, 1990, to Robert Boyd, son of Allen R. Boyd '55. Both bride and groom work for J.P. Morgan in London. Doris and Skip Banyard attended the nuptials, and Skip reports the arrival of two grandchildren of his own, potential Tigers in the Class of 2011, Claire and Leslie.

Preparations move ahead for our 35th reunion, June 6-9, in Holder Court. Among the musical features for our enjoyment will be the famous Louisiana Repertory Jazz Band, which did so much to help our last major reunion become the focus of the whole campus. Don't miss it!

57

JACK SCHERDEL
Box 6177, Yorkville Station
New York, NY 10128; 212-427-3575 (H)

Charlie Hauser: "Married Teresa Kellen May 13, 1989. Our first houseguest was Fred Reynolds, who came out for our club's guest golf tournament; we didn't win a thing, but we sure had a good time." Gresh Ivey: "In 11th year of retirement from U.S.N., and 10th year of teaching high-school mathematics; enjoying both." Richard T. Sparks: "Became a grandfather on Dec. 17, 1989. Daughter Lea Bennett presented us with Mary MacAllister Bennett—a petite 9 lbs., 1 oz." Edward L. (Reds) McMillan Jr.: "Second grandson born June 23, 1988, same day as my father, Edward L. McMillan Sr. '26, named Edward McMillan Gordon, and has red hair."

Steve Gregory: "The Gregory gypsy wagon moves on—from New Delhi to Chappaqua last Apr., and in 1990 to Rio de Janeiro, where I began working in Nov., still with Sterling Intl. Our son Alex graduated from Williams in June, and Helen is a sophomore at Princeton." Jim Sandler: "Appointed by Conn. governor as co-chairman of Commission on Quality and Integrated Education."

Ed Shover: "Have joined the ranks of 'consulting' geologists as a result of 'downsizing' at Texas Easter Co. in 1987. Have had a couple of interesting jobs, one of which let me live for several months in Calgary." Alec Merriam: "I'm enjoying semi-retirement, having left Crowley Maritime in 1988. I'm serving on one business board and several non-profits and trying to understand the stock market."

Joyce and Bob Torrey (completing his 25th year at Punahou School, Honolulu) entertained Ann and Cullom Davis, who had presented a Lincoln paper in Taiwan.

We have a memorial in this issue.

58

RALPH L. DeGROFF
7 Grade Sq.
New York, NY 10028

Class Dinner: On Tues., Apr. 16 we will have a Class of 1958 dinner. We are quite fortunate to have our classmate Asa Baber as our guest speaker. Ace has been and is a freelance writer and a contributing editor to PLAYBOY. Ace will talk on men and their roles in society, particularly as affected by the feminist movement. Ace's fellowships and awards are too numerous to enumerate but he writes a monthly column for PLAYBOY entitled "Men" and has novels, plays, and short stories among his publishing successes. He has been interviewed on the "Oprah Winfrey Show," the CBS-TV "Morning News" and "Crossfire." Our dinner will take place at the Princeton Club of N.Y., 15 West 43rd St., and will commence at 6 P.M. For those traveling to N.Y., call Howie Sussman at 212-363-1500 to make reservations. The dinner will cost $34.50. Wives and guests are invited.

Robert Phillips is still living in Caracas, Venezuela, but spends a week a month in the Dominican Republic, where he is responsible for Intl. Paper's investments.

Mal Roberts is currently deputy chief of staff for Alaskan Gov. and former Secretary of Interior Wally Hickel. Both John Sawbill and Joe Nye have addressed in recent months Commonwealth North, an Alaskan public policy forum.

Walt Winget's daughter Marie plays the violin and viola in the Princeton Orchestra. Walt, admittedly somewhat biased, highly recommends attending a performance, as he believes them quite good. Walt also commented that Ed Seaman hasn't aged a bit since graduation. Ed, chief justice of the Superior Court for his District in N.J., has a position of substantial responsibility and distinction.

59

JAY M. SMOEL
11321 Rolling House Rd.
Rockville, MD 20852; 301-984-7877

George Thouron, combining business with pleasure, has transferred from Merrill Lynch's Wilmington, Del. office to its Brunswick, Ga. office, bringing him about 700 miles closer to the Sea Island home which he has owned for a number of years. Charlie Melville, eyeing an empty nest, traded his Cincinnati house for a condo. Charlie reports having dinner with Dick Konz and family in Portland, Oreg., where Dick has gone into a new business. Sam Hinkle, with the commercial lending office of First Union National Bank in Palm Beach, Fla., calls his work these days "challenging." Sam visited with Jim Barton in Highlands, N.C., last Aug., observing that Jim is well and enjoying the mountain air.

Susie and Fred Pownall continue to play host to visiting classmates, entertaining Peg and Bill Woodvorton on a weekend tour of the Napa Valley. Fred claims that the weekend's food and wine intake was properly balanced by "arduous" bike riding. Also enjoying Calif. life is "Woody" Woodhouse, who traded the dust of Ariz. for the fog of San Francisco last year. His explorations along the Sonoma coast include wineries and "endless weekend festivals to honor various vegetables." On a note of slightly feigned melancholy, Woody reports that the Princeton Inn in the town of Princeton-by-the-Sea is going out of business, but says there is no truth to the rumor that it will become a women's dormitory.

This year's recipients of the Class of 1959 Memorial Scholarships are Dodd Harris's daughter, Geraldine Harris '93; Bill Macaleer's daughter, Elizabeth Macaleer '91; and our late classmate Bob Shapiro's daughter, Kirsten Hildebrand '92.

"Princeton Today" programs have been scheduled for Apr. 4-6 and May 2-4, 1991. These programs provide a stimulating exposure to the Princeton ton of today, and an excellent way to become reacquainted with the academic and extracurricular life of the University, as well as the physical beauty of the campus. Arrangements to attend can be made through the Alumni Council by calling 609-258-5836.

60

MASON LOWANCE
100 Lincoln Ave.
Amherst, MA 01002

Have you ever seen a more pleasant looking trio? Robert Fisher, Gordon Batcheller, and Mike Conway may be smiling now, but in 1958 and 1959, they were starting lineman who gave Yale something to worry about. All three were also starting members of that undefeated freshman team in 1956, captained by Dan Sachs. I have a letter from Vince Damian that tells of a Tiger Inn reunion these three attended, and John Chang reports of a separate football team reunion organized by Robin Prince and Bill McMillan that involved some rafting in Colorado. Bob Fisher is a prof. of surgery at the Temple Univ. School of Medicine in Philadelphia; Gordon Batcheller is with the U.S. Marine Corps, stationed in Alexandria, and Mike Conway owns his own business in Los Angeles, but he spends many winters in Florida. In Jan., your scribe was a visiting lecturer at CalTech, hosted by Dan Keules, and came back by way of Atlanta, visiting John Wallace, Ivan Allen, and Tread Davis, all of whom are getting ready for the 1996 Olympics, which should produce some revenues for the impoverished Sunbelt city! Eric Henderson and Preston Haskell are companions for a Jan. cruise down the Intercoastal Waterway, a visit to the sun which I eagerly await as Amherst temperatures reach ten degrees. Last week, in Chicago, Cam Avery and I had coffee while the wind-chill outside was 22 below zero! "Cooler by the lake" has a special meaning in Chicago in Jan. and Feb.

61

GEORGE BRAKELEY III
98 Winfield Ln.
New Canaan, CT 06840

1961 THIRTIETH 1991

HEARD recently from an informed observer of the independent school world: "Jim Wickenden is doing every important headmaster search in the country these days," MENTIONED, in a recent SPORTS ILLUSTRATED article on Pete Carril and the basketball team, Spence Reynolds, in his capacity as associate dean of admission, QUOTED, front page of the Oct. 7 WALL STREET JOURNAL, George Brakeley, on the recession's impact on philanthropy, RECORDED, by American Airlines for its in-air program, a piece on "Modern Healthcare" by hospital architect Jim Diaz, and LISTENED TO by frequent flyer Bob Ochsner somewhere over the Atlantic ("Can't escape '61, even at 37,000 feet," says Ox), CAUGHT, by Tom Donnelly, "the largest fish of the day," on Lake Erie last summer, on a weekend with Congressman Dennis Eckert "to prove that Lake Erie is back," SOUNDED, the early warning siren, by 30th reunion treasurer Jay Parsons, regarding signing up now so that the committee can plan things out more efficiently; and, enfin, ORDERED, by the secretary, that you comply with Jay's orders forthwith.

Speaking of legislators, State Senator (D-New Berlin) Lynn Adelson of Wisconsin chairs the Senate Judiciary and Consumer Affairs Committee and, in that capacity, recently spotted a conflict-of-interest situation that resulted in one of those "I didn't do anything but I'm gonna resign" decisions by a dean at the Univ. of Wisconsin, all from an article sent in by Len Berton. In Chicago, Rob Walker is chairman of Otis Associates, a 60-person architectural firm. John Bright reports "I won seven age group trophies this year in 5-K and 10-K races." (Whew.)

62 ERIC W. JOHNSON
2221 Craig Co.
Vienna, VA 22182; 703-280-9080

NEW GRANDFATHER: 1990 was an eventful year for Tad Crauford. In June he and his wife, Judy, moved from Westport, Conn., to a home overlooking the C & O Canal in Bethesda, Md.; daughter Debi gave birth to their first grandchild; Bekki and Dan both were married; and Tara graduated from Chatham.

NEW MUSEUM: The July 21, 1990 N.Y. TIMES carried an article about a major development in the N.Y.C. art world, the announcement of a permanent home for the Museum of American Folk Art, whose president is Ralph Esmerian, who is gaining international recognition for his work. The museum, founded in 1961, will continue to operate from its 6,500-square-foot gallery at Columbus Ave. and 66th St., while six adjoining brownstones it owns on 53rd St. are razed to make way for a new 28-story office tower, designed by David Childs of Skidmore, Owings & Merrill. The museum, which will occupy the first four floors when the building opens in 1993, will finally have found a permanent home.

CRY WALLS: The annual P.U. Alumni of Germany party was held last summer in Ruthenburg ob der Tauber. Jeff Schevitz and son Jan fought along the city wall with wooden swords and shields early one morning. "A kid gives a father the excuse to do things he wants to do but would otherwise be embarrassed to do!" Jeff was also instrumental in obtaining a section of the Berlin Wall and having it made into a plaque which Hodding Carter delivered to President Shapiro. In a letter thanking Jeff, Pres. Shapiro says in part, "It seems very fitting for Princeton to have a memento of an event whose ramifications are bound to affect higher education and its institutions in such profound ways."

On: Michael Bogb-Henriksen reports he is alive and well and still working with Brown & Root Vickers, "cluttering the North Sea with oil rigs."

63 SHELDON S. EDWARDS
Elgin Academy, 350 Park St.
Elgin, IL 60120; FAX 708-695-5017

What are the odds that in the same week two classmates would be appointed headmaster at two of the most prestigious day schools in the country? What are the odds that both classmates would have come from outside the independent school community? Well, it happened. In mid January, St. John's School in Houston announced that longtime parent and board member Phil Cannon would serve as interim head for next school year. And Trinity School in N.Y.C. announced that long-time college dean Hank Moses would be its next headmaster. Phil, an oil executive with board experience at St. John's and his alma maters Hill School and Princeton, will take over running things for a year while the school searches to permanently replace its current head. Hank, who became Harvard's dean of freshman in 1977, was chosen after a lengthy search. He is author of a new book, INSIDE COLLEGE: NEW FREEDOMS AND NEW RESPONSIBILITIES, published by the College Board. He, Missy and their two small children will move to Manhattan in July. Among the parents at Hank's new school will be classmates David Feinberg and Joel Rosenman. Head searches at both schools were run by Jim Wickenden '61.

And another pair of classmates is singled out in "A Special Partnership," the University's beautiful new full-color publication on special gifts. Singled out among only a handful of visionary alumni who symbolize the many who have made named gifts to Princeton are Sheldon Zabel and Bruce Neuman. Sheldon's brother Bill '58 created with him, in honor of their parents, a scholarship favoring students from their native South Dakota. And Bruce's initial gift of a scholarship named ten years ago for himself and the Class of 1963 has now reached an impressive six-figure total.

Rich Hernquist is still V.P. of Comerica Bank in Detroit, living in Grosse Pointe Park. His daughter Erika is a Princeton senior. Stan Fairchild is manager of pipeline operations for Sohio Pipeline in Cleveland and lives in Rocky River. Eric Olsen is director of surgical services at the Cleveland Clinical Foundation Dept. of Artificial Organs and lives in Shaker Heights. And Don McLaughlin is principal research scientist at American Institutes for Research.

64 JOTHAM JOHNSON
Box 12
Blawenburgh, NJ 08504

With little more than a month to go before our mini-Reunion in New Orleans Apr. 11-14, we have word that all the following are on board: Intermones, Jo Johnsons, Steve Johnsons, Kusers, Murphys, Pearsons, Prices, Rosses, Singmasters, Walkers, and Williamsons. Word has it that a number of others are mulling it over, including the Andreus, Josephs, Mayos, McPheeters, Newens, Osborns, Randolphs, Springs, Sierretts, Wedemeyers, Wetberlts, and the Jim Wims. To sign up at the last minute, give Rick Price a call at 504-523-3534.

Nice chat the other day with Bill Dowban in Houston. Bill is prof. of biochemistry at the Univ. of Texas Medical School in Houston and remains active in the Houston Schools Committee. His second son, Michael, is a freshman at Princeton. Speaking of Schools Committees, we've learned also that Bill Fleming is the new chairman of the Dallas Schools Committee.

From Todd Fausnaught '94, our Class of 1964 Scholar this year, comes a letter of thanks to the Class of 1964. "I want to thank you for the opportunity you have given me . . . I'm from Williamsport, Penn.; am a pre-med; am playing baseball; and am active in Athletics in Action . . . I have learned more in one semester than I ever imagined and have already developed some great friendships that will surely last a lifetime!"

Dave Franz, another Williamsporter of note, writes that son Alan is a mechanical engineering student at R.I.T. and that daughter Kathy, though accepted last year by Princeton, is in France this year on a Rotary Youth Exchange Fellowship and will enter Wellesley in the fall.

And from Bob Ladig in Philadelphia, "Life has become more interesting for Gin and me, balancing a love for Princeton with an appreciation for Yale . . . our son Peter is a sophomore at Yale and is enjoying the academic life there while playing baseball."

Reunions are June 7-9. Circle the date and plan to attend!

65 J. MICHAEL PAREN
Winthrop, Stimson, Putnam & Roberts
1 Battery Park Plaza, New York, NY 10004

Phil Friedman's REASONABLE DOUBT just went into its 15th consecutive week on the paperback bestseller list. When he is not doing talk shows around the country, Phil is hard at work researching his next opus. Details to follow. For anyone whose copy is worn out through repeated play or who wants additional ones for family or friends, Joel Rudell has a number of extra copies of the great "Sounds of '65" tape he produced for our 25th. Requests will be honored in the order of receipt. $6 a pop through your Class secretary.

It would be difficult not to know about Bill Bradley's recent brush with voter backlash. On a more positive note, everyone should note that Bill was honored in Nov. by receiving the Citizen Exchange Council's George F. Kennan award for working to increase cooperation and communication between our country and the U.S.S.R.

Column space constraints at the PAW resulted in the omission from a recent column of the report of Bob Keyes's marriage to Susan Smith Haley in Greenwich recently, both parties being veterans of the investment banking game.

A cryptic Class dues news flap from Doug Tufts—"expecting baby girl" has been turned into more concrete information from Doug's wife Chris, the mother of one Halle Tufts, born Oct. 2, 1990.

Now that you have your calendar for 1991, be sure to mark down Apr. 2 for the N.Y.C. dinner with the Class of '66, which has much to learn from us, so we should be there in force.

66 JEFFREY N. MCCOLLUM, A.T.&T. Products
5 Wood Hollow Rd., Rm. 1J19
Parsippany, NJ 07054

According to Tiny Morgan, chief planner and strategist for our upcoming 25th reunion, registrations for our "one and only" stand at 227 as of late Jan. With the big event less than 90 days away, make your plans now. The current cast of characters for the event follows: Adams, Allison, Armstrong, Ayling, Baraff, Michael Barrett, William Barrett, Barrous, Baribolomau, Beaty, Beck, Bent, Beibune, Beverly, Black, Bliss, Bloomfield, Blaser, Boserup, Bowman, Bradstreet, Breuel, Bunn, Burnett, Butler, Carmichael, Cary, Chester, Chikwendu, Childress, Cbing, Coben, Cook, Corcoran, Corulib, Cromwell, Cross, D'Avella, Davidson, Dawson, Delist, Duback, Duncan, Dunham, Eakin, Eastwick, Edie, Eduards, Elliott, Eron, Evans, Everhart, Feldbaum, Firestone, Fischer, Fisher, Fitzpatrick, Folts, French, Friday, Friedman, Fritz, Furie, Gates, Gogolak, Goldenson, Goldie, Goldstein, Goltz, Goodrich, Goroski, Greulich, Groth, Haight, Hale, Hamilton, Hansen, Hansmann, Harrison, Hart, Harwood, Heinze, Hendler, Hermann, Hershey, Hirsch, Hodge, Hoerster, Holman, Horn, Hutton, Ingram, Jackson, Jake, Janis, Jennings, Robert Johnson, William Johnson, Richard Jones, Joyce, Judd, Kaffenberger, Kates, Kelley, Kerstetter, Kipatruck, King, Kopf, Koplovitz, Kretzmarn, Krostin, Kulczycki, Lamb, Langhammer, Largay, Larkin, Henry Larsen, William Larsen, Lee, Longstreth, Lumpkin, Lynn, MacDonald, MacGregor, Magenheimer, Mablstadt, Malszeuski, Marshall, Martin, Mayo, Mays, McAfee, McCabe, McCleary, McCollum, McConnell, McDonough, McEwan, McGinley, Merritt, Mettler, Metzger, Milder, Mill, Jeffrey Miller, William Miller, Mitchell, Frank Morgan, Tiny Morgan, Mount, Moya, Nagorniak, Nabas, Newman, Nicholson, Norris, Oboz, Okstein, Park, Parmenier, Partridge, Peischl, Plobn, Price, Quijano, Ragan, Rauson, Reed, Louis Reich, Steven Reich, Reinis, Rice, Riemer, Rosenberg, Russell, Schatz, Scherck, Scriber, Larry Scott, Tom Scott, Scully, Seymour, Sbafer, Shaver, Simpson, Sisley, Skinner, Slaybaugh, Slidell, Smedley, Lamar Smith, Tim Smith, Sonnenberg, Steingold, Stella, Steube, Steward, Sitzer, Tabler, Taylor, Thacher, Theobold, Thomas, Timble, Tooke, Trees, Tureen, Vanda, Vogel, Von Koborn, Walworth, Warwick, Wayburn, Weiksner, Werblin, Wertheimer, Whitman, Wickenden, Willauer, Williams, Woelk, Wolfe, Wright, Wylie, Young, Zee, and Zimmerman.

67 PETER J. TURCH
6503 Masefield St.
Worthington, OH 43085

The accompanying photo just received was originally published in Sept./Oct. 1990 issue of the ORTHODOX CHURCH (Syosset, N.Y.). It shows the Very Rev. Arbur Liolin greeting President Ramiz Alia of Albania. Arthur is chancellor of the 40,000-member Albanian Orthodox Archdiocese of America, and the article reports that he has received over a thousand calls from Albania since his visit there in 1989, after phone links were re-opened last Mar.

Bob Griss writes that he "is developing a disability perspective on health insurance reform as a consultant in Washington, D.C., through the World Inst. on Disability." Bob lives there with his wife, Jane Whitaker, who is a clinical social worker, and their daughter, Sara (9), "a budding actress." Also in D.C., attending a seminar on aviation litigation last Oct., was Dick Sutton, who reports that he was "in the notorious Vista Hotel, where I saw Des Barry who was publicly paged by a Ms. Moore. (This was the hotel where Mayor Marion Barry was filmed with [a] Ms. Moore.)." The previous month, Dick saw Todd Evans, Bob Grant, and Dave Pierce at the 20th reunion of the Stanford Law Class of 1970.

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO. Auto critic Ralph Nader ("Unsafe at Any Speed") gets apology from GM. Moscow reports space probe has crashed on Venus, first contact with another planet; no comment from Nader. James Wilson gets two-year suspended sentence for burning draft card. Top song is "The Ballad of the Green Berets" by S/Sgt Barry Sadler.

68 JOE KLIMEK
Hartford Hospital, 80 Seymour St.
Hartford, CT 06115; FAX 203-524-7057

Some of us are still expanding our families. Julian McPhillips and Leslie welcomed a new baby son, David, via private adoption. David is being introduced in the photo by sisters Grace (10) and Rachel (13). Lee Simpson and Sheila report that second son, Thomas, is being well treated by first son, Michael. Lee still practices law in Dallas.

Steve Buck and Germaine welcomed their fourth child, Daniel, last year. Steve still practices otolaryngologic surgery in Buffalo.

Ernie Higginbotham reports being blessed with a second son, Ethan James, while he continues to practice antitrust and business litigation with Strasburger and Price in Dallas.

69 PAUL GEORGE SITTENFELD
1854 Keys Crescent
Cincinnati, OH 45206

Steve Ramsey and Ann Jones are pictured at their recent nuptials. The happy occasion drew old Quadrangle pals: John Balkcom and, from '68, Harold Pote and Wayne Glass, all with spouses. As Wayne reports, Steve has "moved to a new job as a 'good ole country lawyer'" at G.E. in Fairfield, Conn.

Last Oct. 20, in Stamford, Conn., the Friends of the Stamford Symphony honored Roger Nierenberg, in his tenth year as their musical director. Bravo, maestro!

Tom Cooper reports that his family and Jack Meyerson's gang enjoyed a "wonderful Aug. vacation through the Canadian Rockies, arranged by Jack, but enjoyed by all!"

Another mini-reunion was enjoyed by Diana and Ridge Trimble, who report dinner with Debby and Steven Weed in San Francisco. "We philosophized."

The Atlanta firm of Neely & Player has opened a Washington office and Skip Myers has joined the firm in an Of-Counsel capacity. He will continue his legal practice, which concentrates on insurance, taxation, antitrust, and general corporate law.

Joel Babb's exhibit, "Perspectives," will continue through Mar. 17 at the Art Complex Museum in Duxbury, Mass. Terrific stuff.

70 JAN KUBIK
113 Laurel Rd.
Princeton, NJ 08540

In our Class reunion book, Dr. Norb Woods reported that he was working on "climbing all 46 high peaks in the Adirondacks." With a resounding chorus of "Climb Every Mountain," we can now report that he completed this peak experience; he and Susan then vacated to Ireland, doubtless in search of other lofty goals.

Another classmate who will be called upon to dispense wisdom from on high is George Bustin, who returns stateside after 11 years of law practice in Brussels to rejoin his firm's N.Y. office in international practice. But before he settles into jurisprudence, he will lead a policy task force at the Woodrow Wilson School on the theme of Strategic Options for post-1992 Europe, covering issues of German reunification, steps toward monetary union, trade and industrial objectives, etc.

From Peter Brown comes the admission that "I haven't reported the bare bones of my life since our daughter Julia was born seven years ago. Since then: Our son Robin was born on Mar. 3, 1987; and Susan has generalized her private practice in psychology to screening candidates for N.Y.C.'s finest and to treating the fears and discontents in the lives of those who take to the stage. And in the fall of last year, I was given a platform of my own as editor of THE SCIENCES, a bi-monthly magazine published by the N.Y. Academy of Science.

SHORT TIDBITS: Jamie Robertson became V.P.-exploration technology of the intl. division of Atlantic Richfield. David Murchison was appointed by a federal bankruptcy judge to serve as C.E.O. of Braniff Airlines as it reorganized under Chap. 11! Bob Goeltz has retired after ten years as head coach of the Univ. of Maryland to enter private practice. Darrel Wiard has now joined the mortgage brokerage firm of Pearce, Mayer, and Greer. Alex Garcanz has been promoted to lead the chemistry division at Los Alamos Natl. Laboratory, working to solve environmental problems at the nation's nuclear production plants.

Word has reached us that H. Piper Andrews has passed away. A Class memorial will follow.

71 STUART E. RICKERSON
P.O. Box 3108
Del Mar, CA 92014

WEDDING BELLS: Tina Sung married Harry Furukawa on July 14, 1990. Her spouse, a Johns Hopkins graduate, has a masters in architecture from Harvard and an M.B.A. from Loyola. He is currently president of Gateway Resource Group, specializing in technology transfer in the construction industry, and simultaneously heads another company that concentrates on revitalizing inner cities. Tina adds, "everyone will meet him this year at Reunions."

Peter Charapko married Katherine Ferguson on May 19, 1990. The Reverends Kenneth Gorsuch (West End Collegiate Church, N.Y.) and John Galloway '63 officiated at the latter's Fox Chapel Presbyterian Church in Pittsburgh. Shown with the happy couple are Princetonians (l-r) Wilson Ray '48, Rev. Galloway '63, Larry Joachim, Bob Hazlett '46, Ed Pauly, Art Lowenstein, Lex Kelso and Peter's best man, Mark Markiewicz '72. Also present, "but still out dancing when the picture was taken," was Richard Davis '74. Peter plans on attending his 20th consecutive reunion this June at our 20th. Won't you join him?

SHORT TAKES: Debbie Tegarden wonders if there are "any other Wagnerians out there?" She pursued this passion by taking a cruise sponsored by the New York Wagner Society. At least two other Tigers were aboard, George Herget '58 and Rod Bass '66.

72 KIP HEWITT
21 Wildcat Rd.
Darien, CT 06820

NEW EDITIONS: Pictured is Nathan Lee Weizenbaum, born to Jack Lee and his wife, Pin Weizenbaum, Aug. 11, 1990. Jack has settled happily into a beautiful 1920s Craftsman-style house in Seattle, where he was recently tenured and promoted to associate prof. in the math dept. at Univ. of Washington.

Jerel Zoltick's second child, Lauren, was born Aug. 24, 1990. Jerel is a cardiologist with the office of the surgeon general at Walter Reed Army Medical Center in Washington, D.C. Sandy Bieber and his wife added their third child, Jeffrey Seth Bieber, on Sept. 7, 1990. Among the many delights, Sandy reports that Seth has been sleeping straight through the night since he was three weeks old. Sandy's other children are Allison (7) and Adam (3). Betsey and Joe Flanagan had their second child, Anne Elizabeth, Dec. 7, 1990. Their first child, Joey, is now two.

SPORTS: Larry Kurtz reports from the Cable Car Classic Basketball Tournament in San Francisco, that although Princeton lost to Santa Clara in the title game, he was able to get together with classmates Roger Ferry and Jack Griffin. Roger lives in La Jolla but spends much of his time in the Bay Area as an environmental risk consultant. Jack is grinding it out with his start-up company and looking forward to returning to Switzerland to celebrate his 10th wedding anniversary with Caroline, who is Swiss, and the 700th anniversary of Switzerland, where he and Caroline were married. Larry writes that he had hoped to see Tom Hoster, who recently bought a house in Palo Alto; however, Tom had a prior commitment. Larry says that his work as V.P.-Investor relations at Chiron Corp. is doing fine, as is his wife Melissa's business, the Kurtz Advantage.

We have a memorial in this issue.

73 R. GREGORY PLUMPTON

Box 14545
North Palm Beach, FL 33408

What ever happened to fusion? You'll find out, if you read Robin Herman's new book FUSION: THE SEARCH FOR ENDLESS ENERGY, published last fall by Cambridge Press. Robin credits Sbaron Naeole with inspiring the book, by suggesting a visit to the Princeton Plasma Physics Lab.

Also recently published: PROMISED LANDS, Peter Sacks by Viking Press. This is Peter's third book of poetry. He is a tenured full professor in the writing seminars and English dept. at Johns Hopkins.

The last time we heard from Jed Faroe and clan was seven years ago. Since then son Kiely has been joined by Katherine (7), Johanna (3), and Erin (1). Jed now works for MITRE Corp. in Groton, Conn., as chief engineer for the Navy's surface ship sonar systems. Deborah is happy at home with the children, pictured.

Also pictured this week is our own Jumpin' Charlie Flash (Scribner). He was demonstrating his athletic prowess for M magazine last Aug.

Rob Brabender is still practicing law in Erie, Penn. He is also adjunct professor at Gannon Univ., and part-time solicitor for the City of Erie. Wife Jan has returned to post-graduate nursing school. Kristen (14), Katie (11), Colin (8), and Kyle (5) all play soccer. Rob coaches Colin's traveling team.

74 JOHN STRYKER

15 Woodbine Rd.
Kendall Park, NJ 08824

IN THE NATION'S SERVICE: The N.Y. State Senate has unanimously approved Gov. Mario Cuomo's nomination of Margarita Rosa as state commissioner of human rights. Margarita, pictured here, is the first woman, the first Hispanic, and the youngest person to hold the position in the department's 42-year history.

Gov. Cuomo said of her, "I am pleased to have a person of Ms. Rosa's character, knowledge, and experience direct this agency. I am confident she will continue to keep N.Y. State in the forefront in upholding civil rights and protecting all New Yorkers from bias and discrimination." Since earning her law degree at Harvard, Margarita has worked for private law firms, as staff attorney at the Puerto Rican Legal Defense Fund, and has been with the Division of Human Rights for five years. She has taught law at CUNY and in several continuing legal education programs.

Va. Gov. Douglas Wilder has appointed Steve Stone to the Special Study Commission on the Virginia Petroleum Products Franchise Act and has reappointed him to the Virginia Board for Virginians with Disabilities. Steve has purchased an historic (1807) building in Alexandria, renovated it, and moved his law offices there.

Douglas Krahauer has been named to the board of trustees of the Alliance Against Homelessness of Bergen County (N.J.). The group raises money and runs homes for the mentally ill homeless. Douglas is working as a computer consultant at two local hospitals. He also tutors English as a second language, and is an advocate for mental health "consumers."

75 MELISSA KAREN MISHORIAN

940 Riverside Ave., Berkeley Square
Trenton, NJ 08618

David Agnew reports the birth of Gwyn Frazier Agnew on Oct. 11, 1989, joining Gael, now 6.

Monica and Joel Perlmutter welcomed their first child, a daughter, Lauren, on Dec. 27, 1989.

Stephen Hellmuth has a new job (director of operations at N.B.A. Entertainment) and a new son (Nicholas George, born Feb. 18, 1990).

Anne Brenner and David Caprera took a sabbatical in 1990 "to travel the world and start a family." Lisa Catherine Caprera (pictured with a dinosaur, gift of Bern Hinckley) was born July 9. January brought the return to work: Anne at St. Joseph's Hospital, Dave as a tax lawyer at Kutak Rock & Campbell.

Bemita S. Baird and her husband, Ronald E. Barab, welcomed their first child, Alexis Mae Barab, on Oct. 16, 1990.

"After 11 years in southern Calif., I moved back to Palm Beach Gardens, Fla., which I still think of as home," writes Dave Clark. "I'm presently assistant counsel for Oxbow Corp., concentrating in their alternative energy group. My wife Sally and I are the proud parents of Hilary Alexandra (2)."

Steve Synakowski is running a small architectural practice on Chicago's north shore, building houses and commercial space. He is also teaching design at the Univ. of Illinois. He and Carol Pierce, married since 1981, have a son, Mitchell Patrick.

Peter Pettit was ordained to the ministry in the Evangelical Lutheran Church of America in Aug. He is now serving the Hope Lutheran Church in Riverside, Calif., and plans to move there from Claremont soon. Another goal for 1991 is finishing his Ph.D., which requires producing another 1½ chapters.

76 JAMES L. MARKITOS

Lane & Mitzendorf, 919 18th St., N.W.
Washington, DC 20006

Annette and Bruce Carver Jackson's first child, Kathryn Alexia, was born Nov. 6, 1990. Doug Stockwell was married in June 1990 to Marcia Bouchard of Canton, Mass., thereby "inheriting" three little girls. He lives in Houston and has a neuropsychiatry

Princeton Clubs and Alumni Associations

PAA OF ALABAMA: Thurs., Mar. 7—Prof. of Religion Malcolm Diamond will speak at a luncheon.

PAA OF MISSISSIPPI: Thurs., Mar. 7—Religion Prof. Malcolm Diamond will speak at a dinner.

PAA OF NEW ORLEANS: Fri., Mar. 8—Prof. of Religion Malcolm Diamond will give a lecture.

PC OF SAN DIEGO: Fri., Mar. 8—President Shapiro will speak in San Diego. For info., call Tilden B. Reeder '68 at 619-286-1010.

CALIF. REGIONAL CONFERENCES: Sat., Mar. 9 and Sun., Mar. 10—Please save these dates as the PC of Southern Calif. and the PC of Northern Calif. will each host regional conferences. Featured speakers include: President Shapiro, Dean of Admission Fred Hargadon, Prof. of Slavic Languages and Literatures Caryl Emerson; and Prof. of Astronomy James Gunn. Calif., Ariz., and Nev. alumni and parents will be invited and all Princeton alumni and parents are welcome.

PC OF CENTRAL FLA: Wed., Mar. 13—Physics Prof. George Reynolds will speak at a luncheon.

PAA OF HAWAII: Sun., Mar. 17—Distinguished University Prof. of Politics and International Affairs Henry Bienen will speak at a reception.

RULON - MILLER INC.

ESTABLISHED 1968

SUMNER RULON-MILLER III '61

EXECUTIVE FINANCIAL PLANNING

ESTATE PLANS

GROUP INSURANCE

PROFIT SHARING

RETIREMENT

261 MADISON AVENUE, SUITE 1200

NEW YORK, NY 10016

TEL 212-681-8660

FAX 212-697-6814

Wanted to Buy

Highest prices paid
for American and European Art,
including paintings, watercolors
and drawings, sculpture and prints
from 18th century to present.
Please contact Stuart P. Feld, '57

Hirsch & Adler
GALLERIES INC.

21 E. 70th St. NY 10021 (212) 535-8810

FAX: (212) 772-7237

practice. Mike French is the director of channel marketing for Coca-Cola U.S.A.'s domestic fountain business. Jeff French is director of research for Ballinger, a Philadelphia-based architectural firm he has been with since receiving his master's in 1978.

the Navy's oceanographic and weather command equipment.

With the acquisition of a G.M.C. truck franchise, it's now Al Cerrone Oldsmobile-G.M.C. Al and Susan have a daughter, Catherine, and were expecting a second child at last report. Mary Frances and Ray Batten baptized their third daughter, Dylan Bowles, in mid-1989.

Having moved back to Pittsburgh in early 1990, Lori Cherup has opened a plastic surgery practice specializing in breast reconstruction and hands. Her husband, Alex, is a spine surgeon, and they have two children, Alex and Grant. Lori was awarded a substantial grant by the Aesthetic Society to continue her research in the problem of capsular contracture around breast implants.

Bill Patterson joined Smith Barney in Mar. 1990 as a managing director in corporate finance. He has a daughter and was expecting another child in early July 1990.

77

JAMES BARRON
15 W. 72nd St., Apt. 24-B
New York, NY 10023

PASSAGES—Kitty Hsu Dana left her position as V.P.-marketing at Union Memorial Hospital, went to France with her husband for three months and is now chief operating officer of Planned Parenthood of Maryland. John Frye left Wall Street for Columbia Business School, where he's getting an M.B.A. Mike Kaplan left the Naval Research Lab in Washington for the ranks of the senior executive service at NASA headquarters. He's chief of the advance programs branch in the astrophysics division and is responsible for all future planning of NASA's astronomy and astrophysics missions. He and wife, Carolyn, celebrated their 10th anniversary. He says sons Joey (6) and Jason (3½) keep them busy. Bob Lack has joined the Manhattan law firm of Friedman & Kaplan as a partner, specializing in commercial, securities and antitrust litigation.

THRESHOLD CROSSINGS—Jim Hilboldt married Wendy Coleman Dixon of New Canaan, Conn., on Nov. 10. "Since Wendy already had two lovely daughters," Jim says, "I now have an instant family." Marc Chamlin married Judith Ann Goodfarb last Apr. 29 in Tarrytown, N.Y. He is a partner in the Manhattan law firm of Loeb & Loeb. She is a management supervisor at Saatchi & Saatchi Promotions, also in Manhattan.

LAWYERS' CHILDREN—Susan Murphy and husband, Jeff Jacobs, had their second child, Brian, last Oct. 15. His sister, Catherine, is four. Susan is on leave from her job as an attorney at the U.S. Equal Opportunity Commission in Washington. Cecelia Anne Slater Pikus (pictured) was born to Cecelia Slater '76 and David Pikus last Nov. 18. Cecelia says that Cecelia looks like her father, whose own picture appeared in N.Y. NEWSDAY after he was chosen to head the matrimonial department at the Manhattan law firm of Shea

& Gould. Cecelia, a pediatrician by training, says that being a parent is "like being a resident, except that it's every night instead of every third."

We have a memorial in this issue.

78

BOB PESKIN
Box 886
Middlebury, VT 05753

Pictured right to left are Kate Carroll (July 27, 1987) and Patrick Carroll (Apr. 27, 1990), the children of Lisa Carnochan of Menlo Park, Calif. According to Lisa, "They have taught me new respect for my mother." Frank Vuono's third daughter, Renada Leigh, was born last Nov. 20. She joins older sisters Theresa Rose and Lisa Marie.

Michael Gollin (7611 Chestnut Ave., Bowie, MD 20715) married Jill Dickey last Thanksgiving weekend. Michael is an environmental and patent lawyer in the Washington, D.C., office of Sive, Paget & Riesel.

Richard Malloy is in the midst of a year-long consulting contract with Strategic Resources Inc. of Kansas City, Mo. Until mid-May, he will be providing data-processing analyst services to a client company in N.J. He writes, "I would welcome any contact from classmates. My home number is 201-267-2434."

This column is being written just after the outbreak of the Persian Gulf war. While we have several classmates in the armed forces, to date I have not been informed if any of them are serving in the Gulf. If you learn of a classmate who is doing so, please let me know, so that I can publish names and addresses for you to write letters of support to them and their families.

79

MARTHA KRAMER
27 Northill St., Apt. 6-R
Stamford, CT 06907

MULTIPLE BLESSINGS: Ely Daban reports the birth of Sara, Daniel, Richard, and Robin Dahan, who were born Valentine's Day 1990. They are pictured in appropriate Princetonian garb. Their father was a member of Quadrangle Club; they have formed their own "quad" club. Bob Tait reports the birth of his first son, Alexander Norman, this spring. Jay Steinberg reports the birth of his third son, Jonathan Lee, this summer; all family members are fine. Gerald Falasca reports the birth of his first child, Magdalena Renata, this fall.

RECENTLY MARRIED: Ann Laupheimer married Robert Santilli in Philadelphia this fall. Ann is an associate in the law firm of Blank, Rome, Comiskey & Macauley. Robert is V.P.-administration at a local hospital. David Kulbarsh got married over a year ago in Yosemite Park, honeymooning in Greece and Italy. He has been a marketing manager for Apple Computer for four years and still keeps in touch with Gordon Kotik and Jack McGwire.

MOVING ON: Carol Rotbman and Ben Tycko have moved from Boston to N.J. Ben is an asst. prof. in the pathology dept. at Columbia, and Carol is working part-time and tending their young daughter, Sonia. Sue Liemer has joined the Western New England College of Law faculty, where she is a visiting asst. prof. and director of the Lawyer Processing Program. Lisa Bennett has moved to the Monterey Peninsula, where she is advising non-profit agencies on fundraising. She is also a faculty member associated with Indiana Univ.'s Center on Philanthropy. Gerry Neuberger has been appointed co-director of the intensive care unit of Presbyterian Hospital in N.Y.

80

RIK PARKER
25 Farmhouse La.
Furlong, PA 18925

CLASS UNION: Congratulations to Eve LaPlante and David Dorfman, married in Rockport, Mass. on Sept. 8, 1990. Pictured at the reception are (l-r) Donald Thomas '55, Lizette Harper Chanock '78, Stephen Chanock '78, Elaine Soffer, Eve and David, Norma Santamaria, and Rodney Brisco. Other Princetonians attending included Philip Larsen '59, Jeffrey Gall '72, Karen Rosenberg '73, and Tom Reed '86. David is a pathologist and research fellow in molecular biology at Harvard Medical School, while Eve is a teacher and writer whose nonfiction book about a brain disorder will be published next year by Harper & Row.

Congratulations to Steve Strogatz, who recently received a Presidential Young Investigator Award from the Natl. Science Foundation and is enjoying life as an asst. prof. of mathematics at M.I.T.

John Patilla reports moving to Madrid, Spain, to work for the Spanish subsidiary of United Technologies/Carrier Air Conditioning.

CLASS OFFSPRING: Good things come in twos. Steve and Julia Herndon Reynolds '82 had their second child, John James, last Sept. 29. Not-so-little Jack weighed in at 9 lbs., 9 oz. to join brother Matthew (4½). Steve is a partner at Crumphy, Del Deo et al. in Newark, N.J., where he practices corporate litigation. Scott Alexander (6 lbs., 8 oz.) was born to Lisa and Gary Matthews, and was well received by big brother Craig (then almost 2) and grandpa Norman Matthews '54. Terri and Mike Cooper welcomed their second child, Allison Michelle, on Nov. 16. I am sure that she will be well taken care of by sister Laurel (6).

81

JEAN AMABLE TELLJOHANN
50 Riverside Dr., Apt. 9F
New York, NY 10024

Rena Hozore Reiss and her husband, Steve '79, are delighted to announce the arrival of Amalia Elizabeth, born Feb. 19, 1990. The Reisses moved to Washington, D.C., in May, when Steve accepted a position at the Washington Post.

Jane and Bill Schonberg had their first child (pictured), a daughter named Christina Carol, on June 15, 1990. In 1989 Bill was awarded the prestigious Engineering Foundation Research Initiation Grant to perform research in hypervelocity impact theory. In 1990 Bill was promoted to associate prof. of mechanical engineering at the Univ. of Ala.-Huntsville.

Maureen Casey Kays sent updates on several classmates: Helene Freeman is in private practice in internal medicine in Washington, D.C. Kim Muñoz Bolano has a baby, Michael, born Feb. 1990. Fritz Nell, a lawyer in Toledo, and his wife, Myriam, have a son, Thomas, born Aug. 1990. Nancy and Elliot Ebrich have a new baby, William, born Oct. 1990. Elliot is a medical doctor at Stanford Univ. Hospital. Mark Solomon married Leslie deLong in Sept. 1990. Mark is in a post-doctoral program in San Francisco. Bill Weis is in a post-doctoral program in biochemistry at Columbia. Helene Morgenthaler Fern and her husband, Paul '80, have returned from Berlin. Helene is working for Merck, Sharpe & Dohme in N.J.

82 TIM DOOLEY KOSUT

12409 Sadler Lane
Bowie, MD 20715

NEW ARRIVALS: On Sept. 20, 1990, Ian Everett was born to Wendy and Steve McDougall. Nov. 8 marked the arrival of Margaret Farnsworth, who is the second child of Mary and A. Reid Marsh Jr. (Reid is at Kidder, Peabody but has been specializing in the environmental services industry over the past two years). The next day, on Nov. 9, Martha and Frost Prioleau welcomed James Hutson. Nov. 14 was a day of two births. Judy and Lee Cohn's three-year old daughter, Jesse, has a new brother, named Philip Isaac. Also, Kirsten and Bruce Meberg's twin daughters, Anna-Louise and Alexandra, welcomed their sister, Mikala Holten. The newest arrival is Matthew McMahon Baer who arrived on Jan. 20, 1991, to Cammy and Tim Baer. He joins his brothers, Jack (born Jan. 30, 1988) and Michael (born Apr. 21, 1989).

Our tenth reunion is just around the corner. Our hardworking chairperson, Rich Gorelick, is getting geared up to organize this massive venture. He is looking for committee heads and helpers for publicity, logistics, finances, housing, childcare, satellite classes, security, entertainment, and, of course, the basic theme and P-rade. We might even have a Class book and souvenirs. If interested you can call Rich at home (215-569-2689) or check you last newsletter for the other Class officers' addresses and phone numbers.

83 GAIL FRANCE

345 West 87th St., Apt. 3F
New York, NY 10024

Last Oct., Lynn Jennings won the women's title at the Athletics Congress national cross-country championships held in the Bronx, N.Y. Lynn won the 6-kilometer (3.7 miles) race in 19:07, shattering her own course record by 28 seconds. With this win, which was Lynn's fourth consecutive title, she ties for the longest winning streak and most victories with Dorris Brown who set the record in the 1960s. This win gives Lynn an automatic berth in the March world cross-country championships in Antwerp, Belgium, where she will be the defending world champion.

Margaret John is in her second year of teaching English as a second language and Chinese at Cushing Academy in north central Mass. She is planning to return to school for a Ph.D. in Chinese literature. Margaret writes that she still makes annual trips to China. Her most recent trip was last June, during which she was the study/tutorial program director at the Educational Inst. in Shanghai.

Peter Ellis has completed his residency in Intl. Medicine at Rhode Island Hospital in June. Other Princetonians recently working at the hospital include classmates Lorraine Dudley, Ben Smith, Judy Pinsker, and Andy Green, as well as Allison Moore '82, Jim Craren '84, and Sue Kalish '84. Peter says "We're having fun! (Sort of)"

Glenn Reinbart writes that he is a resident in orthopedic surgery at Northwestern and that it is hectic. Married life is treating him well and ponders "Will Ron Dennis be joining the married ranks soon?" Ron is alive and well and living in Toronto.

84 TIMOTHY C. WU

Beacon Court, 175 Beacon St., Apt. 413
Somerville, MA 02143

BETTER LATE THAN NEVER... Happy second anniversary to Charles Pardue and his wife, Louisa Bailey (Shorter College '83), who were married in Atlanta, Ga. in Apr. 1989. Charles writes that, "It's taken me this long to get around to sending this picture to the PAW. It was taken during the singing of Old Nassau after the now-defunct 'Five after Five' a capella singing group composed of Tigertone and Nassoon grads performed." Shown (l-r) are: H. L. Slets, Jim Green '53, John Williams '80, Charles, Louisa, Gary Schanzer '87, Brad Smith '85, Cara Smith '83, Derek Johns '85, Bill Kaspers '70, Robert Tinkler, Margarethe Laurenzi '83, Rbett Dunaway, Mark Laurenzi, and Kevin Gift. The Pardues are currently living in New Haven, where Charles is at the Yale School of Organization and Management, and Louisa is teaching kindergarten and an after-school program in the community.

HAPPY SIXTH-MONTH BIRTHDAY To... Matthew Brinkley Lindsey, born Oct. 15 to Brink Lindsey and Debbie Lindsey '83. Shown here at two months, Matt is growing up with the best possible doctor who still makes housecalls: Mom Debbie is a pediatrician. Dad Brink is an attorney in Washington, D.C. The Lindseys have settled in Bethesda, Md.

85 ROB JURANEK

1578 Oak Ave., Apt. 1
Evanston, IL 60201

Caroline Brokaw and Rob Tucker (Middlebury '85) were married Sept. 8 in New Canaan, Conn. Pictured (l-r) are Tom Ramseur '45, Katherine Brokaw Russ '82, Lauren Fox, Ernie Cooper '86, Caroline and Rob, Susan Wright Stern, and Thankful Vanderstar '88. Caroline is an account exec. at Backer Spielvogel Bates and Rob is at Brown Brothers Harriman in N.Y. They are living in Brooklyn Heights and are given to taking romantic strolls along the esplanade.

Also pictured is a stairway full of Princetonians who gathered in Monterey, Calif. on Aug. 4 for the wedding of Ken Hersh and Julie Kosnik (Notre Dame '82). Cascading from top to bottom are Eric Horschman '84, David Ross, Catherine Woodward Horschman, Ed Abbo, Gil Wolfe, Lynn Dorsey, Jeremy Kasdin, Jim Farrell, Kef Siter Kasdin, Carol O'Neill, Liz Rios, Kaiblen Larrimer, Kim Ritchie '84, Maria Carreras, Jill Amstutz, Tom Daccaro, Susie Hersh '83, and Julie and Ken. Congratulations!

Young Alumni Activities

PC OF NEW YORK: Mar. 7 & Apr. 4—Thursday Night Club in Tiger Bar and Grill. Mar. 18—Movie Night: REVERSAL OF FORTUNE, 7:30, free. Mar. 22: Dinner at a Brighton Beach restaurant. Call for more info. Apr. 22—Movie Night. Apr. 27: Wild Ivy Rock 'n' Roll Ball. For reservations or questions call the manager's office at 212-840-6400.

PA OF DELAWARE: Second Thursday of each month happy hour at Water Works Cafe. For more info., please call Tracey Morgan '86 at 302-761-9432.

PA OF NEW ENGLAND: Mar. 27: Boston Alumni Clubs Volunteer Opportunities Night. Contact Sarah Helm '89, 617-868-7808, or Mary Hermann '89, 617-628-8825.

Contact Debbie Bredael at the Alumni Council with notices of events for inclusion in this column. Please submit info. at least six weeks prior to the event. Call or write: the Alumni Council, Maclean House, Princeton Univ., Princeton, NJ 08544; 609-258-3353.

86 SALLIE KIM

2645 California St., Apt. 303
Mountain View, CA 94040

Anne Hsu (pictured here) married Randy Todd (DePauw '85) on Aug. 24, 1990, in Downey, Calif. Anne has graduated from Harvard Dental School, but is now pursuing a master's degree in orthodontics, and Randy is a resident and Ph.D. candidate.

Also celebrating a marriage was Diana Peyton, who married Eric Kollevoll on Oct. 6, 1990. Jack Weiss married Leslie Kautz on May 27, 1990. Jack is a law student at U.C.L.A. Karen Horwitz married Bruce Sabbath on June 10, 1990. Karen is an associate at Blackstone Financial Management in N.Y.

Anne Gross graduated from U.Va. law school and is working as a law clerk to a federal district court judge in Baltimore with classmate Caroline Thompson Springer. Tim Joslin is living in N.Y. and working as an architect and "settling into grown-up life." Michael Sarbanes spent the last summer working for Appalachian Legal Services in Logan, W.Va., and is now back at N.Y.U. Law School. Steve Gerencser is a first-year M.B.A. student at U.N.C. Joe Martinez wrote in earlier that he was leaving Little Rock, Ark., for Lubbock, Tex., for pilot training in the Air Force.

Classmates are quitting the working world and going back to school in droves. Howard Chen worked for A.T. & T. for two years and then decided he liked going to classes better than going to work, so he went back to school at N.Y.U. medical school. Marc Goldenberg also worked for two years, at GE, then went back to the Kellogg School of Management at Northwestern. Now Marc works as a consultant in Boston. Tim Agnew quit Andersen Consulting in June 1990 and managed a restaurant in Kennebunkport, Me. Now Tim is at Harvard Business School, as are classmates Julia Sheppard and Pamela Ruddick. Nicky Eaton spent two years acting professionally in Washington, D.C., and is now in drama school in England. C.J. Lockman recently began her graduate studies at the Univ. of Md. in sports psychology.

87

MARY TAYLOR DESKO
1935 Seville St.
Santa Rosa, CA 95403

Chrissie Adams married Kevin Osborn (Colgate '85) Sept. 16, 1990, in Bay Head, N.J. The wedding took place exactly one year after Chrissie's sister, Jennifer Adams Baldock '81, was wed. Those attending were (back row) Kari Briggs, Karin Gustafson, Lisa Blair Hanlon, Molly Melville, Penny Bunn, Bob Adams '57, Chrissie, Kevin, Jennifer Adams Baldock '81, Stephanie Bell, Page Heenan Sakelaris '86, Linda Magee '86, Val Ulene '86, Joe Walsh '56 (front row) Freeman Bunn '57, Andy Burgess, Rob Alpert, Peter Fortenbaugh '89, Tony Bonevitch, and Jay Walsh '86. The couple now lives in Cos Cob, Conn., Chrissie is a sales rep for Kodak in N.Y.C., and Kevin works in marketing for Prudential Bache.

Six other weddings from summer 1990 are Elizabeth Colston to Dan Titus '86 (June 23), Dave Farina to Julie Abraham (Penn '87), Bettina Kallos to Scott Koski, Melissa Schramm to Tillman Burnett, Steve Singer to Heidi Elmendorf '88, and Connie Williams to Anthony Francis (Aug. 11). Pictures, anyone?

Lt. Peter Huggins left with his Air Force unit for the Saudi desert in early Jan. Write him at SSN 108 62 7809, Operation Desert Shield, 347TFW/69TFS, APO NY 09871.

CORRECTION: Scott Yen is in Univ. of Chicago's Med School, not graduate school as originally reported.

88

CHRISTOPHER LU
206E Holden Green
Cambridge, MA 02138

This column is starting to sound like the weddings section of the N.Y. TIMES. And the race to the altar continues: Dave Sawitzki married Patti Covington last Sept. 22. Pictured here: (back) Sean Brennan, Carl Perry, Jeff Bruce, Rob Rodgers, Dave, Ed Glaesser, Saul Perloff, David Proshan, Jay Weiss, (front) Patti, Susie Burks '89, Laura Cattivera '89, and Bill Aberon.

Several other newlyweds include: Kim Weigel to Tad Coburn '87 on Aug. 18, 1990, in Wolfeboro, N.H.; Mark Balloun to Lisa Pizura (Univ. of Fla. '88) on Oct. 13, 1990, in Ponte Vedra Beach, Fla.; Michael Harnum to Nancy Kauffman (Temple Univ. '90) on Nov. 10, 1990.

Dan Meyer is engaged to Amy Crutchfield (Conn. College '88) and will be married in Cincinnati this summer. Martin Myers and Diane Fingar '89 will wed this June at Princeton. Becky Eaton and Chris Randall will also marry this June. Maru Calderon will be married this July 20; no news about the groom.

Letter of the month comes from Leab van der Voort, who says she won't pay her Class dues anymore unless her letter is published. Well, since the Class needs money, here goes: "I am working as an architect in Vancouver, B.C. Tom MacFarlane is getting his master's in English at Univ. of Toronto. Dave Schuler and Elissa Adair are in London. Kalbryn Hayward is a sales rep for pharmaceutical giant Merck in Nashville, Tenn. Annie Robinson is getting a master's in public health at Harvard. Jen Wheeler is working in finance in N.Y."

Another piece of interesting news: Keen Buucheris playing professional squash and was ranked number 15 in the world last fall. He was also named world professional rookie-of-the-year. Congratulations.

89

DAVID MILLER
96 Linden La.
Princeton, NJ 08540

Kim Rietber spent her first post-P'ton year at Oxford, studying philosophical theology and winning the Women's Karate Sparring Championship. She's now a financial analyst in global finance at Goldman Sachs in N.Y. She occupies a cubicle right next to Kim Aldrich. Sources say they spend a lot of time doing high school math and convincing foreign companies that it's cheaper to rent U.S. aircraft than to buy it.

In their second year at grad school: Catherine Sarkisian at U.C.S.F. med school; Jonathan Pendleton at Michigan law; Dan Blander at Dartmouth med school in the Dartmouth-Brown program; Ted Chow at Johns Hopkins med school; Diane Hewitt in the English Department at U.N.C.-Chapel Hill.

Krishnan Padbanaban is in the mech. engineering Ph.D. program at Stanford, where he shares a big house with a swimming pool with Chris Brinton (NASA Ames), Eric Torng (Stanford Ph.D. in computer science), and Jeff Yu and Pete Bearel (both Stanford Ph.D. in electrical engineering.) Elizabeth Kornfield is "still plugging away at Tufts Medical School—second year interesting but also kind of tiring." She continues to perform with a chorus, the Boston Cecilia, and reports that "singing has been good for my soul." Her first-year advisee is Bill Alderman. Jonathan Jacobson, studying for an economics Ph.D. at M.I.T., is engaged to be married next Aug. to Lori Herold '90.

COUNTERPOINT: "Having found grad school rather dull," writes Tracy Prentiss, "I left. I'm now employed at a computer engineering firm in Reading, Mass. It is a start-up firm with only 20 employees involved in the development and manufacturing of Local Area Networks, both fiber optic and coax. Because of the company's size, I have a finger in just about every pie, from purchasing to accounting to technical writing. I am getting quite a business education." Her computer address is tracy@signet.

90

BRIET GOODMAN
22 Berkeley Terrace
Livingston, NJ 07039

The two nationally televised Princeton basketball games in December brought together many classmates, including a quartet in Boston. John Wheeler is developing computer games for a software company, Rich Schofield is a computer consultant for Brandeis Univ., Dennis Boccipio studies atmospheric sciences at M.I.T., and Margaret Talbot is in management consulting.

Speaking of sporting events, Gary Ignatin, Steve Roberts and Matt Wallertook a break from their law school studies—at Penn, S.M.U., and Texas, respectively—to meet at the Cotton Bowl in Dallas. Their former roommate, Dan McMurrer, works for a law firm in Boston and could not make the trip.

On the Conn. private school front, Megan Lonski is relieved to be "finally out of N.J.," coaching field hockey and teaching physics to ninth graders at the Kent School. She is joined at Kent by Mike Hirschfeld, who coaches ice hockey and teaches history, and Ann O'Keefe, who coaches basketball and teaches Latin. The trio is apparently forming the Princeton Club of Kent. Down the road in Wallingford is Brita Strandberg, who teaches English and coaches field hockey at Choate.

Class agent Christy Carrillo and roommates Larayne Payne, Sarah Gustein and Jojo Rein recently hosted a holiday party in N.Y.C. Among the guests were Mark Caputo, who works with Bain & Co. in Boston; Tom Barnas, who is employed by Alex Brown in Baltimore; Sue Roche, who works in health care in D.C.; Rob Khoury, who works for Price Waterhouse in Tampa; and Paul Mandell, who works in finance in Philadelphia. Christy reports that Jeff Ingold and Ted Price called in from San Diego, where they are "surfing every day and trying to convince the girls that they really did go to Princeton."

91

BUCKY JOHNSON, JESSICA LIFECRUTZ
152 Little Hall
Princeton University Campus

In a world turned upside down, the seniors find their hearts and minds stretched to the limit, attempting to maintain a strange double focus—on the Gulf Crisis and on the independent pursuit of senior theses. With all this, the Class of 1991 remains committed to sharing its goodwill and talent beyond the University gates.

Recently, "Senior Service Projects of the Month" have included a reception for senior citizens at the Art Museum and a buddy program with local youths at a men's basketball game. The former event was heavily attended by the community, while the latter met with enthusiastic participation from over twenty Class members. In the future, events like "Game Night" in conjunction with a local association for retarded citizens (March), "Opening the Gates" and "Special Olympics" (April), and the Second Annual Benefit Concert for the Valerie Fund (May) will strike the perfect balance between Class involvement and outside interest.

The Class of 1991 wishes for peace in the world community to which we all belong.

GS
*60-*75

C. ROSEN DAVIS '73
26 Crescent St.
Northampton, MA 01060

ARCH. & URBAN PLANNING: Ivan Zakmic '75 has been teaching since his graduation, first at the Univ. of Texas, then at Cornell, Pratt Inst., and since 1986 at Lehigh. Recently he was named chairman of the dept. of art & architecture. He has published two monographs on Charles Gwathmey and Philip Johnson/John Burgie, and his edition/translation of Le Corbusier's JOURNEY TO THE EAST, first published in 1987, was issued as a paperback in 1989.

CHEMISTRY: Georgia Fisanick '75 is now V.P.-business development at Light Age, Inc., a manufacturer of tunable solid-state lasers. She also chairs the committee on women and minorities for the American Vacuum Society. Her daughter Kate just celebrated her first birthday.

CLASSICS: W. R. Connor '61 reports that he will be giving the May 1991 commencement address at U.N.C.-Greensboro, and that David Brown (Econ.) '61 is now provost and Laura Ford '84 vice-Provost at Wake Forest Univ.

ECONOMICS: Timothy G. Dalton Jr. '62 reports that he and three partners bought the investment management business Dalton, Read (which he started) in April 1990. They currently manage over $2 billion for mostly institutional accounts. Timothy is the chairman and president.

ELECTRICAL ENGINEERING: In late Nov. 1990, David

L. Evans '66, senior admissions officer at Harvard, was selected as one of President Bush's "Daily Points of Light." The White House citation notes that David wrote four educational software packages to help young people improve math and spelling skills, and spends two nights a week and some Sundays with 30 children in a low-income neighborhood church basement helping them use computers. He also raises money to expand this tutorial program. The recognition is meant to encourage more such direct and consequential action and multiply such successful initiatives and leadership in community service.

ENGLISH: George Bornstein '66 is the editor of REPRESENTING MODERNIST TEXTS: EDITING AS INTERPRETATION (forthcoming from Univ. of Mich. Press). George is prof. of English at the Univ. of Mich. Hugh Wilemeyer '66 edited two books recently: WILLIAM CARLOS WILLIAMS AND JAMES LAUGHLIN: SELECTED LETTERS (W.W. Norton, 1989), and, with George Bornstein, a new edition of LETTERS TO THE NEW ISLAND (Macmillan, 1989), re: W.B. Yeats. Edwin P. (Ted) Conquest Jr. '53 '67 published a collection of six short stories about Virginians during and after the War Between the States: VIRGINIA, THE GRAY AND THE GREEN (Apollonian Press, 1990). This follows ACHILLES AND COMPANY, a collection of three blank verse plays (Apollonian Press, 1988), reviewed in PAW Dec. 21, 1988, and (very favorably) in AMERICAN OXONIAN, Spring 1990—"instructive, intriguing, a delight to read and imagine, marvelous." Keith Cushman '69 is the co-editor, with Michael Squires, of THE CHALLENGE OF D. H. LAWRENCE (Univ. of Wisc. Press, 1990), and with Dennis Jackson, of D. H. LAWRENCE'S LITERARY INHERITORS (St. Martin's, forthcoming 1991). He is completing a biographical study called D. H. LAWRENCE AND THE BREWSTERS for Rutgers Univ. Press.

HISTORY: Robert M. Levine '67 reports three books published in 1990-91; a paperback version of IMAGES OF HISTORY (Duke Univ. Press), the new CUBA IN THE 1850s (Univ. of Fla. Press), and forthcoming VALE OF TEARS: CAUUDOS REVISITED (Univ. of Calif. Press). Robert is finishing his second four-year term as chair of the history dept. at the Univ. of Miami. Since July 1990, Gunter Brandt '74 has been headmaster of the American Intl. School in Sao Paulo, Brazil, an American overseas school with 1,100 students from over 40 countries. Founded in 1920, it is the second-oldest school of its kind.

MECHANICAL & AEROSPACE ENGINEERING: W.J. (Jim) McCroskey '66 is still at NASA Ames Research Center, Calif., now as senior staff scientist. He also enjoys serving on the NATO Advisory Group for Aerospace Research and Development (AGARD) and is currently chairman of its Fluid Dynamics panel. Daughter Susan '86 spent last summer teaching English in Czechoslovakia; she is now a Ph.D. candidate in Slavic linguistics at U.C.-Berkeley.

POLITICS: Henricus Gajentaan '64 reports that since mid-Oct. he has been ambassador of the Netherlands in Dhaka, Bangladesh. After a two-year stay in Mexico City, he has moved to the Eastern hemisphere. Bangladesh is one of three main recipients of Dutch development assistance—approximately $70 million in 1990.

ROMANCE LANGUAGES & LITERATURES: The latest book by David O'Connell '64 is MICHEL DE SAINT PIERRE: A CATHOLIC NOVELIST AT THE CROSSROADS (Birmingham, Ala.: Summa Pubs.). As of this year, David has also edited 50 books in French literature for Twayne's World Authors Series (G. K. Hall/Macmillan).

WOODROW WILSON SCHOOL: Robert E. Service '60 is deputy chief of mission at the U.S. Embassy, Brasilia. Daughter Jennifer is Princeton '91; son John is Hamilton '93. Robert Picciotto '62 became V.P.-corporate planning and budgeting, World Bank, in Jan. 1990. In Nov. 1990, Peter D. Bell '64 was elected chairman of the board of directors of CARE.

Kent Gailbraith Colwell '17

KENT COLWELL died at his home in Morristown, N.J., Nov. 28, 1990. He was born in Paris, France, in 1898. He came to Princeton from Manlius School. At Princeton he was a member of Charter Club and roomed with "Fax" Funston. He was on the track team for four years and in the late 1970s he ran in a mile race in Palmer Stadium. He was an ardent and able tennis player, which he continued until he was 85. In WWI he was a first lieutenant in infantry, and served in France in the S.O.S. He was on the American Commission to Negotiate Peace and was cited by the commander of the A.E.F. In Sept. 1919 he joined Guaranty Trust in N.Y. He retired from Guaranty in 1962 as V.P. For several subsequent years he was U.S. representative for Credit Lyonnais of Paris. He has always been active in community affairs in and around Morristown, including service as warden of the Episcopal church, president of the Memorial Hospital, and on the advisory board of the Boy Scouts, and as a trustee of the N.J. conservation foundation, Community Chest, and library. He has been president of 1917 three times, Class agent, trustee of the 1917 Foundation, and secretary of the Class. We have lost one of the grandest members of our Class. We will always miss him. We send our deep sympathy to his widow, Pam, his two daughters and two sons, 15 grandchildren, and seven great-grandchildren.

The Class of 1917

Henry Hamilton Hoyt '17

HENRY HOYT died at his home in Short Hills, N.J., Nov. 5, 1990. He was born in N.Y.C. in 1895, but lived in N.J. most of his life. He attended Newark Academy. At Princeton he roomed with "Rudie" Eberstadt and was a member of Cottage Club and the Law and Polity clubs. In WWI he first drove an American Field Service ambulance with the French Army at Verdun and St. Michiel. Then he joined the U.S. Marines and served as a captain at Chateau Thierry, St. Michiel, Soisson, Mause Argonne, and in the army of occupation. He was awarded the Croix de Guerre, two citations. On returning he became a partner of A.D. Strauss & Co. in N.Y., until taking over the management of Carter-Wallace Inc. in 1929. Chairman of the board from 1961, he retired in 1986 and since then has served as chairman of the executive committee. He was on many business and community boards, including Empire Trust Co., Pingry School, Hospital Center at Orange, N.J., and the Proprietary Assn. He was very generous to Princeton, and recently gave a new research building, the Henry H. Hoyt, Class of 1917, Chemical Laboratory. He was on the Executive Committee of our Class and his success in everything he did was a source of pride and inspiration to all of us. He is survived by his widow, Anna; two sons; a daughter; ten grandchildren; and eight great-grandchildren; to all of whom we send our deepest sympathy.

The Class of 1917

Donald MacQueen Street '19

DONALD MACQUEEN STREET died Oct. 31, 1990, in West-erly, R.I. He was born in Chicago, Aug. 28, 1898, prepared at University School, and left Princeton in Mar. 1918. to enter the Coast Artillery Service as Second Lieutenant. After the war, he married Ruth Lawrence Oct. 14, 1924. They have four children: Mary Laurence Thorne, Sally Ann MacDonald, Elizabeth Vanderbilt, and Donald MacQueen Street Jr. There are 19 grandchildren and 13 great-grandchildren. He started work for Guaranty Trust Company of N.Y. June 30, 1919, and retired as a trust officer on June 30, 1954. In 1958, Don got his Ph.D. in economics at Columbia. He liked travel very much and went to Europe at least every year. The Class extends its deep sympathy to Don's entire family.

The Class of 1919

W. Irving Harris '20

W. IRVING HARRIS died July 16, 1990, in Princeton. Irv's Princeton days included participating in the Triangle show, editing PAW, managing the swimming team, and becoming an ensign in the U.S. Naval Reserve. His business career soon ended in a lifelong dedication to church and church matters. He became asst. minister at the Central Presbyterian Church in N.Y., then moved to Calvary Episcopal Church, where he edited their well-known publication Faith at Work, and, on the side, published books on the spiritual approach to life.

Irv certainly achieved his aim in life, spreading the good news of his Father's place in the scheme of things. And along with his serious dedication Irving enjoyed a delightful sense of humor and great joy in his friends. Irving's life added much to the stature of the Class.

To his widow, Julia, and children Andrew, Annie, and Carol Bradley, we extend our love and deepest sympathy in their great loss.

The Class of 1920

Jay Nevin Schroeder '20

JAY NEVIN SCHROEDER died June 16, 1990, in the Lancaster General Hospital. He had lost his first wife, Caroline Steinman, but is survived by his second wife, Katrina Falk; and by a daughter, Elizabeth S. Slaymaker; and three sons, Frederic, Jay N. III, and Robert. There are five grandchildren and two great-granddaughters.

In his college days Nev was manager of the soccer team and a member of Whig Hall. He was in the Navy in both wars, emerging as a lt. commander, and in Princeton, a Class V.P. through 1989, and a staunch Republican.

Nev began his career as an investment broker in his father's firm. He joined Barclay Moore and Co. of Philadelphia, then Stroud & Co. of Lancaster, where he was V.P. After a merger with Elkins Morris, where Nev was resident manager, his firm joined Prudential Bache.

We extend to Nev's family our sympathy at their great loss.

The Class of 1920

Roger Sheffield Ellis '24

ROGER ELLIS died Nov. 20, 1990, in Woodstock, Vt. A native of Buffalo, he was first associated with the Pierce Arrow Co. and finally with the Buffalo Envelope Co. He was a member of the R.O.T.C. unit at Princeton and remained active in the reserves after graduation. As a result, he was one of the first in and last out of WWII. As a lt. colonel he commanded a battalion of heavy field artillery on Leyte and Okinawa. He was awarded the Bronze Star with Oak Leaf Cluster for meritorious service. He was a fine golfer and very active in community service.

He is survived by his daughter, Katherine Smith; his sister, Elizabeth Wilson; and six grandchildren. To them we extend our sympathy.

The Class of 1924

Raymond Harold Maurice '24

RAY MAURICE died Nov. 25, 1990 in Montclair, N.J., where he had lived for over 45 years. He prepared at the Berkeley-Irving School and transferred to Princeton from Brown in 1921. He was married to his first wife May 5, 1923, making him one of first members of our Class to get married. He inherited his father's insurance business, with which he was engaged during most of his business career.

Ray married his second wife, Eleanore Bond Ingersoll, in 1934. He is survived by his widow; three children, Raymond, Gall, and Julie; and by four grandchildren. To them we extend our sympathy.

The Class of 1924

Dan Harrington Hill '26

DAN HILL died July 27, 1990, an Alzheimer's victim for more than two years. He came to Princeton from Exeter, the son of Walter B. Hill 1890. Little is known of Dan after graduation other than that he served for many years in Calif. as comptroller of an aircraft manufacturing business and in later years as an income tax consultant in the retirement village in Palm Desert in which he lived. In 1934 Dan married Naomi Alvera Woodworth, who has been hospitalized for some time. They had no children. We extend to Naomi both our best wishes and sympathy.

The Class of 1926

Edgar P. Houpt '26

WE RECOGNIZE with regret the death of Ned Houpt Nov. 16, 1990, of pneumonia, in Southampton, Long Island, Hospital. Ned was a quiet member of '26 who loved N.Y., where he was born and lived during his active life and where he had a wide circle of friends. After graduation he attended the Wharton School and then entered banking and was with Manufacturers Hanover until he retired in 1967 as a senior V.P.

Fishing was Ned's great interest. He built a summer place in Montauk and made his home there when he retired. Until his last illness he was a surfcaster and could be seen at any time of day casting a line. He was fond of people and, combining this with fishing, Ned taught and brought love of the sport to many friends and their children. When he died, Ned was the oldest member of the Anglers' Club of N.Y.

In WWII Ned volunteered and was in the Air Force. He never married and was one of the few bachelors in the Class. Ned is survived by two nieces, Jacqueline Bunn Gwynne and Elsie R. Bunn, to whom our sympathy is extended. We will miss this interesting and loyal member of the Class.

The Class of 1926

Alfred Robert Gessinger '27

AL DIED Sept. 19, 1990, in retirement at New Canaan, Conn. He was one of the 1927ers who have enjoyed two successful careers. The first (1931-37) was as an attorney. He became a master in chancery of N.J., and practiced for a few years with the firm of Lindabury, Stulman, Zink and Lafferty in Newark, N.J.

Shifting to industry, Al attained brilliant success in serving for 40 years with the Werner Machine Co. of Passaic, N.J., manufacturers of textile machinery. He became a partner, head of Massco, and partner in the P.R. Sales Co. He performed a notable service during WWII, in overseeing the manufacture of parts for cargo vessels, plane repair machines, shells for the U.S. Navy, and other defense goods.

The industrialist married a scholar—Annalee Joann Rose, educated at Wellesley and the Sorbonne. He cherished many interests, including philately, and served on the schools committee of the local Princeton Alumni Assn., and as an elder of the Ridgewood, N.J., West Side Presbyterian Church. The Class expresses its sympathy with his son, Paul R. Gessinger.

The Class of 1927

John Bryant Goodwin '28

JACK GOODWIN died Oct. 9, 1990, at the Stamford Hospital. He had suffered a severe stroke in 1983, and had put up a courageous struggle against the resulting disability through the years. He prepared for college at Mercersburg, and was a member of Campus Club.

Jack began his career in banking at Chase Manhattan, and then was with Morgan Guaranty Trust Co., from which he retired as a V.P. in 1969. He soon became active in an executive recruitment firm, Russell Reynolds Associates, and became a V.P. of this firm. From 1980 to 1983 he worked for Korn Ferry Intl.

During WWII Jack served with the Office of the Assistant Secretary of the Navy in Washington. He attained the rank of Lt. colonel. He was active in numerous civic affairs in Darien and Noroton, including the Easter Seal Rehabilitation Center. He was an enthusiastic golfer. He attended the Noroton Presbyterian Church. Jack was active in Princeton affairs, and served willingly and efficiently as our Class treasurer over two periods of time.

Jack married Mary "Polly" Ward Ford Feb. 8, 1941. Ushers included Jim Lee and Don Shay. Polly survives him, as do a daughter, Lynne Langmaid; a son, John Jr.; and five grandchildren. A brother, Robert H. '25, is deceased. The deep sympathy of the Class is with Polly and their family.

The Class of 1928

Gairdner Bostwick Moment '28

GAIRDNER MOMENT died Aug. 25, 1990, at the Union Memorial Hospital in Baltimore. He graduated from Montclair H.S., and at Princeton was a debater and majored in biology. He took his doctorate in zoology at Yale.

He joined the Goucher College faculty in 1932, and was head of the Dept. of Biology 1939-58. In later years he devoted his studies to the biology of aging, and wrote numerous articles on this subject. He edited the magazine Growth for 17 years. Before his death he had nearly finished a book on a new look at evolution. In 1981 the new wing of the science building at Goucher was named for him. Gairdner was active at the Grace United Methodist Church.

Gairdner was married to Ann Reed Faben, herself a biologist, in June 1937. She survives him, as do four children, Charles G. Moment '59, Sarah Atis, Ann Combs, and Jane Jordan, and eight grandchildren. Gairdner was part of a Princeton family: his uncles were Rev. John James Moment '96 and J. Frederick Cross '06; cousins were Henry B. Cross Jr. '36, James F. Cross III '37, deceased, Deming S. Cross '38, and Robert Moment '38, deceased.

Gairdner was a faithful attender of reunions. We shall miss his widely inquiring mind and his warm friendship, and our deep sympathy is with Ann and their family.

The Class of 1928

Harold Massie Jones '30

HAROLD DIED after a lengthy illness Sept. 9, 1990, in Richmond, Va. He had attended major reunions consistently and had reservations for our 60th but had to cancel. At Princeton Harold was a member of the varsity crew sophomore and junior years, sang with the Glee Club, and belonged to Cap and Gown.

After graduation he returned to his home town of Red Star, Payette Cty., W.V., and joined the Amherst Fuel Co., a family business. This was a lifetime career, with the early years spent in Charleston and later years in Richmond as a V.P. and director of the company.

From 1942 to 1945 Harold was a captain in the U.S. Army Quartermaster Corps and in the same period married Jane Coleman, who survives. Harold and Jane were active in the Richmond community and church, with a special emphasis on the Va. Home for Boys, where Harold was on the Board of Governors.

Survivors also include a son, Harold Massie Jones Jr.; a daughter, Katherine Talafiero Jones; a stepdaughter, Jane Sloan Casini; three stepsons, James Turner Sloan III, John Williams Sloan, and Claude Coleman Sloan. To all these and his many friends, the Class sends sincere condolences.

The Class of 1930

Joseph Tappen Edgar '32

JOE EDGAR died Nov. 27, 1990, in Bar Harbor, Me., where he had lived for many years, owning and operating a children's clothing store during that entire time. He prepared at Newark Academy, and at Princeton he was in the Glee Club, University Band, the freshman baseball team, the Interclub Executive Committee, the Intra-collegiate Athletic Committee, and Key and Seal Club.

During his years at Bar Harbor, Joe became fascinated by politics and became an important voice in the affairs of his state. At various times he was the Maine Secretary of State, Speaker of the House, and a member of the State Senate. He labored hard and long and was eventually successful in establishing the Bluenose Ferry between Bar Harbor and Yarmouth, Nova Scotia, which brought large and long-lasting benefits to his hometown. He also served as a member of the town council, the Chamber of Commerce and the MDI Lions Club.

Joe was married to the former Margaret Sanford for 50 years. She predeceased him by only ten months. Surviving are a daughter, Margaret E. Gerald, a sister, Alice Whittelsey, and one grandchild. Our sympathies go to them in the loss of one who gave so much of himself to the public good. One man summed up Joe when he said: "He served his constituents well."

The Class of 1932

Edgar Mills Gemmell '34

ED GEMMELL, former administrative V.P. of the University, died peacefully after a long illness on Christmas night 1990. His friend Harold Dods called him "the most expert public relations office that any university could boast," with "a rare, indeed unique, combination of proficiencies." After he retired in 1965, Ed served as a consultant on organization and communication to a number of nonprofit institutions, including Princeton Gem was a former Class V.P. and '34's "resident intellectual." He won our Class Achievement Award in 1967, cited for his "leadership and creativity" in what he called "the persuasion business." He was instrumental in organizing and launching Annual Giving in 1939-40, and 50 years later he attended the fund's gala anniversary in Jadwin, which evoked many memories for him. He started the Princeton Today program, the Faculty-Alumni forums on Alumni Day, University magazine, and the Princeton conference.

In 1979 he married Isabelle McIntyre Gemmell, a cousin, who survives. To a friend he wrote, "How many newlyweds among your acquaintances have known each other for six-plus decades?" We extend our sympathies to Ibbey.

The Class of 1934

John Whitney Nixon '34

JOHN (NODDY) NIXON, whose career was as an engineer with Shell Oil and National Distillers, died Dec. 4 after a long illness. His wife, Barbara predeceased him by 13 months. Both of them, along with their four children, attended Reunions in 1989. "Princeton has always been a special part of Daddy's life," one of his daughters wrote, "and so were his friends from '34. Thank goodness we could all make the 55th."

Noddy retired in 1971. Two years later he and his wife moved to Avery Island, La., her ancestral home. (She was Barbara McIlhenny, of the Tabasco family.) They built a house there on 25 acres, "most of it heavily wooded," Noddy said. "The most noise we hear is the stamping of the deer." Owing to his illness, aggravated by a fractured lower vertebra that caused him chronic back pain, he came north a year ago to be with his son in Newtown Square, Penn. He died in a rehab center near there.

His son, John W. Nixon Jr., survives, as do three daughters, Penny (Mrs. Scott C.) Puckett, Josephine (Jo) Nixon, and Brena (Mrs. Richard B.) Parsons, and five grandchildren. To them we offer our sincere sympathies.

The Class of 1934

Alfred Dennis Sieminski '34

AL SIEMINSKI, who served four terms as a congressman from N.J., collapsed and died Dec. 13, 1990, apparently of a heart attack, while attending a Christmas party near his home in Vienna, Va. He was first elected to the House in 1950, while on active duty with the Army in Korea. He had volunteered for combat duty after winning the Democratic primary in the 13th district, leaving his wife to campaign for him.

Described by a classmate as "a competitor par excellence," Al was our Class agent from 1979 to 1980, his service being cut short by doctor's orders. Among his fondest memories as an undergraduate was his rowing at Princeton. He was a member of the 150-lb. crew that went to Henley in 1933. (He had been to Henley in 1929, with the Hun School crew.) "We are flooded with memories," he once wrote, "that are almost uncontrollable emotionally. It is now (in retirement) that the wallop of Old Nassau rocks us each time we Go Back!"

Survivors include his widow, the former Countess Marie Czarkowska-Golejewska, three step-children, and five grandchildren. To them we offer our sincere sympathies.

The Class of 1934

Ewing H. Buysse '35

"WING" BUYSSE died Apr. 26, 1990, in a Hanover, N.H. hospital of complications from multiple burns suffered in an accidental fire at his home in Windsor, Vt. Apr. 8, 1990. He was born Nov. 21, 1911, in St. Louis, Mo. and prepared for Princeton at Browning School in N.Y.C. As an undergraduate he roomed all four years off campus with Abram Groff Hober. He majored in French at Princeton and also graduated from Wharton School of Business at U.Penn.

He was a commissioned U.S. Army officer for 36 years, serving by 1944 as a major in the War Dept. in Washington D.C., and retiring as a colonel.

He married Josephine Verduin O'Roark in Arlington, Va. May 30, 1957, and for reasons of health they moved to Windsor, Vt. that year to operate a 165-acre dairy farm, and occupation in which neither had any experience, but soon learned how by government pamphlets, trial and error, and advice of neighbors. After several years they also became dealers in power equipment, including Gravelly Tractors, Johnson Snowmobiles, Cushman Tracksters, and B.M.W. motorcycles, and acquired a fine business reputation throughout New England. "Wing" retired in 1978, when his eyesight began to fail due to a detached retina unsuccessfully operated on.

He is survived by his widow, Josefine, an adopted daughter, Sharon L. Conklin, four grandchildren, and three nieces, to all of whom the Class extends sincere sympathy.

The Class of 1935

Charles John Ruddy Jr. '37

A KIND AND LOYAL friend to many, retired lawyer and lifelong Brooklyn resident Jack Ruddy died Nov. 17, 1990, at Victory Memorial Hospital, Brooklyn of heart failure.

Jack was active in publications, soccer, and squash at Poly Prep and at Princeton majored in history and graduated with honors. He was a member of Arbor Inn.

After graduating from Harvard Law School and serving in the U.S. Army 1943-1946, mostly at the San Francisco Port of Embarkation, Jack was a lawyer with the American Petroleum Inst. 1946 to 1971, being an associate in the Legal and Legislative Section of its American Petroleum Industries Committee. He was a faithful supporter of Annual Giving. He left no immediate family. Jack will be missed greatly.

The Class of 1937

Evarts Ziegler '38

EVARTS ZIEGLER, Hollywood literary agent, died of cancer at his home in Pasadena, Calif., Nov. 24, 1990. Zig prepared at Lenox School. He majored in English, graduating with honors, and continued on at Princeton for his M.A. He was a member of Colonial Club.

He began his career doing literary work with the Jaffe Agency in Los Angeles. During WWII he was in Anti-Aircraft, then in the O.S.S., rising to captain. In 1958 he founded Ziegler, Hellman & Ross, a literary talent agency which handled career management for movie directors, producers and writers, and packaged TV programs. He merged his firm with International Creative Management in 1983 and retired in 1985. Among his clients were John Dunne '54, John Sacret Young '69, William Goldman, and Mario Puzo.

He was a traveler, bird-watcher, and shell-seeker. His extensive collection of modern American first editions will be sold to establish the Evarts Ziegler Scholarship Fund at Princeton. Thus his generosity with gifted people will go on forever.

He is survived by his widow, the former Maryanne Tucker, three daughters, Susan Arthur, Cynthia Ziegler, and Faith Cleveland. They have our sincere sympathy.

The Class of 1938

Jaquelin James Daniel '39

JACK DIED Aug. 7, 1990, in Jacksonville, Fla. The fourth generation of his family to live there, he was widely known and honored as the father of that city's consolidated government and one of its most prominent business and civic leaders.

Jack earned his law degree in 1942, joined his father's law firm, then entered the Navy, commanding a division of motor torpedo boats in the invasion of Normandy. He returned to the law, then moved on to serve as president of a major mortgage banking firm. In 1960 he became publisher of the Florida Times-Union and five other newspapers of Florida Publishing Co. He resigned in 1982 which only freed him to devote even more time to what one editorialist called "a lifetime of noble service to this city and state." During 15 years as member of the State Board of Regents he played a major role in expanding and improving Florida's university system. He served Princeton as a trustee 1972-76. In 1968 we presented to him our 1939 Award in recognition of distinguished achievement bringing honor to the University and our Class.

To Jack's widow, the former Anne Page Coachman, their daughters Eleanor (McCrane) and Jaquelin (Cook), two sisters, and three grandchildren, we offer our sincere sympathy.

The Class of 1939

David Stadden Clark Jr. '48

DAVID STADDEN CLARK JR. died May 22, 1990.

Graduating from Haverford School magna cum laude, at Princeton David was a member of Charter Club and majored in history. He was active in the Glee Club and Chapel Choir. He served in the Navy 1944-46. David's business career began with the Home Insurance Co. in Philadelphia. He later became asst. manager of Johnson & Higgins, insurance brokers in Philadelphia. David had many happy summers on Nantucket and also spent much time at Buck Hill Falls in the Poconos. He was always very proud of his Princeton heritage, and his wry sense of humor served him well in all circumstances.

David is survived by four daughters, Linda, Barbara, Debbie, and Karen, along with five grandchildren, and a sister, Ruthanne Groseclose. Our sympathies go to his family. He will be sorely missed by all who knew him.

The Class of 1948

Thomas Baird Bissett '49

THE CLASS LOST a standout member and its third-oldest classmate when Tom Bissett died of cardiac arrest at age 71 while scuba diving with his wife, Edith, in New Guinea May 31, 1990. Born Dec. 15, 1918, at Parry Sound, Canada, Tom prepared for college at Santa Ana Polytechnic H.S., Santa Ana, Calif. Following high school he attended Santa Ana Junior College, then served as a lieutenant in the Navy in the Pacific Theater from Feb. 1942 to July 1947. Transferring to Princeton in Sept. 1947, he majored in electrical engineering and graduated with highest honors. Tom won the American Inst. of Electrical Engineers prize for its Princeton chapter, and was elected to Sigma Xi Society. He was the technical director for the Campus Recording Service.

Tom married Edith Whittier Holmes in 1946. After graduation, he earned his master's at Stanford and joined Hughes Aircraft, working on control systems projects, before switching to Ramo Wooldridge Corp. Five years later he formed the Bissett-Berman Corp. After selling the company in 1974, and two years of consulting, Tom retired to enjoy life. He kept busy with various projects, plus sailing, skiing, and in the last few years, golf. In addition to his widow, Edith; son, Thomas; and daughter, Barbara; Tom is survived by three grandchildren. To all Tom's family, the Class extends its utmost sympathy at the loss of this very special man.

The Class of 1949

Walter Johnson Borden '50

JACK DIED at age 61 of a heart attack while jogging Sept. 26, 1990. He came to Princeton from Trenton H.S. with six classmates, following in the footsteps of his father, William S. Borden '15, and his brother, William S. Borden Jr. '45. At Princeton, Jack played freshman basketball and joined Dial Lodge. He received his A.B. at Muhlenberg College.

After Korean War service as a naval intelligence officer, Jack returned to his family insurance business, later assuming its presidency. Devoted to Trenton's historical preservation and civic concerns, he was a trustee of the Friends of the Free Public Library, Council on Human Relations, and Greater Trenton Symphony.

Jack had an ardent loyalty to Princeton, its traditions, scholarship, and physical beauty—and particularly to the Class of '50, which he cheerfully served as a member of the Executive Committee and as reunion chairman. His diverse interests included tennis, mountain climbing, classical music, foreign language and travel. He often enjoyed visiting "Roundhouse," which he designed and built on St. John, U.S.V.I.

The Class extends its sympathy to Jack's son, Douglas; daughters, Carol Lynn Terrell, Nina Kostinas, and Christine Perry; brother, William; sister, Barbara Floyd; and 11 grandchildren. We will miss his quiet mien, friendliness, optimistic outlook, and good company.

The Class of 1950

Earl John Schulze '54

EARL DIED Nov. 21, 1990, after four years of fighting leukemia, in Ann Arbor, Mich., where he was prof. of English at the university. Coming to Princeton from Carl Schurz H.S., Chicago, Earl lettered in tennis and basketball, joined Cannon and wrote his A.C.P. history thesis on literary disillusionment in the 1920s. His doctorate from Northwestern dedicated him to teaching with a career focus on Shelley.

National tennis tours had early taught Earl the subtle tension between decency and competition. An unassuming fighter, Earl could always yield to life with grace, giving generously beyond measure to all who needed him, and he joyfully secured the career of his daughter, now conductor of the Kenosha Symphony Orchestra.

Taking teaching, art, love, and sport so seriously, Earl took himself only lightly, with ready laughter, and knowing how to live, he made the generous example of his last years a gentle Socratic teaching to others how to die. Our Class offers deep sympathy for the vacuum Earl's passing leaves for his widow Aileen, daughter Elizabeth, stepchildren Scott, Carla, Marcia, brother Erwin, father Erwin and so many friends.

The Class of 1954

Jonathan K. Graves '57

JOHN DIED Sept. 17, 1990 of lung cancer after a courageous battle and mis-diagnosis by Japanese doctors in Tokyo, where he was stationed by Citibank.

At Princeton, John left us in the middle of his sophomore year for academic reasons. He immediately joined the Army Language School, learned Chinese, served in Taiwan, and mustered out in 1958.

John then matriculated at Columbia Univ., where he majored in history and graduated in 1961. He continued his education, graduating in 1963 with an M.I.A.

Later that year, he joined Citibank and continued with them until his illness. He spent most of 15 years in Asia and moved more than 20 times. He was active in sports, including sailing (his first love), tennis, and squash. He married Sally Terry and raised three children: Tim, Barbara, and Laurie. In 1989, the family retired to Bath, Me. Sally mentioned how John loved Princeton and was always loyal to it.

To his widow, children, and mother, Janet, the Class of '57 extends its deepest sympathy.

The Class of 1957

David P. Franks '72

DAVID FRANKS died in a motorcycle accident July 4, 1990, near his home in Levittown, N.Y. David entered Princeton with the Class of '73, and later, as an English major, joined the Class of '72. He was sports editor for the DAILY PRINCETONIAN.

After Princeton, David worked for a year with U.P.I., then entered N.Y.U. Law School, graduating in 1976. He then joined Harcourt Brace Jovanovich as legal editor, and continued to attend N.Y.U. where he earned a master's in trade regulation and international law. From 1981 to 1983 he worked as a law clerk with the Appellate Division of the N.Y. Supreme Court. Then in 1983 he joined the law firm of Rivkin, Radler, Bayh, Hart & Kremer, where he became a partner in 1986.

Friends remember David's sense of humor, quick wit, and lightheartedness. His hobbies included fencing, sky diving, and Tae Kwon Do. He enjoyed reading history and was taking airplane piloting lessons. He worked on the Schools Committee and was active in several civic organizations, most notably the Citizens Union.

David was the father of four children—Mercedes Marie, David, Edward, and Mark. It is to them, and his widow, Mercedes, his parents, Mr. and Mrs. Clifford Franks, and his four brothers and five sisters that we extend our deepest sympathy.

The Class of 1972

Frederick Irving Maish '77

FRED MAISH died Oct. 23, 1990, ending a courageous struggle against cystic fibrosis that he had waged since birth. Although fighting this disease required great effort, Fred focused so well on enjoying his life and sharing it with others that few knew he had cystic fibrosis.

Fred came to Princeton from Arlington, Va., where he was his high school's salutatorian. He majored in mechanical and aerospace engineering and was on the sailing team for three years. Fred joined Tower Club in his sophomore year, contributed articles to the PRINCETON ENGINEER, and served on the selection committee for the Dean of Student Affairs. He was active in the Episcopal Church.

After graduation, Fred earned his master's in aeronautical engineering from the Univ. of Michigan and went to work for Martin Marietta in Orlando, Fla. From Martin, he went to work for the Los Alamos Natl. Laboratory and then Sandia Natl. Laboratories in New Mexico. His health forced him to take disability leave in 1987. Fred underwent a series of hospitalizations at the N.I.H., including experimental treatments that may eventually help others with C.F. live longer. Fred's spirit seldom flagged as he concentrated on better ways to fight C.F.

Fred is survived by his widow, Pascale; his parents; his brother, Alex '77; and his sister, Darby. To all of them, the Class extends its deepest sympathy.

The Class of 1977

Watching Operation Desert Storm With Memories of Puff the Magic Dragon

ON JANUARY 17, as my thirteen-year-old son and I watched telecasts of the pyrotechnics over Baghdad following the first night's air raids, he unexpectedly asked, "Is this the way the war was in Vietnam?"

I wondered how I could answer him without stumbling over clichés, so I decided to try a few anecdotes.

One night in the spring of 1966, I told him, two fellow naval officers and I sat in a bar atop the Rex Hotel in downtown Saigon, listening to a Vietnamese singer and band render "I Left My Heart in San Francisco" while watching an attack on Communist positions across the river.

Parachute flares framed a sound-and-light show of tracer fire from the ground. Suddenly, a tongue of flame bled from the side of a slowly circling aircraft with its port and starboard lights on. A moment later, the throaty roar of Puff the Magic Dragon proclaimed that hundreds of rounds per second had churned into mincemeat every living thing below in an area the size of a football field.

Then as now, Americans hoped our control of the air and sea would force our enemy to capitulate. Then as now, we had to relearn two ancient lessons: it's easy to start a war but difficult to end one, and victory hinges on the seizure and holding of territory and the unquestioned vanquishing of the enemy. The only military difference between the Vietnam and Gulf wars—other than the obvious ones of terrain and climate—is that twenty-five years ago raw power, not pinpoint precision, was the hallmark of our most sophisticated military hardware.

One afternoon in the summer of 1967, went my second anecdote, I was walking off the airfield at Tan Son Nhut when a network stringer ran by carrying a film sack. "Which plane is going to the States?" he asked.

Although military pilots were forbidden to carry civilian goodies, I knew a number did for the extra cash. In a world of infinite corruption, it seemed a small sin. I pointed to a transport already taxiing toward a runway. The stringer sprinted ahead, the pilot saw him coming, opened his window, and caught the sack as it was tossed up. The stringer came running back. "What a great place for a war!" he declared. "You realize that, thanks to the international date line, that film will be broadcast in the States tonight? We'll never fight a war in the Middle East; Walter Cronkite wouldn't stand for it! No one would waste his time with film that was already history!"

Cronkite's successors now preside over panels of experts marveling at the surgical accuracy of modern weapons. Few commentators, however, consider the comparable revolution in communications technology that has made it possible for them to report a Middle Eastern war with greater immediacy than was dreamed of during the Vietnam era.

Thanks to satellite communications, hundreds of millions of people knew that bombing had begun in Baghdad more than an hour before our political leaders confirmed it. Two days later, at least as many people heard ABC's man in Jerusalem relay a request from the Israeli Defense Ministry that the network stop broadcasting a detailed map of Scud explosions in downtown Tel Aviv for fear the Iraqis would use it to plot more missile attacks.

The short-term policy implications of such incidents are obvious. Less obvious is what such immediacy has done to our capacity for reflection. Considered judgment is valueless in a culture where the meaning of time is reduced to what's "live," and therefore top priority, and what's "history," and thus irrelevant.

Two more anecdotes: My first summer in Saigon, I got a call from my classmate Dale Bell '60, who'd come over to produce a documentary for public TV with a group of senior war correspondents. Would I like to sit in?

Three days later, I was on the roof of the Caravelle Hotel, listening to Charles Mohr of The New York Times and Malcolm Browne of the Associated Press and several others debate the fate of the Far East. Their conversation had just enough disagreement to keep things lively. They were, however, unanimous in their response to the final question: "What influence will the press have on the outcome of this war?"

"None," was their gloomy assessment.

At the time I was astonished. I thought we might lose the war because the U.S. government was convinced it had power it in fact lacked, while the press took lightly the enormous power it did have.

As late as 1969, when I served as an interpreter-translator at the Paris Peace Talks, the first things the ambassadors and generals read each morning—even before the latest top-secret "traffic"—were the editorial pages of The New York Times and The Washington Post. Every member of our delegation assumed that what James Reston or Tom Wicker had to say affected White House policy. Neither we nor anyone in the White House anticipated that the Watergate scandal, which broke just three years thence, would be print journalism's Last Hurrah.

By the end of that spring, I was carrying an awful burden of secrets, including knowledge that because the Republicans were convinced that they would succeed where the Democrats had failed, the war would drag on until Richard Nixon needed to end it to get reelected. I decided to leave governmental service and start my life over in an unrelated field.

I arrived back in the States late one evening, and too psyched up to sleep, I sat up watching Johnny Carson, whose guests that night included Sammy Davis, Jr., and Buddy Hackett. One of these celebrities began wisecracking about the Peace Talks. The others joined in. The audience loved it. I was fascinated by the thought that our delegation's efforts constituted a lesser reality for many millions of viewers and voters than Carson's late-night antics. I then realized what Charles Mohr and the others had meant about having no influence. In an age of instant imagery and political impressionism, the opinions—even the will—of the people can be more effectively manipulated by "personalities" than all the world's journalists and writers combined.

By the twenty-first century, relatively few people will know or care what happened in the years before the invention of the camera. The adjective learned will mean only "up to date," and most policy makers will be so preoccupied with approval ratings, they'll have little time to ponder whirlwinds of fresh information, much less read a good book.

—George Reiger '60

George Reiger, a writer in Locustville, Virginia, did two tours in Vietnam as a U.S. Navy interpreter.

The Princeton University Lamp In Hand Cast Bronze

An exclusive offer to University Alumni

The enduring beauty of bronze. A stately reminder of the tradition and excellence that mark the heritage of the University. The Princeton University Lamp, crafted of hand-cast, lacquered bronze by a respected American founder, is a symbol of these fine qualities and of your achievement.

Offered by Alumni Unlimited, the Princeton University Lamp weighs 7 lbs., stands 27" high and features a detailed bronze re-creation of the University Seal on its base. The Belgian Linen shade — a fully fabric-lined, piped, cut-corner square design, available in Antique White and Natural Linen — is manufactured by Roseart, one of America's finest shade houses. A high/low socket offers the convenience of two-way illumination with any standard single-wattage bulb.

The bronze Princeton University Lamp can be yours for $250.00 (includes shipping & handling).

Order today.
Enjoy it for a lifetime.

To order, call toll-free
1-800-800-6989.
Mastercard, Visa accepted.
Or order by mail.
PA residents include 6% sales tax.
Send check or money order payable to:
Alumni Unlimited
300 E. Market St.
Hellam, PA 17406

I'M PLEASED TO ANNOUNCE THAT METLIFE HAS SOME OF THE BEST MUTUAL FUN.

"FUNDS," SWEETIE.

For instance, MetLife Securities, Inc. now offers the State Street Investment Trust, one of the nation's first mutual funds. Founded in 1924, the Trust has an impressive record of growth. A record achieved by maintaining a diversified equity portfolio of high-quality, well-established companies in a broad range of industries. The Trust has paid dividends every year since 1925.*

And it's a unique opportunity; the State Street Investment Trust has just recently been reopened to new investors for the first time since 1945.

Of course, the Trust is only one of many different MetLife-State Street mutual funds. There are income funds, growth funds, asset allocation funds and money market funds. And they're appropriate for many different investment objectives.

So talk to your MetLife rep, to get the information you need, to help you decide which funds suit you best.

Call 1-800-433-8356.

Please read the funds' prospectuses carefully before you invest or send money.
They contain more complete information, including charges and expenses.
*Past performance is no guarantee of future results.

© 1991 MetLife Securities, Inc., One Madison Avenue, NY, NY 10010

MetLife will send you one or two useful brochures about mutual funds. Just check the appropriate boxes below, fill in your name and address, and mail this coupon to MetLife Securities, Metropolitan Plaza, P.O. Box 30421, Tampa, FL 33630-9941.

Name _____
Address _____
City _____ State _____ Zip _____

- ☐ "Why People Invest in Mutual Funds"
☐ "Family of Funds"—A menu of the variety of mutual funds available through MetLife.

GET MET. IT PAYS.®

MetLife®

Digitized by Google
PEANUTS Characters © 1958, 1960, United Feature Syndicate, Inc.

ILN

PRINCETON

ALUMNI WEEKLY

MARCH 20, 1991

THE LITTLE ANGEL OF TIJUANA

Digitized by Google

Princeton-On-Tape

Learning is the enterprise of a lifetime

Did you miss Alumni Day 1991 or Reunions? Do you want to make better use of your commuting time? Are you tired of watching TV news but have no time to read?

You can hear Princeton lectures and panels in your car or living room. Listen to Princeton-On-Tape — audio cassettes of talks and discussions with distinguished faculty and guest speakers.

Continue your Princeton education and share the enterprise with classmates, friends, and family. Give Princeton-On-Tape to your favorite Princetonian or would-be-Princetonian as a birthday, holiday, or anytime present.

"Learning is the enterprise of a lifetime," said Woodrow Wilson, 1879, but even a lifetime is not enough to learn everything Princeton has to offer. Get started with Princeton-On-Tape. Send for our free catalogue. Write Debra Wharton, Alumni Council, PO Box 291, Princeton, New Jersey 08544, or call 609-258-5854; Fax 609-258-1281.

Send me my FREE
Princeton-On-Tape catalogue

Name _____

Class or affiliation _____

Date _____

Address _____

Phone (day) _____

(evening) _____

Princeton-On-Tape

☒ Alumni Day 1991

- D9101 WOODROW WILSON AWARD RECIPIENT
Laurence S. Rockefeller '32,
Reflections on Princeton and Beyond
- D9102 MADISON MEDALIST
Steven Weinberg '57, Dreams of a Final Theory
- D9103 Evening with Joyce Carol Oates
Joyce Carol Oates, Roger S. Berlind '52 Professor in the Humanities
Is the U.S. Economy Financially Fragile?
- D9104 Ben S. Bernanke, professor of economics and public affairs
Caricature and Culture
- D9106 Theodore J. Ziolkowski, Dean of the Graduate School and Class of 1900
Professor of Modern Languages
Can Computers Design Computers?
- D19107 Andre La Paugh, associate professor of computer science
Writing Lives: Biography and Autobiography
- D9108 Arnold Rampersad, Woodrow Wilson Professor of Literature and director of the Program in American Studies
Careers Seminar
- D9109 Alumni panelists discuss their undergraduate majors and present careers
Education and Ethics—Closing the Gap
- D9110 President Shapiro leads a faculty panel discussion on the role of the modern university in transmitting values in an increasingly pluralistic and global society.

Alumni
Princeton

Council
University

PRINCETON

ALUMNI WEEKLY

CONTINUING THE ALUMNI PRINCETONIAN, FOUNDED IN 1894

FEATURE

- 10 HOPE FLOWERS IN A COLONIA
*Christine Brady Kosko '79 Brings a Vision
To a Tijuana Shantytown*
by Daniel N. White '65

DEPARTMENTS

- 3 LETTERS
- 5 PRINCETON NOTEBOOK
University Begins New Campaign Against Student Drinking; Selective Clubs Enjoy New Popularity
- 6 ALUMNI DAY
*Rockefeller, Weinberg Headline
Seventy-Sixth Alumni Day Festivities*
- 9 ON THE CAMPUS
Writing Center Helps Students Polish Their Prose and Cons
by Gayle Wald GS
- 16 BOOKS
- 18 SPORTS
Betty Constable, in Swan Song, Leads Women's Squash to Twelfth Howe Cup
- 22 CLASS NOTES
- 37 MEMORIALS
- 40 ESSAY
The Mandatory Senior Thesis: Is It Necessary?
by Lawrence Stone

On the Cover

*Christine Brady Kosko
'79 poses with students at the school she built in Colonia Esperanza.
Photographs by Daniel
N. White '65.*

FROM THE ARCHIVES

In the first year of coeducation at Princeton, Jennifer Macleod, president of the Princeton chapter of NOW (the National Organization for Women), spoke on women's issues to a gathering at Stevenson Hall, the university dining and social facility created out of the former Key & Seal and Court clubs (hence the campaign poster of Adlai E. Stevenson '22). This photograph ran in the PAW of February 24, 1970, to illustrate an article titled "Women & the University" by Elaine Showalter, then about to receive her Ph.D.; she now chairs Princeton's English department.

PHOTO BY LONDON Y. JONES, JR. '66

J. I. MERRITT '66, Editor
ANDREW C. MYTELKA '85, Managing Editor
NUALA O'CONNOR '89, Associate Editor
D. W. MILLER '89, Staff Writer

STACY M. WZOLA, Art Director
R. T. HOWELL, Production Manager
LORRAINE DONEKER, Graphic Assistant
NANCY S. MACMILLAN, Business Manager
LOLLY O'BRIEN, Advertising Director

BOARD OF EDITORIAL DIRECTION
EDWARD R. WEIDLEIN '68, Chairman
LISA B. BELKIN GELB '82 • CHRISTOPHER V. CONNELL '71
LONDON Y. JONES '66 • ELLIOTT D. LEE '74 • '77
PATRICIA H. MARKS '72 • JOHN A. MCPHEE '53

PUBLICATION BOARD
DOROTHY L. BEDFORD '78, Chairman
ROBERT K. DURKEE '69 • ROBY HARRINGTON III '51
WALTER H. LIPPINCOTT, JR. '60 • PETER O. PRICE '62
PETER G. SMITH '46 • DANIEL N. WHITE '65

NATIONAL ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVE
ROBERT F. SENNOTT, JR.
Ivy League Magazine Network
254 Fifth Ave., New York, NY 10001 • (212) 684-5603
LOCAL ADVERTISING/PRINCETON EXCHANGE
LOLLY O'BRIEN (609) 258-4886

The Princeton Alumni Weekly is an independent magazine supported by alumni class subscriptions and by paid advertising. Its purpose is to record news of the alumni and at the same time to review without partiality the achievements and problems of the administration, the faculty, and the student body of Princeton University. The views expressed in the Alumni Weekly are those of signed contributors or the editor and do not necessarily represent official positions of the university.

PUBLISHED BY
PRINCETON UNIVERSITY PRESS
41 William St., Princeton, NJ 08540
Telephone (609) 258-4885
TWX 510-685-2306 UNIV PRSS PRIN • Fax (609) 258-6305

ELECTRONIC PAW BBS: (609) 258-3602

Materials can be transmitted to our offices via telecommunications, using the upload facility in the file-transfer section of the Electronic PAW computer bulletin board system. Its protocols are 300/1200/2400 baud, eight data bits, one stop bit, and no parity. It is online 24 hours a day.

PRINCETON ALUMNI WEEKLY (ISSN 0149-9270)

Vol. 91, No. 12, March 20, 1991
Printed by William Byrd Press, Richmond, Va. Annual subscription $19.50 (foreign postage $5 extra); single copies $1.50. All orders must be paid in advance. Copyright © 1991 Princeton University Press. All rights reserved. Reproduction in whole or in part without permission is prohibited. Second-class postage paid at Princeton, N.J., and at additional mailing office.

POSTMASTER: Send address changes to PAW Address Changes, 3175 Princeton Pike, Lawrenceville, NJ 08648.

Cathedral Village

Security Has Many Meanings...

At Cathedral Village, Security is more than just the feeling of safety that our 24-hour Security Force provides. There is so much more...

- ...We are an established, financially sound, and fully Accredited Continuing Care Retirement Community.
- ...We have an exceptional, caring staff to serve all of our residents.
- ...Experienced Health Care professionals are always available, if needed.
- ...Security is knowing that friends and companionship are close by, yet privacy is respected.

At this time we are adding 32 two-bedroom apartments. These are luxury apartments with a separate dining room adjacent to the kitchen. We are currently accepting applications for admission in the early summer of 1991.

Come see for yourself all that is meant by Security at Cathedral Village. Call now to arrange a visit with one of our counselors.

Cathedral
Village

600 East Cathedral Road
Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19128
(215) 487-1300

Cathedral Village is a Nonprofit, Nondenominational Continuing Care Retirement Community Accredited by the Continuing Care Accreditation Commission
Sponsored by the American Association of Homes for the Aging.

Remembering Dana Munro

I was saddened by your notice of the death of Dana G. Munro at the impressive age of ninety-seven (FAW, October 24). You mentioned that he was chief of the Latin American division of the State Department and was minister to Haiti for two years. It should not be forgotten that he also served as minister to Nicaragua for a number of years when that was the top diplomatic title for a U.S. envoy there, as I assume it was during his posting to Haiti. In effect, Munro was the U.S. ambassador to both countries.

In the classroom, and especially when lecturing on Latin American history, Munro showed an uncanny knack for cutting through all the confusing and detailed turbulence of the region to give clear and concise overviews of significant trends and developments in the areas under discussion. Furthermore, he did it in a simplified and laid-back way that almost belittled his deep sensitivity to, and knowledge of, Latin America.

As an undergraduate, I was fascinated with the subject of Latin American dictatorships and wanted to do my thesis on one of them. Munro suggested that the Somoza regime in Nicaragua was a classic dictatorship that I could get my young academic teeth into. Background research quickly proved that virtually nothing of value had been written on the subject. When I pointed this out to him, he simply chuckled and suggested I "go down there," get my own materials, and write a good résumé and critique of the Somoza regime! Happily, the Wilson School provided the funding for the trip, Munro provided important introductions for me to his friends and colleagues, and the sweaty and intimidating project was undertaken and completed successfully. I can't understate the importance of that project and of Dana Munro's guidance to my undergraduate experience and to the whole of my later life.

I might add that, in the course of my business career, I spent twenty-six years in Latin America, mainly in Panama, Ecuador, and Mexico. I would also add, with considerable class pride, that Tony Quainton '55 was the U.S. ambassador to Nicaragua during the extremely sensitive early years of the Sandinista regime.

RAYMOND F. FITZSIMMONS '55
Orange, Calif.

Arthur on the Go

Respecting the reminiscence by Arthur Holden '12 on Woodrow Wilson, "Cold Handshake, Warm Heart" (FAW, January 23), you might be interested in the following vignette.

The summer before last, my friend and neighbor Charles Lawrence '11 attained his hundredth birthday. There was a gala celebration at his home on Long Island, and it was my good fortune during dinner to sit next to Charlie's old Princeton friend Arthur Holden.

Arthur had come that afternoon from Washington, Connecticut, a considerable distance, in a small plane piloted by his grandson. At dinner, we spoke of the Princetons we knew and of presidents Wilson and Dodds, of Charlie Lawrence as a bon vivant and country squire, and of New York City over the years—its buildings, politics, and various personalities. His recollections were quick and clear, and his observations crisp and mostly kind (more so probably than my own). All too soon our talk stopped for the reading of messages: two from presidents (of the United States and Princeton) and many more. Then Charlie spoke with his usual charm and wry wit.

Meanwhile, ominous clouds were gathering over Stony Brook Harbor, forming a dramatic backdrop to the fireworks salute to Charlie that concluded the festivities. I urged Arthur and his grandson to stay the night with us just across the harbor and fly back in the morning. Arthur said they would go to our local airport and see how things looked.

At home, I watched the storm develop. Then a small plane came over the house, banked by Charlie's, and headed northwest over Long Island Sound. The storm moved right in behind it.

The next day, Evie Lawrence called to say that Arthur had arrived safely in Connecticut: he thanked me for the invitation to spend the night but "had things to do at home"—perhaps attending to his duties as president and secretary of the Class of 1912.

Any article on Arthur Holden would have to be titled "Warm Handshake, Lively Mind, Strong Heart."

PAUL WINDELS, JR. '44
New York, N.Y.

"For the Record"

Before Peter Carry '64 gets too tired patting Sports Illustrated on the back for its coverage of Coach Carril (Letters, February 6), perhaps he should reflect on his magazine's coverage of the 1975 N.I.T. basketball tournament, which Princeton won. Back then, the N.C.A.A. basketball championship was much smaller than it is today, and the N.I.T. was still a quality tournament. Princeton's surprising victory rated neither a story nor even a paragraph, but rather only a sentence in the "For the Record" section. Well, better late than never.

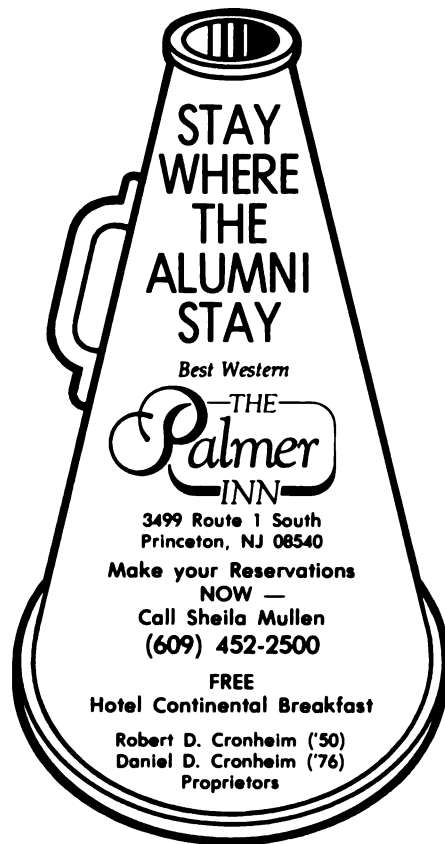

JAMES R. GRIFFITH '76
Utica, N.Y.

Kennedy Redux

Archivist Ben Primer's letter in your issue of February 6 accurately recounts the circumstances of John F. Kennedy's removal from the Princeton alumni rolls. But there is more to the story.

It begins at a meeting of the Class of 1939 leadership in the summer of 1946. A major topic of discussion was tightening up our class list, which had received very little attention during World War II. We recalled that seven men, including J.F.K., had entered with us in the fall of 1935 but

RESERVE NOW!
CLASS REUNIONS
June 6th – 9th

STAY WHERE THE ALUMNI STAY

Best Western

THE Palmer INN

3499 Route 1 South
Princeton, NJ 08540

Make your Reservations
NOW —
Call Sheila Mullen
(609) 452-2500

FREE
Hotel Continental Breakfast

Robert D. Cronheim ('50)
Daniel D. Cronheim ('76)
Proprietors

Everything you expect
from a vacation paradise.

Beaches, Tennis, Golf, Dining,
Entertainment, Shopping,
Relaxation

Ralph Locke Islands, Inc.
P.O. Box #800
Waccabuc, N.Y. 10597
Toll Free Nationwide
(800)-223-1108

The Buccaneer
ST. CROIX, U.S. VIRGIN ISLANDS

H. GROSS & CO.

*Come Scout Out Our Basketball Team.
It's a winning line-up!*

We've added a new player to our sweatshirt roster and two heavy hitters to our cap line-up. The 12 oz. heavyweight reverse weave sweatshirts are grey with printed Princeton Basketball design and contrasting orange & black striped ribbing. 90% cotton, 10% polyester. Crewneck. Sizes M, L, XL, XXL (oversized to allow for shrinkage). $48.00.

The corduroy Princeton Basketball cap comes in either white or black with embroidered orange lettering. One size fits all. $12.00.

Our fitted all wool baseball cap is black with an embroidered orange "P". Sizes 7, 7 1/4, 7 1/2, 7 3/4, 8, 8 1/4, 8 1/2, 8 3/4. $20.00.

(Add $4.00 for shipping and handling.)

Mail and Phone orders welcome.

Use your H. Gross Charge, Visa, MasterCard or American Express

STORE HOURS

Mon-Wed 9:30-6:00
Thurs-Fri 9:30-9:00
Saturday 9:30-6:00
Sunday 12:00-5:00

One Palmer Square
Princeton, NJ 08542
609-924-6088

At the sign of the goose.....®

had later withdrawn, eventually graduating from other colleges. It seemed a reasonable assumption that they would not become active Princetonians. As the acting class secretary, I was asked to write them and request permission to remove their names. All consented.

At our twenty-fifth reunion, in 1964, our class dedicated 1939 Hall. The next year, the university announced plans to raze Reunion Hall. Fred Fox '39, our alert class secretary, remembered that Jack Kennedy, during his brief time on the campus, had roomed in 9 South Middle Reunion with our classmates Rip Horton and Lem Billings. Following Fox's initiative, and with contributions from several of Jack's friends, we were able to salvage several artifacts from the room before the wreckers demolished the old dormitory. Among them were twenty-two bricks that had framed the original fireplace. Shortly thereafter, we installed a plaque in the south entry of 1939 Hall, framed in the same bricks. The inscription reads:

THESE BRICKS

ARE FROM THE FIREPLACE OF
9 SOUTH REUNION HALL
THE RESIDENCE AS A FRESHMAN
OF

JOHN FITZGERALD KENNEDY
35TH PRESIDENT OF THE UNITED STATES
WHO ENTERED PRINCETON WITH
THE CLASS OF 1939.

We believe this is a fitting way to commemorate our former classmate.

FREDERICK L. REDPATH '39
Upper Montclair, N.J.

Ivy "Heaven"

Assuming that Courtney N. Lemmon's letter in the February 6 PAW was not written in irony or jest: how delightful that Ms. Lemmon has discovered "heaven" at none other than Ivy Club.

It is, indeed, regrettable that the men of Ivy Club are now forced to mingle with females who will disrupt the pleasant atmosphere enjoyed by Ms. Lemmon. No doubt these women will be fighting tooth and nail to "get an Ivy man" (Ms. Lemmon's words), depriving non-member women of this opportunity.

Ms. Lemmon's new definition of "equal opportunity" has enabled me to reevaluate my Princeton experience. While all this time I thought I'd spent four years gaining an education, in reality I simply suffered crushing defeat among the masses of women battling to get Ivy men!

Thanks, Ms. Lemmon, for setting the record straight. And who knows? There may be thousands of other deluded women out there who believe they went to college to get an education.

MARGARET EMERY '90
San Francisco, Calif.

King at Princeton

For a new admission recruitment video we would like to include recordings of the speeches that the Reverend Dr. Martin Luther King gave at Princeton on visits here in 1960 and 1962. If anyone knows if such recordings exist, please contact me at 216 Nassau Hall (609-258-3044).

ANDREA DIEHL
Assistant to the President for Special Projects
Princeton, N.J.

AIRPORT LIMO

Newark
$19

609-587-6600
Hourly Service

JFK
$29

PRINCETON AIRPORTER

Don't hesitate to return for Reunions!
The Alcoholics Anonymous Haven
in Murray-Dodge will be open
Thursday, June 6 and Friday June 7
5 p.m. to midnight
Saturday, June 8 all day
Open meetings Friday and Saturday
at 5 p.m.

RULON - MILLER INC.

ESTABLISHED 1962

SUMNER RULON-MILLER III '61

EXECUTIVE FINANCIAL PLANNING

ESTATE PLANS

GROUP INSURANCE

PROFIT SHARING

RETIREMENT

261 MADISON AVENUE, SUITE 1200

NEW YORK, NY 10016

TEL 212 651-8660

FAX 212 697 6814

University Begins "Hearts and Minds" Campaign Against Student Drinking

DECLARING PRINCETON'S current efforts to combat alcohol abuse "inadequate," President Shapiro has appointed his chief assistant, O. Carl Wartenburg, to head a two-year campaign to identify and relieve the conditions that foster excessive drinking by undergraduates, including student attitudes toward alcohol. As the university's "alcohol liaison," Wartenburg will live on the campus for a year and work full-time with students and administrators to nurture a collaborative response to the crisis.

"We're in the middle of an epidemic," Wartenburg told The New York Times in February. Princeton has recently suffered some sensational alcohol-related incidents: fourteen members of the Sigma Alpha Epsilon fraternity were disciplined last year for serving underage drinkers at a party; last November, Bruce Miller '93, who reportedly had been drinking, was electrocuted when he climbed on top of the Dinky shuttle and touched the device that transmits power from the overhead wire to the train. Miller had to have one hand and both legs below the knees amputated. Less well known is that, on average, one hundred students are treated every year at McCosh Infirmary for excessive drinking. Dean of Students Eugene Y. Lowe '71 has cited alcohol as integral to nearly every serious disciplinary case his office has handled in recent years, particularly sexual assaults and vandalism.

The program, announced in late January, represents a sharp change from previous university initiatives, which have included stricter enforcement of state laws on underage drinking, severe penalties for infractions, and the establishment of a counseling center at McCosh Infirmary. Shapiro's decision appears to recognize that transforming students' attitudes is crucial to making any headway with the problem, and the selection of Wartenburg, a popular and effective administrator who has the ear of Shapiro and the trust of many students, suggests that the university considers the program a high priority.

"A considerable percentage of the time people spend at ease, they're spending anesthetized," Wartenburg said in his office in Nassau Hall. "It's no longer a social lubricant—it's becoming a focal point. People drink to get drunk." Wartenburg will move shortly into nearby Joseph Henry House, formerly the residence of the dean of the faculty. He said he decided to live there, at the edge of campus, in order to be accessible to students after hours and on weekends without prompting the sort of suspicions typified by a local newspaper headline: "Booze Czar to Prowl P'ton Campus."

Many critics blame excessive drinking at Princeton on its intense academic obligations and round-the-clock availability of beer at some of the eating clubs, but Wartenburg cites additional reasons. The lack of student-faculty interaction in social settings, he said, deprives undergraduates of role models for sensible drinking, and Reunions tends to showcase role models of an altogether different stripe.

The framers of the new program, to be funded by private donations, clearly envision progress as incremental, not immediate. Wartenburg, an ordained Unitarian minister who describes himself as an occasional drinker, began his assignment with a four-day visit in February to the Betty Ford Center, in Rancho Mirage, California, to observe alcohol treatment and counseling. After spending a few weeks assessing the situation at Princeton, Wartenburg will begin working with varsity athletic teams, eating clubs, and an array of other campus groups and individuals to figure out how to promote fundamental changes in undergraduate attitudes and behavior, and to mitigate institutional factors that make alcohol consumption so pervasive.

Carl Wartenburg

T.I. Leads Resurgence of Selective Clubs' Popularity

TIGER INN'S FIRST brush with coeducation prompted a surge in its popularity among sophomores. About 170 students bickered at T.I., up from 71 last year, and 107 were accepted. The club admitted 27 of 50 women, a higher ratio than for male bickerees. After T.I., the most popular selective clubs were Cap and Gown, which opened its doors to 95 of 135, and Cottage, which took 85 of 128. Tower Club accepted 63 of 95 applicants. Resuming its accustomed selectivity, Ivy Club, which first admitted women as members last fall, took in only 56 of its 106 bickerees. Ivy's appeal has rebounded enormously from a year ago, when it accepted 30 of a mere 50 supplicants.

Of the seven nonselective clubs, Charter and Terrace vied for bragging rights. Charter finished the lottery with a full section of 88 and a waiting list of 31, while Terrace drew 82 and a waiting list of 37. Cloister, the only other club to fill up after the first round of the draw, remained popular, taking in a section of 70 new sophomores and putting 26 on the waiting list. The newly consolidated Dial-Elm-Cannon Club ended the second round with 92 new members. After attracting just 28 students in the first round, Quadrangle experienced an organized, mass sign-in of sophomores who had been rejected—or "hosed," as current slang has it—by the bicker clubs; Quad finished with 100 new members. For the first time in years, no club garnered fewer than 50 new members.

Correction

IN OUR STORY about Wendy Kopp '89's Teach for America program (February 6), we incorrectly credited the two photographs that appeared on pages 10 and 11. The credit should have read: Photos courtesy Daniel Porter '88. □

Rockefeller, Weinberg Headline 76th Alumni Day Festivities

THE SEVENTY-SIXTH annual Alumni Day, on February 16, was an occasion for thinking big and feeling small. Steven Weinberg '57, who won the James Madison Medal, lectured on the hopes of physicists to achieve a "final theory" of physical principles that would explain, well, everything. Laurance S. Rockefeller '32, recipient of the Woodrow Wilson Award for exemplifying "Princeton in the nation's service," generated much discussion with his most recent gift to the university, the interdisciplinary Center for Human Values. The center's mission, according to its director, politics professor Amy Gutmann, is no less than to "stimulate and support teaching and research . . . centrally concerned with some of the most fundamental questions concerning human values." Nor was it easy to forget that war simmered in the Persian Gulf region, as hundreds of yellow ribbons fluttered from trees and windows in town, and a few student antiwar demonstrators pounded "drums for peace" all day in a corner of Cannon Green. The skies were sunny and the winds frigid for the two-thousand-odd alumni, family members, and friends who returned to the campus to attend lectures, the service of remembrance, and the annual luncheon and winter meeting of the Alumni Association in Jadwin Gym. Perhaps only under the mammoth dome of Jadwin, where Alumni Council chairman James C. Parham, Jr. '52, presented the university's highest awards for alumni and students while guests munched on stuffed chicken breasts, did the day's proceedings retain a sense of business as usual.

Woodrow Wilson Award

IT WAS SOMEHOW fitting that Laurance Rockefeller received the Wilson Award on the fifth anniversary of his $10 million gift to complete the Lewis Thomas '33 Laboratory for molecular biology. Over the years, Rockefeller's benefactions have supported several key developments of campus life. In 1969, his gift of $4 million to build the Laura Spelman Halls—named for his grandmother—was a key factor in the university's decision to become coeducational. In the early 1980s, he funded the establishment of one of the five underclass residential colleges in honor of his brother John '29. Most recently, Rockefeller, a university trustee emeritus, gave $21 million to create the new Center for Human Values, the culmination of an interest in matters of the soul that dates back to his undergraduate studies. This contribution brought his lifetime largesse to Princeton to more than $40 million.

Jimmy Stewart '32, last year's winner, would be a tough act for anyone to follow. But Rockefeller's audience in Alexander Hall listened with rapt attention as he riffled through reflections on life as a Princeton student, venture capitalist, environmentalist, philanthropist, and scion of a famous family. Soft-spoken and self-effacing, Rockefeller described movingly his father's lifelong support of the Memorial Sloan-Kettering Cancer Center—support that he continues himself—after the elder Rockefeller lost "his first love" to the disease. He recalled that his parents instilled in their young children a sense of "fiscal accountability" by requiring them all to keep financial ledgers in exchange for their allowances. As a result, he said, "I had no idea that I was in a wealthy family; I had no expectation of inherited wealth. Well, this was nice, because it freed me from a lot of burdens and it has made the latter part of my life even more pleasant—it was a surprise."

As a freshman, Rockefeller enjoyed himself so much that he nearly flunked out—or, as he put it, he "lacked credits at the end of the year." His summer-school tour of great geological sites around the country presaged his later commitment to federal preservation of the nation's parkland and his establishment of vacation resorts attuned to the environment. As a philosophy major "spiritually in great anguish," Rockefeller devoured every course in the department. After Princeton and "a little wasted time at the Harvard Law School," he joined "the family office—it was not clear whether I was still on an allowance or a salary, but it didn't matter." He also discussed his record of venture-capital investments, including the purchase of Eastern Airlines and support of an early, spectacularly unsuccessful prototype jet designed by J. S. McDonnell '21 in his pre-McDonnell-Douglas days.

In the last five years, Rockefeller said, "I wanted to turn to venture capital of the human spirit. . . . The idea was that I was going to try and refocus my life from doing—the potato race of life—into being, and emphasize all of the spiritual, non-worldly values." The result, a "fund for the enhancement of the human spirit," led to the Center for Human Values.

Laurance S. Rockefeller '32 reflected on his life and career, from nearly flunking out freshman year to buying Eastern Airlines.

It is rare that "Princeton in the nation's service" is interpreted to mean service of a philosophical nature. Yet the latest addition to Rockefeller's legacy might be said to be just that. "After graduation, as you know, I continued to be concerned about values, meaning, purpose for sixty years," he told his listeners. "And here we are back together, still worried and uniting to make a bigger and better effort to help everybody—including me, hopefully—to see more clearly how to interweave the components of which real life is made."

At the luncheon in Jadwin Gym, Steven Weinberg '57 (right) chatted with John A. Wheeler, the distinguished emeritus professor of physics who was his advisor thirty-five years ago.

James Madison Medal

PHYSICIST STEVEN WEINBERG was the recipient of this year's James Madison Medal, awarded to alumni of the Graduate School "who have distinguished themselves in their graduate education or achieved a record of outstanding public service." Weinberg and two other physicists shared the Nobel Prize for Physics in 1979 for their development of a theory unifying two of the observed types of energy; they showed that electromagnetism and the subnuclear weak force are both aspects of a so-called electro-weak force. He is now the Josey Regental Professor of Science at the University of Texas, and a member of its physics and astronomy departments.

Weinberg came to Princeton after undergraduate study at Cornell and a year at the Copenhagen Institute for Theoretical Physics. He earned a doctorate in just two years, and went on to teach at Columbia, Berkeley, M.I.T., and Harvard before joining the faculty at Texas. He is the author of The First Three Minutes: A Modern View of the Origin of the Universe (1977) and The Discovery of Subatomic Particles (1982), as well as more than two hundred articles on elementary particle physics and cosmology.

In his lecture, Weinberg addressed the hopes that physicists harbor of devising a final theory to unify all four of the known forces of the physical world:

gravity, electromagnetism, and the weak and strong forces within atomic nuclei. Weinberg suggested that today, no less than in centuries past, scientists are often motivated by a conviction that the most fundamental explanations will be elegant and simple. "When it turns out that mathematically elegant ideas have a relevance for the real world," he said, "you have a rather spooky feeling that there's something behind the blackboard, some foreshadowing of a future final theory, whose beauty we're beginning to sense."

Weinberg acknowledged that the search for a unifying theory has its skeptics. He defended the $8 billion cost of the superconducting supercollider, a fifty-mile-wide particle accelerator now under construction in Texas that will provide incomparable opportunities to study particle interactions, by calling it "a small price to pay to have to avoid saying in our time . . . that we had to give up a dream of finding a final theory." When asked by a member of the audience about Albert Einstein's fruitless quest in his last twenty years to develop a unified theory, Weinberg contended that Einstein failed because he worked in the isolation of the Institute for Advanced Study, depriving himself of synergistic contact with students and fellow physicists.

Pyne Prize Winners

THE MOSES TAYLOR PYNE PRIZE, the university's highest general award for undergraduates, was given to Erica L. Fox '91 and Jennifer L. Rexford '91. Fox and Rexford will split $15,420, an amount equivalent to this year's tuition and fees, for winning the prize, given annually to the senior or seniors "who most clearly manifested excellent scholarship, character, and effective leadership in the best interests of Princeton." This is the first year since coeducation that the prize has been shared by two women.

Fox, a native of Haworth, New Jersey, majors in the Woodrow Wilson School and is also pursuing a certificate in Afro-American studies. She is writing her senior thesis on relations between blacks and Jews. Fox was the president of her junior class and has organized such campus events as Holocaust Awareness Day, the Day to Celebrate Difference, and AIDS Awareness Day. She founded the Jewish Women's Coalition, was an undergraduate representative to the SHARE Advisory Board, and served on the Honor Committee. Fox, who has a 3.8 grade-point average, was a national alternate winner of the Harry S Truman Scholarship. She plans to enter law school after taking a year off.

Rexford, of Springfield, Virginia, is majoring in electrical engineering and has a 4.0 grade-point average. Last year, for her junior project, she conducted research on parallel processing, a technology by which several computers are synchronized to work together on a single problem. In October, she presented her findings to a conference at the University of Maryland; the paper was later published with others from the symposium. Rexford has served as an editor for student course guides and has organized advice sessions for underclass engineers. Rexford, who wants to become a computer-engineering professor, plans to enter a Ph.D. program this fall.

Erica L. Fox '91

Jennifer L. Rexford '91

Alumni Schools Committee Prize

THE S. BARKSDALE PENICK '25 AWARD was presented to the Alumni Schools Committees of Houston and Dallas. The award, named for the former chairman of the Alumni Council and longtime trustee of the university, recognizes the regional alumni group that has "most effectively fulfilled the primary goals of Alumni Schools Committee work" in recruiting students for the admission office. James D. MacWilliam '54 accepted for the Houston committee, and Kathleen Motes Bennewitz '82 accepted for the Dallas committee.

1991 Annual Giving Campaign Begins

ALUMNI DAY marks the official start of the university's Annual Giving campaign. In a report to alumni, Annual Giving chairwoman Janet Morrison Clarke '75 said that the 1991 campaign, whose goal is $19.5 million, has already raised $8.2 million from 11,928 donors. This is the lowest dollar amount collected by Alumni Day since 1985. Last year's campaign raised $18.6 million, with a participation rate among alumni of 55.4 percent. This total fell short of the goal of $19 million.

Clarke, the first woman and youngest Princetonian to chair the campaign, also presented three awards for achievements in Annual Giving. The Harold Helm Award for "exemplary and sustained" volunteer service was given to Winthrop A. Short '41. Short, whose service to Annual Giving dates back to 1963, has served as class agent, national chairman of Annual Giving, and member of the National Annual Giving Committee, and he is currently chairman of the Annual Giving Endowment Program. He was also instrumental in his class's record-breaking campaigns at its twenty-fifth, fortieth, and forty-fifth reunions. The Annual Giving Committee of St. Louis, chaired by Clifford M. Kurrus '51, was honored with the Jerry Horton '42 Award for an outstanding regional committee. The Class of 1965 received the Class of 1926 Trophy, given each year to the class that raises the most for Annual Giving. Under the leadership of class agent John D. Diekman, the class raised $3,085,101 in honor of its twenty-fifth reunion, the largest amount ever donated by any class.

Annual Giving chairwoman Janet Morrison Clarke '75 congratulates John D. Diekman '65 (left), whose class won the Class of 1926 Trophy; Clifford M. Kurrus '51 (center), whose A.G. committee won the Jerry Horton '42 Award; and Winthrop A. Short '41 (right), winner of the Harold Helm Award.

Candidates for Alumni Trustee

CANDIDATES FOR two alumni trustee vacancies were announced at the Alumni Day luncheon. Running for trustee-at-large are: Selden S. Edwards '63, the headmaster of Elgin Academy, in Elgin, Illinois; Karl E. Hammonds '73, a physician at Progressive Health Associates, in Washington, D.C.; and Richard W. Kazmaier, Jr. '52, of Key Largo, Florida, the president of Kazmaier Associates. The nominees for alumni trustee from Region I (the Middle Atlantic states, New England, Quebec, and the Maritime Provinces) are: John E. Bjorkholm '61, a researcher at A.T.&T. Bell Laboratories in Holmdel, New Jersey; Cheryl A. Gould '74, of New York City, the senior producer of NBC Nightly News; and Robert C. McCartney '56, an attorney with the firm of Eckert Seamans Cherin & Mellott, in Pittsburgh, Pennsylvania. The results of these elections will be announced after the P-rade, on June 8.

Writing Center Helps Students Polish Their Prose and Cons

TUTORS AT Princeton's Writing Center educate students in the root sense of the word: they draw them out (Latin, educere). Put simply, they ask a lot of questions, in the belief that good writing results more from clear thinking than from good grammar. "Normally, what I try to do is get students to talk a bit," says tutor Ian Gold, a graduate student in philosophy, "and in the course of the discussion try to get them to clarify their positions."

Students can go to the Writing Center for free, one-on-one instruction at any phase of the writing process. Some seek help at the brainstorming stage; others need a hand in organizing their thoughts into logical arguments; still others just want assistance in polishing their final drafts. Not surprisingly, first-year students are most likely to visit, but few people ever outgrow the need to work on their prose. With a writing requirement to fulfill and substantial research papers to produce in their junior and senior years, Princeton undergraduates "write a lot, just as much as if not more than at any place in the country," says Assistant Dean of the College Diane P. Balestri.

Since it was created, in 1986, the center has attracted an increasing number of students. Last semester, 156 people used the center—many on several occasions—as the total number of conferences rose 14 percent over the previous autumn. The center is open eighteen hours a week (double that during reading periods), and it employs six graduate students from several different disciplines as tutors. A promotional pamphlet promises that students can visit the center as often as they like, but the increasing demand for instruction has made appointments necessary.

Originally housed in offices in three different residential colleges, the Writing Center was consolidated and then moved to the centrally located East Pyne Hall in the spring of 1987. Last fall, it took up permanent residence on the third floor of Aaron Burr Hall, at the corner of Nassau Street and Washington Road.

Although some students go to the center with specific editorial questions, from how to use a semicolon properly to how to style a footnote, most seek more general assistance in structuring arguments, on topics ranging from the importance of gay rights to the impact of political upheavals on world oil markets. But when a student thrusts an eighteen-page paper in a tutor's face and announces, "Well, here it is," the tutor will patiently explain that he or she is not there to provide a professional editing service. Then the tutor will offer to discuss particular problems or concerns. (The center's only other rule is that tutors will not assist students with take-home exams.) "I try to use the paper as a case study for how students can go about improving their writing in general," says Gold. "That way, it's more helpful in the future."

"You can't understand how much more effective it is to have someone helping the student other than the person giving out the grade," says an advocate of the center.

Sometimes the conferences become forty-five-minute therapy sessions, as tutors calm nervous students' fears of failure, or their paranoia that a particular professor is "out to get them." For example, "a lot of students are daunted by complex literature," says Judy Failer, a politics graduate student who has tutored for many years (she began while an undergraduate at Wesleyan). For these students, she says, "it's empowering to learn how to make a good argument, or to learn you have the right to make an argument" in the first place. The cure for a massive case of writer's block is often as simple as some relaxed discussion without a fear of failure. In this respect, the Writing Center "gives students a safe place to get help," says Assistant Dean of the College Nancy A. Kanach, whose office currently oversees the center's operation.

"You can't understand how much more effective it is to have someone helping the student other than the person giving out the grade," says Mary Schultz, who directed the center until this February. "It comes down to writing for someone else versus taking responsibility for it yourself."

During her tenure, Schultz attempted to dispel the center's stigma as a place only for students who need "remedial" help. Last semester, students went to the center for help on junior papers, doctoral dissertations, and applications for graduate schools and scholarships, including Fulbright, Rhodes, and National Science Foundation fellowships.

Students who are not native speakers of English pose particular problems for the center. "People aren't paying enough attention" to E.S.L. (English as a Second Language) students in general and "particularly at the graduate level," says Dean Kanach. As a consequence, E.S.L. students' problems sometimes end up in the hands of tutors at the Writing Center. Tutors need special training to help non-native speakers, Kanach says, and such training costs money the center simply doesn't have.

Dean Balestri says that she would like to see the Writing Center function eventually as a "locus for out-of-class activities related to writing." A special Writing Committee, composed of administrators and professors, recently issued a report recommending that the center try out experimental approaches to writing, including computer-based instruction. The report notes that most students now prepare their papers entirely on computers, and suggests that this mode of composition presents its own set of difficulties to writers.

Whether the students are handwriting, typewriting, or word processing, however, most tutors at the Writing Center emphasize the importance of talking about ideas in helping them to structure logical arguments. Cheryl Hall, another politics graduate student and tutor, says that she's skeptical about how useful computers can be in tutoring, because "I spend most of my time talking with students and less time really rearranging their sentences." Noting that writing is an inherently interactive pursuit, Failer adds that tutoring has taught her that "nobody can write by themselves."

—Gayle Wald GS

Gayle Wald is a graduate student in English from Elkins Park, Pennsylvania, and tutors at the Writing Center.

HOPE FLOWERS IN A COLONIA

*Christine Brady
Kosko '79
Brings a Vision
to a Tijuana Shantytown*

By Daniel N. White '65

DR. FELIPE DE JESÚS ROMERO, A CLINIC PHYSICIAN for the Americas Foundation, writes the word "parasitosis" on the small blackboard in the schoolroom. He then sketches the outline of a human body with an arrow pointing into its mouth. He draws another arrow emerging from the anus, curves it back toward the mouth, and writes "amibas—agua—alimentos."

The two dozen Mexican mothers in the audience can neither read nor write, but they sit quietly and watch. When the doctor's lecture began, their small children were seated beside them, but now the boys and girls wander about giggling, shrieking, and occasionally crying. The doctor doesn't mind the noise. If the children were not here, the mothers wouldn't be either. They cannot afford day care or baby sitters. More than two-thirds of them are single and unemployed and have two children under the age of five. With dark, luminous eyes, black hair, and round faces, the children have the appearance of dolls, but underneath their tiny T-shirts, their neat, white smocks, and their dresses, several of them have swollen stomachs, the telltale sign of parasites and malnutrition.

The secondhand chairs and tables have been painted in different pastels. A giant map of the world, a bright, perky mural, curtains decorated with dancing puppets, and cans of crayons give the cinder-block schoolroom as much color and cheer as a flower garden. The name of the one-room school, the Jardín de Niños la Esperanza, means children's garden of hope. It is located on a rutted dirt road in a colony of shanties that sprawls across the hills and steep ravines of an old municipal dump on the outskirts of Tijuana. The colonia's inhabitants number close to eight thousand, most of them migrants from the villages of western Mexico. Twenty-five miles south of La Jolla ("the jewel"), California, one of the priciest residential areas in the world, most of the homes have no floors, electricity, or running water. This colonia is one of about sixty such shantytowns in the Tijuana area. Its name, Colonia Esperanza, also speaks of hope.

Two people in the schoolroom do not have black hair. They are each una guera, blonde. The older one has a ponytail and pale skin reddened by the sun. Her name is Christine Brady Kosko '79, the sole Princetonian living in Tijuana. Her three-and-a-half-year-old daughter, Emily, is the other guera. Brady Kosko sits by the blackboard and interjects comments in Spanish while Emily does the same at a table with her small friends. The mothers call Brady Kosko angelita, little angel. She has arranged for the doctor to lecture each week—on sanitation, nutrition, birth control, and today, parasites. She is the founder of this school and clinic, the only social institution of any kind in a community of more than two thousand children.

Dr. Romero sketches the outline of a swollen belly on the board. One of the mothers, María, laughs and puts her hand on her own stomach. She says that worms are not the only force of life that makes stomachs bigger. Her dangling silver earrings jump when she laughs. Her figure seems barely pubescent, but her eyes have a sparkle that men have fancied. At twenty-three, she already has had three children, by three different men. Her oldest daughter is seven. Recently, María has had the operation that eliminates at least one cause of swelling stomachs. When she was fifteen, working in a tortilla factory in Michoacán, in central Mexico, her parents sold her to an elderly neighbor who later fathered her first child. Her life and that of Brady Kosko have converged, for it is because of María's daughter Alma Cecilia that Brady Kosko came to live in Tijuana and work in this colonia.

When the doctor finishes his lecture, he dispenses vitamins, birth-control pills, instruction about good hygiene and nutrition, and plenty of Vermox, an anti-parasite medicine. Meanwhile, the children run out to a tiny playground enclosed by a chain-link fence painted the colors of the rainbow. They scramble up the swing set. Each night, Brady Kosko unhooks the swings—the only ones in the colonia—and locks them away so they won't be stolen.

As the children play, a low-riding, piebald Chevrolet, of a 1970s vintage, jounces by on the pitted road. The car is packed with Mexican men straining to see what is going on inside the "magic garden" today. They have heard that the Little Angel frequently has the mothers troweling plaster, mixing concrete, and hammering nails—men's work. "In the beginning," says Brady Kosko, "I'd persuade the mothers to work, and the lider, the local political boss, would come along and say, 'You're assholes for working. Don't do that.' The women would lay down their shovels. I had to yell at him in front of the women. I told the women, 'Look, I'm going to be an asshole. Don't listen to him. The *lider*s haven't done anything for you for ten years. We could have something wonderful here, but we have to do it ourselves. Ándale!' The women are afraid of social opinion; it's one of the most devastating impediments. But they do want something for their children. Now they know that other women have worked here before, and they are eager to do manual labor."

"I DREAM OF A HEAVY-DUTY SUSPENSION," SAYS BRADY Kosko as she leads a tour of the colonia in her long-suffering Pontiac. She talks about the hardships its inhabitants face and how she, a former physics major and student of ballet and piano, came to settle in Tijuana. The surrounding hills are awash in sunlight. A few scattered eucalyptus trees, some small bushes and clumps of dusty weeds, and here and there flowers or a melon vine planted inside a used tire are all that grow in the white glare. A bony dog pants by. Women carry water buckets filled from the communal "well"—several large metal drums beside the road. More women pass, on the way to the store at the highway to buy milk or, more likely, Coca-Cola—the beverage of choice because it is cheaper. Men walk by, at home in midday because they have no jobs and cannot find work. An old woman waves a greeting and says "God bless you." Brady Kosko smiles, then waves to a girl who shifts her two-month-old son from one arm to the other and waves back. She wears a football jersey, and the tips of her fingers are black with nail polish. The girl is only fifteen, Brady Kosko says, and she likes to come to the school with her baby to watch the activity.

Far left: A typical residence in the colonia. Above: The efforts of Brady Kosko (right center) have brought color and cheer to the one-room schoolhouse.

"You don't see poverty until you put a name and face on it," she says. "Mexicans dream the same as Americans. They dream of their own land and culture and improving their lives."

They dream the same dreams, but achieving them is something else. Those who live in rural villages have been impoverished by the devaluation of the Mexican peso and the relatively low price of oil worldwide over the last few years; oil is one of Mexico's major sources of employment and foreign exchange. They hear stories about jobs at the border. Mexico's Border Industrialization Plan hopes to entice companies from the United States, Japan, and other countries to build factories that, taking advantage of cheap Mexican labor, will assemble products from parts manufactured elsewhere. The border factories, or maquiladoras, have created more than a hundred thousand jobs in Tijuana alone. They pay the highest factory wages in Mexico—on average, $35 to $40 for a forty-eight-hour work week, plus another $10 in food stamps. This is a princely wage compared to what a Mexican might earn in a rural village, although it's below what is necessary to live on in Tijuana, where the cost of living is comparable to neighboring San Diego's. There are 1,300 maquiladoras along the seven-hundred-mile border from Ciudad Juarez, across from El Paso, to Tijuana, 680 in the Tijuana area alone. Drawn by the maquiladoras, migrants throng to Tijuana at the rate of a hundred thousand a year.

In the blinding sunlight, Brady Kosko gets a lecture from the lider, the local boss.

"Tijuana, with 2.2 million people," says Brady Kosko, "is now the second-largest city, behind only Los Angeles, on the west coast of North and South America." The migrants are overwhelmingly young and poor. They settle into the colonias. The men cross town to find work, or cross the border, or leave for other women. As a result, "the colonias become vast communities of single women with small children." Some migrants leave their children behind. "I've had several maids over the years, and the great majority of them had at least one child living with a relative, in a different part of the country." Desperate to earn a living, those who bring their children may leave them unattended during the day or in the care of a brother or sister, or ask their neighbors to watch their kids for two or three weeks and then never come back. Last year, some sixty thousand cases of child abandonment were reported in Tijuana.

CHRISTINE BRADY KOSKO GREW UP IN BUCKS COUNTY, Pennsylvania, thirty miles southwest of Princeton. Her mother commuted to Trenton State Hospital, where she was an assistant director of nursing, and her father worked in the construction industry. The summer before her senior year at Neshaminy High School, where she first studied Spanish, she taught ballet and public health at an Episcopal camp for orphans in Haiti. At Princeton, to offset her formidable physics curriculum, she took courses in world hunger and Turkish history and culture. Although she was accepted at Penn for postgraduate work in biophysics, she says she "went where the technology was. I headed for California in 1979 and, after a few months, took a job with the Naval Ocean Systems Center at Point Loma. I went to Stanford for a year on a Navy fellowship and got a master's in materials science and engineering. Working for the Navy was great training for dealing with the bureaucracy of Mexico."

Meanwhile, she continued to study piano and ballet, and got involved in alumni activities, becoming the president of the Princeton Club of San Diego. She married and had Emily. (She is now divorced.) While on maternity leave, she saw a report on the evening news about orphanages in Tijuana. "I got together some clothes and sent them down. Then one day I drove there." She began volunteering at an orphanage two or three days a week. "One woman had eighteen infants to take care of. She left them in their cribs all day, in a dark room, without any stimulation of any kind. I'm a hugger and a toucher. I tied toys to their cribs, took them out in wagons, and then I went crazy. I installed full-spectrum lighting in the orphanage and arranged for doctors to visit regularly."

On one visit, she noticed a new child, Alma Cecilia. Although suffering from malnutrition, she was wide-eyed and pretty. Shortly after her arrival, however, a nurse gave her a shot with a needle that had already been used on a boy suffering from hepatitis B. She became seriously ill.

In the meantime, the boy's condition worsened. Brady Kosko begged the director of the orphanage to send him to a hospital, but he refused. "He didn't want it known that there were problems of any kind, including hepatitis B, in the orphanage," Brady Kosko recalls. "I remember how bad the boy looked one evening. I worried about him all night, and the next morning I went in early to see him. His bed was empty. They told me his mother had come and taken him during the night. I didn't believe them. I went out behind the orphanage and saw a freshly dug little grave. They wouldn't let Alma Cecilia go to the hospital either. I didn't want her to die, so I kept coming to take care of her." Eventually, the child recovered, and by this point Brady Kosko had become so attached to her that she decided to apply to adopt her. Just when everything seemed to be working out, Alma Cecilia's mother, María, showed up and wanted her baby back.

"You can imagine my dilemma," says Brady Kosko. "Should I allow this dear little girl who had been deathly ill to return to her natural mother, or should I take her away from her mother, who clearly loved her but wasn't in any position to provide for her? I went to see the colonia where she lived. It made me cry the first time I saw it. In the end, I made a compromise with myself. I decided not to pursue the adoption but to do something to help María and others improve their lives."

She quit her Navy job. Using her savings, she recruited two doctors and two psychologists to help her. A team of medical missionaries, they traveled among the colonias, giving lectures and providing free advice about health care. "These people were real pioneers: terribly poor, hard-working, intelligent, but uneducated," says Brady Kosko. "I finally became convinced that what these people really needed was to know how to read and write. Poverty is sustained by illiteracy. If you make the population literate, eventually poverty will go away. I believe that."

"When we decided to start a school and clinic, we found that the hiders were more or less against us. Historically, the hiders have been great defenders of the people, fighting for their right to own land—a right guaranteed Mexicans by their constitution, written in 1917 in the aftermath of their revolution. The hiders have fought for the people's right to buy land, but they control access to the land and have worked against the development of social institutions. They abuse their position."

Brady Kosko found that the colonias' residents had a much greater social consciousness than she had expected. Building on this foundation, she mobilized support for the preschool and arranged for land to be donated for the building. It was a struggle. "We wanted to secure the land we were on so that, once we had built the school, the local hider, or land boss, an illiterate man who was totally corrupt, couldn't find a loophole to charge rent or repossess the land, and so on. Toward the end, we stayed up all night—two Mexican lawyers, one from Harvard, the other from Berkeley, and myself—trying to figure out how to outsmart this illiterate crook. We were so frustrated. I remember someone at one point saying, 'Look, he can't outsmart Princeton, Harvard, and Berkeley brains.' In fact, we weren't so sure, but in the end, we did it."

In 1987, she set up the Americas Foundation (Fundación de las Americas) to raise money for the school, and making the most of her alumni contacts, got 25 percent of the initial funding from Princetonians. One of her first board members was Carol Hasson '76, a television journalist in San Diego who went on to make an award-winning film about the problems along the border.

"This past year was our first full year of operation," Brady Kosko says. "We had a morning enrollment of thirty three- and four-year-olds, and an afternoon session of thirty-eight five- and six-year-olds. We can't take everyone who wants to come. Often, we have children who hang around outside wanting in, but we have no room for them. My teachers are Mexicans, and we teach numbers, alphabet, hygiene, coordination, how to make things. In the afternoon, with a more advanced group, it's reading, writing, and math. We also stress basic hygiene and give classes for the mothers. So often when people see poverty, they want to do something directly for children, but you can't ignore the mothers. Our classes include instruction on how to protect the children, too. This past summer, over a six-week period, twenty-five children were raped during the day by the same person. They were all home alone."

"The only thing holding back our work is money. The school is hanging on by a thread. We charge roughly $2 a week per child, though only half the people pay. If you don't charge for it, they don't respect it. Sometimes I have to raise money on Monday, Tuesday, and Wednesday to pay the teachers on Friday. We need $5,000 a month to survive. That covers the school, the clinic, the overhead, and a staff of eight or nine. I initiate projects, make sure they're secure, coordinate with mothers, fight the political battles, pay all bills, recruit new board members, raise money, and handle public relations. I've also bought the building materials and shown the carpenters how to install windows."

The colonia's clinic, run by Dr. Romero (left), is spartan but better than nothing.

Construction has already begun on a new primary school for the children of the colonia.

Brady Kosko works seven days a week. After three years, she has yet to pay herself a salary and continues to live on her savings, which are now almost exhausted. She does enjoy, however, some fringe benefits. For example, when she was involved in a traffic accident with a motorcyclist, a delegation of parents from the colonia marched on the local police station, prepared to defend or rescue her. She was excused without further incident.

SHE STOPS THE CAR BESIDE A PATH THAT LEADS DOWNHILL to María's house. A neighbor is washing clothing in her front yard on a washboard and hanging them on a sagging clothesline, where they seem to fade almost instantly in the fierce sunlight. María's house, like most of the buildings in the village, is a patchwork construction of used plywood covered with tar paper. It contains a single room.

María works full-time raising her children, while her husband José looks for work as a cement mixer. Brady Kosko recently paid for María to attend a beauticians' school. Midway through the program, she discovered that María was being given such menial jobs as sweeping hair and cleaning the other students' materials and instruments. She did learn to manicure her nails, which now appear neat and clean, as if she did nothing else but groom them all day. María, who has eight brothers and sisters, was abandoned by her mother as a baby. She arrived at Colonia Esperanza with two daughters, no husband, and no job. She found work in a maquilladora but could not afford to pay for day care. In the meantime, she managed to find her mother, who was living in Tijuana, and asked her to take care of the children. Her mother agreed if María paid her $20 a week, as much as her entire weekly wage at the factory. So she began leaving her children at home alone. While she was at work one day, her mother came to the colonia and took the children to the Mexican government's social service agency, which placed them in an orphanage. María came home and discovered her daughters were gone.

The father of the older daughter eventually retrieved his child from the orphanage and took her back to central Mexico. María has not seen her since. The other children, Alma Cecilia and a son by José, live with them. The son, one and a half years old, is named William, after a Princeton alumnus who is a benefactor of the foundation. They seem to have started a trend: María's friends have all begun naming their sons William.

Alma Cecilia, now four and a student at the Jardín de Niños la Esperanza, wanders into María's house, her dark eyes growing at the sight of so much gringo company. María shows the visitors the inside of her home. A big bed occupies most of the windowless space, which measures eight feet square. She and José and Alma Cecilia sleep in the bed, while William sleeps crosswise on a small mattress wedged between the bed and the wall. The room also contains a two-burner electric stove, a small table, a fan, and a small black-and-white television. "When they get extra money in the colonia, the first thing they usually want to buy is a radio, then a television," says Brady Kosko. The room is abuzz with flies, but that's normal here. Otherwise, everything is neat. María's dreams are to fix up her house and educate her children.

After a stop to visit María's sister-in-law, we drive to the top of a hill. Brady Kosko gets out of the car with Emily and stands looking over the colonia and listening to the sounds that rise up from it: on the hot, dry wind comes the rasping of a saw, a rooster's crowing, a honking car horn, the blare of a radio, and the voices of children.

"This will be the site of a primary school we're going to build," she says. In the meantime, she plans to expand the existing yellow-stucco schoolhouse. "We almost had a war here last spring. We had more than two hundred families who wanted their kids in the school—for seventy places." She has enlisted the help of an architect from San Diego to design a new building that will have two large classrooms, separate bathrooms for boys and girls, and a playground with a garden and wading pool (not to mention a septic tank, flooring, and a ceiling). "I want the school to be a place of beauty. I'm converted to the idea that beauty—achieved inexpensively—helps transcend class differences. It doesn't transcend cultural differences, but beauty is a way to inspire pride, and the key to success against poverty is to get the people to take pride in the program. The new addition is going to cost $80,000." She has yet to raise the money, but she has received some pledges, including a gift of $800 from the families of the colonia; they've promised to raise another $800. "That's the first time they've ever done anything like that," says Brady Kosko. "They have confidence in us now.

"I don't think we understand poverty very well. We're afraid of it, afraid of poor people, afraid of losing our money and becoming poor ourselves. We should be taking more responsibility to help these people. I've been impressed by the new Mexican government, which helped us secure the land for the school. But the government has its hands full—a hundred thousand more people each year who need public services. When I look at these kids, I wonder what Beethovens are among them, and what doctors and teachers, and how much will be lost if we don't help. We had our first graduation from preschool this year. We had a ceremony and gave each of the children plaques. There they were, thirty-eight little kids all dressed up in white, graduating from preschool, and no place to go. It isn't right."

Dan White is the director of the Alumni Council and a frequent contributor to PAW. Readers wishing to contribute to the Americas Foundation should write to Box 6822, San Diego, CA 92106, or 1475 Catalina Blvd., San Diego, CA 92107.

Teaching at Princeton

Princeton has always had a great commitment to teaching. Members of our faculty teach undergraduates, graduate students, and each other. They also teach in various programs for alumni, and they reach a more general and global audience through their publications and in other ways.

This year my annual report focuses on the teaching of undergraduates. As it has always been, this remains a central commitment and special strength of Princeton. It is important to our faculty, and our faculty does it exceptionally well. But it is also an area where there is always room for reassessment and improvement.

My report will be mailed to all alumni during the next few weeks. The rest of this page is adapted from the report.

* * *

If we look at today's Princeton in historical perspective, the following pattern emerges:

- The curriculum has expanded to include more subjects, greater specialization and in-depth study, more interdisciplinary programs, and an increasingly global perspective that incorporates the works of women as well as men and non-Western as well as Western cultures.
- Teaching and research have become increasingly intertwined. This has many salutary effects in energizing teachers and students and in providing students with first-hand scholarly experiences. There are also dangers, however. The most important of these is that the specialization required of scholarship will distort the integrative experiences that are such an essential part of an undergraduate education. Seeking an appropriate balance is a constant, but healthy, challenge.
- While the traditional lecture format certainly persists, there has been a growing emphasis over time on more participatory approaches to learning (small classes, precepts, seminars, independent work) that depend on student initiative and resourcefulness.

* * *

The challenge for our time is two-fold: (1) to reaffirm and strengthen those characteristics of our program that are essential to our excellence and distinctiveness as a teaching institution, and (2) to explore ways to improve the quality of what we do within the very real financial constraints that we face. Among other things, we have been asking ourselves questions such as:

- What approaches to teaching best develop the skills (of analysis, synthesis, imagination, exposition) that students will need in order to live meaningful, productive lives? Do we have the right balance among lectures, precepts, seminars, and other formats?
- What other changes might the faculty consider in the allocation of faculty time? Should we expand our freshman seminar program, or encourage additional faculty participation in the residential colleges, perhaps by expanding the number of colleges?

Harold T. Shapiro

- Can we enrich the educational experience of our undergraduates by enabling and encouraging them to do a better job of teaching one another, in close collaboration with members of the faculty?
- Can we do a better job of teaching in certain designated areas, such as writing, foreign language, mathematics, and science?
- What are our obligations in the area of moral education?

* * *

Earlier this fall, Dean of the College Nancy Weiss Malkiel and I asked the chairs of all departments to join with us in a comprehensive assessment of Princeton's strengths and needs in undergraduate education. It seemed to us that the time was right, in part for reasons particular to Princeton and in part because of the growing national interest in these issues. The reasons particular to Princeton included the following:

- (1) It has been almost two decades since Princeton conducted a comprehensive and sustained review of how we are teaching and learning and how we might do better.
- (2) There has been substantial departmental activity in recent years to improve undergraduate education, including developing new courses, refashioning junior independent work, rethinking departmental programs of study, and initiating interdisciplinary ventures of various kinds.
- (3) There have been a number of recent University-wide initiatives in undergraduate education, including the Program of Freshman Seminars in the Residential Colleges, the Program of Senior Seminars in the Social Sciences, the Council on Science and Technology, experiments in the teaching of writing, and the application of new technologies.

Dean Malkiel and I asked our department chairs how Princeton can best focus its imagination, energy, and resources to deliver the highest quality undergraduate education in the 1990s and beyond. We have begun meeting with faculty to explore these questions, in the hope of producing a strategy that preserves and strengthens our most essential characteristics while also encouraging a variety of innovative approaches to teaching. I look forward to continuing these discussions with many members of the faculty and with other members of the Princeton community, and I look forward to the further steps that I am confident will result.

"What approaches to teaching best develop the skills . . . that students will need in order to live meaningful, productive lives?"

* * *

As we began work on this report last spring, we knew that Princeton's commitment to undergraduate teaching was one of its proudest traditions and most distinctive characteristics. But we were curious about what today's faculty members had to say about their experiences. The conversations with faculty members that conclude this year's report demonstrate that this commitment is not only alive and well, but that it gives meaning and definition to the lives of those who teach on this campus.

Historic Stamps

Any Princetonian would be proud to display this first day cover (dated Sept. 22, 1956) commemorating the 200th anniversary of Nassau Hall. Together with a numbered corner block of four, and a singleton, it is handsomely matted in orange and black, and framed in black lacquered wood. $50 plus $4.25 shipping. NJ residents add 7% tax.

the PRINCETON
University Store

36 University Place, Princeton, N.J. 08540

Call toll-free: From NJ 1-800-624-4236

Elsewhere in the US, 1-800-631-0137

☐ U-Store ☐ VISA ☐ MasterCard ☐ AmEx

Acct. # _____

Exp. Date _____

Qty. _____

Name _____

Address _____

City, State _____

Zip _____

Books

Putting the Sun in a Bottle

FUSION: THE SEARCH FOR ENDLESS ENERGY

Robin Herman '73 • Cambridge University Press, $19.95

Princeton's Tokamak Fusion Test Reactor, shown here under construction in the early 1980s, brought fusion research to the brink of the elusive "break-even" point last year. Lately, however, budgetary constraints have been as much of an obstacle to progress as the inherent difficulties of copying the Sun.

THREE MILES FROM the university's main campus, across Route 1 where (in my day, anyway) few students tread, work the scientists and engineers of the Princeton Plasma Physics Laboratory. When it comes to heat, they are in the habit of routinely showing up the Sun.

For brief instants, they produce a gas of electrically charged particles—a plasma—that sometimes exceeds one hundred million degrees Celsius (the Sun's interior is just fifteen million degrees Celsius). The researchers' goal is to mimic the nuclear reactions that occur constantly in the Sun and other stars. Called fusion, these reactions are the opposite of the fission reactions that are responsible for conventional nuclear power. Fission is the splitting of atoms. Fusion is the joining of nuclei—the positively charged centers—of hydrogen atoms. Both reactions release energy, but fusion produces less dangerous radioactivity.

Because they carry the same positive charge, hydrogen nuclei ordinarily want nothing to do with each other. In the interior of the Sun, however, they are forced together by the incredible pressure exerted on them by the surrounding vast mass. The Sun's interior density is many times greater than that of lead; nuclei can't help but fuse. On Earth, scientists try to bring the nuclei together in other ways. They crank up the plasma to higher temperatures. And they try to rigidly contain the charged particles in a "bottle" whose sides are electromagnetic fields.

Robin Herman has written an account of the worldwide effort to create and tame fusion. As Fusion: The Search for Endless Energy makes clear, harnessing the power of atoms in this way is proving to be much more difficult than astrophysicist Lyman Spitzer '38 expected in 1951, when the American research program got its start on the Princeton campus. Forty years ago, Spitzer, now the Young Professor of Astronomy, Emeritus, switched from work on a fusion-powered bomb—the H-bomb, shortly to become a reality—to investigate the possibility of controlling a sun in a bottle. Spitzer thought that a prototype fusion reactor might be possible in a decade. Forty years later, his dream, and that of many others, is not for this century.

EINSTEIN

by David Alan Cooney

- Beautiful Lithograph Hand Signed by The Artist
- Perfect for Framing (16" x 20")
- Rag Content Heavy Stock Paper (Great as an unframed poster, too!)

Only $19.95 (plus $4.75 for UPS delivery, tube packaging & handling). IL residents add 7% tax.

MAJOR CREDIT CARDS. CALL 24 HOURS. TOLL FREE: 1-800-835-2246 EXT. 20 or send check or money order to:

ARTISTIC PROMOTIONS UNLIMITED
8261 GOLF ROAD, SUITE 105B
NILES, IL 60648

2-4 weeks delivery. Sorry, no C.O.D.'s. U.S. Funds and delivery only.

But plenty of progress has been made, as Herman documents. Fueling that progress: hundreds of millions of dollars spent annually worldwide in pursuit of a plasma that throws off more energy than is required to keep it hot and contained. On the last page of the book, Herman reveals herself to be strongly in favor of a "moon-shot" approach to creating a successful fusion reactor. "The way to have a reactor is to build one, now," she writes.

Her book doesn't supply a lot of evidence for the view that building a reactor and delaying basic research in the field will lead more quickly to a working reactor. But as a non-technical profile of the people and politics involved in the pursuit of fusion energy, it really can't. Fusion is ultimately a good overview of the history of fusion research, though it lacks the fire of a burning plasma. This may be partly a result of the subject: fusion is more data than ideas and therefore may be harder to write about than a subject, such as cosmology, where there are more ideas than data.

The writing, although sometimes awkward, is sometimes crystalline, as in this description of the language and perspective of fusion scientists: "A 10 million degree plasma was considered 'cool.' A grain of metal that fell off the interior womb of the machine was a 'boulder.' A plasma that was floating somewhere between 24 and 25 centimeters into the chamber's center was as 'lost' as a cloud over the Pacific Ocean."

Remember "energy too cheap to meter," the one-time promise of fission reactors? So far, fusion's prognosticators have also been off the mark. But ultimately, the reaction will be controlled and electrical power produced from it, and the world will be a better place as a result.

—Billy Goodman '80

Billy Goodman, a freelance writer in Brooklyn, New York, contributes regularly to PAW.

Correction

IN THE ISSUE of February 20, we neglected to print the following acknowledgment of permission along with the excerpt from a recent memoir by Charles Scribner, Jr. '43: Reprinted by arrangement with Charles Scribner's Sons, an imprint of Macmillan Publishing Company, from In the Company of Writers: A Life in Publishing, by Charles Scribner, Jr., based on the oral history by Joel R. Gardner. Copyright © 1991 by Charles Scribner's Sons.

Books Received

MAIN LINE WASP: THE EDUCATION OF THACHER LONGSTRETH
Thacher Longstreth '41
W. W. Norton, $19.95

THE WHITE MONK: AN ESSAY ON DOSTOEVSKY AND MELVILLE
F. D. Reeve '50
Vanderbilt University Press, $20.95

SAMUEL JOHNSON'S ATTITUDES TO THE ARTS
Morris R. Brownell '55
Oxford University Press, $49.95

THE DISTURBED VIOLENT OFFENDER
Hans Toch '55 and Kenneth Adams
Yale University Press, $22.50

INSTRUMENTAL VIRTUOSI: A BIBLIOGRAPHY OF BIOGRAPHICAL MATERIALS
Robert H. Cowden '56, comp.
Greenwood Press, $49.95

A TIGER IN HIS TIME: HAL NEWHOUSER AND THE BURDEN OF WARTIME BASEBALL
David M. Jordan '56
Diamond Communications, $19.95

THE FLUTES OF DIONYSUS: DAEMONIC ENTHRALLEMENT IN LITERATURE
R. D. Stock '67
University of Nebraska Press, $42.50

THE CONFLICT-POSITIVE ORGANIZATION: STIMULATE DIVERSITY AND CREATE UNITY
Dean Tjosvold '67
Addison-Wesley, $22.75 paper

HANDBOOK OF EDP AUDITING (2nd ed.)
Michael A. Murphy '68 and Xenia Ley Parker Warren, Gorham & Lamont, $125.00

ARMS AND THE WOMAN: WAR, GENDER, AND LITERARY REPRESENTATION
Helen M. Cooper, Adrienne Auslander Munich, and Susan Merrill Squier '72, eds.
University of North Carolina Press
$32.50 cloth, $12.95 paper

CONTRACEPTIVE TECHNOLOGY, 1990-1992 (15th rev. ed.)
James Trussell '75 et al.
Irvington Publishers, $39.95 cloth, $19.95 paper

"BARKING MAN" AND OTHER STORIES
Madison Smartt Bell '79
Ticknor & Fields, $19.95

THE IDEA OF ABSOLUTE MUSIC
Roger Lustig '79, tr. (by Carl Dahlhaus)
University of Chicago Press, $29.95

THE ABSENT VOICE: NARRATIVE COMPREHENSION IN THE THEATER
Stanton B. Garner, Jr. '83
University of Illinois Press, $22.50

BECAUSE IT IS BITTER, AND BECAUSE IT IS MY HEART (novel)
Joyce Carol Oates (professor of humanities)
E. P. Dutton, $19.95

STEWARTSON-DOUGHERTY

Real Estate Associates
23 Phillips Avenue
Lawrenceville, New Jersey 08638
PHONE: 609-896-8100

For no obligation—Information about real estate in the Princeton area call (609) 896-8100

SOMETHING SPECIAL

This architect designed salt-box is tucked away off a winding lane on 8.2 acres. Comfortable floor plan includes custom kitchen, family room, powder room, first floor den or bedroom, screened porch, plus three upstairs bedrooms and two baths. A Princeton address just a few minutes from center Princeton and Lawrenceville. A great value at $397,500.

Robert Dougherty '50 Julie Douglas w/'41
Paul Douglas '41 Betsy Stewardson Ford w/'54
Georgia Graham w/'52 J. B. Smith '45
Diane Unruh w/'70 Barbara Broad w/'38
Betty McClelland w/'50 Judy Perrine s/'69

REALTORS

Representing Previews Executive HomeSearch

Grant A. Peacock '46
Kathleen Peacock

GRANT A. PEACOCK Inc.

Fine Jewelry
Jewel Counselor
Estates Purchased

Suite 2800
450 Park Avenue at 57th St.
New York, N.Y. 10022

(212) 753-4440

The JOE BROWN Studio announces...his artistic legacy
Princeton Professor Emeritus Joe Brown created over 400 pieces of sculpture which are found in both private and public collections all over the world. Certified bronze sculptures from original molds are available in limited editions. The studio and gallery is open by appointment only.
The Joe Brown Studio • Timothy Maatyn, Resident Sculptor & Curator
RD 1, Box 122 A
Princeton, NJ 08540
609-921-2868

Coach Constable Leads Women's Squash To Twelfth Howe Cup in Her Swan Song

COMING INTO this season, the women's squash team had ample motivation to win the Howe Cup, the symbol of the Intercollegiate Squash Association's team championship. Last year, the Tigers finished with a 7-1 record, but they surrendered the cup they had won in 1989 to archrival Harvard. Most teams would have been elated to have played so well, but for the talent-laden Tigers, the season was something of a disappointment. As a further stimulus, before the season, Betty Constable '36 announced that this would be her last year as the head coach of women's squash. Constable has coached at Princeton since 1971, and before that, she enjoyed an illustrious career as a player. "We were already highly motivated, but when we found out that Betty was going to retire, it became our ultimate purpose to win it all for her," says team co-captain Mary Foulk '91.

The Tigers served notice early in the season that they were determined to recapture the Howe Cup. In December, they dominated Franklin and Marshall, 9-0, at Jadwin Gym. In January, they handled a perennially tough Yale team in New Haven with ease, 8-1. And in their greatest challenge of the regular season, they showed poise and grit by beating a solid squad from Harvard, the defending Ivy League champion, in Jadwin in early February. The two teams were tied, 4-4, at the start of the final match of the afternoon—number nine—but Sue Buck '93 came through with a convincing 3-0 decision over her opponent to seal the victory. Not surprisingly, the Tigers felt more confident in the Howe Cup competition, having already defeated Harvard once.

This dual-match win established Princeton as the favorite to reclaim the cup, but the Tigers were still wary of the Cantabs. "I told my players to forget about Harvard," says Constable, "but I couldn't forget about Harvard, and I was a nervous wreck all weekend." Buck adds: "We knew we could beat them again, but only if we played out of our minds." In the cup competition, which began a week after the Harvard contest, Princeton crushed several opponents to set the stage for the expected rematch with the Crimson. The showdown took place in the finals. Thanks to outstanding performances by the top three Tigers—Hope MacKay '92, Foulk, and Mary Belknap '92—as well as a sweep of the seventh, eighth, and ninth positions, the women enlarged their margin of victory over Harvard to 6-3. The Howe Cup returned to Princeton. In subsequent shutouts of Penn, Dartmouth, and Brown, the Tigers extended their record to 7-0 (5-0 Ivy) and concluded their undefeated season.

Constable credits the success of this year's team to a change in attitude. "The girls are really hungry this year, and a lot tougher. You have to be tough to beat Harvard." Because the Tigers did not lose any players to graduation last year, "we had no excuses not to do well." Last year's squad, which the coach characterizes as "young," developed this season into an experienced and tenacious unit. MacKay, who hails from Brooklyn, New York, was an all-American in 1990, won the Princeton Invitational tournament in December, and is the favorite to capture the I.S.A.'s individual championship, in March. Constable describes Foulk, a native of Wilmington, Delaware, who didn't lose at number two all season, as "the consummate shot-maker."

Belknap and Jen Roos '92, both also from Brooklyn, were consistent performers in the third and fourth spots all year. Belknap won all her matches in the Howe Cup competition, and according to Constable, her growing self-confidence meant that she often went onto the court with an "I'm-not-going-to-lose look." The coach especially admires the efforts of Roos: "It's been tough on her because she's had to spend more time working in the architecture studio than practicing on the squash court."

The Van Orman sisters, Elizabeth '92 and Margaret '94, round out the team's superlative contingent from Brooklyn. Constable attributes Elizabeth's success at number six to her toughness and calls the undefeated Margaret "the best number eight in the country." Playing in the fifth slot, Jackie Moss '93 improved her game this year, and Alexis Anastos '91, the other co-captain, anchored the Hope MacKay '92, the Tigers' top player, was a key element in Princeton's two victories over Harvard this season, and she's favored to win the national singles title in March.

Betty Constable w'36 concluded her twenty-year career at Princeton with her eighth undefeated season. Her teams won nearly 90 percent of their matches.

squad from number seven. And next year, the Tigers' chances of retaining the Howe Cup look good: only three of the eighteen players on the roster (two of the nine starters) will be lost to graduation in June.

Winning the Howe Cup was a fitting way for Betty Constable to close out her incredibly successful coaching career at Princeton. With an overall record of 167 wins and just 19 losses in her twenty years here, she may enjoy the highest winning percentage of any coach in Princeton history. Her teams have dominated cup competition since she helped establish it at the intercollegiate level, in 1973, and of the eighteen intercollegiate cup tournaments, Constable's Tigers have won twelve. (The trophy itself was donated by Constable's mother, Margaret Howe, and was named for the family, reflecting its rich squash heritage: Constable, her mother, and her twin sister Peggy were all championship players.) Her squads were undefeated in eight seasons, and from 1977 to 1981, they won forty consecutive dual matches. In addition, she's coached seven of the last eleven national individual champions.

Constable is renowned for her skills as a coach, but her players also appreciate her other qualities. "Betty is more than just a coach—she's a friend," says Foulk. "She's opened her life to us, and from talking to other people, I don't think any other coach is like that." MacKay adds, "I admire her as a woman who knows a lot about life. She has a tremendous amount of energy, and she speaks her mind."

Fans of Princeton squash will be glad to hear that Constable plans to remain in contact with the players and the program. In addition to helping coach the team, she will run the annual Princeton Invitational tournament and maintain her involvement with the Howe Cup. For now, she's happy to go out as a winner. "It's a sweet way to end my career at Princeton. My husband told me years ago to quit while I'm ahead, and I've done that!"

—Scott Donahue '92

Scott Donahue is a politics major from Haverford, Pennsylvania, and a sports-writer for The Daily Princetonian.

Garrett Brothers Don Football Jerseys Anew for W.L.A.F.

THE BROTHERS GARRETT, three of Princeton football's most potent offensive forces of the last few years, were drafted in February by teams that will play in the new World League of American Football, an N.F.L.-subsidized association that comprises clubs in both Europe and North America. John '88 was selected as a wide receiver by the San Antonio Riders, Jason '89 was picked as a quarterback by San Antonio, and Judd '90 was chosen as a running back by the London Monarchs. Jason and Judd were consecutive winners of the Asa S. Bushnell '21 Cup, which signifies the Ivy League's Player of the Year, in 1988 and 1989—the year Princeton shared the league title. After they graduated, John and Jason each spent a year on the developmental squads of the Cincinnati Bengals and the New Orleans Saints, respectively, and John saw some action in the pros at the end of the 1989-90 season; when the N.F.L. eliminated those squads, however, their professional careers appeared to be over. Last summer, Judd seemed to be on his way to a spot on the Philadelphia Eagles' roster, but he was cut on the last day of training camp. The Dallas Cowboys picked him up but immediately put him on the injured list, and he did not play a down before he was cut. Princeton fans may have noticed him last fall at Palmer Stadium, spotting for the football team. The W.L.A.F. will begin play this summer.

Swimmers Sustain Pool Primacy

THE MEN'S BASKETBALL team made headlines all winter, but the MEN'S SWIMMING team dominated the Eastern Intercollegiate Swimming League to an equal degree, compiling an undefeated record (9-0) and clinching its eighth straight league title. The closest any team got to the Tigers was Yale, which lost by seventeen points. Earlier, Princeton walloped Penn by seventy-seven, Brown by seventy-eight, Columbia by eighty, and Cornell by ninety-three. In the latter meet, the Cornellians didn't belong in the same pool as the Tigers—and they weren't: because the Big Red was stranded in Ithaca by a blizzard, the two teams swam and dived in their own pools, then compared the results via facsimile machines.

The WOMEN'S SWIMMING team was almost as good as the men's, dominating the Ivy League (7-0) and losing only to Penn State, a swimming powerhouse. Even though the Tigers beat Harvard in a dual meet to clinch the league title, the Cantabs finished first in the Easterns, which Princeton hosted in the new DeNunzio Pool, and the Tigers third. Coach Susan Teeter-Eggert attributed this reversal to Harvard's depth, which is a more salient factor in championship meets.

SCOREBOARD

Men's BASKETBALL
(21-2 overall; 12-0 Ivy)
Princeton 56, Columbia 33
Princeton 68, Cornell 53
Princeton 63, Penn 56

Women's BASKETBALL
(16-8 overall; 8-4 Ivy)
Princeton 72, Columbia 61
Cornell 73, Princeton 58
Penn 62, Princeton 53

Men's HOCKEY
(8-18-1 overall; 7-15-1 E.C.A.C.)

Princeton 5, Yale 2
Brown 4, Princeton 2
Colgate 5, Princeton 2
(E.C.A.C. playoff)

Women's HOCKEY
(5-10-1 overall; 4-6 Ivy)
Princeton 9, Yale 0
Princeton 3, Brown 1

Men's SQUASH
(12-1 overall; 5-1 Ivy)
Princeton 9,
Franklin & Marshall 0
I.S.A. Team Championship—
2nd place

Women's SQUASH
(7-0 overall; 5-0 Ivy)
Princeton 9, Dartmouth 0
Princeton 9, Brown 0

Women's SWIMMING
(7-1 overall; 7-0 Ivy)
Easterns—3rd place

Men's TRACK
(0-2 overall; 0-1 Ivy)
Penn 71, Princeton 65
Princeton 63, Yale 62,
Harvard 45
Heptagonals—2nd place

Women's TRACK
(0-1 overall; 0-1 Ivy)
Penn 80, Princeton 38
Yale 56, Harvard 46,
Princeton 45
Heptagonals—5th place

Men's FENCING
(7-7 overall; 4-2 Ivy)
Columbia 18, Princeton 9
Yale 19, Princeton 8

Women's FENCING
(5-9 overall; 3-3 Ivy)
Columbia 12, Princeton 3
Yale 12, Princeton 4

WRESTLING
(11-10-1 overall; 3-3 Ivy)
Princeton 18, Penn 15
East Stroudsburg 20,
Princeton 17

FOR RENT

ENJOY THE LUXURY of your own villa, private pool overlooking the Caribbean, and staff of five to serve you. 3 BRs, 3 baths; exquisitely furnished; on one acre with terraced gardens in most exclusive residential neighborhood in Ocho Rios, Jamaica. Everyone should try this kind of living at least once. From $175/day, winter; $125/day, summer; $100/day, Sept.-Oct. B. Kaspers '70 (owner), 1165 Churchill Downs Rd., Atlanta, GA 30319; 404-255-0696.

ST. JOHN, USVI: 2 BR waterfront beachhouse amid tropical gardens. Spectacular view, excellent snorkeling. From $175/day, winter; $125/day, summer; $100/day, Sept.-Oct. B. Kaspers '70. 1165 Churchill Downs, Atlanta, GA 30319; 404-255-0696.

PARIS: Elegant small studio for two just off the Seine in the 6th. 2 min. walk to the Louvre, Notre Dame. 609-924-4332.

BARBADOS: Home of the late John L. Roe Jr. '34. West Coast on bluff overlooking Caribbean. Three air-conditioned BRs, cook, maid, gardener, laundry, swimming pool. 215-527-0585.

PARIS: Rue de la Paix, Elegant apartment. Suitable for 2 or 3. 7-days preferred. $200/night. 212-838-1731.

STOCKING ISLAND, Exuma, Bahamas: Octagonal wood and glass home, spectacular 360-degree sea view. All modern conveniences. $1000 weekly for two with boat. Sam Burns '46, 407-231-2822. Brochure avail.

SANIBEL ISLAND, FLA.: Delightful beachfront condominium. Magnificent gulf view. Spacious 2 BR, 2 baths, loft. Pool. Tennis. Will Smith '63. 908-842-2096.

BRITISH VIRGIN ISLANDS (Virgin Gorda): Elegant new villa directly on own private snorkeling beach. Spectacular, panoramic view of North Sound including Bitter-End (dive school, etc.) Perfect weather year round. 3 BR, 2 bath, magnificent LR, wrap-around deck, full mod. kit., microwave, dishwasher; marina, fishing, pool, tennis. (Restaurant, provisioning, staff, car, available extra.) $2,500/wk. 609-921-7872.

EXCLUSIVE LUXURY 4 BR, 4 bath villa at private Tryall Club in Montego, Jamaica. Private pool, staff of four, gorgeous grounds overlook Caribbean and championship golf course. Also private tennis, scuba, beach and club house. Available at 2 or 3 BR rate off-season. 203-254-0228 (h) or Carol Shaw at 203-929-6391.

LONDON LUXURY FLATS: In Knightsbridge, Mayfair, Chelsea, Kensington, Whitehall Court. One, two, three bedrooms. Furnished and decorated by owners. Rented by day, seven day minimum; reduced rates when exceeding six months. Call during office hours: 518-686-7841.

KAUAI, HAWAII: 4 BR, NaPali Coast beach house. $650-850/wk. 703-560-7900.

ST. MAARTEN: Elegant villa on blue Caribbean. Breathtaking views. Daily maid. All amenities. Sleeps 2-6. 201-271-0297.

PARIS. LEFT BANK APARTMENT: St. Germain, close to D'Orsay, Louvre, Rodin. Sunny. Fireplaces. Antiques. Luxuriously furnished. Memorable! 412-687-2061.

ITALY: Renting delightful holiday accommodations, each personally selected. Tuscan castles, Umbrian farmhouses. Seaside villas, lakeview cottages. Centrally-located apartments Venice, Rome, Florence. Week/month. 415-821-9345.

ST. THOMAS: 2 or 3 BRs on the water, spectacular downisland view. H. Macaleer. 919-942-8439.

SANIBEL ISLAND: Gulffront 2 BR condo w/pool and tennis. Available weekly/monthly. Boozan '79, 201-522-8219

LONDON, A PLACE LIKE HOME: Enjoy the pleasure of an English home. All privately-owned properties in London's best areas. Week minimum stays, from studios to family houses. For brochure and price list call 800-526-0215.

ST. BART'S, FRENCH WEST INDIES: Luxurious seaside villa surrounded by privacy, beautiful beaches and French restaurants. 412-687-2061.

ROME, ITALY: 18th century estate villa. Great for families. Views!! 609-921-8595.

VAIL-BEAVER CREEK: Rocky Mountain seclusion, minutes from skiing. Creek-side home sleeps six. No X-mas. 303-926-3907.

EXUMA, BAHAMAS: Magnificent hilltop view. Fully equipped, 4 bedrooms, van, private beach, housekeeper available. $1,000 weekly in season. 302-428-1455, evenings.

SEABROOK ISLAND, S.C.: Near historic Charleston, oceanfront 1 BR condo, 2 baths. Sleeps 4; great golf, tennis, restaurants, pelicans. Hugh Hanson '47. 215-649-7335. Princeton discounts!

TORTOLA, BVI: 6 acres, 4 BR, 3 bath, noted architect-designed villa with pool on spectacular promontory jutting over sea and own beach on undeveloped N.E. coast. Two-week rental minimum. Charles Sommer, 11 Upper Ladue Rd., St Louis, MO 63124; 314-982-2690(w), 314-991-5527(h).

TAOS, NM: 2 BR, 2 bath condominium overlooking Kit Carson Park. $400/week, April 15-Nov. $575/week, Dec.-April 15. Lupita Mares, ERA Taos Realtors, 127 Bent Street, Taos, NM 87571; 505-758-0112.

ENGLAND, COTSWOLDS: Thatched cottage. Near Stratford, Oxford, London, 3 sitting, 3 bedrooms, 1½ baths. Central heat. Oscarsson, Rockport, ME 04856.

HANA, MAUI: One-bedroom executive getaway house with panoramic ocean/mountain views on 7.5-acre orchard/flower garden. $95/day, 4-day minimum. 213-654-2765.

ST. JOHN, USVI: 2 BR villa at Lagoon Point, sensational views. Weekly $840-$1260 winter; $560-$840 summer. Valentine, 8 Fern Way, Madbury, NH 03820. 603-742-3063.

CASTLE HYDE: On the Blackwater River, County Cork, Southern Ireland. Exceptionally lovely 18th century Georgian house on 144 acres. 6 bedrooms, 5 modern baths, classic Renaissance gardens with fresh fruit and flowers. Fully staffed. Two miles of private trout and salmon fishing. Pheasant shooting. Available year round. Richard Kroon Y'64, 201-741-5692.

SCOTLAND—GLENEAGLES: Privately owned furnished, new 2-bedroom townhouse on grounds of Gleneagles Hotel estate. Central to highlands, St. Andrews, Edinburgh, Scottish links. $550/week. J. Murphy 513-281-0346.

ITALY. CASTLES IN THE SKY or villas in the vineyard, the best city or country rentals all over Italy. American specialist based in Rome will design the perfect holiday. INTERNATIONAL SERVICES; Piazza di Spagna; Via Propaganda, 27; 00187 Rome, Italy. Fax 011-39-6-684-0943. Telephone 011-39-6-684-0941/2.

COME BACK TO JAMAICA! Enjoy the privacy of your own spacious 3 BR, 3 bath villa, "Clive House", at Tryall Golf and Beach Club near Montego Bay. Beautifully appointed and complete with its own 20' x 40' pool. Cook, maid, laundry and gardener. Spectacular panoramic view of the Caribbean and our 18 hole championship golf course. Tennis, lovely sand beach and all water sports also on site for your enjoyment. Color brochure available on request. Call Liz Poley, w'55 or Susan Wylie weekdays 8-4:30. 612-339-1820.

CENTRAL VERMONT: Restored 1830s home. 4 bedrooms, dormitory, 2½ baths. Fully equipped. Tennis, skiing, hiking nearby. $500/week. Mike Van Dusen '65. 202-244-3473.

VERMONT: Caspian Lake, Greensboro. Spacious lakeside home; golf, tennis. John Stone '53. 802-728-4846.

PORTUGAL, ALGARVE: Villa overlooking sea. Sleeps six. Maid. Available April through November. Harison, P.O. Box 6865, Providence, RI 02940.

MARTHA'S VINEYARD: New three bedroom contemporary, sleeps eight, waterviews, tennis, minutes to beaches, 609-924-7913 (office), 609-397-0147 (home).

ALGARVE, PORTUGAL: Luxury country villa. Sweeping sea views, near beaches, golf, 3 BRs, 4½ baths. Swimming pool, staff. Available year-round with exceptions. 508-922-4763.

ST. JOHN: Off-season rates. 2 bedroom villa, pool, spectacular view. 508-668-2078.

KEY LARGO, FLA.: 2 BR, 2 bath condo at the Anglers Club overlooking club marina on Card Sound. Tennis, par 3 golf course, croquet, and pool, $200/day. Frank Lovejoy '36. 305-367-2856.

KIAWAH ISLAND, S.C.: Fabulous beachfront house, 3 BR/bath, fully equipped. $1,500/wk Sept.—May; $2,000/wk June—August. 314-991-8768.

COTSWOLDS: 17thC restored cottage. Historic Stanton Village, tour Stratford, Oxford, Bath, Broadway. Antiques, log fire, GCH, private garden, tv, washer/dryer, telephone, modern kitchen, sleeps four adults. Details: Tel: England 011-44-38-673-495; Fax 011-44-38-6858-653. Whitfield House, Wood Stanway, GL54 5PG England.

NANTUCKET: New 3 BR, 2½ bath cape on 3 secluded acres; 914-779-1302.

NEWPORT, RI: Victorian. 5/6 bedrooms. Families. Week, month, season. 401-846-5434.

NANTUCKET ISLAND: Contemporary house, fully furnished. Near uncrowded beach. Six miles from town. Weekly. July through October. 216-721-2322.

CAPE COD, EASTHAM: Enjoy crowdless off-season rates in spectacular new lakeside home. Sleeps 10. Available Sept. through June. 617-444-1339.

NANTUCKET: Comfortable historic home, convenient in-town location, sleeps 8, some bikes. 201-543-2867.

NANTUCKET: Wide selection of summer rentals. $1,000-$3,000 per week. Nantucket Vacation Rentals, 800-228-0700.

MAINE COAST: 3-room cottage overlooking Penobscot River. Close to beach, boat launches, lakes. Sleeps four comfortably. Full bath. Ideal retreat. Photos available. June-October $250/week. 207-567-3772.

MANTOLOKING, NJ: Adjacent beach. 4 BR, 2½. July $11,000. Aug. $12,000. 609-737-1150.

ST. MAARTEN: Waterfront hideaways. Luxury, affordable. Pool, maid, unique and sensational. Maria Licari 201-832-6655.

TAHOE: 3 BR redwood home at golf resort. Pool, club, winter downhill & cc ski areas. $1,000/week; $2,000 Xmas week. Mary & George '57. 800-3444-3741.

CAPE COD, PLEASANT BAY, WATERFRONT: Charming three bedroom three bath home. Attractively appointed; completely equipped. Dock and mooring. $2,400 per week. Trit Johnson 508-255-2886.

GREENSBORO, VERMONT: Large shingled 5 bedroom summer house right on peaceful Caspian Lake, private dock, canoe, sailboat. Golf and tennis nearby. Available July. Nat Smith '57 508-475-1209 or Susan Baldwin 609-921-8089.

CHATHAM, CAPE COD: Waterfront. Sleeps six comfortably. Charming, private, well-equipped. Ellis '53. 414-351-0001.

NEW YORK. SAILOR'S WATERFRONT HOME: Built 1930's, Connetquot River, Long Island. Commute city from Oakdale station. Sail Great South Bay. Protected shoal anchorage, beach, porch, garage, beautiful view. Completely furnished. Two bedrooms. Available June 1 for season at $1,500/mo. Nonsmokers. No pets. Charles Arnolds, 305-667-1043 evenings.

GREECE, HYDRA: Artists, writers paradise. House sleeps 5/6, 2 baths, pool, gardens, three mins. sea. $800 week. EDGARTOWN, IN-TOWN HOUSE: 4 beds, 3 baths, $1,100 week. $8,000 July/August. Call Kim Crozier in London 011-44-71-499-1344, fax 011-44-71-499-2173.

FLORENCE COUNTRY HOUSE on 54 acres, fantastic views, $100 day. 219-874-8740.

DIVING, FISHING, NATURE: Brand new luxury Big Pine Key deepwater home. 3/2, jacuzzi, dock, wildlife view. 30 miles Key West. 407-241-1053.

FRANCE: Experience village living in heart of Provence. Biking, hiking, marketing, wine tasting, luscious food. Small 16th century house, with panoramic view of mountains and wine country. July, August $500/week, $800 bi-weekly. Special rates September-May. 213-473-7530.

MARTHA'S VINEYARD: Secluded 3-bedroom contemporary in West Tisbury. Sleeps 8. 201-768-3440.

NANTUCKET: Beautiful suite in historic home. Central location. 508-228-3781.

MAINE COAST: Spectacular view on private beach, sleeps eight, three baths. 703-461-7617.

NANTUCKET: Newly restored antique home in old historic district, just steps to Main Street. 3 bedrooms, 2½ baths. Sun-drenched yard, all conveniences. John Sperry 203-387-2531. Brochure available.

MT. DESERT ISLAND, MAINE: 3 BR cottage on wooded ocean property. June through Sept. $400/week. 201-879-6913.

NANTUCKET: Superb modern three bedroom home. Waterview. Walk to beach. Dave Wetherill '64. 914-591-6808 (h); 212-509-5582(o).

LAKE MICHIGAN: Cape Cod beach house at White Lake. Magnificent moonsets and sunsets. Stays light until 10 pm. 708-441-6075.

VINALHAVEN, ME: 3 BR island waterside cottage. 1-4 persons 6/22-8/30. $500/wk., $900/2wk, $1,050/3wk, $1,200/3wk, $1450/mo. Lovely value. Trudy Paddock w'38. Until 5/20: 804-295-7358. After 6/1: 207-863-4348.

YARMOUTH, MAINE: Waterfront summer cottage overlooking Town Landing Anchorage, 2 bedrooms, 1½ baths, $500 per week. Call Parkers, Dick '46 302-478-0639, or John '52 207-781-4163.

HILTON HEAD ISLAND: Enjoy the luxury of this lovely oceanfront home in Sea Pines Plantation. Spectacular panoramic view of ocean. Private beach, excellent golf, tennis. Limit 6 persons. 800-235-6551.

1000 ISLES: Lovely home on beautifully landscaped private island. Superb fishing & recreation. 3 bedrooms, 1½ baths. Electric kitchen. All amenities. $700 per week. 516-564-8476.

BOOTHBAY HARBOR, MAINE REGION: Charming island cottage on water, sleeps 8, tennis on island, great boating area. Available July 13 to August 3 by week. Bill Achtmeyer '77. 508-369-6317.

FOR SALE

MANHATTAN: If selling a co-op, condominium, or townhouse, call about our unique 200 brokerage firm multi-list program. Sharon Baum w'62, The Corcoran Group, 645 Madison Ave., New York, NY 10022; 212-836-1036, 212-836-1038.

ISLAND HOUSE: See "For Rent, Stocking Island."

VAIL-BEAVER CREEK, COLORADO: Unique properties. 10% of commission proceeds donated, in your name, to the Yellowstone Bighorn Research Association in memory of my father, Professor Erling Dorf, Hon. '33. Bob Dorf 303-476-2421.

BOCA RATON, FLA., YACHTSMAN DREAM: Deepwater slip, 3,000 sq. ft. townhouse facing Boca Raton Hotel. Next to beach club and Boca Inlet. Magnificent home or investment. Phone 407-466-4219; 407-391-9072.

MANHATTAN, 93rd & 2nd AVE.: Sunny one-bedroom, 1½ baths in new luxury doorman condominium. L-shaped dining/living area, high floor, East River views, washer/dryer, balcony, mint condition. Asking $275K. 212-607-5720.

"MISTRAL," VERMONT: 86 private acres, including 20 pasture. 9 room, 2½ bath architect designed contemporary. Trout pond, brook, views, stone-walls, superb riding country, easy accessibility. 12 miles south of Woodstock. Asking $590,000 by owner. Henry Riley '42. 802-484-5547.

PARIS: Richard-Lemoir (11th) 650 sf. 3 rooms plus kitchen, bath, 8 sunny windows, 4th floor, spectacular circular stair classé circa 1805. $220,000. 718-834-8894.

PRINCETON TOWNSHIP, 31 acres (part of 18th century woodlots of University). Single owner since 1900. $1,500,000. L.V. Silvester, Jr. '45, Executor, Box 52, Princeton, 08542. 609-921-6171.

EASTERN SHORE OF CHESAPEAKE BAY: Free brochure featuring prime real estate. Waterfront farms, estates and homesites in Oxford, St. Michaels and Easton. Call or write Marguerite Beebe w'57. 301-822-2234 or Coldwell Banker Latham Realtors, 29 Dover St., Easton, MD 21601.

MANHATTAN, 1140 FIFTH AVENUE: Flawless five room co-op for sale. 12th fl. apt. with open sun-drenched & partial park views. Elegant & in excellent condition w/private landing, gracious gallery, formal dining room, LR, 2 BRs, 2 baths & ELK. Handsome, doorman bldg. Low maint. Asks $595,000. Knight Meem 212-410-7685 (h), 212-836-1020 (o).

NORTH CAROLINA: Tennis, anyone? Attractive 3 BR, 2 BA home, garage, all on one floor; 200 yards from Chapel Hill Tennis Club. Excellent buy, $135,000. Ted Meldahl '50. Call Margery Wiegierink, Coldwell Banker, 919-942-4482.

FOR SALE/FOR RENT

NANTUCKET—Come join the 400 happy Princeton families. We have large and small rentals, investment opportunities, estates and commercial enterprises. AND we give your investments TENDER, LOVING CARE—PREFERRED PROPERTIES. Nancie B. Taylor, w'43, Lucy T. Eaton, d'43. 508-228-2320, 800-338-7715.

WASHINGTON, DC, METROPOLITAN area, Northern Virginia, Maryland. Sales, rentals, land, property management. Colleen Finks w'61, associate broker, Pardoe & Graham, 6729 Curran St., McLean, VA 22101; 703-734-7020; eves., 703-821-2850.

MANHATTAN: Buying or selling Manhattan! Anne Sullivan Young w'67. Corcoran Group 212-836-1057; eves. 212-410-0705.

RESORTS & TRAVEL

LONDON, ENGLAND: Luxury self-catering apartments in the heart of Mayfair. British Breaks, Ltd., Box 1176, Middleburg, Virginia 22117. Tel. 703-786-6971. Fax 703-687-6291.

ARIZONA GUEST RANCH: Riding ranch-bred horses, tennis, pool, fantastic birding, shooting, all in a verdant valley surrounded by historic mountains. Season, Nov. 1 to May 15, limited to 40 guests. Brochure, Circle Z Ranch, Box 194 P-8, Patagonia, AZ 85624, winter 602-287-2091, summer 814-425-3768, Don Simmons P'49 manager.

SCOTLAND: Ardsheal House, historic home of the Stewarts of Appin, now a country house hotel owned and run by Jane & Bob Taylor (Princeton '53). Located on coast in magnificent West Highlands. Superb food. Brochure: Ardsheal House, Kentallen of Appin, Argyll PA38 4BX, Scotland. Tel.: 44-63174-227. Fax: 44-63174-342. Open Easter to Nov.

CAMPS

THE SUSQUEHANNOCK CAMPS, founded 1905 by G. Carlton Shafer '03, still under same family management of E.H. Shafer '44, G.C. Shafer '51, Priscilla H. Shafer '83. Summer resident brother/sister camps on private lakes in northeastern PA. Top quality staff instruct team and individual sports, waterfront, riding, arts and crafts, ecology. ACA accredited camps. Write Box 71, R.D. 1, Brackney, PA 18812, or call 717-967-2323/215-356-2436.

WANTED TO BUY

RARE BOOKS AND FIRST EDITIONS: We are interested in purchasing libraries or single volumes from the 15th to the 20th century. Top prices paid. Also, expert appraisals for individuals or institutions. David L. O'Neal '60, Antiquarian Booksellers, Inc., 234 Clarendon St., Boston, MA 02116; 617-266-5790.

FINE ARTWORK: American, European, Canadian, and Western oil paintings, watercolors, drawings, and bronzes purchased for immediate cash. Gallery of the Masters, Inc., 9918 Clayton Road, St. Louis, MO 63124; 314-993-4477; fax 314-993-4478.

GOODS & SERVICES

NANNIES: Trained at Nannies of Cleveland School, available for positions nationwide. Call Monica Bassett w'61. 216-521-4650.

PROFESSIONAL TAX PLANNING, ACCOUNTING, AUDIT REPRESENTATION. Personal and business. Enrolled to practice before IRS. By appointment. 212-947-6031. Virgil M. Cummins '67 (EA), 430 West 34th Street, New York, NY 10001.

BENTLEY 1960 SII RHD: Burgundy, very good condition. Estate sale, Class '48. Days 212-237-1560. Evenings 908-322-5223.

YOUR MEMOIRS: Published writer will help you compose your memoirs. For informational sheet, call Humanities Council. 609-258-4717.

MEMBERSHIP COMPUTER SYSTEM for PC: Membership, letters, planning, attendance, billing, contributions for all clubs, societies, associations, foundations. 903-876-2224.

EDUCATION

ANXIOUS ABOUT COLLEGE OR GRADUATE SCHOOL APPLICATIONS? Former Ivy admission officer will help you right from the start. College Planning Associates: 212-496-2656.

APPLYING TO COLLEGES? Educational consultant will help your son or daughter choose wisely, do the job right. Former dean, 30 years experience. Dodge Johnson '59. 215-647-6755.

Barge Beautiful Canal du Midi or Burgundy aboard "La Tortue".
Cruising Spacious, comfortable. Large sundeck, lounge, 3 twin staterooms/baths. Notable cuisine, 10-speed bikes, minibus. Seasoned, agreeable British crew. Weekly charters Apr.-Oct. Color brochure: "LaTortue", Dept P, Box 1466, Manchester, MA 01944

PLACE YOUR AD IN THE PRINCETON EXCHANGE

Name: _____

Address: _____

City: _____

State: _____ Zip: _____

Tel.#, (W): _____ (H): _____

My ad should run _____ time(s),

beginning the month of _____

Classifications: _____

Payment for all insertions must accompany initial request. My check for $_____ is enclosed. Rates per insertion: 1-5 insertions, $1.50 per word; 6-10 insertions, $1.45 per word; 11-17 insertions, $1.40 per word. Send to: Princeton Exchange, Princeton Alumni Weekly, 41 William St., Princeton, NJ 08540 (609)258-4886. No phone orders please. Issues are published 17 times from September through July. Ads will appear five-six weeks after receipt. When calculating payment, multiply number of words X number of insertions X rate per word to arrive at total price. P.O. Box number counts as two words, phone number as one word. No charge for zip code or class numerals. We cannot accept P.O. box numbers. Please attach this coupon to text and make checks payable to Princeton Alumni Weekly.

Classified Ads Work Better for You in the "Princeton Exchange"

Class Notes

12

ARTHUR C. HOLDEN
Box 182
Washington, CT 06793; 203-868-7063

This coming June, the Class of 1912 will have played the graduate role for some 79 years. Last June we circulated some advance propaganda about the desirability of gathering the progeny of our Class and parading them as proof of the ability of the Class of 1912 to "carry on." Last June we had well over 20 representatives of our Class descendants who met together at Forbes College and later visited the old 1912 quarters at 116 Alexander St. This followed the great alumni P-rade which had originated in front of Nassau Hall and marched through the campus down Prospect St. and terminated at the president's reviewing stand at Clark Field.

L'U Arthur hereby gives notice that it is time to start to think how we shall give significance to a still larger assembly of our progeny this coming June.

13

ALISON R. BRYAN
Box F
Frenchtown, NJ 08825

Last Jan., the daughter of our honored classmate Judge Joseph Smith, Mrs. Florence S. Bruder of Fair Haven, N.J., and her daughter, Isabelle, sent us a book of poems composed by them, entitled: VIEW FROM HERE.

Florence has been a faithful Class daughter for years, keeping us in touch with her generation.

The poems, some rhymed, others in blank verse, come from an inspired imagination and are written with skill and care. Mother and daughter are obviously no amateur poets. Here is one Florence has entitled "For My Father":

When yellow ribbons tied my hair,
I played in airy castles,
And wandered wild in childhood's lair where angels were my vassals. . . .
But when all fools and sages stand
'neath final stars of seven,
Oh, pray that I may grasp your hand and follow into heaven!

A member of the Class of 1991 whom we have aided financially, Tien Nguyen, has been granted from our Class Fund $500 to work in a camp in the Philippines for four months this summer and fall as a volunteer with Vietnamese refugees. She was a refugee after the Vietnam War and traveled on a packed ship to Thailand to a refugee camp there. Because of her experiences, she believes she can be of help and encouragement to the Vietnamese refugees in the Philippines.

17

ICE GRAMMER, c/o Chemical Bank
30 Rockefeller Plaza, Ste. 6100
New York, NY 10112

Since we have no news about classmates, we will devote these notes to excerpts from letters received from scholarship recipients. Myriam Exume, a recipient of the Arthur Richmond Taber War Memorial Scholarship, writes: "I am a first-year student, planning to major in civil or electrical engineering. I am enjoying the Princeton experience very much. Without this scholarship, I would not have been able to attend this school. I thank you kindly for your generosity."

Pedro Garcia-Eggen, a recipient of the Harry H. Neuberger Scholarship, writes: "I am a junior in the Woodrow Wilson School and the Program in Latin American Studies. Last semester I participated in a policy conference dealing with U.S.-Mexico relations under Prof. Paul Volcker's guidance. Princeton has been providing me with a very fulfilling experience. It is the things that your classmates do that make Princeton such a special place. You care enough to provide students like me with opportunities we would otherwise never have."

In future notes we will have more excerpts from these interesting letters, which are very much appreciated.

18

JARVIS CROSWELL
Meadow Lakes, Apt. 3108
Hightstown, NJ 08520

Further to our recital of reports on the undergraduates who are recipients of the Class of '18 Memorial Scholarships, we have a grand letter from Mary Elizabeth Huffine, a first-year student from Arkansas. This young lady has a very full plate before her as she immerses herself in the life of a happy Princeton undergrad. With an interest in medicine, she is studying calculus and, to her admitted surprise, she is "actually enjoying it." She goes on to say that "The only problem with Princeton is that there is too much to do . . . Apart from academics, I am a coxswain for the heavyweight men's crew . . . teach and take lessons in ballroom dancing . . . am working in the Food Services Dept. and setting up lab experiments for physics students." One becomes exhausted simply reading about the reach of activities of this energetic recipient of a contribution by our wonderful Class!

As we think about spring wardrobes, think about this:

Said a man to his spouse in East Sydenham,
"My best trousers! Now where have you hydenham?
It is perfectly true
They were not very new,
But I foolishly left half a quidenham."

If you have a favorite limerick or two, please send to your secretary's assistant (and proud stepson) Alan Kirk, 827 Turkey Run Rd., McLean, VA 22101.

19

GEORGE B. LANKIN
14 Lake Forest Dr.
Charlottesville, VA 22901

Thanks to Mrs. Helm's letter, we know that Elliot Irvine is in the Hillcrest Convalescent Center in Durham, N.C.

Tbor Beke wrote saying that he had received a Class of 1919 Memorial Scholarship which is very helpful in attending Princeton. He is a citizen of Hungary and says that his acceptance by Princeton has been indescribable.

It is with deep sorrow that we report the death of Leopold Eidlitz Starr Dec. 6, 1990.

20

SALLY S. McALPIN '20
Box 670
Princeton, NJ 08542

The limit on the length of Princeton memorials is obviously necessary but sometimes that means more is left out than put in. This was true of the long-awaited memorial to Bill Savage, which appears in this issue of PAW. So today the Class of 1920 dedicates the full space of its Class notes to bring you many more details that the PAW memorial could not accommodate.

It is interesting to know that Bill became the executive assistant of Sir Wilfred Grenfell and served many years as president of the Grenfell Assn. of North America. He was also director of Memorial Hospital in Morristown, and headed both the library and the Community Chest. At the memorial service held for Bill in the University Chapel, Bill's son-in-law the Rev. Guthrie Speers '50 gave a long prayer, including many remarks we would all like to share. Here they are.

"Dear God: For this dear, dear man, William Lytleton Savage, we are so deeply grateful. He called us a great satisfaction to him. What a great satisfaction he was and is to us . . . He was a gentle, generous, and gracious friend to so many . . . His devotion to his family knew no bounds. He loved us all."

To end on a more cheerful note, Guthrie adds: "A lover of the out-of-doors, he strove, not always successfully, to swing the club head, and delighted in camping on the shores of the Upper Lake, hiking the trails rising from it, and at the end of the day, before the fire, hanging his pants to dry, sometimes to burn . . . And now we rejoice in his taking on the heavenly places, the heavenly people. What a glorious time they must all be having. Help us to carry on gloriously, gently, generously, graciously, here below, for his sake and to his honor, through Jesus Christ our Lord."

We have memorials in this issue.

21

A. EDWARD CONOVER
331 Lower Doolington Rd., Apt. C-4
Newtown, PA 18940

Our 70th reunion is less than three months away and we have seven possible attendees. Tom Roberts has suggested that all who can make it gather at his home before lunch. That "How to live to 100" rule applies to the "How to live to your 70th reunion" rule, too—"Live very carefully."

Ritz Perry reports a few physical deficiencies but says he has "no problem sending '21ers best wishes."

Ty Bartow's widow recently moved to Kendal, a retirement community in Kennett Square, Penn., where she is enjoying life.

Don McGraw's widow, Elizabeth, died Jan. 21.

Keith Lundberg '92, a recipient of the Class of 1921 Scholarship, is completing his junior year. He thanks the Class for its financial help. He expects to become an electrical engineer. Best wishes to him.

Those small-world meetings of mine always added unexpected highlights to otherwise more-or-less routine travels: Julie Bryan in Seattle, Thornton Penfield in the Mediterranean, Shorty Seiberling in Montana, and Dick Lindabury in the Caribbean are all still vivid and memorable.

I'm sure there are many other similar stories floating around. How about sharing them?

22

JACK REYNOLDS, JOHN CARTER '80
103 East 84th St.
New York, NY 10028

We have received several notes about Jerry Jiranek. Jerry passed away on Jan. 27, 1990, and his record of service to the Class in many capacities is remembered by all. Frank Corcoran wrote the following memorial to Jerry:

"Jerry Jiranek, (1900-90), the dean of American furniture designers, spent 67 years in the industry. One day, in his mid-80s, when most octogenarians are ready for a break after the chores of feeding the birds and reading the morning Times, Jerry accepted a job as design consultant for the well-known furniture manufacturer, Ethan Allen. This involved driving from his home at Old Greenwich to Danbury, Conn., until 1990. During his career, Jerry numbered among his clients Magnavox, Heywood Wakefield, and Bassett. In Oct. 1990 Jerry was elected to membership in the American Furniture Hall of Fame, the only designer so honored. In the 1960s, Jerry founded the Designers Society of America and served as its president. The Class of '22 proudly saluted Jerry, who served several times as our reunion chairman, and extends its best to that ardent, redemptive, loquacious tiger football fan, his beloved Jen."

Also Hugh Richardson Jr. '53, son of Hugh Sr. sent some other notes about Jerry and his family: "Jerry Jiranek was the first alumnus to have three sons attending Princeton at the same time: Robert H. Jiranek '52, James H. Jiranek '55, and Leo A. Jiranek Jr. '56, deceased."

Jerry Jiranek was the first Class reunion chairman to arrange with the University to have a major reunion on campus. It was 1922's 25th, and it was headquartered in Hamilton Court with meals in the dining halls and lodging in Hamilton and Holder Halls. This marked the transition from mostly all-male reunions located off the University's grounds to on-campus gatherings that welcomed wives and children.

23

LARRY GOOD
201 W. Evergreen Ave., Apt. 716
Philadelphia, PA 19118

Mrs. James B. Rankin writes from Albuquerque, "Imagine my surprise and delight when, having ordered some things from the local pharmacy, they were delivered in a white paper bag marked 'Princeton!'"

Louis Dailey, our dedicated Annual Giving endowment chairman, reports on recent Class donations: "In the year ending this past June, our Class's Annual Giving totaled $95,740 . . . not a bad contribution." This sum included one new participant's generous $10,000 donation.

24

RICHARD H. HOBBS
862 Prospect Ave.
Winnetka, IL 60093

Alumni Day, Feb. 16, was enjoyed by a smaller-than-usual 1924 contingent: Hubert Aheja, his son, Fred; daughter-in-law, Reatha; nephew, Clark '91; Margery Cuyler; Ran Dunning; Louise Angill; Honorary Bobbie Emeny; Dorothy and Paul Barringer.

As has been her ever-generous custom for the past several years, Bobbie invites all classmates, wives, and relatives attending this year's Reunions to dinner at her residence Fri., June 7, prior to our Old Guard luncheon and newly re-routed P-rade the following day. Acceptances only by phone, 609-924-4660, hopefully prior to June 6, or by a note to Bobbie, 221 Elm Rd., Princeton, NJ 08540.

We have notes from Sam Benedict, Dick Brown, Bobbie Emeny, Fred Foth, Henry Hollenberg, David McKee, Eddy Leh, and Dave Trimble.

Betty and Sam Benedict still live in Cincinnati in the home they built in 1936 where they are both well and comfortable. Sam writes that instead of going to Ariz. or Fla. for the winter and to the Upper Peninsula for the summer they now stay close to home. Their daughter was selected by the governor of Ohio to be his Lt. governor, but he was one of only two Democratic governors not to be reelected.

Dick Brown reports from Evanston that his is fine. He is the originator of the Hi-C name. This drink was enriched with vitamin C at the suggestion of his wife, Evelyn, which contributed greatly to its success. Dick is one of the three surviving members of the Chicago-area contingent.

Fred Foth, who lives in Cedar Grove, N.J., has three grandsons in college, none at Princeton. Kevin, a junior at Rutgers, is working on a school project that includes the renovation of the governor's mansion in Princeton.

Eddy Leh says that both he and Jack, our Class baby, who was with him at our 65th, are doing well. Dave Trimble, who is very active in the Presbyterian church, was working hard for the cause of peace in the Persian Gulf until hostilities started.

If you have not already done so, please send your $30 for Class dues to Paul Barringer, P.O. Box 672, Princeton, NJ 08542.

25

JOHN L. K. JENNEY
Box 123
Montchanin, DE 19710

It seems timely to recall the war record of our Class. Most of us were too young to serve in the first War. We did have two members in it. John Yeager, born in 1895, enlisted in Sept. 1918 and retired as a captain. Your secretary believes that John Pepe was the other. The average age of the Class at Pearl Harbor was 38. Our 20th Reunion Record was dedicated to Jack Hayden, Buzz Stout, and Wally Trapnell who died in WWII. About 25% of the Class served in the armed services and some members rose to the rank of Army colonel and Navy commander.

We did produce one major general—Russell A. Ramsey. We recently received a letter from his son, Dr. Russell W., who is a prof. of natl. security affairs at the Air Command and Staff College, Maxwell Air Force Base, Ala.: "Here is an update on my father. His beloved wife died July 1990. I moved Dad to the Albany Health Center (223 3rd St., Albany, GA 31701), where he would love to hear from classmates. He may be the senior alumnus in military rank and one of the most highly decorated." Russ was born in Sandusky, Oh., where he was a leading lawyer and prominent in community affairs. At Princeton he was a captain in R.O.T.C. and played polo. His impressive record, briefly summarized below, is being filed with Alumni Records: A captain in the Natl. Guard, he was mobilized in 1940 and sent to the Far Eastern theater in 1942. As a battalion commander he served in the New Georgia and Bougainville campaigns, receiving the Legion of Merit and other decorations for valor . . . In 1944 he attended the Army Staff College at Leavenworth, and he was chief of staff of the 37th Infantry at Linguayan Gulf and the recapture of Manila, receiving the Silver and Bronze Stars and other decorations. Demobilized in 1946 he became the Commander of the 3rd Infantry Reserve Division with the rank of brigadier (and later major) General, retiring in 1960.

26

ROBERT WOHLFORTH
57 Rockwell Rd.
Ridgefield, CT 06877

A complete report on the establishment of the Chair of Excellence in Surgical Research in honor of classmate Carroll Long at the Quillen-Dishner College of Medicine at East Tenn. State Univ. last year has come to hand. It is an impressive record of Carroll's distinguished career in medicine, medical research, and teaching, as well as an account of his valuable service to many medical institutions and community health projects. Carroll's long affiliation with and service to the Methodist Church, and his and Lou Ann's work with its foreign medical missions, are also highlighted.

Recent issues of our SUMMER SUMMARY have carried accounts of these overseas experiences. Carroll, who is chairman emeritus of surgery, is the oldest active physician in the Johnson City, Tenn.

area, where the East Tennessee medical school is located. He was first in that area to be certified by the American Board of Surgery and to carry out medically oriented research at the institution. After Princeton Carroll studied at the Univ. of Penn. medical school and at the Univ. of Edinburgh in Scotland for two years. He returned to Penn. for his degree. At Johnson City, Tenn., in addition to an extensive practice and his innovative teaching at medical school, he served as city commissioner and later as mayor for a number of years. His model plan for effecting fair racial relations among all schools in Johnson City brought him much attention. He is recognized as one of the elder statesmen and pioneers of medical advances in the entire Appalachian area, and we congratulate Carroll on a most worthy and useful life.

We record with sorrow the death of Assoc. Mbr. Morgan Hazen McCampbell, widow of our classmate, Herbert Hook McCampbell Jr., last Sept. in Knoxville, Tenn.

27

NELSON R. BURN
36 Lexington Rd.
West Hartford, CT 06119

Fin McElroy reported last Nov. that he had recently taken a "most interesting" trip on the Snake River in Montana. A girl in the tourist party provided some excitement by picking up a rattlesnake, which sent her to the hospital. Colonel B. Rhess (U.S.A. ret.) writes: "I'm sure my dad Bill [William Jones Rhess] would have wanted you and his classmates to know of mother's passing. I made a small donation to the school in her memory. I talked with Bill Wood the other day, he was like an uncle to me."

After lunching with Bryan in Richmond, Joe Johnston says that impaired vision has not in the least impaired the Bryan "old wit and charm." As for himself: "Nothing wrong with me but old Anno Domini." Bill Avery's wife reports that he is "proud to have a freshman granddaughter in 1937 Hall overlooking 1927 Hall." She is the daughter of Cameron Avery '60, Bill's son. This must be a comforting joy to Bill, who since our 60th reunion has suffered from several illnesses.

Mil and Liz Koebler recently took an adventurous trip: down the Danube from Vienna and on to Istanbul, where they visited Turkish friends, then to Asia Minor, including Ankara and Cappadocia. They love their new home in Beaufort, S.C., and anticipate fun on the Royal Pines Golf Course, "at our back door." Anne Fetts (Julian's widow) reports the Sept. arrival of a great-granddaughter, Jessica Anderson. "It will be quite a while before I see her," she adds—her parents are stationed in Germany.

28

R. PARK JOHNSON
Box 28
Penny Farms, FL 32079; 904-284-8698

We are always glad to receive letters from Princeton students who have been helped by scholarships related to the Class of 1928, bringing us a first-hand touch with present undergraduate life. Becky Jones '92 of Skokie, Ill., is a recipient of a Jadwin Scholarship. She had just finished her junior paper, "Defining Germany: the Frankfurt Parliament (1848) and the Polish Question." She had to translate transcripts from the proceedings of the Parliament. It was good preparation for her plans to work in Germany this coming summer. She is a musician, a track athlete, and a student leadership peer counselor.

Scott Wunsch '92, a recipient of the Leander Stockwell Jadwin Memorial Scholarship, comes from Circleville, Oh., and is majoring in mechanical and aerospace engineering, and is also a certificate student in the Woodrow Wilson School. He runs cross-country, and in the 5000-meter and 10,000-meter track events, and works with Boy Scouts.

Timothy Scott '90, a Jadwin Scholarship holder who graduated last June, is now living in Boston with several Princeton classmates, and is hoping to do graduate work in energy policy at U.C.-Berkeley. He wants to work on some project connected with environmental improvement, which will have a positive impact on the world in which we live.

All of these expressed their gratitude for the scholarship aid. As one of them said, "How lucky I have been to participate in such a wonderful experience as Princeton."

Julie Nevius, widow of Dick Nevius, died Jan. 12, 1991, in Bloomfield, Conn. Julie's enthusiasm enhanced the good cheer at our 60th reunion and other Class affairs since Dick died in 1985. We have a memorial in this issue.

29

LOUIS F. KEMP
12 Winthrop Rd.
Guilford, CT 06437; 203-453-4646

From the other side of the world we hear that Dan Evans is enjoying good health in "Tynllys," his home in Wales, and sends every good wish to the Class. Dick Oble tells that Cliff Read came home to St. Paul last summer and mentioned that Cliff was thinking of coming for good from his home in Cornwall Bridge, Conn. Sure enough, Cliff wrote shortly after, "Since the death of my wife a year ago, I've been trying to decide where I would prefer to be lonely: in the country at home, where I have lived many years; in a retirement community surrounded by similar antiquities; or in St. Paul, where I grew up and have roots, a few relatives, and some sturdy surviving contemporaries."

Johnny Haines strikes a familiar note when he tells us that he drove back East twice during the past year—the second time to his 60th reunion at the Tome School. It's a longer trip than it used to be, especially when driving alone. He's looking forward to 1994 at Princeton. A sad message from the wife of Justice Lockwood, that he suffered a stroke last Sept. He returned home Nov. 16 from the rehabilitation hospital. He's walking and doing some talking, so is making a fairly good recovery. An item in the Vt. Brattleboro REFORMER reveals that Dutch Brodhead is a regular worker among the volunteers helping to build "Habitat for Humanity" that affords decent housing to families in need.

Regrettably we lost Benjamin Shoemaker Oct. 30, 1989. A memorial will follow. We have a memorial in this issue.

30

ROBERT A. "RED" SCHMIDT
8008 Westover Rd.
Bethesda, MD 20814

Add Ben Labaree to the list of those who have had a successful cataract operation. He is already thinking of having one on the other eye. The Labarees celebrated their 50th wedding anniversary last Oct.

We have just learned that Jim McCormick, long carried among the missing, died Aug. 1, 1986. He had worked for Creole Petroleum in Venezuela for many years.

George Beddoe, who moved to Louisville following his remarriage, now spends winters in Perdita Key, outside of Pensacola.

Pat Maroney informs us that Anne Cook has built a new house in New Florence, Penn., to replace the one that burned down a year or so ago. The Maroneys were Anne's first guests in the new house.

Charlie Hannab writes that he is still able to "eat, drink, and putt." Many of us would settle for that. And from Charles H. Ellis we hear that they are enjoying retirement home living among delightful surroundings and stimulating people. They spent Thanksgiving in N.Y. with their daughter and Christmas in Richmond with their son.

Juan Carlos Sifuentes '94, who is the holder of the Richard Warfield Memorial Scholarship, has written a nice letter thanking the Class for having made possible his Princeton education.

Lillian and Charlie Hertz enjoyed a two-week cruise on a small ship around the Olympic Peninsula in Oct.

Bill Trimble's farm hand for 27 years retired in Sept. and as yet Bill has not found a replacement. Bill says he is trying to keep his place in reasonable shape having acquired "a modest skill driving a large tractor and thus far damaging only a small tree." He has yet to attempt snow plowing.

With regret we report the death of Fred Graves on Dec. 24, 1990, in McAllen, Tex.

31

HUON T. KERN
15-01-U Meadow Lakes
Hightstown, NJ 08520; 609-448-4100

Somehow Dave Kretler came upon this photo of a dozing reunioning classmate. He thought it might be Lane Lovell, but Lane said he never dozed while reunioning, but offered to make a contribution to Class funds if someone could make a positive identification. Well, for starters, does the name Pavlov ring a bell?

As to our upcoming 60th, Bill Neuman thinks we'll have 92 classmates, ten associates, and, with wives and offspring, maybe 167 coming and going, and that begins to sound like a record-breaker.

HERE & THERE: Glenn Andreus says he has a new steel hip that "kicks like a revolver," but he hopes to walk the distance in the P-rade. Bob Bowie was in Moscow recently at a Soviet conference on Eisenhower. Arthur Crocker, Jack Gates, and Bill Miller meet Sundays at St. John's Church, Cold Spring Harbor, N.Y. George Erdman writes that his wife, Anne, a professional teacher of weaving, received a "First-in-Class" award.

Joe Hibben was acclaimed in the San Diego DAILY TRANSCRIPT for his community work with the local opera program and the art museum. Al Jackman winters in Maine "at the foot of a ski mountain." Alex Lofthouse won a prize for the first time in his life, a trip to Hawaii, but having been there recently he negotiated a visit to London instead. Charlie Miner was also in London with the Penn. Bar Assn.

Ed Baumann owns a filly that won a prize in the Tenn. American Saddlebred futurity. Well, as they say, you can never bet enough on a winning horse.

Keep in mind our spring luncheon at the Nassau Club, Princeton, Apr. 9.

We regret to report the deaths of Archer B. Lawrence, Robert H. Sayre, and M. Roos Wallis.

32

MATLAND A. EDEY
1199 Park Ave.
New York, NY 10128

As promised, some to-ing and fro-ing. Babs and Jack Kellogg were in Tex. not long ago and found time to visit the Tex Whites and get treated to a tour of Houston. Tex says that the Kellogg social calendar was so full that the visit was all too short. The Bill Gilmores went to Disneyland and Sea World with Arne and Maury Waud. Bill also sees a lot of Jean and Fred Doolittle. Stan Bright, who lives in Islesford, Me., and goes a mile or two south to Northeast Harbor for the winter, manages to get REALLY SOUTH from time to time, and has been observed recently as far away as N.Y., lunching with DeWitt Stern at the Princeton Club, and on another occasion at the Brook Club with Matt Edey. George Agnew, who sailed down the Danube last summer (barely—the water was dreadfully low), joined Bill Chaffee at a Princeton Club get-together at Vero Beach and is hoping for another '31 and '32 mini reunion in Florida this year. Dan Streeter has been to Fairhope, Ala., twice to visit Mary Emma and Jack Potts. Jack, who has had a couple of really rotten years plagued by heart and abdominal surgery, not to mention eye trouble, is feeling far better and is walking three miles a day. He reports that Peter Paine was recently in the hospital for a hip replacement. Millard West helped Hib Sabin celebrate his 80th birthday (tit for tat; Hib was on hand for Millard's last year), and reports that Hib is as fit as ever. Millard still loves golf at Chevy Chase or at Sea Island, Ga., and says that his wife is delighted that he still reports to the office every day.

We have a memorial in this issue.

33 ARTHUR MOODY
600 E. Cathedral Rd., Apt. A314
Philadelphia, PA 19128

Curly Marsb says that he and Maeve made their annual visit to Boca Grande, and saw "Keidel et al." The et al. was shorter this year than last, when it included Agnew, the Crows, Carters, Gaffneys, plus Keidels. This year the Crows made it. Curly did talk to Pbil Smith on the phone. He also went to the east coast, where he saw the Beardsleys, Evanses, and the Harringtons. He is now back home, ready for the big push on Annual Giving. Please cooperate with him.

Bob Keidel would like to compile a list of classmates and widows living in continuing care retirement communities, described in last summer's newsletter, said list to appear this summer. Those known at this time are Bishop, Brooks, Croul, Eberington (who, incidentally, is taking Arch Brooks's place as regional chairman, Arch having left region five), Chip Green, Hildy Hellerson, Hilles, Hirst, Loveland, Moody, Perera, Lil Phylfe, and Andy Smith. Not sure about George White. Ship Troth is said to be looking. Please inform Moody immediately if you know of anyone else.

David Ludlum has sent us a theater review from the N.Y. TIMES of a play starring Jennifer Van Dyke, at the Second Stage Theater. We can't say off-Broadway, because it's at 76th St. and Broadway. Mel Gussow paid high praise to Ms. Van Dyke, saying her performance made up for the shortcomings of the play. So who is Jennifer Van Dyke? Well, her mother is Marcia Perera Van Dyke, daughter of George Perera, and wife of the Rev. Nick Van Dyke, who, according to Dave, "married several of our children."

We are sorry to report the death Jan. 23, 1991, of Charlie Emerson, in Wellesley, Mass. For the family this is an especially severe blow, as Charlie's brother-in-law, Walt Compton, died last Oct. We have a memorial in this issue.

34 RALPH K. FITCHE
4347 Province Line Rd.
Princeton, NJ 08540

Army Rust, whose Bear Creek Ranch in Menard, Tex., has suffered from lack of rain in the past, was cheered by last year's weather. As against an average annual rainfall of 21 inches, 29 inches fell through Sept. "Weatherwise," Rusty says, "1990 was the best year of my life."

Jean (the widow of Tom Trimble, who has lived in the house she and Tom built in 1972 (he died in '78) in Clover, on the border between South and North Carolina, is chairman of the music committee of her church in Charlotte, 19 miles to the north and east. She works with two organists, two soloists, and "a fine committee."

Dan Hinman, shown here with his grandson, Steve Howland, the son of Dan's daughter Anne and her husband, Richard Howland, at a Kent School reunion last year. Dan and Steve are both Kent graduates.

Dave Wintermann was feted by his wife Eula at a surprise dinner party at the Houston Country Club in Jan. to celebrate his 80th birthday. Among the 42 friends in attendance were Bo and Bill Hawkins.

Bill (English) Wright celebrated his 80th with festivities that lasted three days. "I was honored," he says, "by the presence of my three step-sons, who came without the encumbrance of wives and children, so we could concentrate on first things first." Some class!

35 JOSEPH C. HAZEN JR.
94 Essex Rd.
Summit, NJ 07901

MEN WORKING. Since his retirement in 1979 from AVCO Corp., where he was assistant to the chairman and president, Fred Richards has been busy managing his own company, Richards Resources Inc., consultants in financial and personnel matters. But, he finds time for volunteer work too. He has served as V.P. of the Natl. Executive Service Corps and president of the U.S.O. of Metropolitan N.Y., in which he is still active. He and Jean live in Stamford, Conn. . . . John Sayen was retired as emeritus prof. of medicine at the Univ. of Penn. in 1982, but is still a full-time teacher, researcher, and practitioner in the field of cardiovascular medicine. He and Ann live in Haverford, Penn. . . . Attorney John Barrett serves now and then as an arbitrator for the American Arbitration Assn. and has had some interesting cases. But, lately, what has interested him most was his detailed correspondence with fellow lawyer Barry Coughlin of Cleveland about a case Barry recently argued before the U.S. Supreme Court. "Presenting a case in that arena is the summa cum summa for a trial lawyer, and I envied Barry more than somewhat. It was a thrill for me to follow the process all the way through such a case—particularly since I had no responsibility whatever. I could just sit back and enjoy it." John and Loo Ann live in Encinitas, Calif.

MEN PLAYING. One of Sandy Ketcham's pastimes is cards. "I play bridge in certain august societies which enables me to vie, separately, with Frank Cheston and Bob Lydecker. Both formidable." All three live in the neighboring communities of Short Hills and Summit, N.J.

SMALL WORLD DEPT. Dinnie and The Geer live practically next door to Fran and Fred Eberington in a life care community in Bryn Mawr, Penn. Ike is retired from the real estate business; Fred, from the textile yarn business. (Dinnie is a sister of Ralph Taggart, who died 3½ years after graduation.)

36 JAMES Q. BENSON
24 Aylesbury Cir., Windermere
Madison, CT 06443

Marnie Brown and Betty Constable certainly deserve praise for the exciting schedule of events lined up for our 55th reunion June 6-9 In Feb. we all received details of the program. If you have not already done so, please answer Betty's short questionnaire as to planned attendance and lodging needs. Be sure to sign your name on the white card.

Bill Scheide has been named chairperson for 1991 of the Joint Commission on Civil Rights for the Borough of Princeton and Princeton Township.

Raoul H. "Joe" Nebr reports that he and Jo-Ann recently returned from former East Germany and observes it is incredible what the Communists did to the inhabitants and what they did not do for the country still ravaged by and after the war. He adds that conditions in Russia are indeed also deplorable. He also mentions that he has retired from the Prudential Insurance Company of America after some 40 years with the company. He observes that, between his father's, Jo-Ann's and his seniority, they totaled 100 years of service.

We had lunch in early Feb. with John Zacharias at the historic Griswold Inn in quaint Essex, Conn., at the mouth of the Conn. River. He and his wife, "Muz," plan to be at our 55th.

It is with regret that we report the death Jan. 26, 1991, of John Cornell Murray Jr. Some 15 of our classmates died in 1990.

37 STANFORD F. MEDINA
250 Broadway, Rm. 2104
New York, NY 10007

Coy Honsaker is enjoying his retirement at Apt. 102, 49 Woodland Dr., Vero Beach, FL 32962, along with one or two other '37ers. Other new addresses: John Kinney, 9254 Emberglow La., Dallas, TX 75231 (see below); Johnny Chubet, FL-9-A Lakeside La., Ocean Reef Club, Key Largo, FL 33037; Carl Lutz, 3264 Candle Ridge Ct., Orlando, FL 32822; of our widows, Jim Barber's Barbara, 1 Summit Pl., Columbia, SC 29204-2401, Jim Bussey's Virginia, Apt. B, 6745 31st Way South, St. Petersburg, FL 33712-5734; and Warren Munsell's Jane, 8 Greenwood Rd., Dover, MA 02030-2126.

Bob Clary has horrible news. His son Tom, age 45, with whom he has been practicing law since 1972, was killed last Nov. 1 in an auto accident, leaving three children, 12, 14, and 15, now living in Bainbridge Island, Wash., and a prairie fire Nov. 23 devastated the ranch of his son Dick, killing many hundreds of cows.

Paul Miller's grandson Josh is a sophomore at Princeton, fourth in a direct line from Rev. Paul G. Miller '04, Paul '37 and David Miller '64 and eighth member of the family to attend.

Tom Kinney, now retired from Sam Gordon's in Madison, N.J., is slowing down after a hectic moving period. His house in Livingston sold Oct. 9 and he became homeless till arriving in Dallas Oct. 11, welcomed by Bruce Pyle (and by now we hope by Jim Martin, Pbil Porter, and Art Riggs), with furniture and spare car following, to stay with his daughter Janie, husband, and two children, until his purchase of a "down-sized" townhouse Oct. 15, moving in Nov. 2. Bruce celebrated his 75th birthday Jan. 9 with son David, son Frank being rained in at Plano and son Rob iced in at Tulsa, and announced a limited edition of the Pyle genealogy of 568 pages and probably 568 Pyles.

Asb Wall's smiling face appeared in the Brooks Brothers house organ OFF THE CUFF last Dec. Stacy Capers returned the same month from a ski trip to Mont Tremblant, Canada, with his 5'11" grandson, while last Jan., Art Fallon took off for Australia and New Zealand.

We have memorials in this issue.

38 WILLIAM P. TAMS
Box 25217
Jackson, WY 83001; 307-733-5193

Trudy Paddock took the Alumni College trip to the U.S.S.R. "From Gogol to Glasnost" and we'll use her own words to describe it: "... under the superb tutelage of vibrant Professor Ellen Chances. The participating group proved resilient, cohesive, and good-humored: all necessary qualities to survive the rigors and glitches of travel within the Soviet Union. We were given diplomas for having absorbed palaces, museums, universities, embassies, Ellen's lectures, operas, ballet, Moscow circus, unfamiliar food and almost no vodka at all, an overnight train ride from Moscow to Leningrad and the form of 'mushroom-picking' in the woods that has nothing to do with the picking of edibles. I was thrilled to be presented with a wild Princeton T-shirt for getting by in the clothes I left home in, as my only bag was lost for the duration. Thanks, Princeton!"

If you're interested in coincidences or numerology, Hav Smith has this for you: "My birthday is Apr. 18, never mind the year—my younger daughter's birthday is Apr. 18 and her younger son happened to pop out on—guess what—Apr. 18." No claim is made for precise planning.

Bob Altman, our Buffalo, N.Y. number cruncher, reports that he has nothing to tell, then relates that he recently returned from a great 23 days in Italy. A widower, he has a flock of delightful grandchildren to keep him stepping.

Ed Stokes is enjoying semi-retirement, playing golf and spending a couple of months in Florida each winter, doubtless to recover from seeing every Yale game for a great many years. Do you suppose we could bribe him to stay home from the game for a few years?

Ty Cobb and Ed Olsan are still hanging in there, representing us Eight-Balls in Rochester, N.Y.

We regret to report the deaths of Phil Carubers Jan. 13, James Kerr Jan. 22, and Charlie Reed Feb. 1. Memorials will follow. We have memorials in this issue.

39

RICHARD R. UHL
12 Charlotte Ct.
Briarcliff Manor, NY 10510

A letter from Newell Brown: "In case you are toying with the idea of initiating a category of Class column entitled ABERRANT LIFE-STYLES, herewith a photo-op submission. Few of our classmates, I would judge, heat with wood. Among those, I'd guess, few fell, haul, buck, and split their own wood. And among those, I'd judge, even fewer haul logs to the sawbuck with their horses. And among those, I do wonder whether any horse involved is a pedigreed Arabian."

"This is what you see: Newell Brown on Khamas with a log in tow, on his modest spread west of Boulder at 8000' with the Divide as backdrop. Firewood team includes friend Jane Sayre and chain saw and Trigger in hauling harness."

Also from Boulder, John Nelson writes, "Like Nat Boynton (PAW Dec. 5) I am retired but still publishing, not on baseball but something just as arcane: philosophy." In the past year four articles appeared in philosophical journals and Univ. Press of America published his book (with Tibor Machan) A DIALOGUE PARTLY ON POLITICAL LIBERTY.

Curt Cummings reports his roommate Ben Howell has just had published by Cambridge Univ. Press his third book INTRODUCTION TO SEISMOLOGICAL RESEARCH HISTORY AND DEVELOPMENT, a significant contribution to scientists in the growing study of earthquakes.

Bob McClung's 60th book for young readers was published last fall: HUGH GLASS, MOUNTAIN MAN.

40

BENJAMIN FULLER
6119 Vernon Terr.
Alexandria, VA 22307; 703-329-1961

Seldom has evidence of 1940's unconquerable tradition of FOREVER FORWARD AND FOREVER

YOUNG been so vividly displayed as in this magnificent picture taken at the time of our 50th reunion. These youthful and vigorous 1940 crewmen, proudly wearing their orange and black 50th reunion rowing colors, are lined up at the Lake Carnegie boathouse prior to establishing a superlative performance on Carnegie's waters, without the slightest indication of exhaustion or upside-down rowing shells. Back row (l-r): Curt Lamp, Rag Hudson, Ed Holloway, Fitz Green, Neil Proeb, Jake Millar, Doc Haight, Pai Merlo-Smith, Frank MacMurray, Larry Canton. In front (l-r): Coxswains Beau Pearre and Vic deWolfe. How sad that Fitz Green left these rowing ranks last Sept. We admire this entire group for their spirit, energy, and participation. Long may they continue to pull a powerful oar on behalf of 1940.

Attending the Princeton Alumni College in Red Lodge, Mont., last Sept. to explore the Beartooth Mountains were classmates Gordon Griffin, Shel Judson, Bill Snyder, and Luther Young. Writes Luther: "It was a terrific week—stimulating course work, beautiful mountains, perfect weather, and a very interesting group."

Great. Here is more news from the West Coast. Modesto, Calif., resident Frank Brennan announces the arrival of their first grandchild—a girl, Alycia, was born to son Bob Brennan '81 and his wife, Cory, on July 3, 1990.

We have a memorial in this issue.

41

BILL WILSON
Box 1420
Bridgehampton, NY 11932; 516-537-2458

Athletic prowess of 1941 vintage will be saluted wherever found. Pictured are Edie Richardson and Ted Fuller posing on a Greenwich greensward with trophies for winning second-flight doubles in Conn. State's croquet tournament.

Dan Shimsbont wrote a letter from Israel to Lynn Tyson on Jan. 14 saying that he and Rose think they can come to the 50th. "At the moment we are sitting here peacefully and waiting to see what Saddam Hussein will do in the next few days... our whole preparation for this has included mainly getting some working flashlights and radio batteries and a few cans of tuna-fish. Plus G.I. gas masks." Norm Hilton's son Nick took over his father's company back in 1980 and has concentrated on infusing its classic clothing with a "European sensibility" for fast-laners who have become bored with Brooks. The Norman Hilton Co. was founded by Norm's grandfather, Joseph, who emigrated with two brothers from Kiev to Linden, N.J. in 1888.

Bob Lusey's Cortina Learning Intd., which specializes in foreign-language books and recordings, has moved to impressive collegiate Gothic headquarters at 19 Newtown Tpk., Westport, CT 06880. In Dec. Charley Schuep returned from 40 days in the hospital—writing that he is counting his blessings and that if he could still count dollars after a couple of months of home care, he would help out with the 50th celebration. As of Feb. 11, the list of those coming has grown by the addition of Barker, B. Bell, Black, Bonnyman, Contant, D. Davis, Ellis, MacColl, Plitney, Pogue, Moyra Schroeder, St. Claire, Tomlinson, Dick Walther, and R. Wilson. The 151 who have signed on are bringing 116 wives. No stag party this.

42

ARMSTRONG HUNTER
R.R. 1, Box 250, Perkinsville, VT 05151
802-263-5361; (fax 802-263-9263)

From a Hill School '38 column (Randy Swift, N.J., editor) via Herdy Elmer (Fla.): "Klemm Harvey (Mich.) was reminded of the fact there hasn't been a 'grandchildren count' in some time. It looks like Klemm is in the lead with seven grandchildren and one great-grandchild." (Great-grandfatherhood! Are there others besides Jim Houley and Klemm there already?) Randy's column adds that Klemm had been "on a motorcycle ride in the San Juan Mountains in southwest Colo. [for] a one-week adventure."

Smoky Williams (Fla.), Feb.: "New hip is now three months in operation and doing fine. In Oct. I enjoyed wearing my Princeton cap and gown to the inauguration of the new president of Florida Atlantic Univ. in Boca Raton. [In academic procession] I was paired with Penn., a step behind Harvard & Yale. My Ph.D. collar is orange (or bronze?) for economics, so I looked properly orange & black—an observation not lost on H. & Y." Smoky reports also that fellow Floridian Bob Mayer is "recently over cancer surgery, feels well, hopes they got it all—a wish we all share."

On ham radio recently, Roger Whitlock (N.C.) got into conversation with a retired physicist in Princeton who reminisced about the late Art Brokaw's work as municipal engineer during construction and certification of 1942 dorm.

John Walbridge (N.Y.), on Dec. A.G. flap: "Michelle and I spent a delightful evening with Lala and Ed Eisenbart in Charlottesville, Va., on our way to visit our daughter in Charlotte, N.C." Buzz Seibals (Ala.), also on A.G. flap, writes, probably for many of us, "No news of interest from here."

Mention of A.G. flaps reminds us: Early this year each alumnus/a who had answered A.G.'s call every year since graduation was sent a little flag as memento. Learning of this we asked how many '42ers were sent them, thinking it might chance to be That Number. A.G. office's answer: not 42, but 4.

43

JACK LAPIN
10 Vardon Rd.
West Hartford, CT 06117; 203-523-8929

To all who have written me personally since the newsletter appeared, my heartfelt thanks for your words of praise. But rest assured I am not alone in this undertaking. I would like to use this forum to publicly acknowledge the greater contributions of Ed Essertier, who formats the whole endeavor in its final form; and Mignon Cameron, wife of Brod Cameron, who produces the finished product by word processor. They both do a terrific job.

Dickie and Chan Bates were off on Jan. 21 on another South Seas adventure. They sailed from L.A. for Bora Bora, Raratonga, Tongatapu, Veneatu, the Celebes, and Borneo. Chan expressed regret at having to miss the Class dinner and Ted Van Buren's mini-reunion in Florida, but added, "Dickie and I do like to go 'South of the Equator' when the snow and cold arrive."

Phil Connell wrote that he had dinner with Helen and Harris Covington when they were down from their N.C. home to Manalapan, Fla.

From the Jan. 15 Hartford COURANT: "The Supreme Court confronted journalistic ethics and libel law as it considered reviving a lawsuit against a magazine writer, Janet Malcolm, accused of making up quotes. Washington lawyer H. Bartou Farr, representing Malcolm, urged the court to bar such lawsuits from reaching juries, unless those suing can prove a misquotation amounts to 'a knowing change in the overall substance' of what someone really said."

Two classmates continue to rack up big numbers in years of service to Annual Giving as regional chairmen. George Hochschwender, of Fla. Suncoast, is in his 21st year, while Herb Jones recently concluded his 12th in W.Va.

A report on the Class dinner will appear in the Apr. 17 issue.

44

HERVEY S. STOCKMAN
1041 Matador Dr., S.E.
Albuquerque, NM 87123; 505-296-7057

There is still time to make '44's Spring Fiesta Bash in New Orleans Apr. 4-7, 1991. John Ware (914-723-6976) and Brisson Woods (504-891-8754) will provide the vital info. you will need. Signing on to swell our numbers: Eastman, Grace, Holmes, Munyan, Nalle, Patterson, Sangren, Strawbridge, and Thomson.

In the background color of Geoffrey Wolff's novel, THE FINAL CLUB, the author gave our lederhosen to '45. Lake Carnegie, rowing, and the boat-house play a role in the book as well. In real life, last fall's oarsmen received a lovely lightweight eight, a gift from Sandy McDonnell.

The omnipresent Herb Hobler christens the elegant shell, while Styve Pell '53, secretary of Princeton's Rowing Assn., checks the spill. Eight other generous souls of '44, Brooks Hall (deceased), Clint Ivins, Jere Meserole, Laird Parks, John Price, Phil von Hemert, Paul Windels, and Joe Zink made contributions toward general rowing program expenses and special needs of 1989-90. It is unfortunate that space in these columns limits naming all our generous classmates who year in and out support Princeton athletics.

Ellen Donnelly sent us a happy note with the good news that Hal is recovering nicely from a heart problem of last Sept. While on the medical beat, Gordy Magill has recently taken a job with Manhattan Hip Center (E. 23rd St., N.Y.C.). He will break away from the sockets and joints to make the Nassoons' 50th reunion in Apr. and our own in June. He reports two granddaughters. Solid correspondent Dave Metcalfe, on the St. Louis R.C.G.A. Mil. Affairs Committee, listened spellbound to Gen. Merrill McPeak, U.S.A.F. chief of staff, extolling the Lockheed F-117 Stealth fighter's performance in the Gulf War. Dave passed on news of Don Brandin which will appear in our next column. Stand with our troops.

45

WARREN W. EMMETT
U.S. Courthouse, 915 Lafayette Blvd.
Bridgeport, CT 06604

Following up on our promise of more pics from the Naples reunion last year, herewith the smiling features of Evelyn and Bill Lambert and Mary and former prexy Wat Stewart.

N.Y.C.-area classmates are again reminded to save Tues., Apr. 30, for the 5-8 P.M. cocktail reception at the Princeton Club. Details in your mail.

Our mature Class is typical in its percentage of captains of industry, and individuals of note in medicine, law, banking, insurance, et als. Likewise, our ranks feature many prominent in education, and we even claim legislators, diplomats, ministers, and journalists. One among us however is unique in his accomplishments for preservation of natural resources. John Kauffmann is enjoying semi-retirement at Acadia National Park, near Bar Harbor, Me. The park is an appropriate location, since John spent his career as a Natl. Park Service planner. John has long been recognized as one of our leading conservationists. His accomplishments include the Cape Cod Natl. Seashore, Allagash Waterway, and Potomac River Basin Study. His crowning achievement was the planning and organization of studies for the Gates of the Arctic Natl. Park in Alaska. Classmates can vicariously share John's Alaskan experiences. Noted Princeton author and NEW YORKER contributor John McPhee '53, in one of his finest books, COMING INTO THE COUNTRY, devotes several chapters to McPhee's Alaskan explorations with Kauffmann. It makes fascinating reading.

46

ROBERT CAMPBELL JR.
Investors Security Services
636 Morris Tpk., Short Hills, NJ 07078

1946's 45th

This is showbiz. Bob Hawkins graduated in 1948, having majored in languages and aspired to dramatic criticism. In 1954 he was sent to Rome by Variety magazine to cover news of the European theater. There he met Rosella, of an Italian family, married, and spent the next ten years in London, returning to N.Y. in 1977. Now, exec. V.P. of Variety, he has a daughter, Carolyn '92, majoring, like her dad, in Romance languages, and a son, Frederick, in prep school. Bob's wife writes that he is temporarily back in Rome, and may, therefore, miss Reunions. The rest of our mail on Reunions reads more like Dave Peacock's: "Planning to come back for our 45th; see you then."

Dr. Peter Pulrang catches us up on his activities: "Practiced pediatrics, Plattsburgh, N.Y., 1954-75; county public health officer, N.Y. State 1975-80; director of maternal and child health programs, Washington State 1980-90; now traveling over the country as a physician evaluator in the Joint Commission of Healthcare Organization Accreditation." David Coli says he continues to practice law full time in Williamstown, Mass., plus "giving maximum emotional support to Williams football, whose 21-game winning streak is now longest in the country."

Charles Shedd states that 1990 was "our year for weddings. Nancy, our daughter (who graduated Yale in '81 and Rochester Medical in '87), married a physician on St. Patrick's Day 1990; our son, Robert, who graduated from Bucknell and Penn. State, was married last summer. We also had numerous visits with two of our grandsons, both named Daniel. Bob Goldemberg tells us Dave Hutchinson and Kurt Blumberg were among the guests at his 65th birthday party, complete with orchestra, photographers, and video cameramen.

Charles Shedd states that 1990 was "our year for weddings. Nancy, our daughter (who graduated Yale in '81 and Rochester Medical in '87), married a physician on St. Patrick's Day 1990; our son, Robert, who graduated from Bucknell and Penn. State, was married last summer. We also had numerous visits with two of our grandsons, both named Daniel. Bob Goldemberg tells us Dave Hutchinson and Kurt Blumberg were among the guests at his 65th birthday party, complete with orchestra, photographers, and video cameramen.

47

ASA BURNHILL
Box 7034
Tucson, AZ 85725; 602-741-4715

Among the many delightful couples attending last Sept.'s muster on the West Coast was one we see far too seldom: attorney Ed Stockly and his wife, Jane Foraker-Thompson. Ed said he still does rewarding environmental work as lawyer and C.E.O. for the Idaho Natural Resources Legal Foundation, while Jane continues to enjoy teaching at Boise State Univ.

The Fabulous Class will maintain its busy 1991 schedule, with the annual N.Y.C. cocktail party hosted by Gen and Arnie Fraiman on Apr. 24 at the Cosmopolitan Club, followed by our 44th reunion, chaired by Charlie Metter on June 7 and 8, in conjunction with '46's 45th. Come Sept. 18-21, we'll be convening for '47's Midwest Reunion in Kohler and Chicago—wasn't the committee's first flyer a winner?—so please give Dick Windsor the go-ahead pronto to nail down enough rooms at the popular American Club.

Speaking of busy schedules, versatile Flash Williams, owner-engineer-photographer-consultant for J. Waymen Williams Associates, hasn't been letting any grass grow under his feet either. One month last year he was proudly exhibiting 26 color prints made in Istanbul at an engineering and architecture conference on Hagia Sophia, one of the world's great domed basilicas, that was completed in 537 A.D., and the next month he and wife, Patti, were off to Tenn. to greet their first grandchild, Adam Michael, son of Barb and Jeff Williams. Back home in Basking Ridge, N.J., Patti (she's the "associates") keeps the doors open at their home that doubles as an office, while Flash cultivates clients throughout the Garden State (notably Princeton).

We have a memorial in this issue.

48

DAVID K. REEVES
106 Snowden Ln.
Princeton, NJ 08540; 609-924-3340

As Henry Maguire is only in mid-career, a change seemed in order. He is now research prof. of medicine (oncology) at Thomas Jefferson Univ. Medical School in Philadelphia.

Stu Hibben has been at the Library of Congress for 20 years (he describes it as a love affair) and is now in charge of a special project to collect and document worldwide research in polar regions. Stu speculated that he might get a peak in Antarctica named after him if he does a good job. Hibben Peak does have a nice ring to it.

Bob Barrett reports that "the Gulf crisis has added interest to our work." He is U.S. ambassador to Djibouti.

Should you wish to buy some goodies on the Federal Deposit Insurance Corp. (inventory currently about $500 million) shelf, Dick Green is the person to contact. Dick is doing his thing (real estate) with the Resolution Trust Corp., which is charged with the liquidation and sale of the institutions taken over by F.D.I.C.

Elizabeth, daughter of Phyllis and Tony Heard, was married in Jan. to Robert Gambee '64. Elizabeth was a Wellesley Scholar at Wellesley and is a V.P. in the capital markets group at Chemical Bank. Bob is with Deutsche Bank Capital Corp. He is a remarkably gifted photographer and writer. His WALL STREET CHRISTMAS has received rave reviews and his PRINCETON published in 1987 is a gem, the photographs being the most enchanting ever of our dearly loved campus and town.

The Class is saddened to learn of the deaths of Raymond Jaeggi on Jan. 8 and Jack Ralston on Jan. 30. We have a memorial in this issue.

49

ALVIN R. KRACHT
Limerick Lane Poetryworks®, 5 Birch Ln.
Chappaqua, NY 10514; 914-238-0352

The following items, cut from previous columns, came to us along with Class dues payments. From Dan Lipkin: "Had great fun swimming demonstration 100-meters during Reunions to inaugurate the new DeNunzio 50-meter pool. Recently took the gold in the Montgomery County (Penn.) Senior Games, in 50-yd. and 400-yd. freestyle swimming." And from Tony Winchell: "Retired from I.B.M. at the end of Mar. 1990, ending a 35-year adventure with computing. After nearly a year, still enjoying retirement." Not about to retire is Charlie Coyle, who has worked for the N.Y. TIMES for 14 years in a variety of advertising management capacities. In mid-May, Charlie was named director of the N.Y. TIMES magazine, as well as the periodic magazine part-tuos.

"Buck" Johnston wrote: "As a member of the Consejo Interamericano, I attended the Inter-American Scout Conference in Montevideo, Uruguay, with spouse, Nancy, in Nov. This site was chosen after cancellation of a Cartagena, Columbia, meeting due to the drug wars." And from Mitch Brock: "I am now retired from the Sullivan & Cromwell Tokyo office and back at the N.Y. office. For all its problems, the U.S.A. looks pretty attractive." And Ivy Iglehart reported: "Courtney and I completed our move from N.Y.C. at the end of June and are busily rearranging our possessions. We're now at 2 Tall Tree Ct., Baltimore, MD 21208. Love Baltimore, but miss N.Y."

Bill Doyle told us: "Recently elected to 12th term in the Vt. State Senate—there are 15 Democrats and 15 Republicans! Third edition of the VERMONT POLITICAL TRADITION, which I wrote and published, will come out in Dec. 1990. Has sold 4500 copies and was adopted for use by the Univ. of Vt. and many other schools and colleges." Larry Theilgard wrote: "Enjoying retirement, with trips to Greece, Spain, and Denmark, where I visited many cousins. Continue to serve on Board of Alkali, Ltd., Kingston, Jamaica. Spending Christmas holidays on Bonaire again."

We have a memorial in this issue.

50

PETE BUCHANAN
151 West St.
Beverly Farms, MA 01915; 508-922-1650

Like Dick Gamble and the Kathleen Turner photo last fall, Avery Chenoweth has done his best to make us all feel a bit younger by being recalled to active duty as a Marine Corps colonel. This is his third war as both a combat artist and a fighting marine. The story is chronicled in more detail elsewhere in this issue. Later this year Avery hopes to complete a book entitled COMBAT ART OF THE U.S. NAVY, MARINES, AND COAST GUARD, which is due out by the 50th anniversary of Pearl Harbor.

On a sadder note from the Middle East, Bill Costen's son Tom, a Navy pilot on the RANGER, was reported missing on the third day of the war. Lynn Stuart saw Bill interviewed in his home on natl. television and was deeply moved by Bill's strength and complete lack of any bitterness or rancor.

The Trenton TIMES article on Stu Duncan's wife started by saying "Talking to Pedie Duncan is like uncorking a bottle of sparkling champagne. The lady is a fountain of information, not only about her current role in the GOLDEN AGE at Rider College, but about local theater and her lifelong involvement with it. Her reminiscences included playing the upstairs neighbor in A STREETCAR NAMED DESIRE, with Peter Falk as Stanley Kowalski, and a role in THREE MEN ON A HORSE, in which Dustin Hoffman appeared. Pedie recalled the unique quality of his work which enabled her to predict accurately his future stardom.

In mid-Jan. Jack Bogardus's son, Steven '76, received fine reviews for his lead role in FALSETTO-LAND. In the words of the Boston GLOBE critic (reviewing the N.Y. play) "The performances are wonderful. Michael Rupert (Marvin) and Stephen Bogardus (Whizzer) repeat their roles from MARCH OF THE FALSETTOS with precisely the depth and pathos Marvin and Whizzer now demand.

Joe Mack, an attorney in Indiana, Penn., was pictured with wife, Barbara, in the Harvard Law School alumni magazine hosting a dinner in Pittsburgh. Joe is president of the local alumni group.

Ed.'s NOTE: Inadvertently omitted from list of undergraduate offspring in a previous issue was Craig Wallace's Pamela '92. PAW regrets the error.

51

RICHARD K. PAVITTEN
49 Wilson Rd.
Princeton, NJ 08540; 609-921-6720

Life Begins at the 40th
June 6-9

Many U.S. banks are treading water and Fred Schultz, former vice chairman of the Federal Reserve Board, has been named to head a newly-formed Committee for Responsible Financial Reform to prod Congress into enacting "meaningful reform." Among the issues to be addressed is the 58-year-old Glass-Steagall Act, which separates banking from commerce. Still on the financial front, the Feb. issue of FINANCIAL WORLD profiled Jack Bogle, chairman of the Vanguard Group of mutual funds, as the best in the business.

Dave Look is president of Seacoast Ocean Services in Portland, Me. and was recently asked by the Brunswick TIMES RECORD to comment on the Persian Gulf oil spills. His immediate response: "Burn them." Shirley and Howland Fowler's daughter Jody '87 was married last Aug. Jeanne and Mark Roberts and Anne and Jim Rose were there. Mac Bollman reports good and not-so-good news. A grandson was born last Mar. (the first for Lucy and him). son Mac is serving on U.S.S. FORRESTAL and a son-in-law is aboard U.S.S. THEODORE ROOSEVELT. Bob Belknap has a book out on THE GENESIS OF THE BROTHERS KARAZAMOV.

The Charlie Alberts celebrated the birth in Dec. of their fifth grandchild. In Jan. Audrey and "Charles Kural" Dick Valentzas visited Jan and Clint Boxborn in Orange, Calif., and Ann and Rube Shaw in Stuart, Fla. They and their motor home will winter in Mexico. Bruce Kennedy's second trip in 1990 to the Soviet Union took him to Moscow, Lenin-grad, Yaroslavl, Kishniev, Sochi, and Odessa, where he helped with the Soviets' alcoholism problems. Jack Lambert expects to retire from Pansteel. He had open-heart surgery 14 months ago and feels better than ever.

SEE YOU IN JUNE!

52

Don Chardonnay
4630 30th St., N.W.
Washington, DC 20008

Bud Gillette now holds the distinction of being employed by his wife. With real estate in Florida ebbing, he went to work for Marta's employment agency. Another big interest in the Gillettes' life is news from the Persian Gulf, where their son, Christopher, is bureau chief of VisNews, the Reuter-owned television news agency. Chris has been in Baghdad or Amman nearly continuously since Sept. Bruce, the youngest son, is an Army captain and aviator, and so far the orders are to duty in Germany. Daughter Marita is with a Miami law firm, close to home. Son John continues with stocks in Manhattan.

Chuck DeVoe finished first in the nation in the 60-65 singles rankings of the U.S. Tennis Assn., according to a recent tennis newsletter. Chuck reports he hopes to make it back for a reunion soon, but that "big tournaments in Europe on the Geriatric Tour" keep conflicting with reunions. His former tennis mate, Gil Bogley, president and publisher of the Traverse City, Mich., RECORD EAGLE, reports that he is considerably jealous.

The Class received a lovely thank-you from Constance Chamas '94, current recipient of the Class of 1952 Memorial Scholarship. "Finance was one of my deciding factors in choosing a college, and it is a wonderful feeling knowing that I am able to go to the college I would have chosen regardless of monetary concerns," she wrote, adding, "Princeton is terrific!"

I regret to report that Dick Reese, who left Princeton before graduation but was captain of our freshman basketball team, died in Jan.

53

PERCE J. LONERGAN
Box 18
Blawenburg, NJ 08504

On Feb. 16, a number of us convened for our annual Class dinner on the occasion of Alumni Day. Once again Fred Crispin organized an excellent program. Our honoree and speaker this year was Bones Spencer, prof. of history and chairman of the dept. at Middlebury College. Bones offered a most informative and interesting talk, with accompanying slides, on South Africa. In addition to discussing the current situation and offering various scenarios for the future, Bones described the historical development of the country from the time of the first settlers and thus placed the present problems in meaningful perspective. A number of subsequent questions from the assemblage were handled with aplomb. Like Scotter Rizutto, Bones moves well to either his right or left.

Among those present were: John Burr, Don Cantrell, Fred Crispin, Jim Effron, Dick Ellwood, Dave Erdman, Jim Goetschius, Jim Harder, Ooks Lindholm, Studs Loneragan, Len Milberg, Rocky O'Connell, Stuyve Pell, Barry Phelps, Frank Phillips, Bones Spencer, Bill Suisbim, Lou Waddell, Dave Wilson, George Gallup, and Ed Mattheus. Plus an abundance of wives, friends, and children.

Dick Ellwood briefed us on the upcoming mini-reunion to be held in Philadelphia in Oct. under the able stewardship of Peter Benoliel. More on this shortly. Once again Roger Decker represented '53 at the Service of Remembrance.

54

DICK STEVENS
1 Valley Sq., Ste. 101
Blue Bell, PA 19422

Our renaissance man, Wayne Rogers, actor, financial adviser, raconteur par excellence, wine connoisseur, and all-around bon vivant, has put together Granger Entertainment Co. to produce films. Truthfully, Wayne's wife, Amy, calls all the shots, and the results to date are spectacular, with two winners for H.B.O. and more on the way. One, entitled AGE OLD FRIENDS, won Emmy awards for Hume Cronyn and Vincent Gardenia. The second film, PERFECT WITNESS, has been nominated for four ACE Awards, including two for best actor for Brian Dennehy and Aidan Quinn.

Bud Bootbe had a big 1990...two weddings one month apart and a new grandchild, Kimberly Beth, born to daughter Nancy and Jon Dayton. Older son Gary married Samantha Robinson in May and Doug '86 married Beth Waldron in June. Bud is part of the fabric in Westfield, N.J., recently elected to his sixth term on the town council. He is affectionately referred to as the "garbage czar" of Union City. Bud continues to keep American Cyanamid out of trouble specializing in the legal aspects of trademarks, copyrights, etc. Reds Reicherts's daughter Paula (U.Mich.) married recently. Now all the girls are out of the nest and nesting on their own—five grandchildren so far. Jon Heimerdinger has a new grandson, born to daughter Linda (Vassar '83, Columbia '87) with a great name, Zachary S. Faulkner, probably a future writer, actor, or poet.

The long trip award goes to Dwight Neill who journeyed all the way to St. Xavier, Minn., to present Art Pitts personally with a Tiger Inn Centennial tie. Secure in the knowledge that even a Crow Indian maiden can now be admitted to Tiger Inn, Art can wear the tie and walk proudly.

55

Mike Rosenberg
40 E. 88th St.
New York, NY 10128; 212-722-7447

Sue Milbourne is shown enjoying our memorable 35th. Leon Prockop, chairman of the Dept. of Neurology, Univ. of South Fla. College of Medicine, was married on New Year's Eve. We welcome Annette Prockop to the '55 family!

Bruce Ramer is chairman of the American Jewish Committee's natl. board of trustees.

A chance encounter with Bill Brown over the telephone brought me up to date. Bill is living in Short Hills, N.J., with his family, and is coping with an Army-related disability. He can be reached at 201-467-1892 and would love to hear from his friends in the Class.

Mac Coveris is in his eighth year as general counsel of Olin Corp. in Stamford, Conn. After several years of service as a director and officer of Westchester Fairfield Corporate Counsel Assn., a bar assn. of some 1,000 in-house lawyers representing over 200 companies, he was elected its president for 1991. On the family side, Mac writes, "Annie and I are getting covered up in grandchildren being presented by our two daughters, including Eli (sic), born Aug. 1990, Michael McIntosh, born Aug. 1990, and Chelsea, born Oct. 1990."

Alex Weech married Susie Merwin in Aug. 1987. Susie is a child psychiatrist. Alex is practicing psychiatry and psychoanalysis in Cincinnati. A belated welcome to '55 Susie!

Marty Hyman, a writer on the history of dining, lectured at Chumley's in Greenwich Village, a legendary hangout of Princeton literati and others of similar creative accomplishment in Feb. Fitzgerald '17, Edmund Wilson '16, and Thornton Wilder '26 are prominent among those who built Chumley's reputation as a literary lair. Marty was sponsored by the Museum of the City of N.Y. and the Humanities Council of N.Y.U.

Heavy-heartedly I report that Frank Black died of cancer July 16, 1990.

56

David M. Jordan
410 Rodman Ave.
Jenkintown, PA 19046

Blindsided by the University records office, we reported here on Jan. 23 that Al Berlind's daughter Marika was the only Class child in Princeton's freshman class. As a matter of fact, Marika is one of six members of '94 with '56 antecedents. Janex Hacht's son Matej, John Lesh's son Bill, Gee McMullan's stepson Chris Boutin, Sol Rosenthal's son Rob, and Sam Shelburne's son Sam are the others. At least making a statement like that is a good way to generate a response.

Our man at the pyramid, Jim Harvey, continues as chairman of Transamerica Corp. after a reorganization that takes place on Apr. 25. Jim will be succeeded as chief executive at that time by Frank C. Herringer. Ron Tell has some excitement going. After almost 29 years as general counsel with City Federal Savings, Ron has started in the private practice of law as counsel to a law firm in Summit, N.J. "Essentially," Ron says, "I am building my own practice from ground zero."

Tony Potter reports a busy period for Anthony Potter Productions: he's just completed a 10-part series for PBS on the home front during WWII, and his company is working on a series on the presi-

Combat Artist in the Gulf

NOT ALL PRINCETONIANS

in the Persian Gulf War were directly involved in combat. Some, like USA Today's Don Kirk '59, were reporting on the unfolding events for American and international news agencies. And reporting for the armed forces in a unique way was retired U.S. Marine Corps Colonel Avery Chenoweth '50, a combat artist for the Historical Division of the Marine Corps Headquarters and head of the Marine Corps Combat Art Program.

Profiled recently in The Beaufort Gazette of South Carolina, Chenoweth, who served as a combat artist in both the Korean and Vietnam conflicts, reflected on this role.

Col. Avery Chenoweth '50

"The work of the combat artist is nothing new, of course," he told the Gazette. "From the time of the early Sumerians of about 3000 B.C. on up to today, artists have actually witnessed and depicted historical events. Although photography was used in the Civil War, battle scenes were painted by artists because of the limitations of film. Even during World War II, night-time photography hadn't been developed that much, so most of the naval battles in the Pacific were recorded by artists who were actually there and who afterwards put down their impressions of the scenes." Despite improved photographic technology, Chenoweth believes, the role of the combat artist is still vital. He feels that "human interpretation of events artistically is still a very valid part of the human experience."

Chenoweth does not limit himself to combat painting, however. His other subjects include various athletic events, especially polo, and individual portraits.

Chenoweth studied art at Yale, Princeton, and the University of Florida. At Princeton he won first prize in an undergraduate art exhibition, and served on the art board of the Tiger and on the art staff of The Nassau Lit. In addition to military service, Chenoweth has been involved in advertising, teaching, television, and writing. His stint in the Middle East has delayed work on a book he has been commissioned to write by the Naval Institute Press. Entitled Combat Art of the U.S. Navy, Marines and Coast Guard, it's due out in time for the fiftieth anniversary of the bombing of Pearl Harbor this year.

Chenoweth left South Carolina, where he had recently retired, at the end of November. He was first sent to Saudi Arabia. Shortly after Kuwait was liberated, he was able to enter the American embassy there. His wife, Lise LaHaye Chenoweth, expects him to return in mid-March.

—Nuala O'Connor '89

dency and the Constitution, a series on WWII fighter aces, and one on espionage.

Time is flying to our big 35th at Holder Hall, June 6-9. In order to participate in what looks like a grand affair, you'll want to get your reservation in promptly to Ben Spinelli.

57

JACK SCHLEBER
Box 6177, Yorkville Station
New York, NY 10128; 212-427-3575 (H)

George A. Johnson '59: "As a person interested in current events in the Middle East, I can tell you that Columbia Univ.'s Prof. Edward Said is an enormously central figure. His writings, public appearances, and services on the Palestinian Natl. Council have been singly important in raising the level of public discourse on this issue, advancing the cause of peace in the Middle East, and, against all odds, may even help to achieve a share of justice for his fellow Palestinians."

Walter W. Winget '58: "I think your classmates should be aware of the extremely important buildings George Hartman has designed in the Washington, D.C. area. Many of them are on or very close to Penn. Ave., and they represent superb architecture that will serve as a monument to George and his ability long after all of us have quit attending reunions."

Jay Lebr: "We are still a long way from bringing back 100 classmates for our off-year reunions. but I'll never give up the effort. Off-years are more fun and far more relaxed than the big fives." Ted James: "I miss Brenda Scranton very much—one of the lights of my life. Ted Jones visited last summer, as did Herdon Werth. My book, THE POTPOURRI GARDENER (MacMillan) has sold out its first printing and is back ordered another 10,000. Everyone said that the audience walked out 20 years ago, but I knew they were all wet!"

Jerry Golden: "Am president of the American Assn. of University Affiliated Programs, serving over 50 developmental disability programs in most states."

58 RALPH L. DUGROFF
7 Grace Sq.
New York, NY 10028

Ed Polcer has been gaining tremendous acceptance as a performing jazz artist. Ed is thought by many to be among the top ten jazz cornetists in the country. He is in great demand to play jazz festivals and jazz parties all over the world. Pictured here is Ed, flanked on his right by jazz great George Masso playing the trombone, and on his left by saxophonist Tommy Newsome of the "Tonight Show" band. The picture was taken at a recent Jazz Festival held in L.A., where Ed appeared as a guest artist. This submitted by Hugh Fairman.

Ferd LaMotte's son Ferdinand married Miss Aubros Oct. 6, 1990, and daughter Dannielle made Dad a grandfather for the first time on Nov. 28 with the birth of Rebecca Ann. Ferd, while traveling in the Far East, visited with Gordon Wu and was very impressed with how much Gordon is doing to make the assimilation of China a good thing.

Peter Rosengarten, having retired, is now having a glorious time raising goats and Rottweilers. One of his Rottweilers earned her C.D. in Syracuse with Tia as trainer and handler.

Irvine Silverberg for the past ten years has been a senior partner of Silverberg, Rosenthal & Co., a small N.Y.S.E. firm, focusing his efforts on investment research, institutional sales, and portfolio management for individuals. His firm was combined in Feb. with Burnham Securities, Inc. where Irv became a senior V.P. and continues to pursue the same activities.

59 JAY M. SHERR
11321 Rolling House Rd.
Rockville, MD 20852; 301-984-7877

Seventeen '59ers enjoyed each others' company in N.Y. last month when Patsy and Andy Steffan hosted a Class cocktail party. Attending were Stephanie and Leonard Bernheim, Karna and Dick Bodman, Bill Buchanan, Diana and Duke Butterworth, Ann and Don Calder, Louise and Jim Greisheimer, Sheila and David Manischewitz, Vicki and Hans Mautner, Patty and Ed Mills, Carol and Janko Rasic, Marion and Bob Rock, Rich Sarlin, Judith and John Stang, Judith and Steve Stein, Tom Towers, and Grace and Bill Volchhausen. The Washington-Baltimore area will respond with a cocktail party at your secretary's home (address above) on Sat., Apr. 13. Details will be sent to all classmates in the N.Y.-D.C. area. Others may call the above number for information.

The Class will have to share Treasurer Bill Buchanan's talents with the Princeton Club of N.Y. Bill was recently elected a V.P. of the Club.

Bill Ince, in his role as chairman of the Federal Bar Assn.'s Intl. Law Section, was host to three justices of the supreme court of the republic of Poland when they visited D.C. last Oct. The F.B.A. is assisting Poland in reestablishing a democratic system of law which has not existed in that country since prior to WWII. In a self-effacing gesture of fatherly pride, Bill's most recent communication to the Class said nothing of this important contribution toward restoration of justice, but noted instead that his daughter, Fielding, graduated last June from the Sidwell Friends School with its highest award; was selected for the high school All-American lacrosse team; and, incredibly, (to those with "Nassau myopia") declined her acceptance from Princeton and is now a freshman at Brown.

ON THE GO: Steve Cleaves, from Paoli, Penn., to Rosemont, Penn.; Bruce Nickerson, from Indianapolis, Ind., to Lake Mary, Fla.; Erling Pytte, from Los Gatos, Calif., to Cross River, N.Y.; Steve Rineberg, from Chicago to Scottsdale, Ariz.; and Sully Vinciguerra, from Newton, Mass., to Fairmont, Minn.

60 MASON LOWANCE
100 Lincoln Ave.
Amherst, MA 01002

Readying for the P-rade are Joe Hungate and Ron Hummell.

More news from sibling athletes. Bob Isbell writes that his daughter, Laurie, graduated from Dartmouth summa cum laude and won best female athlete award for 1989-90. She had made All-American honors in 1989 at the N.C.A.A. track and field championship in Utah. Bob's eldest daughter, Debbie, married in June and lives in Tampa. The youngest daughter, Lynn, is taking her junior year in London and is about to graduate from Boston College. John Stempel's daughter, Jill, has entered Princeton as a member of the Class of 1994. John is associate director of the Patterson School of Diplomacy and Intl. Commerce at the Univ. of Kentucky. Jean Rousseau's daughters are both at Princeton: Peggy '92 and Liz '94, and Jean and Georgiana have moved from London to their country home in Stockbridge, Mass. (new address: P.O. Box 88, Stockbridge, MA 01262). And our world travelers continue to roam. Tom Kehler writes "I have moved to the south of Chile, where I'm setting up a salmon hatchery and salt water farm. I'm living on the shore of Lake Llanquihue and in the shadow of three snow-capped volcanoes where the air is clean and the trout fishing is out of this world. All classmates are welcome."

Susan and Mike Lanham ran into Nancy and Walt Berger while attending the opera in San Francisco. Michelle and Bill Zimmerman spent Jan. in Italy. And Don Catino, who not only practices medicine but also keeps in shape, placed first, second, and third in all triathlons this season, and headed to Las Vegas for the Triathlon championships in October!

61 GEORGE BRACELEY III
98 Winfield Ln.
New Canaan, CT 06840

1961
THIRTIETH
1991

Much publicity and great confusion accompanied the posthumous induction last Oct. of football coach Dick Colman into the Natl. Football Foundation Hall of Fame. The confusion arose from the Trenton TIMES's misreporting of the event; what's relevant here is that a Colman-era star, Jim Blair, figured prominently in the event. On another field of play, Jim Todd's son Richard '94 wasted no time in his bid last fall for the clapper-napper hall of fame. He got "an early reprimand for attempting to steal the clapper and an invitation to sing bass with the Nassoons," says Jim; we are trying hard to figure out that causal relationship.

Tim Ellis writes, "One of the pleasures of serving as a Federal judge is the opportunity to swear in Federal officials. On Nov. 28, the pleasure was doubled, when I administered the oath of office to Fred Hitz, the new inspector-general of the C.I.A. Yet another example of Princeton and 1961 in the nation's service."

"Have moved to Maine, now chairman, Dept. of Surgery, Me. Medical Center, Portland, Me., and prof. of surgery, Univ. of Vt.," reports Carl Bradenberg, who notes also that John Randall is chairman of the Dept. of Family Practice at M.M.C. "Have been elected to the Yale Law School executive committee," writes Marc Whitehead, who adds, "See you at the 30th!" Nick Neuens reports, "Spent a recent weekend in Memphis with Jerrold Graber—his wife, Mopsy, is lead in Theatre Memphis production of DANGEROUS OBSESSION. We're both planning for the 30th, as is Roger Bolgard."

62 ERIC W. JOHNSON
2221 Craigio Ct.
Vienna, VA 22182; 703-290-9080

MADAGASCAR FORESTS: Egbert Leigh has been attempting to get needed equipment to a crew of botanists in Madagascar who are studying the forest of its high plateau. "It is very diverse (100 stems include over 50 species), but very little has escaped being replaced by sterile, burnt-over grassland. Of course, U.S. budget battles may yet sink my grant application."

MOBIL GRANDPARENTS: Tad Crawford's wife, Judy, writes that they relocated to Bethesda, Md., last June as part of the Mobil HQ relocation to Fairfax, Va. She is consulting for NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC. "Four out of five kids married. Three out of five through college. There is light at the end of the tunnel! First grandchild born last Oct. Another on the way next Mar. Life is grand!"

THE WORLD SCENE: Dick Jackson is still in Morocco after eight years, but is expecting reassignment this summer. Mike Hartman spent a week in Aug. fly-fishing in the Shoshone Mts. of Wyoming with Dick Scribner '58, his son Chris '88 and Fred Brumbaugh '59. Mike Ridder says he and his wife spend a third of their time in Beaulieu-sur-Mer, between Nice and Monte Carlo. "Any classmate passing through, or staying in, the Cote d'Azur can see if we are there by calling 93.01.05.06. We're usually available for lunch or dinner." Larry Pantitz is a senior partner of Messrs. Frere Cholmeley, one of the oldest law firms in the United Kingdom. Based in Brussels, he is in charge of the European corporate finance group. "Anyone passing through Brussels can reach me at 322-513-8604."

TRAGIC NEWS: Scott Brooks reports that Phil Allen's youngest daughter, Dana, died last year in an auto accident in France. "It has been a very difficult time for him. She was twenty-one."

63 SELDEN S. EDWARDS
Elgin Academy, 350 Park St.
Elgin, IL 60120; fax 708-695-5017

Our current media star is Denver pediatrician Dick Krugman, chairman of the select U.S. Advisory Board on Child Abuse and Neglect, whose major report drew a blaze of attention last summer. Charged with the task of evaluating the nation's child protection programs, Dick's committee had what he calls "an incredible response" to their report to Congress and the Dept. of Health and Human Services last June, including a 10-camera press conference on Capitol Hill. Segments of Dick's presentation ran half-hourly on CNN, and Dick made several solo appearances.

The committee's work spells out specific and sweeping reforms to which H.H.S.'s Louis Sullivan has responded positively and immediately. "We're trying to lay out a ten-year blueprint," Dick says, "for what is essentially a broken system." Child abuse is an area "shocking in its denial. We spend millions and millions in this country on our failure to prevent abuse, which we pay for in prison, substance abuse, and teen pregnancy. It's only through a total reconstruction of the child protection system that we'll get anywhere." Not to make sweeping changes right now for this natl. emergency, Dick concludes, "would be like not developing vaccine for polio in the 1950s." Dick is also president-elect of the Intl. Society for the Prevention and Treatment of Child Abuse and Neglect. And if that's not enough on his plate, last summer he became acting dean of the Univ. of Colorado's medical school.

And back in Nov., the Hartford COURANT ran a beautiful long article on Jay Rippes, who, as reported in this column, has turned junior-high math teacher, after a 25-year actuarial career. And Dave Gouldin's son Michael, a graduating Colgate senior, is considering a teaching career beginning in the fall.

64 JONAH JOHNSON

Box 12
Blawenburg, NJ 08504

Several classmates, including Bob Gambee and Vance Mall, have recently inquired about how to order the Class of 1964's 25th reunion portrait taken on the Blair Arch steps. Contact Pryde Brown Photographs, 12 Chambers St., Princeton, NJ 08540, 609-924-9792 and ask for the 16" by 20" color portrait. It's a beauty.

The aforementioned Mr. Gambee, a first V.P. at Deutsche Bank Capital Corp. in N.Y.C. and a photo-journalist of considerable repute, was married on Jan. 26 to Elizabeth Heard, a Wellesley grad who is a V.P. in ChemBank's capital markets group. And Vance, who served 20 years in the Air Force, including a nine-year stint teaching computer science at the U.S.A.F. Academy, is now with an outfit called the Software Productivity Consortium in Herndon, Va., and enjoying life on the outskirts of the nation's capital.

Ever on the go, Sberry Bell, a Foreign Service officer at the U.S. embassy in Beijing, is just back from a trip though Mongolia which he described as an "untamed" country. Jimmy Haus wrote recently from Austin that he'd seen Dick Springs who was attending a "rustlers convention" in San Antonio and drove up for a visit. Tom Miner is back in the Catskills wrestling with water-quality issues after a year in Montpelier, Vt., and Cbeney Joseph is back in the classroom at L.S.U. Law School after a term as district attorney in Baton Rouge. We're hoping to see the Joseph clan at the 1964 reunion in New Orleans, coming up on Apr. 11-14.

From Boston comes an announcement that Joe Serafini, for many years a partner of Rackemann, Sawyer & Brewster, has joined the firm of Sullivan & Worcester, where he will concentrate in real estate development and finance, and energy and business law.

John James writes from New Canaan that he and Loretta are "enjoying the experience of having our younger son, Randolph, attend the St. Thomas Choir School in N.Y.C. . . . He sings five times per week in church services and continuously during the Christmas season. Beautiful music, indeed!"

65 J. MICHAEL PARNES

Winthrop, Stinson, Putnam & Roberts
1 Battery Park Plaza, New York, NY 10004

Number Skip Canning among those of us fortunate enough to have an offspring at the University, in this case Skip's son Bill, who is now well along in his freshman year. A complete listing of our children who now adorn the undergraduate body will appear in a column in the very near future.

John Potter, in addition to his duties at Amwell First Presbyterian Church near Princeton, also serves as pastor of the United First Presbyterian Church of Amwell at Larison's Corner, which celebrates its 242nd anniversary this year.

Showing that he has his priorities properly positioned, Stan Goldfarb emphasizes that his recent promotion to full prof. at the Univ. of Penn. School of Medicine pales in comparison to the double eagle he scored on a recent round. Stan notes that the odds of such an accomplishment are 1 in 5.28 million, leaving us to wonder how he found time to play that many holes of golf and still practice and teach in the brief 26 years since graduation.

By the time this year's Reunions come around, a bronze star in memory of Dave Hackett will have been installed on the window sill of 122 Foulke, and another in memory of Steve Kelsey will be in place at 113 Lockhart. Their names are already inscribed in the Memorial Room in Nassau Hall.

Credit goes to Van Williams for this information.

66 JEFFERY N. McCOLLUM, A.T.&T. Products

5 Wood Hollow Rd., Rm. 1J19
Parappany, NJ 07054

The countdown to Reunions is at 80 days and moving. It's time, if you haven't done so yet, to button down your plans to be on campus with an assortment of balding, bulging, hirsute, and svelte companions with whom you spent a formative time of your life. With its rich variety of events, Reunions is an opportunity to reflect and re-connect.

Barney Rosenberg, along with Sharon and their three daughters, will be there. After nine years with Northrop, Barney recently returned to private law practice with the L.A. office of Morgan, Lewis and Bockius.

Jeff Miller will be there. Working in Tampa, Jeff kept the Princeton connection up when he hosted two cast members from this year's Triangle Show when it hit Tampa in Dec. His daughter, Meredith, is in the Class of '93.

Anthony Zee will be there. His latest book, SWALLOWING CLOUDS, was published to much acclaim last year.

Dan French will be there, barring orders to report to active duty. President and C.E.O. of French Oil Mill Machinery Co. in Piqua, Oh., Dan is also a lt. colonel in the Air Force Reserve. Margaret is president of the Muse Machine, an arts organization in Dayton. Dan's son, Peter, has followed his footsteps to Phillips Exeter, while his daughter, Katherine, is in the fifth grade.

Charlie Wertbetmer will be there. He is now associate director-Finance for Proctor & Gamble's Cellulose and Specialties Division in Memphis.

Stuart Stetgold, who reports that he recently ran into Gerry Sumida in Hawaii and San Francisco, will be there.

Ted Wauworth, who recently was elected to membership in the New England Surgical society, will be there.

Bob Heinze will be there. A production manager for B.P. Chemicals in Redlands, Calif., Bob is active on the Southern Calif. Schools Committee, chaired by Howard Fredman.

Be there, too!

67 PETER J. TUNICH

6503 Masfield St.
Worthington, OH 43085

Ric Simonson reports that he is: still living in Summit, N.J., with twin boys, daughter, and wife, Pat; still Chairman and C.E.O. of Prudential Capital; and (with kids) still involved in soccer, ice hockey, and lacrosse. Lew Kamman and his family (now up to

Princeton Clubs and Alumni Associations

PAA OF AUSTIN: Wed., Mar. 27—Luncheon with Men's Swimming Coach Rob Orr.

PAA OF THE EASTERN SHORE (Maryland): Wed., Mar. 27—Dinner with Visiting Senior Fellow Joseph Smagorinsky of geological and geophysical sciences.

PC OF GEORGIA: Wed., Mar. 27—Dinner with Economics Prof. Alan Blinder '67.

PAA OF NORTHERN FLA. (Jacksonville): Thurs., Mar. 28—Dinner with Economics Prof. Alan Blinder '67.

PC OF THE HAMPTON ROADS: Thurs., Mar. 28—Dinner with Joseph Smagorinsky, visiting senior fellow in geological and geophysical sciences.

PC OF PHILADELPHIA: Fri., Apr. 5—Luncheon with Prof. of Politics and International Affairs John Waterbury.

PAA OF MONMOUTH & N.E. OCEAN COUNTIES (N.J.): Wed, May 15—Annual dinner with President Shapiro. Reception 6 P.M.; dinner at 7 P.M. at the Old Mill Inn, Spring Lake Heights.

PC OF NEW ENGLAND (Boston): Wed, May 1—Annual meeting—Marriott Hotel, Newton, Mass. President Shapiro will speak.

For information regarding any of the above events, please call Elizabeth Hunt at the Alumni Council, 609-258-3351.

three boys and a girl) recently moved out of N.Y.C. to the hills of Rockland Cty., Monsey, N.Y., where they are part of a new community and building a synagogue. He is a V.P. at Bankers Trust, in charge of global electronic mail and messaging systems. Jim Avery and family were off for vacation in Palm Springs, where they were joined for Easter weekend by "Hamp" Atkinson and family. Jim and Hamp "gazed appreciatively at the many sun-bathing coeds" while reminiscing "longingly about our lost youth." [See R.H. Lichty: below]. Jim also reports that he is glad that, on another trip, his family got to see the Berlin Wall, shortly before it ceased to exist.

From Roger Lichty: "How many Princetonians does it take to change a lightbulb? Ans: 27. Why? One to unscrew the old bulb, one to get the new bulb, one to screw it in, and then 24 to sit around and remember how really great the old lightbulb was." So much for nostalgia (for Princeton or old jokes).

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO. Iran opens oil terminal at Kharg Island. I.R.A. bombs Lord Nelson's Column in London. Brezhnev becomes top Soviet leader. Selective Service announces college deferments based on performance. (Remember the "War Boards"?). Rolling Stones' "19th Nervous Breakdown" in top five.

68 JOE KLIMAK

Hartford Hospital, 80 Seymour St.
Hartford, CT 06115; FAX 203-524-7057

Fred Billings send this photo of children Kirk (11), Laura (13), and Josh (14) using affordable transportation at their home in Baton Rouge, La. Fred still practices hematology oncology at the Baton Rouge clinic and will attend the annual meeting of the American College of Physicians in New Orleans this year. He invites other docs to sample bayou cuisine.

Al Henderson recently moved his practice from St. Simons Island, Ga., to Tuscaloosa, Ala. Instead of watching the ocean tides, Al now cheers on the Crimson Tide.

Richard Rubin continues his psychiatry practice in South Miami (the more tranquil part of town). He no doubt uses some of the tools of his trade to maintain that delicate balance between profession, family, and the local Princeton Club.

69

PAUL GEORGE SITTENFELD
1854 Keys Crescent
Cincinnati, OH 45206

HAPPY DAYS: For a couple of proud fathers who announce the early acceptance into the Class of '95 of their daughters. Jeff Marston's Kelly and Bill Thorpe's Jane are two more of '69 progeny heading toward Nassau Hall.

Much attention given to the recent election of Class President Emeritus Alex Sanger as president and chief executive of Planned Parenthood, N.Y.C. Grandson of Planned Parenthood founder Margaret Sanger, Alex noted: "With all her success, my grandmother left some unfinished business and I intend to finish it." Jeannette and Alex and their Andrew and Matthew live in the city.

Down in Princeton, at the helm of Independent Education Services, is Rick Belding, who serves as that organization's exec. director.

Great piece recently in the N.Y. TIMES about Steve Wunsch. The article compares his bold and dynamic concept of electronic stock auction exchange with his remarkable free-rock climbing expertise: scaling sheer rock faces using gear only to break a fall. "He became so known for his death-defying climb, with names like Super Crack, that he is immortalized in such places as Moose, Wyo., the base of the Grand Tetons, where his portrait hangs at the local outfitter store."

70

JAN KUBIK
113 Laurel Rd.
Princeton, NJ 08540

Our diligent Class Treasurer, Steve Davidson, has dutifully forwarded many a note from classmates who have sent their dues checks his way. Steve reports that President for Life Peter C. Kopff was the very first to part with his funds, while special mention should also go to Bruce Millman and Fred Steckel whose checks were dated Dec. 25, 1990.

Art Cilley reports that "for years I have suffered a credibility handicap—I'm a tax lawyer who worked in Conn. and lived in N.Y. After my divorce, I am finally living in Conn. just in time for its new state tax."

John Vail was recently promoted to director of personnel at the U.S. justice dept., and asks, "who'd of think of it, 22 years ago when we marched in protest past the main Justice Building and saw troops massed inside?"

Despite losing the hotly contested "Baldest Pate" competition at our reunion meeting to Mark Baskin, Art Dicker nonetheless lunched with Mark. Art's reportage cannot be completely trusted, but this scribe never let facts get in the way of a good story: "Mark has relocated his ophthalmic surgery practice from the Bay area to Southern Calif. (Encino) last year. I believe he told me he is also on the adjunct faculty of U.C.L.A. Med School (You better check this with Mark). Mark married within the last few years and is the proud papa of a two-year-old. (Check this too.)"

Thespian John Vennema starred in a major role in the Class of 1970 reunion video as himself. Since then, he was seen as a patron of the arts in an otherwise-forgettable episode of the late sitcom "Working It Out." With these impressive credits, you can understand why "Entertainment Tonight" is eagerly awaiting the Apr. ABC miniseries "Separate But Equal," wherein John plays the role of William O. Douglas Jr. Who needs TV GUIDE when you got Class notes?

And finally, Peter Baugher and Bill Schopf have just filed a $50 million suit against the Central Bank of Iraq and Iraq's state-owned commercial bank, but serving process in Baghdad has proven difficult.

71

STUART E. RICKERSON
P.O. Box 3108
Del Mar, CA 92014

SEVENTY-ONE DELIVERS: Mary and Varel Freeman were blessed with the arrival of Joanna Barton on Apr. 26, 1990. Varel notes that the mother's alma mater, Hood College, was quick to begin recruiting, already sending a freshman beanie. Not to be outdone, Joanna is shown here (see photo) as an orange and black Halloween pumpkin, while brother William (5) looks on in Tiger skins. Meanwhile, Varel reports that Thomas (9) can't wait to return to Princeton this June, "remembering how much fun he had at our 15th."

Kathy and Dave Dirks have a second grandchild. Daughter Tracy delivered Kirsty last Aug. Ellen Higgins and John Brower have a third child, Charles Higgins Brower, born on "a lucky day": Fri., July 13, 1990. He joins Laura (7) and Julia (4).

RÉSUMÉS: Bill James recently became the chief operating officer of the pension fund of the state of Florida. The fund has over $30 billion in assets. Baxter Holland was appointed chairman of the pediatric dept. of Chestnut Hill Hospital in Philadelphia. Tom Potts was named president of RAC Income Fund Inc. in Columbia, Md.

Robert Devlin, a partner and head of the technologies ventures group in the law firm of Buchanan Ingersoll in Pittsburgh, has been elected to the board of trustees of the Valley Forge Military Academy and Junior College.

72

KIP HEWITT
21 Wildcat Rd.
Darien, CT 06820

ALUMNI DAY: The Class held its annual dinner at Prospect on Feb. 16. Author Toni Morrison joined us for cocktails and Prof. Charles Kupchan's talk on Middle Eastern politics was followed by a lively discussion. Among those present who had not been seen in a while were Bill Minor and his wife, Allison, who came from Silver Spring, Md. Bill is an architect with the state dept. After Princeton, he got his master's in architecture from M.I.T., followed by an internship with a private firm and then teaching at the Univ. of Md. for three years, plus working on his own. From 1982-85 he was in Saudi Arabia with the state dept. designing a variety of U.S. govt. buildings. Bill's work takes him to most of the major trouble spots of the world, where embassies, ambassador residencies, and buildings of other government depts. are being constructed. He says the most exciting aspect of his work is dealing with the enormous cultural, climatic, labor, and material differences that must be accommodated in each new project. Bill and Allison have a son, Andrew (2½). Allison, who majored in graphic arts at U.C.-San Diego, is now majoring in human ecology at the Univ. of Md.

Also present was Randy Hill. Randy left First Boston two months ago and has joined Oppenheimer, where he trades convertible securities. Randy Harris said that he had just moved to a different law firm in N.Y.—Davidson, Dawson & Clark.

Valerie and Bill Sharpstone said they were staying close to Princeton, awaiting the birth of their first child, expected within days. Larry Sanford was present for part of the day, but missed the dinner because he was playing in a hockey game. Charlie Hughes reviewed the upcoming events of the Class. Others present were Fritz Cammerzell, who made all the arrangements for the dinner, Jim Hart, Kip Hewitt, Bob Maguire, Bob Murley, Ed Strauss.

73

R. GREGORY PLIMPTON
Box 14545
North Palm Beach, FL 33408

Our own baby boom continues: Romulus Staton and wife, Irene, announce son Ryan, born Oct. 4, 1989. Ryan joins brothers Romulus III (14), Storm (12), and Aaron (9). Dad has ventured out on his own as a computer consultant and reseller.

Florin Elizabeth Honnet arrived three weeks early, but healthy and happy to Ellen Porter Honnet last Mar. 31. Jane Leifer and Howard Edelstein welcomed their first daughter, Aliza Perri Edelstein, July 26, 1989. Jane continues as asst. general counsel at A.D.T. Security Systems.

Last year's Christmas present to Julia O'Brien was a daughter, Katherine O'Brien Guilfoyle, born Dec. 15. Julia practices law as an estate planner in Chevy Chase, Md. And the week's photo features Alaxis Bard Johnson, born to Tim and Valerie on Feb. 9, 1990.

All the new parents might want to pick up a copy of Barbara Cunningham's new book KEEPING KIDS, a resource guide for nannies, babysitters, and au pairs. She reports her own children, Sean (10) and Brendan (3) are as rascally as ever.

Two more movers in the publishing world are Melanie Kirkpatrick and Helen Zia. Melanie is the Op-Ed editor for the WALL STREET JOURNAL. She doubles as the W.S.J. off-Broadway critic. Helen, a longtime friend of the underdog, is the managing editor at Ms. magazine in N.Y. Helen won a Press Club award for her date rape reporting while at METROPOLITAN DETROIT magazine.

74

JOHN STRYKER
15 Woodbine Rd.
Kendall Park, NJ 08824

TIGER CUBS: Pictured here are Bob Batemarc's children, Thomas '11 and Linda '09. Bob has recently been promoted to group head at Eric Marder Associates, a marketing research firm in N.Y. Bob is also an adjunct asst. prof. of economics at Marymount College in Tarrytown and taught in July at the Ludwig von Mises Inst.'s summer conference in Austrian economics, held at Stanford Univ.

Marcia Weinstein and husband, Richard Steinbrook, welcomed their second child, Daniel, on July 31, 1990. While big sister Hillary (4) attends preschool, Marcia is associate prof. of psychology at Salem State College, and Rick is asst. prof. of anesthesia at Brigham and Women's Hospital and Harvard Medical School. The family lives in Marblehead, Mass.

Pat Kuntz Falcone and Roger Falcone announce the arrival of son, Michael Elliot, on Dec. 30, 1989, joining daughter Elizabeth Frances (6). Roger is a prof. in the physics dept. at U.C.-Berkeley. Pat is a Distinguished Member of the Technical Staff at Sandia Natl. Laboratories.

Barbara Risk de Botville, husband Bryan, and daughter Madeleine (3) are delighted to report the birth on July 12, 1990, of the newest member of their family: Charles David.

Ann and Chris McMurray welcomed son John Luender on Nov. 29, 1990. Big brother Peter is now four. Chris is a partner in the Washington law firm of Kirkpatrick & Lockhart.

Sandy Samuels now has three children: Ethan (5) and twins Seth and Samantha (3). Sandy is senior V.P. and general counsel for Countrywide Credit Industries Inc., the nation's leading independent mortgage banking company.

75

MELISSA KAHN MEDERMAN
940 Riverside Ave., Berkeley Square
Trenton, NJ 08618

Doug Lee's article about Okavango Swamp in Botswana appeared in the Dec. 1990 NATIONAL GEOGRAPHIC, where he is a staff writer. His next assignment is the Gulf Coast; he spent the summer in Montreal for an article to be published in the Mar. issue. His Christmas vacation took him to southern Africa, with plans to drive from Victoria Falls to Capetown via the Namibian Desert. He invites classmates, when in D.C., to look him up at N.G.S.—if he's home!

Alfred Nelson has moved to Greenville, S.C., where he is in practice as a neurosurgeon. "Debbie (Smith '78), Chris (4), Turner (3), and I enjoy the mountains," Fred writes. "We often visit our Hugoravaged but now repaired house on Sullivan's Island near Charleston, S.C."

Alan Kasbdan joined the D.C. office of Hughes Hubbard & Reed in Oct. as senior attorney, concentrating in intl. trade regulation. He and Davida Silverman Kashdan have two children, Kate (4) and Harry (2).

Ted West recently resigned his corporate position with Pacific Telesis to launch a new business in natl. marketing and information services. He, Anna, David (8), and Jonathan (6) remain happily situated in the San Francisco area.

Kelth Staley's third child, a daughter, Dana Garnham Staley, arrived on Sept. 14, 1990. This past fall, as a partner with Trammell Crow Co., Kevin completed a $118 million mixed-use project, The Citadel, in L.A.'s City of Commerce. It features L.A.'s first factory-outlet mall. More recently, Kevin has co-founded the Magellan Group, a diversified commercial real estate firm with offices in L.A. and N.Y.

Paul Yellin will become director of Neonatal Clinical Services at N.Y.U. Medical Center in July. He and Susan Denburg Yellin have three sons: David (8), Matthew (3), and Benjamin (1).

76

JAMES L. MARKETOS
Lane & Mitendorf, 919 18th St., N.W.
Washington, DC 20006

Tennis anyone? This happy group, all set for a game of doubles at the Volvo Intl. (see the shirts?) graced Tom Ramsey's Christmas card to Mark Neary. Neary claims it was either Ramsey's bid to wangle tickets to the Volvo tournament from their roommate Weller Evans, who's with the Assn. of Tennis Professionals, or, "given the theme of our upcoming 15th reunion, a shameless attempt to get a picture of his offspring into the Class notes." Well, it worked. Pictured (clockwise from upper left) are Margaret, John, and twins Alice and Ellen. Tom is in the insurance business with his family at the W.T. Phelan Agency in Cambridge, Mass. Weller is tournament director for the A.T.P. and lives in Ponte Vedra, Fla. Mark is a govt. attorney with the Casino Control Commission in N.J.

Next pictured is Shella Newton Akiyama's daughter, Jill Kimiko, who celebrated her second birthday on Nov. 6, 1990. Jill's cousin, Douglass O'Neill Newton, was born Sept. 30, 1990, to Shella's brother Bob Newton '78 and his wife Claire O'Neill '78.

As the District of Columbia's senior asst. U.S. attorney for narcotics in the criminal division's Organized Crime Task Force, Lisa Gok tried a nine-month case involving 31 defendants accused of conspiring to import and distribute cocaine from Panama. She and her husband Stanley Lucas '75 have a daughter, Emily, and live in Chevy Chase, Md.

Kathy Hamilton Fink and her husband Karl (Univ. of Mich. '78) were blessed with their first child, Andrew Hamilton, on July 23, 1990.

77

JAMES BARRON
15 W. 72nd St., Apt. 24-B
New York, NY 10023

BAY-AREA BABIES AND BABY DOCTORS—Lynn Mellen Wendell gave birth to her sixth child last May 1, setting what husband Peter '72 suggests is a new Class record for family size. Emily Lynn Wendell joined Christopher (9), Brian (8), Jennifer (6), Carolyn (5) and Patrick (1). Lynn spends her "spare" time helping the San Francisco Symphony and co-chairing fund-raising efforts at the school that Christopher and Brian attend. Ed Eisler is the director of obstetrical anesthesia and staff anesthesiologist at Pacific Presbyterian Medical Center. He has started running and has completed two marathons. Best time: three hours. His wife, Joanna Burke Eisler, is a clarinetist with the San Francisco Opera Orchestra. They had their first child, Mollie Elizabeth, last Dec. 2. "Trying to decide between Princeton or Stanford," says Ed.

REUNIFICATION REPORT—Julia Schechtman Pabst is returning to this country after 12 years in Germany. In the recent rush of headline-making events, small things caught her attention: "It was strange," she says, "to see Leipzig and Rostock on the weather map on the nightly news, to see the whole outline of Germany on that map change over the months, from just West Germany to West and East Germany, then the two countries divided only by a dotted line, then no more line at all."

HERE AND THERE—Jon Elliott says the first year of a startup company is as difficult as rumored. "Fortunately," he says, "my environmental consulting firm, EPICS International, is now in its second year and growing like crazy." Steven Brown continues his work as a pulmonologist in Milwaukee, where he says there are only two seasons—winter and August. He has been doing regional lectures on lung disease, especially asthma, and expects to get involved soon in clinical research on AIDS.

78

BON PESHIN
Box 886
Middlebury, VT 05753

Congratulations to Sharon Treat, who defeated a three-term incumbent to win a seat in the State of Maine's House of Representatives. Formerly an attorney for the Natural Resources Council of Me., she now represents the towns of Gardiner and Randolph. Sharon writes, "I find myself interested in and excited by my new job, and feeling that, as a progressive, I can make a real difference."

Pictured are Julie List, husband Duccio Faggella, and their son Nicholas Giordano Faggella, who was born May 21, 1990. Julie is a psychotherapist in a mental health clinic and has a small private practice in Manhattan.

Duccio was just appointed director of an intl. partnership program founded by Gov. Mario Cuomo to promote cultural and economic exchange between Italy and N.Y. State. Julie writes, "We're trying to raise Nicholas to be bilingual and so far he can clap his hands in both languages!"

Last Sept., Amanda and Max Steinhardt and their two children, Charlotte (3) and Willie (1), moved from Burlingame, Calif., to Stillwater, Okla. Max writes, "After 12 years in Silicon Valley, Stillwater is delightfully slower and more rural... I can walk to work, which is a definite improvement." Max is V.P. of imaging products for T.M.S., which supplies CD-ROM and imaging software technology to corporate, govt., and defense concerns. Max recently saw Tim White and family, "who are prospering in the Dallas area; Tim purchased a manufacturing company a few years back, and has just moved it to a bigger and newer plant site." Tim and Terri also have two children, Ben (5) and Max (2).

79

MARTHA KRAMER
27 Northill St., Apt. 6-R
Stamford, CT 06907

Amelia Baker is currently an asst. attorney general for the State of Ga. This fall, she argued her first case before the U.S. Supreme Court. Michael Avidon has completed his dissertation and earned a Ph.D in mathematics from Columbia. He is now an asst. prof. at Emory Univ. in Atlanta. Will "Tad" Kapper starred in the West Coast premiere of the David Rabe comedy, GOOSE AND TOMTOM. Tad lives in Venice, Calif., with his wife, Smitha Chandra-bose, and their infant daughter, Ananya.

BIRTHS: Sally Blodget Carlton, and her husband, John '77, had a son, Sanford (Sandy) Blodget, this summer. Sandy was named for Sally's father, who had recently died unexpectedly. Noting the irony of the timing, Blair Richardson reports the birth of his son, Scott, on Labor Day. Jim Wine reports the birth of his third daughter, Mary Katherine, this spring. Her sisters are Carolyn (7) and Sarah (4).

JOB CHANGES: Thomas Dale has become the corporate legal counsel to Rolls Royce, Inc. in Reston, Va. Before accepting this position, Thomas had been in private practice in Philadelphia, N.Y., and Boston. Mitch Moloney has moved from the Exxon Bayway refinery in Linden, N.J. to Mobil's R. & D. facility in Pennington. Eric Hillenbrand and his wife, Karen, have moved from Washington, D.C. to Cleveland. Eric is now director of commercial environmental consulting for Ernst & Young, and Karen is an executive officer of NASA's Lewis Research Center there.

HEARD FROM: Setb Elan is currently a computer scientist for the Natl. Library of Medicine; he had worked as a linguist for the defense dept. for ten years. He, his wife Janice, and their son Nicholas live in Washington, D.C. Scott Falci is also Washington-based, as he is completing his neurosurgical residency at Georgetown Univ. Hospital. This winter, however, he is at the Univ. of Miami, gaining expertise in spine instrumentation.

80

Rik Parker
25 Farmhouse La.
Purlong, PA 18925

MOVES AND CHANGES: Gary Monbett sent in the animated figure shown here to explain the work he has been doing. Gary recently got his masters of science and engineering in computer science from Penn., concentrating in computer graphics and the animation of human figures. He now works at Wavefront Technologies in Santa Barbara, Calif., as a programmer in animation software. Pedro Simko and wife, Josee, have left Jacobs Suchard to start their own company, Simko S.A., in Geneva, Switzerland, offering full-service communication and marketing services to Swiss and international clients. Pedro says that any "old '80" classmates are more than welcome to stop by.

MEDICAL NEWS: Katherine Kaye reports having moved from the domestic to the intl. public health field, as she begins working as an epidemiologist for Save the Children. Jeff Katz has joined the faculty in the Dept. of Rheumatology at Brigham and Women's Hospital and Harvard Med. School. Larry Pastor writes that, after traveling a very long road, he finally passed his certifying exams for the American Board of Psychiatry and Neurology. Jill Baron continues to reverse commute from N.Y.C. to Long Island, where she works as a family physician.

Sounds like Chris and Debra Pinson Boyman '79 are into diamond sports! Last year, Chris was in two rotisserie baseball leagues and won the lawyer's league softball league batting average for a cash prize. Last Oct., they made their annual pilgrimage to the Boston U. School of Law Invitational Softball Tourney, their seventh year of participation; the second for son Michael.

81

JEAN AMABLE TELLJOHANN
50 Riverside Dr., Apt. 9F
New York, NY 10024

Lisa Fisber is producing TV commercials in N.Y.C.; her husband, Steve Holland (Dartmouth '78) is working on his doctorate in clinical psychology at Rutgers. John Nimick married Katherine Beattie (Vassar '79) on Sept. 22, 1990, in York Harbor, Me. The World Professional Squash Assoc. ranked John #2 in 1989-90. In 1990, John won the North American Open. Liz Heiss married Steve Karlin on Sept. 23 in Bristol, R.I., where she is a clinical psychologist and he is a psychiatrist. '81ers in attendance were Stacy Hoffbaus, Laurie Hyman Sullivan, her husband, Tim '80, and daughter Jenny; and Jessica Friedman.

Henry Milligan made his eighth commercial (for SPORTS ILLUSTRATED "sneaker phone"). Henry started with Goldman, Sachs in N.Y.C. after graduating from Stern (N.Y.U.) School of Business. Kathy Chute is still in N.Y.C., marketing the N.Y. TIMES.

Dave Gutke writes that Mike Cleary, wife Peggy, and their daughter Meghan (2) recently moved to Minneapolis. Mike was hired by MacAndrews & Forbes as a corporate financial strategist for their Coleman Co. Grabam Peaslee is moving to the Midwest to look for a tenure track professorship. Daniel Weiner writes that Mike Shapiro and his wife, Cheryl, have purchased their first home in Ann Arbor, Mich., where Mike is a surgeon.

Rob Levin writes that he is still single and living in L.A., where he was named C.F.O. of Harvard-Westlake School. Rob's best hang-gliding flight to date: 140 miles, 7 hours, to 17,500' altitude.

82

TERI DOOLEY KOOGT
12409 Sadler Lane
Bowie, MD 20715

On Aug. 12, 1990, 17 Princetonians attended Cathy Seibel's wedding to Barron Lerner (l-r): Shelley Epstein Brand '81, Stephen Yankauer '89, Terri Laufer '83, Guy Barudin '83, Theodore (Tim) Yankauer III '83, Julie Lewin Barudin, Barbara Quackenbos, Cathy, Bob Malin, Barron, David Colangelo, Jim McSpirt, Janet Blume, Kathryn Edwards, Becky Updegraff, Terry Meistering, David Landes '82, Faye Isserow Landes, Eric Biel '84. Barron is a physician and Cathy is still prosecuting for the U.S. Attorney's office in Manhattan.

Two weeks later, on Aug. 26, Eddie Feld, the Princeton Hillel Rabbi, married David Spergel and Laura Kahn (U.C.L.A. '81, M.D. Mt. Sinai '89) in Prospect Gardens. Those attending were Prof. John Ikenberry, Merle Feld, David Ackerman '83, Jack Davis, Jacob Sun, Marshall Lux, Willie Woods, Stuart Rabner, Alan Safran '80, Jeff Herbst '83, Alan Sipress '83, Jeremy Goodman '83, Jon Spergel '85, Prof. Charles Kupchan, Prof. Jerry Ostriker. Sitting: Prof. Neta Bahcall, Sbaron Seiler, bride and groom, Maureen Quirk '82, Katie Freese '78. Laura is an internal medicine resident at Mt. Sinai in N.Y.C. and David is an asst. prof. in the astrophysics dept. at Princeton.

83

GAIL FRANCK
345 West 87th St., Apt. 3F
New York, NY 10024

Jeanette Kuvn Oren sent in this picture taken last Nov. of Eli Avery Grossman, Sarah Kuvn Oren, and her sister Amalyah Kuvn Oren. Sarah (4½) and Amalyah, born June 21, 1990, are the daughters of Jeanette and her husband, Dan. They live in Rockville, Md., where Jeanette is a full-time artist specializing in Judaica. Eli, born Aug. 14, 1990, is the son of Adina Avery Grossman and her husband, Harmon. They live in Riverdale, N.Y. Adina markets Cocoa and Fruity Pebbles for General Foods.

Polly Schafer is living in Palm Springs, Calif., teaching geology chemistry, biology, and math at the Palm Valley School. She has developed the high school science and laboratory programs and is developing an outdoor education program for grades 6-12. Polly welcomes visitors but warns "Just don't think of coming after May 1 or before Oct. 15 . . . HOT HOT HOT." She sees Mary-Jo Grisanti Deutchman in L.A. regularly and last summer saw Carolyn Brown. C.B. has been busy pursuing a master's in creative writing, while working at Bank of America in government relations. She lives in San Francisco.

Daniel Weiss and his wife, Debra Waitman Weiss, sent in this picture of their son Benjamin Scott

Weiss. Benjamin was born on Apr. 20, 1990, and is their first child. Danny is completing a fellowship in cardiology at the Univ. of Md. in Baltimore. Robert Waitman, Debra's brother, is Benjamin's uncle.

84

TIMOTHY C. WU
Beacon Court, 175 Beacon St., Apt. 413
Somerville, MA 02143

IN THE NATION'S SERVICE: Several classmates are, quite literally, in the nation's services. Pictured here is Captain Bob Schwarze in the Middle East in Nov. 1990. Bob is with the Air Force, flying F-4 "Wild Weasel" fighter jets. Many of the F-4s are the first jets launched during an air raid, and fly ahead of the bombers, sending out electronic signals which jam or distort enemy radar, making it difficult for anti-aircraft missiles or land-based equipment to detect and intercept the bombers. Despite the tension of the war, Bob has maintained his sense of humor and devotion to Princeton, writing, "Who would ever have thought, six years ago, that I'd be protecting the world's oil supply today? I sure didn't talk about Saudi Arabia while I ate strombolis at Victor's!"

Navy Lieutenant Airis Abolins, pictured in Antarctica, wrote eloquently of military service: "A story of contrasts: while I just returned from a week of sub-zero temperatures down in Antarctica, where many of the world's nations work together in harmony, my good friend

Bob Schwarze is enduring blistering heat somewhere in the Persian Gulf region, defending the world from one nation that can't seem to cooperate with other nations. So from the other side of the globe, this Navy lieutenant bids one air force captain "fair winds and following seas," and hopes all our classmates will drop Bob a letter at: Captain Bob Schwarze, U.S.A.F.—Operation Desert Storm, 35 TFW/561 Deployed, APO NY, NY 09604.

85

ROB JIRANEK
1578 Oak Ave., Apt. 1
Evanston, IL 60201

PUMP UP THE VOLUME

Having progressed from Old Nassau bands "Revolver," "Scooter and the Scapegoats," and "The Outlets," today Brad Eisenberg plays in "The Ferocious Detours," with Wayne Knutson '84 and Jeff Cleveland '84.

Pictured above in Mali, West Africa, is Shepi Farrar Hanson with Reid Whitlock '76 and Thomas Kane '84. Shepi and Eric Hanson (U.S.C. '82) were married Nov. 4, 1989. Attending were Princetonians Olivia Farrar Wellman '83, Avery Wellman, Lancelot Farrar '54, Phil Nicholson '66, Howard Gray '51, Polly Hoppin '81, Bobby Thomas '80, and Ron Parker, '54. Shepi and Eric just finished up in W. Africa with Cause Canada, a Christian economic development organization, and have returned to Philadelphia for graduate school in theology and economic development. Afterward, they plan to continue their missionary work overseas.

Ramsay Harik just graduated from Harvard Divinity School and is currently doing research in nuclear disarmament education before beginning his teaching career.

Michael Marion is in Swaziland with the Peace Corps and plans to return to the states soon for statistic graduate work.

Stormin' Norm Champ has left private practice to accept a one-year clerkship with the Hon. S. Haight Jr. of the U.S. District Court of southern N.Y.

John Lavelle, who graduated cum laude from Harvard Law School in 1988, has become an associate with Hangley, Connolly, Epstein, Chicco, Foxman & Ewing in Philadelphia.

Linda Bender writes that she is "still living and working in Oregon (marketing Intel retail products) and loving it!"

Good show!

86 SALLIE KIM
2645 California St., Apt. 303
Mountain View, CA 94040

The bride pictured here is Kathleen Pedone (N.Y.U. '92), who has happily joined the Princeton family, having married Richard Estes on Oct. 8, 1989. Richard is an associate in the treasury dept. at J.P. Morgan. Classmates present at the wedding were Marcos Rodriguez, Jeffrey Joyner, and John Parry. Jeff is a lawyer in Washington, D.C., and John is a law student at Harvard.

Elisabeth Rodgers is starring in a play in N.Y., GUILTY INNOCENCE. Elisabeth was recently in Scotland, where she was Mother Miriam Ruth in AGNES OF GOD and Charlotte in THE REAL THING.

Doris Kim finished graduate school in architecture at Columbia and is now back in L.A. "looking for a real job." Charley McPhedran is "protecting trees and bunnies as a new lawyer at the E.P.A." in Philadelphia. Mike Demko is working in wine country (Healdsburg, Calif.) as a marketing assistant for Versatron, a company which makes high-tech machines. Lissy Bassin is in L.A., working for at a public-interest law firm on a one-year fellowship.

Congratulations are in order for Eduard Norton, who received his Ph.D. in economics from M.I.T. and is now a post-doctoral fellow at the Natl. Bureau of Economic Research at Harvard. Felipe de la Garza started his new job as an assistant director of admissions at Loyola Marymount Univ. and is taking classes in cognitive science at U.C.L.A.

Lucia Davis has spent the last few years working with independent filmmakers in Sweden and teaching scriptwriting at the Univ. of South Carolina. Lucia is now in N.Y. seeking producers for a screenplay she wrote about Princeton. Bernard Myers spent eight months in France and Australia doing volunteer work with church-related organizations and now is at Stanford Business School.

Welcome back to Ginny Landgraf, who recently rejoined the Class. Ginny spent two years in Thailand with the Peace Corps and is now living there as a freelance writer and translator.

Charles Carrick is serving in the Saudi desert as a first lieutenant in the 7th Infantry Regiment, First Armored Division.

87 MARY TAYLOR DEMKO
1935 Seville St.
Santa Rosa, CA 95403

This little girl is Rachel Katharine Park, daughter of David '85 and Sarah Kan Park. She was born Aug.

13, 1990, and is pictured here at six weeks. Sarah says she enjoys motherhood, and stays at home with Rachel while Dave works at First Boston in N.Y.C.

LeGrande Green is an associate producer for the "Oprah Winfrey Show" in Chicago. David Madden does advertising sales for RUNNER'S WORLD in Southern Calif. Andy Ballard works for Goldman, Sachs in London. Adam

Zweiback returned in Sept. from a year of teaching history at the American School of Madrid, and is now at Stanford getting a Ph.D. in American history. Joe Watson is managing editor for CONTEMPORANEA, an intl. art magazine, while wife Hilary Healy Watson manages Citibank's new "Hallmark" branch in Bedford, N.Y. Beth Frank is a consultant for Zyga Corp., a company which produces software systems, in the D.C. area. Sbeila McLanaghan, in Winston-Salem, N.C., works in the sports marketing dept. of R.J.R. Nabisco, which, she says, "keeps me around golf, which is great for me."

A group of '87ers went to France in pursuit of M.B.A.s. Andy Burgess, Drew Bienkowski, Tim Kingston, Bill Prack, Cecile Astrup, and Mark Genender are all at INSEAD, in Fontainebleu.

88 CHRISTOPHER LU
206E Holden Green
Cambridge, MA 02138

BRRRR—With spring approaching and the temperatures rising, here's one last look at winter. Chris Douglas is pictured relaxing in the balmy Arctic air (the midday temperature is minus-40 degrees Fahrenheit). Chris is stationed at Eielson Air Force Base in Alaska and lives in the rather appropriately named town of North Pole.

BOSTON—Judy Snyder spent last year doing research on muscular dystrophy and is now a student at Tufts Medical School. Jill Casto is in her second year of a Ph.D. program in art history at Harvard; she is also organizing a Women's Center at Harvard. After two years of studying in Cambridge, England, Jack Hergenrother is in Harvard's Ph.D. program in the Division of Applied Sciences.

N.Y./N.J.—Ralph Wright works for Paine Webber in Princeton. Christine Addins is in her third year of a five-year doctorate program at Rutgers' Graduate School of Applied and Professional Psychology. Greg Kuzma works for Prudential in Newark in the Actuarial Executive Development Program. Lisa Fishman is getting her master's in music history at S.U.N.Y.-Stony Brook. Ayn Crauford is at N.Y.U. in her second year of the Ph.D. program in French. Also at N.Y.U. is Eddie Lin, who is in the clinical psychology Ph.D. program. Eddie writes that Kathryn Clutz is in the master's program in psychology at N.Y.U. Marisa Demeo worked for two years in the civil rights division of the Dept. of Justice, and is now at N.Y.U. Law School.

EUROPE: Colin Webster has moved to Antwerp, Belgium, where he works for a shipping company called CAST. Corinne Richardson is studying for an M.A. in Bologna, Italy, at the Bologna Center of the Johns Hopkins School of Advanced Intl. Studies.

Finally and most importantly, Mike Engels is stationed aboard the U.S.S. Ranger, which is currently in the Middle East. Mike is an intelligence officer for an F-14 squadron. Mail can be sent to: Michael Engels, U.S.S. Ranger, VF-2, P.O. San Francisco, CA 96601-6101.

Young Alumni Activities

PC OF NEW YORK: Mar. 22—Dinner at a Brighton Beach Russian restaurant. Call for more info. Apr. 4—Thurs. Night Club—Young alumni get-together in club's Tiger Bar & Grill. Apr. 22—Movie Night—custom feature, "Cartoon & News Reel." Apr. 27: Wild Ivy Rock 'n' Roll Ball. For reservations for all above events, please call the manager's office at 212-840-6400.

PA OF DELAWARE: Second Thurs. of each month happy hour at Water Works Cafe. For more info., please call Tracey Morgan '86 at 302-761-9432.

PA OF NEW ENGLAND: Mar. 27—Boston Alumni Clubs Volunteer Opportunities Night. Free admission. Contact Sarah Helm '89 617-868-7808 or Mary Hermann '89 617-628-8825. May 1—PANE annual meeting with guest speaker President Shapiro at Boston Newton Marriott. Contact Dick Charlesworth '46 617-894-4345 or Frank Giovino 617-329-0001. May 12, 16, 19, 22—Princeton at the Pops at Symphony Hall, Boston. $30. per seat. Contact Dick Charlesworth '46 617-894-4345.

PC OF MICHIGAN: Apr. 27—Whirlyball at Romar Sports Center (Ann Arbor) $11.00 per person and reservations required. June 7—Party T.B.A. "Reunions in Michigan" for those who can't attend the real Reunions. All classes welcome. Wear your beer jacket. FREE and BYO. For more info. and reservations, please call Mike Sklar at 313-994-1831 or George Cor-sar at 313-647-0054.

PC OF CHICAGO: Things are shaking, rattling, and rolling in Chicago, but we didn't get the events in to the PAW in time for them to be published. Just for your info, fly fishermen delighted on Thurs., Mar. 7 with world-renowned George Anderson. There was a wine tasting at Dearbar wine and liquors shop, Mar. 8, and Loyola/Marymount game in the Tiger Room at the Alumni Club bar and grill.

Contact Debbie Bredael at the Alumni Council with notices of events for inclusion in this column. Please submit information at least six weeks prior to the event. Call or write: the Alumni Council, Maclean House, Princeton Univ., Princeton, NJ 08544; 609-258-3353.

89 DAVID MILLER
96 Linden La.
Princeton, NJ 08540

The Persian Gulf war has not bypassed our own Class. Philip Cannon, for one, is serving there in the Marine Corps, and his family has thoughtfully provided an address where his friends in the Class can send him letters: Lt. E. Philip Cannon, Jr., 454-25-3862, USMC K 3/5. ARTY FO TM, STH MEB, DET X, PPO San Francisco, CA 96693-8548.

Ian Wan Tong is in public relations at Hill and Knowlton in N.Y.C. Also in the Emerald City: Tim Stevens is employed at the accounting firm of Price Waterhouse and is enrolled at the N.Y.U. Stern School of Business. James Wu works for Alle, King, Rosen & Fleming, Inc., an environmental consulting firm, and lives in Manhattan. Not in N.Y., Tim Maiboney writes: "Still out here in God's country, Toledo, teaching American govt. and world history at St. John's High School. I've committed (been committed?) to a third year here. I think I may have caught the teaching bug."

At Penn.: Van William Knox, in the veterinary school, and Lisa Washington, second-year law student. Lisa interned last summer at Camden Regional Legal Services (Legal Aid) in N.J. Eltzabeth Segar is an editorial assistant at Lerner Newspapers in Morton Grove, a suburb of Chicago. Kurt Hovan works in San Francisco for Mercer, Meidinger, Hansen Inc., a health benefits management consulting firm. He lives on the campus of U.C.—Berkeley, and was last seen taking actuarial examinations for the Society of Actuaries.

BLOTTER: As a result of a car break-in in N.Y. over Christmas, the Class has lost its 1990-91 Class dues ledger. To help the Class reconstruct its records, we ask all of you who sent in dues since Sept. 1990 to contact Class Treasurer Nuala O'Connor and tell her so, as well as whether and how much you have contributed to Annual Giving, the Class Memorial Scholarship Fund, and the Fifth Reunion Fund. Write Nuala care of RAW, 41 William St., Princeton NJ 08540, or call 609-258-4885 (w) or 609-258-9850 (h).

90

BENNY GOODMAN
22 Berkeley Terrace
Livingston, NJ 07039

The significance of Operation Desert Storm hits very close to home when one considers that, as of mid-Feb., two members of our Class are stationed in Saudi Arabia. Second Lieutenant Bill Kilhenny, after graduating second in his M-1 tank class at Fort Knox, is with the 24th Mechanized Infantry Division as a replacement crew commander. Second Lieutenant Eric Guib is a field artillery officer with the 212th Brigade. Our prayers are with them. May they return soon and safely.

Who are these masked men? Paul Bondor, Eric Boyd, and John Cobau '89 are standing on about 20 inches of solid ice on a lake in northern Michigan after a long day of ice fishing in freezing weather. Eric and Waleed Meleis are in the electrical engineering/computer science program at Michigan, while Paul and Julie Rosensweig are law students in Ann Arbor.

Alumni Day activities were recently held at Old Nassau, and a host of '90ers showed up for the festivities. Brad McConnell, Brian Lucas, and Mark Sbeft made the trip from Washington, D.C., where they live together and where Brian works for CNN and Mark conducts housing research for an economics company. Josh Davidson and Mary Daughan traveled across the river from N.Y.C., where Josh works for CNN and Mary is employed by Goldman Sachs. Brad Howe and Livingston Johnson, law students at Boston Univ. and U.Penn., respectively, were also there.

91

BUCKY JOHNSON
152 Little Hall
Princeton University Campus

Our final semester here at Princeton! Seniors are no longer seen around campus—only at meals, en route to the library, walking to interviews, or sitting in Music 103. I know June seems far away, but it is actually just around the corner. In order to keep you all informed of upcoming Senior events, I plan to keep you up to date through RAW (what you are now reading). So don't forget to look here for important information!

On another note, Project '90 is still striving for its goal of 91% class participation. Participation is the main priority. So whether your contribution is $1 or $20, come out and participate! Questions? Comments? Contact Co-Chairs Nancy Collins or John McGovern, or any Steering Committee member: Marge Adams, Chris Calhoun, Dave Haddock, Melody Hobson, Talbot Logan, Niki Manke, Stewart McDowell, Vicki McElbany, Rob O'Connor, Jen Service, or Andy Wollen.

GS

*01-*59

VIVIAN G. HINSHAW JR. '46
1573 Kirkley Rd.
Columbus, OH 43221

HISTORY: "Have been retired from the faculty of Western Md. College for 25 years," writes Frank Benjamin Hurt '26. "Spend time in travel, writing and reading. Have given up on my tennis at 90 years of age." Meanwhile, C. Brewster Coulter '44 writes us, "I am editing the JOURNAL OF WILLIAM A. PECK, who was a private soldier in the U.S. Army Corps of Engineers, and was out here in the Pacific Northwest (1858-61) and was building the American defenses on San Juan Island during 'The Pig War.'" And from Washington, D.C., Jeremy Blanchet '48 tells us, "In a part-time position in the U.S. E.P.A., I am devoting my leisure to the promotion of a historical program for that agency." In the meantime, J. Russell Major '49 crisply informs us, "I am retiring this year (1990) after 41 years at Emory Univ." John H. Fritz '50 likewise tells us of his retirement, "After 25 years at Fairleigh Dickinson in Madison, N.J., including being chairman of the history dept. and dean of arts & sciences, I have retired." And one more retiree is Frederick Aandahl '55 who writes, "Retired as an associate editor of THE PAPERS OF WOODROW WILSON, but continuing to work there as a volunteer." And finally we learn that Illinois College at Jacksonville, Ill., has appointed Gordon M. Jensen '56 associate prof. of computer science. Gordon began his teaching career at Princeton in 1953 and later served at M.I.T., Hartford, Western State College, Marietta College, and most recently, at Alma College. His shift of interest and specialty to computer science began as early as 1984 when he started work on an advanced degree in computer science. In 1988, Gordon served as visiting scholar in the People's Republic of China.

PHYSICS: Marshall C. Harrington '32, with proper pride, tells us, "An undergraduate physics prize has been endowed in my honor at Drew Univ., Madison, N.J., where I was a physics prof. 1931-55."

Wedding Bells: We have learned that Candace Carolyn Crandall and S. Fred Singer '48 were married on May 13, 1990, at the Park Three Club in Crystal City, Va. Ms. Crandall was formerly managing editor of SAUDI ARABIA magazine, and a public relations officer with James Mason Univ. Most recently she was communications director at the Center for Strategic and International Studies in Washington, D.C. Fred got his Ph.D. at Princeton after graduating from Ohio State. A pioneer in the development of rocket and satellite technology, Fred designed the first satellite instrument for measuring atmospheric ozone and was principal investigator on the recently returned L.D.E.F. satellite. To Fred go our heartiest congratulations on his marriage to Candace.

Crandall! And from Indiana, Penn., Richard Berry '58 reports that he is full-time NASA LIDAR researcher from Jan. 1991 to Sept. 1991. "The team will be measuring the arctic ice-pack from aircraft."

We have memorials in this issue.

GS

*76-*90

CHRISTOPHER KRAMER '86
31183 Lakemont Dr.
San Ramon, CA 94583

ARCHITECTURE: Caroline Constant '76 is associate prof. of architecture at Harvard. She is currently living in Stockholm on a Fulbright Award and is completing a book on the Woodland Cemetery. Julia Anne Donobo '87 recently opened her own office in L.A., after stints working in Spain and France. She recounts meeting a number of other Princetonians in the area, among them Stefano Polyzoides '72, Mary-Ann Ray '83, Randy Cloud '83, and Natalie Shivers '84.

ART AND ARCHAEOLOGY: Eric Apfelstadt '87 has spent the past half-year in Italy pursuing his research on later 15th-century Florentine art. His trip there was made possible by the award of an Arthur Vining Davis junior faculty fellowship from Santa Clara Univ., where he is currently asst. prof. of art history.

CHEMISTRY: Peter S. Shenkin '79 reports that he is still teaching at Barnard. He has recently received grants from N.I.H. and the W.M. Keck Foundation to pursue computational studies of protein structure and build a biophysical chemistry research lab, respectively. Annamarie L. Sabb '86 reports that she is the 1991 president of the Princeton section of the American Chemical Society.

ELECTRICAL ENGINEERING: In news close to home, H. Vincent Poor '77 writes that he has returned to Princeton as prof. of electrical engineering. Prior to that, he had spent 13 years as a prof. in the dept. of electrical and computer engineering at the Univ. of Illinois. Gary F. Hatke '90 is conducting research in adaptive antenna array techniques at the M.I.T. Lincoln Laboratory in Lexington, Mass.

NEAR EASTERN STUDIES: Since Aug. 1990 Semiramis Çarusoglu '90 has been a translator and researcher at the Research Center for Islamic History, Art, and Culture (IRCICA) in Istanbul, Turkey. He adds that he very much enjoyed his time at Princeton and hopes to return in the near future.

PHILOSOPHY: Alan M. Spiro '79 is a partner in the Boston law firm of Friedman and Atherton. He practices civil litigation and "every once in a while is thinking about teaching philosophy."

PHYSICS: The past year saw Terrence Sejnowski '78 become director of the San Diego McDonnell-Pew Center for Cognitive Neuroscience and the founding director of the Inst. for Neural Computation at U.C.—San Diego. He was also awarded a Howard Hughes Medical Inst. Investigatorship. Michael Shull '76 has recently completed a two-year term as associate dean in the College of Arts and Science at the Univ. of Colorado, and has returned to teaching and research in astrophysics. He and his wife, Melissa, have a son, Taylor (2).

WOODROW WILSON SCHOOL: Congratulations are in order for Carlos M. Aquino '86, who reports that he and his wife, Linda, had a baby girl Arielle on Aug. 11, 1990. After serving for the past two years as an evaluator and U.S. Presidential Management Intern for the U.S. General Accounting Office in L.A., David G. Ariandi '88 is headed for Frankfurt, Germany. He will be there for two to four years starting in summer 1991, where he will work at the G.A.O.'s European office. Michael C. Ford '86 recently began a new position as director of global marketing and strategic planning at the American Express Bank in N.Y.C. David R. Fine '82 has recently been promoted to assistant manager at Credit Suisse.

J. Porter Gillespie '20

PORTER DIED Feb. 15, 1990, in Baltimore, Md. He prepared for Princeton at the Shadyside Academy, where he had been president of his class. Porter left Princeton in June 1918 to serve in the Navy, returning the following year to graduate in Jan. 1921.

Porter was voted "best natured" and "Class sport" and was one of the most popular and entertaining members of our Class. Those qualities endured throughout his life. His deep love of Princeton and the Class was reflected in his attendance at almost all major as well as off-year reunions.

Porter worked for the family-managed steel business in Pittsburgh until 1943. He spent the remainder of his career in the industrial coal business, eventually as a founding partner of Pittsburgh-West Va. Coal Co.

Porter was one of the original founders, in 1939, of the McKees Rocks, Penn., Boys Club, and served as its president for 19 years. In 1985 he received the Keystone Award from the Boys' Club of America, and, in 1989, the Paul Harris Fellow Medal from Rotary Intl., in recognition of his distinguished service.

Porter's wife, Ruth, died in 1969. He is survived by his daughter, Patricia Cook, two sons, J. Porter Gillespie Jr. '51 and Richard R. Gillespie '52, five grandchildren, and one great-granddaughter.

The Class of 1920

William Lyttleton Savage '20

WILLIAM LYTTLETON SAVAGE died at Meadow Lakes Jan. 25, 1990. To say Bill was an outstanding member of the Class of 1920 is still an understatement. To his gifts of leadership, a clear mind, a quiet will, and an acceptance of responsibility, Bill added charm and warmth in his many relationships.

Since the last century the large tribe of Savages have been contributing outstanding men and women to Princeton. Bill's father, along with four brothers, two brothers-in-law and sundry uncles all attended; the next generation was Bill himself, then Arthur his son, and the fourth generation gave two grandsons (in '79 and '81) and a granddaughter in '88. Bill's daughter Susan, who married Guthrie Speer '50, was one of the first two women elected to Princeton's Board of Trustees and for ten years gave outstanding service.

Bill was a lieutenant in WWI, an assistant to Sir Wilfred Grenfell in Labrador, and a leader of worthwhile causes in Morristown, his hometown. But his most important work was as founding director of "Christianity and Crisis" and the Seabury Press.

As 1920 Class agent for 19 years he enrolled the highest percentage of donors in any single class, and for the last five years achieved 100% participation from the Class of 1920.

We send love and deepest sympathy in their great loss to Arthur, Susan, and Serena and their family.

The Class of 1920

Joseph Rieman McIntosh '28

RIEMAN MCINTOSH died Oct. 28, 1990, in Brooklandville, Md., in a tragic auto accident. Katherine Nes, widow of our classmate Charlie Nes, was also killed. Rieman's wife, Mayo, suffered relatively minor injuries.

Rieman was in the large Md. contingent in our Class from Gilman School. He majored in history, played polo, and was a member of Quadrangle Club. He took his law degree in 1933 from the Univ. of Md. He joined the law firm of Ritchie, Janney, Ober & Williams, became a partner in 1947, and retired in 1971. He served with the 111th Field Artillery Battalion during WWII, and took part in the D-day assault. He was awarded several Bronze Stars and the Purple Heart before his discharge in 1946, with the rank of major. He was then active in the Md. Natl. Guard.

He was a vestryman and senior warden of Trinity Episcopal Church in Towson, was a director of several banks, was a member of the society of Cincinnati, and enjoyed fox hunting and other equestrian sports.

He married Elizabeth Mayo Atkinson in June 1950. His sister Virginia married our classmate C. T. Williams, whose sons, Charles T. III '59 and David '71, attended Princeton.

Rieman kept in close touch with Princeton and his '28 classmates, and was faithfully present at many reunions. His classmates react to his sudden death with sorrow, and with admiration and gratitude for his life and friendship. Their loving sympathy is with Mayo.

The Class of 1928

Richard Stotesbury Jessup '29

DICK DIED Nov. 25, 1990, at Meadow Lakes, the retirement home at Hightstown, near Princeton, where he had been living since 1983. Dick prepared at Ridgewood School in Conn., and at Princeton roomed with Dave Kennedy.

After Princeton Dick did C.P.A. work in N.Y. and worked with Mercer-Allied Corp. and Wood Struthers & Co., and Scovill Manufacturing Co.

He was commissioned in the Army Air Force in 1942, and was a captain upon retirement. Technically he was on limited service because of vision deficiency, but as a cryptographic security officer was involved in landings at Sicily, Anzio, and St. Tropez, and received four battle stars.

After the war he had some time in Wall Street and worked for two years with the Marshall Plan in Paris and two years with CARE. He started his own accounting firm in Smithtown, N.Y., in 1961.

In 1936 Dick married Elizabeth Parke, and after her death in 1978 moved to Meadow Lakes. In 1981 he married Ruth Lawyer Sokolnikoff, who died in 1983; she is survived by a daughter, Katherine Sokolnikoff Haas. In 1984 Dick married Anne Mills Long, and she survives, as well as her two children, Hoyt Long and Lucia Schwarz. The Class extends sincere sympathy to Dick's family.

The Class of 1929

Norman Walter Drey '32

NORM DREY died in St. Louis, Mo., May 6, 1990, after a long and bitter battle with emphysema. He prepared at Peddie, and at college was a member of the Life Saving Club, Whig-Clio, Gateway Club, and was on the honor roll.

Norm went to Washington Univ. medical school and practiced as an internist until his retirement in 1987. Always interested in diabetes, he struck a powerful blow for sufferers by developing a test which vastly speeded up diagnosis of the disease. He named his process Dreyapak, and donated it to the American Diabetes Assn.

His practice was interrupted by WWII, during which he served for five years in the Medical Corps and was discharged with the rank of Lt. colonel. He then resumed practice in St. Louis, and found time for teaching. At his retirement he was a prof. emeritus at Washington Univ. In 1956 he founded Temple Emanu El in St. Louis and was its first president.

Possessed of a lively and inquiring mind, Norm had many hobbies, including philately and travel. He and Mary, his wife of 50 years, ventured over much of the world. Mary survives him, as do a daughter, Jane Drey Landsbaum, and two sons, Norman Jr. and James M., and five grandchildren. Norm did everything he touched quietly and well. He will be missed.

The Class of 1932

Gustav E. Schmitt '33

GUS SCHMITT, who had moved to Flagler Beach, Fla., some years ago, died there Oct. 19, 1990.

Gus was born Nov. 25, 1911, in Passaic, N.J. He later moved to Ridgewood. He prepared at Stevens School, Hoboken. In college he was in the Chapel Choir and the Glee Club, and was a member of Arbor Inn.

Gus left college in 1932 and studied at the N.Y.U. School of Commerce. He entered the purchasing field in 1935, and soon after became associated with Ebasco Services, in field supervision and construction, and later as a buyer. He eventually became purchasing agent. For many years he was located in N.Y., and lived in Glen Rock, N.J. He was active in community affairs and in singing groups. In 1975, Ebasco moved its purchasing operation to Atlanta, and after retirement, Gus moved to Flagler Beach.

On Mar. 25, 1938, Gus married Anne Lawson, in West Orange, N.J. They had three children, William, Margot Anne Foxfire, and Christine Elizabeth Lobo.

In 1973, after the death of Anne, Gus married Mrs. Lillian Rockefeller. After her death, he married Margaret Jones, who survives him, as does his brother Hans George Schmitt.

We deeply regret Gus's passing, and extend our sympathy to Peggy and the rest of the family.

The Class of 1933

Howard W. Read '37

"TO ME, A MAJOR REUNION is a wonderful chance to meet once again with a whole class—without any of the invisible walls that sometimes separated us while we were in college. We are mature people now, with respect for and interest in each others' lives and accomplishments and interests. We meet now with a better ability to communicate."

So, in 1971, spoke Howie Read, who died Dec. 26, 1990, of cancer, leaving his wife of 50 years, Martha; two sons; a daughter; and five grandchildren.

It is difficult to chronicle Howie's life of excellence. Outstanding at Montgomery School, including the football and boxing teams, he majored in economics at Princeton, graduating with honors, was on the J.V. swimming team, member of Student-Faculty Assn., Whig-Clio, Pistol Club, and Terrace. After 63 months in the service, rising to Lt. colonel and winning an Air Medal and Bronze Star in the New Guinea and Philippine campaigns in the Intelligence Service, he went back to Alan Wood Steel Co., rising to vice-chairman before his retirement in 1978. Along the way he painted landscapes in oils, did volunteer reading for the blind, and traveled extensively. His hobbies included garden and fruit trees and seven Bermuda races (his 40' Seadler being dismantled in 1966). He was director of Thermal Research and Engineering Corp., a trustee of Shipley School, and chairman of the executive committee of the Conshohocken Community Chest.

Condolences to the family for losing a wonderful man.

The Class of 1937

Stephen A. Trentman '37

TWINNIE ROSS, loyal, ever-appreciative Princetonian Steve Trentman died Nov. 24, 1990, after an eight-year bout with Alzheimer's disease, leaving his widow Emalea and a brother Harry.

Steve came to us from Lawrenceville, where he was football manager and business manager of the Year Book. At Princeton he majored in politics, was a member of Dial Lodge, and on graduation went to work in the Carson, Pirie, Scott department store in Chicago, then three years with the family Willman Lumber Co. in Indiana and four years in the Army. Upon enlistment he was assigned to an Ordnance Battalion, became a second lieutenant stationed in one of our southwest deserts before being shipped overseas to England and being promoted to captain. After the war came a move to Southern Calif., joining the Bank of America for 13 years before retirement in 1958. He was treasurer of the Princeton Club of Southern Calif. and received a citation from President Dodds for helping the 1955-56 Annual Giving campaign, before moving to the Laguna Beach area and then, in 1966, Washington, when he kept busy as V.P. of the Citizens Assn. of Georgetown and of the Foundation for the Preservation of Historic Georgetown and as president of the Friends of Winterthur Museum. In 1984 the Trentmans moved from Washington to Stonegates, a retirement community just outside Wilmington.

Deepest condolences to Emalea and Harry. We will miss Steve's joyous and lively appearances at reunions.
The Class of 1937

Edward Burns II '38

ED BURNS died Dec. 3, 1990, in his home in Orlando, Fla. after a long struggle with diabetes.

Ed was born July 20, 1915, in Brooklyn, N.Y. He came to Princeton from the Gunnery School and in freshman and sophomore years he roomed with Havie Smith and was on the freshman tennis and wrestling squads. Junior and senior years he roomed with Wilkes Covey and Willie Hunt, majored in modern languages, and was a member of Cottage Club.

After leaving Princeton, Ed received his L.L.B. from Yale Law School and went off to WWII with the anti-aircraft artillery. He came home a major and went to work for F. Eberstadt & Co. Inc. in N.Y. He became a partner of this firm and natl. sales manager of Chemical Fund in 1961.

Ed is survived by his widow, the former Suzanne D'Arcy, two sons, Edward and Michael, his sister, Dorothy (wife of Bob Burke '38), and two grandchildren. Ed will be remembered fondly by his friends and classmates and we extend our deepest sympathy to Suzanne and his family.

The Class of 1938

James Newton Hillhouse '38

JIM HILLHOUSE died of cancer Nov. 3, 1990, at Stanford hospital, near his home in Los Altos, Calif. He was retired from S.R.I. Intl. in Menlo Park.

Jim joined us sophomore year after a year at Phoenix, Ariz. Junior College. He majored in philosophy and was a member of Gateway Club and Theater Intime. Upon graduation he attended Princeton Theological Seminary for two years, then decided against the ministry and went to work for the College Entrance Examination Board, which became Educational Testing Service, until 1955, with time out in Palo Alto and other towns with the Pepsi-Cola Scholarship Board from 1945-48.

Next he began a career in church administration with the 3,000-member First United Methodist Church in Palo Alto. In 1970 he moved to S.R.I.

He is survived by his wife of 50 years, the former Marion Coe; two sons, David and Robert; a brother, Larry; six grandchildren, and one great-grandchild. They all have the condolences of the Class.

The Class of 1938

C. Wallace Tiernan '40

WALLY TIERNAN was stricken with a cerebral hemorrhage while vacationing at his home in Delray Beach, Fla., and passed away at nearby Bethesda Memorial Hospital Nov. 22, 1990.

Wally was from Essex Fells, N.J., and prepared at Lawrenceville. At Princeton he majored in psychology, was a member of Tiger Inn and the freshman football squad. He also played varsity ice hockey with skill and a fiery competitive spirit.

After Princeton, Wally went with the firm of Wallace & Tiernan, manufacturers of water-control equipment, served in the U.S. Navy in WWII; and remained with his company until 1968. He and his brother Marty then opened offices in Montclair, N.J., and were involved in venture capital investments.

Throughout his life Wally enjoyed family, travel, and sports. Skiing, golf, fishing, and sailing kept him constantly on the go. Wally led a worthwhile and well-rounded life and spread a feeling of warmth and friendliness wherever he went.

Wally's younger brother was the late John W. Tiernan '44. Wally is survived by his widow, Diana, three sons, three daughters, and one step-daughter; seven grandchildren; his brother, Martin '39; and sister, Nancy T. Swenson. To them all the Class sends a message of deep sympathy, but at the same time reminds them that 1940 hockey players never die—they just skate away.

The Class of 1940

Francis C. Symonds Jr. '47

DR. FRANK DIED Aug. 4, 1990, following complications from major heart attack. He born in Fayetteville, N.C., but lived most of his adult life in Tenafly, N.J. He had gone to Lawrenceville to prepare for Princeton, but the Navy sent him to the U.S.A., where he spent two years in the V-12 program. Following the war, he transferred to Princeton for his last two years and graduated as a member of our Class. During his short stay at the University, he developed many close friendships which continued throughout his life.

He received his medical degree from Columbia Univ.'s College of Physicians and Surgeons in 1951. He spent his medical career at Columbia-Presbyterian Medical Center, where he attained the rank of professor of clinical surgery. He specialized in plastic surgery. His professional career was interrupted by the Korean War, when he re-entered the Navy and served as a medical officer on a troop transport.

Frank married Pat Higbee in 1950 and they were subsequently blessed with two sets of fraternal twins. He was a devoted family man and carefully preserved his family time with his wife and the twins throughout a busy professional career. He was a kind, patient, generous and thoughtful person, and a close friend said he was a firm believer in the adage "if you can't say something nice about someone, don't say anything at all."

We shall miss his good fellowship and dry sense of humor. The Class extends its sympathies to Pat and the twins, Bev and Skip, and Jen and Steve.

The Class of 1947

John David Dorsey '48

JOHN DORSEY passed away Sept. 19, 1990, after a ten-month battle with lymphoma. John grew up in Douglaston, Long Island, and prepared for Princeton at Phillips Academy in Andover. He started Princeton in June 1944 with the first contingent of our Class. John was a member of Dial Lodge. He was a great electronics tinkerer while in college and is also remembered for having a real yellow Rolls Royce. He graduated with a degree in mechanical engineering in June 1949 after a stint in the U.S. Navy. John joined Alan B. Dumont Labs and then went to Walter Kidde. Later, he was associated with Natl. Music Publishing Co. After graduation John married the former Barbara Fort. At the time of his death, they resided in Ridgewood, N.J., where they had lived for many years. To Barbara; their four children, Jean, Meg, John, and Amy; and five grandchildren; the Class extends its deepest sympathy.

The Class of 1948

Harry Clair Fleming Jr. '49

OUR CLASS LOST a vital member and one of its most decorated military officers with the sudden passing of Bud Fleming June 13, 1990, while traveling in Spain with his beloved wife, Kae, from their home in Westport, Conn.

Bud was born in Clearfield, Penn., July 12, 1920, and prepared for college at Stony Brook. He served in the Field Artillery in Europe during WWII, from Sept. 1940 to Feb. 1945, holding the rank of major, and having won the Distinguished Service Cross, Silver and Bronze Stars, Purple Heart, and five battle stars. At Princeton he majored in architecture, played varsity football and intramural softball.

Bud married Catherine Ellen Dock Oct. 11, 1942, and they have four children. Upon leaving Princeton, he worked for the Erie Enameling Co., in 1950 was recalled to active duty in Germany, and in 1952 joined Jones & Laughlin Steel Corp. as a sales engineer. In 1962 he began a long association with Ralph Glendinning and Glendinning Companies, marketing and sales promotion consultants. About a year ago, Bud joined Dittler Bros., Atlanta, as their intl. director.

Survivors, in addition to his widow, include three sons, Harry C. Fleming, III, Carl D. Fleming, and Robert D. Fleming; a daughter, Kathleen M. Fleming; a brother, David M. Fleming; a sister, Joanne McCabe; and one grandchild. Our hearts go out to Bud's family at the loss of this outstanding man.

The Class of 1949

Benjamin Dean Meritt '25

BENJAMIN DEAN MERITT '25, classics scholar and prof. emeritus of Greek history and epigraphy at the Inst. of Advanced Study at Princeton, N.J., died July 7, 1989, in Austin, Tex., his retirement home. He was 90 years of age. He was awarded his baccalaureate degree, as valedictorian, by Hamilton College, Clinton, N.Y., in 1920. He spent two years at the American School of Classical Studies in Athens, Greece, with which he retained a close association for the rest of his life. He returned to the U.S. and to Princeton, there receiving his Ph.D. in classical studies in 1925. Subsequently he taught at Princeton, Brown, the Univ. of Vt., Michigan, Johns Hopkins, and Oxford. He was appointed to the initial faculty at the Inst. for Advanced Study, where he remained until retirement in 1972. He continued active academic activities in retirement and was awarded a total of seven honorary degrees.

Sincere condolences are proffered to his widow, Lucy, his two sons, four grandchildren, and six great-grandchildren. Lucy is the second Mrs. Meritt, his first wife, Mary (Elizabeth Kirkland) having preceded him in death nearly 20 years ago.

The Graduate Alumni

Edward W. Samson '32

EDWARD W. SAMSON '32, physicist, inventor, philosopher, man of faith, and amateur musician, died on July 14, 1989, in Cambridge, Mass. He was 85. Born in Winnipeg, he received his first two academic degrees in Canada. At Princeton, he earned a Ph.D. in physics (1932), and became a U.S. citizen. Next at M.I.T., he took part in building the first van de Graff Electrostatic High Voltage Generator, which produced an E.M.F. of seven million volts. The apparatus now stands in the Boston Museum of Science. As chief physicist at Ham-mill Paper Co. in Erie, Penn., he developed a centrifuge for the pulp and paper industry. In WWII, at the radiation lab at M.I.T., he took part in the development of radar. After the war, as chief of Cambridge Research Labs, he pursued physics for the Air Force. His retirement permitted him to follow many ancillary interests, including philosophy, religion, world affairs, and music.

We extend sincere sympathy to his widow, Helen, his children, and his grandchildren.

The Graduate Alumni

Edward L. Fireman '48

EDWARD L. FIREMAN '48, a physicist at the Smithsonian Astrophysical Observatory (Cambridge, Mass.) and a recognized authority on analysis and dating of extraterrestrial materials, died of a heart attack Mar. 29, 1990. He was 68 years old. Born in Pittsburgh, Penn., he graduated with a bachelor's degree from Carnegie Inst. of Technology in 1943 and was awarded his Ph.D. in physics at Princeton. Graduate work and early employment at Brookhaven Natl. Laboratory in nuclear physics provided him special expertise. He developed techniques for analysis of radioactive isotopes in meteorites to determine time of exposure to cosmic rays traveling through space. His procedures were also applied to lunar specimens returned to earth by the Apollo astronauts. Most recently his research involved the pursuit of solar neutrinos, placing detectors 800 feet deep in the Homestake Gold Mine (South Dakota), using the overlying soil and rock as a filter to remove extraneous radiation.

Sincere condolences are proffered to his widow, Rita, three children, four grandchildren, and three siblings.

The Graduate Alumni

John Murry Springfield '54

JOHN MURRY SPRINGFIELD '54, principal of Memphis Univ. School and faculty member of that institution for 31 years, died Aug. 8, 1989, at Baptist Hospital East in Memphis, Tenn. He had suffered a heart attack at the age of 60. He was an accomplished musician, whose undergraduate degree was earned at Rhodes College in Memphis. He was awarded a master of fine arts degree in music. Formerly he had served as both organist and choirmaster at Holy Communion Episcopal Church. However, he was a communicant of St. Mary's Episcopal Cathedral. Both churches are located in Memphis. Mr. Springfield was obviously talented in both educational administration and performance of liturgical music, to which his life was devoted.

Sincere sympathy is extended to his surviving parents, and to two brothers, all residents of Memphis.

The Graduate Alumni

Why is Princeton such a costly place to run?

“There are many reasons,” says Richard Spies, Princeton’s vice-president for finance and administration . . .

“We have a faculty/student ratio that at about eight-to-one is better than most of our peer institutions. We have a world-class library that allows faculty and students to engage in research at the highest level. We also have state-of-the-art computer facilities that give students the ability to efficiently access, manage, and transform information. And these are just strictly academic expenditures. When you add the cost of the residential colleges and our athletic program, the cost of maintaining our buildings and grounds, and our financial aid program, you can see—as one of Princeton’s founders said—that running Princeton is an ‘expensive undertaking’ . . .

“But we spend money well at this University. We manage it conservatively and make tough choices to cut our operating costs to the bone. For example, when energy prices went up in the mid-70s, we found ways to cut our energy consumption by about 30 percent. We’re now in the process of automating our purchasing department, which already has resulted in significant savings. We’ve also set aside money to meet the anticipated expenses of maintaining and operating new buildings that are going up near the Engineering Quadrangle . . .

“But there’s no escaping the fact that we do spend a lot of money at Princeton. If we didn’t, Princeton wouldn’t be the place it is today: simultaneously a first-rate undergraduate college—putting substantial resources into teaching—and a world-class center of research and graduate education. Combining these two is really much more expensive than doing either one alone . . .

“One of the main reasons we’re able to be both a superb undergraduate college and a top-level research university is because of Annual Giving. Annual Giving is at the heart of our fund-raising effort, and is crucial because it provides those flexible funds we can spend where the need—and the payoff—are the greatest. Without Annual Giving, it would be difficult for us to continue to produce the high caliber students we graduate every year. And that, after all, is why we’re here.”

Annual Giving provides Princeton’s margin of excellence. Won’t you do what you can to help?

Annual Giving
pays for quality at Princeton

Is the Mandatory Thesis Necessary? A Proposal from a Former Professor

PERHAPS I SHOULD begin by stating my credentials for raising questions about so venerable an institution at Princeton as the senior thesis. It is simply that, before I retired last June, I taught undergraduates in the history department at Princeton for twenty-seven years.

For the first twenty of those years, I strongly supported the compulsory senior thesis, for A.B.s and for the B.S.E.s whose courses of study required it. I felt then that it could be the most important experience in the undergraduate careers of a significant number of students, and I still feel that way. Most of these students had never before been asked to spend a considerable part of a year focusing on a single problem, collecting and sifting data, and producing seventy-five or more coherent pages of their findings—and most probably never had to do so again. Moreover, each year there were a few students who had hitherto coasted along without being particularly engaged intellectually, but who suddenly discovered the excitement of scholarship as they dug deeper and deeper into their theses. They went on to produce first-class pieces of work that, in some cases, earned them the only A's of their Princeton careers.

Thus the traditional system at Princeton—lecture, preceptorial, and senior thesis—worked extremely well. The combination of the three ensured that all students were exposed to a broad range of information through lectures; that they developed skills in oral argument through precepts; and that they gained some experience of researching in depth and producing a long piece of written work through the thesis.

Although a great deal of the faculty's time and energy went into supervising these senior theses, reading and rereading drafts and then grading the product, we all believed that it was time well spent. Indeed, twenty years ago, when I was chairman of the history department, we halted the traditional practice by which the supervisor alone graded the thesis, and instituted the rule, which is still in force, that all theses be reviewed by a "second reader." If the supervisor and the second reader could not agree on a grade, this rule stipulated, then a third reader was to be appointed to mediat between them. This new method greatly increased the burden of reading and grading the theses in the history department, but it has ensured fairness. Since then, most academic departments have adopted this procedure.

It should be pointed out that Princeton is one of the few universities in the coun-seminar. I now believe that while lectures and precepts must remain the primary vehicles of teaching, undergraduates should have greater opportunities to participate in seminars, which have long been the favored method of instruction for graduate students.

"Seminars in the Social Sciences," so

While lectures and precepts must remain the primary vehicles of teaching, undergraduates should have greater opportunities to participate in seminars.

Lawrence
Stone

try where all students must write senior theses. In the vast majority of liberal-arts colleges and universities in America, only that minority of students who aim to graduate with honors must write them. As you can imagine, theses at Princeton vary in quality from the superb—occasionally, almost the equivalent of Ph.D. dissertations—to the scandalously shoddy. Most theses, of course, fall somewhere in between these extremes, and the great majority obtain the respectable grade of B or thereabouts. The fundamental question is, How much truly valuable experience do the weaker or lazier students gain in return for all this expenditure of faculty time and trouble? Could this time be deployed in more productive and intellectually stimulating ways?

I think that the faculty could indeed put its time to better use, through the new and promising alternative of the named even though they are open to seniors regardless of major, have been offered to seniors for the last two years, and freshman seminars have been given in the residential colleges for the last five. In a report on the senior program, history professor Sheldon M. Garon, who was its acting director last year, concludes that "both the instructors and the participating students responded to this educational experiment with words of enthusiasm that I have seldom seen at Princeton. . . . I would judge the Program an unqualified success in terms of stimulating better teaching and overall curricular reform. . . . Programs like the Senior Seminars and Freshman Seminars give the participant a sense that others share their sentiments that quality teaching is as important as quality research."

Garon observes, however, that these programs are hampered because the university does not relieve the professors who lead the seminars from their normal teaching loads. As a result of what he calls this "miserly" compensation, they end up spending more time teaching than they otherwise would, leaving less time for research and other activities. Another problem is that, because seniors are so totally preoccupied with completing their compulsory theses during the spring semester, few of them sign up for the spring-term seminars. According to Garon, the students' evaluations of the seminars are mostly extraordinarily enthusiastic, claiming that the programs offered them "a special learning experience that was not available in their departmental courses." After listing the many difficulties that faced the introduction of this novel form of undergraduate teaching (novel only to Princeton), Garon concludes that "the main obstacles lie in the University's long-standing emphasis on the senior thesis."

From this report, it seems safe to say that a very promising start has been made toward introducing seminars at both the freshman and senior levels, but if further progress is to be made, more seminars should be offered and more students attracted to them.

To achieve these goals, one of three things has to happen. The first would be to persuade the university's administration and trustees to expand the size of the faculty. But the financial future of all universities over the next few years looks bleak, and there is little chance that money will be found to add professors in the interest of providing new, time-consuming methods of instruction.

If it is illusory to expect the size of the faculty to grow, a second option would be for the existing faculty members themselves to offer more seminars. But this possibility is also impractical, because the teaching load in at least the four most popular departments—history, English, politics, and economics—is already excessive, and because we must assume that the greatest demand for seminars would be precisely in these oversubscribed departments. One reason for heavy teaching loads in general goes back twenty years, to when Princeton first admitted women as undergraduates. At that time, the size of the student body grew, but the size of the teaching faculty did not increase proportionately. As a result, the number of students in the average precept rose from eight to about twelve. More recently, in the 1980s, upperclass students have chosen to major, unexpectedly and unprecedentedly, in just a few departments—the four mentioned earlier. In the history department, for example, the number of majors per year rocketed from about 100 (the average in the 1960s and 1970s) to 180 at one point.

The third and only practicable way of offering more undergraduate-level seminars is to make a trade-off in which some existing forms of instruction are cut back. In my view, the prime target for such a trade-off is the compulsory senior thesis. Such a decision would not only free up more faculty time to lead seminars; it would also free undergraduates to take part in them.

The entire debate therefore boils down to this question: Is it worth limiting compulsory senior theses to students who wish to graduate with honors in order to offer all undergraduates a significantly wider choice of seminars? The case for seminars is that in them students can examine a subject in the round, attack a problem using the methods of several disciplines, evaluate primary materials in depth, argue at length among each other without the time pressure of the standard fifty-minute precept, and prepare well-thought-out papers that may be longer and more closely supervised than papers written for precepts. Students in seminars thus can learn to think, to evaluate evidence, to criticize, and to write, but in an environment that encourages closer guidance than is possible in the precept. Because seminars may be taught jointly by faculty members from more than one field, the seminars also make possible an interdisciplinary approach that professors often laud but rarely have the classroom time to put into practice.

In my opinion, the higher quality of undergraduate teaching to be attained from a significant expansion of seminar offerings would more than offset any loss the curriculum might suffer from the restriction of the compulsory senior thesis to students seeking honors. Whether the faculty, students, and administration would agree is, I believe, a question at least worth exploring.

—Lawrence Stone

Lawrence Stone, the Dodge Professor of History, Emeritus, is the preeminent social historian of England. His books include The Crisis of the Aristocracy, 1558-1641 (1965), The Causes of the English Revolution (1972), The Family, Sex, and Marriage in England, 1500-1800 (1979), and Road to Divorce: England, 1530-1987 (1990). At Princeton, he taught early modern English history and served as the director of the Shelby Cullom Davis '30 Center for Historical Studies for twenty-one years.

Princeton Alumni Weekly

Reaching 56,000
upscale, sophisticated
readers with every issue.

Published more frequently
than any other alumni magazine in the world.

Why advertise with anyone else?

For details please contact:
Ms. Lolly O'Brien/Advertising Director
PRINCETON ALUMNI WEEKLY
41 William Street
Princeton, New Jersey
08540
(609) 258-4886

Alumni, Parents and Friends Welcome
Attention: Educators

Columbus: The Next 500 Years

On Campus Alumni College

June 23-29, 1991

When Christopher Columbus set out for the New World, how did he know where to go, and how did he get there?

Our On Campus College, June 23-29, directed by Norman Itzkowitz *59 P85, Professor of Near Eastern Studies and Thomas Spiro, Eugene Higgins Professor of Chemistry, in collaboration with Robert B. Hollander, Jr. '55, Professor of European Literature, Comparative Literature, and Romance Languages and Literatures, will take those questions as a starting point for an exploration of our own future. We will examine the major scientific, historical, political, and cultural events of the past 500 years, and try to predict what the next half millennium will bring.

Columbus' journey opened a New World of the mind, augured the marriage of technology and science and the rise of industrial society. We will see if—in gaining a greater scientific understanding of medicine, human life and death, our environment, solar system, the universe—we truly know more about ourselves and our place in the universe than did the sailors of the Pinta, and in any event, whether we know enough to create our own brave new world.

The voyages of discovery changed forever the power structure of Europe. We will trace the development of European political thought—the transition from monarchies to empires to democracy, and see what the new world order is likely to be. Is America still unique and will we matter in the new world order?

Our studies will include the works of those explorers of our minds and souls: Dante, Montaigne, Shakespeare, Rousseau, Beckett, Picasso, etc. who struggled with the great questions: What is civilization, what are the costs of human exploration, what is justice, what really matters?

Throughout the alumni college we will consider the implications for teaching and education. How will we prepare minds to confront the challenges ahead? Special programming for K-12 educators will include seminars on using technology to teach the humanities, curriculum content, and science for the non-scientist.

University faculty from a wide variety of disciplines will lecture and lead discussions daily. Evenings will feature related cultural activities.

Tuition: $100; educator's discount: $50. Room and board: $250-500 depending on preference for campus residential college or Nassau Inn. Commuter rate (total) $300 includes meals. Children's program (3-14 yrs), $200 total per child. Financial aid available.

1492 ► 1992 ► 2492

Please return to Debra Wharton, the Alumni Council, Box 291, Princeton University, Princeton, New Jersey 08544-0291 (Telephone: 609-258-5854; Fax: 609-258-1281)

Columbus: The Next 500 Years June 23-29, 1991

Name(s) _____

Address _____

Telephone (day) _____ (evening) _____ Princeton class or affiliation _____

Please reserve places for _____ adults _____ children ☐ Please send additional information

I enclose a check payable to Princeton University for $ _____ ($50 per person deposit).

ALUMNI COLLEGE

"Learning is the enterprise of a lifetime." —Woodrow Wilson, Class of 1879

Digitized by Google

PRINCETON

ALUMNI WEEKLY

APRIL 3, 1991

IVY LEAGUE CHAMPS -AGAIN!

A New P-rade Route...

Enriching A Joyous Cherished Tradition

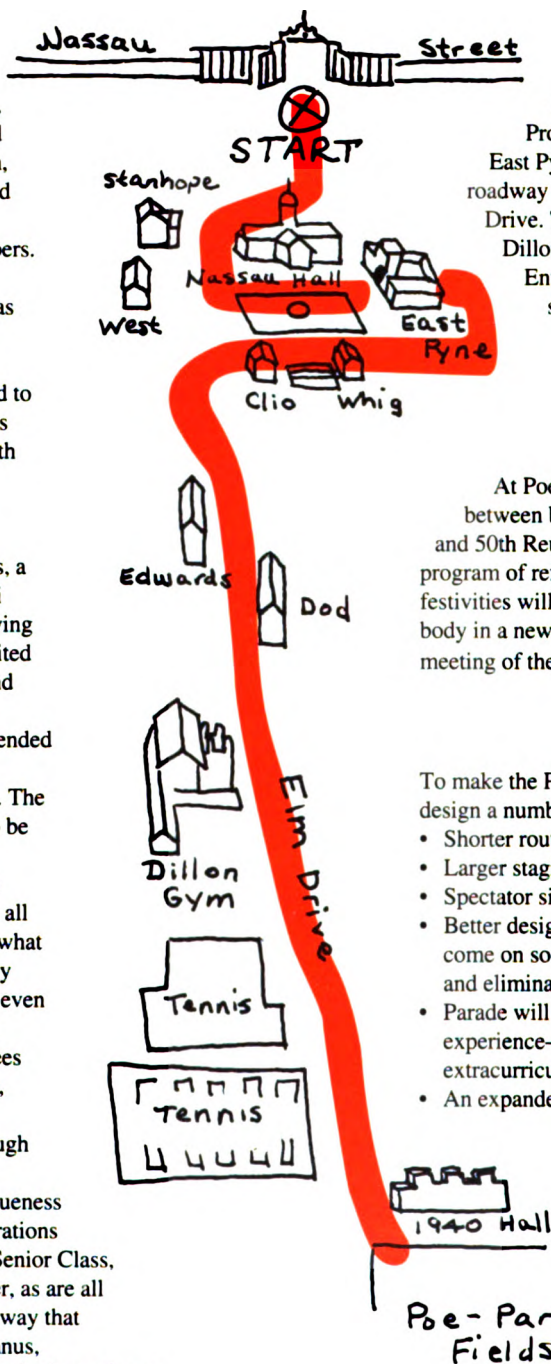

Dear Princetonian:

For more than eighty years, the P-rade has been growing and changing. In recent years though, the rate of growth has accelerated as the larger post-1969 classes return to campus in record numbers. That's the good news. The flip side is that the P-rade has begun to creak and groan. As a result, alumni marchers and spectators began to complain and to suggest adaptations and remedies that might allow for future growth and continue the P-rade in the manner and style for which it is famous.

As with all Princeton things, a special committee of the Alumni Council was formed. After studying comments and suggestions solicited from the alumni body at large and the Reunions Committee of the Council in particular, it recommended a new route to the Executive Committee at its winter meeting. The new plan was approved and is to be implemented this June.

While trade-offs have to be made—it is impossible to please all Princetonians! —the essence of what makes the P-rade the best "sloppy parade" in the land is preserved, even enhanced by the route described below. As in the past, it guarantees that all alumni and their families, from the oldest to the youngest classes, can march together through the campus in a procession that symbolizes for so many the uniqueness of Princeton: that although generations separate the Old Guard and the Senior Class, they are connected to one another, as are all Princetonians to each other, in a way that replenishes each individual alumnus, just as it does the University. May it always be so.

See you at the P-rade, 2:00, Saturday, June 8, 1991.

The Route

Starting at FitzRandolph Gates, the march will move toward the west side of Nassau Hall.

Proceeding past the back of Nassau Hall and through East Pyne arches, marchers will circle back down the roadway between Cannon Green and Whig-Clio to Elm Drive. The P-rade will proceed south past Edwards, Dod, Dillon and Patton Halls to go underneath a "Triumphal Entranceway" at Poe-Pardee Fields. More spacious staging areas and special viewing sites will be strategically located along the route for all classes, families, friends and the community.

An Exciting Finale

At Poe-Pardee Fields marchers now will pass in review between bleachers and honor stands for the Old Guard, 25th and 50th Reunions. Also, new this year will be an expanded program of refreshments, rides, entertainment and pageantry. The festivities will conclude with welcoming Seniors into the alumni body in a new, special, symbolic fashion and a brief annual meeting of the Association.

Advantages

To make the P-rade more pleasurable, planners have tried to design a number of major advantages:

- Shorter route, faster parade
- Larger staging areas
- Spectator sites located on campus
- Better designed, wider route—easier to join the march; floats come on sooner and are seen longer; easier navigation and elimination of some major bottlenecks.
- Parade will encompass more of the Princeton experience—historical, academic, dormitory, extracurricular and athletic facilities.
- An expanded, more entertaining, family oriented finale.

A map detailing staging areas, spectator sites, and all the activities at Poe Field is being assembled. It will be widely distributed both before and at Reunions.

Alumni
Princeton

Council
University

Digitized by Google

PRINCETON

ALUMNI WEEKLY

CONTINUING THE ALUMNI PRINCETONIAN, FOUNDED IN 1894

FEATURE

10 PICTURING THE UNIVERSE

In the Princeton Astrophysics Department, Theorists and Observers Debate the Structure of the Cosmos

by Billy Goodman '80

DEPARTMENTS

3 LETTERS

5 PRINCETON NOTEBOOK

*Police Arrest Impostor Student,
A Fugitive from Justice in Utah*

8 ON THE CAMPUS

New Campus "Access" Map Draws Mixed Reviews from Handicapped
by Larry Zygmunt '92

15 BOOKS

17 SPORTS

*Undefeated in Ivies, Men Cagers Gain
Third Straight Trip to N.C.A.A.s*

24 CLASS NOTES

39 MEMORIALS

On the Cover

Capping off a superb season, the men's basketball team dominated Loyola Marymount. Here, Chris Marquardt '92 lays in two points. Our story begins on page 17. Photo by Larry French.

FROM THE ARCHIVES

The cagers' sterling season recalls another team of another era. In this picture, taken in Dillon Gym during the last regular-season game of 1965, Bill Bradley '65 goes for a hook shot against a Penn defender. Princeton won, 81-71, and went on to finish third nationally.

PHOTO BY ROBERT P. MATTHEWS

J. I. MERRITT '66, Editor

ANDREW C. MYTELKA '85, Managing Editor
NUALA O'CONNOR '89, Associate Editor
D. W. MILLER '89, Staff Writer

STACY M. WSZOLA, Art Director
R. T. HOWELL, Production Manager
LORRAINE DONEKER, Graphic Assistant

NANCY S. MACMILLAN, Business Manager
LOLLY O'BRIEN, Advertising Director

BOARD OF EDITORIAL DIRECTION

EDWARD R. WEIDLEIN '68, Chairman
LISA B. BELKIN GELB '82 • CHRISTOPHER V. CONNELL '71
LONDON Y. JONES '66 • ELLIOTT D. LEE '74 '77
PATRICIA H. MARKS '72 • JOHN A. MCPHEE '53

PUBLICATION BOARD

DOROTHY L. BEDFORD '78, Chairman
ROBERT K. DURKEE '69 • ROBY HARRINGTON III '51
WALTER H. LIPPINCOTT, JR. '60 • PETER O. PRICE '62
PETER G. SMITH '46 • DANIEL N. WHITE '65

NATIONAL ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVE

ROBERT F. SENNOTT, JR.
Ivy League Magazine Network
254 Fifth Ave., New York, NY 10001 • (212) 684-5603

LOCAL ADVERTISING/PRINCETON EXCHANGE

LOLLY O'BRIEN (609) 258-4886

The Princeton Alumni Weekly is an independent magazine supported by alumni class subscriptions and by paid advertising. Its purpose is to record news of the alumni and at the same time to review without partiality the achievements and problems of the administration, the faculty, and the student body of Princeton University. The views expressed in the Alumni Weekly are those of signed contributors or the editor and do not necessarily represent official positions of the university.

PUBLISHED BY

PRINCETON UNIVERSITY PRESS
41 William St., Princeton, NJ 08540
Telephone (609) 258-4885
TWX 510-685-2306 UNIV PRSS PRIN • Fax (609) 258-6305

ELECTRONIC PAW BBS: (609) 258-3602

Materials can be transmitted to our offices via telecommunications, using the upload facility in the file-transfer section of the Electronic PAW computer bulletin board system. Its protocols are 300/1200/2400 baud, eight data bits, one stop bit, and no parity. It is online twenty-four hours a day.

PRINCETON ALUMNI WEEKLY (ISSN 0149-9270)

Vol. 91, No. 13, April 3, 1991
Printed by William Byrd Press, Richmond, Va. Annual subscription $19.50 (foreign postage $5 extra); single copies $1.50. All orders must be paid in advance. Copyright © 1991 Princeton University Press. All rights reserved. Reproduction in whole or in part without permission is prohibited. Second-class postage paid at Princeton, N.J., and at additional mailing office.

POSTMASTER: Send address changes to PAW Address Changes, 8175 Princeton Pike, Lawrenceville, NJ 08648.

Digitized by Google

Public and Private Higher Education

Over the last three years, I have been asked many times what I found to be the biggest difference—aside from size—between being president of the University of Michigan and my current position as president of Princeton.

First let me say that size really does make a difference, particularly in the frequency and nature of the contact between the president (and other senior members of the administration) and the broader university community. It also affects expectations about what the president can—or should—do. At Michigan, for example, a very small fraction of alumni actually participated in intercollegiate athletics as undergraduates, and even fewer assumed that the president had much to do with the athletic program. At Princeton, by contrast, roughly a third of our undergraduates play intercollegiate sports, and alumni write to me all the time in the expectation that I will—and should—be directly involved in all matters relating to athletics.

Harold T. Shapiro

There are, of course, many other ways that being president of a large, distinguished, public university differs from presiding over a smaller, deservedly celebrated, private university. Although every university—and its president—must be responsive to its patrons (that is, the particular community that supports it), it is a change not to have to deal directly with a state legislature. It is also a different challenge to help lead a university that has a distinctive focus on undergraduate education along with a much smaller commitment to professional education (for example, medicine, law, etc.).

Despite these and other contrasts, I have found that Princeton and Michigan are similar in many respects (such as their commitments to excellence), and that, in general, public and private higher education share many characteristics and concerns. In fact, colleges and universities differ far more within each sector than comparable kinds of institutions across the sectors. In central New Jersey, for example, there is more difference between Princeton and Westminster Choir College than between Princeton and Rutgers.

A look at the expenditures of major state and private universities shows many similarities: faculty salaries are in the same general range; both offer student services of various types; and both face the challenge of dealing with the escalating costs of quality and of renovating and maintaining modern educational facilities. We often address similar questions about research and teaching, and although we do it in different ways, we both have a commitment to serving our particular communities.

On the revenue side, if you compare Princeton and Michigan, you find that the fraction of the budget that comes from the federal government is similar (17 percent for Princeton [discounting the Plasma Physics Laboratory] and 12.8 percent for Michigan [discounting its hospital]). The largest disparities in revenue lie in three areas: the amount of state support that each receives (Michigan receives roughly one third of its revenues from the state, while Princeton receives less than one percent); tuition charges (although Michigan's tuition, especially for out-of-state students, is higher than many realize); and endowment (which is much more significant for Princeton). Nationally, this last discrepancy is being reduced, with 19 of the 100 largest college and university endowments now in the public sector.

Even comparable institutions, however, do differ by sector. The fact that private colleges and universities have boards of trustees not publicly elected has encouraged a long tradition of independence. This independence—augmented by an endowment and annual alumni gifts—can translate into a higher degree of flexibility and innovation. It simply takes fewer approvals, and there are fewer bureaucratic and political constraints, in a well-run private institution.

On the other hand, the public sector may be somewhat more immune to fluctuating enrollments than many institutions in the private sector. State support can reduce the dependence of public institutions on tuition (although public tuitions currently are increasing more rapidly than private tuitions), while some heavily tuition-dependent private institutions, unlike Princeton, are really struggling with the combination of declining enrollments and rising costs.

For this and other reasons, there is some concern about the future of the independent sector. A study sponsored by the Education Commission of the States, "The Preservation of Excellence in American Higher Education: The Essential Role of Private Colleges and Universities," notes that the percentage of students attending private colleges and universities has declined from 50 percent in 1950 to 22 percent in 1990, and sees threats to the continuing fiscal health of the private sector.

But the ECS study emphatically reaffirms the importance of the private sector, noting, among other things, that private nonprofit colleges and universities comprise 95 percent of the nation's 600 liberal arts undergraduate colleges, half of the 100 historically black institutions, and all but two of the 200 single-sex colleges. The study also reports that "if the nation's public institutions were to assume responsibility for educating the students now attending private colleges and universities, the additional burden for taxpayers would exceed $12 billion annually."

The country's 1,600 private nonprofit colleges and universities, the report states, "contribute in concrete, measurable ways to the social, cultural, and economic life of the nation and the states in which they are located. . . . They are a vital contributor to the capacity of the higher education system to respond to pressing demands for an educated work force and for research and technology. They stimulate independence, autonomy, and diversity in all of higher education. And by serving important public purposes, largely with private resources, they provide a valuable and financially prudent service to the state and nation."

The United States is blessed with a higher education system that allows greater access and more diversity of choice for students than in any other nation in the world. Its strength depends, in the words of the ECS report, on "institutions, both public and private, that are largely autonomous within their missions, competitive with each other, dynamic in their adjustments to social needs, and free to innovate." It seems to me essential that as a nation we support both sectors in their efforts to develop, improve, adapt, and compete productively.

"Colleges and universities differ far more within each sector than comparable kinds of institutions across the sectors."

Celebrating Freedom

It is with a great sense of pride, not only in my university, but also in my country, that I write to you today (February 25) from an airbase in Saudi Arabia. The February 6 issue of PAW finally made it to me here, and as I had hoped and expected, it included reactions of students to the war.

One of my most cherished memories of Princeton is the freedom we had: the freedom to think, to probe, to question, to say whatever we wanted, however we wanted to say it. I was pleased to see that students are continuing to use that freedom, in the form of peaceful protests both for and against the war. The freedom to say what we want is precious, and to protect that, and other freedoms we hold close, is the reason why I, other alumni, and thousands of other military personnel are over here, in a place we don't want to be, doing something the military in particular doesn't like to do—fight a war.

Numerous times during my four years at Old Nassau, I was asked, "Why are you in R.O.T.C., giving away four years of your life?" I submit that none of the alumni serving in the military feels we are giving up anything, particularly those of us who are over here right now. We all share the pride, the honor, and the privilege of wearing our country's uniform and protecting those freedoms all of us treasure so deeply.

PETER W. HUGGINS '87
First Lieutenant, U.S.A.F.
Saudi Arabia

EDITOR'S NOTE: Lt. Huggins was deployed to Saudi Arabia with the Air Force's 388th Tactical Fighter Wing. Our Notebook of February 6 incorrectly stated that he is in the Army.

I was struck by your Notebook item of February 6 stating that the university was allowing "some flexibility" in the rescheduling of exams for students "unable to study because of the war." Had I known in 1944 that the administration was so malleable, I'd have had my German 101 rescheduled. You see, there was this war going on, and I, too, was unable to study...

L. H. BENNETT '48, M.D.
Rio de Janeiro

Class "Dead Wood"

Some years ago, when I served on the Alumni Council, I suggested that removing dead wood from our alumni roster might be beneficial. Classes are forced to carry people on their rolls who do not pay class dues, do not come to reunions, and most certainly do not contribute to Annual Giving. As a former class secretary and now as a class agent, I find this a well-nigh intolerable situation. Loyal classmates pay the PAW subscriptions for the deadbeats; Annual Giving wastes money for printing and postage on those who have never given a thin dime and never will, and whose presence on class rolls does nothing except inflate a mythical number and decrease the percentage of dues-payers and contributors.

My comments were not well received. One might have thought that I had railed against God, motherhood, and apple pie. I was told there was more joy in heaven for the redemption of one sinner than for the ninety and nine who were already saved. I was reminded that occasionally one of the sinners actually repented and sent in a check (which probably came nowhere near equaling the amount of money Princeton had spent on him over the years). I was also informed emphatically that unless an alumnus requested that his name be removed from the class roll, there was nothing that could be done about the situation. This was the law of the Medes and the Persians (and the Princetonians), which altereth not.

Or does it? In the PAW of February 6 is a letter about Jack Kennedy, who, as everyone knows by now, briefly attended Princeton as a member of the Class of 1939. In 1946, the class asked Kennedy if he wished to be kept on its rolls—a question I was told was forbidden. He responded politely that he saw no reason to retain his affiliation with Princeton, and asked that his name be dropped. He probably would not have done so without being asked.

Should the name of Kennedy entitle a person, or his class, to special favors? I strongly advise the Alumni Council to rethink a longstanding but fundamentally illogical and expensive policy and permit classes, after careful consideration of all pertinent facts, to ask their peripheral members if they wish to retain a connection with Princeton.

EDWARD M. WILLIAMS '36
Penllyn, Penn.

Recalling WPRU

Your story entitled "WPRB at Fifty" in the February 20 PAW brought back memories from over half a century ago.

I was a sophomore in 1940, living in the fifth entry of Pyne. I knew Hank Theis '42 quite well and was amazed to learn that he was constructing a radio station in the entry next to mine.

WPRU had either five or ten watts of power. I can remember doing something on the air from time to time—probably playing records, because that was about all the capability we had in those days. The records, of course, were the old 78s, which broke easily; they featured such bands as Artie Shaw, Benny Goodman, the Dorsey Brothers, and Glenn Miller.

I was one of the WPRU alumni who went on to a career in broadcasting, spending thirty years in the business of radio and TV play-by-play, including seven as the voice of Ivy League football on WCBS and WQXR in New York.

What changes hath time wrought!

JACK LAFLIN '43
West Hartford, Conn.

Re the "From the Archives" picture in the February 20 PAW of three students working at radio station WPRU in 1942: I believe that the unidentified person in the picture may be me, as I worked at the radio station in its early days. I cannot be certain of this, and if someone can lay more definite claim, I will certainly understand.

RICHARD A. TILGHMAN '43
Bryn Mawr, Penn.

"P.C." Adventures

Re Amy Gutmann's statement on the university's new Center for Human Values (President's Page, February 20): Ms. Gutmann is a master of gobbledegook and a genius of the pat phrase, and, worst of all, she uses mostly three-syllable words to say nothing in one whole page.

Among her omissions is the actual content of the various courses that this "center" has concocted with various departments, and I was left with the suspicion that this omission is deliberate. Let's not rile the alumni with intimations of "politically correct" adventures in academia on their money. Slip it to 'em later.

The same issue of PAW notes that one year at Princeton now costs nearly $22,000. And, on balance, the university has been pretty successful at its job of educating. Does the university really need to spend its money on ill-defined endeavors like this?

JOSEPH P. O'CONNOR '49
Oakland, Calif.

Comparing Costs

In his essay entitled "The Question of Cost" (President's Page, January 23), President Shapiro points out that the public is decrying the increased costs of both higher education and health care. From the point of view of those paying for these services, however, there are some significant differences. Although I was able to send my children to private universities and graduate schools, my children cannot do the same for their children, because their incomes are high enough to disqualify their children from receiving financial aid, but not so high as to enable them to afford the cost of a university like Exceptional Experiences for Selective Travelers.

Egypt	Ancient.
Greece
Asia Minor
the Aegean	Classical.
Carthage
Central Asia
the Kyber Pass	Mysterious.
India
Nepal
the Himalayas
Japan	Oriental.
Southeast Asia
Java
Borneo	Enigmatic.
Ceylon
Sumatra
South America	Primitive.
the Galapagos
the Amazon
Ancient Civilizations	Vibrant.
the Andes
Australia
New Zealand	Compelling.
New Guinea
Kenya
Tanzania	Exciting.
the Seychelles
Northern Italy
Burgundy	Artistic.
Southwest France
Alsace-Lorraine
the Rhine	Cultural.
the Moselle
Flanders
Scotland
Wales	Historic.

Highly acclaimed itineraries, especially designed for alumni of Princeton, Harvard, Yale, and other distinguished universities. For further information, please contact:

Alumni Flights Abroad

Department PR-173

A.F.A. Plaza

425 Cherry Street

Bedford Hills, New York 10507

TOLL FREE 1-800-AFA-8700

N.Y. State (914) 241-0111

Princeton, whose total annual fees exceed $20,000 per student. However, their employers do carry health insurance for them as well as for their children.

Hospitals are principally in the private sector. The Joint Commission on Accreditation of Health Care Organizations now requires that hospitals reorganize to provide continuous quality improvement. A major medical center in Florida with a half-billion-dollar budget is well on its way to such a reorganization and expects to improve quality while reducing costs by 5 to 6 percent over three years. I realize that higher education includes a much greater variety of public and private institutions than exist in health care, and that the revenue streams are totally different. Nevertheless, in the interests of both cost and quality, should not similar principles be examined by higher education's accrediting agencies?

In another essay, "Universities and Economic Development" (President's Page, February 6), Dr. Shapiro suggests that the "academic health center model" of research partnerships among universities, industry, and government might effectively promote economic development. But would this be at the expense of students?

In my day (pre-World War II), university research was pretty "pure" and had mainly university support, with very little governmental involvement but very considerable industrial interest. Today at Princeton, academic research has so high a priority among the faculty that teaching assistants, rather than professors, lead many preceptoria. For similar reasons, academic medical centers are now under considerable criticism; because their faculty members are so fully occupied by research, teaching is mainly done by residents and adjunct clinical professors.

The balance between research and teaching is important, and Princeton should maintain it, where possible, at the undergraduate level.

ERNEST M. MAY '34 '35
Jersey City, N.J.

Global Warming

In a letter in the February 6 PAW, Laurence Dawson '42 derides President Shapiro's role as a member of the President's Council of Advisers on Science and Technology (PCAST). He is apparently certain as to the existence of "global warming" and dismayed that PCAST is supporting the Bush Administration's current posture of studying the situation before taking action. I find it ironic that Dawson and other environmentalists are more concerned with solving alleged environmental problems than with establishing whether or not they exist. In the past eighteen months, such respected institutions as M.I.T. and the National Oceanic and Atmospheric Administration have released studies revealing no global-warming trend. Of course, environmental zealots don't want to hear that there may not be a problem; Dawson wants to "make a ruddy good go of it" to counter global warming because he's concluded it's a "settled issue." It's probably safe to conjecture that the "action" he seeks would involve massive governmental intervention and the creation of a new bureaucracy to monitor our every conceivable gaseous emission.

To allege, as Dawson does, that President Bush is exercising restraint in this area because of pressure from his "Texas oil buddies" is not only gratuitous and insulting but also totally unsupported by evidence. As long as there are so many environmentalists eager to implement draconian solutions to nonproblems, we should be thankful for the cool heads in the White House and in PCAST to counter all their hot air.

ROBERT H. BRAUNOHLER '68
Washington, D.C.

Tennis Coverage

As a fan of Princeton tennis, I would like to call to your attention that, during the fall, members of both the men's and women's varsity tennis teams play significant schedules. I am amazed that no mention is made of this fact, even in your fall sports wrap-up of December 19.

For the record, the men's and women's 1990 fall tennis program culminated in the E.C.A.C. tournament, which was held in Princeton and included the top sixteen teams in the East, and the Rolex Eastern Regional Championships, which for the men was held at Jadwin Gym in November. This year, the Princeton men's team and individual players performed exceptionally well. In the men's E.C.A.C. tourney, Princeton won more singles and doubles division championships than any other school. In the Rolex championships, the Princeton doubles team upset the top-seeded Harvard team (ranked sixth in the nation in the preseason) to win the championship and qualify for the Rolex National Indoor Intercollegiate Championships as one of the top sixteen teams in the country.

It is also worthy of note that Princeton competes in men's and women's tennis at the Division I level. It has not been relegated to a lesser category because of criteria unrelated to its primary educational purposes. As a consequence, in tennis Princeton does not play the likes of a Bucknell or Lehigh but regularly schedules teams such as West Virginia and Penn State. Our ability to play very competitively against nationally ranked teams and large state universities, which offer substantial scholarships and recruit junior-college players from the U.S. and overseas, deserves some discussion. I believe our alumni would be quite proud of our tennis teams' performances if they knew about them.

One final note. The coach of the men's team, Dave Benjamin, is an extraordinary person. In addition to coaching tennis at Princeton, he is the executive director of the Intercollegiate Tennis Coaches Association. One of his greatest concerns has been the attempt by the N.C.A.A. to enact a restrictive rule that would, in effect, force the fall tennis program to be eliminated in an effort to strengthen overall academic performances by college athletes. This rule is obviously aimed at the excesses in the football and basketball programs of the major-college athletic factories. However, it would cover all schools and all sports and would severely impair the tennis programs of Princeton as well as other Ivy schools, while doing very little to correct the abuses in college athletics.

JEROME P. WEISS '56
Washington, D.C.

PAW welcomes letters on topics of general interest to alumni. We reserve the right to edit for length and clarity. Our address is PAW, 41 William Street, Princeton, NJ 08540.

The Strange Case of James Arthur Hogue

AFTER PRINCETON BOROUGH police arrested Alexi Indris-Santana '93 at his Tuesday afternoon geology lab two months ago, no one was more surprised than the university's admission officers. When Princeton first heard from Santana, a self-educated ranch hand from Utah with great potential for long-distance running, it believed it was getting a diamond in the rough. What it got was the cleverest imitation in Princeton history.

lice confronted Hogue with his past and arrested him for breaking parole. The university voided his matriculation.

Red-faced university officials were hardly his first patsies: Hogue left a trail of deception stretching back at least to 1985, when he had briefly posed as a sixteen-year-old to enroll at Palo Alto High School in California. But the current dean of admission, Fred A. Hargadon, insists that his office will continue to consider applicants with unconventional backgrounds, albeit with a more critical eye.

Hogue had an answer ready for every question about his background, and his performance at Princeton appeared to vindicate the admission office's gamble. He was a serious student with good grades and a heavy course load. His wide circle of friends was impressed by his outrageous tales of travels abroad and his odd habits, like sleeping on the floor. He even bickered successfully at Ivy Club. Ironically, it was his passion for competitive running that undid him. At the Harvard-Yale-Princeton track meet, on February 16, a senior at Yale recognized Hogue from his 1985 fraud and alerted authorities in California, who then notified Princeton.

As Santana, Hogue struck many as the embodiment of Rousseau's noble savage. Even after his exposure, some friends insisted on recasting him as a modern-day Jean Valjean, the ex-con of Les Misérables who adopts a new identity to begin life anew. In reality, however, Hogue has left an eight-year string of embittered acquaintances and increasingly egregious brushes with the law.

James Arthur Hogue was born in 1959 in Kansas City, Kansas, where his parents still live. In high school, Hogue was the state champion in the two-mile run. He ran varsity track at the University of Wyoming from 1977 to 1979. In 1980, he enrolled at the University of Texas at Austin as a chemical-engineering major. It was in Austin that Hogue's life appeared to un-

James Hogue being led away after his arraignment in Trenton.

Santana, who claimed to devour great literature while tending cattle, had one of the shortest college applications on record: a list of the books he had read, authentic S.A.T. scores above 1,400, a reference from the Utah ranch, and newspaper clippings of track results that evidenced outstanding speed for an eighteen-year-old. On the basis of his application and an on-campus interview, Dean of Admission Anthony M. Cummings '80 admitted him in the spring of 1988.

Santana, fatherless, asked for a year's deferral to care for his dying mother in Switzerland. The university assented, and a year later Santana, now calling himself Indris-Santana, matriculated with the Class of 1993. For two years no one found out that "Indris-Santana" was a pseudonym for James Arthur Hogue, a youthful twenty-nine-year-old college dropout who needed the deferral to serve ten months of a five-year prison sentence in Utah for possession of stolen property. On February 26, acting on information provided by the university, Princeton po-

NEW. The Princeton watch features an orange and black shield on a white ground. This good-looking quartz watch with its black leather band and gold-tone case makes a fine gift. Made exclusively for us. $50., plus $4.25 shipping. N.J. residents add 7% tax.

the PRINCETON University Store

36 University Place, Princeton, N.J. 08540

Call toll-free: From N.J., 1-800-624-4236

Elsewhere in the U.S., 1-800-631-0137

☐ U-Store ☐ VISA ☐ MasterCard ☐ AmEx

Acct. # _____

Exp. Date _____

Qty _____

Name _____

Address _____

City, State _____

ZIP _____

Arts & Crafts Revisited.

THOS. MOSER
CABINETMAKERS

ALEXANDRIA
703-548-3447

PHILADELPHIA
215-922-6440

CATALOG $9

415Y CUMBERLAND AVE. PORTLAND, ME 04101
207-774-3791

BLAIR ACADEMY
Summer Session
 Academic Studies
 Program and Summer
 School for Journalism
 June 23-July 26

Blair is located in beautiful northwestern New Jersey. Programs in both summer enrichment and Journalism attract a rich variety of talent to campus.

- Co-ed residential enrichment program for students entering grades eight through twelve.
- Courses in English, Math, Science, Language, History, the Arts, and Study Skills.
- Journalism School for students with particular interest in the news media.
- 350 acre campus with golf course, tennis, swimming, and a full athletic program.
- Weekend Activities Program

For information, contact James Moore at (908) 362-6121.

AWARDS FOR DISTINGUISHED TEACHING

Nominations are invited for a new program of awards for distinguished teaching by members of the Princeton University faculty. Two awards will be made annually to junior faculty, two to senior faculty. The awards recognize a sustained record of distinguished achievement in undergraduate and/or graduate teaching at Princeton. The first awards will be presented at Opening Exercises in September 1991.

Students, faculty, and alumni are welcome to submit letters of nomination, with as much detail as appropriate, to the selection committee in care of the Dean of the Faculty, 9 Nassau Hall.

The deadline for nominations is April 15, 1991.

FACULTY FILE

Myths of the Great Wall

ARTHUR N. WALDRON'S journey to the truth about the Great Wall of China began at a dead end—at least what his mentor insisted was a dead end.

It was the late 1970s, and Waldron, now an assistant professor of history and East Asian studies, was a graduate student at Harvard interested in Chinese military history. He was having a conversation with the late Professor Joseph T. Fletcher about two questions Waldron found crucial to an understanding of traditional China. With the right policies and strategies, could the agrarian Chinese have coexisted with the nomadic Mongols with whom they often warred? In general, can settled people and nomads ever get along? No, Fletcher told his student. Take the Great Wall as proof, he said. Waldron did take it—as a challenge.

Arthur Waldron on the Great Wall.

It turns out that Fletcher, and pretty much everyone else who has ever thought about the age, length, history, and meaning of the Great Wall, was wrong. It hasn't been around as long—and isn't nearly as lengthy—as you probably thought. Such is the thrust of Waldron's new book, which gets closer to the truth about the wall and, in so doing, to the truth about the culture that built it.

The Great Wall of China: From History to Myth, published by Cambridge University Press, recounts the Great Myth of the Great Wall before tearing it down in convincing fashion. Ripley's Believe It or Not may have been partly justified in calling it the "mightiest work of man," but the wall is not, as you might have heard, (a) visible from outer space; (b) as ancient as Christ; (c) upward of 3,500 miles long; (d) the traditional border between China and the wild world outside; or (e) the symbol and protector of a unique, unitary Chinese culture.

"The true history of the Great Wall is repeatedly submerged by myth in the twentieth century," says Waldron. In his years of research on the wall, Waldron has learned that it is, in truth, (a) not visible from space, as far as any astronauts have ever noticed; (b) only a few hundred years old, begun in the sixteenth century, during the Ming dynasty; (c) only several hundred miles long, unless you count ruins and noncontiguous stretches that look nothing like the sturdy stone fortifications and watchtowers of tourists' snapshots; (d) a white elephant as a border demarcation, as it was even before its completion; and (e) a symbol of the disarray and infighting that characterized the Ming court's struggle to forge a coherent foreign policy and, in a deeper sense, to define Chinese culture.

Waldron writes about the construction of both the wall and the myth. The Ming decided to build the wall, he says, only after they could neither sustain the more aggressive military campaigns that had worked in the past, nor hold together a consensus for the most promising and historically successful policy—accommodation and coexistence with the Mongols. It was still under construction in the seventeenth century, when the Manchu, a Mongolian people of Manchuria, overthrew the Ming in an upheaval that made the wall instantly irrelevant.

The myth fared much better. At first, just awestruck Westerners admired the wall and began to exaggerate its proportions and history. "By the end of the nineteenth century," Waldron writes, "facts were clearly becoming irrelevant to accounts of the wall; it was the concept itself, well founded or not, that engaged the imagination. And the concept became ever more inflated, until it finally broke loose from the last empirical tethers."

Ironically, says Waldron, the Chinese thought ill of the wall, or didn't think of it at all, until the twentieth century left them in need of a boost to their declining national self-esteem.

ravel. In the fall of 1982, his five years of N.C.A.A. eligibility to run expired. In January 1983, he was arrested for stealing a bicycle frame, and placed on three years' probation. A year later, within a semester of graduating, he dropped out of school and left Austin.

In October 1985, Hogue emerged in Palo Alto, posing as "Jay Mitchell Huntsman," a sixteen-year-old self-educated orphan from a Nevada commune. He tried to enroll in Palo Alto High School so that, he told school authorities, he could qualify for admission to Stanford. While the school was investigating him, he ran unofficially in the Stanford Invitational Open cross-country race and posted the fastest time. A local sportswriter subsequently exposed his deception. Hogue remained in Palo Alto for another three months, until he was arrested for forging a check to buy contact lenses. He was not charged, on condition that he repay the shopkeeper he had cheated. Instead, he skipped town.

For the next two years, he led a nomadic life, staying with friends in several western states. He worked summers as an instructor at a cross-training clinic in Vail, Colorado, posing as Dr. James Hogue, Stanford Ph.D. in bioengineering. After an acquaintance from his Austin days fingered him in June 1987, he moved on to San Diego and stayed with David Tesch, a maker of mountain-bike frames. In October, he burglarized Tesch's store of $20,000 in equipment.

Police finally caught up with Hogue in Utah in March 1988. They discovered much of the stolen property in a large storage locker he had rented. Police also found burglary tools, track trophies he had won in local high-school races, a pile of empty Rolex watch cases, and evidence that Hogue was corresponding with East Coast universities under the name Alexi Santana. The police never notified the universities, but at least one other—Brown—acknowledges having admitted him.

Hogue, now thirty-one, has been charged with five crimes, including theft by deception (his acceptance of $40,000 in financial aid). Four of the five counts are indictable offenses, and Hogue is being held pending indictment. He could face up to ten years in prison before Utah calls in the rest of his five-year IOU. The N.C.A.A. is still looking into whether Hogue's disqualified running results will force Princeton to forfeit any of the meets in which he ran.

Hogue, characteristically, has made no public statements, and is being held in lieu of $25,000 bail. Barring an escape from jail, his next opportunity to reinvent himself is probably years away. □

Donald R. Morris

NEWSLETTER

WEEKLY NEWS ANALYSIS AND COMMENT

DONALD R. MORRIS -Naval Academy graduate, WW II and Korean veteran, 17 years CIA Soviet counterespionage operations in Berlin, Paris, Kinshasa and Vietnam. Houston Post op-ed columnist for 18 years, author of Washing of the Spears.

LT. GOV. BILL HOBBY, Texas: "The best and most valuable newsletter I know."

RICHARD RUSSELL (Dow Theory Letters): "Invariably informative, fascinating and well-written . . . time and again, amazing."

JAMES SALTER (novelist and P.E.N. laureate): "Fully educated, vastly informed, damnably articulate, and without the slightest fear of fashion. Distinguished by its insight, hard fact, and something even more reassuring, historical remove. A remarkable perspective, and freedom from passions of the day."

Write or call for Free Sample Issue:

The Trident Syndicate

P.O. Box 19909

Houston, TX 77224

1-800-441-9837

Houston (713) 781-7094

Fax (713) 781-9594

IN YOUR LEAGUE

For reservations or information call your travel agent or

Flagship Hotels and Resorts

(800) 729-FLAG

(914) 241-8771

STEWARTSON-DOUGHERTY

Real Estate Associates

366 Nassau Street

Princeton, N.J. 08540

PHONE: 609-921-7784

SECLUDED AND SURPRISING

This very spacious, historic Colonial has lots of original architectural features plus the unexpected—a large contemporary wing for added living space or in-law apartment. In total, fifteen rooms and four and a half baths. Sited at the end of a long private lane on a high two acres with shade trees and views to lovely meadows. All surprisingly convenient—three minutes from Route #1 and ten minutes from Palmer Square. Call for details. Ridge Rd. $495,000

Robert Dougherty '50 Julie Douglas w/'41
Paul Douglas '41 Betsy Stewardson Ford w/'54
Georgia Graham w/'52 J. B. Smith '45
Diane Unruh w/'70 Barbara Broad w/'38
Betty McClelland w/'50 Judy Perrine s/'69

For no obligation—Information about real estate in the Princeton area call (609) 921-7784 or Outside of New Jersey 1-800-542-0067.

REALTORS

Representing Previews Executive HomeSearch

New Campus "Access" Map Draws Mixed Reviews from Handicapped

WHEN THOMAS JEFFERSON was asked why Monticello did not have a grand staircase, he responded that such a feature was a waste of space, a problem to heat, and, worst of all, an indulgence in ostentation. Why then the abundance of steps on the Princeton campus? Both the architecture and Woodrow Wilson schools, to name but two examples, feature completely gratuitous external staircases. Seventeen separate sets of steps lie in the few hundred yards between Brown and Walker halls alone, not to mention the virtual Everest that confronts anyone approaching Blair Hall from the south. Throw in all the entryways, which multiply the stairs in nearly every building, and four years at Princeton can seem like an endurance test of the calves.

And for handicapped students whose mobility is limited, it's a test of their patience. But over the last few years, the small number of students who negotiate the campus in scooters, golf carts, or wheelchairs has motivated the university to improve the accessibility of buildings—and to publicize it. One result is the recently completed Campus Accessibility Guide, which combines a poster-sized map with a building-by-building survey of accessible restrooms, drinking fountains, elevators, and telephones—although it doesn't say precisely where in the buildings these facilities are.

Work on the guide began last summer, according to Aline Lenaz, an architect in the university's physical-planning department who coordinated the facilities inventory. Before this survey, she says, not even the housing office possessed a list of all the facilities equipped for use by handicapped people. As part of the accessibility project, the housing office is now marking directions to these facilities around the campus. But the bulk of the work, including the surveying and plotting of the map, was done through the office of Princeton's court architect, Robert Venturi '47-'50, the designer of such structures as Wu Hall and the proctor kiosk near Alexander Hall that looks like a Tastee Freeze stand. In addition to noting the locations of all outdoor staircases, handicapped-only parking spaces, and handicapped-accessible building entrances, the map color-codes all buildings as "accessible," "partially accessible," or "inaccessible." Unfortunately, the map-makers designate these three categories with three different shades of brown, two of which are virtually indistinguishable.

Students with restricted mobility call the map an improvement over the previous guide, a less-detailed, page-sized map printed about five years ago, but they say that the new guide still doesn't contain the details necessary for someone who uses the campus on a daily basis. "It seems to be designed more for alumni than students," says Mark Lewis '92, who travels on an electric scooter. The new map adequately describes the public buildings, he explains, but the descriptions of dormitories are as vague as the old guide's. "As a freshman and sophomore, I didn't go to a lot of dorms because the map said they were inaccessible," he says, "and it turned out there was something like one step, which isn't that terrible to deal with." In his opinion, more detailed gradations of difficulty are essential for the map to be useful to handicapped students visiting other students.

The map color-codes all buildings as "accessible," "partially accessible," or "inaccessible"—with three different shades of brown.

"Partially accessible' is about the silliest thing I've ever heard," says Michael Lentz '94, who uses a cane indoors and drives a golf cart. According to him, the map also gives overly optimistic impressions about the accessibility of buildings like Madison and McCosh halls. (The map reports that McCosh has six handicapped-accessible entrances, but most lead only to the few ground-floor classrooms.) The greatest problem with the guide, Lentz says, is its failure to explain fully—or even mention—the specific routes that handicapped people should use. "They don't say how anything's accessible," he says, taking his experiences with McCosh 10 as an example. "Only one of the entrances has a lift. It took me a while to find it, it took longer to figure out how to use it, and longer to get a key." Right now, Lentz says, the guide "is more a poster than a map."

In general, though, students whose mobility is seriously impaired say that the campus doesn't present them with insurmountable challenges. Because fewer than five such students are currently enrolled, the registrar can deliberately schedule all their classes in accessible rooms, and the housing office assigns them priority in room draw. "There are more inconveniences than problems," says Lentz. "It's all doable if you're well-enough motivated and flexible enough." And as Lewis discovered, "you can get to more places than you'd think, or than the university tells you." During his freshman year, he was told that the MacMillan Building, where the housing office itself is located, was inaccessible, but his own explorations revealed a serviceable back entrance.

Disabled students have thus found that independent initiative can be as fruitful as waiting for administrative action. This year, students with all types of disabilities founded Access, a group that has lobbied the university with specific complaints. Though they concede that progress has been made, members of Access say that the real credit should go to students like Lewis, who lobbied for the production of a new map, not to university administrators.

Yet whatever its faults, the guide, which is available from the provost's office, does prompt a few insights. Because it dismisses all the eating clubs as "non-university buildings," Prospect Avenue is spared the embarrassment of a printed reminder that only three clubhouses—Colonial, Dial-Elm-Cannon, and (soon) Cap and Gown—are accessible to handicapped students. The map also points out that all the state-mandated accessible toilet stalls in Mathey and Rockefeller are located in the inaccessible basements of these residential colleges. And it confirms something that every Princeton student has long suspected—that Nassau Hall is completely inaccessible.

—Larry Zygmunt '92

Larry Zygmunt, a junior from Arlington Heights, Illinois, is majoring in English.

Cathedral Village

Security Has Many Meanings...

At Cathedral Village, Security is more than just the feeling of safety that our 24-hour Security Force provides. There is so much more...

- ...We are an established, financially sound, and fully Accredited Continuing Care Retirement Community.
- ...We have an exceptional, caring staff to serve all of our residents.
- ...Experienced Health Care professionals are always available, if needed.
- ...Security is knowing that friends and companionship are close by, yet privacy is respected.

At this time we are adding 32 two-bedroom apartments. These are luxury apartments with a separate dining room adjacent to the kitchen. We are currently accepting applications for admission in the early summer of 1991.

Come see for yourself all that is meant by Security at Cathedral Village. Call now to arrange a visit with one of our counselors.

Cathedral
Village

600 East Cathedral Road
Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19128
(215) 487-1300

Cathedral Village is a Nonprofit, Nondenominational Continuing Care Retirement Community Accredited by the Continuing Care Accreditation Commission
Sponsored by the American Association of Homes for the Aging.

PICTURING THE

*In the Princeton Departments of Physics and Astrophysics,
Theorists and Observers
Debate the Structure of the Cosmos*

By Billy Goodman '80

UNIVERSE

SPEAKING VERY ROUGHLY, THERE ARE TWO kinds of cosmologists: those who look at the universe and those who tell them what to see. The lookers are the astronomers. They are the data collectors. They live for the precious few nights when they have both time on a telescope and a sky clear enough to see something. The talkers are the physicists. They formulate the theories that explain what the astronomers are seeing.

Regarding one of the basic questions of cosmology—what does the universe look like?—it would seem that the observers ought to have the upper hand.

But data in cosmology has been difficult and time consuming to collect and, once collected, subject to many varying interpretations. As a result, theorists have traditionally had relatively free rein to develop models describing the universe without having to fit the models to many actual observations. The situation in cosmology has long resembled Mark Twain's description of science in Life on the Mississippi, written a little more than a century ago: "One gets such wholesome returns of conjecture out of such a trifling investment of fact."

Princeton University has long been at the forefront of research in theoretical cosmology. In the middle 1960s, Robert H. Dicke '39 (now an emeritus professor of physics) and his colleagues, including P. James E. Peebles '62 and David T. Wilkinson, made predictions about the energetic radiation that should fill the universe, if indeed the universe began with the theorized Big Bang. Meanwhile, two scientists at nearby A.T.&T. Bell Laboratories were puzzled by background noise their radio telescope was picking up. When the Bell Labs' scientists learned of the work at Princeton, they realized that they were probably detecting cosmic background radiation, evidence of the Big Bang. The theorists were vindicated. The observers, Arno A. Penzias and Robert W. Wilson, won the 1978 Nobel Prize in Physics.

The university may soon become a leader in observational cosmology as well. Princeton, the University of Chicago, and the Institute for Advanced Study are collaborating to build and operate a "smart" telescope that will map a hundred times more of the universe than is currently mapped. The joint project, called the Digital Sky Survey (see PAW, January 23), will be the latest in a variety of observational programs dating from the 1970s that have attempted to redress the balance between theory and data.

COSMOLOGISTS ARE FAIRLY CERTAIN ABOUT TWO things. One, as Jeremiah P. Ostriker, chairman of the astrophysics department and the Charles A. Young Professor of Astronomy, puts it, the universe is "as lumpy as it can be." And two, in the words of Peebles, the universe is "smooth, without feature, homogeneous." Although the offices of Ostriker and Peebles are in different buildings on the campus, their polar-opposite descriptions have nothing to do with a lack of communication. Rather, Ostriker is describing the small-scale structure of the universe, what we see when we look out the window. There are planets with voids between them, he says, so matter takes up a small fraction of the volume of space. "Stars are gathered in galaxies, galaxies in clusters, clusters in clusters," he says. These clumps of matter are what cosmologists call "structure."

For his part, Peebles, a member of the physics department and the Albert Einstein Professor of Science, is describing the universe on the largest scale observable. Several lines of evidence show that, as you examine ever larger samples of the universe, structure disappears. On large scales, this reasoning goes, clusters and superclusters of galaxies will look like a sky filled with snowflakes. The main piece of evidence for this concept is cosmic background radiation.

The background radiation is the heat remaining from the Big Bang, which is believed to have occurred some fifteen billion years ago. As the radiation streamed outward with the universe's expansion, it cooled. Today's best measurements fix its temperature at just 2.7 degrees Celsius above absolute zero (about -455 degrees Fahrenheit). The remarkable thing about the background radiation is its uniformity. No variation in temperature from one part of the sky to another has been detected to better than one part in ten thousand. This means the early universe and the Big Bang that gave rise to it were extremely homogeneous.

How, cosmologists wonder, did structure grow from such a smooth beginning? And what is the true extent of structure, anyway? To answer the first question, a better handle is needed on the second, which can only be arrived at by observation and cosmic mapmaking.

Ideally, a map of the universe would show three dimensions: a galaxy's "latitude" and "longitude" on the sky and its distance from Earth. Photographs of the cosmos taken through telescopes reveal only the first two dimensions, but astronomers have "quick and dirty" ways of estimating the third. For example, if there is independent evidence that two galaxies are the same size, yet one appears half as big as the other, then the smaller-looking galaxy must be twice as far away. Similarly, if two galaxies are assumed to be equally bright (because they are the same kind of galaxy), the more distant one will appear four times dimmer to observers on Earth.

In 1929, astronomer Edwin P. Hubble made what is considered the most important discovery in modern cosmology. He showed that the universe is expanding, and he provided a way for astronomers to estimate more precisely the distance of galaxies from Earth.

Depending on their chemical composition, galaxies emit light of particular colors (each color created by light of a different wavelength). When Hubble measured spectra of light from many galaxies, he noticed that the spectra were "shifted": all the spectral measurements of a given galaxy were displaced by the same amount. Hubble understood this to mean that the galaxies were in motion and their light was being shifted by the Doppler effect—familiar to anyone who has heard the pitch of a police car's siren increase as it approaches, diminish as it departs. Similarly, wavelengths of light emitted from an object moving away from an observer will appear stretched out. If the object moves toward the observer, the waves bunch up.

The light from the galaxies that Hubble measured was shifted toward longer wavelengths. This "redshifting"—red is at the long end of the visual spectrum—shows that the galaxies are moving away from Earth (the so-called "Hubble flow"). Furthermore, Hubble discovered, the more distant galaxies were moving away faster. With this discovery, astronomers could estimate the distance of any galaxy based on its redshift.

Before the age of computers and sophisticated electronic detectors, obtaining such data was extremely time consuming, usually taking more than a night of telescope time to measure the redshift of just one galaxy. But the effort was worth it to supply the third dimension to a map of galaxies. During the 1970s and early 1980s, astronomers made redshift maps of small regions of space that showed evidence of phenomenally large-scale structure. Galaxies appeared to be concentrated in vast sheets or long filaments. Some studies showed huge voids, almost empty regions of space hundreds of millions of light years across (one light year is about six trillion miles).

Looking at its small-scale structure, says Jeremiah Ostriker, the universe is "as lumpy as it can be."

In the early eighties, a team of cosmologists at the Harvard-Smithsonian Center for Astrophysics (C.f.A.) began an ambitious project to measure thousands of redshifts from particular regions of someone with a flair for the dramatic named this great down comforter in the sky the "Great Wall."

THE DISCOVERY OF THE GREAT WALL HAS GONE A LONG way toward convincing cosmologists that large-scale structure exists and needs to be explained. Nevertheless, cosmologists continue to debate the wall's exact meaning. One problem is that, so far, there is only one great wall. Scientists have a natural aversion to unique events—you can't ana-

Left: But on a large scale, according to James Peebles *62, the universe is "smooth, without feature, homogeneous." Right: James Gunn: "I'd be very surprised if, in our ignorance of the early universe, we had happened on the correct theory."

the universe. The work has been led by John P. Huchra and Margaret J. Geller *75. The Harvard astronomers have calculated about twelve thousand redshifts for galaxies located in wedges of sky shaped like pizza slices, with Earth at the apex of each wedge. Geller says that when they began their survey, they expected to confirm the assumption that, beyond the small-scale clumping of galaxies, matter in the universe was homogeneously distributed.

But to their surprise, the C.f.A. survey revealed a universe that has been described as a "bubble bath"—galaxies arrayed in curved sheets as if on the surfaces of huge bubbles, surrounding relatively empty space. Although it is the largest redshift survey to date and will nearly double the number of known redshifts when it reaches its goal (fifteen thousand), the C.f.A. survey has mapped only a sliver of the cosmos. So far, says Geller, "the fraction of the universe we've mapped is like the fraction of the Earth covered by Rhode Island."

A drive through Rhode Island on I-95 would not lead anyone to propose the existence of the Himalayas. But Geller and Huchra have seen the equivalent of the Himalayas in their survey. In a 1989 report in the journal Science, they described the largest structure yet discovered, a vast wall of galaxies stretching from one end of the space they surveyed to the other. The structure is at least five hundred million light years long. It is two hundred million light years tall. It is about fifteen million light years thick. These dimensions suggested to Geller a huge down comforter. But lyze them statistically or compare them to anything. How do you tell if it is significant or a fluke?

James Peebles built part of his reputation as one of cosmology's leading theorists during the 1970s and 1980s, when he developed and adapted statistical techniques for measuring the tendency of galaxies to cluster. Work that he began and that has been extended by others shows that galaxies tend to cluster on scales of about sixty million light years, says assistant professor of physics Neil G. Turok. The Great Wall, of course, is a structure on a much larger scale. Or is it?

"Should I think of it as one distinct entity produced by one process," asks Peebles, "or as a series of wall segments cast down here and there, with the eye—being a wonderful pattern recognizer—picking it out as one more-or-less continuous wall?"

Peebles answers his own question in a fashion appropriate for someone who has become known as a kind of cosmic bookmaker: he and Joseph Silk, an astrophysicist at the University of California at Berkeley, are coauthors of two papers laying odds on various cosmological theories. Peebles says he would put his money on the wall being a series of smaller pieces rather than one coherent entity.

For her part, Geller believes that not only is the wall a single coherent structure, but also that larger ones will be found. "Why not?" she says. "Why should the biggest structures be the ones that fit within our survey? That's the mistake that people made before; they looked at a small fraction of the universe and felt they'd done enough." The Great Wall and the "bubble walls" of the

C.f.A. survey constitute some of the most persuasive evidence of large-scale structure. But they are not the only evidence. One other structure is worth noting.

In the 1970s, Vera C. Rubin, of the Carnegie Institution of Washington, and colleagues presented evidence that some galaxies show "peculiar" motion, that is, movement different from the expected outward Hubble flow. In 1986, a group of astronomers presented evidence of the most peculiar motion yet discovered: our own Milky Way galaxy, the cluster it belongs to, and neighboring clusters and superclusters are all apparently being sucked toward a region of space about 150 million light years away. The speed of the peculiar motion suggests that the gravitational attraction of a huge amount of mass is the cause. This concentration of faint stars and invisible mass, dubbed the "Great Attractor," has been estimated to weigh 3×10^{16} times the Sun, equal to the mass of thousands of average galaxies.

CAN COSMOLOGISTS EXPLAIN THE EVOLUTION OF STRUCTURE, from galaxies to the Great Wall and Great Attractor? Ostriker, a theorist, declares bluntly, "I would say that no existing theory can pass all the tests. They all fail." His view is typical of observers like Geller, who says, "the duty of the observer is to give problems to the theorists." And it is perhaps more widespread than one might expect among theorists, who are usually reluctant to dismiss theories with nothing to replace them.

All the existing theories start with the premise of the hot Big Bang: the universe began with a cosmic explosion that spewed matter evenly outward from its infinitely dense, unfathomably hot beginning.

The most prominent theory of cosmological structure is called cold dark matter. It was developed largely by Peebles in 1982, though within a year he became one of its critics. The theory has explained many phenomena, but it increasingly seems as if the theory has only critics. This is in part because cold dark matter makes many testable predictions, which have led to observations that tend to undercut the theory.

The theory makes several assumptions. One is that the amount of matter in the universe is finely balanced at a critical density. At this density, the universe will continue to expand forever, although at an ever-decreasing rate. If the density were greater than this critical level, there would be enough mass in the universe to reverse the expansion and lead ultimately to a Big Crunch. Because the luminous matter of stars adds up to only about 1 percent of this critical density, the remaining 99 percent of matter in the universe is assumed to be invisible—"dark," in the jargon of astrophysics.

It may seem foolish to base a theory on something you can't see, but dark does not mean undetectable. One of the high points of observational cosmology over the last few decades has been the demonstration that dark matter exists. Cosmologists drew that conclusion by observing galaxies' movements. Some galaxies spin so fast that they ought to fly apart, if all that is holding them together is the gravitational attraction of the visible matter (which can be estimated). Cosmologists calculate that there is ten times more dark matter in the universe than luminous matter. But this "ordinary" dark matter—perhaps particles and atoms hidden in dim or dark stars—is still ten times less than the amount required by the cold-dark-matter model. Thus, a second assumption of the model is that most of the matter in the universe is composed of as-yet-undiscovered exotic particles that are slow moving, or cold.

A third assumption of the theory is that matter in the early universe was not evenly distributed. Instead, there were tiny random fluctuations in density. These "overdensities," as they're called, are thought to have been the seeds of structure in the universe, attracting matter to them by the force of gravity.

The cold-dark-matter theory makes predictions—about the size of the initial density fluctuations, about when the first galaxies should have appeared in the expanding universe, and about the size of large-scale structures. On all these counts, the theory is on the razor's edge of disproof. Furthermore, no cold-dark-matter particles have ever been detected—though physicists are looking.

The overdensities predicted by the cold-dark-matter model should have left their imprint on the cosmic background radiation, in the form of variations in the radiation's temperature from point to point in the sky. J. Richard Gott *73, a professor of astrophysics and a supporter of the cold-dark-matter model, says that the model predicts variations on the order of one part in two hundred thousand and so is not contradicted by the failure, in twenty years of measurement, to detect differences greater than one in ten thousand. The Cosmic Background Explorer (COBE) satellite, launched at the end of 1989, should soon make measurements at the required precision.

Another problem for cold dark matter is the existence of structure early in the history of the universe. James E. Gunn, the Eugene Higgins Professor of Astronomy and the chief designer of the new sky-survey telescope, has detected quasars, extremely bright and distant objects that may be involved in galaxy formation, very early in the history of the universe. Even though the cold-dark-matter model says that galaxies ought to have come later, Gunn is not convinced that his quasar observations are fatal to cold dark matter. He says the model predicts that such early quasars will be rare, and they are.

In their sky survey, physicists at the Harvard-Smithsonian Center for Astrophysics came across a chain of seemingly connected galaxies they dubbed the Great Wall—perhaps evidence of large-scale structure.

Most damaging to cold dark matter is probably the growing evidence of large-scale structure in the universe. According to the model, matter is built from the bottom up, as gravity first pulls together a galaxy's worth of mass, then nearby galaxies cluster under the influence of gravity, and so on. Cosmologists are skeptical that great walls and other large structures would have had time to emerge in such a process, despite the long history of the universe.

To examine this possibility, Changbom Park '91 and his adviser, Gott, ran a computer simulation, a typical "experiment" in cosmology. In the simulation, a certain number of dark-matter particles and luminous particles are placed in a box, and their positions change under the influence of gravity. Park and Gott's simulation was much larger than any previously attempted, both in the number of "particles" representing dark matter and galaxies and in the size of the "box."

Park created this hypothetical universe in fourteen hours on the astrophysics department's Convex computer. The dramatic results resemble the C.f.A. survey—complete with a great wall. "Park has shown that gravity is capable of producing these structures," Gott says. But because the simulation involves many assumptions about where the galaxies light up amidst the dark matter, it's not conclusive enough to sway skeptics.

"People like to shoot at cold dark matter because it's highly predictive," says Gunn. "Cold dark matter produces a universe qualitatively like the one we live in. But quantitatively? I doubt it is the correct theory. I'd be very surprised if, in our ignorance of the early universe, we had happened on the correct theory."

A FEW YEARS AGO, A COMPETING MODEL APPEARED ON the scene with great fanfare. It was known as cosmic string theory and was developed in part by Turok. As he explains it, the hot, homogeneous early universe could have gone through a "phase transition" as it cooled, as liquid water does when it turns to ice. Defects could have formed in space the way cracks form within ice. These might have taken the shape of extremely dense and energetic "strings," unimaginably thin and as long as the expanding universe. Loops of cosmic string would have swept through space and, being incredibly dense, would have served as the seeds for galaxies to form. A developing network of cosmic strings has been well simulated on a computer, but the results, says Turok, are disappointing. Simply put, strings seem to be too small to account for large-scale structure.

Turok is now at work on a related theory, which he calls "texture." It, too, is based on defects in space as a result of a phase transition, though this time the defect is three-dimensional. As the universe expands, Turok has calculated, the scale of the texture defect may be large enough to account for the structure observed so far. As cosmologists tire of defending, or assaulting, the cold-dark-matter model, more are beginning to explore texture. Turok calls it the "only new idea not completely worked out."

If texture is right, says Turok, observers should see its imprint in the form of about twenty spots in the sky where the cosmic background radiation is warmer or cooler than elsewhere. He expects that observations of the background radiation from the ground or from the COBE satellite should soon confirm or disprove texture.

According to Ostriker and many other cosmologists, it's likely that no theory discussed today will exactly explain the evolution of structure in the universe. But "it's an exciting period," he says. "For observers, it's fun because each new set of observations constrains theories, rules out some, discovers new phenomena that other people have to match. For theorists, it's exciting to invent new models, ever hoping to find the right one."

The Cosmic Background Explorer satellite, shown here in an artist's rendering, is looking for evidence of structure in the afterglow of the Big Bang.

Billy Goodman '80, a science writer in Brooklyn, New York, wrote about physicists measuring cosmic background radiation at the South Pole in the June 14, 1989, PAW.

Classics in Translation

THE ILIAD

Robert Fagles, professor of comparative literature, tr. • Viking Penguin, $35.00

THANKS TO THE unhappy rigors of departmental requirements, the carefully selected roster of guts that studied my class schedule at Princeton was interrupted one semester by Classics 307, a ferociously tough course on the Homeric poems taught by a ferociously tough professor named Bernard Fenik. Professor Fenik, a brilliant but relentlessly demanding taskmaster, once threatened in class—I am not making this up—that he would “come over and box Mr. Reid’s ears” because of my ridiculously maladroitness translation of the “phusizoos aia” passage of The Iliad. (The phrase means, literally, “grain-giving earth,” or more broadly, “life-giving earth.”) On the last day of the term, when Fenik handed out a brutal final examination that required sight translations of thirty impenetrable lines of this epic, we all emitted long, collective moans of despair. That class still gives me the chills.

It was not the most congenial setting in which to get to know an author. And yet the power of the poetry, the vast sweep of the story, the brutal picture of war, and the endless insights into the human condition instilled in me a passion for Homer—the same passion that readers of The Iliad and The Odyssey have felt for 2,500 years or more.

Now another Princeton professor, Robert Fagles, the chairman of the Department of Comparative Literature, has done a marvelous job of opening Homer’s world to our generation. His new verse translation of The Iliad (to be followed, eventually, by The Odyssey) is sharp, powerful, and fast moving. It pulls you into Homer’s world from the start, and the momentum never lets up.

Fagles has succeeded brilliantly in the delicate act of balancing the ancient and the modern. His translation is loyal to Homer’s language: nearly all the formulaic epithets, such as “Hector of the flashing helmet” and “swift runner Achilles,” are preserved, an essential element of Homeric style. But there is nothing antique about Fagles’s voice. In the scene when Prince Agenor steels himself not to retreat, for fear of looking the coward, Fagles has him say, “God forbid that Achilles see me turning tail.” It is a perfect translation of the Greek, but it could be a line in an Updike novel.

In the same vein, Fagles has hit on an admirably up-to-date way to deal with the characteristic Homeric similes. The two epics are full of lovely comparisons that contain some of Homer’s finest poetry. One of the great examples comes when the goddess Athena alertly sweeps aside an arrow winging toward Menelaus; Homer says she does it “just as when a mother brushes a fly from her sleeping baby.”

“Just as when . . .” That’s Homer’s endlessly repeated introduction to the similes, a formula largely dictated by the demands of Greek epic meter. Most translators have handled most of the similes with the same repeated phrase. But Fagles has found several felicitous ways to modernize the formula: “Picture a woman . . .”; “Think how a goat-herd . . .”; “As quick as a mother flicks a fly from her baby . . .”

To get a sense of Fagles’s spot on the spectrum between word-for-word and more free forms of translation, take a look at the famous scene in Book III when Helen (“the face that launched a thousand ships”) strolls out among the Trojans. Seeing this notorious siren—who has forced them to endure years of siege and suffering—the Trojan elders have to admit, grudgingly, that she is indeed a spectacular woman.

In the nearly verbatim translation of A. T. Murray (1929), the passage reads: “Softly they spake winged words one to another: ‘Small blame that Trojans and well-greaved Achaeans should for such a woman long time suffer woes.’” In Alexander Pope’s imaginative rendition (1715), it is: “They cry’d, No wonder such Celestial Charms / For nine long Years have set the World in Arms; / What winning Graces! what majestick Mien! / She moves a Goddess, and she looks a Queen!”

Fagles falls midway between these two poles: “they murmured one to another, gentle, winged words: / ‘Who on earth could blame them? Ah, no wonder / the men of Troy and Argives under arms have suffered / years of agony all for her, for such a woman. / Beauty, terrible beauty!’ ”

Fagles and his collaborator, Bernard Knox, have packaged this engrossing new Iliad in a terrific volume that includes maps, notes, pronunciation guides, a genealogy, and a useful bibliography. Knox’s introduction is a comprehensive and fascinating guide to the story, its setting, and the enduring mystery surrounding its author(s). Knox offers a quick overview of most of the burning issues in modern Homeric scholarship, including the question of

Robert Fagles

EINSTEIN
by David Alan Cooney

- Beautiful Lithograph Hand Signed by The Artist
- Perfect for Framing (16" x 20")
- Rag Content Heavy Stock Paper (Great as an unframed poster, too!)

Only $19.95 (plus $4.75 for UPS delivery, tube packaging & handling). IL residents add 7% tax.

MAJOR CREDIT CARDS. CALL 24 HOURS.
TOLL FREE: 1-800-835-2246 EXT. 20 or send check or money order to:

ARTISTIC PROMOTIONS UNLIMITED
8261 GOLF ROAD, SUITE 105B
NILES, IL 60648

2-4 weeks delivery. Sorry, no C.O.D.'s.
U.S. Funds and delivery only.

Authors... LOOKING FOR A PUBLISHER?

Learn how to have your book published.

You are invited to send for a free illustrated guidebook which explains how your book can be published, promoted and marketed. Whether your subject is fiction, non-fiction or poetry, scientific, scholarly, specialized, (even controversial) this handsome 32-page brochure will show you how to arrange for prompt publication.

Unpublished authors, especially, will find this booklet valuable and informative. For your free copy, write to:
VANTAGE PRESS, Inc. Dept. Y-69
516 W. 34 St., New York, N.Y. 10001

The Rage of Achilles

The first verses of The Iliad contain some of the most memorable, stirring, and beautiful poetry ever composed. Here is how Robert Fagles renders them:

*Rage—Goddess, sing the rage of Peleus' son Achilles, murderous, doomed, that cost the Achaeans countless losses, burling down to the House of Death
so many sturdy souls, great fighters' souls, but made their bodies carrion,
feasts for the dogs and birds, and the will of Zeus was moving toward its end.*

*Begin, Muse, when the two first broke and clashed,
Agamemnon lord of men and brilliant Achilles.*

*What god drove them to fight with such a fury?
Apollo the son of Zeus and Leto.
Incensed at the king he swept a fatal plague through the army—men were dying and all because Agamemnon spurned Apollo's priest.
Yes, Chryses approached the Achaeans' fast ships to win his daughter back, bringing a priceless ransom and bearing high in hand,
wound on a golden staff,
the wreaths of the god, the distant deadly Archer.
He begged the whole Achaeans army but most of all the two supreme commanders,
Atreus' two sons,
"Agamemnon, Menelaus—
all Argives geared for war!*

*May the gods who hold the halls of Olympus give you
Priam's city to plunder, then safe passage home.
Just set my daughter free,
my dear one . . . here,
accept these gifts, this ransom.
Honor the god who strikes from worlds away—
the son of Zeus, Apollo!"*

*And all ranks of Achaeans cried out their assent:
"Respect the priest, accept the shining ransom!"
But it brought no joy to the heart of Agamemnon.
The king dismissed the priest with a brutal order
ringing in his ears:
"Never again, old man,
let me catch sight of you by the hollow ships!
Not loitering now, not slinking back tomorrow.
The staff and the wreaths of god will never save you then.
The girl—I won't give up the girl.
Long before that,
old age will overtake her in my house, in Argos, far from her fatherland, slaving back and forth
at the loom, forced to share my bed!
Now go,
don't tempt my wrath—
and you may depart alive."*

how accurately The Iliad recounts actual history and why Homer uses so many Homeric epithets.

The combination of Fagles's always-interesting poetry and Knox's supplementary materials make this the best English-language Iliad in print. If it has occurred to you already that you should have a copy of this epic, then this translation is clearly the one to buy. If the thought hasn't occurred to you yet, well—go get the book anyway. Under the sway of Homer and Fagles, you'll understand why people have been revisiting the topless towers of Ilium for all these centuries.

—T. R. Reid '66

T. R. Reid majored in classics but eventually shifted to Asian languages. He's now based in Tokyo as The Washington Post's East Asian bureau chief.

Books Received

BLOCKED FUNDS:

ASPECTS OF CAPITAL FLIGHT

Leo Welt '58

Euromoney Books, Nestor House, Playhouse
Yard, London EC4V 5EX. $225.00 paper

UNDERSTANDING SUPREME COURT OPINIONS

T. R. van Geel '62

Longman, $16.00 paper

STATE CAPITALISM AND WORKING-CLASS RADICALISM IN THE FRENCH

AIRCRAFT INDUSTRY

Herrick Chapman '71

University of California Press

$49.95 cloth, $16.95 paper

JAPAN'S SOFTWARE FACTORIES:

A CHALLENGE TO U.S. MANAGEMENT

Michael A. Cusumano '76

Oxford University Press, $35.00

Undefeated in Ivies, Men Cagers Gain Third Straight Trip to N.C.A.A.s

"THREE-PETE!" the T-shirts on sale in the lobby of Jadwin Gym proclaimed on March 10, as the men's basketball team, having wrapped up a third straight Ivy League title and a third consecutive trip to the N.C.A.A. tournament, closed out one of its best seasons ever by crushing Loyola Marymount, 76-48, in a nationally televised game. The exclamation on the T-shirts was both a salute to the team, which finished the regular season with sixteen wins in a row and a perfect 14-0 record in the Ivies, and a tribute to Coach Pete Carril, who despite endless protestations about his squad's "spotty offense" enjoyed his best year ever. Princeton's overall record, 24-2, represented the highest winning percentage and the most victories since the 1966-67 team finished the regular season at 23-2.

And it ain't over yet. Hours after Princeton's patient offense and tenacious defense had dominated and dismayed the high-scoring Lions (who had averaged about 105 points per game), the Tigers learned that their next destination would be Syracuse, New York, where they would tangle with the Wildcats of Villanova, their opponent in the first round of the N.C.A.A. tourney. In recognition of the Tigers' superb season, in which they ranked as high as eighteenth in the Associated Press's national poll, and probably remembering their memorable play against Georgetown and Arkansas in the last two tournaments, the N.C.A.A.'s selection committee seeded Princeton eighth in the East, the highest seeding ever for an Ivy League team. Villanova was seeded ninth.

But this won't be a matchup like those of 1989 or 1990. Princeton is no longer an "unknown" David that can sneak up on the unsuspecting Goliaths of intercollegiate basketball. Teams like Loyola Marymount might still be totally nonplused by the Tigers' style (CBS noted that Princeton led at halftime in both scoring, 36-18, and passing, 282-89), but Villanova and its coach, the effervescent Rollie Massimino, know Princeton. Before he moved to Villanova, in the early 1970s, Massimino was an assistant coach at Penn, and until 1979, Princeton and 'Nova had a regular-season rivalry. As Carril put it, "if you live with someone for twenty years, they know where you hide the cookies."

How did the Tigers end up in the N.C.A.A.s yet again—for Carril's ninth time? They started by playing a tough preseason schedule entirely on the road (the first home game, against Yale, was on January 11). Then, in short order, they cut through the Ivy competition like the Army's VII Corps sliced through Iraq's Republican Guards, at roughly the same time. The Tigers' undefeated Ivy season was the first in the league since Carril's 1975-76 squad, and their "three-peat" was Princeton's first since the era of Bill Bradley '65. Princeton hasn't lost in Jadwin in more than two years, compiling a twenty-seven-game home winning streak in the process (fourth-longest in the nation).

Before the season began, most observers figured that Yale would present Princeton with its biggest challenge to retain the Ivy title. The Elis didn't lose a single player to graduation from last year's team, which finished just a game behind the Tigers. That January 11 contest was billed as one that would set the tone for the Ivy League race.

Kit Mueller '91 climaxed his collegiate career by again leading the Tigers in points, rebounds, assists, and minutes played. He also was named the Ivy League Player of the Year again.

It did set the tone: it was no contest. Stifled by Princeton pressure and the withering taunts of a Jadwin crowd accustomed to humiliating the visitors, Yale's anemic offense managed to score only twenty-seven points (twelve in the second half), while the Tigers racked up fifty-five. In their next few games, the underachieving Bulldogs alternately lost and won, effectively removing themselves from contention.

Meanwhile, Harvard was touting itself as the league's last, best hope of dethroning the reigning champions. By early February, when the Cantabs came calling at Jadwin, they, too, were undefeated in Ivy play and featured some of the league's top scorers. Unfortunately for them, they also featured the league's worst defense: their opponents averaged about eighty points per game. Princeton won effortlessly, 75-59,

Tigers to Face Wildcats in Tourney

AS THIS ISSUE went to press, the men's basketball team was preparing for its game against Villanova University (16-14) in the first round of the N.C.A.A.'s Eastern Regional Tournament, in Syracuse, New York. The Wildcats, invitees from the Big East Conference, were seeded ninth (out of sixteen) in the region; Princeton was seeded eighth, but the early line spotted the Tigers as two-point underdogs. The National sports daily gave Princeton odds of seventy-five to one to win the tournament—a vast improvement since 1989, when USA Today called it a billion to one longshot. PAW will have complete coverage of how the Tigers fared in the next issue.

prompting the Crimson to go into a tail-spin: they lost seven of their last eight games, and ended up with the worst home record in the league.

Thanks to the self-destruction of their main competitors, Princeton wrapped up the league title on the penultimate weekend of play—the earliest that's happened since Penn won it (and went to the Final Four) in 1979—and finished five full games in front of second-place Yale—the biggest margin in Ivy League history.

Freshman point guard Mike Brennan played superbly in place of the injured George Leftwich '92.

Along the way, the Tigers played in contests that were memorable more for the ways in which they won than anything else. In a game they hosted against Brown, the Bruins' coach thought he might unsettle Princeton by "out-slowng" the Tigers' deliberate style of offense; all he achieved was a reduction in his own point total, as Princeton won, 67-42. Later in the season, at Brown, the Tigers shot a godlike 73 percent from the field, the highest in the nation all year. And in a game played in Ithaca, they could do no wrong, swamp-ing Cornell, 84-40—one of the worst losses in Big Red history.

Even on the rare occasions when Princeton's offense took a while to get on track, the Tigers' suffocating defense kept them in games. In Philadelphia in February, Princeton spotted Penn an early 12-0 lead, but then held the Quakers to no field goals for almost twelve minutes while the Tigers' three-point specialists and center Kit Mueller '91 made up the difference and surged ahead. "You get dizzy out there," Penn's top scorer later remarked, "with all the circular stuff they do."

Not surprisingly, given this season-long stinginess, Princeton led the nation in scoring defense—for the third year in a row. Opponents managed a mere forty-eight points per game against the Tigers, while Princeton averaged sixty-two. Their average margin of victory was among the N.C.A.A.'s largest.

IT'S ALMOST A cliché nowadays to say that Coach Carril is a basketball genius. At the Loyola Marymount game, one banner promoted him as "Princeton's Secretary of Defense," and in its preview of the N.C.A.A. tournament, The National sports daily declared that Carril was the best coach in the East. But despite the Tigers' seemingly easy jaunt through their schedule this year, Carril had some tough decisions to make, particularly with regard to personnel (more on this later), and not all his hopes for his players came to fruition.

One, however, exceeded his dreams—Kit Mueller, the team's captain. When Mueller arrived at Princeton three and a half years ago, he had just stuck one of his feet through a pane of aquarium glass, and because of the extensive nerve and tendon damage, there was some question if he would play ball that season. He didn't miss a game. In fact, he never missed a game in his collegiate career—106 consecutive starts (to date)—and averaged nearly forty minutes per contest. All this playing time gave Mueller a chance to assault the Princeton record books, which of course are dominated by Bill Bradley. (Most of Bradley's records are considered unreachable, and the wonder is that he compiled them in only three seasons, before the era when freshmen became eligible to play.) By the Loyola game, Mueller had tallied 1,532 career points, second only to Bradley's incredible 2,503.

Mueller, as adept a passer as he is a scorer, also ranks second in all-time assists at Princeton. Listed as only 6'7" tall, Mueller is not a big man, even by Ivy League standards, so his game evolved into one of finesse. Unable to overpower some of the giants he's played against, he perfected a series of deft dodges, head-fakes, and smooth spin moves that typically culminated in a lazy layup or a "baby hook" (a shot that went out with the Edsel). When opponents decided to double- or even triple-team him under the basket, he became a "point center," orchestrating the offense from the top of the key, drawing out the opposing center, and thereby clearing the paint for his guards to make cuts toward the basket for back-door passes.

"I can't say enough about our captain," Carril said all season long, and he was right. For the third year in a row, Mueller led the team in scoring, rebounding, and assists—oddly enough, the first time that's happened in N.C.A.A. history. He led the Ivy League only in field-goal percentage (63 percent), but the league's coaches weren't ignorant of his contributions, naming him the Player of the Year for the second year running—the first undisputed two-time winner of the award (Craig Robinson '83 won it in 1983 but shared it in 1982). And recognizing his achievements in the classroom as well as on the court, sports-information directors from around the country voted him an academic all-American.

Mueller was one reason the fans this year turned out in numbers not seen in more than a decade. For the last six games of the season, the athletic department rolled out "end-zone" bleachers, which hadn't been used in Jadwin since the Notre Dame game of 1976 (they looked it). Many of the more than seven thousand fans who crowded into the Loyola game arrived two hours early, the raucous students among them indicating their disdain either for the Big East Championship (then in progress) or for studying for midterm examinations, which began the next day. "Could Be Studying," read one placard whose holder hoped to attract a CBS cameraman.

Another fan draw was the long-distance shooting of guard Sean Jackson '92,

Pete Carril, in a characteristic sideline pose: the crew-neck sweater, the rolled-up game program, and the expression of disgust are familiar staples.

who is rewriting the Princeton and Ivy League record books in the three-point department—virtually the only shots he takes. Jackson is an incredibly streaky shooter, as likely to nail five straight three-pointers as miss five, and he did both in the course of the season. When he's hot, he takes the defensive pressure off Mueller under the basket; to his credit, when he's cold, he doesn't let it affect his spirited defense. Jackson, a first team all-Ivy selection, was among the nation's leaders in three-point shooting.

George Leftwich '92's steady play at point guard was a solid foundation for the team all season. He turned the ball over rarely, and as a key member of the Princeton defense, which applied full-court pressure more regularly than in previous years, he was among the league leaders in steals. But in late February, he reinjured an ankle that's troubled him since high school, and Carril pressed Mike Brennan, a freshman, into service. Thereafter, Brennan's play was nothing less than inspired. After the Loyola game, in which Brennan broke the press easily and led the Tigers with six rebounds (he's 6'0"), Carril called Jackson and Brennan "the hardest-working guard tandem I've ever coached."

Carril had to make tough decisions about the two forward positions. By right of seniority and all-around hustle and smarts on the court, Matt Henshon '91 should have started as the small forward, but Carril chose to start Chris Mooney, a freshman, substituting Henshon after about ten minutes of play. At power forward, Chris Marquardt '92 should have been the starter, many observers thought, because he was hitting three-pointers at almost the same clip as Jackson. But Carril continued to give the starting assignment to Matt Eastwick '92, whose offensive punch seemed to diminish as his defensive ferocity intensified, and substituted Marquardt as he did Henshon. (If all these Matts and Chrises have you buffaloed, just blame it on those supposedly independent-minded parents of the 1960s.)

Whatever instincts led Carril to make these decisions, they worked. Entering games off the bench, Henshon and Marquardt didn't have to worry about incurring fouls, and they came on like gangbusters—Carril called them his "firemen," although it was clear that they were there to start fires, not put them out. And knowing that they would be sitting down after ten minutes, Mooney and Eastwick could play harder, more physical basketball—a cinch in any event for the beefy Eastwick. In short, Carril took advantage of this team's unprecedented depth and sense of teamwork (and the good humor of seniors, like guards Jerry Doyle and Troy Hotenstein, on the bench), all the while preparing his underclassmen for the future. Stay tuned.

—Andrew C. Mytelka '85

"Grace and I established a life income plan with Princeton before we retired."

A gift to Princeton's Pooled Income Fund gives you five important benefits:

- a growing income for yourself and/or your spouse or other family member
- a charitable income tax deduction
- the opportunity to cash in on highly appreciated securities without paying a capital gains tax
- Princeton's professional investment management
- important estate tax savings

Shouldn't you be enjoying these benefits? For more information write a confidential letter or call the Planned Giving Office at (609) 258-6318.

Planned Giving Program
Princeton University
Box 39, Princeton, NJ 08544-0039

SCOREBOARD

Men's Basketball

(24-2 overall; 14-0 Ivy)
Princeton 79, Harvard 64
Princeton 56, Dartmouth 49
Princeton 76,
Loyola Marymount 48

Women's Basketball

(18-8 overall; 10-4 Ivy)
Princeton 74, Harvard 70
Princeton 71, Dartmouth 57

Men's Swimming

(9-0 overall; 9-0 E.I.S.L.)
Eastern Championship—
1st place

Men's Lacrosse

(3-0 overall)
Princeton 15, Johns Hopkins 10
Princeton 17, Bucknell 1
Princeton 19, Lafayette 7

Wanted to Buy

Highest prices paid
for American and European Art,
including paintings, watercolors
and drawings, sculpture and prints
from 18th century to present.
Please contact Stuart P. Feld, '57

Hirsch & Adler
GALLERIES INC.

21 E. 70th St. NY 10021 • (212) 535-8810
Fax: (212) 772-7237

FOR RENT

ENJOY THE LUXURY of your own villa, private pool overlooking the Caribbean, and staff of five to serve you. 3 BRs, 3 baths; exquisitely furnished; on one acre with terraced gardens in most exclusive residential neighborhood in Ocho Rios, Jamaica. Everyone should try this kind of living at least once. From $175/day, winter; $125/day, summer; $100/day, Sept.-Oct. B. Kaspers '70 (owner), 1165 Churchill Downs Rd., Atlanta, GA 30319; 404-255-0696.

ST. JOHN, USVI: 2 BR waterfront beachhouse amid tropical gardens. Spectacular view, excellent snorkeling. From $175/day, winter; $125/day, summer; $100/day, Sept.-Oct. B. Kaspers '70. 1165 Churchill Downs, Atlanta, GA 30319; 404-255-0696.

PARIS: Elegant small studio for two just off the Seine in the 6th. 2 min. walk to the Louvre, Notre Dame. 609-924-4332.

BARBADOS: Home of the late John L. Roe Jr. '34. West Coast on bluff overlooking Caribbean. Three air-conditioned BRs, cook, maid, gardener, laundry, swimming pool. 215-527-0585.

PARIS: Rue de la Paix, Elegant apartment. Suitable for 2 or 3. 7-days preferred. $200/night. 212-838-1731.

STOCKING ISLAND, Exuma, Bahamas: Octagonal wood and glass home, spectacular 360-degree sea view. All modern conveniences. $1000 weekly for two with boat. Sam Burns '46, 407-231-2822. Brochure avail.

SANIBEL ISLAND, FLA.: Delightful beachfront condominium. Magnificent gulf view. Spacious 2 BR, 2 baths, loft. Pool. Tennis. Will Smith '63. 908-842-2096.

BRITISH VIRGIN ISLANDS (Virgin Gorda): Elegant new villa directly on own private snorkeling beach. Spectacular, panoramic view of North Sound including Bitter-End (dive school, etc.) Perfect weather year round. 3 BR, 2 bath, magnificent LR, wrap-around deck, full mod. kit., microwave, dishwasher, marina, fishing, pool, tennis. (Restaurant, provisioning, staff, car, available extra.) $2,500/wk. 609-921-7872.

EXCLUSIVE LUXURY 4 BR, 4 bath villa at private Tryall Club in Montego, Jamaica. Private pool, staff of four, gorgeous grounds overlook Caribbean and championship golf course. Also private tennis, scuba, beach and club house. Available at 2 or 3 BR rate off-season. 203-254-0228 (h) or Carol Shaw at 203-929-6391.

LONDON LUXURY FLATS: In Knightsbridge, Mayfair, Chelsea, Kensington, Whitehall Court. One, two, three bedrooms. Furnished and decorated by owners. Rented by day, seven day minimum; reduced rates when exceeding six months. Call during office hours: 518-686-7841.

KAUAI, HAWAII: 4 BR, NaPali Coast beach house. $650-850/wk. 703-560-7900.

ST. MAARTEN: Elegant villa on blue Caribbean. Breathtaking views. Daily maid. All amenities. Sleeps 2-6. 201-271-0297.

ST. THOMAS: 2 or 3 BRs on the water, spectacular downisland view. H. Macaleer. 919-942-8439.

ITALY: Renting delightful holiday accommodations, each personally selected. Tuscan castles, Umbrian farmhouses. Seaside villas, lakeview cottages. Centrally-located apartments Venice, Rome, Florence. Week/month. 415-554-0234.

SANIBEL ISLAND: Gulffront 2 BR condo w/pool and tennis. Available weekly/monthly. Boozan '79, 201-522-8219

CENTURIES OLD FARMHOUSE at edge of Sabine hill town. Easy reach of Orvieto, Perugia, Assisi, Spoleto, Florence, Rome. Magnificent setting on 4 acres. Restored recently. Architect Ellen Jawdat of Washington, D.C., M.Arch. Harvard. Work executed by Valentini Ristauo of Rome. All modern comforts. C. Joseph, 1 Lincoln Plaza, New York, NY 10023, 212-873-5104.

LONDON, A PLACE LIKE HOME: Enjoy the pleasure of an English home. All privately-owned properties in London's best areas. Week minimum stays, from studios to family houses. For brochure and price list call 800-526-0215.

ST. BART'S, FRENCH WEST INDIES: Luxurious seaside villa surrounded by privacy, beautiful beaches and French restaurants. 412-687-2061.

PARIS. LEFT BANK APARTMENT: St. Germain, close to D'Orsay, Louvre, Rodin. Sunny. Fireplaces. Antiques. Luxuriously furnished. Memorable! 412-687-2061.

BRITISH VIRGIN ISLANDS: Our secluded beach house on beautiful Brewers Bay, Tortola. 3 baths, maid, bunk room. Weather perfect all year. Rates: R. H. Smith '42, Westover Park, Stamford, CT 06902; 203-323-2294.

EXUMA, BAHAMAS: Magnificent hilltop view. Fully equipped, 4 bedrooms, van, private beach, housekeeper available. $1,000 weekly in season. 302-428-1455, evenings.

SOUTH CENTRAL FRANCE. AUVERGNE near Romanesque Conques. Stone farmhouse: modern kitchen, sleeps 6. $900/mo. 703-960-6425.

CARIBBEAN PARADISE: Luxury 4 BR, 3 bath villa. Perfect 2-6 people. Enjoy heavenly views, gardens, privacy. Walk to 2 spectacular beaches. Tortola, British Virgins. Clipper Cleaver '41, Box 356, Adamsville, R.I. 02801. 401-635-4725(h), 617-742-8310(o).

ST. JOHN, USVI: 2 BR villa at Lagoon Point, sensational views. Weekly $840-$1260 winter; $560-$840 summer. Valentine, 8 Fern Way, Madbury, NH 03820. 603-742-3063.

CASTLE HYDE: On the Blackwater River, County Cork, Southern Ireland. Exceptionally lovely 18th century Georgian house on 144 acres. 6 bedrooms, 5 modern baths, classic Renaissance gardens with fresh fruit and flowers. Fully staffed. Two miles of private trout and salmon fishing. Pheasant shooting. Available year round. Richard Kroon Y'64, 201-741-5692.

ITALY. CASTLES IN THE SKY or villas in the vineyard, the best city or country rentals all over Italy. American specialist based in Rome will design the perfect holiday. INTERNATIONAL SERVICES; Piazza di Spagna; Via Propaganda, 27; 00187 Rome, Italy. Fax 011-39-6-684-0943. Telephone 011-39-6-684-0941/2.

SCOTLAND—GLENEAGLES: Privately owned furnished, new 2-bedroom townhouse on grounds of Gleneagles Hotel estate. Central to highlands, St. Andrews, Edinburgh, Scottish links. $550/week. J. Murphy 513-281-0346.

CENTRAL VERMONT: Restored 1830s home. 4 bedrooms, dormitory, 2½ baths. Fully equipped. Tennis, skiing, hiking nearby. $500/week. Mike Van Dusen '65. 202-244-3473.

VERMONT: Caspian Lake, Greensboro. Spacious lakeside home; golf, tennis. John Stone '53. 802-728-4846.

MARTHA'S VINEYARD: New three bedroom contemporary, sleeps eight, waterviews, tennis, minutes to beaches, 609-924-7913 (office), 609-397-0147 (home).

NANTUCKET: Charming six bedroom Victorian, in-town, walk to beach. 617-449-4954.

ALGARVE, PORTUGAL: Luxury country villa. Sweeping seaviews, near beaches, golf, 3 BRs, 4½ baths. Swimming pool, staff. Available year-round with exceptions. 508-922-4763.

ST. JOHN: Off-season rates. 2 bedroom villa, pool, spectacular view. 508-668-2078.

KIAWAH ISLAND, S.C.: Fabulous beachfront house, 3 BR/bath, fully equipped. $1,500/wk Sept.—May; $2,000/wk June—August. 314-991-8768.

COTSWOLDS: 17thC restored cottage. Historic Stanton Village, tour Stratford, Oxford, Bath, Broadway. Antiques, log fire, GCH, private garden, tv, washer/dryer, telephone, modern kitchen, sleeps four adults. Details: Tel: England 011-44-38-673-495; Fax 011-44-38-6858-653. Whitfield House, Wood Stanway, GL54 5PG England.

NEWPORT, RI: Victorian. 5/6 bedrooms. Families. Week, month, season. 401-846-5434.

NANTUCKET ISLAND: Contemporary house, fully furnished. Near uncrowded beach. Six miles from town. Weekly. July through October. 216-721-2322.

NANTUCKET: Comfortable historic home, convenient in-town location, sleeps 8, some bikes. 201-543-2867.

NANTUCKET: Wide selection of summer rentals. $1,000-$3,000 per week. Nantucket Vacation Rentals. 800-228-4070.

MAINE COAST: 3-room cottage overlooking Penobscot River. Close to beach, boat launches, lakes. Sleeps four comfortably. Full bath. Ideal retreat. Photos available. June-October $250/week. 207-567-3772.

ST. MAARTEN: Waterfront hideaways. Luxury, affordable. Pool, maid, unique and sensational. Maria Licari 201-832-6655.

TAHOE: 3 BR redwood home at golf resort. Pool, club, winter downhill & cc ski areas. $1,000/week; $2,000 Xmas week. Mary & George '57. 800-3444-3741.

PORT ANTONIO, JAMAICA: "Nirvana." Fully equipped, staffed, 3 bedroom, 2 bath, beachfront villa on mile-long, mostly deserted beach. Surf, few tourists. $800/wk. in season. $600/wk. off. 207-359-4447.

CHATHAM, CAPE COD: Waterfront. Sleeps six comfortably. Charming, private, well-equipped. Ellis '53. 414-351-0001.

LAKE CHAMPLAIN, VERMONT: Beautiful shoreline home. Magnificent view. 4 bedrooms, 3 baths. Furnished, 10 acres. Monthly June, August, September $3,000/mo. R.P. Smith '39, RR 2 Box 2506, Charlotte, VT 05445. 802-425-3747.

NEW YORK. SAILOR'S WATERFRONT HOME: Built 1930's, Connetquot River, Long Island. Commute city from Oakdale station. Sail Great South Bay. Protected shoal anchorage, beach, porch, garage, beautiful view. Completely furnished. Two bedrooms. Available June 1 for season at $1,500/mo. Nonsmokers. No pets. Charles Arnolds, 305-667-1043 evenings.

GREECE, HYDRA: Artists, writers paradise. House sleeps 5/6, 2 baths, pool, gardens, three mins. sea. $800 week. EDGARTOWN, IN-TOWN HOUSE: 4 beds, 3 baths, $1,100 week. $8,000 July/August. Call Kim Crozier in London 011-44-71-499-1344, fax 011-44-71-499-2173.

FLORENCE COUNTRY HOUSE on 54 acres, fantastic views, $100 day. 219-874-8740.

DIVING, FISHING, NATURE: Brand new luxury Big Pine Key deepwater home. 3/2, jacuzzi, dock, wildlife view. 30 miles Key West. 407-241-1053.

MARTHA'S VINEYARD: Secluded 3-bedroom contemporary in West Tisbury. Sleeps 8. 201-768-3440.

NANTUCKET: Beautiful suite in historic home. Central location. 508-228-3781.

MAINE COAST: Spectacular view on private beach, sleeps eight, three baths. 703-461-7617.

MT. DESERT ISLAND, MAINE: 3 BR cottage on wooded ocean property. June through Sept. $400/week. 201-879-6913.

NANTUCKET: Superb modern three bedroom home. Waterview. Walk to beach. Dave Wetherill '64. 914-591-6808 (h); 212-509-5582(o), VINALHAVEN, ME: 3 BR island waterside cottage. 1-4 persons 6/22-8/30. $500/wk., $900/2wk, $1,200/3wk, $1,450/mo. Lovely value. Trudy Paddock w'38. Until 5/20: 804-295-7358. After 6/1: 207-863-4348.

YARMOUTH, MAINE: Waterfront summer cottage overlooking Town Landing Anchorage, 2 bedrooms, 1½ baths, $500 per week. Call Parkers, Dick '46 302-478-0639, or John '52 207-781-4163.

1000 ISLES: Lovely home on beautifully landscaped private island. Superb fishing & recreation. 3 bedrooms, 1½ baths. Electric kitchen. All amenities. $700 per week. 516-564-8476.

BOOTHBAY HARBOR, MAINE REGION: Charming island cottage on water, sleeps 8, tennis on island, great boating area. Available July 13 to August 3 by week. Bill Achtmeyer '77. 508-369-6317.

BEACH HOUSE—DUCK, NORTH CAROLINA: 3 bedrooms, 3½ baths. Fully equipped. Short walk to ocean, pool, tennis. Summer rental: $800 wk. 919-261-6400. Christi R.E. '35.

MAINE, SEBEC LAKE: 5 lakeside, 3 BR, housekeeping cottages. Quiet, private. Weekly. P'90, '93. 207-564-2009.

NANTUCKET: Charming, three bedroom cottage, beautifully landscaped, Cliff Road area, short walk to beaches and town. Joe Serafini '64, 617-338-2845.

ANGUILLA: Beautiful 2 BR/2 bath villa overlooking Caribbean. All amenities, maid, 4-star snorkeling, secluded beaches, excellent dining. 301-742-0231. Fax 301-742-0995.

BLUE HILL BAY, SWAN'S ISLAND, MAINE: Renovated gem, 5 BR, 3 bath home on water. Idyllic for sailors, artists, and nature lovers; $600/wk. McCandless, 609-397-1660.

TUSCANY: Restored 300 year-old farmhouse near Cortona and Lake Trasimeno. 4 BRs, 3 baths, pool, sailboat. Minimum 2 weeks. References required. Richard Banz '60. 011-44-483-232-622.

SEABROOK ISLAND, S.C.: Near historic Charleston, 3 BRs and baths, jacuzzi, fully equipped, bikes, cable, pool, ocean, tennis, great golf, fishing, sailing, riding. Charlie Barton '41. 803-723-3156.

VAIL/BEAVER CREEK: Well-appointed 3 bedroom, 3 bath house, 15 min. to Vail, 5 min. to Beaver Creek. Available Sat. to Sat. $750/wk. Charles Gaylord '34, 303-722-3474.

18TH CENTURY THATCHED COTTAGE, rural England near Salisbury, Bath, Stonehenge, stately homes. 3 bedrooms. Weekly $550; discount spring and fall. Jay Paris, RR 1 Box 138, No. Bennington, VT 05257. 802-47-0859.

RIDGEWOOD, N.J.: Charming carriage house, 2/3 BR, 2 baths, eat-in kitchen. Fireplace, skylights, deck. All appliances, convenient N.Y. transportation. 201-445-2877.

NEAR GENEVA in charming French village, 20 min. from city. Exceptional lakefront apartment. Splendid view over 1800. Sleeps 4. Available April through July. $900/wk. Tel. 609-924-6240.

FOR SALE

MANHATTAN: If selling a co-op, condominium, or townhouse, call about our unique 200 brokerage firm multi-list program. Sharon Baum w'62, The Corcoran Group, 645 Madison Ave., New York, NY 10022; 212-836-1036, 212-836-1038.

ISLAND HOUSE: See "For Rent, Stocking Island."

BOCA RATON, FLA., YACHTSMAN DREAM: Deepwater slip, 3,000 sq. ft. townhouse facing Boca Raton Hotel. Next to beach club and Boca Inlet. Magnificent home or investment. Phone 407-466-4219. 407-391-9072.

MANHATTAN, 93rd & 2nd AVE.: Sunny one-bedroom, 1½ baths in new luxury doorman condominium. L-shaped dining/living area, high floor, East River views, washer/dryer, balcony, mint condition. Asking $275K. 212-607-5720.

"MISTRAL," VERMONT: 86 private acres, including 20 pasture. 9 room, 2½ bath architect designed contemporary. Trout pond, brook, views, stone-walls, superb riding country, easy accessibility. 12 miles south of Woodstock. Asking $590,000 by owner. Henry Riley '42. 802-484-5547.

PARIS: Richard-Lemoir (11th) 650 sf. 3 rooms plus kitchen, bath, 8 sunny windows, 4th floor, spectacular circular stair classé circa 1805. $220,000. 718-834-8894.

PRINCETON TOWNSHIP, 31 acres (part of 18th century woodlots of University). Single owner since 1900. $1,500,000. L.V. Silvester, Jr. '45, Executor, Box 52, Princeton, 08542. 609-921-6171.

EASTERN SHORE OF CHESAPEAKE BAY: Free brochure featuring prime real estate. Waterfront farms, estates and homesites in Oxford, St. Michaels and Easton. Call or write Marguerite Beebe w'57. 301-822-2234 or Coldwell Banker Latham Realtors, 29 Dover St., Easton, MD 21601.

THE CHARM OF A LONDON MEWS...IN NEW YORK CITY! Lovely Beekman Place co-op in distinguished pre-war building. High floor, southern exposure, views of Beekman Place and the East River. 2 BR, 2 baths, small dining room, WBF, enormous closets, new windows, entirely rewired throughout, architectural detailing. Motivated seller asking $350,000. No board approval required; 80% financing permitted; 40% tax deductible; no flip tax. Contact: J. Gordon 212-463-2693 daytime; 212-288-0978 evenings.

NYC—U.N. AREA off Beekman Place. 3½ rooms, new kitchen. 24 hr. drmn., mint cond. 212-750-1931.

Princeton Alumni Weekly

Reaching 56,000
upscale, sophisticated
readers with every issue.

Published more frequently
than any other alumni magazine in the world.

Why advertise with anyone else?

For details please contact:
Ms. Lolly O'Brien/Advertising Director
PRINCETON ALUMNI WEEKLY

41 William Street
Princeton, New Jersey
08540

(609) 258-4886

STONINGTON, CT: Sailor's paradise, 300' waterfront on deep water cove. Spectacular views. 4 BR, 2½ baths, separate garage/apt. 1½ acres, 2 moorings, 140' dock. Lucia Johnstone w'58, Pequot Properties, 203-535-3035.

FOR SALE/FOR RENT

NANTUCKET—Come join the 400 happy Princeton families. We have large and small rentals, investment opportunities, estates and commercial enterprises. AND we give your investments TENDER, LOVING CARE—PREFERRED PROPERTIES. Nancie B. Taylor, w'43, Lucy T. Eaton, d'43. 508-228-2320, 800-338-7715.

WASHINGTON, DC, METROPOLITAN area, Northern Virginia, Maryland. Sales, rentals, land, property management. Colleen Finks w'61, associate broker, Pardoe & Graham, 6729 Curran St., McLean, VA 22101; 703-734-7020; evs., 703-821-2850.

MANHATTAN: Buying or selling Manhattan! Anne Sullivan Young w'67. Corcoran Group 212-836-1057; evs. 212-410-0705.

WANTED TO RENT

BERMUDA: Retired couple seeks 1 BR furnished apt./cottage with kitchen on beach 9/15—10/15/91. Best references. Please send description, photo, rates to Tom Melohn '52 at 11 Crane Ct., Orinda, CA 94563.

RESORTS & TRAVEL

LONDON, ENGLAND: Luxury self-catering apartments in the heart of Mayfair. British Breaks, Ltd., Box 1176, Middleburg, Virginia 22117. Tel. 703-687-6971. Fax 703-687-6291.

ARIZONA GUEST RANCH: Riding ranch-bred horses, tennis, pool, fantastic birding, shooting, all in a verdant valley surrounded by historic mountains. Season, Nov. 1 to May 15, limited to 40 guests. Brochure, Circle Z Ranch, Box 194 P-9, Patagonia, AZ 85624, winter 602-287-2091, summer 814-425-3768, Don Simmons P'49 manager.

SCOTLAND: Ardsheal House, historic home of the Stewarts of Appin, now a country house hotel owned and run by Jane & Bob Taylor (Princeton '53). Located on coast in magnificent West Highlands. Superb food. Brochure: Ardsheal House, Kentallen of Appin, Argyll PA38 4BX, Scotland. Tel.: 44-63174-227. Fax: 44-63174-342. Open Easter to Nov.

WORKSHOPS/INSTRUCTION

NEW HAMPSHIRE PAINTING VACATIONS: Highly acclaimed teachers. Weekly 5-day workshops starting July 15. Brochure: ARTS PRO TEM, Box 804P, Hancock, NH 03449, 603-525-3770.

BED & BREAKFAST

PRINCETON AREA: Alternative lodging in comfortable private homes. Bed & Breakfast of Princeton, P.O. Box 571, Princeton, NJ 08540; 609-924-3189.

WANTED TO BUY

50s AND 60s HI-FI: I collect tube-type electronic equipment. Mark van Roojen GS, 127 Moore St., Princeton, NJ 08540. 609-921-8171.

RARE BOOKS AND FIRST EDITIONS: We are interested in purchasing libraries or single volumes from the 15th to the 20th century. Top prices paid. Also, expert appraisals for individuals or institutions. David L. O'Neal '60, Antiquarian Booksellers, Inc., 234 Clarendon St., Boston, MA 02116; 617-266-5790.

OLD TRAINS: Private collector interested in sets and collections. Contact David A. Hoffman, M.D. '54, 1330 Penn Ave., Wyomissing, PA 19610. 215-373-4271.

FINE ARTWORK: American, European, Canadian, and Western oil paintings, watercolors, drawings, and bronzes purchased for immediate cash. Gallery of the Masters, Inc., 9918 Clayton Road, St. Louis, MO 63124; 314-993-4477; fax 314-993-4478.

GOODS & SERVICES

NANNIES: Trained at Nannies of Cleveland School, available for positions nationwide. Call Monica Bassett w'61. 216-521-4650.

PROFESSIONAL TAX PLANNING, ACCOUNTING, AUDIT REPRESENTATION. Personal and business. Enrolled to practice before IRS. By appointment. 212-947-6031. Virgil M. Cummins '67 (EA), 430 West 34th Street, New York, NY 10001.

BENTLEY 1960 SII RHD: Burgundy, very good condition. Estate sale, Class '48. Days 212-237-1560. Evenings 908-322-5223.

MEMBERSHIP COMPUTER SYSTEM for PC: Membership, letters, planning, attendance, billing, contributions for all clubs, societies, associations, foundations. 903-876-2224.

STEINWAY & SONS baby grand piano. Brown mahogany cabinet/Sheraton style. Man. 1909. Excellent condition. Call Stuart Nunnery '71. 215-794-5135.

BOOKS

THE LION'S SHARE (Donald Young). Powerful novel about the lost battalions in the Ardennes, WW II. "Up there with O'Brien's Going after Cacciato." Peterson. "Miniature Catch 22 & Slaughterhouse 5" Marcus. Princeton University Store.

POSITION WANTED

TIGER EX-TEACHER: naturalist, environmentalist, horticulturist, with managerial skills and experience, seeks resident stewardship of natural area, preserve, or rural estate. Responsible, resourceful, reliable, relocatable. 516-283-0089 evenings.

EDUCATION

APPLYING TO COLLEGES? Educational consultant will help your son or daughter choose wisely, do the job right. Former dean, 30 years experience. Dodge Johnson '59. 215-647-6755.

EXCHANGE ADS ARE BEING ACCEPTED FOR THE FOLLOWING ISSUES:

May 15 (deadline 4/18), June 12 (deadline 5/6), July 10 (deadline 6/3). The 1991-1992 dates (followed by each issue's deadline date) are: 9/11 (8/5), 10/9 (9/3), 10/23 (9/16), 11/6 (9/30), 11/20 (10/14), 12/4 (10/28), 12/18 (11/11), 1/22 (12/16), 2/5 (1/2), 2/19 (1/13), 3/4 (1/27), 3/18 (2/10), 4/1 (2/24), 4/15 (3/9), 5/13 (4/6), 6/10 (5/4), 7/8 (6/1). The rates are $1.50 per word, per insertion (1-5 times); $1.45 per word, per insertion (6-10 times); $1.40 per word, per insertion (11-17 times). Mail ads with checks to Princeton Exchange, Princeton Alumni Weekly, 41 William St., Princeton, NJ 08540. Fax with credit card information to 609-258-6305, attention Lolly O'Brien. '91-'92 renewal notices will be mailed to current clients in June 1990.

PLACE YOUR AD IN THE PRINCETON EXCHANGE

Name: _____

Address: _____

City: _____ State: _____ Zip: _____

Telephone, Work: _____ Home: _____

My ad should run _____ time(s), beginning the month of _____

Classification: _____

Text: _____

Payment for all insertions must accompany initial request. My check for $ _____ is enclosed. Rates per insertion: 1-5 insertions, $1.50 per word; 6-10 insertions, $1.45 per word; 11-17 insertions, $1.40 per word. Send to: Princeton Exchange, Princeton Alumni Weekly, 41 William St., Princeton, NJ 08540 (609)258-4886. No phone orders please. Issues are published 17 times from September through July. Ads will appear five-six weeks after receipt. When calculating payment, multiply number of words X number of insertions X rate per word to arrive at total price. P.O. Box number counts as two words, phone number as one word. No charge for zip code or class numerals. We cannot accept PAW box numbers. Please make checks payable to Princeton Alumni Weekly.

“Without financial assistance,” says Stacie Ratliff '93, “I probably wouldn't be here . . .”

“I'm a product of a home where finances were a primary consideration in determining the university I would attend. For that reason, financial aid has played an integral if not indispensable role in supporting my education. Without financial assistance, I probably wouldn't be here . . .

“Initially the cost of attending Princeton disturbed me, although I understood that it was justified by the quality of education I'd be getting. I knew, however, that Princeton was committed to awarding financial aid to needy students and was certain that I qualified. So I applied, was accepted, and then received financial aid. Now, I have a job working in the Butler College office, and I volunteer for Annual Giving telethons. I'm considering majoring in psychology and eventually going to law school . . .

“It wasn't until after I was here for awhile that I got a feeling for just how important Annual Giving is to the health of the institution. It's that 'margin of excellence' that helps a world-class institution like Princeton continue to be an educational leader. Annual Giving helps make sure that Princeton's academic programs continue to be among the best in the nation. It also helps allow talented students to attend who otherwise couldn't . . .”

* * *

Annual Giving is vital to Princeton's undergraduate financial aid program. Your contribution helps students like Stacie attend. It ensures that Princeton continues to attract the very best students—regardless of their ability to pay.

Recent cutbacks in government student assistance programs have forced some universities to limit their financial aid. Your Annual Giving gift helps provide the 'margin of excellence' that keeps Princeton's financial aid program strong. In the words of Princeton President Harold T. Shapiro '64, “No one who is qualified, and willing to work and sacrifice, should be deprived of the opportunity to attend Princeton because of financial circumstances.”

Annual Giving
pays for quality at Princeton

12

ARTHUR C. HOLDEN
Box 182
Washington, CT 06793; 203-868-7063

During the period when there was criticism of the clubs for snobbery, I can remember that the Board of Governors of Cottage Club suggested to the undergraduates that the club should invite faculty members to at least one meeting a month.

These entertainments varied from special talks by a single faculty member to faculty evenings when a number of faculty guests sat alternately between club members and were given a real opportunity to get to know one another.

These affairs were so enjoyable back in 1912 that it has occurred to us to ask whether similar familiarity between faculty and students might not be of even greater value today.

13

ALISON R. BRYAN
Box F
Frenchtown, NJ 08825

A highlight of February was the Alumni Day luncheon and Service of Remembrance. It was estimated that almost 2,000 Princetonians and their guests gathered in Jadwin Gym for the award luncheon.

We heard Laurance S. Rockefeller '32 describe the new Center for Human Values as being best led by individuals whose training embraces an understanding of the relationship of mind, body, and their own sense of well-being. Politics Prof. Amy Gutmann, who will direct the center and promote interdisciplinary studies, said "the center will be a humanistic laboratory open to . . . teaching and research that raises the important question about the relation of the individual to society."

The University will search for six new tenured professors for the faculty. The $21-million donation provides for a $20-million endowment and an additional one million to house the center. The building will be adjacent to 1879 Hall, which houses the philosophy and religion depts.

Among the guests of Alison and Edith Bryan at the luncheon was a relative from Scotland, dressed in the Wolfe kilt, who evoked loud cries of "Hoot mon" and "Hi Scottie."

Laurance S. Rockefeller won the prestigious Woodrow Wilson Award, which honors an alumnus who best exemplifies the tradition of Princeton in the nation's service.

James Madison was Princeton's first graduate alumnus. The Madison Medal, given to an alumnus of the Graduate School who has advanced the cause of graduate study or achieved a record of outstanding public service, was given to Steven Weinberg '57.

17

ICE GRANGER, c/o Chemical Bank
30 Rockefeller Plaza, Ste. 6100
New York, NY 10112

A letter has been received from Jared I. Roberts '68, a grandson of our late classmate, Jared Ingersoll. Jared lives in Arlington, Va., and he and his classmates are making plans for their 25th reunion. Included in his letter was the following: "My grandfather loved Princeton and always had great affection for his many classmates. I know he would have been delighted to have me send this letter; in fact, that's partly why I'm sending it."

Herewith some excerpts from letters received from recipients of 1917 scholarships. Kevin S. Butterfield, awarded the John Van Wichenen Reynders Jr. War Memorial Scholarship, is a junior and an economics major. He writes, "Because of the generosity of the Class of 1917, a Princeton education is available to me without significant financial hardship to my family." Jason Hildreth, a freshman, is a recipient of the Samuel Harriot Compton War Memorial Scholarship. He is studying biology and hopes to pursue a career in sports medicine. He extends his sincere thanks to the Class for making it possible for him to attend Princeton. Sarah Gladstone, a sophomore who plans a career in medicine, is a recipient of the Marquand Ward War Memorial Scholarship. She writes, "I would like to say how much this scholarship means to me. Without it I most likely would not be a Princeton student and this particular award reminds me to cherish my education and reach for the stars." Vivek Jain, a freshman, is a recipient of the James S. Warren Scholarship. He writes of his deep and sincere gratitude to the Class for providing him with the means to pursue his education at Princeton in molecular biology. Margaret Langford, a sophomore, is a recipient of the Cabell Breckinridge Ten Eyck War Memorial Scholarship. She is studying mechanical engineering and plans to spend this summer working in Germany. The tone of these interesting and appreciative letters shows the great enthusiasm these students have for their current life at Princeton and for the future.

18

JARVIS CROWWELL
Meadow Lakes, Apt. 3108
Hightstown, NJ 08520

Recently there was a show at the Natl. Gallery in Washington dedicated to the works of that early genius, Titian. It reminded us of that classic limerick which is herewith offered up as part of the Class pursuit of this poetic art form.

While Titian was mixing rose madder,
His model reclined on a ladder.

Her position to Titian

Suggested coition,

So he leapt up the ladder and hadder.

If any of you '18ers know anything about the various Class of '18 scholarships, please let me know and I will enlighten all of us via this column. I can be reached at Alan Kirk, 827 Turkey Run Rd., McLean, VA 22101. This plea follows on the receipt of a third letter from an undergraduate who holds the Roy Sweetsford Leidy Memorial Scholarship. His name is Michael Salinas, a freshman from Mercedes, Tex. He is considering a major in psychology, and, when not pounding the books, he plays tennis, basketball, and ping-pong. There are few better "investments" than in a scholarship for these splendid young leaders of the future and we can take great pride in the part the Class is playing in enabling them to attend the "best old place of all."

We have a memorial in this issue.

19

GEORGE B. LARKIN
14 Lake Forest Dr.
Charlottesville, VA 22901

It is hoped that all 1919ers have had no problems this winter and are set to continue through the spring months.

20

SALLY S. McALPIN W'20
Box 670
Princeton, NJ 08542

Our dedicated treasurer is working like a donkey on Annual Giving, a donkey with a carrot dangling before him. Why a carrot? Because the carrot stands for 100% A.G., which would mean seven years of 100%. Do you suppose we can ever make ten years? We're well started on it.

Meanwhile, the secretary sits back and into her lap drop the mini-biographies from the flaps of the A.G. envelopes. There are three of these today and we will start with Russell Butler's, for he gives us both good and bad news.

"Dear Nelson: I wish I had some really interesting news. Carol and I are as well as one can expect to be at age 94. We are both very lame and cannot go anywhere or do anything interesting. We are extremely fortunate to be together and in our nice home on Battle Road. I am doing what I can by correspondence with Congress to keep us out of what I believe would be a disastrous war. Hope all is well with you. Best regards."

Sid Stewart's note is what I always hope for, news of the family: "Have a new great-granddaughter—four in all, including twin girls."

"Dear Nelson: Hope you have a very happy Christmas and that we can repeat that little reunion that we enjoyed so much last June at our 70th, perhaps with some more of us old-timers present. All the best, Lou and Carl Donner."

Carl! That is just what we are planning on. Our luncheon is our real reunion and we know already we can count on Helen and Walt Morgan if they can possibly get here.

Unfortunately the new carts seat only one, but imagine the cheers that would greet our file of maybe twelve carts! We are very near the front of the line of march, maybe only three classes are ahead of us. Dare I be grisly and add that this may be our last chance to increase our participation in the P-rade.

21

A. EDWARD CONOVER
331 Lower Dolington Rd., Apt. C-4
Newtown, PA 18940

At lunch on Alumni Day, Feb. 16, the Class had a mini-reunion (very mini). On hand were Chas Haines, Tom Roberts, and Ed Conover. We were also graced by the company of Tom's wife, Kay, and George Berry's widow, Mariana.

After lunch the memorial service was held, as usual, in the University Chapel. I was able to represent the Class at that moving and impressive service. Those who left us in 1990 were Richard Ebret, Lawrence Keyes, Varnum Mead, Darwood Myers, and William Rogers.

Tom and Kay Roberts have graciously invited those making it to our 70th reunion on June 8 to a 10 A.M. pre-lunch get-together at their home at 32 Hodge Rd., Princeton.

The Class extends sincere best wishes to Harry Brauner, who was 92 on Mar. 22, and to Ken Klipstein, who reached 91 on Mar. 23.

The Wells Bradley Cummings War Memorial Scholarship was awarded this year to Tamara L. Wexler '93. She has written a thank-you letter in appreciation. Her home is in Arlington, Va. She is a biology major and is looking forward to medical school.

William Johnson is finishing his freshman year and writes in thanks for the financial help he has received from the Douglas Marshall Littleton War Memorial Scholarship. He comes from Warwick, R.I. His concentration is philosophy, and one of his outside activities is editing a book of poems for a faculty friend. Well, well!

We have a memorial in this issue.

22 JACK REYNOLDS, JOHN CARTIER '80
103 East 84th St.
New York, NY 10028

We received a wonderful note from Winthrop Williams, written to the PAW editor.

"Dear Mr. Merritt: I was born on Nov. 7, 1899, in Washington, D.C. My mother divorced my father and remarried a lawyer she had known as a girl and moved to Independence, Mo. in 1905, taking my sister and me with her.

Senator James A. Reed of Missouri appointed me as a page in the U.S. Senate when I was 13. Because of an incident in the Capitol building with the then-President Woodrow Wilson, I read, with more interest than usual, your article about him in the PAW, dated Jan. 23, 1991. My Class at Princeton was 1922. That Capitol is a large building. I never learned every nook and cranny. One day I was coming up the marble staircase to the floor where the Senate Chamber is located and as I arrived there I happened upon President Woodrow Wilson, walking down the marble hall with his cabinet members. I should have stopped, allowing the President of the United States to proceed down the hall, with his entourage following respectfully behind, but I didn't. I turned and President Wilson and I marched down the marble corridor together. He spoke not a word, nor did I.

When we got to the entrance to the Senate Chamber, I fell behind him and entered the chamber.

This is my closest contact with President Wilson. I thought this might be of some interest to you. Winthrop Williams."

I spoke with Winthrop recently. He lives in Independence with his wife, whom he met at Princeton in 1921. He has not returned to Princeton recently but he has fond memories of the University and many classmates.

John Cartier '60 is enjoying his role as assistant secretary. Please send him notes, articles, and photos at the above address.

We have memorials in this issue.

23 LISBY GOOD
201 W. Evergreen Ave., Apt. 716
Philadelphia, PA 19118

Well-known genealogist Harriet Mott Stryker-Rodda is completing a genealogy of the Strykers and Roddas that late husband Kenn Stryker-Rodda began 50 years ago. While she is no longer accepting "outside" genealogical tasks, three books in the works keep her very busy.

Gates Lloyd recently celebrated his 90th birthday at a party at his Haverford, Penn. apartment. Attending were several family members, including two Princeton sons and four of his five Princeton grandchildren!

Rogers I. Marquis writes of a scene that cheered him greatly this Christmas past. He was pleased to see his wife Mary "hustling through the halls of St. Anne's carrying a 1923 tote bag filled with pretty wrapped presents peeking over the top." The tote bag in question, a souvenir of the Class's 50th, was surely put to good use.

Class Secretary Lisey Good was delighted to hear of some Princeton neighbors in her Philadelphia apartment building! It seems that the tenth floor is populated by six Princetonians—Mrs. William L.

Dempsey w'17, Mrs. James S. Montgomery w'20, Dr. and Mrs. R. Marshall Truitt '27, and Mr. and Mrs. D. Brooks Barlow '28!

We regret to report the passings of George H. Forsyth Jr. on Jan. 26, 1991, and Victor W. Logan on Nov. 26, 1990.

24 RICHARD H. HOBBS
862 Prospect Ave.
Winnetka, IL 60093

You will all be delighted to know that our classmate Dr. Richard T. Beebe, who has the title of distinguished prof. of medicine on the faculty of the Albany Medical College, has had a chair named for him. This is a well-deserved honor. Dick has been on the staff and faculty of the Albany Medical College since the 1930s and has enjoyed a distinguished and unselfish career. The dedication reads: "The Richard T. Beebe, M.D. Professorship was established to recognize the dedication of Dr. Richard T. Beebe to his patients, his students, and to Albany Medical College. The professorship is funded through a permanent restricted endowment created with generous contributions from friends and patients of Dr. Beebe. Once the endowment fund reaches $1 million, the professorship will be a fully endowed academic chair. The professorship honors and perpetuates the qualities displayed by Dr. Beebe throughout his distinguished career in medicine. It will serve as a daily example for faculty and students to emulate. The endowment fund will support, in perpetuity, an academic physician of Dr. Beebe's caliber to educate and train future physicians and researchers."

Paul Barringers sends this addition directly to the PAW: "Our hard-working Secretary, Dick Hobbs, and his wife, Dorothy, enjoyed their late winter sojourn in Florida—fishing, golf, sun, etc."

Marjorie A. Eastmond has informed us of the death of her husband, Harold R. Eastmond, on Feb. 5 at age 88. A memorial will follow.

25 JOHN L. K. JENNEY
Box 123
Montchanin, DE 19710

There were 22 of us at the 1925 table at the Alumni Day lunch Feb. 16, including the Dills, Jennys, MacMillans and Warnocks. The "next of kin" of the nine members memorialized at the Service of Remembrance, which we attended in the University Chapel in the afternoon, included: Joan Corcoran, Ruth Oliver, son David Oliver '64 and his wife, Shirley Steeger, and Bill Stalker's nephew, Don, and his wife. We were pleased to have five undergraduates: our lovely 65th Reunion Secretary Cressy Belden and her fiancée, both '91, and three of our 14 Class Scholarship recipients. They were Greg Orman '91 (on the staff of the undergraduate BUSINESS TODAY), Andrew Lee '93 (treasurer of the Undergraduate Student Government), and Troy Parras, a freshman who finds Princeton a change from Texas.

In accepting the Woodrow Wilson award, Laurence Rockefeller '32 modestly and humorously related his many venture capital and philanthropic achievements to the foresight of his classmates in electing him "Most Likely to Succeed." The James Madison medalist, Nobel Laureate Steven Weinberg '57, told us how his years at the Graduate School helped in his transition from student to full research stature. The Moses Taylor Pyne Prize (the highest undergraduate distinction) went to two young ladies whose combined avoirdupois surely did not match that of our Olympic shotput medalist and Class President Bruno Hills, though their straight As far exceeded his modest C+ (third group, in our day) average (achieved by close attention to tutoring by Jack Harvey, one of our two straight-A students).

Annelise and George Kennan, unable to be present due to visiting friends in Florida, have been taking therapy—George for a shoulder injured last December and more recently for the other one which he sprained as a result of a fall on the stairs in his house. Annelise's back is healing after she slipped on ice during a walk in the woods.

We regret to report the death of Hugh Carter Mar. 1, 1991. A memorial will follow. We have memorials in this issue.

26 ROBERT WOHLFORTH
57 Rockwell Rd.
Ridgefield, CT 06877

"Last November, Betty and I came early to Covent Garden for a performance by the Royal Ballet," writes Ernest M. May '34.

"We were sitting at a table for four alone when a couple asked if they might join us. We had a delightful conversation and it turned out we had both attended Princeton, although we understood our new acquaintance's year at Princeton was between his years at Cambridge in England. He had the fondest memories of Princeton and regretted that he would not be able to attend the 65th reunion of his Class." No mystery here: it was our faithful Bill Edwards, loyal British member of our Class.

Happy news from Sam Scott: he was married to Elaine S. Jacobs on Nov. 30, 1990, and he hopes to make the 65th in June.

Lee and Stew Becker celebrated their 61st wedding anniversary last October, according to a note received by Wall Aldridge, and they are in good health except for Stew's eyes.

Present at the 1926 table at luncheon on Alumni Day at Jadwin Feb. 16 were: Madge and Prexy Beck, Charlie Hemmlesley, Assoc. Mbr. Eve Labouisse, Ruth and Bill Neutius, Jim Newman, Orvel Sebring, Mary and Woos Supplee, Mildred and Bob Wohlforth and two recipients of 1926 Class Scholarships, Tony Cicia '92 and Mackenzie Tuttle '91.

CATCHING UP: Johnny Queen, in Naples, Fla., reports a very active alumni group number down there, where he bumps into Chet McSpadden from time to time. Howdy Vail checks in from Boca Raton Estates on the other side of Florida and reports serious vision impairment. Kind words for Class officers from Barlow Henderson in magnolia country and an "O.K." from Bob Gardner in Holly Hill, Fla.

We record with sadness the death of Harry Brower on Oct. 28, 1990. A memorial will follow. We have a memorial in this issue.

27 NELSON R. BURN
36 Lexington Rd.
West Hartford, CT 06119

A tear-off for news on the class dues notice reminds us that Jim Pitcairn died on Aug. 18, 1989. A memorial for him already has appeared in the WEEKLY, but any 1927ers who have not yet known, or sent condolences, are reminded that his widow, Ellen C. Pitcairn, lives at 5049 Amberson Pl., Pittsburgh, PA 15322.

There is growing evidence that the elderly sometimes are anything but eager to take refuge in retirement homes. One witness is Ed Colladay, who reports that he and May enjoy their quiet life and "have no thought" of going to one. Instead, they are getting a chair-lift in their house, and he is satisfied with a cane. Their health is "good but not perfect." Looks like you'd better believe it.

Al Wolfe writes "No news worth publishing," and contradicts himself by adding that he and his spouse are "well and happy and are looking forward to our 65th reunion in '92." Fred Wardenberg has moved to a retirement village in Scottsdale, week, less well than a few years ago."

Sending a check to Ted Bachman (even though he is a life member), Chan Moffat has reported that he keeps busy with the "Ymen,"—"a very active group of over 300 retirees"—and helps at the Red Cross Blood Bank. We are grateful to Claribel, Bill Van Alstyne's wife, for a full report on their latest move. "We will be moving to New Pond Village, 180 Main St., Walpole, MA 02081 in March. The nursing wing will not open until the end of Feb. 1991. Bill had circulation problems in 1990. First lost his sight in right eye. Had left leg amputated in June and right one in September, two days after our 60th wedding anniversary. His arthritis is very bad so can't manage to write. Sends his best to all '27 friends."

The secretary is pleased to report that he has completely recovered from his operation for cataracts.

We have a memorial in this issue.

28

R. PANK JOHNSON
Box 28
Penney Farms, FL 32079; 904-284-8698

Allison Delarue of New Egypt, N.J., is an inveterate collector of ballet memorabilia and porcelain figurines, and is an internationally known historian of ballet. He makes a pilgrimage each year in April to London and the Ballet Shop in Charing Cross Road. Last year he signed copies of his book FANNY ESSLER IN AMERICA. She was one of the main ballerinas of the popular romantic era of ballet in the first half of the 19th century, and was the first international star to come to America. Her visit was sponsored by Henry Wikoff, a socially prominent Philadelphian who lived in Paris. The Wikoff family was interested in and gave gifts to Princeton. Allison has written up his research on this interesting chapter of ballet history.

Also the annual booklet, "Gifts to Princeton" of 1989-90 tells of a number of photographs and posters, autographed by Nureyev, George Balanchine, and Mikhail Baryshnikov, which, with other materials, Allison recently gave to the Princeton Library. Allison is himself a good example of his conviction that longevity and activity are mutually supportive.

The Annual Giving bulletin of Dec. 3, 1990, lists the number of times that records have been broken by successive classes with their major reunion gifts. The 20th-reunion gifts have been broken 19 times! All other reunion gift totals, from fifth to 65th, have been broken 11 or more times, with one notable exception—the 40th reunion, only nine times. It is explained that this is because the Class of 1928's 40th-reunion record of $355,912, set in 1968, stood for nine full years before '37 exceeded it. Undoubtedly the higher dollar totals of more recent years are a result both of the shrinking value of the dollar and of the growing loyalty and generosity of Princetonians.

Ed's. Note: Due to a typographical error, the late Suati S. Janney's name was spelled incorrectly in the Feb. 6, 1991, issue. PAW regrets the error.

29

LOUIS F. KERR
12 Winthrop Rd.
Guilford, CT 06437; 203-453-4646

Spence Marsh kindly reported those getting back for Alumni Day, last Feb. 16. The following attended the lunch at Jadwin Gym: Catherine and Carl Breuer, who brought Debbie Carey, Jim's widow, Doris and Spence March, and Constance and Horace Meeker. Carl Breuer represented the Class at the Service of Remembrance for those who died as recorded in 1990—13 members from our Class.

Court Hastings hopes to get back one of these days. He bemoans, "Every time there is a Class function, something has reared its head and required that I be elsewhere. But it can't happen forever." Ross Wall reported that he heard Blair Birdsall was getting a new hip Sept. 19. Blair confirmed this and was sufficiently recovered by Nov. 29 that he was ready to start a few houses at his office the next week. Dale Smith relayed the news that Blair was given a Special Award of the Mercer Co. Professional Engineering Society, was a past pres. of the Engineers Club of Trenton and in 1984 was the first winner of the Roebling Medal. Rich Richardson reveals, "Finally made it to Alaska this past summer. Scenery is breathtaking as everyone says. Took along grandson James (13) and he's now ready to go anywhere with the 'old folk'. We went with a William & Mary (Lucy's alma mammy) group, which included two other boys James's age and he joined them on a river raft trip which we opted to forego!"

We have a memorial in this issue.

30

HUBERT A. "RED" SCHNEIDER
8008 Westover Rd.
Bethesda, MD 20814

Annual Spring Stag Luncheon April 18, Nassau Club, Princeton Refreshments, noon; Lunch, 1 P.M.

Our fifth annual mid-winter luncheon, held on Feb. 21 at the St. Andrew's Club in Delray Beach, Fla., was the best yet. After an hour or so of pleasant conversation, stimulated somewhat by liquid refreshments (oftimes irreverently referred to as "booze"), the assembled group sat down for a fine meal. In accordance with tradition at this event the ladies were seated at separate tables from the men, thereby relegating talk of the length of skirts to one group and talk of future football prospects to the other. Present were: Lucy and George Beddoe, Skippy and Fred Frost, Peggy and Doug Hannab, Charlotte and Bruce Levine, Marjorie and Dave McElroy, Patti and John Mulock, Evelyn and Jack Myers, Wally Ruckert, Red Schneider, Steve Stanton, Betty and Matt Taylor, Hobie Brinsmade, and Associates Julia (Applegate) Hansen, Anne Cook, Ruth McChesney, and Virginia Moore. Noteworthy was the attendance of four of the six living past presidents as well as the current president of the Class. Skippy and Fred Frost, who have a winter home at St. Andrews Club, handled all the arrangements in fine fashion. On the evening prior to the luncheon, Ruth McChesney organized a dinner at the Gulfstream Club for some of the out-of-towners (Anne Cook, Wally, and Red, and the Mulocks, who had driven over from various points on the West Coast of Florida) and some "locals," the Frosts and the Hannabs, who have winter homes in Delray.

With sadness we report the death of Bill Ridington on Dec. 18, 1990, and on behalf of the Class we extend to Steve Stanton our sympathy on the death of his wife in January of this year.

31

HUGH T. KERR
15-01-U Meadow Lakes
Hightstown, NJ 08520; 609-448-4100

Another marvelous miniature by Whit Darrow from our 50th yearbook. Al Genung, editor for our 60th directory, says Whit will design the front cover, and that will be something for all of us to treasure.

The Jadwin gym table for '31 at Alumni Day, Feb. 16, brought together the following congenial congregation: Mary Atwater, Aubrey Borland '93 (granddaughter of our late Dick Juergens and our 60th undergraduate secretary), Mike Bosak (with Ruth Freidenburg), Merritt Cootes, Carolyn and Woody English, Brice Hereford, Dolly Humphrey, Bunny and Meek Keen, Tim Kerr, Dave Kreidler, Betty Maltack (with son Louis '62, wife, and daughter ter Laura '91), Grace and White Mountain, Bill Newman, Bud Sagendorph, and Margaret and Bill Wells (Bill was our Class representative at the Chapel Service of Remembrance).

By the way, both Aubrey '93 and Laura '91 pull oars on our championship crews. What a delight and how proud they make us. Speaking of congregations, as we were above, when the University Chapel, designed by Ralph Adams Cram, was dedicated in 1928, some complained that they could not hear beyond the first few pews. Cram replied that this was a visual, not an aural, space. Much later, when a public address system was established (in the overhead lights), a visiting worshiper remarked, "you can't hear anything in here because of the awful agnostics."

We have memorials in this issue.

32

MATLAND A. EDEY
1199 Park Ave.
New York, NY 10128

A source of perennial heat in the letters column of the ALUMNI WEEKLY is the matter of legacy admissions at Princeton. Here are some extremely interesting figures that will please neither those who think a legacy should automatically guarantee entrance nor those who think all legacies a blight. Let classmates ponder these figures before cutting off their A.G. contribution because a grandson didn't get in.

For the Class of '93 there were 472 legacy applications. For the Class of '94 there were 447, a drop of 5% and an acceptance rate of 46% for the latter year. How does that compare with the competition? At Harvard and Yale, the acceptances were 45% for each school, right in line with Princeton, although their drop-off rate in legacy applications is much higher, 15% and 17% respectively. Conclusion: although your chances of becoming a Tiger by inheritance are no better than those of becoming a Bulldog, more sons and daughters of Tigers are willing to try.

Of legacy acceptances elsewhere in the Ivy League, only Cornell is lower (41%); the others range upward all the way to Penn (66%). Yes, folks, a Quaker son has a better chance than a Tiger son. But—well, why belabor the obvious.

The Council of Humanities has announced that the Class of 1932 lecturer for this year is Prof. Lisa Jardine, a Renaissance expert from the Univ. of London. Legendary for her lively presence and pedagogical skills, she will teach a course on the cultural history of the Renaissance. Classmates should make an effort to meet this extremely stimulating lady.

Friends of Mary Reed, the widow of our deceased classmate Eduard Reed, will be saddened to learn of her death in Southampton, N.Y. on Jan. 22, 1991.

33

ARTHUR MOODY
600 E. Cathedral Rd., Apt. A314
Philadelphia, PA 19128

On Alumni Day, Feb. 16, a small group of '33s gathered in Jadwin Gym for the Alumni Assn. meeting. Many who frequently attend were missing. Present were: Tom Ballantine, Julie and Paul Campbell, Maddy Haybe, Rex Keasbey, Rita and Dave Ludlum, Becky and Art Moody, Lenchen and Frank Townsend, Ray Carter. Bill Hewson put in an appearance. Tom Ballantine was accompanied by his daughter-in-law, Soon, widow of Tad, and her son Thomas '91. Maddy Haybe was accompanied by his son, Tom, and Tom's wife, Sabine, and their daughter Jennifer, who Maddy hopes will come to Princeton next fall. A group of Bill Wright's family were there: Bill III '63, daughter Elizabeth, grandchildren Bill IV, who has applied to Princeton, and Jane. The Townends had their granddaughter, Morgan Donaldson '94, with them.

A few noteworthy items: The Woodrow Wilson

Award went to Laurance Rockefeller '32, making that class the first to have two winners, since Jim Stewart got it last year. We salute them. A nominee for alumni trustee-at-large is Selden Edwards '63, son of our own Hal Edwards. At the Service of Remembrance, Carter, Hewson, and Ludlum walked in the procession of classes. A sad note: two of those remembered, besides 18 classmates, were John Raymond Paul, son of Elsie and Ray Paul, and Thomas Van Ness Ballantine '63, son of Liz and Tom.

Don't forget Annual Giving. Support Curly Marsh. We are sorry to have to report two more deaths: George Gray, on Jan. 29, in Glendale, Ohio, and Tom Pears, also on Jan. 29, in Pittsburgh.

34 RALPH K. FITCH

4347 Province Line Rd.
Princeton, NJ 08540

Class President Bayard Roberts represented '34 in the procession of classes that climaxed the Service of Remembrance in the University Chapel on Alumni Day. The service memorialized alumni who died last year, including from our Class: John Anderson, Sam Biddle, Bob Collings, Keith Copping, Al Florman, Ed Gemmell, Rog Kirkpatrick, Noddy Nixon, Bill Pagenstecher, Nate Parke, Perry Sellon, Al Steninski, and George Wegener.

Attending the service, the awards luncheon in Jadwin preceding it, and/or Jeannie and Jack Bales's open house following it were: the Baleses, Ken Fairman, Mary Frances (widow of Bill) Garrison, her daughter Ann and Ann's baby girl, Idby (widow of Ed) Gemmell, Gloria and Doug Hahn, Josie (widow of Fizz) Harbison, Bob Holton, Greta and Stan Ivins, Alex Keer, Nancy (widow of Rog) Kirkpatrick, Merry Ellen Korpan (daughter of George Wegener), Bob Kuser, Sally and Art Lane, Barbara (widow of Fred) Lawrence, Betty and Ernie May, Nummy and Corny Pearson, Addie and Ralph Ritchie, Bayard Roberts, Lank Selbert, Louise (widow of Perry) Sellon, Falvia and Hank Thielbar and three granddaughters.

Jane (widow of Bill) Bontbron, long active in Princeton's community affairs, was a member of the committee that planned a recent Red Cross night at McCarter Theater. The benefit featured a performance of David Rabe's THOSE WHO KNEW THE RIVER.

Win Miller devotes one morning a week monitoring a reader for Recording for the Blind. His wife, Beatrix (Bea), has worked at the Los Angeles unit of R.F.B. as a volunteer reader for more than 20 years.

Remember Annual Giving. Checks, made to Princeton University, are sent to Hank (Henry B.) Thielbar, Box 5468, Charlottesville, VA 22905.

35 JOSEPH C. HAZEN JR.

94 Essex Rd.
Summit, NJ 07901

MR. ECOLOGY. "Believe it or not, garbage, trash, and sewage can be exciting." So says Phil Wisman of Bethesda, Md., who has been concerned with ecology most of his life, in industry and in government service. When the Health, Education, and Welfare Dept. set up the Federal Water Pollution Control Administration in 1965, it was Phil who wrote the administrative portion of the plan. When he transferred to the Dept. of the Interior, he continued to work in behalf of the ecology, and in 1970 he helped establish the Environmental Protection Agency, bringing the government's scattered environmental programs under one roof.

Since his retirement from the E.P.A. in 1980, Phil has remained an active ecologist. Today he is a member of SEE, a Washington-based organization of Senior Environmental Employees who have retired from corporations and government agencies involved in the protection of mother earth and who now make their expertise available to E.P.A. as consultants and volunteer workers. He has also teamed up with a sophisticated cross-discipline group that is developing a mass-production, self-financing approach to municipal waste recycling. Its goal is to obviate future need for landfills and make it possible for cities to complete the resource cycle from farms, mines, and forests back again to high-grade restorative topsoil and reusable non-biodegradables for industry.

In the Congressional Record, Rep. James Quillen of Tenn. has referred to Phil as "an ecologist way back when most of us had to look up the word 'ecology' in the dictionary and long before there was an E.P.A. or a Superfund." He also credited Phil with coining the slogan, "Every pollutant is a wasted asset."

GREAT ONE. Last November, Tom Moyer of N.Y.C. became the great-grandfather of Thomas F. Moyer IV. Tom, now retired from American Intl. Underwriters in 1978, admits to being proud of his elevated status: "seem to have started a dynasty of sorts."

The Class has memorials in this issue.

36 JAMES Q. BENSON

24 Aylesbury Cir., Windermere
Madison, CT 06443

First report of those planning to attend our 55th, many with wives: Baker, Barber, Benson, G. Brown, M. Brown, Burt, Christner, Crist, Coburn, Coes, B. Constable, Curto, Gibby, Greene, Groel, Hancock, Hazen, Hine, Jesser, S. Jones, Lynn, Maiber, Menand, McConnell, Micubell, Nebr, Newman, Osborne, Peterson, Porter, Powers, Rbome, B. Ridgway, Robinson, Schwartz, Silcox, Stewart, Trevor, Troup, Walters, Walke, F. White, W. White, E. M. Williams, R. L. Williams, Wyckoff, Vanne-man, Weller, and Zacharias.

Seen at the Feb. 16 annual Alumni Day luncheon were: Benson, M. Brown, the Hancocks, G. S. Jones, the McCrackens, Menand, and the Nehrs. The always-impressive Service of Remembrance in the University Chapel honored, among other alumni who died in 1990, some 18 of our departed classmates. "Joe" Nehr represented the Class and Benson served on the committee and ushered.

Ever-busy Class Agent Ned Williams, whom we asked for some news, replied with his usual wit about his and Alice's doings: "In addition to interpreting a small part of the American past at a local historical site, our principal activity has been the publication of a newsletter for our condominium. This includes both of us writing some articles and editorials, the actual editing of same, reporting on such events as a recent fire in the laundry room, delivering copy to and picking up finished issues from the printer, covering the lengthy and sometimes acrimonious condominium council meetings, scolding residents who pay no attention to rules such as those concerning recycling and also acting as paperboy. (Last month, I stopped at 270 doggone one-mail slots. Dogs in homes regard anything that comes through the slots as edible though I received the distinct impression they would have preferred the delivery person. I was glad the doors were sturdy!)"

37 STANISLAV F. MEDINA

250 Broadway, Rm. 2104
New York, NY 10007

Seen at Harvard game last fall: at least Candee, Cutler, Dick, Dortan, Eberhardt, Fink, Fisber, Sally Graham, Lippincott, Ben Poole (who finished the N.Y.C. Marathon in 5:54), Pyne, Rawls, and Ward.

Bill McCulloch, now at 1548 South Highland Park Dr., Lake Wales, FL 33853, is very proud of his three daughters, all graduates of Shipley School and Smith College and married to engineers, one in Canada and two from M.I.T., not to mention five grandchildren living in Calif. Sadly, however, we have to report his brother John died Dec. 30, 1990, and his wife, Gene, has Parkinson's disease. Other new addresses are Hank Saalfeld, 33 Laurel Lake Dr., Hudson, OH 44236; and Johnny van Beuren, 239 Gloxina St., Encinitas, CA 92024.

Fred Stichel proudly announces a great-granddaughter Tori Lynn Kathenes, born to his granddaughter Sheri, daughter of Fred IV. Picture is post-burping. Would anyone with great-grandchildren please check in with your secretary. Charlie Rob has eight grandchildren, three in college, but no Princetonians yet.

Cbet Philips, of Westtown, N.Y., proudly announces his marriage to Mrs. Anne Hubbs Henry, of Salem, N.Y., Oct. 20, 1990. Other family news is that Lang Van Norden's son Tad, now finishing up at U.Penn. law school, will clerk for U.S. District Court Judge Warren Eginton '45 in Bridgeport in October.

We regret to report the deaths of Ted Conderman, Tex Davidson, Ben Johnson, and Harry Schwartz. Memorials will follow.

38 WILLIAM P. TAMS

Box 25217
Jackson, WY 83001; 307-733-5193

You might be up to your whistles in snow, as some of us are, but it's time to plan for our 53rd reunion, coming up June 6-8. Platten advises moving ASAP on motel reservations, as panic will soon prevail in this area and dorm sacks are very scarce. The Napa Valley Train is sponsoring a one-man show of Heuritt Wells's watercolors Apr. 1 to June 3, with a bash honoring our departed classmate Apr. 7. If interested, contact Marion Wells for details on this affair, which includes a ride on that locally famous train, at Box 1786, Santa Rosa, CA 95402.

George Frank still has a cache of "50 Years Later" and "After 25 Years" books for ten bucks per to cover expenses. Contact him at 157 Harbor Rd., Sands Point, NY 11050.

We still are unable to locate Oliver Brooks, Alan Pope, and Stephen Powell. Any leads will be appreciated and pursued. Just let Tams know.

From Ramsey Underwood: "I spend three months in the desert during winter, take a long trip in the summer, and play lots of golf all year, so retirement is very enjoyable. Good health prevails, at least for the moment."

From Jack Holton: "To prove that '38ers are not yet ready to hang up their spikes, Jack Stebbins once again rode his bike in a 100-mile road race, Jake Classen still wields a steady knife in the top-flight surgical circles in Baltimore, and I struggled to swing a racquet on last summer's Super Seniors tennis circuit in New England."

39 RICHARD R. UNL

12 Charlotte Ct.
Briarcliff Manor, NY 10510

"On our first day we caught 39 trout," writes host Gaynor Blake, "but no one had a camera handy." Our photo shows Ken Burgess, Gaynor, and Dick Demaree at the end of a shorter second day with their still-considerable catch of rainbows and goldens, one rainbow over seven pounds. This Missouri mini last September was a follow-up to a fabulous off-shore bluefishing trip hosted by Dr. Demaree right after our 50th reunion. Also last September,

Don Fletcher was host on a group tour to Austria, Germany, and Switzerland, with the Oberammergau Passion Play as the centerpiece. He just missed Art Silvers, who had been there a month earlier. We're still a traveling class. Charlie Limberg: "Just got my pacemaker! Is that news? Off to Galapagos in February." Ellen Bach is going ballooning in the Alps with a California friend. Says she, "Pretty nutty at 70."

Bill Mueller is now in business making audio tapes, the first major set entitled EIGHT MAJOR DIVISIVE ISSUES IN MARRIAGE. Maybe Carl Elkan could have helped with the positive side in the research: he and Grace just celebrated their 50th.

Dick Murrie was in the enthusiastic audience for Brud Harper's Feb. 6 lecture at the P-Club of N.Y., "The Perils and Rewards of Marathon Swimming." Other '39ers on hand: Nicole and Ted Beattie, Jim Benham with one of his daughters and her husband, Art Reis, and Walter Lord. Walter himself was honored on Jan. 14 by the Ocean Liner Museum at a gala reception and dinner given by his fellow museum trustees.

ED'S NOTE: Please see a Class Notes feature story on page 33 of this issue concerning fictional alumni, including classmate Ephraim di Kahble. The story was prompted by the discovery of sophomore with fabricated credentials. PAW thanks Bud Wynne for bringing di Kahble to our attention.

We have memorials in this issue.

40

BENJAMIN FULLER
6119 Vernon Terr.
Alexandria, VA 22307; 703-329-1961

Once again Class President Ted Nevins has kindly arranged for the Class Golf and Tennis Outing to be held Thurs., May 9, at the Montclair Golf Club. Mark your calendar accordingly. Detailed notice will be in the mail shortly. For further information, call Ted at 201-226-2261.

What you are seeing in this photo are 1940's Danube River Rats formally attired and assembled on the top deck of the good ship UKRAINE, as their exciting expedition proceeds down the Danube River to the Black Sea and eventually on to the fleshpots and bazaars of Istanbul. Pictured are (back, l-r) Tom Kennedy, Bob Hector, Wilky Wilkinson, Ben Fuller, Jack Geisel, George Cowen, Dar Ley, Ed Weidlein, Pops Yow, Johnny Yates, Deb Hanson, DeWitt Van Stelen, Nick Biddle, Gil Kayser, Sam Rogers, Jake Rogers; (front, l-r) Bob Marshall, Charlie Waugh, Tom Wilcox, Gene Gillespie, Dave Robinson, Fritz Foote, Bill Davidson, Cbz Anderson, Buzzer Boozan, Bob McEldowney, Brooks Jones, Bob Gobein, Pat Merle-Smith, Bob Hazlehurst.

Big Mystery: Where in the world is that slippery 1940 River Rat, Bob Hart? Big Mystery solved! Bob is taking cover behind Jake Rogers, on the far right of the back row. This collection of 1940 gentlemen adventurers admirably represents the continuing FOREVER YOUNG AND FOREVER FORWARD WITH FORTY tradition, as we enter into our post-50th-reunion era. Hopefully similar gatherings of classmates can be counted on in the years ahead.

We have a memorial in this issue.

41

BILL WILSON
Box 1420
Bridgehampton, NY 11932; 516-537-2458

Sandy Dillon made page one of the June 3, 1939, edition of the DAILY PRINCETONIAN, where it was reported that he relieved exam-time tension by leaping from the 2½-story roof of Henry Hall to a pile of grounds-and-buildings sand. "Visibly impressed" by this bravado, Luke Bridgman and Yaboo Tipson took up the challenge, soared into space and emerged spitting sand, but miraculously alive. Eval Kniesel had yet to be born.

Thirty-six of us met in Jadwin for the Alumni Day lunch to honor Nobel physicist Steven Weinberg '57, Laurence Rockefeller '32 and our own Win Short. Present were: Muff and Jim Adams, Phil Christian, Mary and Charlie Chubb, Mary Ann and Dave Davis, Jean Gorman, Mae and Bob Leibowitz, Mary Evelyn and Bob Miner, Elizabeth and Bill Pettit, Shel Pitney, Janet and Lou Pyle, Lt. Col. George Richardson, Phyllis and Bud Schmucki, Janet Short, Bill Smart, Betts and Harris Smith, Connie Tate (her father had been pediatrician to all six Rockefeller siblings), Yvonne and Yahoo you-know-who, Barbara and Bob Walker, Virginia and Bob Wilson, Peggy and Bill Wilson, June and Stu Young, and, of course, Win. Some stayed for the Service of Remembrance in the chapel, where 13 classmates were added to the memorial roll, and 23 of us dined in glassy splendor on the penthouse floor of Fine Hall tower, with a fine view of Venus, near a sickle moon in an indigo sky.

We have a memorial in this issue.

42

ARMSTRONG HUNTER
R.R. 1, Box 250, Perkinsville, VT 05151
802-263-5361; (FAX 802-263-9263)

Bob Baldwin and President Shapiro were photographed in Nassau Hall Feb. 20 by Robert Matthews of the University's communications department, the photo sent along by Scott McVay '55. McVay, executive of the Geraldine R. Dodge Foundation, provides details: Baldwin, on foundation board since its beginnings in 1974, is now its chairman; photo was occasioned by the foundation's gift of $250,000 to Princeton's Center for Energy and Environmental Studies which, McVay writes, is "at the hub of some of the most advanced thinking and analysis concerning energy-efficient technology, the transition to a post-fossil fuel era, and the development of alternative energy sources."

Ed Coale reports a '42 week he and Holly enjoyed in January in Boca Grande: luncheon one day with Joe and Eunice Grover (Pennsylvanians now, but winter Fla. sojourners) and Topper and Nancy Cook (in Fla. from Conn. for an invitational croquet tournament), then, a couple of evenings later, a dinner honoring Bourne and Byrd Bean, in Florida to visit old St. Louis friends who are now Coale neighbors. The Cooks did well in the tournament, Ed notes, though he lacked full details.

Louise Bingham, taken ill during a family skiing/hiking party over New Year's, had double-bypass surgery Jan. 14, is recuperating nicely at home in N.J., but, for the first time in years, did not accompany Bill to Alumni Day Feb. 16.

We have a memorial in this issue.

43

JACK LAFLIN
10 Vardon Rd.
West Hartford, CT 06117; 203-523-8929

Ten classmates, plus assorted family members, attended the annual Alumni Day at Princeton, Sat., Feb. 16, as follows: Betts and Bob Carpenter; Ned Carpenter; Ruth and Dexter Chapin; Ed Essertier; Rachel and Stu Jenkins, daughter Ann and son-in-law Carl Rizzo, and Stu's sister, Sarah-Nancy Jenkins; Hani and John Kenefick; Lillian and Dave Peaslee; Louise and Sharon Risk; Vivianne and Norm Russell; Bill Sloane. Our Honorary Class Member Pat LaRue was also present, and helped with arrangements for the Service of Remembrance in the University Chapel. Unhappily, we added nine names to the memorial roll during 1990.

Laurance Rockefeller '32 won the Woodrow Wilson Award and Steven Weinberg '57 won the James Madison Medal. Each gave a talk in Alexander Hall that morning. As reported by Essertier, Dave Peaslee went to hear Weinberg, while Ed audited Rockefeller's speech. Dave's comment before they both went their separate ways? "You go find out how to become a millionaire, and I'll go find out how to win a Nobel Prize."

Once and for all, this should settle the question of who the youngest member of the Class of 1943 is. According to the latest data received, records show that Myron Hurwitz was born in March of 1924, which would have made him 15½ years old in Sept. 1939, when we all came on campus for the first time. Hard to believe, but apparently true!

This column has been asked to make a correction on one of our address changes which appeared in an earlier issue. Hank Allyn assured us it was in error, that he still lives on Country Club Rd., Sewickley, PA 15143, as he has for the past 23 years. We have so informed the Bureau of Alumni Records.

Speaking of C/As, Fran Boblen is now residing at 27886 Peach Orchard Rd., Easton, MD 21601.

We regret to inform you of the deaths of Joe Fegan and Martin Franklin.

44

HERVEY S. STOCKMAN
1041 Matador Dr., S.E.
Albuquerque, NM 87123; 505-296-7057

Don Brandin has earned a lot of kudos over the years and we learned of his latest just after Christmas: an endowed chair in his honor at the John M. Olin School of Business, Washington Univ., St. Louis. Boat men's Bancshares, which Don served for 33 years, building it to become one of the nation's 50 largest bank holding companies, made the $1 million endowment in his name.

Dues News: Fran Critchlow, in retirement a world cruiser, writes, "Tom Sounden suggested a visit to the Taj Mahal. Cissy and I did—and we survived!" Bob Wood had a new book out in May 1990: REMEDIAL LAW—WHERE COURTS BECAME ADMINISTRATORS (Univ. of Mass.—Amherst Press). Reg Rowe had a show of his new work Nov. 1990 to mid-Jan. 1991 at the Koehler Cultural Ctr. in San Antonio, Tex. "It's been a long road—first N.Y. show in 1952 and been working at it ever since." Jim Thurston retired from the Civil Services Dept. of the Army as a social worker July 31, 1990, and "couldn't be happier." Art Dowell, after living 35 years in the Washington, D.C. area, headed west across the U.S. to Red Bluff, Calif., hometown of his wife, Babette. (Art, I was Red Bluff's Bruce Gravette's wingman in 1944.) Alan Miller continues to stay active as a marketing consultant in order to avoid mischief when salmon are not biting. Phil Petersen put it properly, "My youngest daughter, Martha (28), had a baby boy, Tommy, born Oct. 28, 1989. They, Martha and Brian, are very happy with him, and I hope he is happy with them." Marty and Jim Cobbs in Italy last Nov. were planning to rent a car and drive to Pompeii, among other places. Marty is active in researching and participating in "digs" of Indian and old settlement remains in N.Y. and Conn.

45 WARREN W. EGINTON

U.S. Courthouse, 915 Lafayette Blvd.
Bridgeport, CT 06604

Herewith the penultimate reminder of the Apr. 30 cocktail reception at the Princeton Club of N.Y.

On the reunion topic, 46th-year reunion chairman Stu Carothers happily advises that the Fri. night dinner on June 7 will not be held at the traditional Sanford location (Betty will be away) but will be held close by at the Princeton-Kingston Road mansion of Betsy and Princeton sewer czar J. B. Smith. J. B. promises tours of the system by canal boat, a la Victor Hugo. We are again paired with our sister class of '46, and Stu reminds us that this is a fine opportunity to start building toward the 50th, especially now that so many are retired or semi-retired and can fit in a rewarding visit to Princeton.

To complete this reunion column, respectful note is made of the activities of the man for all seasons, Barney Barnhart, on mid-winter Alumni Day, held at the University on Feb. 16. Barney opened by introducing Prof. Arnold Rampersad in Wood Auditorium, McCosh 10, as the good professor discussed the nature of autobiography and biography, drawing from his critically acclaimed LIFE OF LANGSTON HUGHES. Barney and Nancy then joined the faithful guard of classmates at the Jadwin luncheon, where the '45 table was also graced by Dave Dodge, Edge Eginton, Bill Hagendorf with daughter Kate, Bob Heisler, Mary and Bob Mills, Patsy and Karl Rugart, Wet Stewart, and Lillian and Pete Warren. The luncheon was followed by the moving Service of Remembrance, wherein Barney completed his virtuoso day of devotion to Princeton by representing the Class as we paid tribute to nine departed from the ranks in the past year: Tom Baird, Jim Bell, Frank Brandt, Hector Cowan, Ted Hughes, David Huntington, Casey Jones, Bill Weigel, and Peter Wood.

46 ROBERT CAMPBELL JR.

Investors Security Services
636 Morris Tpk., Short Hills, NJ 07078

As editor of our reunion Class book, Dick Charlesworth urges all of us who have not done so to update him on our current address, as well as our wife's first name, for the new Class directory. Send this to 121 Cherry Brook Rd., Weston, MA 02193.

But more important, make sure you are at Reunions. Bob Donovan says this is the last chance we will have with a reunion headquarters in the heart of the campus. DON'T BE LEFT OUT!!!

Speaking of reunions, I am ponying up the required cash for our classmate, Crocker Nevin, who had the audacity to produce a bouncing baby girl, Jennie, shortly after our 40th. Crocker's wife, Liza, adds that this will be Crocker's first reunion. A sampling of others who have signed up so far includes: Al McNulty, Tom Ward, RedDog Moore, Douglas Freeman, Herm Froeb, Bill Robertson, Larry Gosnell, Don Bondreau, Ted Perlman, Fred Allner, Dick Bell, Bob Bosworth, Bob Crecca, Bill Ex, Ed Knetzger, Pete Parker, Art Thornbills, Art Wbinston, Dave Peacock, Bernie Ryan, and Al Luken.

In a more sober mood of nostalgia, Charlie Brown represented our Class at the Feb. 16 Service of Remembrance. Those attending, to the best of Charlie's recollection, were: Charlie Brown, Bob Donovan, Bob Lehair, Burr Fisher, Paul Spagnoli, Bob Willis, and Doc D'Agostino's, surviving spouse, Betty.

Our Class now has five sons and daughters at the University: Bruce Canuthers '92, Carolyn Hawkins '92, Bill McNulty '91, Deborah Perlman '92, and Russell Pyle '91.

Missing from a previous column was this picture of the wedding of Sheets Blumberg's daughter Ann to Steve Graham '69 last summer in Martha's Vineyard. The unofficial photo shows (l-r) Burr Fisher, Skeets, Ann Graham, Jocelyn Schaefer '87, Hal Erdman, Bill Bolger '47, and Walt Nirenberg.

With sorrow we report the death of our classmate Bill Short, Feb. 20, 1990. Memorial contributions may be made to Class of '46 Memorial Fund.

47 ASA BUSHNELL

Box 7034
Tucson, AZ 85725; 602-741-4715

"I have called this book TELLING SECRETS because I have come to believe that, by and large, the human family all has the same secrets, which are both very telling and very important to tell."

Those words come from the introduction of Fred Buechner's "third venture into autobiography," a brilliant account of the revelations his memory has unearthed in the last 15 years. Just published by HarperCollins, TELLING SECRETS adds a new luster to the list of 25 works of fiction and nonfiction written by our noted minister-teacher-author. Fred is the 1990 recipient of a doctor of divinity degree from Yale, his fifth such honor from different universities (of which Old Nassau, surprisingly, is not one).

Prexy George Eggers reports a nifty '47 showing for "a very cold and windy Alumni Day in Princeton." Present at one or more of the events (Alumni Council lunch in Jadwin, Class cocktail party in George's home, and Class dinner at the Nassau Club): Boyle, Clay, Douglass (arranger of the dinner), Faunce, Hanson, Jack B. Hughes, Hughson, Bill Jackson, Metter, Pearson, Pershing, Woblforth, and Bill Wright. Special credit goes to Boyle, Eggers, McKeown, and Wright, who attended the Annual Giving dinner an evening earlier, and Pearson, our representative at the Service of Remembrance.

There's good news from Co-Chairman Dick Windsor regarding the early returns for '47's Mid-west Reunion in September. "Definites" to date: Berglund, Brucker, Drescher, Eggers, Eller, Faunce, Herr, Hughson, Joltine, Sanderson Smith, Spoehr, Whytlaw, Wilson, Wohlforth, and Wright. "Probables": Busbnell, Pat Clancy, Tad Hall, Harrington, Frank Henry, Kean, Purple, and Struby. Let's add to these totals ASAP!

Hal Lackey lost a long, courageous battle against cancer on Feb. 19 in Nashville. We deeply regret to report the death of our classmate Tony Miller. Memorials will follow.

48 DAVID K. REEVES

106 Snowden Ln.
Princeton, NJ 08540; 609-924-3340

The most enthusiastic and perhaps the largest number of classmates turned out for our mid-winter dinner in February. Tom Buechner simply wowed the assembled multitude with slides of his paintings and with his erudite, amusing, charming talk. The sage of Corning was nothing less than magnificent.

A few days earlier Art Savage (sometime Master of Revels) represented the Class at the Service of Remembrance, always a deeply moving occasion. Alumni Day is very special with the awarding of the various prizes, a festive lunch, and great lectures. It was splendid to see Kabby and Al Loue down from Schenectady and Miles Charest up from Baltimore. Art Wagner, whom we see not enough of, came out of the local woods.

Feb. 24 was a very sad day for the Class. One of our dearest and most loyal, Frank Dyckman, died. He had been stricken a few days earlier with a heart ailment that prevented his introducing Tom Buechner at our dinner. Frank ran our 25th reunion and was Class president 1973-78.

Ted Rboades has been elected president of the Standing Committee of the Episcopal Diocese of Mass. He is the first layman to be so honored.

Why not "do it now"? Annual Giving that is. Send on your check and gladden the heart of our noble Class agent, Bob Bolling. Then you won't get a phone call to interrupt your dinner when telethons get going.

49 ALVIN R. KRACHT

Limerick Lane Poetryworks®, 5 Birch Ln.
Chappaqua, NY 10514; 914-238-0352

Join Us at '49's Fun-Filled 42nd
June 7-9

Back on Dec. 7, 1980, the Vanderbilt Presbyterian Church of Naples, Fla., was organized in a storefront, with about 35 members, and the Rev. C. Edward Gammon II serving as its minister. Ed, who holds a doctorate of divinity, brought long experience as a minister to the church, along with skills in music and writing, as well as talents in radio and TV ministries. The church dedicated its first building on five acres in 1983, and now—having grown to 400 members—has just added a $2.5-million new sanctuary and Christian education building. The sanctuary is of Scandinavian appearance, with a 150-foot-high steeple, and has a new 44-rank pipe organ.

Pat and Dick Rusb celebrated their 35th wedding anniversary in 1990 and keep very active in Oak Ridge, Tenn. Dick has switched jobs from the Energy Division to the Environmental Compliance Division of Oak Ridge Natl. Laboratory, keeps on as church treasurer, and has taken up reading for the Oak Ridge Recording for the Blind unit, which specializes in scientific books. Pat served for 18 months on the Federal Grand Jury, continues with her singing, and is working with the City Council to create a permanent community college campus. Al Richardson advises: "Have retired from General Electric Co. after 41 years of service."

Art Jacobsen writes: "Have an active alumni association here in Nantucket, called PAANI—Princeton Alumni Assn. of Nantucket Island. Our annual event last summer brought 85 alumni, spouses, undergrads, and friends out on a cruise of the harbor. I am president of the association for this year, and hope any '49ers coming to the island will let me know so I can get them on our mailing list. Write me at Cathcart Road, Nantucket, MA 02254." And Al Levine reports: "We welcomed the arrival, Aug. 20, of our fourth granddaughter, Rachel. Our eldest, Jennifer, is prepping for admittance to Princeton, Class of '99."

50

PETE BUCHANAN

151 West St.
Beverly Farms, MA 01915; 508-922-1650

Retirement news continues to pour in from all directions. Buck Buchanan, who retired for the second time in Aug. 1989, is teaching at Chapman School of Business and Economics in Orange, Calif. He's also very involved with the St. Margaret of Scotland Episcopal School in San Juan Capistrano. It now numbers 743 students (K-12), and last year marked its first Ivy League acceptances.

Ralph Cardello and Gloria are enjoying retirement in the Clear Lakes area near Houston, where Gloria attends San Jacinto College. Traveling is generally to the East to visit their children and three grandchildren. Son Ralph '84 completed his Ph.D. last spring at Rice and is working in N.J. for Exxon, dad's old employer.

Bob Rotb retired in Dec. 1989 from the E.P.A. in Atlanta after 25 years and started his own small consulting firm. He became a grandfather last June. Hank Neil retired the same date from his Congressional staff job. Son Erik '86's wedding photo appeared in the '86 Class notes last winter.

Another in the Washington area is Jack Knowles, who went to Georgetown Law School after retiring from the Foreign Service. He's starting his seventh year in his second career as a Virginia lawyer, a sole practitioner working on small business and doing some probate and estate planning. Jack's enjoying his two children and three grandchildren as well as some civic volunteer activities.

After 35 years with Hewitt Associates, Tom Paine has moved to Napa Valley and planted a small vineyard, emulating Dave Park, provider of our 25th-reunion wine. With luck Tom's should be available for our 50th. Joe Gordon, based in Cos Cob, Conn., spends summers in Buck Hill Falls, Penn., and most of the winter skiing in the West. Brad Postell, who grew up in Cos Cob, is in the process of retiring from Lexington, Ky., to Jacksonville with wife, Carol. Bob Wendt is retired from Merrill Lynch after 38 years in the Columbia, S.C. office. Dick Gray has retired as general counsel of Air Products in Allentown, Penn., and looks forward to attending the Montreal Mini.

51

RICHARD K. PAYNTER

49 Wilson Rd.
Princeton, NJ 08540; 609-921-6720

"Life Begins at the 40th" June 6-9

This a picture of the 1951 lacrosse team, national champions. Among many highlights, Princeton beat the Philadelphia Lacrosse Club, Mt. Washington L.C., Johns Hopkins, Maryland, and Navy, en route to a 9-1 season; Bill Griffith scored ten goals against Rutgers—still a team record—and team Captain Don Hahn and Reddy Finney were all-Americans. Griff, Cheddy Carey, and Clint Gilbert were Honorable Mention All Americans. Classmates in the picture are: Mike Maboney (top row, third from right); (second row, l-r) Griff, Charlie Albert, Finney, Carey, Doc Crane, Hahn, Gilbert, Teddy Gould, Marty Owen, and Ray Close. The University and Friends of Lacrosse will honor the team at the Dartmouth game on May 4. Jerry McHugh's son Chris '91 is an attackman and a tri-captain of this year's team.

In a White House ceremony in January, Dick John received from President Bush our government's highest Civil Service award, the Distinguished Presidential Award for "sustained extraordinary accomplishment in the management of programs of the U.S. government." Dick had been with the Dept. of Transportation for 20 years. Last summer he was appointed director of the Cambridge, Mass., John A. Volpe Natl. Transportation Systems Ctr., which conducts transportation research and development.

We have a memorial in this issue.

52

DON OSWONSON
4630 30th St., N.W.
Washington, DC 20008

Philadelphia Mini-Reunion April 25-28—Join the Fun!

Joe Bolster had a wonderful send-off for his official retirement as Princeton's director of Annual Giving, with over 200 people honoring Joe and Tink at a University-wide reception. The guests included 12 of the Bolsters' 14 children and other friends and relatives. Joe was also honored by special recognition from the annual giving professionals of the Middle Atlantic states and the Ivy-Stanford-MIT annual giving staffs.

Bruce Berckmans and his Cardiac Rehabilitation Rowing Project were given extensive coverage in AMERICAN ROWING magazine, which retold the story of Bruce's heart attack and the part that rowing played in his recovery. The magazine declared that Bruce "has the heart of a champion" and the "tight, stringy muscles of a lightweight boxer," a full head of gray hair, and the look of a 45-year-old rather than a man just past 60. Also reported is that Bruce won the bronze medal at the 1990 Masters Singles rowing competition in Miami.

Roger Berlind is still working hard to bring ANNIE 2 to Broadway this fall. The original ANNIE was a smashing success, but the sequel didn't quite have the Daddy Warbucks touch the first time out in the hinterland of Washington, D.C. Roger hasn't given up hope. He was quoted by the N.Y. Times as saying at an audition for potential investors, "I believe in this show."

Alumni Day festivities this year included a presentation at our Class dinner by Caryl Emerson, professor of Slavic languages and literatures, on "The Beginning and End of Gorbachev's Revolution." Attendees at the dinner, held at Forbes College, or other Alumni Day activities included Atwood, Beck, Clutz, Coe, Colyer, Cowan, Daubert, Dean, Dunham, Eby, Emery, Fish, Hambleton, Helm, Jiranek, Kahn, Lovell, McAneny, Roger McLean, Middlebrook, Mueller, Murdoch, Peters, Pivrotto, Prus, Slivon, Tamall, Tiryakian, Werb, and Wilmerding.

53

PRIENCE J. LONERGAN
Box 18
Blawenburg, NJ 08504

Last fall Liz and Dick Ellwood and Joan and Studs Lonergan shared an enjoyable two-week trip through Europe. Included in the itinerary were Germany, Austria, and Hungary. Vienna, of course, was one of the highlights, but they felt that Budapest was an exciting and up-beat city that will be in the forefront of the rejuvenation of Eastern Europe.

Shown here in Munich, Dick demonstrates to Studs just who is in charge of the itinerary.

We haven't heard from Julio Gutierrez in some time, so it was with considerable pleasure that we received a letter and this picture of John Calvert, Jerve Finney, Dick King, and Lew Rawlings at Dick's spread in Tex. It appears as if the quarry were birds, but Julio hints that he is organizing an effort to annex Mexico by force of arms.

Prexy Len Milberg reminds us about the Philadelphia mini-reunion. Peter Benoitel has been hard at work on the program for several months ably assisted by Stan Browne, Dick Drayton, T. Kirkland, and wives. The dates are Fri., Oct. 18 to Sun., Oct. 20. Activities will include a Philadelphia Orchestra concert, tours highlighting the city's cultural attractions, and, on Sunday, an excursion to Longwood Gardens and the Brandywine Museum. You will be hearing more on this as plans firm up.

Bones Spencer, chairman of the Inst. of Current World Affairs, was recently elected to the board of directors of the Forscher Group in Shelton, Conn.

54

DICK STEVENS
1 Valley Sq., Ste. 101
Blue Bell, PA 19422

"Money, bull, and sticking in the knife" was how Lou Rukeyser described the distinguished Class of '54's Economic Panel. Lou kicked it off and reported that the doom-and-gloom community has given the American public a "bum steer" and the market is once again the consumer's best friend. Lou's upbeat economic forecast and global outlook was vintage Rukeyser. Noah Herndon reported that we are "over banked" as a nation, with too many regulatory bodies picking away at individual segments of the financial landscape. He looks for more consolidation and a single regulatory authority. Pru Turner says that we can feed the world with our rich black soil and our superior farming technology and that agriculture is one of the few segments of the economy consistently producing positive net exports. The biggest problem is that there are more Dept. of Agriculture employees than there are farmers and ranchers. Mike Weatherly credits his success with the Swiss Army Knife to solid blocking and tackling. . . basic stuff like focusing on mass merchandisers and putting 15,000 displays in the marketplace. Broadway plays are another story with the critics and unions both ganging up on the producers to create an "uneven playing field."

Our guests of honor, the undergraduate attendees, were Ed Eglin, Jacob Elkins, Cameron Mackey, Stacy Rukeyser, and Prewitt Turner. Class members attending were Alan Blumberg, Bud Boothe, Dick Bull, Bill Dalton, Edie Eglin, Bill Elkins, Peter Gail, Noah Herndon, Molly Jacobs, Dave Judson, George Kirby, Joe Lawton, Bill Mackey, Jtm

MacWilliam, Tony Maruca, Gene McPortland, Sandy Nemitz, Vern Ordway, Mason Reed, Bob Rock, Lou Rukeyser, Bob Schmalz, Tony Spano, Somers Steelman, Jean Stephens, Dick Stevens, Connie Stout, John Trubee, Pru Turner, Mike Weatherly, Sid Wentz, and Bill Ugbetta.

55 MAX FLORENCE
40 E. 88th St.
New York, NY 10128; 212-722-7477

The Class was honored to have Tom Grabam receive our laurels at a S.R.O. dinner in Princeton on Feb. 16. A letter from Secretary of State Jim Baker '52, tells it all: "Dear Tom: When Harry [Berkowitz] told me that you were going to receive your Class Award, it immediately struck me as not only a brilliant choice, but one that is so very timely. At a moment in our history when the subjects of world and regional peace, the ending of the Cold War, and arms control are foremost in our minds, to honor one who has dedicated his professional career to these issues is especially fitting.

"You can certainly take pride in the product of your labors, particularly the landmark treaties in which you had such an important hand. Your work on I.N.F., START, chemical weapons, and of course, most especially, the Conventional Forces in Europe, has been indispensable to the success of those negotiations. And beyond the negotiations themselves, your tireless work on questions of implementation, interpretation, and compliance has contributed immeasurably to the maintenance of viable arms control regimes. Having your experience, keen judgment, legal and arms control expertise, and sharp pencil at my elbow has been a great comfort to me. I regret that I cannot be with you at the Nassau Club, but from a distance I want to join the chorus in saying 'well done.' You have brought great credit to Princeton and to our country. We are grateful. With warm personal regards, Jim [signed]."

Tom has been general counsel, U.S. Arms Control and Disarmament Agency. Other letters of praise and appreciation for Tom were received, including a glowing tribute from Paul C. Warnke.

James E. A. Jobn, for the past eight years dean of the College of Engineering at the Univ. of Mass., has been named president of G.M.I., one of the nation's top engineering and management colleges. Located in Flint, Mich., G.M.I. was part of General Motors Corp. until 1982, when it became independent and ceased to be known as General Motors Inst.

56 DAVID M. JORDAN
410 Rodman Ave.
Jenkintown, PA 19046

Word is in from Bill Sweeney of his marriage last July to Donna Brunstad, "a loving, wonderful lady with three grown sons and an advertising agency in Westport, Conn." Bill and Donna plan to phase out their respective businesses over the next two years and move to Maine, where they have already bought a condo on the Portland waterfront.

Alumni Day brought a visit from Denny Donegan, who has retired from his Atlanta banking post and is now a "managing agent" for the Resolution Trust Corp., liquidating defunct savings and loans. Denny is currently situated in Summit, N.J., and commuting on roughly an every-other-week basis back home to Georgia.

Another A.D. attendee was "Renaissance man" Bill Horner. Most of us know of Bill's prowess as an attorney and a farmer, but we probably don't know that Bill is the proprietor of his own two-hole golf course. One who has played it says that, though the par-six course has no sand traps, hills, or water hazard, it is still tricky because of the ever-present danger of losing one's ball to the adjacent soybean field.

Tom Rivell, marching in a San Francisco peace demonstration in January, spotted a Princeton sweater in the crowd. It turned out to be Joe Illick, our history professor at San Francisco State. Joe and Tom made plans for future marches.

The 35th Reunion Committee is fine-tuning arrangements for our big June bash. You might want to consider arriving in time for Thurs. dinner, when our caterers will put on their famous Baltimore Cookout, featuring iced Chincoteague oysters and cherrystone clams on the half shell, crab soup, barbecued Maryland chicken, and roast beef sliced to order. It's never too late.

57 JACK SCHLON
Box 6177, Yorkville Station
New York, NY 10128; 212-427-3575 (H)

Old (But Good) News: "Marsha Karen Lasker and Edward John Nell are delighted to announce their marriage on Nov. 25, 1989," the birds-and-bees announcement reads. And with it came a note from Ed, a Rhodes Scholar, that his two sons came over from Oxford, where they are in college, joining his daughter, who came home from private school for the wedding, in Shady, N.Y. Marsha is an administrative assistant at N.Y.'s New School for Social Research, where Ed is chairman of the graduate dept. of economics.

Of the same vintage is this note from Bill Dobrmann: "Got married on July 22, 1989, to Linda Ritchey Post. Only one '57er in attendance—Charlie Greathouse. New brother-in-law: Thomas P. Kellogg '58." In the same envelope from Bruce Rosborough was this, from Dick Clemens: "Don Streett and I welcomed Cullom Davis as featured speaker at the Princeton Club of St. Louis. Cully is heading a project to document Abraham Lincoln's law practice before his entry into politics. My first granddaughter was born Aug. 20, 1989. Now, a few months later, I'm recovering nicely from a stroke and heart attack suffered last spring."

BACK TO WINTER 1991 and Hank Stackpole: "Am currently serving as the commanding general of the III Marine Expeditionary Force, based on Okinawa. As the commander of all Marines in the Far East, I have a wide-ranging challenge. Any and all classmates are welcome if their travels take them this way."

58 RALPH L. DeGROFF
7 Grade Sq.
New York, NY 10028

Dick Pogue, Jay Katzen, Charlie Puttkammer, and Jim Schroeder had a mini-reunion at a Christmas party hosted by Leo Welt in Washington for foreign diplomats and D.C. representatives for businesses involved in foreign trade.

Joel Kraut and Spencer Sherman entered the "Over-50 Bocce Ball Tournament" held in N.Y. at Tavern on the Green in January. They won!

On Feb. 2, Senator Jack Danforth, in his capacity as an Episcopal priest, officiated at the marriage of his goddaughter, Alex Netchvolodoff's daughter Caroline Alexandra to William Dudley McCall. The ceremony was held at St. Alban's Episcopal Church in Washington, D.C.

On Feb. 6, John Sawbill addressed the Princeton Club of Washington on "The Nature Conservancy and Environmental Movement." In addition to being President of the Nature Conservancy, John is a trustee of Princeton, a member of the board of advisers of the Kennedy School of Government at Harvard and chairman of the Board of the Manville Trust.

Wally McDowell testifies that Salman Ranch Jam, produced by Dave Salman, is "really good." Ralph DeGross, known for his sweet tooth, upon hearing that recommendation placed an order to confirm Wally's opinion.

Leuw Ross purchased with two others Marketing Services Company in Princeton and departed N.Y.C. for Skillman, N.J. His company also has offices in Chicago, San Francisco, and Los Angeles.

John Sutter won the 1990 Sailing Series in Oriental, N.C., with a 20-year-old yawl and a family crew.

Bob Thomas started up an international mutual fund last August for Boston Security Counselors. Son James is still in college and son Brad is now working in Boston. To support the New England economy, wife Penny has returned to work.

REUNION NOTE: Any classmate interested in participating in the Friends of Princeton Golf Tournament on Friday of Reunions weekend please write Les Robbins at 44 Scribner Ct., Princeton, NJ 08540.

59 JAY M. SWAN
11321 Rolling House Rd.
Rockville, MD 20852; 301-984-7877

Seen plotting equine strategy at last May's Winterthur Races in Wilmington, Del., were David Iams, Mo Cbeston, and Malcolm Matheson. It's anyone's guess why Malcolm is wearing an apron.

Bob Campbell has been named president at chief operating officer of Sun Co., Inc., the nation's largest independent refiner of oil products. Bob has been with Sun since 1960; in the words of Sun's outgoing president, he brings a "wealth of experience that will benefit Sun as it moves into the 21st Century."

Several classmates returned to Princeton on Feb. 16 to observe Alumni Day 1991. Featured in the day's activities were the Alumni Assn. annual meeting, at which the Woodrow Wilson Award was presented to Laurance S. Rockefeller '32 and the always-inspirational Service of Remembrance in the magnificent University Chapel, commemorating the lives of all Princetonians who died last year. Honored from the Class of 1959 were Richard H. Furman, Richard A. Johnson, Robert H. Messing, and James L. Worthington Jr. In attendance from the Class were Joe Castellano, Bob Hillier, David Manischewitz, Bob Rock, Jay Siegel, Dick Stinger, and Bill Volckhausen. We were also privileged to have with us Dick Furman's wife, Patty, his children, Nat and Margo, and several members of his family.

We have a memorial in this issue.

60 MASON LOWANCE
100 Lincoln Ave.
Amherst, MA 01002

The caption reads, "Princeton's Cornelius making graceful return," a pun, of course, on Chalmers Cornelius's daughter, who is named Grace and is a member of the Class of 1994. She's pictured here at the pool, where she spends many hours daily, and, fortunately, she swims for the Tigers. While a student at Episcopal Academy, Grace represented the U.S. in events in Germany, Australia, and Canada. She swam in the Olympic trials. She was a national prep champion in the 50-yard freestyle, the 100-yard freestyle, and the 100-yard butterfly. She also won the U.S. Open title. She comes to Princeton from Philadelphia, where father keeps busy as a practicing dermatologist and professor at the Jefferson Medical School. At the 35th reunion, we will have a father-daughter triathlon featuring Chalmers, Preston Haskell, and Bob Isbell. Bruce Sprague, M.D., promises to stand by with a heart-lung machine just in case. We'll probably need it.

But not all of us are aging couch potatoes. Kirk Kiracofe writes that he "finished fourth in the hill climb and fifth in the cross-country racers at Mammoth, Calif., in August, in the Norba Natl. Mountain Bike Championships, in the master's division." And Alex Irvine met his son Matt in St. Louis as he was returning from college in N.Y.C., and they followed the Mormon trail on motorcycles from St. Joseph to Salt Lake City, then to San Francisco. Tom Lowry continues as professor of chemistry at Smith College, while his wife, Nancy, is a chemistry professor at Hampshire College in Amherst.

Don't forget the Class dinner, P.C.N.Y., Mon., Apr. 15, 5:30-8:30. Sen. Kit Bond '60, speaker. And please send news; we are running out of the dues flaps.

61

GEORGE BRAKELEY III
98 Winfield Ln.
New Canaan, CT 06840

1961 THIRTIETH 1991

You can't please everyone it seems: a misanthropic classmate, who shall remain anonymous, says of the summer newsletter, "More info on classmates than I ever wanted to know." A more cheerful note comes from the University, telling us of this year's Class of 1961 Scholars: Peter Boerboom '92, an E.E. major from Wauwatosa, Wisc., and David Bros '92, a philosophy major from East Islip, N.Y. Laura Dedin '91 is this year's recipient of the Edwin P. and Martha S. Vanderwicken Scholarship.

Notes from A.G. and dues flaps: "Won seven age-group trophies this year in 5-K and 10-K races," says John Bright. Jim Hunter's son Peter '88 is in his second year with Princeton-in-Asia, having extended for a year. Peter is singing in the choir of a Korean church, in Korean, no less. Frank Anger is in a reuniting mood, having seen roomie Bob Lewis in Illinois and Bob Pickens in Princeton recently. "Hope to see more friends at the 30th in June," he adds. Promoted to V.P. and general manager of Northeast operations, Container Division of Jefferson Smurfit Corp./Container Corp. of America: Dick Edmunds. "Appointed director, dermatological surgery at Mount Sinai School of Medicine," reports Steve Kurtin.

Bill Lafer left us after sophomore year but has stayed in touch. Sobering news of late—divorce in 1988, brain tumor in 1989, on the mend but no longer able to drive. He says, "You certainly find out your inner strengths and how much a positive partnership with God helps. I've a new life going, fear nothing, am a far better person."

62

ERIC W. JOHNSON
2221 Craig Ct.
Vienna, VA 22182; 703-280-9080

HEY, O.K.I.: Frank Kemp says life is busy in O.K. country. His wife, Judy, spent six months last year nursing in Brownsville, Tex. Frank is teaching at the Univ. of Tulsa, published an S.P.E. paper in August, and is a principal in a joint research project between Amoco and Arco. "I am church moderator and stewardship chairman, Tulsa P.U. Club president, Book Award chairman, and Tulsa Sigma Xi president. Could use a hand!"

ALOHAI: In October, Tom Welch left 15 years of cold confines practicing small-town style New England law with Holland, Donovan, Beckett, Welch & Hermans in Exeter, N.H., for warmer Hilo, Hawaii, where he is working for Honolulu-based Case & Lynch. Wife Claudia is from Hawaii and their two children were born there.

MORE NEW ENGLAND WITH SOME BAY AREA: Last April, Dave Beckedorff joined Pan Agora Asset Mgmt. in Boston as senior portfolio manager and head of the U.S. Equity Investment Team. Pan Agora does index funds and manages $8.6 billion in assets. Dave hopes to continue software development as an avocation. Chris Binner's daughter Laura was married Sat., Oct. 6, 1990, to Hermann Li in Wellesley, Mass. Joel Friedman's daughter Elizabeth graduated from Wesleyan Univ. in Conn. last June and now works closer to home in the San Francisco Bay Area. Son Jeffrey is an Eagle Scout and has been doing college applications. Wife Carol is director of development for the Community Assn. for the Retarded, while Joel continues practicing cardiology at the Palo Alto Medical Clinic.

HERCULEAN: Writes David O'Brien, "Olympics 1996 (our 34th!) in Atlanta—send money." Tony Abbott is president of the Fitness Institute, Inc., located in Boca Raton, Fla., and serving individuals, business, and government.

We have a memorial in this issue.

63

SILDEEN S. EDWARDS
Elgin Academy, 350 Park St.
Elgin, IL 60120; FAX 708-695-5017

When the governor of Rhode Island found his state's chartered banks in a state of collapse, a monumental emergency, he chose to import two of the nation's top prosecutors to head an immediate investigation. Pledging to "get to the bottom of this mess," Governor Bruce Sundlun appointed Baltimore lawyer Al Baron special prosecutor in charge of the project to find out how the banking crisis came about and just who bears responsibility for it. Al, whom the Providence press call a man of "tenacity and independence," rose to national prominence, you will remember, in 1987 as leader of the House Judiciary Committee's successful impeachment of two federal judges. To give you an idea of the significance of his new position, Al's deputy on the investigation will be John Nields Jr., of Iran-Contra television fame. Both men will carry the titles assistant district attorney, having direct access to the state's grand jury. One pleasant by-product of the appointment, says Al, "is the opportunity to spend some time with my daughter, a senior at Brown."

Will Hartsborn reports, "After 26 years, I have taken an early retirement from Metropolitan Life and started working as a consultant for Shorebank Corp. of Chicago, focusing on economic developments for distressed urban and rural settings, a new and very rewarding challenge."

Ron Furst reports that he and Hildegard are still involved in establishing of a Bible-believing church in Ulm and spearheading, along with colleagues, the emergence of a free church in East Berlin. Their foster son Andreas has passed his apprentice exam as a baker, and son George (23) is earning his apprenticeship as a cook in Augsburg. Ron reports that fellow pastor Hank Bryant, working at Grenoble Univ. in France, has written two excellent commentaries on the books Matthew and I Corinthians. Hank's daughter Laura is a junior at Princeton.

64

JOTHAM JOHNSON
Box 12
Blawenbury, NJ 08504

Alumni Day attendance was down a bit this year, but among the hundreds spotted on campus over the weekend were Tom Hirst, Jo Johnson, George Kbouri, Ed Murphy, Dave Oliver, and Bill Walker, who represented the Class at the Alumni Council's annual Service of Remembrance honoring Jim Avary, among others.

Apologies to Alan Kors, who was mistakenly identified in a recent column as associate professor of history at Penn and who took vigorous exception to the way in which his scholarly interests were reported in the CHRONICLE OF HIGHER EDUCATION. "I have been professor of history at Penn for some time now . . . and am joyously married to Erika (Penn '74) an illustrator and artist, and have two precious children, Samantha (13) and Brian (10). My most recent book, ATHEISM IN FRANCE, 1650-1729, was published in 1990 by the Princeton University Press. I remain in close touch with Harvey Silverglate and Marty Seligman . . . and—as a Davis Center Fellow—I spent the 1986-87 academic year at Princeton and found it to be a much warmer and humane place than it was during our undergraduate years."

Mike O'Neil also wrote to express unhappiness with the words the secretary used to report Jim Avary's passing in this column. No other news from Mike who, it is believed, continues as manager of Benefits/Trusts for the Travelers Companies up in Hartford. Sincere thanks to Alan and to Mike for caring enough to write, and to Walter Empson, Dick Springs, and Bill Walker for authoring Jim Avary's memorial tribute in PAW.

Austie Sullivan, V.P. for public affairs at General Mills in Minneapolis, was in town recently to attend a family memorial service and, according to TOWN TOPICS, was pressed into service to play defense for the Princeton-based Central Jersey Hockey Club. Described in the article as "the consummate 210-lb. defenseman," Austie scored the first goal in the team's 5-3 conquest of Essex Hunt Club. Commented several of the younger players, "Just looking at Austie play gives us great hope for the future!"

65

J. MICHAEL PARISH
Winthrop, Stimson, Putnam & Roberts
1 Battery Park Plaza, New York, NY 10004

The word from campus is that Mike (E.) Smith's sojourn as Maclean fellow in November was extremely well received. "He's not only thoughtful and accomplished, he's a real person as well," was one version of the response.

Bill Bradley's further reflections on last year's campaign aptly illustrate Shakespeare's notion that "sweet are the uses of adversity." In a recent Washington Post column, David Broder reported on Bill's reaction to the almost-endemic distrust, in our society, of politicians and government. "Politicians have to be more willing to take risks," said this hitherto most cautious of operators "is one of the quotes. Another is "Bradley is one of the great students of public policy; he sets himself subjects to learn, and he does his homework and field work as conscientiously as anyone in public office. But the lesson that the voters gave him this year can be the most valuable one he has ever learned. When his political courage matches his intellect, this man will be tough to beat."

Our intelligence-gathering operatives in and around Princeton provide us with several mementi mori. Ron Watson passes on the news of the death of the one and only Axel Peterson recently in N.H. at the age of 80 and Van Williams sends word of the passing of Marion Opdycke, known to many of us as Marion of the Balt, at the age of 84.

One of the positive things about sophomore year was the arrival of a large group of weenie freshmen that you could lord it over and feel like a big man, as you girded yourself for the rigors of bicker or non-bickering and tried to figure out of there was a major you could elect with a straight face. Those people are coming back in June for their 25th, and many of us have many good friends in that multitude. So think about that. It will be a good place to be, this year as much as ever.

66

JERRY N. McCOLLUM, A.T.&T. Products
5 Wood Hollow Rd., Rm. 1J19
Parappany, NJ 07054

Sixty-six days from the cover date of this issue of PAW will be your one and only chance to walk at the head of the Princeton P-rade. If you haven't yet done so, pull your plans and your clans together to be part of a major East Coast event.

POSTED BY THE POST. T. R. Reid is now the "Washington Posto kyokutoso kyokuchō," translated as the Washington Post East Asian bureau chief. He, Peggy, and their three children are all living in Tokyo, practicing Kanji and paying "a ludicrous amount of rent." Peggy practices law at the Long-Term Credit Bank of Japan.

APPOINTED AT HOLY CROSS. Hussein M. Adam has received a full-time appointment as an associate prof. of political science at Holy Cross College. He had been in Worcester for a year as a visiting assistant professor. He holds a Ph.D. and a master's from Harvard and a master's degree in African studies from Makerere University College in Kampala, Uganda.

A WHALE OF AN OPPORTUNITY. Jack Burke was recently appointed executive director and general counsel of Marine World in Vallejo, Calif.

TO BE SEEN IN D.C. Ed Lee, after five years with the Capitol Children's Museum, is now a freelance exhibit designer getting an on-the-job education in running a small business. Mark Davidson has returned to the D.C. area from N.Y. to practice law with the Chicago-based Seyforth, Shaw, Fairweather and Geraldson. Richard Barb is a specialist in the legislative process and head of the legislative and budget process section (his title seems to have grown at a pace with the federal budget) for the Congressional Research Service of the Library of Congress. His daughters, Hettie Jeanette and Erika Ann, are currently occupying a significant and pleasurable amount of his time.

67

PETER J. TUNICH
6503 Masefield St.
Worthington, OH 43085

Thanks to Jeff McCollum '66 for relaying story and photo of Ron Grossman from the Feb. 7, 1991, Hopewell Valley (N.J.) News. Ron has been named by the U.S. Olympic Committee to serve as team physician for the 1992 U.S. Winter Olympic Team during the winter games in Albertville, France. He is a member of the American College of Sports Medicine and the American Academy of Family Physicians, and is a family physician with H.J.G. Medical Associates in Hopewell.

For anyone able to retrieve the Feb 6, 1991, PAW, (the one with the Desert Storm bow ribbon), we have the following identifications of the mystery beachfolk from Jim Edmondson: "Phil Burstein, with wife, Joann (lower right); daughter Alison; son John '93 (a lacrosse star); niece Debbie Stern; and a friend of Alison's; Jim's wife, Jane (upper left); and children Jeff, Ben, Mark, and Lauren." The families are at the Burstein retreat last summer. (Phil and Jim have coordinated their vacations at the Delaware shore for many years.)

Phil Reed writes: "As the shrouds of middle age

A History of Hoaxes

This plaque hangs in the north entry of 1939 Hall on campus.

PHOTO FROM THE CLASS OF 1939 50TH YEAR BOOK

THE STORY IN THIS issue's

"Princeton Notebook" about a former Princeton sophomore who applied—and was admitted to—the university using a fictitious name and background brings to mind the long history of fabricated Princetonians. Alexander Leitch '24's

A Princeton Companion reports three highly visible fictional alumni. The most notorious of these is Joseph David Oznot '68, who was admitted to the university on April 16, 1964. Leitch describes his qualifications as "eminently meritorious": a top student at a high school in East Lansing, Michigan, a concert pianist, a class treasurer, and possessor of College Examination Board scores in the 700s. The admission officers failed to notice that Oznot had taken the college boards at Princeton High School and that the address he gave was a fraternity house at Michigan State. The hoax was perpetrated by four members of the Class of 1966 who enlisted the aid of students at Michigan State and Columbia. The Columbia student came to Princeton for an interview with a volume of Vergil under one arm and a copy of Sports Illustrated under the other. E. Alden Dunham '53, who was then director of admission, accepted the hoax with aplomb, and even invited the four Princetonian perpetrators to dinner. "I was really looking forward to having him here," he told PAW at the time.

The Class of 1917 boasts one of the earliest nontraditional classmates, Bert Hormone. Hormone was never formally admitted to the university, and, in fact, no one seems to remember him as an undergraduate at all. He first appeared, according to Leitch, in 1917's Class Notes in 1937, shortly before the class's twentieth reunion. While "several in the class had vague stirrings of their memories, no one could place him with certainty." Class Secretary Harvey Smith later admitted that Adelbert l'Homme-dieu X. Hormone (Bert's full name) was his own creation. But news of Hormone—invariably in some exotic locale—continued to appear in Class Notes. He became a colonel in the French Foreign Legion, and shortly before the class's fiftieth reunion, it was reported that Bert had died in Tahiti, "his grave covered with flowers kept fresh by the tears of his several grieving widows," as Leitch puts it.

One of several alumni of uncertain identity who survive today is Ephraim di Kahble '39. His name appeared on chapel attendance cards as early as the class's freshman year. He became well known for an interview he gave to the New York Journal, in which he suggested that Princeton's mascot should be a guinea pig because he thought tigers too ferocious. The Daily Princetonian proclaimed di Kahble's "death from exposure" after the Press Club investigated his candidacy for freshman-class treasurer. But di Kahble lives on in the class's twenty-fifth-, fortieth-, and fiftieth-reunion books. His life has been a mix of the serendipitous and the bizarre. After eloping with Maria Stugotz, his date at the Prince-Tiger dance, he signed up with the Free French Air Force. He later went into industry, and a pipeline with which he was associated produced not gasoline but salad oil. He retired and sold all his stocks presciently in the summer of 1987.

In the south entry of 1939 Hall there is a plaque commemorating John F. Kennedy's brief membership in the Class of 1939; in the north entry is a plaque to Ephraim E. di Kahble. In his fiftieth-year book, di Kahble wrote, "I really appreciate the way you all keep me involved in this Class. You can count on me to be forever '39."

Ephraim di Kahble is not the only fictitious Princetonian currently appearing in Class Notes; perhaps you'd better start reading your class's column with some suspicion.

Princeton Clubs and Alumni Associations

PC OF PHILADELPHIA: Fri., Apr. 5—Luncheon with Prof. of Politics and International Affairs John Waterbury '61.

PC OF TULSA: Wed., Apr. 10—Reception with V.P. and Secretary of the University Tom Wright '62.

PC OF SAN ANTONIO: Thurs., Apr. 11—Luncheon with V.P. and Secretary of the University Tom Wright.

PAA OF DALLAS: Thurs., Apr. 11—Dinner with V.P. and Secretary of the University Tom Wright '62.

PC OF ST. LOUIS: Thurs., Apr. 11—Annual dinner with President Shapiro '64.

PC OF TUCSON: Fri., Apr. 12—Luncheon with V.P. and Secretary of the University Tom Wright '62.

PAA OF ESSEX COUNTY, N.J.: Tues., Apr. 16—Dinner with Dean of the Faculty Robert Gunning '55.

PAA OF DELAWARE (Wilmington): Thurs., Apr. 18—Dinner with Dean of the School of Architecture Ralph Lerner.

PC OF MICHIGAN: Thurs., Apr. 18—Dinner with Prof. of Romance Languages and Literatures Andre Maman.

PC OF NW OHIO (Toledo): Fri., Apr. 19—Luncheon with Prof. Andre Maman.

PC OF MID-HUDSON (Poughkeepsie): Sat., Apr. 21—Dinner with Prof. of Politics and International Affairs Jeffrey Herbst '83.

PAA OF MARYLAND (Baltimore): Tues., Apr. 23—Dinner with Prof. of Public and International Affairs Frank von Hippel.

PA OF VIRGINIA: Wed., Apr. 24—Dinner with Prof. of Public and International Affairs Frank von Hippel. For information regarding any of these events, please call Elizabeth Hunt at the Alumni Council, 609-258-3351.

engulf me more and more, I have taken to trying to recapture my youth by following the exploits of niece and nephew Kerry '91 and Tim Porter '88 and learning the games of sons Jackson (7) and Phillip (5)." Phil is "considering giving up law practice and enrolling in junior high somewhere."

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO. U.S. to sell jets to Jordan. Soviets announce Luna 10 orbiting the moon. U.S. jets sink 12 junks supplying Viet Cong. Iraqi Pres. Abdel Salam Arif killed in plane crash. "Bang Bang (My Baby Shot Me Down)" by Cher is a top-five song."

68

JOE KLIMEK
Hartford Hospital, 80 Seymour St.
Hartford, CT 06115; FAX 203-524-7057

A high-level Class of '68 conference was held somewhere in the Colorado Rockies this winter. In attendance were old snow hogs, Steve Pierce, Mike Hollander, Spike Herrick, and Jack Doran. Agenda items included the antifreeze effects of lager versus pilsner, the vagaries of yellow snow and the character of our 25th-reunion outfit.

Tony Sessa is chairman of the Uniform Committee for our 25th and he reports that the creative juices are flowing and the committee needs and welcomes input from the Class. Tony, therefore, invites all of us to make suggestions for our 25th reunion jacket. Early ideas for both a blazer and a beer jacket have already been suggested and Tony exhorts anyone in the Class with an opinion to take this opportunity to "speak now or forever hold your peace." In the interest of saving money, we need to get an early start, so comments need to be made by the end of this year. All opinions should be addressed in writing (or drawing) and sent to Tony at: Advanced Management, Inc., 19 West 44th St. Ste. 413, New York, NY 10036.

69

PAUL GEORGE SITTELFELD
1854 Keys Crescent
Cincinnati, OH 45206

Dick serving as its head.

Leo Roomets reports from Boston that his younger son Alex is progressing well in his bout with cancer: "Everything seems to be cleared up and the outlook is good!" Similarly good news from Dallas: Paul Munves, who was diagnosed three years ago as having Hodgkins Disease, reports, "I'm fine now." He and Phyllis Ann enjoy their Stephanie Ann (3) who, "sleeps in Princeton t-shirts."

Marty Wagner announces that Kelsey Victoria was born last Oct. 30. She joins sisters Ariel (7) and Julia (5).

Finally, Stuart Bullion wrote from Saudi Arabia, where he is very much a part of Operation Desert Storm. Drop him a line: Captain Stuart James Bullion 577-62-5325, HHD 286th S and S BU, 159th CSG, Operation Desert Storm, APO New York, NY 09636.

70

JAN KUBIK
113 Laurel Rd.
Princeton, NJ 08540

The annual Class mid-winter dinner in N.Y.C. once again proved to be a wonderful event, as Jerome Coleman provided a memorable evening, filled with wit, warmth, wisdom, and friendship.

Our featured speaker, Dr. Sandy Williams, did the impossible: he managed to explain his exciting research into applications of D.N.A. switching mechanisms with such style and panache that even those who never crossed Washington Road for academic purposes were enthused. In his words, "I've discovered that I really am a nerd; I'd rather look at a dish of bacteria than play golf. As a molecular cardiologist, I'm the type of guy who wanted to cut out E.T.'s heart to study it more carefully. The questions I study in my lab at Southwestern Medical Center in Dallas are, 'How are cells different? What is it about genes that tell cells to make protein, and what are the switches for those genes?'"

Sandy further related his own path, which included writing a novel as his Wilson School thesis prior to entering med school. He recounted how an undergraduate lecture by Prof. John Bonner on slime molds stuck with him for years, and helped motivated his own research, which explores the possible regeneration of heart tissue by bombarding a damaged heart with microscopic "bullets" dipped in molecules of D.N.A.

Class Pres. Mickey Pohl observed that both he and President for Life Peter C. Kopff were in that same course, and failed to fully understand Prof. Bonner's lectures on slime molds, until they became litigators, where they claim to encounter them every day.

William Schopff and Mike Baccash tied for long distance awards, having originated their respective journeys from O'Hare.

Others in attendance included John Daniel, Julie and Steve Dawson, Shelley and Jeff Kehl, Kirk Unruh, Jim Binch, Helena and George Bustin, Larry Klurfield, Beth and Gregg Lange, Bill Heyman, and Mike Camp.

71

STUART E. RICKERSON
P.O. Box 3108
Del Mar, CA 92014

REUNIONS REPORT: Through mid-February, when this issue went to press, the Class of 1971 is on schedule to another record-setting attendance at our 20th reunion, June 4-9, 1991.

If you have not yet sent your registration materials in, do so now. Getting your reservations in will permit Robby Browne and his Reunions Committee to predict numbers accurately and to plan accordingly. Plans include the appearance of "the one and only, original" Peacock Crossing, playing during Fri. evening's show and on a float in the P-rade. An Olympic Diving Exhibition has been scheduled Saturday night at the DeNunzio Pool. And, for children, an expert on Native American culture will teach Indian lore from a teepee at the Reunion site. So, send your registration materials to Bill McCarter, c/o McCarter & English, Four Gateway Center, 100 Mulberry Street, Newark, NJ 07012; 201-622-4444.

Of course, many have already responded to the call. They include: Alexander, Balfour, Ball, Barbieri, Barkhorn, Barr, Beeler, Beba, Bengur, Berg, Billman, Blair, Blundon, Boehm, Brodbeck, R. Browne, Burack, Chapman, Charen, Colborn, Coleman, Collins, Conderacci, Crocker, Cunningham, Cutchins, Daniels, Demmler, Dressel, Dreyfuss, Duany, Emptie, Engle, Fancber, Fitzpatrick, Foucher, Freeman, Garretson, Harmar, Harman, Harris, J. Hart, Hawley, Hecht, J. Henderson, Hoxie, Hyson, B. Jordan, Kapelos, Kayser, Keller, L. Kelso, Klacsmann, Lerner, Leuner, B. Lewis, Liddell,

Grant A. Peacock '46
Kathleen Peacock

GRANT A. PEACOCK Inc.

*Fine Jewelry
Jewel Counselor
Estates Purchased*

Suite 2600
450 Park Avenue at 57th St.
New York, N.Y. 10022

(212) 753-4640

The JOE BROWN Studio announces ...his artistic legacy

Princeton Professor Emeritus Joe Brown created over 400 pieces of sculpture which are found in both private and public collections all over the world. Certified bronze sculptures from original molds are available in limited editions. The studio and gallery is open by appointment only.

The Joe Brown Studio • Timothy Maslyn, Resident Sculptor & Curator
RD 1, Box 122 A
Princeton, NJ 08540
609-921-2868

THE JOE BROWN STUDIO

Lynch, Mackay, Macko, Mancini, Marboe, Masys, McCarter, McLean, Moffat, Munford, Nicolas, O'Hern, Pauly, Payne, Peji, Perel, Plante, Phelps, Pike, Pitney, Pottenger, Potts, Richardson, Ricker-son, T. Roberts, Robinson, Rodman, S. Rogers, Saltman, Simandle, Simsbeimer, Slocum, C. Smith, G. Smith, Soklar, Stevens, Stockbridge, Stover, Stubbs, Swanson, Sykes, Tallman, Thompson, Trenga, Townsend, Ueblinger, Ungertlied, Uyeda, K. Warner, B. Warner, R. Watkins, Weigel, Weir, Wine, Winsky, Yeary, Zarfoss, Zwecker.

72 KIP HEWITT

21 Wildcat Rd.
Darien, CT 06820

In Atlanta, Randy Smith has taken a new position as V.P.—educational division with King & Giles, a graphic design firm, where he will be specializing in college publications. Randy says that he recently saw Bill deGolian and Mike Schroder at the local Triangle Club show and extends an open invitation for visits by classmates who come to "the Olympic City."

In the U.S. House of Representatives, Mike Rode-meyer has been appointed committee counsel to the House Science, Space, and Technology Committee. Since 1984, Mike had worked with the Subcommittee on Natural Resources, Agricultural Research, and Environment, first as subcommittee counsel, and then as staff director and chief counsel. Prior to his work for the subcommittee, Mike had worked for eight years at the Federal Trade Commission.

Another attorney on the move is Randy Harris. After serving as chairman of the trusts and estates dept. at Kronish, Lieb, Weiner—Randy has joined the midtown-Manhattan firm of Davidson, Dawson & Clark, where he will be a partner specializing in trusts and estates and related areas. Randy and his wife, Ellen live in Madison, N.J., with their two children, Michael (8) and David (5).

In MEDICINE: John Carroll and his wife, Eugenia, are both on the faculty at the Univ. of Chicago School of Medicine. John is director of cardiac catheterization. They have two children, Ian (2) and Nicholas (6 mos.).

Malcolm Harris, who has been practicing family medicine in the Public Health Service in rural southern West Va. for 11 years and playing saxophone in "Juice," has moved back to Pittsburgh with his wife, Amy, and children, Lila (9) and Aaron (5). He is now in private practice and looking for a new band.

73 R. GREGORY PLIMPTON

Box 14545
North Palm Beach, FL 33408

After completing a six-month manager-in-residence program with PBS in Alexandria, Va., Carol Ober-tubbesing is back at WGBH in Boston. She remains active in the P.A.A. of New England and notes the Monet Exhibit at the Museum of Fine Arts on Apr. 6.

Also in the broadcast media, Max Gomez has moved from his position as the colorful health and science expert at KYW-TV in Philadelphia to WNBC-TV in N.Y. Mad Max or Maxoid, as he was sometimes known in Philly, may also be seen doing an occasional science piece for the "Today" show. After Princeton, Max went to med school at Wake Forest and was an N.I.H. fellow at Rockefeller Univ.

Harriett Sachs Sessa can watch Max from her home in Rye, where she is a reading teacher with the Rye City Schools. Her husband, Vito '72, is a pediatrician with the Kaiser Permanente H.M.O. in Stamford, Conn. They have two sons: Andrew (10) and Benjamin (4).

Brady Sadek reports that Marv Pollack has taken a new job at Midway Airlines as head of marketing development. Brady is in his third year as deputy G.M. of the Chicago branch of the Long-Term Credit Bank of Japan.

Bill Goldberg has taken wife Debra, Ben (3), and Harry (1) to Hong Kong for a six-month assignment as V.P. and G.M. of Consumer Testing Laboratories, based in Canton, Mass. C.T.L. does product-quality assurance services for large retailers and their suppliers. Bill reports a delightful lunch with Fong Chi and his fiancé.

Speaking of classmate visits, Leigh and Joe Brogdon enjoyed a visit with Mary and Ben Byrd last winter in Sausalito, Calif., including a round at Olympic Golf Club.

74 JOHN STRYKER

15 Woodbine Rd.
Kendall Park, NJ 08824

LITERARY LIGHTS: John Horan and his wife, Olivia, are the proud parents of twins Clare (shown here on the left) and Olivia. John is editor and publisher of John Horan's Sports. The family lives in Yardley, Penn.

Steven Naifeh and his co-author Gregory White Smith were nominees for the 1990 National Book Awards in the nonfiction category for their biography of artist Jackson Pollock. The book, JACKSON POLLOCK: AN AMERICAN SAGA was published by Clarkson N. Potter.

Bob Peck's book, LAND OF THE EAGLE: A NATURAL HISTORY OF NORTH AMERICA, published by B.B.C. Books, reached Number three on the nonfiction best-seller list in Great Britain this summer, and stayed on the list for nine weeks. The book will be available in the U.S. later this year.

The parents of our late classmate Margaret Stackhouse, who died in Oct. 1984, have compiled and published some of her poems in the book SHARDS—A COLLECTION OF POEMS. Copies can be obtained for $13.95 (including mailing charge) by writing to Mr. and Mrs. James A. Stackhouse Jr., Deerhaven Press, 8 Loantaka Lake North, Morristown, NJ 07960.

SHIPPING MAGNATE: Paul Gridley and two partners have completed the leveraged buyout of Marin Transport Lines, the oldest (175 years) shipping company headquartered in the U.S. Paul is currently serving as vice chairman and exec. V.P.

75 MELISSA KISER MESROBIAN

940 Riverside Ave., Berkeley Square
Trenton, NJ 08618

John and Becky Cross Tradewell had their second child, Claire Francis Tradewell, on Dec. 15, 1988. Benjamin is now seven. Becky is still working for the Wisconsin Legislature, now drafting environmental legislation, including a major recycling bill that passed last spring.

Pictured in the tiger regalia she sported last Halloween is Hailey Rose Yudell, born Feb. 6, 1989, to Carl and Suzy.

Linda and Jim Corsones have announced the birth of Rebecca Elizabeth Corsones on July 2, 1990. David (6) is reportedly very proud of his little sister.

Jesse Jalazo and his wife, Karen Rudolph, have adopted a daughter, Kathryn Jackson Jalazo, born July 28, 1990, and with her happy parents since she was three days old.

Alan McKenney and his wife, Anne Barschall, have a new baby, David Benjamin McKenney-Barschall, born at home Sept. 16, 1990, with a nurse-midwife in attendance.

Jeff Nick reports the birth of Julia on Oct. 4, 1990. She joins Kenneth (10), Jeffrey (7), and Claire (5).

David and Cheryl Thompson Pollak gave William (9) and Derek (5) a new brother, Robert, on Nov. 2, 1990. Cheryl continues as deputy chief of the narcotics division of the U.S. Attorney's office in New York; David is a partner in the law firm Morgan, Lewis & Bockius.

Genevieve Mutinzer's book NEW TO THE U.K.: A GUIDE TO YOUR LIFE AND RIGHTS is being translated into Chinese for distribution throughout Asia. She has also edited a banking law book, THE 1989 BANKING ACT, and writes articles for U.S., European, and Middle Eastern magazines and newspapers.

76 JAMES L. MARKETOS

Lane & Mittendorf, 919 18th St., N.W.
Washington, DC 20006

These happy campers are waving from aboard N.J. Transit Railcar-1, on which they wine and dined on Jan. 29 as part of a Class-sponsored regional reunion tour of N.J.T.'s Hoboken Terminal facilities. The pre-15th tour, which included visits to N.J.T.'s Dispatch and Power Dispatch rooms as well as a ferry ride to Manhattan, was organized by Eva-Lerner Lam, who is an N.J.T. director and writes on transportation topics in her spare time. She also announces the birth of a third child, Katherine, on Dec. 20, joining brothers Timothy (4½) and Matthew (2). The other classmates who enjoyed the tour were Tom Byrne, Mike Carey, Candace Conway, Chris Deephouse, Whitney Landon, Gene Schaefer, and Allen Scheuch. Also in honor of our 15th, Allen is organizing an exhibit of items from his croquet collection. It will be displayed during Reunions outside Firestone's exhibition room.

In attendance at Alumni Day this year (Feb. 16) were Charlie Bell, Dan Cronheim, Don Grasso, Bob Ireland, Eva Lerner-Lam, Jim Marketos, Mimi Murley, and Tom Raleigh. Their guest at the awards luncheon was Doug Mal-lach '91, our undergraduate reunions chairman.

After losing her vision to retinitis pigmentosa, Elaine Leong Eng had to find a way to re-direct her medical career, which had been based on ob./gyn. training. She reports that she has now been able to start a private psychiatry practice and is also working for the North Shore Univ. Hospital, a division of Cornell Med. College.

77 JAMES BARRON

15 W. 72nd St., Apt. 24-B
New York, NY 10023

A TEXAN—Amy Maislin Mitchell and husband, Steve, had their third child, Joshua Aaron, last June 12. He joined David (2) and Sarah (4). Amy and Steve are attorneys in Austin, Tex.—she with Fulbright & Jaworski, he with Hughes & Luce.

A VERMONTER—Andrea Eginton Seaton reports that she and her two Princeton roommates had children within nine months of one another. First was Suzanne McSorley with daughter Kate (PAW, Apr. 18, 1990). Then Laurie Booth Fredericksen had Trevor Lockwood Fredericksen last Mar. 2. And Andrea had Katherine Helen Seaton (pictured) on July 19. Andrea and her husband, Mike Seaton, live in West Dover, Vt. She sold her gourmet store and catering business before the baby was born and is now a newspaper reporter. He manages food-service facilities for the Mount Snow ski resort.

AND THE AUTHORS' DAUGHTER—Desma Holcomb and her domestic partner, Miriam Frank, had a daughter, Ruth Frank-Holcomb (pictured). She weighed 7 pounds, 6 ounces, when she was born last Nov. 29.

Desma and Miriam recently co-authored a book, PRIDE AT WORK: ORGANIZING FOR LESBIAN AND GAY RIGHTS IN UNIONS.

78

BOB PESKIN
Box 886
Middlebury, VT 05753

Nilsa Santiago is the chairperson of the 10th reunion of her Harvard Law School class. She urges fellow '78ers who are members of the H.L.S. Class of '81 to enjoy the Apr. 25-28 festivities at Harvard.

Congratulations to Libby Raymond and Roy Engleert, who both made partner recently at Mayer, Brown & Platt. Libby is with the firm's Chicago office, while Roy is in the Washington, D.C., office.

Derick Berlage was recently elected a member of the Montgomery (Md.) Cty. Council. He represents the towns of Silver Spring and Takoma Park, and is the council's youngest member.

Congratulations and happy first anniversary to Suzanne C. Frazier (23 Waban St., Newton, MA 02158), who was married Mar. 24, 1990, to Richard M. Wilkins. Suzanne is a manager for Fidelity Investments in Boston, where she is responsible for internal marketing. Her husband, a graduate of Harvard Business School, is director of business planning and development for a Johnson & Johnson-owned company. Suzanne's step-daughter is a 21-year-old college senior ("and dean's list student," writes her proud step-mom); her step-son is a 17-year-old high school junior. She writes, "As you can imagine, between work, family, professional organizations and some community activity, I'm busy... but very happy."

79

MARTHA KRAMER
27 Northhill St., Apt. 6-R
Stamford, CT 06907

HAPPY EVER AFTERS: Ann Rosenthal married Paul Shubert (Caltech '78) last June in the Yosemite Valley. Ann is working for the Aerospace Corporation, and Paul is with Hughes. A mountaineer with her husband, Ann has also taken up Olympic-style weightlifting and recently qualified to go to the women's national competition. Susan Korones married Christopher Gifford in N.Y. in January. Susan is a writer and magazine editor, and Christopher is an associate producer for Nickelodeon cable network.

OFFSPRING NEWS: Vivian Pyle and her husband, Tony Anemone, report that their son, Robert (1), is good company for their daughter, Sasha (3). The family is back in Maine; Vivian teaches Russian part-time at Colby College. William Klarner and his wife, Naomi, report the birth of their second child, Hannah, this January. William passed the Maryland bar exam in 1990 and is now doing trial work. Lauren Taslitz and her husband, William Bloomer, welcome their third child, Gregory, who was also born in January.

EXOTIC TRAVELS: Currently a resident of Alaska, Mike Kammerer has also traveled around Asia during the past year. He writes with appreciation about the "frontier spirit" in both lands. In her second year of teaching at the Univ. of Kentucky, Charlotte Allen recently traveled to Australia and New Zealand for geological research. She also taught a geology field camp for a consortium of schools, including Princeton. Anne Russell (pictured on a trek) is in her fourth year of teaching at Jakarta Intl. School in Indonesia. She has also finished her master's degree from Dartmouth.

We have a memorial in this issue.

80

RICK PARKER
25 Farmhouse La.
Furlong, PA 18925

WORLD ADVENTURE: The adventuresome fellow pictured is Chris Daniel, on an elephant trek he took with Remo Biagioni '81 in Thailand, near the Burmese border, last October. Chris, a Navy Lt. commander, finished up his obligation at Subic Bay in the Philippines in December and used his 30-day leave to also visit Taiwan, the Great Barrier Reef, and Sydney, Australia. He's now doing a residency at a Naval hospital in San Diego.

Bob Silverman has been finishing a two-year tour as a political officer in Jerusalem, reporting on Intifada and Jewish settlement on the West Bank, but expects to be back in Washington, D.C. by summer.

CLASS OFFSPRING: Gail and Effie Spielman happily welcomed new daughter Jennifer Michelle last Aug. 30, checking in at 8 lbs., 5 oz. Not to be outdone, former roommate Mosbe Rosenwein and his wife, Debbie, are now the proud parents of David Isaac Rosenwein, born Oct. 26 and weighing 7 lbs., 2 oz.

Here's what the new parents have to look forward to. Pictured last August at 11 months is Zoe Vance, daughter of Lee and Cindy King Vance. Cindy reports much happiness, along with moments of frustration as she tries to balance family and work.

LEGAL CONGRATULATIONS: As of Jan. 1, Jamie Brickell is a partner at Pryor Cashman & Flynn in N.Y.C.

81

JEAN AMABILE TELLJOHANN
50 Riverside Dr., Apt. 9F
New York, NY 10024

Remo Biagioni is pictured in a remote village in Northern Thailand, a few kilometers from Burma, during a vacation last October with Chris Daniel '80. (See column above). Earlier last year, Remo made a "baseball pilgrimage" to Chicago with Nevin Kelly to see games at both Wrigley Field and the recently condemned Comiskey Park. Remo finished third in the 100-meter dash at the Natl. Master's Track & Field Championships last August. He also won the N.J., N.Y.C., and Eastern States titles in the same event.

Jim Rayson and Fran Mandeville were married in L.A., with a subsequent reception in Boston. Classmates in attendance were Peter Edwards, Louise Ober, and Raul Vera. Fran and Jim now live in Winchester, a Boston suburb. Lisa Corbell married Anthony Huss (Gonzaga U. '78, Univ. of Portland M.B.A. '88) at St. Theresa's

Catholic Church, Federal Way, Washington, on Sept. 8, 1990.

Philip Nappo is managing director of a newly established law firm, Trinity Partners, specializing in securities and general corporate law. Andrew Santee and his wife, Yobi, have returned from Hong Kong, where they say Claire Chao '82 and David Crane from time to time. The Santees are currently living in Ft. Lauderdale. Jim Lugannani is still in Japan after 2½ years. Jim writes that local Princetonians are a definite help. Carol Ann Siciliano is an attorney with the U.S. E.P.A. in Washington, D.C. Charles Finnell is a member of the technical staff at the MITRE Corp. in Eaton Town, N.J. Electronic mail will reach him at finnell@mitre.org from anywhere in the world.

Ed's. Note: In the Mar. 6 PAW, Kim Muñoz Bolano's name was not italicized. PAW regrets the error.

82

TERI DOOLEY KOGUT
12409 Sadler Lane
Bowie, MD 20715

PRINCETON MINI-REUNIONS ARE EVERYWHERE: Pictured are Rick Wise and Mark Parrish. They just happened to meet last summer in Los Angeles, where Mark is a commercial real estate broker. He recently got his M.B.A. at Northwestern. Rick is a national accounts manager for the Hobart Corp. Even though Denver is the region he covers, he and his wife, Jan, and son, Daniel (4), live in the greater Kansas City area.

Chris Palmer sent this photo of Andy Russell, Dave Kubl, Rich Bagger (Mayor of Westfield, N.J.), and Chris holding his son, Michael Christian, from last year's Harvard game. Chris is a director for Christian Dior Perfumes in N.Y.C.

In other news: Prof. Robert Faggen, at Claremont McKenna College (Claremont, Calif.), is exploring American social history through cultural diversity, emphasizing immigration and the civil rights and feminist movements. He has also been known for marathon readings of MOBY DICK.

83 GAIL FRANK

345 West 87th St., Apt. 3F
New York, NY 10024

Andrew Bary got married Oct. 20, 1990, in Denver, to Judy Cohen (Univ. of Colo.-Boulder '83). Andrew is now a news editor of the Dow Jones Capital Markets Report, a newswire in N.Y. George Caftisch is in his fourth year as a trial lawyer with Sewell & Riggs, a 65-lawyer, full-service firm in Houston. Neal Shipley has finished his residency in internal medicine and is beginning a second residency in emergency medicine at Bronx Municipal Hospital, an affiliate of Albert Einstein College of Medicine. Jonaiban Reingold writes that he is a group product manager for word processing at Microsoft.

Peter D'Antonio was married to Angelique Aselin (Wharton '86) in June 1989 on Cape Cod. In July 1990 they bought a house in Garden City, Long Island, and in Aug. 1990 he finished his Ph.D. in economics from U.Penn. Throughout these adventures Pete has been working as a money market economist at Chemical Bank in N.Y.C.

Several important Class announcements are needed at this time. If you are interested in running for Class office for the 1993-98 term you should begin to build your constituent support now. Find the best campaign manager you can, kiss babies, think up clever sound bites for the spin doctors, organize your door-to-door canvassers, and don't forget to get those petitions signed. Remember also that the great Class of '83 has the potential to smash the Annual Giving record for the eighth reunion this June. Hey kids, keep those cards and letters coming.

84 TIMOTHY C. WU

Beacon Court, 175 Beacon St., Apt. 413
Somerville, MA 02143

ANOTHER SUCCESSFUL OUTCOME IN THE BATTLE OF THE CLASS NOTES COLUMNS: Stephen Kimmel and Alison Keel '85 were married last Oct. 19 in Montclair, N.J. Steve writes that "It was tough to decide which class to submit the picture to, but as the '84ers outnumbered the '85ers, we figured more guests would look in this column." Good decision. Princetonians in this picture include (from the back, l-r): Josh Lewis, Jeremy Ben-Ami, Arthur Yee, Randy Henderson, Jill Dubin Stabile, Cliff Berger, A. J. Katz, Tom Dragone, Lise Rybowski Abikoff, Andrea Gore '85, Bill Hauptman, Mindy Heningsbluth Hauptman, Steve, Alison, and Mat MacCumber. Steve and Alison will be setting up residence in Philadelphia, where Steve has a cardiology fellowship at the U.Penn. hospital, and Alison is joining a law firm.

REACH OUT AND TOUCH SOMEONE... John Few sends this photo from the circumnavigating trip he took with roommate Joe Brady following graduation from business school at U.N.C.-Chapel Hill. Seen here atop the volcanic peak of Mt. Batur in Bali, Indonesia, the voyage took them through Asia, the South Pacific, and Europe. John writes that his journey was curtailed by a phone call in Roorua, New Zealand, from Raymond James and Associates, offering him an equities trading job in St. Petersburg, Fla. He accepted the next week—from Australia! Now that's a switch: a callback from the outback!

85 ROB JIRANEK

1578 Oak Ave., Apt. 1
Evanston, IL 60201

Pictured on location is Martha Russo, crawling from the canvas of Christina's World to the set of Wayne's World. She recently became engaged to environmentalist Joe Ryan '83. Until the wedding, Martha plans to continue working under the tutelage of famed potter Fawn Lebowitz.

Lizy Lewis Mattheus informs us that Will '86 and she recently witnessed their son Bill extinguish the candle with one puff at his first birthday party. Betsy Updike Jiranek writes that former roommate Brooks Armouris is now engaged to Rice B-School classmate Hank Diesel. Paul Jene recently became engaged to Anna-Marie Litwin.

The varsity soccer team recently reunited in Massapequa, L.I. for the wedding of Yuri Fishman and Helen Bodenstein. Rick Kraemer served as best man, and Jack Blair '82, Chaz Stillitano '81, Brian O'Gorman '83, Rod Hausser '83, Nam Ki Hong '84, John Lamping, Tom Poz and Tom Roberts were in attendance.

Brigitte Selfert married Peter Shearer '84 in Aug. 1990 at Princeton. She is now at Stanford Business School with "lots of fellow Princetonians."

David Murtaugh and his wife Hope Allred '86 proudly announce the birth of their first child, John William Murtaugh. David exclaims, "The Princeton pennant is already up in the nursery and John is on his way towards graduating with the Class of 2012!"

86 SALLIE KIM

2645 California St., Apt. 303
Mountain View, CA 94040

If you're wondering who planned Reunions, this photo might help. These 45 members of the Class of 1986 met at Princeton last April to plan Reunions at the Princeton Today seminar. Esther Hsieh snapped this picture and sent it in.

Belated congratulations are in order to Melissa Marks, pictured here with her husband of over a year, Ned Sparrow '87.

Mary Laird Warner, self-described as "finally M.D.," is now an intern in internal medicine at Johns Hopkins in Baltimore.

Anke Kramer is in her second year at Fordham Law School and living in Hoboken with her two cats. Mike Rossner is planning to begin a post-doctoral fellowship at the Walter and Eliza Hall Inst. in Melbourne, Australia, and wants to know whether there are any other classmates there. Caroline Coleman is an associate at the law firm of Davis, Polk & Wardwell in N.Y.C.

Bart Addis recently returned from a year of "start-

Young Alumni Activities

PC OF NEW YORK: Apr. 4—Thursday Night Club—Young Alumni get-together in the club's Tiger Bar & Grill. Apr. 17—Young members' dinner and theater package to see FOREVER PLAID. Apr. 22—Movie Night—Custom feature "Cartoon and News Reel." Apr. 27—Wild Ivy Rock 'n' Roll Ball. For reservations, call the manager's office at 212-840-6400.

PA OF DELAWARE: Second Thurs. of each month happy hour at the Water Works Cafe. Please call Tracey Morgan at 302-761-9432 for more info.

PA OF NEW ENGLAND: Apr. 10—Boston Alumni Clubs Career Networking Night at Rabb Planning Center, The Garage, third floor, Harvard Square. Contact Sarah Helm '89 617-868-7808 or Mary Hermann '89 617-628-8825. May 1—PANE annual meeting with guest speaker President Shapiro at Boston Newton Marriott. Contact Dick Charlesworth '46 617-894-4345 or Frank Giovino 617-329-0001. May 12, 16, 19, 22—Princeton at the Pops at Symphony Hall, Boston. $30. per seat. Contact Dick Charlesworth '46 617-894-4345.

PC OF MICHIGAN: Apr. 27—Whirlyball at Romar Sports Center (Ann Arbor) $11.00 per person and reservations required. June 7—Party T.B.A. "Reunions in Michigan" for those who can't attend the real Reunions. All classes welcome. Wear your beer jacket. FREE and BYO. For more info. and reservations, please call Mike Sklar at 313-994-1831 or George Corsar at 313-647-0054.

Contact Debbie Bredael at the Alumni Council with notices of events for inclusion in this column. Call or write: the Alumni Council, Maclean House, Princeton Univ., Princeton, NJ 08544; 609-258-3353.

up hell," doing research in Japan to make unidentified "esoteric audio products." Osman Sayan sends his greetings from scenic Washington Heights, N.Y., where he is "in the midst of the hell known as internship" in internal medicine at Columbia Presbyterian Medical Center.

87 MARY TAYLOR DENKO

1935 Seville St.
Santa Rosa, CA 95403

Several Princetonians came to the wedding of Martin Trauschild and Julie Johnson '88. The celebration was on Oct. 20, 1990, in Grosse Pointe, Mich., and those in attendance were (standing) Alicia Nowicki '88, Bruce Latta, Laura Adams '88, Jeff Van Fossen, Julie, Martin, Tom Werner, Jessica Goldstein '88, Jim Beardsley '60, Alison Blyler '88, Edward Johnson '60, Anjani Shah '88, Doug Freeth '59, and (kneeling) Joe Zuffoletto, Hal Anderson, Pete Lasky, Phil Paolella '91, and Greg Aldrete '88. Martin and Julie live in Japan and work for Mobil Oil; he is a technical consultant specializing in computer networks, and she is an English editor for the Planning Department. They plan to leave Japan this summer and head for graduate school at Northwestern. Martin will work toward an M.B.A. while Julie studies for an M.Ed.

NEWS FROM ABROAD: Piet and Karl Lister van Zee are still in Germany and loving it. Kari says she's nearing the end of her Ph.D. program in biochem at the Univ. of Munich and Piet works on software for factory automation at Siemens. Eric Bezar recently returned to San Francisco after spending some time in Switzerland for Andersen Consulting. Chris Howard won a Rotary Scholarship and went to South Africa to study politics at the Univ. of Cape Town.

88 CHRISTOPHER LU
206E Holden Green
Cambridge, MA 02138

PEOPLE IN THE NEWS: John Garrett was drafted as a wide receiver in February by the San Antonio Riders of the World League of American Football. His brother Jason '90, a quarterback, was also selected by San Antonio. This new spring football league has teams on both sides of the Atlantic. The ever-dashing, ever-charming Eric Collins was featured as Mr. January in the "Black Men of Harvard Law School" calendar. This rather unique calendar, which sold out quickly, was written up in newspaper stories around the country. Finally, Don Berthiaume isn't so much "in the news" as he is "covering the news." Don is in his second year of covering sports for KRWB Radio in Roseau, Minn.

THE JET SET: Penny Mibalap is living in Madrid, teaching English to Spanish businesspeople. She will attend graduate school in England next year. Jenny Valentine is in Tokyo working for Honda in the European automobiles division; she keeps tabs on car sales in 15 countries. William Ambler is working towards a master's in art history at the Courtauld Inst., a branch of the Univ. of London. Melora Myslik and Andrew Balson are living in Sydney, Australia, enjoying a life of scuba diving and sailing. And Mark Feuerer played baseball in Melbourne, Australia for six months; he is now working for the Caterpillar Equipment dealer in Wisc. as a marketing analyst.

LETTER OF THE MONTH: Janine Schloss writes: "After graduation, I lived and studied in Jerusalem for a year. The 'highlight' of my stay there was being tear-gassed while trying to pray at the Wailing Wall. Then I moved to Los Angeles, where I am continuing my rabbinic studies. Last year I served every other weekend as the rabbi in Boise, Ida. (kind of a long commute). This year I'm working as the assistant rabbi at a synagogue near Los Angeles. And yes, I love it!"

89 DAVID MILLER
96 Linden La.
Princeton, NJ 08540

ALUM DAY: A handful of '89ers returned to Princeton for Alumni Day in March, and saw Laurance Rockefeller '32 (uncle '89) receive the Woodrow Wilson Award. At the '89 lunch table in Jadwin: Ben Freeman, who has returned to Virginia to rejoin his outdoor education outfit after spending five weeks in New Hampshire gaining certification in wilderness emergency medical services; Rob Keltner, who lives in Arlington, Va., and works as a speechwriter for Jack Kemp at the Dept. of Housing and Urban Development; David Ogden, the latest '89 addition to the Admission Office; Alex Travis, just back from a year studying reproductive science on a Rotary Scholarship at Monash Univ. in Melbourne, Australia, and now looking forward to starting vet science at Penn in the fall; Michael Woodring, an engineer with Westinghouse in Baltimore working on airport radar. Michael will appear on the game show "Trump Card" on June 19, when he will win $750 and get through to the second round. Class officers represented the Class at the annual Service of Remembrance, a moving ceremony in the Chapel to honor alumni who died in the last year.

Pictured are the revelers at the Washington, D.C. '89-'90 holiday party last December. Congregating for carols, cookies and pre-war conversation were (kneeling) Fiona Ong (far l.), Regional Veep Marion Spano Devlin (3rd l.), Cindy Addison (5th l.), Antonio Oliva (6th l.); (middle row) Laura Phintzy (far l.), Katherine Rosefsky (2nd l.), Rob Keltner (2nd r.), David Miller (far r.). Scott Michael and Erik Williams were also on hand.

90 BRETT GOODMAN
22 Berkeley Terrace
Livingston, NJ 07039

Hey folks—June 6-9, O.K.? Get it? Got it? Good. See you there.

First and foremost, Stacey Kline has announced her engagement to Adam Schwartz, a Univ. of Mich. grad. The couple, who both work at the Jewish Community Federation of Cleveland, say they knew it was love when they discovered that Harold Shapiro's name appears on both their diplomas.

Regional V.P. Shane Brooks has announced that classmates in the L.A. area are invited to get together each Thursday evening at Harvell's in Santa Monica. Todd Strine plays harmonic there on amateur nights, and Shane, who makes test tube babies at the Center for Reproductive Medicine in L.A., guarantees that everyone will have a good time. He also reports that a ton of '90ers are studying at U.C.L.A., including Mike Amster (computer science), Eggy López (architecture), Genevieve Pong (communications), Randall Roberts (medicine), and Carlos Romero (political science).

Last year, Ralph Nader '55 announced the formation of Project '55, through which Nader and his classmates place others in jobs geared toward the public good. Six of our own are involved, including Anne Gilson, Sarah Graff, and Elizabeth Perriello, who live together in Chicago. Anne works on reinvestment in low income neighborhoods, Sarah researches health policy, while Elizabeth works for a social service center. In Washington, D.C., Katrina Broune studies non-profit groups, Madeline Nagy is employed by the Smithsonian, and Justin Smith works for the Environmental Defense Fund.

Switching our attention to the Big Apple, it seems as if the Class has taken over the offices of Oliver, Wyman, & Co. in N.Y.C. Laura Lynne Balles, Matt Cunningham, Jeff Oberstein, and Zion Shobet all work there.

91 BUCKY JOHNSON
152 Little Hall
Princeton University Campus

I don't want to jump the gun here, but I'd like to talk about the Commencement schedule. Families should arrive on Saturday, June 8, in time for the P-rade if they are dying to see it, or in time for the Baccalaureate Service at 2 P.M. on Sun., June 9 (two guests allowed). A reception will be held after the Baccalaureate Service, and the Senior Class Stepping will be held in Blair Arch that night (start thinking of songs to sing!). On Monday, the activities start at 10:30 A.M. with the Class Day ceremony on Cannon Green. Following this, there will be a luncheon for the entire Class and families. Departmental receptions will take place 3-5 in the afternoon. Then, plan to take a little break and get your dancing shoes on! With two different bands, the Senior Prom is sure to be fun for old and young alike, so bring five family members and have a blast from 9 P.M. until 1 A.M. in Jadwin. For members of the Class of '91 the fun doesn't end in Jadwin. A Senior Party will rage in Dillon, 1-3 A.M. But, don't get too out of hand, because the Commencement Procession begins at 10:40 A.M. and your parents will want you to look your best on the day for which you and they have waited four years. The exercises begin at 11 A.M. on the front lawn of Nassau Hall, so make sure your five guests are ready to laugh and cry—and make sure you are, too!

92 ROBERT ROSSBY HAMMOND
31 Little Hall
Princeton University Campus

The Class of '92 is strong. We dominate the athletic scene at Princeton. On the field, in the pool, on the court, in the lake, and on those exercise bikes in Dillon, the Class of '92 is always in the lead. On the squash courts Hope Mackay, Mary Belknap, and Jen Roos are all nationally ranked. They are also part of the Brooklyn Heights squash dynasty; all three women played at the Heights Casino.

On the rugby front, crazy Collin Celke, jumping Joe Davi, and mousy Matt Reed drew some blood from opposing teams this fall. Collin's roommate Mario Palumbo, not to be outdone by his blood-spattered friend, received an A+ on his fall J.P., which shows some of the members of our Class do more than just have fun.

93 OWEN KERN, MARK POON
53 Holder Hall, 211 1940 Hall
Princeton University Campus

The Class of '93 made its mark in Princeton history in February, even if we had little to do with it. Our Class became the first to enjoy a completely coeducational eating-club scene. For the first time ever, any student could bicker any club, and '93ers came out en masse to celebrate. We can now add that accomplishment to our first major distinction—we were the 100th class at Princeton to follow the Honor Code.

Speaking of the Honor Code, the Class of '93 regrets the arrest of our own Alexi Indris-Santana, who wasn't actually Alexi at all but rather James Arthur Hogue, a 31-year-old felon from Kansas. We always knew to ourselves that we were a Class comprised of individuals, and Alexi/James was no exception. He was a con man, but he was a classmate as well. Whatever his real name, he will be missed.

GS C. ROSEN DAND '73
26 Crescent St.
Northampton, MA 01060
60-*75

ARCHITECTURE: Michael Blanc '67 married Mimika, a Greek architect, in June 1970. They have lived in Stamford, Conn. for 21 years and have two sons, Adrien (15) and Christopher (17). They own the architectural firm Michael Blanc & Associates and Hoyt Street Properties.

ASTROPHYSICS: Leon Axel '71 is a prof. of radiology at the U.Penn. medical school, doing research and clinical work in magnetic resonance imaging.

CHEMISTRY: Emil Friedman '73 writes that Goodyear paid him to regress and obtain an M.S. in applied statistics from Case Western in '87. Along the way he has come into two kids.

CHEMICAL ENGINEERING: Alan W. Rice '66 is currently prof. of engineering at Grove City College in Penn. Michael Bell '68 has joined the staff of the Intl. Atomic Energy Agency, a U.N. organization headquartered in Vienna, for a three-year appointment. Son Andrew is a member of the Princeton Class of 1992. Edward T. Wolynic '74 has been appointed V.P.-development for VOP, Inc.

CLASSICS: Edwin L. Brown '61 from U.N.C.-Chapel Hill writes: "When, during an in-depth interview on TV, Queen Noor of Jordan was identified as a Princetonian, and in the same week I received the King's personal note of thanks for my letter to him, with which he had begun an address to the American people, it occurred to me that the University's unofficial motto can justly be punctuated, 'In the nations' service.' The Queen, at least, does great credit to her alma mater."

ECONOMICS: David H. Stern '60, former U.C.L.A. prof., mountain-climber, co-author of a book on surfing, and owner of health food stores, earned an M.Div. in the 1970s at Fuller Theological Seminary. He and wife, Martha, are Messianic Jews; they served for a time on the staff of Jews for Jesus before immigrating to Israel in 1979. They live in Jerusalem with their two children. Adam Broner '75 recently retired from the N.J. Office of Economic Policy. The Economic Policy Council and its office, which he directed for the last 14 years, have been abolished by Gov. Florio. Adam's wife, Linaida, who worked for 20 years in Firestone Library, also retired and they moved to Sarasota.

ELECTRICAL ENGINEERING: Larry Rosenberg '70 is now director of technology partner development at Cadence Design Systems in San Jose, Calif.

ENGLISH: Joseph B. Trabern Jr. '63 is chairperson, Princeton's English dept. advisory council; editor, YEAR'S WORK IN OLD ENGLISH STUDIES; editor, STANDARDIZING ENGLISH (Univ. of Tenn. Press, 1989); and acting vice-chancellor for academic affairs, Univ. of Tenn.-Knoxville.

HISTORY: Bailey S. Stone '73 at the Univ. of Houston is completing his third book in manuscript, tentatively titled THE GENESIS OF THE FRENCH REVOLUTION: A GLOBAL-HISTORICAL INTERPRETATION.

MATHEMATICS: M. Emin Bozbuluk '71 at Atatürk Üniversitesi, Erzurum, Turkey, is organizing a NATO Advanced Study Inst. for Sept. 1992 on "Topics in Knot Theory." It will be a 10-day summer-school type meeting.

MECHANICAL & AEROSPACE ENGINEERING: M. Jerry Kenig '65 is dean of engineering at the Univ. of New Haven.

PHYSICS: Robert B. Comizzoli '67 was elected a fellow of the electrochemical society in May 1990—among the first group of 12 fellows in the 80-year history of the 6,000-member society. Daughter Sabrina is a member of Princeton's Class of 1992, majoring in history.

POURCS: Abmad R. Haffar '61 writes: "Studying the Inuit in the Canadian Arctic and the Navaho in Ariz. in 1990 rounded the circle of my analyses of the processes of political socialization in smaller societies in the West, in contrast to those in the Mideast, Saudi Arabia, the Gulf States, and Libya." David Langsam '74 is a partner in Elzay Associates, an investment management firm.

RELIGION: After eight years as Broome Cty. historian, Lawrence Botwell '67 has resigned to spend more time on publication projects in public history. The first titles under the Bowers Corners Press imprint will appear this year. Wife, Jan, will also finish her term as curator of the Nanticoke Valley Historical Society this year, as they prepare to move to smaller quarters.

We have memorials in this issue.

Harvey H. Meeker '14

HARVEY MEEKER died Jan. 7, 1991, at the home of his son Harvey H. Meeker Jr. in Hawaii, where he had been living for the last 15 months. Harvey graduated from Princeton in 1914 with a degree in civil engineering.

Harvey spent much of his life in the construction business. He was employed with the G.H. Flinn Corp. as a design engineer and was involved in the construction of the Holland Tunnel, the N.J. Turnpike, and the Ohio Turnpike. In Sept. 1917 Harvey married Clara Cooper and had three sons: Harvey Jr., William, and Donald, all graduates of Princeton. During national emergencies all of these young men enlisted in the service of their country.

Harvey is survived by seven grandchildren and eight great-grandchildren.

The Class of 1914

Albert D. Reidinger '18

OUR BELOVED CLASSMATE, Albert Reidinger, died July 29, 1990, of pneumonia at his home in Cokesbury Village in Hockessin, Dela. He was 94 years of age, and they were a full 94 years.

Albert left Princeton in his senior year to serve his country in the Army. He was in the midst of those violent battles at St. Mihiel and the Meuse-Argonne with the 78th Division. He returned to the campus after the war to earn his degree in chemistry. Albert was a color chemist with the DuPont Co. his entire career and earned several patents for the company and himself.

He was an elder in the Presbyterian Church, having served his local church as church school superintendent and clerk of session for many years. He served also on a number of committees for the Presbytery and the General Assembly.

His wife, Helen, died in 1969. Albert is survived by his twin sons, Russell and Raymond, both Class of '45, his daughter Shirley Ostendard, 13 grandchildren, and six great-grandchildren. To each of these members of Albert's wonderful family we send our condolences and our affection.

The Class of 1918

Darwood Gillespie Myers '21

DARWOOD GILLESPIE MYERS died Dec. 3, 1990, less than three weeks before his 91st birthday.

He was born in N.Y.C. and prepared for college at Collegiate and McBurney schools. At Princeton he was a member of the band and of Whig Hall. His business life was spent on Wall Street, where he was a partner of the brokerage firm of Foster and Adams, with which he was associated for nearly 50 years.

He is survived by his widow, Elizabeth; a son, Howard; two daughters, the Rev. Elizabeth Myers and Margaret Myers; a sister, Constance Anderson, and a granddaughter. To them the Class extends sincere sympathy.

The Class of 1921

Francis C. Wood '22

FRAN WOOD died Dec. 16, 1990, at his home in Haverford, Penn. He was born in South Africa, Oct. 1, 1901. He moved to the U.S. after 12 years and came to Princeton from Wooster (Oh.) Academy. He received his M.D. from U.Penn. Medical School and married Mary Louise Woods, sister of Pete Woods, in 1926. He began his career at Penn. in 1926, served as chairman of the Dept. of Medicine, and retired in 1984. He developed a private practice, worked in medical wards, taught, and experimented. His research led to important discoveries in the treatment of heart disease and the early detection of heart attacks. He developed a residency program which produced leaders in medicine.

He is survived by his widow, two sons, one daughter, five grandchildren, and three great-grandchildren. Fran emphasized the fun in medicine and in living. A leader in medicine, and in the art of living, has departed.

The Class of 1922

Thomas Stanley Matthews '22

TOM MATTHEWS died Jan. 4, 1991, of lung cancer at his home in Cavendish, England. He was born in Cincinnati, Oh., Jan. 16, 1901. He came to Princeton from St. Paul's School, Concord, N.H.

After a degree from New College, Oxford, he started as a proofreader at the NEW REPUBLIC, and, in 1928, became an associate editor. He joined TIME magazine in 1929 and became books editor, assistant managing editor, executive editor, and succeeded Henry Luce, the creator of TIME magazine, as editor. "His major role in TIME's history was to civilize it," said a former senior editor. Since 1953, he pursued a freelance career in England, reviewing books for the N.Y. TIMES and writing some of his own, including an autobiography, NAME AND ADDRESS, O MY AMERICA, and ANGELS UNAWARES: TWENTIETH CENTURY PORTRAITS.

He is survived by his widow, four sons, two sisters, eight grandchildren, and two great-grandchildren. He was a leader in new paths.

The Class of 1922

Ambrose Hunsberger Jr. '25

DICK HUNSBERGER was born Sept. 23, 1902, and graduated from Central High School in Philadelphia in 1919. He transferred to our Class from the Philadelphia College of Pharmacy and Science junior year. He was a member of the Polity, Arts, and Tower Clubs. He obtained his M.S. at U.Penn. in 1927, remaining as an instructor in biochemistry and also serving as assistant biochemist at the Philadelphia General Hospital. In 1934 he was appointed chief of research at Wyeth Pharmaceutical Laboratories and retired in 1967 as director of technical services. He was a member of the American Chemical Society, the Physiological Society of Philadelphia, the Church of St. Martins in the Field in Chestnut Hill, and the Philadelphia Cricket Club.

He married Margaret Van Deusen Clemens. She died in 1970. Dick died Dec. 15, 1990, at a nursing home in Madison, N.J., where he had moved to be near his daughter, Joan (Mrs. Edward) Bronage, who, with two grandchildren and a great-grandchild, survives him.

The Class of 1925

Rowland Grant Oliver '25

BILL OLIVER was born a Canadian Aug. 22, 1902, in Victoria, B.C. and grew up in Montclair, N.J. He attended the Hill School. At Princeton, he was on the soccer team, manager of crew, and a member of the Senior Council and Cap and Gown (V.P.). He roomed with Lew Mack and Harvey Phillips and went around the world with them on a British freighter after graduation.

He was an active and highly respected member of the Class, serving on the reunion committee for all major reunions and on the executive committee. He was an avid skier and tennis player and enjoyed sailing at his summer home in Small Point, Me.

A 50-year resident of New Canaan, Conn., he was a trustee and treasurer of the New Canaan Country Club and the New Canaan Country School. He also had a lifelong charitable interest in the N.Y. TIMES 100 Neediest Cases Fund. He was a founding member of Beck, Mack and Oliver, an investment counseling firm in N.Y.

He died Dec. 14, 1990. He is survived by his wife of 56 years, Ruth Morgan Oliver; and children Anne Jackson, Peggy Hedeman, David '64, and Thomas; and 11 grandchildren.

The Class of 1925

Henry Steeger '25

HENRY STEEGER, publisher and civil rights leader, died at his home in Manhattan Dec. 25, 1990. In 1930 he founded Popular Publications, with "pulp" titles such as DIME DETECTIVE and G-8 AND HIS BATTLE ACES, and successful "slicks" such as THEATRE ARTS and TENNIS U.S.A.

President of the National Urban League and author of

YOU CAN REMAKE AMERICA, he served for decades on the boards of Wilberforce Univ., Manhattan Eye, Ear and Throat Hospital, and the Madison Square Boys' Club. He was president of the Natl. Foundation for Facial Reconstruction at N.Y.U. Medical Center, where a chair was endowed in his name in 1988.

Educated at Trinity and Horace Mann Schools in N.Y. and at the Univ. of Berlin, he was a lt. commander in the U.S.C.G. in WWII. Harry was an avid tournament tennis player all his life. An advisory counselor to Princeton's departments of sociology and anthropology, he was a Class officer, member of the Class Executive Committee, and editor of our 20th Reunion RECORD.

He is survived by his widow, Shirley; daughters Suzanne Hall and Nancy Jennings; and six grandchildren. His son, Hal Steeger '53, died in 1978.

The Class of 1925

Alan F. Lukens '26

AL LUKENS, for many years a resident of Schenectady, N.Y., but more recently of Calif., died June 17, 1990, of pneumonia at London House, Santa Rosa, Calif., after a long battle with Parkinson's disease. Al was born in Waterville, N.Y., where his father, Victor Lukens, Class of 1895, was a pastor of the Stone Street Presbyterian Church. He prepared at Episcopal Academy and, after graduation, stayed on at Princeton to take an M.S.E. in electrical engineering. He then began his career with General Electric. At G.E. Al was involved in the invention and design of small A.C. motors, which, according to his daughter, Jane, "combined his love for tinkering with his clear conceptual and problem-solving mind."

A quiet man, Al is remembered for an ingenious and dry sense of humor. He was interested in the outdoors and enjoyed skiing, boating, and mountain climbing. He was devoted to Greensboro, Vt., where he had a cottage and spent many summers.

Al married the former Marion E. Proctor in 1939. She predeceased him in 1987. He is survived by two daughters, Jane Lukens and Ashley Serre; a brother, Jaywood Lukens '30; and five grandchildren, to all of whom we extend our deep sympathy.

The Class of 1926

George Hamilton David '27

GEORGE DIED Aug. 16, 1988. After Princeton, the Univ. of Pittsburgh, and a few years with the Consolidated Gas Co. of N.Y., he devoted himself to the efficient transportation of people in the Big Apple. For many years he was a guiding and directing hand in the Manhattan and Bronx Surface Transit Operating Authority. The system included those stately, legendary buses which for generations have rumbled up and down Fifth Ave. He became assistant director of plant and equipment for a merger of the Fifth Avenue Coach Co. and Surface Transit Inc.

George's heartfelt love was aviation, and in WWII he became a flight officer in the Civil Air Patrol, an auxiliary of the Army Air Force. He loved and devoted himself to patrol work and flight training of cadet pilots. He was still flying in the 1960s, when he reported for 1927's 35th Year RECORD BOOK.

Our classmate, who loved the thrill of aviation, lived a leisurely suburban life in Jackson Heights and Floral Park, N.Y., with his wife, nee Abigail Sackett (Hunter College and N.Y.U.), and his daughter, Marcia Marie. With them, the Class shares a sense of loss and also pride in George's life and accomplishments.

The Class of 1927

John Albert Welsh '29

JOHN DIED Nov. 17, 1989, in N.Y.C.

He prepared for college at St. Alban's School, Sycamore, Ill. After Princeton, John started as a graduate student in history at Columbia, but soon turned his life work to social welfare and came back to Columbia for a master's in social work in 1952.

His long and distinguished career began at the Boys' Club of N.Y. in the early 1930s. In 1935 he entered the N.Y.C. Dept. of Social Welfare. Except for periods of graduate study and military service, John was continuously in that dept. until his retirement in 1969. He achieved the rank of field director, the highest non-appointed position. Before reaching the higher administrative levels, he was active in the public employees' union and served as chapter treasurer. He was frequently called on to teach courses for supervisors preparing for civil service exams.

John entered the Army in 1941 and served in North Africa and Italy and was a first lieutenant at the time of his release. In Dec. 1941 John married Clara Newhouse, and she survives, together with their daughter, Ann Acheson, and their son, Richard. The Class extends sincere sympathy to John's family.

The Class of 1929

George P. Morrell '31

GEORGE P. MORRELL died Jan. 13, 1990, at his home in Tryon, N.C. He came to college from the Hill School, where he was a star athlete in many sports. At Princeton, he was on the freshman football team and the heavyweight championship boxing team. "Oik," as he was known to his many friends and classmates, was one of our "big" men—active on the ski slopes with fishing and sail-surfing at the shore. To his widow, Martha, and to children and grandchildren, the Class extends its sympathy.

The Class of 1931

Henry R. Schaefer '31

HENRY R. SCHAEFER died Jan. 20, 1990. A longtime Buffalo resident and a graduate of the Nichols prep school, Hank moved to Port Colborne, Ontario, after retiring from the building supply business. He was a versatile musician and at Princeton was a member of the Triangle club, the band, the orchestra, and the Banjo Club. Hank's other avocation was hunting, mostly in northern Ontario and Quebec, where he trailed everything from rabbits to moose. Hank, Jr. was our "Class baby" and threw out the first baseball at the Yale-Princeton game at our fifth reunion. To his widow, Betty, and their family, we convey our condolences and best wishes.

The Class of 1931

Leonard A. Yerkes Jr. '31

OUR CLASSMATE Len Yerkes died Aug. 23, 1990. He came to college from St. Paul's School, and at Princeton he pulled an oar on various crews. After graduation, he became associated with the DuPont Co. in Wilmington. He was the president of the Alumni Assoc. of Delaware and served in several capacities with the Welfare Council, Boys Club, and the Mayor's Advisory Committee, all in Wilmington. Len was the initiator of a memorable mini-reunion two years ago at the Tides Inn, and more recently he was our very active and efficient Class agent for special funds. To his widow, Eleanor, and the members of their family, we extend our sympathy.

The Class of 1931

John Felix Marchand '35

DR. JOHN F. MARCHAND, a family-style physician, educator, scientist, and author, died of cancer in New York Hospital Sept. 16, 1990. Born in England, educated at Exeter, he received both his A.B. and M.A. in biology from Princeton. After receiving his M.D. from Yale, he did post-graduate medical work in Boston and Philadelphia hospitals, was a research fellow on pharmacotherapy at Harvard, and a clinical fellow at Mass. General, before his appointment as an instructor in medicine at N.Y. Hospital/Cornell Med. School in 1946. He was a clinical attending physician at the N.Y. and Bellevue Hospitals and had a private practice for many years in Manhattan.

Dr. Marchand was noted for his research into the influence of potassium in cardiac arrest. He also helped organize field tests of the Salk polio vaccine in eight southern states. Marchand was known for keeping alive the tradition of the family practitioner, making house calls until his retirement in 1988 and rarely billing patients, even when they repeatedly requested bills. When he himself became ill and required around-the-clock care, former patients made donations to cover the cost of his treatment. He is survived by his widow, Keiko Yahagi Marchand; a brother, Eric; two nephews; a niece; and a cousin; to whom the Class extends sympathy.

The Class of 1935

Henry Willets Underhill '35

WOODY WAS BORN Apr. 7, 1913, in a farmhouse, which had been in the family since 1793 in Jericho, Long Island. He died of cancer at Winthrop-Univ. Hospital, Mineola, May 8, 1990. Most of us last saw Woody at our 50th.

Woody prepared at Friends Academy and the Gunnery. At Princeton he participated in 150-lb. crew, Triangle Club, Theatre Intime, and Glee Club. He graduated as a civil engineer and was a member of Terrace.

In WWII Woody was a Navy supply officer, serving here and in the Pacific. Following military service, he joined Turner Construction for several years and then returned to farming. Woody served 32 years on the Board of Winthrop-Univ. Hospital, carrying on a family tradition of nearly a century. He served many local civic organizations and the Society of Friends. Perhaps closest to his heart was the Gunnery, on whose Board he served 32 very active years; his most recent contribution there was reconstruction of the baseball/soccer field in memory of his younger brother, Samuel Jackson Underhill, who was killed in WWII.

Woody is survived by his wife of 51 years, Margaret (Peggy) Young Underhill, and numerous cousins to all of whom the Class extends its heartfelt sympathy.

The Class of 1935

Nicholas Alvin Quinn '39

NICK DIED Oct. 6, 1990. A stroke five years ago placed some restrictions on Nick's ebullience but never dampened his enthusiasm for Princeton and our Class. He and Pat were regulars at '39 reunions. Whether it was a Class gathering in N.Y. or Princeton or a Triangle stop-over in Albany, the Quinns were there.

After a stint with W.T. Grant Co., interrupted by wartime service with the U.S. Coast Guard, Nick had a successful career in the paper business while bringing up a large family in Pelham. In mid-career, Nick and Pat moved to Keene Valley, in the high-peak area of the Adirondacks, where they could indulge their love of mountain climbing, canoeing, and the great outdoors. There Nick was a leader in the Adirondack Mountain Club. In our 50th yearbook he wrote "Family and church have been the most rewarding part of my life." He was president of the Holy Name Society, worked on the Cardinal's Committee of the Laity and in 1967 was appointed a Knight of the Equestrian Order of the Holy Sepulchre of Jerusalem by the Pope.

With his family—Pat, their eight children and three grandchildren—we share a great loss.

The Class of 1939

Richard Louis Franklin '40

MEDICAL SURGEON Dick Franklin, who made his home in Waldwick, N.J. died Jan. 7, 1990. Dick prepared at Newark Academy, graduated from Princeton with chemistry honors, roomed with Dick Kitto, and was a member of Gateway. After receiving his M.D. in 1941 from Columbia P. & S., he joined the Army Medical Corps and served during the Korean conflict.

Dick's career commenced at the Fairmount Hospital in Jersey City, where he eventually was president—a position held earlier by his father. He then presided over the merger of Fairmount and North Hudson Hospital, to form West Hudson Hospital, and became its medical director. Later on he was director of surgery at the Jersey City Medical Center.

Dick is survived by his widow, Joan; five children; 11 grandchildren; and a sister, Joanne. The Class extends its heartfelt sympathy to them all at the loss of this Princetonian who devoted so much of his time and energy to the medical profession and others' well-being.

In recalling his lasting friendship with Dick Franklin, Dick Kitto has written, "He was strong-willed, had a great sense of humor, was an avid tennis player in college, and did not like to be beaten. He will be missed."

The Class of 1940

Edmund Waldemar Ill Jr. '41

TED III DIED Nov. 2, 1990, of congestive heart failure in the Point Pleasant, N.J. hospital. He was 72.

Ted was graduated from Lawrenceville. As a freshman he ran on our cross-country team. He left at year's end to join the Insurance Co. of North America and his entire career was in insurance. He retired in 1983.

During WWII Ted saw service on Saipan as a master sergeant in the Army. He was a member of the Mantoloking and Bay Head yacht clubs. As an outstanding sailor on N.J.'s Barnegat Bay, he was famous for never tying in a reef, no matter how boisterous the weather.

One of our most loyal classmates, Ted never missed a reunion after his Army discharge. Invariably he was among the first to arrive and usually the last to leave. Serving for many years on 1941's Executive Committee, he was a reunion chairman, a regional V.P. for Annual Giving, and a secretary of the Monmouth Cty., N.J. Princeton Club.

Ted leaves his widow, Marjorie Porter III, sons Richard Crosby III and Robert Burnett III, six grandchildren, and his sister, Francis III Dalzell '39. To them the Class extends its sincere sympathy. Teddy will be remembered with great affection and will be missed by all of us.

The Class of 1941.

Harry Shields Robinson II '42

HARRY DIED Mar. 30, 1990, at his home in Cincinnati, Oh. He had suffered from cancer for 2½ years.

Harry joined the Class of 1942 from the Hill School, graduating with honors in economics. He was a member of Cottage Club. Following commencement he spent four years with the Army Air Force serving in India, Egypt, and North Africa, rising to the rank of captain.

Following the war, he started in advertising in Cincinnati working on the U.S. Shoe account. In 1952 he moved to U.S. Shoe where he spent 35 years, as advertising manager, president of the Red Cross Shoe Division, and retiring in 1987 as a group V.P. He made several major contributions to U.S. Shoe, most prominently the development of a new, highly successful shoe line called "Easy Spirit." Harry's credo: "It's amazing how much can be accomplished when you don't worry about who gets the credit" was the key to his business success. His children knew him as a very loving man. Everyone who knew him came quickly to love and respect him as a man of great character and high values.

Harry was a past president of the Speech and Hearing Center of Cincinnati and is survived by his son, Harry III '69, two daughters, Judith and Elizabeth, seven grandchildren and a brother, Richard '51. To his entire family the Class expresses its most sincere sympathies for their loss.

The Class of 1942

Clark Gilbert Myers '51

CLARK DIED suddenly at his home in Moultonboro, N.H., Nov. 5, 1990. The sum of his life was straightforward; the substance was quite different. In brief, he was born in Cambridge, Mass., graduated cum laude from Deerfield and Princeton, majored in history, was a member of Quadrangle, roomed with Lee Tozzer, and was active in N.R.O.T.C.

A book could be written about Clark's career. He joined the Navy and served in Korea. A two-year tour of duty in Japan followed and he retired in 1956 as a Lt. commander, U.S.N.R.

For the next 24 years, he was in the C.I.A. He was fluent in German and Russian and was a senior intelligence specialist in European and Soviet affairs. When Clark retired in 1980, the C.I.A. awarded him its Career Intelligence Medal. He and his family then moved to Moultonboro and he became deeply involved in local land management and land conservation, the town's library, historical society and school board.

Many people praised Clark at his funeral: admirals, former C.I.A. friends, Princeton alumni, townspeople and neighbors. They all spoke of this remarkable man's accomplishments in so many endeavors.

Clark is survived by his widow, Suzita; sons, Clark and Christopher; daughter, Diana '76; brothers, Lyman, Gilbert, and Fraser; and his father, Gilbert Barlow Myers (U.S.N.A. '21).

The Class salutes the Myers family. Clark served well.

The Class of 1951

Richard Howell Furman '59

DICK DIED unexpectedly of an embolism in New Canaan, Conn., Dec. 10, 1990.

Dick came to Princeton from the Darrow School in New Lebanon, N.Y. Dick majored in geology and was a member of Colonial Club.

After graduation Dick served in the Army for six months, then returned to Princeton to work on the "$53 Million for Princeton" campaign. From there he moved into the financial world, first taking a position with Manufacturers Hanover Bank, and then moving to G.E. Credit Corp. in Stamford, Conn. He subsequently assumed the presidency of Franklin Commercial Corp. in Somerset, N.J., served as manager of E.F. Hutton Credit Corp.'s Greenwich office, and later returned to Stamford with Chrysler Capital, where he had recently been promoted to V.P.

Dick married Patty Herron and they raised two wonderful children; son Nathaniel and daughter Margo.

They all survive, as does Dick's sister, Carol F. Kirkwood.

Dick's Princeton experience was very dear to him, and he enjoyed attending reunions and other Class and University functions, usually with Patty at his side. Those of us privileged to have shared the past years with Dick will sorely miss his charm and wit. The Class extends its deepest sympathy to Patty and his family.

The Class of 1959

Kenneth Arthur Mills '62

KENNETH MILLS DIED June 2, 1990, in Morristown, N.J., after an extensive battle with multiple sclerosis, first diagnosed in 1968, and, near the end, cancer. Ken came to Princeton from Lawrenceville. A member of Cannon Club, he majored in psychology and biology. After obtaining a master's degree, he spent a year traveling around the world, "working, playing, tennis, and freeloading." Eventually he settled down with "a wonderful English wife, a boy and a girl."

Ken worked with his father in a successful sporting goods business in Morristown, N.J., and devoted a lot of time to sports, especially hockey. One of his great passions to the end was golf. He was director of service for the National M.S. Society, over the years counseling hundreds of other M.S. victims, and was international coordinator for the Natl. Disabled Golfers Assn. He worked extensively with fundraising for Lawrenceville and supported Princeton in every way he could. We will especially remember Ken from Reunions and for the tremendous optimism he displayed despite his affliction.

Ken is survived by two children, Robinson Andrew (21) and Nicola Antoinette (19), and by his former wife, Antonia. To all his family, the Class, which has lost a courageous member, extends its most heartfelt condolences.

The Class of 1962

Darryl Terrence Pressley '79

DARRYL PRESSLEY died Oct. 22, 1990, in Washington, D.C.

Darryl attended Washington, D.C. public schools before enrolling at the Asheville School in N.C., from which he graduated as a merit scholar. At Asheville he was on the football and teams and was active in the chapel. At Princeton, Darryl was an economics major and a member of Ivy Club. He also contributed to the NASSAU LT and BUSINESS TODAY.

After graduation he worked for Merrill Lynch on Wall Street for six years. Despite a demanding job, he found time to do volunteer work with disadvantaged youth in N.Y. He next moved to Washington, D.C., where he was a consultant. He reviewed new product concepts and conducted patent research for the Natl. Idea Center and was a fundraiser and investment manager for the nonprofit Youth Policy Inst.

Education and helping others were important to Darryl, and he never lost sight of either's value. Even when in pain, he tried to comfort others. He will be remembered for his wit and keen intellect, as well as for his friendliness and caring nature.

Darryl is survived by his mother and father, grandmother, sister, and numerous other relatives. We send our sincerest condolences to his family.

The Class of 1979

Paco Axel Lagerstrom '42

PACO AXEL LAGERSTROM '42, professor emeritus of applied mathematics at Calif. Inst. of Technology, died Feb. 16, 1989, at Huntington Memorial Hospital in Pasadena. He was 74 years old. Prof. Lagerstrom was born at Oskarshamn, Sweden and earned the Swedish equivalents of both bachelor's (1935) and master's (1939) degrees at the Univ. of Stockholm. He received his Ph.D. in mathematics at Princeton in 1942. He served as an instructor in mathematics at Princeton (1941-1944) and as a research engineer at Bell Aircraft, Niagara Falls, N.Y. (1944-45). He was appointed research associate at CalTech in 1947 and was named professor in 1952. He also worked briefly as research aerodynamicist for Douglas Aircraft and as consultant for T.R.W. Inc. In 1960 he was awarded a Guggenheim fellowship and in 1960-61 served as visiting prof. of mathematics at the Univ. of Paris, France. His principal research interest lay in this field of aerodynamics of supersonic motion of aircraft and missiles. He was active in support of the fine arts, especially chamber music, in Southern Calif. through much of his adult life.

The Graduate Alumni

Edgar R. Stephens '51

EDGAR R. STEPHENS '51, professor emeritus of chemistry at U.C.-Riverside and environmental scientist, died Aug. 19, 1990, at the City of Hope, Duarte, Calif., of complications from leukemia. He was 65 years old. He received his B.S. (Tau Beta Pi) in chemistry from Carnegie Inst. of Technology in 1945 and his M.A. (Sigma Xi) and Ph.D. from Princeton. Early employment at Shawinigan Resins Corp., the Franklin Inst. (Philadelphia), and Scott Research Laboratories preceded his joining the Riverside faculty in 1963 and subsequent advancement to the rank of a full professor of environmental science. He joined the ranks of emeriti in 1989.

The focus of his professional career was the problem of air pollution, the creation of smog and studies to eliminate these hazards. His colleagues characterized him as "an innovative, first-class scientist. What he published had great impact on the world of air pollution science." He carried his concerns to local elementary schools with demonstration lectures to youngsters.

Deep sympathy is extended to his widow, Ann.

The Graduate Alumni

John David Schopp '54

JOHN DAVID SCHOPP '54, professor of astronomy at San Diego State Univ., died Nov. 9, 1988, at Kaiser-Permanente Hospital. He had sustained a severe heart attack and had been in a coma for two weeks before his death at age 62. Born in St. Joseph, Mo., he earned his undergraduate degree at Northwestern Univ. in 1949 and his Ph.D. in astronomy at Princeton in 1954. In 1962 he joined the faculty of San Diego State, where he remained until his death. During his tenure he also held for ten years the title of associate dean of the College of Sciences. He enjoyed the warm friendship and approbation of other faculty members and students alike and was referred to by a colleague as "the most popular professor among the students in the history of this department." His high standards of teaching and research were honored on several occasions and earned him distinction as a scientist as well as respect and affection as a pedagogue. Professor Schopp is survived by his widow, Fay, and two daughters.

The Graduate Alumni

Bruce Lloyd Reinhart '56

BRUCE LLOYD REINHART '56, professor of mathematics at the Univ. of Maryland, died of cancer at his home in University Park July 19, 1988. A native of Reading, Penn., he received his bachelor's degree (Phi Beta Kappa) from Lehigh Univ. and went on to earn an M.A. and Ph.D. in mathematics at Princeton. Subsequent to receiving his doctorate he taught briefly at Princeton and at the Univ. of Chicago. He was appointed to the mathematics faculty at Maryland in 1959 and taught there until his death. In 1965 he was promoted to the rank of full professor. During sabbatical leaves he had served as visiting professor at the Max Planck Inst. in Bonn, Germany, and at Peking Univ. in the People's Republic of China. Professor Reinhart was awarded both Fulbright and NATO fellowships and was honored on several occasions for his achievements in the field of topology. He was active as a layman in the Unitarian Church. Surviving are his wife, Virginia, three children, his mother, two brothers, and one sister.

The Graduate Alumni

James King Folsom '59

JAMES KING FOLSOM '59, age 54, linguist, author, and distinguished professor of English died May 3, 1989, at Boulder Community Hospital in Boulder, Colo. He earned his A.B. degree (Phi Beta Kappa) from Northwestern Univ. in 1955 and came to Princeton securing his Ph.D. in 1959. He then went to Yale, where he taught English. From Yale, his teaching career took him to Leeds Univ. in England and ultimately to the Univ. of Colorado in 1969. At Colorado he held numerous English department positions, including chairman, director of graduate studies, and director of creative writing. For a period of four years he also enjoyed the distinction of visiting professor of English at the American College of Greece in Athens. Professor Folsom authored several books including a translation from English to Japanese of his own work, THE AMERICAN WESTERN NOVEL.

Genuine sympathy is extended to his widow, his son Christopher, his daughter Elisabeth, his seven stepchildren, and his grandchild.

The Graduate Alumni

To all but a few,
it is still a very foreign car.

P E U G E O T
Beyond the obviousSM

1991 Peugeot 405 models are intelligently priced between $15,490 and $21,990. MSRP. Excludes tax, title, options, registration and destination charges. In Canada call 1-416-566-1900.

Europeans have long appreciated the remarkable engineering and world-class styling of a Peugeot.

Yet, here in America, a Peugeot 405 is a rare pleasure. Perhaps because a full appreciation of one requires the kind of thorough scrutiny few car buyers exercise.

The 405's patented 8-valve shock absorbers, for example, are far from obvious, yet they contribute to the renowned Peugeot road feel that is immediately apparent. Two densities of foam are a subtle but effective way to eliminate seat springs and the road vibrations they transmit. And less obvious still is the sophisticated composite barrier beneath the roof that absorbs road noise.

But you'll quickly understand the value of every aspect of the Peugeot 405 with closer scrutiny. For the dealer nearest you call 1-800-447-4700.

PRINCETON

ALUMNI WEEKLY

APRIL 17, 1991

Woodrow Wilson Award, Madison Medal, and Maclean Fellowship Nominations Sought

The Alumni Council and the selection committees for the Woodrow Wilson Award, Madison Medal, and Maclean Fellowship invite your recommendations for 1992.

The Woodrow Wilson Award, presented at Alumni Day, is designed to recognize an alumnus typifying the motto "Princeton in the nation's service."

Recipients over the years have included alumni from education, medicine, banking, the arts, and government. The most recent winners include William W. Bradley '65, Frank C. Carlucci '52, T. Berry Brazelton, Jr. '40, James M. Stewart '32, and Laurance S. Rockefeller '32.

The Madison Medal is conferred by the Association of Princeton Graduate Alumni each year on the alumnus or alumna of the Graduate School, who has had a distinguished career, advanced the cause of graduate education, or achieved a record of outstanding public service.

Recipients over the years have included J. Hugh MacLennan *35, Robert F. Goheen '40, *48, Lyman Spitzer, Jr. *38, William J. Crowe, Jr. *65, and Steven Weinberg *57.

The Maclean Fellowship involves alumni who have made important contributions to American society, either in their careers or in service to the community, in the intellectual and residential life of the campus for brief periods of time during the academic year. Maclean Fellows have included William D. Ruckelshaus '55, William J. Crowe, Jr. *65, John Gregory Dunne '54, Susan M. Wolf '75, and Michael E. Smith '65.

Although the selection committees of alumni and University representatives will review all suggestions, they have generally sought those who are still active in their careers, and have not normally considered trustees still serving or alumni who have received honorary degrees from Princeton.

Reply to: Award Selection Committees, The Alumni Council
P. O. Box 291, Princeton, New Jersey 08544-0291

I would like to recommend the following individual(s) for 1992

Name _____ Class/Dept. _____ Award: _____

Name _____ Class/Dept. _____ Award: _____

Name _____ Class/Dept. _____ Award: _____

Name _____ Class/Dept. _____ Award: _____

Submitted by _____ Class/Dept. _____ Date: _____

PRINCETON

ALUMNI WEEKLY

CONTINUING THE ALUMNI PRINCETONIAN, FOUNDED IN 1894

FEATURE

- 8 THE GREAT REBELLION OF 1807
*In Student Riots of the Jeffersonian Era,
Princeton Grappled with Familiar Issues—
Generational Conflict and In Loco Parentis*
by Aims McGuinness '90

DEPARTMENTS

- 3 LETTERS
- 5 PRINCETON NOTEBOOK
*Former Provost Neil Rudenstine '56
Named New President of Harvard;
Vice-Provost Janet McKay '74
To Head Mills College*
- 7 ON THE CAMPUS
Impostor Student Leaves Legacy of Anger, Sympathy, and Amusement
by Matthew T. Henshon '91
- 14 BOOKS
- 16 SPORTS
Men's Basketball Bows to Villanova in N.C.A.A. Tournament
- 24 CLASS NOTES
- 40 MEMORIALS

On the Cover

The emergence of crocuses in Prospect Garden reminds us that another spring has arrived in Princeton. Photo by Stacy M. Wszola.

FROM THE ARCHIVES

It began innocently enough on the balmy evening of May 6, 1963, with a few students throwing toilet paper and firecrackers in the Henry-1901 courtyard. But the rambunctiousness quickly escalated into a major riot as undergraduates rampaged through the campus and onto Nassau Street, where they started a bonfire and threw up a barricade of bicycle racks. When the driver of a Volkswagen honked in protest, the mob picked up his car and moved it, occupants and all, onto the Palmer Square sidewalk. Later, President Goheen denounced the "unhappy madness" and assessed all undergraduates a fee to pay for the $5,000 in damaged property. Forty-seven students were suspended for taking part in the riot.

J. I. MERRITT '66, Editor

ANDREW C. MYTELKA '85, Managing Editor
NUALA O'CONNOR '89, Associate Editor
D. W. MILLER '89, Staff Writer

STACY M. WSZOLA, Art Director
R. T. HOWELL, Production Manager
LORRAINE DONEKER, Graphic Assistant

NANCY S. MACMILLAN, Business Manager
LOLLY O'BRIEN, Advertising Director

BOARD OF EDITORIAL DIRECTION

EDWARD R. WEIDLEIN '68, Chairman
LISA B. BELKIN GELB '82 • CHRISTOPHER V. CONNELL '71
LONDON Y. JONES '66 • ELLIOTT D. LEE '74 • '77
PATRICIA H. MARKS '72 • JOHN A. MCPHEE '53

PUBLICATION BOARD

DOROTHY L. BEDFORD '78, Chairman
ROBERT K. DURKEE '69 • ROBY HARRINGTON III '51
WALTER H. LIPPINCOTT, Jr. '60 • PETER O. PRICE '62
PETER G. SMITH '46 • DANIEL N. WHITE '65

NATIONAL ADVERTISING REPRESENTATIVE

ROBERT F. SENNOTT, JR.
Ivy League Magazine Network
254 Fifth Ave., New York, NY 10001 • (212) 684-5603

LOCAL ADVERTISING/PRINCETON EXCHANGE

LOLLY O'BRIEN (609) 258-4886

The Princeton Alumni Weekly is an independent magazine supported by alumni class subscriptions and by paid advertising. Its purpose is to record news of the alumni and at the same time to review without partiality the achievements and problems of the administration, the faculty, and the student body of Princeton University. The views expressed in the Alumni Weekly are those of signed contributors or the editor and do not necessarily represent official positions of the university.

PUBLISHED BY

PRINCETON ALUMNI PUBLICATIONS
41 William St., Princeton, NJ 08540
Telephone (609) 258-4885
TWX 510-685-2306 UNIV PRSS PRIN • Fax (609) 258-6305

ELECTRONIC PAW BBS: (609) 258-3602

Materials can be transmitted to our offices via telecommunications, using the upload facility in the file-transfer section of the Electronic PAW computer bulletin board system. Its protocols are 300/1200/2400 baud, eight data bits, one stop bit, and no parity. It is online twenty-four hours a day.

PRINCETON ALUMNI WEEKLY (ISSN 0149-9270)

Vol. 91, No. 14, April 17, 1991
Printed by William Byrd Press, Richmond, Va. Annual subscription $19.50 (foreign postage $5 extra); single copies $1.50. All orders must be paid in advance. Copyright © 1991 Princeton Alumni Publications. All rights reserved. Reproduction in whole or in part without permission is prohibited. Second-class postage paid at Princeton, N.J., and at additional mailing offices.

POSTMASTER: Send address changes to PAW Address Changes, 3175 Princeton Pike, Lawrenceville, NJ 08648.

Cathedral Village

Security Has Many Meanings...

At Cathedral Village, Security is more than just the feeling of safety that our 24-hour Security Force provides. There is so much more...

- ...We are an established, financially sound, and fully Accredited Continuing Care Retirement Community.
- ...We have an exceptional, caring staff to serve all of our residents.
- ...Experienced Health Care professionals are always available, if needed.
- ...Security is knowing that friends and companionship are close by, yet privacy is respected.

At this time we are adding 32 two-bedroom apartments. These are luxury apartments with a separate dining room adjacent to the kitchen. We are currently accepting applications for admission in the early summer of 1991.

Come see for yourself all that is meant by Security at Cathedral Village. Call now to arrange a visit with one of our counselors.

Cathedral Village

600 East Cathedral Road
Philadelphia, Pennsylvania 19128
(215) 487-1300

Cathedral Village is a Nonprofit, Nondenominational Continuing Care Retirement Community Accredited by the Continuing Care Accreditation Commission
Sponsored by the American Association of Homes for the Aging.

The Hogue Hoax

I was amused to read in The New York Times and in the April 3 PAW about the Princeton undergraduate who deceived the admission office about his past, and who turned out to be a fugitive from justice wanted by authorities in Utah for violating parole.

Reading the tale of "Alexi Indris-Santana," the name adopted by the young man, James Hogue, made me chuckle for several reasons. To begin with, I thought back to my dismay and disillusion when my son was not accepted by Princeton. I thought, "They have room for a convicted criminal, but not for my son!" My son's S.A.T.s and grades were similar to those claimed by Mr. Indris-Santana. One difference is that my son's residence was a major metropolitan city on the East Coast (Washington, D.C.), while the young man who deceived Princeton claimed to be from a ranch outside a small town in Utah! Another difference is that, unlike my son, the former Princeton undergraduate claimed to have an "oddball" background: he lacked a high-school diploma, but submitted what Dean of Admission Fred Hargadon termed a "very impressive" reading list as evidence of his qualifications. (These same qualifications did not impress Yale or Harvard, which reportedly turned him down.)

Aside from the bitterness I feel toward Princeton for rejecting my son, I have long thought the effort of the admission office to achieve geographical balance, as well as its preference for applicants of unusual backgrounds, to be misguided; Princeton's continued greatness does not depend on such foolish criteria. In fact, these criteria, or at least the geographical determinants, really amount to quotas under different names. They are also patently unfair to qualified alumni sons and daughters (and others with just ordinary high suitability) who are denied admission so that Princeton can claim some sort of balance within its undergraduate classes.

When I wrote to President Shapiro to express my dismay that my son had not been accepted by Princeton, he replied that, before he became president, his daughter (now a medical doctor!) had similarly been rejected by Princeton. He emphatically rejected my argument that quotas were at work when I contended that if my son had been a woman from Iowa, he would have been accepted. The rest of his letter was well-meaning boilerplate.

The case of Mr. Indris-Santana only confirms my view: If you come from an unusual place and have an oddball background, you have a better chance of admission than an ordinarily qualified alumni child.

THEODORE J. JACOBS '55
Washington, D.C.

As my wife and I read with increasing amusement, as well as chagrin, the story of Mr. James A. Hogue, formerly in our daughter's Class of 1993, we were struck with several points of both similarity and dissimilarity between the two of them. The similarities are that both Mr. Hogue and our daughter (1) had A's and B's in high school (or so Hogue claimed), (2) were accepted by other colleges as well as by Princeton, but chose the latter, and (3) were aided in admission by a strong record in athletics. The dissimilarities are that our daughter (1) submitted a full application folder after a good deal of effort, (2) is not attending college primarily in order to secure a suitable spouse (as Hogue is reported to have said), (3) acts her age, and (4) is not a con artist.

Though our daughter is probably not as inventive as Mr. Hogue (Hoax?) and may not be so well equipped to add to that elusive quality called diversity at Princeton, we find reason to be just as proud of her.

C. WEBSTER WHEELOCK '60 '67
New York, N.Y.

Perhaps anyone can be fooled by a skilled con artist like Mr. Hogue, but if press reports are true, the admission office didn't even ask for his transcript or for proof of high-school graduation. That really demeans the admission process, especially in regard to those students who fail to get admitted because their high-school record is viewed as insufficient.

HENRY J. OECHLER, JR. '68
New York, N.Y.

Deacons Identified

The "From the Archives" photograph in your February 6 issue shows four chapel deacons with Dr. Martin Luther King, Jr. They are, from left, Charles Aubrey '60 (shown shaking hands with Dr. King), Jeffrey Brown '60, and Don Morrow '60. The bespectacled undergraduate in the bow tie sitting next to Dr. King is John McConnell '61.

I was interested that the photo is from the Newark News, a paper that is no longer with us and is still sorely missed in New Jersey. As you stated, the provider of the photo, Ernest Gordon, was dean of the chapel at the time the photo was taken. He is a man of enormous moral character, and the sound of his rich Scots voice still echoes in my memory.

In those days, we were required to attend chapel services during at least half the weeks of each semester. I also recall hearing Bishop James Pike preach during my undergraduate years, and later, during my period of instruction for the Episcopal Church, I read his books.

Time in the chapel during the late fifties and during that part of 1960 preceding our graduation was well spent. I'm not sure I appreciated it as much then as I do now.

Too soon old and too late smart.

RICHARD B. MCGLYNN '60
Jersey City, N.J.

Keep Senior Thesis

In response to Professor Lawrence Stone's proposal that the mandatory senior thesis be abolished (PAW, March 20), I would argue that it should remain a requirement, because (in Professor Stone's own words) "focusing on a single problem, collecting and sifting data, and producing seventy-five or more coherent pages of their findings" is a valuable part of anyone's intellectual training. Even if you never again go through such an exercise, it makes you appreciate the work involved in scholarship, and it helps you judge the validity of information and the method by which it was obtained.

An analogy may help. I was exposed to six years of piano instruction, yet I am absolutely no pianist at all. I did not begin to sing in choruses and choirs until I was forty-four; although I have been making up for lost time ever since, after many years I am still only a very mediocre chorister. Nevertheless, these experiences have given me a basis for evaluating and appreciating what goes into excellence when I observe the finger technique of a pianist like Svyatoslav Richter or the breath control of singers like Luciano Pavarotti and Frank Sinatra.

Likewise, in intellectual matters, even if someone has done a shoddy job with his or her thesis, one still gains from the firsthand experience of having written it. By contrast, seminar discussions and short papers, however stimulating, are usually based on secondhand materials, so that the student is denied the irreplaceable experience of coming to grips with original sources and having to analyze and formulate one's findings.

Because of the required senior thesis, the Princeton A.B. has been the functional equivalent of an A.M. from almost any other institution. It would be unfortunate if Princeton were to lose this primacy.

ROBERT A. HALL, JR. '31
Ithaca, N.Y.

"Dead" Giveaway

It is ironic that, in an issue (PAW, March 6) containing several letters on the risks of smoking, you elected to comment that a Princeton professor could be identified because the presence of a pipe was a "dead" giveaway: an infelicitous but all too accurate choice of words.

JON MATTHEW FARBER '73, M.D.
Alexandria, Va.

“One of my colleagues—Professor Victor Brombert—routinely goes to lunch with students, visits precepts, and is a fellow at Rockefeller College—all while maintaining his reputation as an exemplary scholar. . .

“Other Princeton professors spend evenings in informal settings with students. A commitment to both teaching and high quality scholarship is a special characteristic of Princeton faculty,” says Caryl G. Emerson, professor of Slavic languages and literatures.

“The Princeton faculty-student ratio—roughly one to eight—is superb and is one characteristic that distinguishes this University from other high-quality institutions. But it isn’t just the ratio per se that is excellent, but the nonnegotiable one-on-one time spent with every undergraduate on independent work and the senior theses. In addition, most of us participate in University service, advise both undergraduate and graduate students, and teach a large number of hours. The quality of the school really inspires that standard . . .

“A good faculty-student ratio is especially important in the linguistic, sound, and spatial arts. In learning languages, music, and architecture, students need a high degree of individualized instruction—especially early in their studies, before they decide to major in the discipline. This kind of attention is extremely important in developing the skills properly . . .”

* * *

Your Annual Giving gift helps us maintain our low faculty-student ratio and the other traits that make Princeton special, such as the preceptorial system and faculty-supervised independent work.

Your gift helps us compete with large major universities, while preserving our smaller, more intimate scale. It is alumni—like you—whose giving ensures that Princeton continues to lead its rivals both in teaching and research. Won’t you do what you can to help?

Annual Giving
pays for quality at Princeton

Former Provost Rudenstine Named New President of Harvard

SOME ALUMNI will find it difficult to stifle a gloat over Old Nassau's latest coup: the appointment of Neil L. Rudenstine '56 as the twenty-sixth president of Harvard University. A Princeton man in the driver's seat in Cambridge! But stifle we must.

After all, Rudenstine, a provost under former president William G. Bowen '58 and currently the executive vice-president of the Andrew W. Mellon Foundation, has Crimson credentials, too. He received his Ph.D. in English at Harvard in 1964, and taught Renaissance literature there for the next four years. Yet in choosing Rudenstine, one of the dark-horse candidates for the post, America's oldest university overlooked its hidebound preference for presidents with Harvard College degrees and in-house administrative experience.

In one respect, at least, his appointment represents a return to tradition. Rudenstine, who still teaches at Princeton (a freshman seminar on Shakespeare), will restore a humanistic outlook to Harvard's highest post. When he takes office, on July 1, he will bring to an end the twenty-year tenure of Derek C. Bok, a graduate and former dean of Harvard Law School. Rudenstine reportedly won out over three other finalists: Martin Feldstein, a Harvard economist; Philip Leder, a geneticist at Harvard Medical School; and Gerhard Casper, the University of Chicago's provost.

After a ten-month search that threatened to deadlock Harvard's search committee, news of Rudenstine's appointment came in a flurry of leaks to the media. The Harvard Crimson reported in late March that Rudenstine had won the approval of the committee, and was to be confirmed in April at a regular meeting of Harvard's board of overseers (trustees). After the story broke, however, a meeting was hastily called in New York City and his selection made official.

Early signs suggest that Rudenstine's Harvard will bear a Princeton stamp. In an interview with The New York Times, he said he would likely create the position of provost to help him oversee academic affairs, a move that would bring Harvard's cherished system of eleven semi-autonomous schools—including the undergraduate college—under more centralized fiscal oversight. Rudenstine later said that in lean times such as the present, "a real premium is put on planning carefully, and allocating resources in line with your priorities." He also pledged to improve undergraduate studies, long a hallmark of Princeton's educational policies. Characteristically, however, he has promised to act in accord with administrators and faculty members.

Friends and acquaintances describe his leadership style as soft-spoken and conciliatory. He has already sworn off using the Harvard presidency as a "bully pulpit," though he will address national issues of higher education. "I am good at listening and gentle persuasion," he told the Times. "Instead of throwing rocks and bricks around, I prefer using one's voice in a civilized way."

At fifty-six, Rudenstine's youthful appearance somehow sustains the aura of a prodigy. The son of a Russian immigrant and a first-generation Italian-American, Rudenstine graduated summa cum laude from Princeton in 1956. After three years at Oxford as a Rhodes Scholar and a stint in the army, Rudenstine spent eight years at Harvard as a graduate student, an instructor, and then a junior professor. Returning to Princeton in 1968, he served four years as dean of students and five years as dean of the college before becoming President Bowen's provost in 1977. Rudenstine's administrative tenure spanned twenty years of profound transformation, including the coeducation of the school, the introduction of the residential-college system, and, in the early 1980s, the raising of $410 million in the Campaign for Princeton.

He earned a reputation as an empathetic

Neil L.
Rudenstine
'56

and effective administrator, and long before 1987, when Bowen announced that he was moving on to head the Mellon Foundation, Rudenstine was presumed to be next in line for Bowen's job. Yet he refused to be considered, as he had long insisted he would. He chose instead to accompany Bowen to the Mellon Foundation, one of the country's largest foundations that benefit educational programs. As the number-two man there, he oversaw the financing of museums, university libraries, and scholarly grants. His financial experience at Mellon and Princeton was undoubtedly attractive to Harvard, which is suffering a severe budget deficit and is planning a $2 billion fundraising effort.

No. 3 Nassau Hall, the office of Princeton's provost, seems to gestate Ivy League presidents. Rudenstine now joins Bowen and Sheldon Hackney, the president of Penn, in that lineage. Well, as they say, if you can't beat 'em, lead 'em.

Vice-Provost McKay to Head Women's College in California

JANET H. MCKAY '74, the university's vice-provost, was named the twelfth president of Mills College in March. Mills, a 139-year-old women's college in Oakland, California, gained notoriety last year, when students and alumnae blocked a proposal by its board of trustees to begin admitting men. McKay will assume the post on July 15, the same day that Princeton's new provost, Hugo F. Sonnenschein, will succeed Paul Benacerraf '52 '60. McKay, who earned her Ph.D. in linguistics, will also teach.

McKay came to the university in the summer of 1988 as associate provost from the University of Maryland at College Park, where she had been assistant to the chancellor. One of the highest-ranking women in the administration, McKay serves as secretary of the budget-setting Priorities Committee and executive secretary of the Standing Committee on the Status of Women. Last May, President Shapiro promoted her to the newly created position of vice-provost, in which capacity she bears major responsibility for managing the university's financial resources and Where Are They?

Where's who?

All the Triangle alumni! Surely there must be more than we have on our mailing list!

Well, I guess so . . .

FIND THEM!

You're kidding.

We have news we must get to them. Dig them out!

Oh, come on. What do you want me to do, take an ad in the P.A.W.?

YES!!

Dear Triangle Club members, non-members, helpers, hangers-on, and associates of any ilk and all generations:

The year 1991 marks the 100th Anniversary of the Triangle Club. We have much to tell you of the events planned for this year, but are afraid many of you are lost (a common occurrence). If you have not been receiving our semi-annual newsletter, Triangle, you are probably among this tragic group.

If you are, please, by all means, send a postcard, now, to:

PRINCETON TRIANGLE CLUB
CENTENNIAL COMMITTEE
15 West 43 Street
New York, NY 10036

. . . and tell us where you are.

You'll be very glad you did. Thank you.

use of campus space.

Mills is one of four colleges to appoint Princeton alumni to head their administrations in the past year. In addition to Neil Rudenstine at Harvard, Alfred Bloom '67 was recently named president of Swarthmore College, and Chang-Lin Tien '59 became chancellor of the University of California at Berkeley last July.

Collusion Probe Prompts Schools To Abandon Financial-Aid Meeting

PRINCETON and the other members of the New England Overlap Group, which meets annually to share financial-aid information and adjust aid packages to students admitted to more than one of the schools, canceled this year's meeting. The group's decision came in response to the Justice Department's ongoing investigation into possible collusion by top private colleges in setting their tuitions, financial-aid awards, and faculty salaries.

The antitrust division of the Justice Department launched its probe in the summer of 1989, requesting financial records dating back to 1985 from at least fifty-seven expensive private colleges, of which twenty-three, including the Ivy League schools, belong to the Overlap Group. The schools have never admitted to any wrongdoing, but in a press release Princeton acknowledges that the Justice Department has "expressed concern" about the Overlap meetings, which began about thirty-five years ago. They canceled this year's meeting "as a sign of good faith."

Colleges such as Princeton maintain that sharing information at the Overlap meetings helps ensure that financial-aid awards reflect students' true needs and do not force students to decide where to matriculate based on financial considerations. Financial-aid applicants often receive nearly identical offers from each of the Overlap schools to which they have been admitted.

The point of the investigation has been enveloped in secrecy. The Justice Department has not announced which activities it believes violate antitrust laws or when it will complete its investigation. (Thomas H. Wright, Jr. '62, a vice-president of the university, estimates that Princeton has so far spent $400,000 in staff time and legal fees complying with requests for documents.) The targeted institutions can only infer that they are suspected of colluding to keep tuition artificially high and financial aid artificially low. Tuition fees at many of the top colleges have been rising faster than the rate of inflation for several decades, yet they have remained remarkably in step with each other. The schools contend that the parity results from free-market competition.

Lawyers for some of the schools have been meeting with officials from the Justice Department to try to settle the case, with no admissions of guilt and before any charges are filed. On March 21, The Wall Street Journal reported that the Justice Department had rebuffed a proposal from some of the targeted universities. Citing anonymous sources at several of the colleges, the paper reported that the schools were willing to permanently abandon certain practices, such as taking part in the Overlap Group, in exchange for a halt to the investigation. Robert K. Durkee '69, Princeton's vice-president for public affairs, said in an interview that Princeton has not been a party to any recent negotiations with the Justice Department, and that he understood the "proposal" to be one of several intended merely as starting points for discussion. In recent months, he said, Princeton has allowed other schools to take the lead in negotiations, but may reenter them at any time, particularly if the Justice Department decides to name Princeton in a formal complaint.

According to Durkee, the demise of the Overlap Group could hamper many colleges that conduct needs-blind admissions. If incomplete information about students' finances leads universities to offer more aid than students need and permits savvy students to use a high award from one school to bid up offers from others, he said, many colleges may not be able to continue offering full financial aid. "There's a very simple equation here," Durkee said. "If you have a finite scholarship budget, when you spend a dollar on a student above need, then that dollar is going to come from a student whose full need will not be met, or from additional resources—and that means some increase in tuition—or . . . from some other program. There are no other options." For now, he added, Princeton has ample resources to preserve needs-blind admissions, but few colleges are as fortunate.

In a related matter, Roger Kinsepp, a student at Wesleyan University, is seeking to file a class-action lawsuit against Princeton and a dozen other schools on behalf of a hundred thousand students he claims were hurt by the supposed collusion. This suit has been on hold for some time, while the courts settle a dispute over jurisdiction. □

Impostor Student Leaves Legacy of Anger, Sympathy, and Amusement

BEGINNING in the fall of 1989, when Alexi Indris-Santana '93 arrived on the campus as a freshman, his unusual background inspired many stories. Upon meeting Santana, students would listen wide-eyed to his tales and then repeat them, sometimes with embellishment, to their friends. An orphan, word had it, he was completely self-educated. Lived on a ranch since the age of fifteen. Trained for track by running barefoot through the Rocky Mountains. Raised by wolves! Nothing, it seemed, was beyond this man-child, this romantic savage from the Wild West. He harked back to a time when men born to unfortunate circumstances pulled themselves up by their bootstraps and made something of their lives. Alexi had done everything, it seemed, and it was difficult to keep the "truth" of his legend separate from the exaggerations. Or so it seemed.

But, as the world now knows—much to the chagrin of the admission office—it all was too good to be true. Alexi Indris-Santana was in fact James Arthur Hogue. He was not a nineteen-year-old boy-wonder but a thirty-one-year-old ex-con with a shady past, a fugitive who had broken parole in Utah. After Princeton Borough police arrested him, it became, paradoxically, easy to separate truth from fiction: the whole story was a hoax.

Within a few days after the story broke in the local media—it was front-page news in the Trenton Times and The Trentonian—the national media arrived. Hogue made it into People magazine and Fox Television's A Current Affair, and all the other sensationalists took notice.

As word of the arrest spread through the campus, many people re-formed their opinions of the sophomore. Andrew Robling '92, Hogue's lab partner in Geology 316 (Structural Geology and Tectonics), was in the lab with him on the Tuesday in February when the police came for him. At first, Robling thought that the arrest must be a mistake, but when he heard Hogue's history and the charges against him, Robling said he "was really surprised—because he's such a shy, quiet kid—and almost excited." Reflecting on the time he had known Hogue, Robling remembered one clue that might have tipped him off: with his receding hairline, Hogue "always looked older" than nineteen.

Yet Robling bears no bitterness toward Hogue. Instead, Robling said, "it's almost impressive that he could concoct a fabrication good enough to get him into the university. He did nothing to hurt me in any way, and I have no bad feelings toward him."

Some students who did not even know Hogue before his arrest also were sad to see his stunt fail. "I feel sympathy and a little bit of admiration for his willingness," one senior told me, "but most of all I feel bad for the kid himself."

Another senior said, "it was too bad that he couldn't pull it off. It seems that he was trying to start a new life, and with the exception of lying to get in here, he seemed to have put his past behind him." But this same senior also wondered if Hogue, who reportedly received very high grades, adhered to the university's Honor Code in taking examinations and writing papers. In retrospect, that seems a reasonable question.

Many students, however, felt that the obvious dishonesty of Hogue's college application and his denial of a spot in the Class of 1993 to a more deserving applicant (not to mention the $40,000 in financial aid he received) meant that any punishment would be well earned. "I feel no compassion for him whatsoever," more than one undergraduate said. "He'll deserve whatever he gets."

Furthermore, no supporter of Hogue has been able to fully prove a "Jean Valjean" theory. If Hogue was using his matriculation at Princeton as a chance at starting his life over, wouldn't it have made sense for him to keep a low profile and blend in with the other students, rather than to weave his fantastic (and widely circulated) tales and continue his relatively prominent career on the track team?

A majority of people on the campus, however, seemed to take a distant, almost bemused view of the whole affair. Most students enjoyed seeing the admission office—indeed, the whole administration—squirm under the spotlight of the national media. One junior wondered "how often this kind of thing happens." Dean of Admission Fred A. Hargadon admitted that his office usually receives one or two bogus applications every year, but claimed that they are usually easily spotted.

Signs and T-shirts emblazoned with "Free James Hogue"—a slogan reminiscent of sixties-era demands on behalf of Huey Newton, the Chicago Seven, or Nelson Mandela—appeared quickly. During timeouts at the men's basketball game against Loyola Marymount University, the huge crowd of students at Jadwin Gym interspersed this chant with rounds of "Ivy Champs" and disparaging remarks about the unfortunate L.M.U. players.

As for Hogue's friends, the whole episode left them shaking their heads. Pete Hessler '92, another member of the track team and a self-described "good friend" of Hogue's, offered that "most of the guys on the team who know him sympathize with him. He was a very popular member of the team, and not just because he was a good runner." Thinking back to the time he had spent with Hogue over the last year and a half, and remembering occasions when a tale didn't quite add up, he said, "a lot of the stuff in his story was very vague, and it was not the type of thing you wanted to ask about. A lot of it had to do with his family, and since that was a sore spot, it was not something you would check up on." Hessler also found some of Hogue's claims to be almost incredible: "to do all the things that he had claimed to have done by the age of nineteen seemed very difficult." But, said Hessler, "I felt that I was dealing with an extraordinary person."

—Matthew T. Henshon '91
Matt Henshon, a senior from Wilbraham, Massachusetts, is majoring in the Woodrow Wilson School and recently concluded his collegiate basketball career, earning his fourth varsity letter.

THE GREAT REBELLION

*In Student Riots of the Jeffersonian Era,
Princeton Grappled with Familiar Issues—
Generational Conflict and In Loco Parentis*

By Aims McGuinness '90

Digitized by Google

WHEN PRESIDENT SHAPIRO arrived at work one morning in April 1990, he found twenty-nine students waiting for him in his office. They had come to protest the administration's treatment of SHARE, Princeton's counseling and education office on sexual harassment and assault. They handed him a petition and declared that they would not leave until he satisfied their demands. The president declined to respond and left. Thirty-two hours later, the students filed out of Nassau Hall. Shapiro had refused to give in. "This is not the way to get things done," he said. But the protesters were unrepentant. "Since their way didn't work, we had to do it our way," one explained.

Sound like the sixties? True, Americans remember those years as the quintessential era of student-led protests, on issues ranging from war to race, from poverty to gender. But student unrest has been a facet of collegiate life since the beginning of American higher education. Indeed, no period of revolt shook the nation's colleges harder than the wave of riots that struck during the first decade of the nineteenth century. And of those colleges, none earned a greater reputation for rebellious students than Princeton.

Well before the Revolution, student pranks and practical jokes were commonplace at the College of New Jersey. Chafing under rigid codes of conduct and courses of study that reflected the college's strict Presbyterian mission, students made nuisances of themselves by carousing drunkenly in town and making weird noises in the chapel, by exploding small bombs and overturning outhouses. One undergraduate of the early 1770s catalogued some of the preferred high jinks:

... writing witty pointed anonymous Papers, in Songs, Confessions, Wills, Soliloquies, Proclamations, Advertisements &c—Picking from the neighbourhood now & then a plump fat Hen or Turkey for the private entertainment of the Club "instituted for inventing & practising several new kinds of mischief in a secret polite Manner"—Parading bad Women—Burning Curse-John—Darting Sun-Beams upon the Town-People Reconnoitering Houses in the Town, & ogling Women with the Telescope—Making Squibs, & other frightful compositions with Gun-Powder, & lighting them in the Rooms of timorous Boys, & new comers.

This mischief was apolitical, meant more for amusement than subversion. But with the coming of the Revolution, disobedience by students—both their methods and the ways in which they justified their acts—would take on new political meanings.

Hundreds of young men interrupted their studies to take up arms in the colonies' struggle against England. But in contrast to 1989's uprisings in Eastern Europe and China, no anti-imperialist or pro-democracy movements arose in the early 1770s among students in the American colonies. On the contrary, newspapers of the time accused students of self-absorption and foppery. John Trumbull, a tutor at Yale, lambasted their frivolousness in a poem entitled "The Progress of Dulness," which featured two shameful young scholars named "Tom Brainless" and "Dick Hairbrain."

Princeton students of the early 1770s would have bristled at the suggestion that they lacked patriotism. Of the 355 men who made up the classes of 1769 to 1783, only five can be identified as avowed Loyalists. The American Whig and Clisosophic societies provided a forum for furious debates and impassioned orations championing the rights of the colonists. At the commencement of 1765, students wore garments of American-made cloth to protest British taxation and to show their disdain for "those articles of superfluity and luxury that have almost beggared us," as one commentator put it. They did the same in 1770 to demonstrate their support for the "non-importation agreements," a loosely organized boycott of goods imported from England.

This patriotism also had its violent side. James Madison, in a letter written in 1770, a year before he graduated, described how Princeton students had waylaid a messenger on his way from New York to Philadelphia with a letter urging merchants to betray the boycott. The vigilante students seized the man as he passed the campus, and while Nassau Hall's bell tolled solemnly, a public hangman hired for the purpose burned the messenger's traitorous document in a great bonfire.

No one seems to have been punished for this incident. Nor did the college's president, John Witherspoon, apparently mind much when in 1774 students commemorated the Boston Tea Party by setting the college's supply of tea on fire. In 1772, he wrote that "the spirit of liberty" sometimes led to "outrage and sedition," but he seemed only mildly perturbed by these occasional lapses. In this respect, he reflected a widespread tolerance in the colonies for rowdiness that took British tyranny as its ostensible target. As a contemporary member of the Harvard Corporation remarked, students sometimes reached such heights of exaltation that "it has been difficult for the Tutors to keep them within due bounds." Still, he explained, the tutors were "fearful of giving too great a check to a disposition, which may, hereafter fill the country with patriots; and choose to leave it to age and experience to check their ardor."

Nassau Hall as it appeared before the fire of 1802. The President's House (now Maclean House) is at right. Jonathan Fisher painted the scene in 1807 based on a print from 1764.

The forces of order were led by President Samuel Stanhope Smith 1769 (top) and trustees Elias Boudinot (middle) and Richard Stockton, Jr. 1779 (bottom).

Patriotic Princeton students found inspiration in their president. Reverend Witherspoon, who later signed the Declaration of Independence as a member of the Continental Congress, was an articulate proponent of the colonists' cause. His sermons to undergraduates offered thoughts like the following: "We must obey and submit to [rulers] always, till corruption becomes intolerable. . . . Dominion . . . can be acquired justly only one way, viz. by consent." According to this and other theories of the day, revolt was a natural response to illegitimate or overbearing authority. In the 1770s, students refrained from experimenting with the implications of these theories for relations between themselves and their college superiors. But thirty years later, such restraint would be lacking on the campus.

IN PART BECAUSE OF PRINCETON'S DEVOTION TO THE American cause, the Revolution was not kind to the college. Classes more or less ceased soon after the war began, and successive occupations by British and American troops—not to mention the Battle of Princeton—left Nassau Hall in ruins. In 1781, Witherspoon managed to officially reopen the college, and by 1783 Nassau Hall was sufficiently restored to briefly host the Continental Congress and serve as the nation's seat of government. All this solemnity did nothing to deaden the students' high spirits: to the end of the century, undergraduates twitted their teachers pretty much as they had before the war. Deprived of British tyranny by the victorious Revolution, they found local targets for their malice—bombs exploded outside tutors' doors, barnyard animals lounged inexplicably in the chapel. As the century rumbled to a close, however, developments both here and abroad led to distinctly different relations between students and their elders at Princeton.

The 1790s were turbulent years for Americans. Acrimonious disputes between Republicans and Federalists, tests of the central government's power like the Whiskey Rebellion, and international incidents like the XYZ Affair contributed to political instability and national insecurity. Sharp debate over the bloody course of the French Revolution reflected some Americans' ambivalence about the liberties and freedoms unleashed by their own Revolution. Widespread fear about "Jacobins," "Illuminati," and other godless intriguers inspired passage in 1798 of the Alien and Sedition Acts, which the Federalist-dominated government used to silence outspoken Republicans and radical undesirables.

The staunchly Federalist trustees of the College of New Jersey watched the world beyond Princeton with trepidation and, after the election of Thomas Jefferson as President in 1800, with downright fear. The dignified Samuel Stanhope Smith 1769, who had succeeded Witherspoon in 1795, was disturbed by the egalitarian tendencies of the Republicans and warned his students against "the spirit of equality . . . carried to an extreme." Elias Boudinot, a former president of the Continental Congress and Princeton's most prominent trustee, became obsessed with Thomas Paine, whom he feared would corrupt America's youth with his deist philosophy and his advocacy of what Boudinot considered excessive democracy. By 1805, Boudinot's anxiety had become so great that he retired from politics for a second career as a crusader against irreligion.

In this atmosphere of political reaction and religious resurgence, President Smith and the trustees saw the work of "jacobinic & antireligious principles" in mischief that, before the Revolution, Witherspoon would have attributed to youthful enthusiasm. Students, for their part, artfully acted out their elders' nightmares. In 1802, Smith reported in a letter to a friend that subversives had "celebrated a triumph over the Faculty by breaking into the Presbyterian church, removing the Bible and burning it." An alumnus of the Class of 1806 later remembered that "infidelity was very popular through the United States" during his college years, and that the leader of his class was an "infidel and avowed his creed on all occasions. Godwin's Political Justice [a radical manifesto] was his Bible."

In 1800, students struck the first in a series of blows that would, literally and figuratively, shake Nassau Hall to its foundations. After three seniors were suspended for shuffling their feet during chapel services—a method used by students to curtail overlong sermons—undergraduates smashed windows, broke down doors, fired pistols, and rolled rock-filled barrels through the halls. Smith made a personal appeal for order, and peace was restored. But only two weeks later, one of the suspended seniors returned and beat up a tutor. Three more days of sporadic violence followed.

That year and the next, students revolted at other colleges, including Harvard, Brown, and William and Mary. But Princeton secured its reputation as the capital of student rebellion in January of 1802, when a riot broke out over more suspensions. Students began their protest by approaching the trustees with a petition that called for the reinstatement of six of their comrades. The college's tiny faculty denounced the document as "disrespectful and improper" and condemned all organized opposition to their authority. In response, the students formed "a combination," an agreement bound by a vow to cut classes until the restoration of their suspended friends. The standoff lasted a few days, until the rebels reluctantly returned their studies and President Smith, in gratitude, agreed to reconsider the suspensions. But the peace on campus was illusory. Two months later, flames consumed Nassau Hall. Though arson was never proved, Smith blamed the fire on "the progress of vice and irreligion" among the students, as did the country's newspapers.

Controversy over the legitimacy of student combinations was central to riots at other colleges, too. At the University of North Carolina in 1805, students used the word "remonstrance" to describe their grievances to the faculty, which they cast in the role of a dissolute monarchy. Two years later, Princeton students employed similar, ideologically loaded words when they revolted for a third time.

The Princeton riot of 1807 was the climax of student rebellion in early-nineteenth-century America. Trouble began on March 24, when the faculty suspended Francis D. Cummins, a senior, for harassing townspeople after visiting a tavern. Two more suspensions followed. Discontent over these incidents stewed until March 30, the day before final examinations for the winter term, when eight students submitted to President Smith a petition with 160 signatures demanding that he reconsider his actions.

Smith refused to read the petition and, in an era when trustees played a larger role in the college's day-to-day operations than they do now, turned to trustee Richard Stockton, Jr., a member of the Class of 1779. Stockton delivered a sermon in the chapel calling on the rebels to "renounce the principle of uniting together to control the government of the College according to their humors." Even before Stockton finished speaking, students had begun to scrape their feet noisily on the floor. When Smith rose to give the dissenters a chance to renounce their signatures on the petition, a conspirator jumped up, gave a signal, and charged out of the room with two-thirds of the college's two hundred students behind him. Every one of them was immediately suspended.

The rebels barricaded themselves inside Nassau Hall. When the trustees called in the local militia, students beat them back with stones and broken banisters. Smith was forced to shut down the college. The students, overjoyed at their initial success, withdrew to the town, where they vowed never to return to school until their suspended comrades were allowed to reenroll. Recalling the groups that pre-Revolutionary patriots had created to foster the American cause, students formed a "committee of correspondence" to match wits with the trustees. Hopes for total victory were high. One rebel, Joseph C. Breckinridge 1810, predicted that "not a single man whose name is annexed to the paper will enter college next session. . . . If [the trustees] do in despite of reason expel us; in the spirit of prophecy I predict that they will sign with their own hands the death-warrant of this institution."

Negotiations between the trustees and the dissenters began on April 9. The students chose sixteen-year-old Abel P. Upshur to represent them. The debate, as recounted in a broadside distributed by the rebels, reveals how students and trustees grappled over the language of the Revolution, over the definitions of words like "right" and "tyranny." Upshur argued that "it is a privilege which nature has given us to petition when we think ourselves aggrieved." The trustees were not moved. As long as a student was enrolled in the college, they declared, "his right is obedience," and they found it outrageous that students "spoke much of rights, comparing the College to a state of civil society."

But not even the rebels claimed that Princeton was a "civil society," and Upshur himself pointed out the absurdity of the comparison. When one trustee compared Princeton "to a domestic government," Upshur shot back that it was foolish to suppose "that the connection between student and instructor, was as close as that between parent and child." Students were neither children nor adults but something in between. As the broadside rather clumsily put it:

We view the public to view us as a collection of young men, free and independent in our principles and opinions, but placed under temporary subser-

In a lengthy broadside printed during the 1807 rebellion, students sought to answer those "who have branded us with the epithets of 'inconsiderate boys and passionate young men.'" viency for the acquirement of classical knowledge; that we are united in one common bond of friendship as members of the same community, and engaged in the same honorable pursuits.

This "betweenness" was something both students and trustees had trouble describing. How to define someone who is neither a child nor fully grown? Or a place that is neither a family nor a civil society? These questions lay at the heart of the rebellion.

By the time the rebels issued their broadside, the thrill of revolution was wearing off. Already the combination had begun to disintegrate. Eventually, fifty-five of the rebels returned to the college, but those whom William Meade 1808 described as "the finest young men"—including members of the committee of correspondence—stayed true to the cause and never came back.

The 1807 revolt made Princeton once again a symbol of moral decay. The Gazette of Troy, New York, observed that the students had fallen prey to ideas "worthy of a Godwin or a Holcroft [a radical playwright]" and lamented that the "same mental epidemick which has crazed Europe, and is extending its baleful ravages throughout the civilized world, has contaminated these young rights-of-boy-politicians." The editors of the Gazette were justified in speculating that the Princeton rebellion was a sign of a more general cultural crisis. A similar riot had broken out at Harvard only a day before violence overtook Princeton, and every college in the country suffered some kind of student unrest before 1810.

Steven J. Novak, author of The Rights of Youth: American Colleges and Student Revolt, 1798-1815 (Harvard University Press, 1977)—the definitive work in the field—characterizes this era as one of intense generational conflict. Students in the early 1800s were in some cases literally the sons of the Founders. Impatient to take their own places in history, they found the national pantheon already full of such luminaries as Washington and Jefferson. And as contemporaries noted, there was something contagious about talk of rights and revolution. If white men possessed inalienable rights, then why not their slaves or their wives? Why not even their children?

THE REBELLIONS OF THE EARLY 1800s obviously differ from the protests of the 1960s (let alone those of the 1990s). New issues have taken the place of old, and the violence of the earlier revolts—enough to make administrators shudder today—is strangely alien to us. But those old rebellions raised some questions that may be more familiar. Should a college be governed as a smallish civil society, or is it a private or ecclesiastical institution best directed by its trustees and their appointed administrators? Should students be considered "citizens" of the university, with the right to help shape policy, or are they only wards of the faculty? Or do the answers to these questions lie somewhere in the murky middle, as the rebels of 1807 argued? Princeton has always combined democratic with meritocratic and authoritarian methods of decision making. The boundaries between these methods have changed over time, and periodically come under fire. As Wither- spoon understood, when the young experiment with power, a little "outrage and sedition" should be expected. Perhaps even welcomed.

In many ways, the events of 1800, 1802, and 1807 were disastrous for Princeton. As Mark A. Noll has pointed out in his excellent history of early Princeton, Princeton and the Republic, 1768-1822 (Princeton University Press, 1989), the riot of 1807 signaled the demise of the pre-Revolutionary alliances in academia of religion and republicanism, revealed truth and enlightened science. The departure of the rebels reduced the number of students by almost half. For lack of pupils, teachers either quit or were fired or retired, as the faculty shrank to just two professors (one of them President Smith) and two tutors. In part because of his inept handling of the riots, the overworked Smith resigned in 1812. The drop in enrollment and damage to Nassau Hall left the college in deep financial trouble, and after all the bad press, neither alumni nor outside benefactors were anxious to contribute to Princeton's rebuilding.

In the following decades, the trustees placed increasing emphasis on discipline, moral instruction, and religious faith. (Indeed, one reason for the creation, in 1812, of the Princeton Theological Seminary was the perceived moral decline of Princeton students; the training of Presbyterian clergymen, the college's initial raison d'être, was judged too important to be left to the disreputable college.) Reflecting on the riot of 1807, Elias Boudinot lamented the loss of so many young men to sin and vice. Those rebels who repented and returned to college to bask in the "light of Reason, Science & Revelation" would lead lives of accomplishment and honor. For those who chose instead the "clumsy sophistry of Godwin, the pernicious subtleties of Hume, and the coarse vulgarities of Paine," he predicted doom.

After the restoration of authority in Nassau Hall, the heroes of the great rebellion loped back to their families or finished their schooling elsewhere. Joseph Breckinridge, after a spell at home, returned to Princeton to continue his studies. Later, he married President Smith's daughter. Two members of the committee of correspondence, William Heyward of Maryland and James Wayne of Georgia, were later elected to Congress. As for the impact of the revolt on Abel Upshur, who went on to serve President Tyler as secretary of state, we can only guess.

Aims McGuinness '90 works at The New Republic, in Washington, D.C.

Abel P. Upshur went from campus radical to secretary of state.

The Frontiers of Materials Science

In early March, the Princeton Regional Planning Board approved two new University facilities. One will be an addition to the Engineering Quadrangle to house various initiatives, including an exciting new activity in the area of photonics and optoelectronic materials (dubbed POEM). The other will be a free-standing building between the E-Quad and Prospect Avenue for a major interdisciplinary initiative in materials science and engineering called the Princeton Materials Institute (PMI). Here I focus on the PMI initiative.

Over 40 faculty members based in eight departments and two programs are already participating in PMI. They are engaged in an inquiry on the frontiers of knowledge that will lead to new materials to shape our environment and improve the quality of our lives for the next century.

The $12.5 million facility will contain 40,000 square-feet of space that can be flexibly assigned and reassigned to accommodate an evolving, multi-disciplinary research agenda and groupings of scientists and engineers that will change as that agenda changes. The facility will both strengthen existing efforts and promote new collaborations.

The director of PMI is Physics Professor Peter Eisenberger '63, who received his Ph.D. in applied physics from Harvard in 1967 and then worked at Bell Labs and at Exxon Research and Engineering before returning to Princeton in 1989. A national leader in the field, Eisenberger helped to formulate a National Academy of Sciences report, "Materials Science and Engineering for the 1990s: Maintaining Competitiveness in the Age of Materials," that focused attention on the potential for materials research to address major problems in manufacturing, the environment, health, and transportation whose solutions are limited by the materials now available.

He was also instrumental in developing a regional meeting process, the first of which was held at Princeton in March of 1990, to develop a national consensus for materials science and engineering. Following a total of four regional meetings, a national action plan was submitted to the federal Office of Science and Technology Policy. Partly as a result of those activities, there is a budget request currently before Congress that would provide $84 million in 1991-92 to the National Science Foundation to enhance materials research. It is estimated that the requests for additional funding for the following year by all the federal agencies supporting materials research will amount to $1.25 billion.

This expanded federal investment and Princeton's new initiative occur at a time of fundamental change in the centuries-old approach to materials. Heretofore, materials have been discovered and then applied; only very recently have scientists and engineers been able to begin by identifying needs and then designing at the molecular level new materials hand-tailored for those applications.

Examples of challenges that the field of materials science can help us to meet include:

- biodegradable plastics of improved quality and reduced cost that would benefit the environment;
- high-speed levitated trains, supersonic planes, and other transportation technologies that are fast, safe, efficient, and less costly;
- improved diagnostic and drug delivery systems for better health care;

Harold T. Shapiro

- alternative energy sources that are less polluting and have less greenhouse effect than hydrocarbons;
- synthetic foods and improved food processing; and
- further improvements in computing and communications.

At Princeton we will focus on self-assembling materials, interfacial materials, complex inorganic materials, complex liquid materials, and imaging techniques such as Professor Szymon Suckewer's efforts, currently based at the Princeton Plasma Physics Laboratory, to probe matter with an X-ray laser.

Self-assembling materials have the property of being able to recognize and respond to their environment. Because of this interactive property, they are called "smart materials." Over recent decades, understanding and exploiting the molecular structure of silicon has led to the semiconductor-based revolution in information technologies. Now scientists are studying materials with structures much more complicated than silicon.

One area of active research involves biomaterials. Our bodies are exquisite examples of natural systems that arrange themselves into complex patterns. If we learn how the molecular components of the body assemble themselves, then we can imitate and improve on the process. Chemistry Professor John Groves, for example, is trying to improve synthetic biomaterials like artificial skin. Physics Professor Sol Gruner is asking why the material that makes up membranes that envelop and compartmentalize cells has the ability to form cubic structures when its purpose is to make sheets. Why be able to bend when the purpose is to be flat, he asks. Who knows what the inquiries into such subtle questions will bring?

Training by investigators who ask such questions benefits students, in the laboratory and in the classroom. (Teaching is an important aspect of PMI's mission, and the institute will begin offering its first two courses next year, one for non-scientists and engineers and one for students in those fields.) One former Princeton graduate student, Dan Barry *79, received a Ph.D. in electrical engineering, but did his dissertation in biophysics with Professor Gruner, and then went to medical school. He is now on the faculty at the University of Michigan. He has designed a commercially successful running shoe, known as the Brooks Hydroflow, with a fluid-filled heel that absorbs the energy of impact and uses it to assist uplift. He is also developing a new kind of prosthetic device for artificial limbs that is the first to make use of muscle noise as feedback, and is trying to detect oxygen-deprived heart tissue by the characteristic sound made by damaged muscle.

Biomaterials may be more glamorous than some other areas, but remarkable breakthroughs are expected in a broad range of complex inorganic and organic materials, including superconductors, electronic materials, polymers, and composites and coatings. Research at Princeton now encompasses all these areas, and PMI will soon have the new space it needs to nurture and cross-fertilize these efforts.

"Heretofore, materials have been discovered and then applied; only very recently have scientists and engineers been able to begin by identifying needs and then designing . . . new materials hand-tailored for those applications."

John W. H. Simpson '86

The Old Hardware Marketplace

ALEX RANDALL'S USED COMPUTER HANDBOOK

Alexander Randall V '73 and Steven J. Bennett • Microsoft Press, $14.95 paper

AS AN INVESTMENT, a computer has to be one of the worst things you can buy. Like most new cars, it loses about a fifth of its value the moment you first start it up. But unlike cars, the price of equivalent new computers goes down rather than up over time. Whatever you buy today, you will be able to get more computing power for the same amount of money tomorrow. And computer dealers are generally not inclined to accept used machines as trade-ins for new ones.

To take an example close to home, PAW's first computers—TRS-80 Model IIIs—cost $2,400 apiece when they were bought in the summer of 1982. They had two drives for floppy disks, each of which could hold about 170,000 characters of information, and their usable memory (RAM) was limited to 48,000 characters. Last summer, for the same price (in dollars worth perhaps half as much as eight years earlier), the magazine got a 386 clone that effectively runs forty times as fast and has forty times as much memory—plus 240 times as much data-storage capacity.

The Model IIIs were passed on to other users at Princeton University Press several years ago, when PAW's needs outgrew them. Handed down in older-to-younger-brother fashion, they served as "starter kits" for successive groups of employees, but now they sit idly on shelves. Though the old machines are still capable of performing basic word processing, and even simple database applications, the newer computers (and the more sophisticated software they can run) are so much more productive that it does not make economic sense for the Press to continue using the older ones.

The experience of PAW and the Press illustrates several features of the computer economy. Given the relentless advance of the technology, people working on cutting-edge applications (such as electronic page composition) need to move up to more powerful hardware at frequent intervals. The equipment they abandon, while technically out of date (if not obsolete), remains more than adequate for workers who use less-demanding software. A large company can juggle machines around as it acquires new hardware to obtain the optimal matchup of computer capacity to operator need.

But this may not be possible for a small company and is certainly not for individuals working alone.

Enter Alexander Randall V '73 and the Boston Computer Exchange (B.C.E.), which in 1982 created what is now known as the secondary computer market. Randall—who will be remembered by many Princetonians of his era as "Louie Motherball," after the name he gave his campus enterprise—exhibited an early knack for finding and exploiting business niches.

In the heyday of student activism, leaders of demonstrations needed the means to make themselves heard, and Randall had public-address equipment to rent. Besides turning a tidy profit on the student revolution, he was rewarded for his initiative with The Daily Princetonian Prize for community service.

Randall went on to study educational technology and international development at Columbia University, where the anthropologist Margaret Mead persuaded him to visit Bali. There he happened upon Sean Foley, a UNESCO food scientist who had rigged up a primitive computer—powered by a bicycle connected to an old truck generator—so that he could calculate the effectiveness of "miracle rice" and other new agricultural techniques being introduced to the island. Foley's operation planted the germ of an idea in Randall's mind.

A month later, he returned to Princeton to give a talk at the Engineering School about computers and social change in the less-developed world. On the drive back to Boston, he writes in Alex Randall's Used Computer Handbook, a brainstorm struck: "Find people who'd outgrown their computers and introduce them to people who could be way ahead with somebody else's old technology. . . . Recycle—update people's systems and help people get rid of their old systems. . . . We'd act as brokers, taking a modest commission for connecting those who have with those in need."

With the help of his wife, Cameron Hall, Randall took his idea to a meeting of the Boston Computer Society—the nation's premier organization of computer users. Within days, the couple had orders from more than five hundred potential buyers and sellers, and trading began. Nine years later, the B.C.E. is the largest international clearinghouse for the exchange of used computers, with 125 offices worldwide. Its brokers handle more than a thousand calls a day and issue a weekly index—transmitted around the world (even to Bali)—of bid, ask, and closing prices for the most popular models. And thus Randall is turning a tidy profit on another revolution.

Now the B.C.E. founder has produced the definitive guide to buying and selling in this new market. The handbook, co-authored with Steven J. Bennett, is full of useful tips both for the corporate executive with a large inventory of machines to manage and for the lone individual seeking a bargain on a first computer or desiring to trade up to a more powerful model at the least cost. Randall warns at the outset against spending too much to upgrade an old machine, because you are unlikely to recapture much of that investment when it finally comes time to sell. An analogy could be drawn with the low return on an old car loaded with expensive aftermarket modifications.

Although the no-name clones offer some great bargains, Randall writes, their resale value will not hold up as well as the brand-name models—an important consideration if you expect to trade up in due course, but not if you plan to use a machine until it is totally obsolete or worn out. He tracks the decline in market value of major models over several years and identifies the optimal points at which to sell. Perhaps the best bet: "Sell your equipment at the time of its first displacement by a significantly advanced model or superior technology. You'll take a hit but not a big one. If you wait until after the second displacement, you'll experience price shock."

Randall evaluates the pros and cons of the various means of buying and selling used computers with particular attention to how much effort each transaction might require. "Money saved or earned on a used computer deal is proportional to the amount of work you do yourself—the more you schlep, the more you get." He also provides checklists of things to look out for when buying or selling used computers, how to test-drive a machine and protect yourself from being ripped off. Among other things, he notes, corporations seeking to unload old equipment may find that if they donate it to an educational or other nonprofit institution, their tax deduction will be greater than what any buyer will offer.

Anyone planning to enter the used-computer marketplace should start by reading this book. Your computer may be a problematic investment, but the benefit you will gain from Randall's years of experience is sure to recoup the cover price many times over.

—Charles L. Cressy '65

Chuck Cressy, a former editor of PAW, now oversees an investment of more than a hundred computers for Princeton University Press.

Books Received

CURRENT SURGICAL PATHOLOGY

Michael J. Warhol '65, M.D.
C. V. Mosby, $49.50

PROCESS DYNAMICS AND CONTROL

Dale E. Seborg '69, Thomas F. Edgar '71, and Duncan A. Mellichamp
John Wiley, $67.95

FARMING ON THE EDGE: SAVING FAMILY FARMS IN MARIN COUNTY, CALIFORNIA

John Hart '70
University of California Press
$29.95 cloth, $16.95 paper

OPHTHALMIC SURGICAL PROCEDURES

Peter S. Hersh '78, M.D.
Little, Brown, $69.50

CRISANTEMOS, CHRYSANTHEMUMS (Spanish/English bilingual edition)

Jay H. Leal (Jesus Hernandez '80), tr.
(by Ana Rosa Núñez)
Order from Editorial Betania, Apartado de
Correos 50.767, 28080 Madrid, Spain
$10.00 paper

THE FAMILY HEIRLOOM COOKBOOK (recipe file you create yourself)

Tonya Bolden '81
G. P. Putnam's Sons, $9.00 loose-leaf binder

OF TIME AND POWER: LEADERSHIP DURATION IN THE MODERN WORLD

Henry Blenen, professor of politics and international affairs, and Nicolas van de Walle '90
Stanford University Press, $25.00

BOB GIBBY PRINCETON '36

Discover The Retirement Choice Of Princeton Grads

MEADOW LAKES, New Jersey's first and finest continuing care retirement community has been a vital part of the active, independent lives of distinguished Princeton alumni for over 25 years.

Located on 103 scenic acres just 11 miles from Princeton, with residences woven around a pristine lake, Meadow Lakes reflects the gracious era of the estate on which it was built. Its comfortable lifestyle gives you more time to enjoy life's satisfying pursuits – time to catch up on your reading, swim in the heated outdoor pool, hike nature trails or swap stories with former classmates.

Most importantly, you get the satisfaction of knowing that you have made the smartest decision of your life. That's because Meadow Lakes – a continuing care community – assures that any long term health care needs which you might face in the future will be taken care of.

Find out what many of your classmates have already learned. Discover Meadow Lakes. Mail the coupon below or call (609) 448-4100.

Meadow Lakes

P.O. Box 70 • Etra Road
Hightstown, NJ 08520

- ☐ I'd like to see for myself. Please call and invite me to lunch and a tour.
☐ Please send more information.

Name _____

Address _____

City _____ State _____ Zip _____

Telephone _____ PILM-2

Meadow Lakes is another non-profit, non-sectarian Continuing Care Retirement Community managed by The Presbyterian Homes of New Jersey Foundation whose 75 years of experience assures you of high quality care.

"Next Year" Is Tigers' Familiar Refrain As Men Cagers Bow in N.C.A.A.s Again

Tight defense was the name of the game in this 50-48 nail-biter. Here, Matt Eastwick '92 and Mike Brennan '94 sandwich Villanova's Greg Woodard. Alas, the referee whistled Brennan for the foul.

IN THE TEN SEASONS from 1947 to 1956, the Brooklyn Dodgers won six National League pennants and, playing against the New York Yankees in the World Series each time, lost every championship but one. As lifelong fans of the pre-Los Angeles Dodgers will recall, the concept of Next Year assumed major-league significance. Hope sprang eternal. Each summer, it seemed, the lovable "Bums" put a team of quality on the field—in '53, they won as many as 105 games—but each fall, the Bronx Bombers would find some way of sending the Brooklyn faithful home thinking about Next Year.

A major difference between the long-suffering Dodgers of old and Princeton's men's basketball team today is that, for the last two seasons, the Tigers' opening-round losses in the N.C.A.A. tournament have had their consolations. Nobody thought they belonged on the same court as top-seeded Georgetown in 1989, but exploiting the Hoyas' ho-hum attitude, the Tigers took them to the brink and lost (on an uncalled foul) by one point. In 1990, no one expected Princeton to present much of a challenge to Arkansas, which went on to play in the Final Four. But topping even their previous year's performance, the Tigers came from thirteen points behind to almost nip the Razorbacks; they lost by four.

In both games, they showed they could compete with players who were taller, faster, and stronger by forcing the opponents to play at Princeton's deliberate pace and stultifying them with Coach Pete Carril's brand of basketball: passing, passing, and more passing—until the open shot presented itself (invariably a layup or a three-pointer)—and then defense, defense, and more defense. In both games, it was a surprise to both the opposition and the media that such a style of play, born of the era of the Bums, could be competitive with today's up-tempo slamming and jamming and other displays of on-court testicularity. In both games, the contest was billed as one between Ivy League pointy-heads and the next N.B.A. stars (just grooming their skills as semiprofs in college), between kids who studied for finals and kids who planned to play in them, between David and Goliath.

The Tigers seemed to relish their role as giant-killers (okay, giant-scarers), and a kind of reverse sex-appeal set in: fans of "America's Underdog" made the Georgetown and Arkansas games ESPN's most-watched college basketball telecasts precisely because the Tigers featured odds-beating, no-frills, fundamental basketball that wasn't as boring as it looked. And season by season, they were improving their won-loss record—19-8 two years ago, 20-7 last year—even as they replaced players who graduated and whom the interminably dissatisfied Carril deemed hard to replace.

This year, everything seemed to fall into place. Led by the ubiquitous Kit Mueller '91, the Tigers' academic all-American center, Princeton tore through its schedule, winning all fourteen Ivy League games and finishing the regular season with but two losses. Dominance like this translated into rankings in the national polls and the highest seeding ever for an Ivy school in the N.C.A.A. tournament, eighth. For this year's team, many fans felt, a gallant loss to an N.C.A.A. powerhouse would not be enough; to validate the season, the Tigers would have to produce a win in the tournament. There would be no consolations in defeat this time.

And, truth be told, the Tigers seemed confident of victory in the days before their contest with the Villanova Wildcats. Gone, for instance, was their characteristic "preventive pessimism," the mental defense that steels players preparing for games they aren't expected to win. In a pregame practice at Syracuse University's cavernous Carrier Dome (a facility for indoor football and lacrosse that could swallow two Jadwin Gyms), the Tigers seemed surprisingly loose: Carril attempted some old-fashioned two-handed set shots, and several players experimented with a new game that combined elements of basketball and rugby (no dribbling, no protective gear).

But this time around, the Tigers were matched up with a well-prepared team and a coach, Rollie Massimino, intimately familiar with Carril-style basketball. Villanova's middling 16-14 record, which led some Princeton fans to question if the Wildcats even belonged in the tournament, was deceptive, a result of the team's grueling schedule in the Big East Conference, the nation's toughest. In all, Villanova had played eleven of the sixty-four teams in the tournament, compiling a 7-12 record against them; the Tigers were 2-1 against the field. Despite the higher seeding, Princeton was a two-point underdog in the contest.

Playing in his last collegiate game, Kit Mueller '91 led the Tigers with fourteen points. He finished with 1,546 in his illustrious career.

VERNE LUNDQUIST, a broadcaster for CBS, recently likened playing against Princeton to "being bitten to death by ducks": individually, the players don't seem very threatening, and they win by methodically pecking away for field goals. In a sense, Princeton plays each possession of the basketball as though there are just seconds left in the game. The Tigers typically spend most of the allotted forty-five seconds before they shoot, in theory increasing their chances at a good shot and in practice denying the other team any chance at a shot. For this reason, falling behind Princeton by fifteen is like being behind another team by thirty: there just isn't time to catch up.

So what this tournament game would determine was whether Princeton could dictate the pace to the Wildcats, who prefer the up-tempo contests typical of Big East play, and whether the Tigers' outside shooters—guard Sean Jackson '92 and forward Chris Marquardt '92—could take the pressure off Mueller under the basket by lighting up the scoreboard with three-point shots. Given Princeton's slow pace and nation-leading defense, most observers expected it would be a low-scoring affair, and more than one predicted the game would be decided on the last possession. It was.

In straightforward terms, Villanova won, 50-48, because Lance Miller shoveled a running one-hander into the basket with just seven-tenths of a second to play. (For those of you out of touch with the inexorable advance of tournament technology, the N.C.A.A. now times the last minute of these games to the tenth of a second. This innovation sometimes stokes the suspense, and also adds to the ads.) With a wild pass downcourt Princeton's only hope at a shot, the wily Carril tried two trick in-bounds plays to induce the Wildcats to foul and give the Tigers a chance to tie the game with free throws—also a dim hope, given their weak foul shooting. But the referees seemed unwilling to whistle even one fairly flagrant foul and thereby perhaps decide the outcome themselves.

In summary, however, Villanova won because the well-prepared Wildcats played Princeton's deliberate game almost as well as the Tigers did, matched the Tigers on defense, and made an unbelievable 71 percent of their shots in the second half (Miller was seven for seven and led all scorers with nineteen). Villanova embarrassed Princeton at the free-throw line, hitting fourteen of fifteen in the game. Weak free-throw

Brass Blazer Buttons

Gleaming brass blazer buttons etched with the Princeton Seal—perfect to wear to Reunions. Set of nine, $40. Add $4.25 shipping. N.J. residents add 7% tax.

The
PRINCETON
University Store

36 University Place, Princeton, NJ 08540

Call toll-free: From N.J., 1-800-624-4236

Elsewhere in the U.S., 1-800-631-0137

☐ U-Store ☐ VISA ☐ MasterCard ☐ AmEx

Acct. # _____

Exp. Date _____

Qty _____

Name _____

Address _____

City, State _____

ZIP _____

Grant A. Peacock '46
Kathleen Peacock

GRANT A. PEACOCK Inc.

*Fine Jewelry
Jewel Counselor
Estates Purchased*

Suite 2600
450 Park Avenue at 57th St.
New York, N.Y. 10022 (212) 753-4640

THE JOE BROWN Studio announces...his artistic legacy
Princeton Professor Emeritus Joe Brown created over 400 pieces of sculpture which are found in both private and public collections all over the world. Certified bronze sculptures from original molds are available in limited editions. The studio and gallery is open by appointment only.
The Joe Brown Studio • Timothy Maslyn, Resident Sculptor & Curator
RD 1, Box 122 A
Princeton, NJ 08540
609-921-2868

STEWARTSON-DOUGHERTY
Real Estate Associates
366 Nassau Street
Princeton, N.J. 08540
PHONE: 609-921-7784

PARKSIDE DRIVE

Come see this attractive, spacious Colonial on a quiet street in the historic Battlefield area of Princeton Township. There is a large formal living room with fireplace, dining room, family room and large country kitchen. Opening off the living room is a lovely, spacious (35x14) heated sun room. There are eight bedrooms and six baths, two car garage, full basement and more. $510,000.

Robert Dougherty '50 Julie Douglas w/'41
Paul Douglas '41 Betsy Stewardson Ford w/'54
Georgia Graham w/'52 J. B. Smith '45
Diane Unruh w/'70 Barbara Broad w/'38
Betty McClelland w/'50 Judy Perrine s/'69

REALTORS

Representing Previews Executive HomeSearch

RULON - MILLER INC.

ESTABLISHED 1962

SUMNER RULON-MILLER III '61

EXECUTIVE FINANCIAL PLANNING

ESTATE PLANS

GROUP INSURANCE

PROFIT SHARING

RETIREMENT

261 MADISON AVENUE, SUITE 1200
NEW YORK, NY 10016
TEL 212-661-8660
FAX 212-697-6814

Don't hesitate to return for Reunions!
The Alcoholics Anonymous Haven
in Murray-Dodge will be open
Thursday, June 6 and Friday June 7
5 p.m. to midnight
Saturday, June 8 all day
Open meetings Friday and Saturday
at 5 p.m.

shooting was one element in what Carril called his "spotty offense" all year, and it showed in this game: Marquardt missed the front end of a one-and-one with 1:53 to play, Mueller was one-for-two at 1:13, and the team as a whole made just eight of twelve.

Credit should also go to Villanova's defense. The Tigers hit 46 percent of their three-point shots—higher than their average this year—but they only attempted thirteen of them in the game. Time after time, the picks that Mueller set for Jackson—almost sure things in the regular season—failed to throw the Wildcat defender off stride, and the Tigers had to reset their offense. Princeton's best three-point shooter, it turned out, was point guard Mike Brennan, a freshman who despite foul trouble filled in superbly for the injured George Leftwich '92.

One result of this limited shooting on the perimeter was that Villanova could concentrate on Mueller in the paint. Mueller played valiantly in his last game for Princeton. He was on the court all forty minutes and led the Tigers with fourteen points (no teammate scored more than nine), but he missed eight of thirteen shots. He managed to elicit five fouls (and a disqualification) from the taller Marc Dowdell, but, obviously tired, had a layup blocked seconds before Miller shoveled in his game-winner.

Princeton's offense was, well, "spotty," but the defense was as good as ever. It's easy to criticize Sean Jackson, whose unenviable assignment it was to guard Lance Miller, but Villanova scored exactly the same number of points in the second half as it did in the first—twenty-five. The Wildcats simply made their shots, and the Tigers didn't. Midway through the second half, for example, Princeton was shut out for 5:23, but Villanova tallied only two points in that stretch. And despite the Wildcats' enormous advantage in rebounds (27-10), the Tigers took more shots because they forced so many turnovers. Defense kept them in the game, but their paltry eighteen points after halftime was not enough to win it.

Another factor in Princeton's loss may have been, paradoxically, its incredible success during the regular season. Winning games by an average of fifteen points, the Tigers—both players and coaches—had little experience this season in nail-biting finishes. Their closest Ivy League game was a five-point victory over Yale, and the tightest of all was a 42-39 win over Coastal Carolina (another tournament-bound team) way back in November; just three other games were decided by fewer than ten points. Although their philosophy is well suited for end-game tactics, the Tigers seemed unprepared (or too tired) for heroics.

In the postgame press conference, Carril said that this tournament loss—"the worst" of the three since 1989—seemed "ordained," and indeed the presence of a "basketball chaplain" on the Villanova bench seemed to bear him out. But as Marquardt put it, "we are really sick and tired of giving people fits and then going home. We came here to play hard and win. This really hurts." What consolation might Princeton find in this latest N.C.A.A. disappointment? There's always Next Year.

—Andrew Mytelka '85

SCOREBOARD

MEN'S BASKETBALL

(24-3 overall; 14-0 Ivy)
Villanova 50, Princeton 48

MEN'S SWIMMING

(9-0 overall; 9-0 E.I.S.L.)
N.C.A.A. Championships
—23rd place

BASEBALL

(3-9 overall; 0-0 E.I.B.L.)
Princeton 14, Vermont 1
Illinois-Chicago 6, Princeton 5
Central Florida 9, Princeton 5
Princeton 3, Illinois-Chicago 2
Bradley 6, Princeton 4
Embry-Riddle 9, Princeton 8
Princeton 11, Missouri 2
Illinois-Chicago 11, Princeton 7
Wright State 6, Princeton 5
Missouri 9, Princeton 8
Bradley 6, Princeton 5
Rider 11, Princeton 4

SOFTBALL

(9-6 overall; 0-0 Ivy)
Princeton 3, Ohio U. 1
Princeton 3, Springfield 1
Army 2, Princeton 0
Princeton 3, St. John's 0
Princeton 4, Michigan State 1
Princeton 3, Wright State 2
Illinois-Chicago 7, Princeton 0
St. Xavier 3, Princeton 2
Princeton 7, Colgate 0
Drexel 1, Princeton 0
Ohio U. 3, Princeton 1
Rider 9, Princeton 3
Princeton 10, Rider 4
Princeton 13, Seton Hall 0
Princeton 6, Seton Hall 1

MEN'S TRACK

(0-1 overall; 0-1 Ivy)
Sun Devil Invitational
—6th place
Penn 90, Princeton 73

WOMEN'S TRACK

(0-0 overall; 0-0 Ivy)
Sun Devil Invitational
—4th place

MEN'S LACROSSE

(6-1 overall; 0-0 Ivy)
Princeton 9, Penn State 7
Loyola (Md.) 10, Princeton 9
Princeton 19, Georgetown 3
Princeton 9, Rutgers 6

WOMEN'S LACROSSE

(2-3 overall; 0-1 Ivy)
Princeton 11, Richmond 5
Princeton 9, James Madison 5
Virginia 10, Princeton 6
Lafayette 6, Princeton 5
Harvard 6, Princeton 4

MEN'S TENNIS

(6-2 overall; 2-0 Ivy)
Princeton 9, Richmond 0
Princeton 8, Chapman 0
Princeton 6, Iowa State 3
Texas Tech 5, Princeton 4
Long Beach State 5,
Princeton 4
Princeton 7, Washington 2
Princeton 6, Columbia 0
Princeton 5, Penn 1

WOMEN'S TENNIS

(4-2 overall; 2-0 Ivy)
Princeton 7, Iowa State 2
San Diego State 7,
Princeton 2
Princeton 8, Minnesota 1
Pepperdine 9, Princeton 0
Princeton 7, Columbia 2
Princeton 7, Penn 2

MEN'S HEAVYWEIGHT CREW

(0-1 overall; 0-0 Ivy)
Navy 6:40.9, Princeton 6:43.4

MEN'S LIGHTWEIGHT CREW

(0-0 overall; 0-0 Ivy)
Augusta Invitational
—1st place

WOMEN'S CREW

(2-0 overall; 1-0 Ivy)
Princeton 7:10.4,
Mt. Holyoke 7:36.0
Princeton 7:35.5,
Brown 7:48.2

FOR RENT

ENJOY THE LUXURY of your own villa, private pool overlooking the Caribbean, and staff of five to serve you. 3 BRs, 3 baths; exquisitely furnished; on one acre with terraced gardens in most exclusive residential neighborhood in Ocho Rios, Jamaica. Everyone should try this kind of living at least once. From $175/day, winter; $125/day, summer; $100/day, Sept.-Oct. B. Kaspers '70 (owner), 1165 Churchill Downs Rd., Atlanta, GA 30319; 404-255-0696.

ST. JOHN, USVI: 2 BR waterfront beachhouse amid tropical gardens. Spectacular view, excellent snorkeling. From $175/day, winter; $125/day, summer; $100/day, Sept.-Oct. B. Kaspers '70. 1165 Churchill Downs, Atlanta, GA 30319; 404-255-0696.

PARIS: Elegant small studio for two just off the Seine in the 6th. 2 min. walk to the Louvre, Notre Dame. 609-924-4332.

BARBADOS: Home of the late John L. Roe Jr. '34. West Coast on bluff overlooking Caribbean. Three air-conditioned BRs, cook, maid, gardener, laundry, swimming pool. 215-527-0585.

PARIS: Rue de la Paix, Elegant apartment. Suitable for 2 or 3. 7-days preferred. $200/night. 212-838-1731.

STOCKING ISLAND, Exuma, Bahamas: Octagonal wood and glass home, spectacular 360-degree sea view. All modern conveniences. $1000 weekly for two with boat. Sam Burns '46, 407-231-2822. Brochure avail.

SANIBEL ISLAND, FLA.: Delightful beachfront condominium. Magnificent gulf view. Spacious 2 BR, 2 baths, loft. Pool. Tennis. Will Smith '63. 908-842-2096.

BRITISH VIRGIN ISLANDS (Virgin Gorda): Elegant new villa directly on own private snorkeling beach. Spectacular, panoramic view of North Sound including Bitter-End (dive school, etc.) Perfect weather year round. 3 BR, 2 bath, magnificent LR, wrap-around deck, full mod. kit, microwave, dishwasher; marina, fishing, pool, tennis. (Restaurant, provisioning, staff, car, available extra.) $2,500/wk. 609-921-7872.

EXCLUSIVE LUXURY 4 BR, 4 bath villa at private Tryall Club in Montego, Jamaica. Private pool, staff of four, gorgeous grounds overlook Caribbean and championship golf course. Also private tennis, scuba, beach and club house. Available at 2 or 3 BR rate off-season. 203-254-0228 (h) or Carol Shaw at 203-929-6391.

LONDON LUXURY FLATS: In Knightsbridge, Mayfair, Chelsea, Kensington, Whitehall Court. One, two, three bedrooms. Furnished and decorated by owners. Rented by day, seven day minimum; reduced rates when exceeding six months. Call during office hours: 518-686-7841.

KAUAI, HAWAII: 4 BR, NaPali Coast beach house. $650-850/wk. 703-560-7900.

ST. MAARTEN: Elegant villa on blue Caribbean. Breathtaking views. Daily maid. All amenities. Sleeps 2-6. 201-271-0297.

ST. THOMAS: 2 or 3 BRs on the water, spectacular downisland view. H. Macaleer. 919-942-8439.

ITALY: Renting delightful holiday accommodations, each personally selected. Tuscan castles, Umbrian farmhouses. Seaside villas, lakeview cottages. Centrally-located apartments Venice, Rome, Florence. Week/month. 415-554-0234.

SANIBEL ISLAND: Gulffront 2 BR condo w/pool and tennis. Available weekly/monthly. Boozan '79, 201-522-8219

CENTURIES OLD FARMHOUSE at edge of Sabine hill town. Easy reach of Orvieto, Perugia, Assisi, Spoleto, Florence, Rome. Magnificent setting on 4 acres. Restored recently. Architect Ellen Jawdat of Washington, D.C., M.Arch. Harvard. Work executed by Valentini Ristauo of Rome. All modern comforts. C. Joseph, 1 Lincoln Plaza, New York, NY 10023, 212-873-5104.

LONDON, A PLACE LIKE HOME: Enjoy the pleasure of an English home. All privately-owned properties in London's best areas. Week minimum stays, from studios to family houses. For brochure and price list call 800-526-0215.

KAUAI LUXURY CONDO on the ocean in sunny Poipu. Fully equipped. 2 BRs, 2 baths, free tennis at Waiohai Tennis Club. $600/700 per week. 213-681-6869.

ST. BART'S, FRENCH WEST INDIES: Luxurious seaside villa surrounded by privacy, beautiful beaches and French restaurants. 412-687-2061.

PARIS. LEFT BANK APARTMENT: St. Germain, close to D'Orsay, Louvre, Rodin. Sunny. Fireplaces. Antiques. Luxuriously furnished. Memorable! 412-687-2061.

EXUMA, BAHAMAS: Magnificent hilltop view. Fully equipped, 4 bedrooms, van, private beach, housekeeper available. $1,000 weekly in season. 302-428-1455, evenings.

TORTOLA, BVI: 6 acres, 4 BR, 3 bath, noted architect-designed villa with pool on spectacular promontory jutting over sea and own beach on undeveloped N.E. coast. Two-week rental minimum. Charles Sommer, 11 Upper Ladue Rd., St Louis, MO 63124; 314-982-2690(w), 314-991-5527(h).

TAOS, NM: 2 BR, 2 bath condominium overlooking Kit Carson Park. $400/week, April 15-Nov. $575/week, Dec.-April 15. ERA Taos Realtors, 127 Bent Street, Taos, NM 87571; 505-758-4400.

ST. JOHN, USVI: 2 BR villa at Lagoon Point, sensational views. Weekly $840-$1260 winter; $560-$840 summer. Valentine, 8 Fern Way, Madbury, NH 03820. 603-742-3063.

CASTLE HYDE: On the Blackwater River, County Cork, Southern Ireland. Exceptionally lovely 18th century Georgian house on 144 acres. 6 bedrooms, 5 modern baths, classic Renaissance gardens with fresh fruit and flowers. Fully staffed. Two miles of private trout and salmon fishing. Pheasant shooting. Available year round. Richard Kroon Y'64, 201-741-5692.

CENTRAL VERMONT: Restored 1830s home. 4 bedrooms, dormitory, 2½ baths. Fully equipped. Tennis, skiing, hiking nearby. $500/week. Mike Van Dusen '65. 202-244-3473.

PORTUGAL, ALGARVE: Villa overlooking sea. Sleeps six. Maid. Available April through November. Harison, P.O. Box 6865, Providence, RI 02940.

MARTHA'S VINEYARD: New three bedroom contemporary, sleeps eight, waterviews, tennis, minutes to beaches, 609-924-7913 (office), 609-397-0147 (home).

ALGARVE, PORTUGAL: Luxury country villa. Sweeping seaviews, near beaches, golf, 3 BRs, 4½ baths. Swimming pool, staff. Available year-round with exceptions. 508-922-4763.

ST. JOHN: Off-season rates. 2 bedroom villa, pool, spectacular view. 508-668-2078.

KIAWAH ISLAND, S.C.: Fabulous beachfront house, 3 BR/bath, fully equipped. $1,500/wk Sept.-May; $2,000/wk June-August. 314-991-8768.

COTSWOLDS: 17thC restored cottage. Historic Stanton Village, tour Stratford, Oxford, Bath, Broadway. Antiques, log fire, GCH, private garden, tv, washer/dryer, telephone, modern kitchen, sleeps four adults. Details: Tel: England 011-44-38-673-495; Fax 011-44-38-6858-653. Whitfield House, Wood Stanway, GL54 5PG England.

NEWPORT, RI: Victorian. 5/6 bedrooms. Families. Week, month, season. 401-846-5434.

NANTUCKET: Comfortable historic home, convenient in-town location, sleeps 8, some bikes. 201-543-2867.

NANTUCKET: Wide selection of summer rentals. $1,000-$3,000 per week. Nantucket Vacation Rentals. 800-228-4070.

MAINE COAST: 3-room cottage overlooking Penobscot River. Close to beach, boat launches, lakes. Sleeps four comfortably. Full bath. Ideal retreat. Photos available. June-October $250/week. 207-567-3772.

ST. MAARTEN: Waterfront hideaways. Luxury, affordable. Pool, maid, unique and sensational. Maria Licari 201-832-6655.

MARTHA'S VINEYARD: Fabulous Cape Cod cottage. Waterfront beach. Private. Sweeping views. Lake, creek, large deck. Sleeps 6. Modern conveniences. 1 mile to VH. June-Sept. $10,000 per month. 212-581-2750.

TAHOE: 3 BR redwood home at golf resort. Pool, club, winter downhill & cc ski areas. $1,000/week; $2,000 Xmas week. Mary & George '57. 800-3444-3741.

CAPE COD, PLEASANT BAY, WATERFRONT: Charming three bedroom three bath home. Attractively appointed; completely equipped. Dock and mooring. $2,400 per week. Trit Johnson 508-255-2886.

PORT ANTONIO, JAMAICA: "Nirvana." Fully equipped, staffed, 3 bedroom, 2 bath, beachfront villa on mile-long, mostly deserted beach. Surf, few tourists. $800/wk. in season. $600/wk. off. 207-359-4447.

LAKE CHAMPLAIN, VERMONT: Beautiful shoreline home. Magnificent view. 4 bedrooms, 3 baths. Furnished, 10 acres. Monthly June, August, September $3,000/mo. R.P. Smith '39, RR 2 Box 2506, Charlotte, VT 05445. 802-425-3747.

CHATHAM, CAPE COD: Waterfront. Sleeps six comfortably. Charming, private, well-equipped. Ellis '53, 414-351-0001.

Classic car collectors can't wait, there will still, in coming years

It's been over 100 years since the first noisy, bone-jarring "horseless carriages" rolled out of sheds onto dusty streets and lanes.

Through the ensuing decades, the basic principle has changed little. Now and then, however, a car has emerged so inspired in its concept, its design, its handling and use of power, that it has been labeled a turning point, or milestone. Worthy of preservation. Collectable. Especially when produced in limited numbers.

Today, in an era that has become sadly synonymous with homogeneity and derivative products, the Porsche 911 Carrera 4 is just such a refreshing, visionary achievement.

The world's first production sports car with electronic all-wheel drive, the Carrera 4 once again expands the boundaries of what is possible.

The all-wheel drive is an adaptive, intelligent system. Using computer-controlled sensors, it continuously monitors traction at all 4 wheels. Upon sensing wheel spin, within 25 thousandths of a second it directs power to the wheels having more traction, correcting slip usually before the driver can even sense it.

In other words, you're not really aware of the system working. Only of an incredible level of control.

This, after all, is

The 1991 Porsche 911 Carrera 4 Coupe.

now take comfort knowing Porsches, be something to collect.

what a landmark automobile does. Redefines the potential of the category. The Carrera 4 takes traditional sports car notions and, without changing them, elevates them. Not just power but, through adhesion, more useable power. Not just handling, but new thresholds of agility and performance on any surface.

The car is laden with other refinements and innovations as well. Like a new, self-correcting rear axle. And an integrated spoiler which rises at 50 mph and retracts again at 6 mph. Of course, there are the other collectable traits associated with Porsche for so long. The timeless 911 silhouette.

And Porsche's legendary handcrafted construction. Over 4 working days are spent for welding alone. The painting process is 26 steps. Engines are bench-built by hand.

Considering its complexity and the love and precision with which each 911 Carrera 4 is assembled, we will make relatively small numbers of these available.

For those who find that even more of an enticement, we suggest you try and find one to test-drive at your authorized Porsche dealer soon. Unless you opt to take your chances on the age-old Porsche fantasy of discovering one squirreled away in a barn somewhere. In about, let's say, the year 2017.

© 1991 Porsche Cars North America, Inc. Porsche recommends seat belt usage and observance of all traffic laws at all times.

NEW YORK. SAILOR'S WATERFRONT HOME: Built 1930's, Connetquot River, Long Island. Commute city from Oakdale station. Sail Great South Bay. Protected shoal anchorage, beach, porch, garage, beautiful view. Completely furnished. Two bedrooms. Available June 1 for season at $1,500/mo. Nonsmokers. No pets. Charles Arnholts, 305-667-1043 evenings.

FLORENCE COUNTRY HOUSE on 54 acres, fantastic views, $100 day. 219-874-8740.

NANTUCKET: Beautiful suite in historic home. Central location. 508-228-3781.

MAINE COAST: Spectacular view on private beach, sleeps eight, three baths. 703-461-7617.

NANTUCKET: Newly restored antique home in old historic district, just steps to Main Street. 3 bedrooms, 2½ baths. Sun-drenched yard, all conveniences. John Sperry 203-387-2531. Brochure available.

MT. DESERT ISLAND, MAINE: 3 BR cottage on wooded ocean property. June through Sept. $400/week. 201-879-6913.

NANTUCKET: Superb modern three bedroom home. Waterview. Walk to beach. Dave Wetherill '64. 914-591-6808 (h); 212-509-5582(o), VINALHAVEN, ME: 3 BR island waterside cottage. 1-4 persons 6/22-8/30. $500/wk., $900/2wk, $1,200/3wk, $1,450/mo. Lovely value. Trudy Pad-dock w'38. Until 5/20: 804-295-7358. After 6/1: 207-863-4348.

ST. CROIX

Everything you expect
from a vacation paradise.

Beaches, Tennis, Golf, Dining,
Entertainment, Shopping,
Relaxation

Ralph Locke Islands, Inc.
P.O. Box #800
Waccabuc, N.Y. 10597
Toll Free Nationwide
(800)-223-1108

The Buccaneer
ST. CROIX, U.S. VIRGIN ISLANDS

Barge Beautiful Canal du Midi or Cruising Burgundy aboard "La Tortue".
Spacious, comfortable. Large sundeck,
lounge, 3 twin staterooms/baths. Notable cuisine,
10-speed bikes, minibus. Seasoned, agreeable British crew. Weekly charters Apr.-Oct. Color brochure:
"LaTortue", Dept. P, Box 1466, Manchester, MA 01944

YARMOUTH, MAINE: Waterfront summer cottage overlooking Town Landing Anchorage, 2 bedrooms, 1½ baths, $500 per week. Call Parkers, Dick '46 302-478-0639, or John '52 207-781-4163.

BOOTHBAY HARBOR, MAINE REGION: Charming island cottage on water, sleeps 8, tennis on island, great boating area. Available July 13 to August 3 by week. Bill Achtmeyer '77. 508-369-6317.

MAINE, SEBEC LAKE: 5 lakeside, 3 BR, housekeeping cottages. Quiet, private. Weekly. P'90, '93. 207-564-2009.

NANTUCKET: Charming, three bedroom cottage, beautifully landscaped, Cliff Road area, short walk to beaches and town. Joe Serafini '64, 617-338-2845.

ANGUILLA: Beautiful 2 BR/2 bath villa overlooking Caribbean. All amenities, maid, 4-star snorkeling, secluded beaches, excellent dining. 301-742-0231. Fax 301-742-0995.

BLUE HILL BAY, SWAN'S ISLAND, MAINE: Renovated gem, 5 BR, 3 bath home on water. Idyllic for sailors, artists, and nature lovers; $600/wk. McCandless, 609-397-1660.

TUSCANY: Restored 300 year-old farmhouse near Cortona and Lake Trasimeno. 4 BRs, 3 baths, pool, sailboat. Minimum 2 weeks. References required. Richard Banz '60. 011-44-483-232-622.

SEABROOK ISLAND, S.C.: Near historic Charleston, 3 BRs and baths, jazuzzi, fully equipped, bikes, cable, pool, ocean, tennis, great golf, fishing, sailing, riding. Charlie Barton '41. 803-723-3156.

VAIL/BEAVER CREEK: Well-appointed 3 bedroom, 3 bath house, 15 min. to Vail, 5 min. to Beaver Creek. Available Sat. to Sat. $750/wk. Charles Gaylord '34, 303-722-3474.

18TH CENTURY THATCHED COTTAGE, rural England near Salisbury, Bath, Stonehenge, stately homes. 3 bedrooms. Weekly $550; discount spring and fall. Jay Paris, RR 1 Box 138, No. Bennington, VT 05257. 802-47-0859.

RIDGEWOOD, N.J.: Charming carriage house, 2/3 BR, 2 baths, eat-in kitchen. Fireplace, skylights, deck. All appliances, convenient N.Y. transportation. 201-445-2877.

BROOKLYN, NY: New, furnished bedroom and study. 1 subway stop from Manhattan. Available May 25-Aug. 25, 1991. For 1-2 people. $650/wk. neg. 718-802-1830.

VINALHAVEN, MAINE: Equipped cottage on Hurricane Sound. Private beach, anchorage, fireplace, pets. June-October. 207-863-4666.

BERKSHIRE SUMMER: Lake, fields, woods, 4 BR, 2 B, 10 miles Tanglewood, 120 Boston, 150 NYC. Season. 314-727-2860.

NANTUCKET: three - five bedroom house, tennis, near beaches. 914-631-5392.

FRANCE: Experience village living in heart of Provence. Biking, hiking, marketing, wine tasting, luscious food. Small 16th century house, with panoramic view of mountains and wine country. July, August $500/week, $800 bi-weekly. Special rates September-May. 213-477-6869.

CAPE COD, ON PLEASANT BAY, ONE MILE OCEAN: Three bedroom home, all amenities. O'Day sailboat. $1,100 per week. J. Du Bois 508-255-1054.

PROVIDENCIALES, TURKS, CAICOS: Luxury "Villa Camilla" offers beauty, serenity on undiscovered tropical island. 3 bedroom/3 bath house fronts pristine 12-mile beach. Virgin snorkeling, diving; bill, bone fishing. Sleeps 2-6. *71. 617-731-2194.

EASTHAMPTON: 5 BR charming home. Heated pool. Apauquogue Road. Avail. July and August. 212-517-4216.

YOUNG ALUMNI:

Looking for an ideal entry-level job in magazine editing?

Look no further than PAW,
the world's most frequently published alumni magazine.

We're seeking an assistant editor to edit and lay out the magazine's Class Notes and Memorials. This is an outstanding opportunity to learn all aspects of magazine editing and production and to do some feature writing as well.

Send your résumé and writing sample to:

Andrew Mytelka '85
Managing Editor / PAW
41 William Street
Princeton, NJ 08540

PALMA DE MALLORCA, SPAIN: Bi-weekly, monthly-June, July, September. Newly renovated, air cond. 2 BR apartment, overlooking Mediterranean. Pool. 24 hr. security. $500/wk., $2,000/mo. Utilities extra. Other properties available. Contact Foley 212-889-0876.

BEQUIA: Jewel of the Grenadines. Quiet. Beautiful. Friendly. Stone house overlooking the sea. Three bedrooms, three baths. Pool. Beach. Housekeeper. Two week rental: $3,500. 914-763-8050.

LAKE CHAMPLAIN, VT: Basin Harbor Club-lake-shore cottage. 5 BRs, kitchen, private dock, fishing, tennis, golf, pool. Club dining avail. $750/wk., June & Sept; $850/wk. July & Aug. Paul G. Sullivan '48. Call eves. 914-723-3253, days 914-397-7502.

MONTANA: Luxury log house in middle of 300 scenic, secluded acres. Fishing, riding, and Glacier National Park nearby. $600/wk. Pictures available. 908-234-1697 after April 18.

NEW HAMPSHIRE, LAKE WINNIPESAUKEE home. Weekly year-round, video. 617-721-1266.

FOR SALE

MANHATTAN: If selling a co-op, condominium, or townhouse, call about our unique 200 brokerage firm multi-list program. Sharon Baum w'62, The Corcoran Group, 645 Madison Ave., New York, NY 10022; 212-836-1036, 212-836-1038.

ISLAND HOUSE: See "For Rent, Stocking Island."

BOCA RATON, FLA., YACHTSMAN DREAM: Deep-water slip, 3,000 sq. ft. townhouse facing Boca Raton-Hotel. Next to beach club and Boca Inlet. Magnificent home or investment. Phone 407-466-4219. 407-391-9072.

MANHATTAN, 93rd & 2nd AVE.: Sunny one-bedroom, 1½ baths in new luxury doorman condominium. L-shaped dining/living area, high floor, East River views, washer/dryer, balcony, mint condition. Asking $275K. 212-607-5720.

PARIS: Richard-Lemoir (11th) 650 sf. 3 rooms plus kitchen, bath, 8 sunny windows, 4th floor, spectacular circular stair classé circa 1805. $220,000. 718-834-8894.

PRINCETON TOWNSHIP, 31 acres (part of 18th century woodlots of University). Single owner since 1900. $1,500,000. L.V. Silvester, Jr. '45, Executor, Box 52, Princeton, 08542. 609-921-6171.

EASTERN SHORE OF CHESAPEAKE BAY: Free brochure featuring prime real estate. Waterfront farms, estates and homesites in Oxford, St. Michaels and Easton. Call or write Marguerite Beebe w/57. 301-822-2234 or Coldwell Banker Latham Realtors, 29 Dover St., Easton, MD 21601.

STONINGTON, CT: Sailor's paradise, 300' waterfront on deep water cove. Spectacular views. 4 BR, 2½ baths, separate garage/apt. 1½ acres, 2 moorings, 140' dock. Lucia Johnstone w/58, Pequot Properties, 203-535-3035.

BEQUIA: Jewel of the Grenadines. Quiet. Beautiful. Friendly. Stone house overlooking the sea. Three bedrooms, three baths. Furnished Italian-French. Pool. Beaches. $845,000. 914-763-8050.

SARASOTA, FLORIDA: 3 BR, 2½ bath, 5 year old home on lake, pool. Easy access to Interstate and airport. Owner building new home. $135,000. 813-371-8528 evs.

HOMES, VILLAS, AND HOMESITES ON TROPICAL HILTON HEAD ISLAND. For information call William Guggenheim 800-343-6821.

FOR SALE/FOR RENT

NANTUCKET—Come join the 400 happy Princeton families. We have large and small rentals, investment opportunities, estates and commercial enterprises. AND we give your investments TENDER, LOVING CARE—PREFERRED PROPERTIES. Nancie B. Taylor, w/43, Lucy T. Eaton, d/43. 508-228-2320, 800-338-7715.

WASHINGTON, DC, METROPOLITAN area, Northern Virginia, Maryland. Sales, rentals, land, property management. Colleen Finks w/61, associate broker, Pardoe & Graham, 6729 Curran St., McLean, VA 22101; 703-734-7020; evs., 703-821-2850.

MANHATTAN: Buying or selling Manhattan! Anne Sullivan Young w/67. Corcoran Group 212-836-1057; evs. 212-410-0705.

MANHATTAN, CPW 80's: Pre-war large 1 bedroom with dining area and hardwood floors just off CPW on tree-lined block, asking $160,000, low maintenance charge; or rent at $1,500/month. Great for Central Park lovers. 212-721-2606.

WANTED TO RENT

BERMUDA: Retired couple seeks 1 BR furnished apt/cottage with kitchen on beach 9/15—10/15/91. Best references. Please send description, photo, rates to Tom Melohn '52 at 11 Crane Ct., Orinda, CA 94563.

HOUSE SIT

OLD GRAD AND PRINCETON SEMINARY student wife desire house sitting 1991-92. Good with antiques, pets, gardens, even cows. Call Evans Al-loway '52. 215-862-3139.

RESORTS & TRAVEL

LONDON, ENGLAND: Luxury self-catering apartments in the heart of Mayfair. British Breaks, Ltd., Box 1176, Middleburg, Virginia 22117. Tel. 703-687-6971. Fax 703-687-6291.

SCOTLAND: Ardsheal House, historic home of the Stewarts of Appin, now a country house hotel owned and run by Jane & Bob Taylor (Princeton '53). Located on coast in magnificent West Highlands. Superb food. Brochure: Ardsheal House, Keltallen of Appin, Argyll PA38 4BX, Scotland. Tel.: 44-63174-227. Fax: 44-63174-342. Open Easter to Nov.

LEARN UMBRIAN cooking in renovated farmhouse in Italy. 212-873-5104.

WORKSHOPS/INSTRUCTION

NEW HAMPSHIRE PAINTING VACATIONS: Highly acclaimed teachers. Weekly 5-day workshops starting July 15. Brochure: ARTS PRO TEM, Box 804P, Hancock, NH 03449, 603-525-3770.

WANTED TO BUY

RARE BOOKS AND FIRST EDITIONS: We are interested in purchasing libraries or single volumes from the 15th to the 20th century. Top prices paid. Also, expert appraisals for individuals or institutions. David L. O'Neal '60, Antiquarian Booksellers, Inc., 234 Clarendon St., Boston, MA 02116; 617-266-5790.

FINE ARTWORK: American, European, Canadian, and Western oil paintings, watercolors, drawings, and bromes purchased for immediate cash. Gallery of the Masters, Inc., 9918 Clayton Road, St. Louis, MO 63124; 314-993-4477; fax 314-993-4478.

50s AND 60s HI-FI: I collect tube-type electronic equipment. Mark van Roojen GS, 127 Moore St., Princeton, NJ 08540. 609-921-8171.

GOODS & SERVICES

NANNIES: Trained at Nannies of Cleveland School, available for positions nationwide. Call Monica Bassett w/61. 216-521-4650.

PROFESSIONAL TAX PLANNING, ACCOUNTING, AUDIT REPRESENTATION. Personal and business. Enrolled to practice before IRS. By appointment. 212-947-6031. Virgil M. Cummins '67 (EA), 430 West 34th Street, New York, NY 10001.

BENTLEY 1960 SII RHD: Burgundy, very good condition. Estate sale, Class '48. Days 212-237-1560. Evenings 908-322-5223.

A STEINWAY AND SONS baby grand piano. Brown mahogany cabinet/Sheraton style. Manufactured 1909. Call Stuart Nunnery '71. 215-794-5135.

MEMBERSHIP COMPUTER SYSTEM for PC: Membership, letters, planning, attendance, billing, contributions for all clubs, societies, associations, foundations. 903-876-2224.

BOOKS

THE LION'S SHARE (Donald Young). Powerful novel about the lost battalions in the Ardennes, WW II. "Up there with O'Brien's Going after Cacciato." Peterson. "Miniature Catch 22 & Slaughterhouse 5." Marcus. Princeton University Store.

POSITION AVAILABLE

COUPLE WANTED to manage long-established southern Arizona dude ranch; year round position; seven month winter season; riding is main guest activity, and atmosphere is Old West, not resort. Present managers retiring; management experience required; prefer mature couple without responsibility for dependents. Send resumes and work references for both husband and wife, and salary requirements to: Mrs. L. S. Nash, Box 194-Q, Circle Z Ranch, Patagonia, AZ 85624. Please do not telephone.

POSITION WANTED

TIGER EX-TEACHER: naturalist, environmentalist, horticulturist, with managerial skills and experience, seeks resident stewardship of natural area, preserve, or rural estate. Responsible, resourceful, reliable, relocatable. 516-283-0089 evenings.

EDUCATION

ANXIOUS ABOUT COLLEGE OR GRADUATE SCHOOL APPLICATIONS? Former Ivy admission officer will help you right from the start. College Planning Associates: 212-496-2656.

APPLYING TO COLLEGES? Educational consultant will help your son or daughter choose wisely, do the job right. Former dean, 30 years experience. Dodge Johnson '59. 215-647-6755.

PERSONAL

CLASS OF 1988 IN LOS ANGELES: AYALIE wants HER California license plate back. Last seen in World Trade Center parking structure. Willing to barter. 818-405-8962.

PLACE YOUR AD IN THE PRINCETON EXCHANGE

Name: _____

Address: _____

City: _____

State: _____ Zip: _____

Tel.#, (W): _____ (H): _____

My ad should run _____ time(s),

beginning the month of _____

Classification: _____

Payment for all insertions must accompany initial request. My check for $_____ is enclosed. Rates per insertion: 1-5 insertions, $1.50 per word; 6-10 insertions, $1.45 per word; 11-17 insertions, $1.40 per word. Send to: Princeton Exchange, Princeton Alumni Weekly, 41 William St., Princeton, NJ 08540 (609)258-4888. No phone orders please. Issues are published 17 times from September through July. Ads will appear five-six weeks after receipt. When calculating payment, multiply number of words X number of insertions X rate per word to arrive at total price. P.O. Box number counts as two words, phone number as one word. No charge for zip code or class numerals. We cannot accept raw box numbers. Please attach this coupon to text and make checks payable to Princeton Alumni Weekly.

12

ARTHUR C. HOLDEN
Box 182
Washington, CT 06793; 203-868-7063

When 1912 first came to Princeton there may have been five or six of the undergraduates who were not brought into Princeton behind a steam locomotive that chugged up the hill and stopped just beneath Blair's steps.

Who would have believed that not steam, but electricity, would be the mechanical means for compulsion to bring us to Princeton during the years since then? Who would have suggested in 1908 that the gasoline engine would make it possible to bring an individual student to Princeton either by automobile or airplane from any point in the world in order to start his career at Princeton? Who would have believed that among the students who came to Princeton by a steam train in 1908 that two would still be alive in 1991 and capable of attending their 79th reunion by the aid of a gasoline engine?

13

ALISON R. BRYAN
Box F
Frenchtown, NJ 08825

J. Laurence Hutton Jr., son of our J. L. Hutton, writes to say that his father was a great admirer of Princeton's Professor Laurence, who died in 1907.

On entering Princeton in 1909, or about that time, John "Jack" Hutton, in appreciation of the professor, took for his middle name that of Professor Laurence, so becoming J. Laurence Hutton. Laurie Hutton '41 says that he has an old letter from Professor Laurence's widow, expressing appreciation of the honor done her husband by Larry taking his name. Both Laurie and his younger brother, William '43, followed in their father's footsteps, graduating from Princeton's School of Engineering.

Ross T. Bunker '94, from Eugene, Oreg., sends his thanks for a Wrestling Cabot Brewster 1913 War Memorial Scholarship. His career hope is for computer programing. His interests are tennis and skiing.

Mrs. Howie Kiser (honorary member of the classes of '55, '75, and '84) of the Alumni Council office, is assigned to help Old Guard classes. 1913 welcomes her. Howie's daughter is a member and secretary of the Class of 1975.

14

C. EARL MOORE
Rosemont Plaza, Apt. 117
Rosemont, PA 19010

In the Mar. 18 issue of SPORTS ILLUSTRATED there appears a biographic masterpiece about Hobey Baker. The author of this fascinating story about Hobey spent endless days traveling from place to place and having interviews with people who knew Hobey; one of whom was your Class secretary. Hobey's life, from boyhood to his death in France, Dec. 21, 1918, is a thrilling story, entitled A FLAME THAT BURNED TOO BRIGHTLY.

17

ICI CHAMBER, c/o Chemical Bank
30 Rockefeller Plaza, Ste. 6100
New York, NY 10112

The Service of Remembrance, held in the Chapel on Feb. 16, honored the following departed classmates: Perc Buchanan, Kent Colwell, Stacy Fine,

Harry Hoyt, Norrie Jackson, Luther Jones, and Reese Oberbauer. President Wbit Landon officially represented the Class. Also present at this moving service were the following members of the Colwell family: Kent's widow, Pam; his daughter, Ann Catherine Menninger; his grandson, Lincoln Colwell; and Pam's daughter and son-in-law, Jennifer and Malcolm Hayden. Arch Crossley's daughter, Helen, was also in attendance.

Herewith are excerpts from some of the letters of appreciation received from awardees of 1917 scholarships. Edward S. Lau, a freshman and a recipient of the Marquand Ward War Memorial Scholarship, writes: "Having survived a busy first semester, I can say that Princeton has exceeded my expectations of the collegiate experience. As a student in the B.S.E. track, a degree in electrical engineering is my goal. Computer engineering is a relatively new field in electrical engineering that has engaged my interest. I feel very fortunate that with the generosity of the Class of 1917, I benefit from a first-rate education that would otherwise be impossible."

Keith M. Lundberg, a junior and a recipient of the Donald Neil Campbell Ross War Memorial Scholarship, writes: "The scholarship is currently helping me through my junior year, in pursuit of an electrical engineering degree. This semester is the first in which I begin concentrating on specific fields of study within the department, and so far I feel happy with the paths I am following. I am grateful to the Class of 1917 for aiding me this year in school. Without such scholarships, my attendance would not be possible." Evangelina Morales, a freshman who hails from Puerto Rico, is a recipient of the Barrington West Sellers War Memorial Scholarship. She writes, "I have a big academic and personal interest in languages and will probably pursue learning as many as I can. Another strong interest is in the area of international relations, foreign social service, or foreign diplomacy. At this moment I am really enjoying Princeton and would like to extend my gratitude to the Class of 1917."

18

JAMES CROWHILL
Meadow Lakes, Apt. 3108
Hightstown, NJ 08520

In response to our plea for news from any source about the 1918 "family," we have received a truly wonderful letter from Mary Marvin, widow of Bill Marvin. (No one has sent in any limericks as yet!) Mary, who lives in Pitman, N.J., tells the exciting story of the success of Bill's granddaughter, Julia Marvin '88, who, at her commencement took highest honors in English and was elected to Phi Beta Kappa. On that big day, Mary presented Julia with Bill's Phi Beta key, a gesture with which Bill would certainly have been thrilled. Julia is musically gifted, having played trombone in the Princeton Marching Band, led the Madrigal Singers, and toured England with the Glee Club. Julia's goal is to be a college professor, and at present she is working towards a master's in English at the Princeton Graduate School.

Mary tells us that granddaughter Julia is the third Marvin Princetonian. Her uncle, James Marvin, graduated in 1952 and enjoyed very considerable success as a sculptor. He worked with our renowned sculptor, Joe Brown, on many projects, including the athletic statuary at Veterans' Stadium in Philadelphia. James died Feb. 12, 1990, after a miserable bout with lymphoma.

Bill and Mary had one daughter, Mary, a talented musician and a bright and warm person. She died in Jan. 1989 from strep pneumonia, leaving a grieving husband, three grown children, and two brothers.

Mary Marvin closes her letter with the following: "And many thanks to '18 for their gift of the WEEKLY to me. I enjoy reading it—keeps me in touch with 'The Best Old Place of All.'"

The widow of classmate Bill Buell died in Newport, R.I., Feb. 14, 1991. She and Bill were the parents of three Princeton graduates, classes of '46, '49, and '51.

19

GEORGE B. LARSEN
14 Lake Forest Dr.
Charlottesville, VA 22901

Nat Aronsobn likes his living arrangement, still has a special assistant for health, and feels quite well and says he is the youngest member of the Class.

It was reported in the Mar. 6 issue that Dr. Bradley C. Downing had died. That was not so. He is alive and we wish him all the best.

20

SALLY S. McALPIN W'20
Box 670
Princeton, NJ 08542

A cheerful letter from Eva Townley reports that daughter Sue and her family joined Eva at St. Maarten's in the Caribbean and divided their time between the beach and the shops. I would add that these two diversions are equally popular.

Frank Dixon says: "Am now pushing 95 with most parts still active. No walking, no dancing, no golf." Ed: Frank's mind was certainly active as we reminisced over the telephone last summer. I guess he had just received from the University the book PRINCETON REFLECTIONS, in honor of his "perfect record of support through all 50 years of Annual Giving."

Mary Helm is always generous about news, cheerful or dreary. She writes me that Betty Deyo McNeely died Feb. 15 and had a simple graveside ceremony in New Paltz, N.Y., where Wop and his family are buried. Betty's second husband, George McNeely, died several years ago. Wop was secretary of the Class for many years and took special pride in the job. On the cheerful side, Mary Helm is taking her immediate family to the Callaway Gardens this spring, and her granddaughter Mary Helm Ketcham plans to marry at the Vineyard in September. Three cheers for Mary, who shares so much news with us. We love to read it.

Most wars are short lived as news as soon as they are ended. So I hasten to close with a charming episode about a very pretty young lady who works in Princeton. This story I found in the PACKET and its title is "Oh, Wow!" The heroine is Miss Pirnie; the hero, Second Lt. Stan Martin. From Saudi Arabia he telephoned the Boutonniere by Guy Florist to deliver 12 long stemmed red roses to Nicole Pirnie on St. Valentine's Day, each rose to be wrapped in a strand of yellow ribbon, and the enclosed card to read: "From your desert rose, Stan," Her acceptance speech was, "Oh, wow!"

21

A. EDWARD CONOVER
331 Lower Doolington Rd., Apt. C-4
Newtown, PA 18940

Do you remember that limerick about the "old man of Nantucket" that was in the '18 column of the Feb. 20 now? Well, one of our classmates, Ham Morris, is a limerick lover too, and a couple of years ago he sent me a copy of that same verse plus two more chapters of the same story that he had found in the book OUR TIMES by Mark Sullivan. In case you forgot the verse that appeared last February, here is the whole story:

There once was a man from Nantucket
Who kept all his cash in a bucket;
But his daughter, named Nan,
Ran away with a man,
And as for the bucket, Nantucket.
But he followed the pair to Pawtucket—
The man and the girl with the bucket;
And he said to the man
He was welcome to Nan,
But as for the bucket, Pawtucket.
Then the pair followed Pa to Manhasset,
Where he still held the cash as an asset;
But Nan and the man
Stole the money and ran,
And as for the money, Manhasset.

Hearty birthday greetings from the Class to Ed Crabtree, who will reach 93 on May 2, and to Tom Roberts, who will be 92 on Apr. 21.

22

JACK REYNOLDS, JOHN CARTER '00
103 East 84th St.
New York, NY 10028

The Alumni Day gathering was well attended and enjoyed by all. Jack Lewis, Bob Scholl, Baudy Maull, and Flora were joined by Mrs. Esther Loos and her son. Prof. Frank Calaprice, master of Butler College; Danielle Bohan '94, a resident of Lourie Love Hall; and Butler College Administrator Linda Loughran were at the table as well. Elaine Jiraneh stopped by with her son to say hello. Jack represented the Class at the Service of Remembrance.

Jim Scarff makes the following announcement about Reunions 1991. On Fri., June 7, the traditional Class dinner for classmates, wives, widows, children, and grandchildren will be held at the Nassau Club. On Saturday the Old Guard Luncheon at Chancellor Green will begin at noon, followed by the historic P-rade. Transportation for the P-rade will be provided, and there is no reunion charge at all. A formal announcement will be mailed in May. However, Jim would be happy to discuss any details or questions with you—call 609-426-6283.

The current Annual Giving results are very good. Twenty classmates have given $8,591 and we have received an additional $19,525 in gifts from widows, children, and matching grants from companies. The A.G. office tells us that many individuals have established Annual Giving endowments so that this important source of unrestricted funds can continue in perpetuity. The elected officers and/or your assistant secretary would be pleased to discuss the details at your convenience.

23

LISEY GOOD
201 W. Evergreen Ave., Apt. 716
Philadelphia, PA 19118

February 16 marked a cold and windy Alumni Day. Members and friends of the Class present for the activities included Betsey and Alan Carrick, Betty Gorman, Class Secretary Lisey Good, Honorary Member Barbara DiMeglio, and three members of the Phillips clan: Mrs. Freddy Phillips, son Fritz, and granddaughter Victoria.

Kristopher Akara, a Hawaii native and Princeton undergraduate, writes "I have been granted the opportunity to study at Princeton with the help of Mr. Kirkpatrick's scholarship fund . . . I am very grateful for the financial support I've received from the Class of '23. Thank you very much for all of your 'aloha' and help!"

We regret to report the passing of Cyril Farneyon Sept. 26, 1990.

24

RICHARD H. HOMES
862 Prospect Ave.
Winnetka, IL 60093

It is not too early to think about 1924's 67th reunion: dinner, Fri., June 8, at the residence of our indefatigably generous and loyal Honorary Classmate Bobbie Emery; Old Guard Luncheon and P-rade Sat., June 9. Room reservations should be made now. Call Paul Barringer, 609-924-4660, or write P.O. Box 672, Princeton, NJ 08542.

The three happy classmates pictured need no introduction. The photograph was taken on Prospect during our 60th.

The Class of 1924 and Henry B. Kirkland Scholarships provide funds with which to send students abroad for foreign study. The University advises that the following are the recipients for the 1990-91 academic year. Each is spending this semester studying in the country indicated: Anna Cabrera '92 (Mexico); Melissa Chauvin '92 (Spain); Jose Briones '92 (Mexico); John Granholm '92 (Sweden); Paul Gillan '92 (Spain); Kevin Prokup '92 (Russia).

Hubert Alyea was the evening speaker at the Mar. 29 meeting of the Natl. Science Teachers Assn. in Houston, Tex. The title of his address was "A Night with Hubert Alyea." He included excerpts from his TV film MEET THE PROFESSOR and his book ATOMIC ENERGY: WEAPON FOR PEACE. They awarded him the well-deserved 1991 Robert H. Carlton Award for Natl. Leadership in Science Education. Some 1500 were in attendance.

25

JOHN L. K. JENNEY
Box 123
Montchanin, DE 19710

At the memorial service held at the annual meeting of the Headmasters Assn., the memorial for Bob Cunningham, who died June 7, 1989, was given by Ashby Harper '39, who had succeeded him as headmaster of St. Louis Country Day School when Bob became dean of Phillips Exeter Academy. The service was held at the Chauncey Conference Center. Bob's widow, Louise, has moved from Florida to Bermuda Village in Advance, N.C.

Harriet Henderson and her son Hendie Jr. '53 spent a few days in Washington visiting art museums. She is a trustee of the Museum of Modern Art in San Francisco and has a noteworthy collection of her own. Your secretary and Mary joined them in a visit to the Natl. Collection, aided by passes to the very crowded Titian and Van Dyke shows which Lucinda Leigh obtained for them.

The Jennys also report having had lunch at the Field Club in Sarasota, Fla. on Feb. 24 with Dot and Bill Dwight, who recently moved to a retirement home, Lakehurst East, at 4541 Bee Ridge Road. Bill had spent the previous week in the hospital recovering from a mild heart attack. They talked of the possibility of moving back to their house on Sandy Cove Road. The Jennys moved on to visit the Manasota Beach Club, where they found beautiful weather and a number of Princetonians, including Walter Morgan '20, Andy Barr '27 and Charlotte Townsend, widow of Charlie Townsend '24 and sister of Alice Cleaves. Also Walter Morgan '20 and Andy Barr '27.

Remember when you took your children on the prep school tour? More appropriate to our age, the Warnocks recently returned from a trip to Delaware, Maryland, and Virginia to inspect five retirement homes, from which they hope to select one.

Ken Van Riper has moved from Sarasota and is now living with his son in Minoa, N.Y.

We regret to report the deaths of Russ Ramsey, Richard Martin, Alice McNeely, and Rosalyn Krieger.

26

ROBERT WOHLFORTH
57 Rockwell Rd.
Ridgefield, CT 06877

Pictured here are Slew Peyton and granddaughter Diana Peyton Kollevoll '87 at the reception following her marriage to Eric John Kollevoll on Oct. 6, 1990, in the Pennington (N.J.) Presbyterian Church. Parents of the bride are Dr. and Mrs.

Murray S. Peyton '57.

Bill Edwards, '26's "loyal British subject," (his own words), writes from "Four Winds" in Surrey, England, an eight-page holograph letter regretting that Joan and he are not up to a trans-Atlantic trip and thus will miss our 65th reunion this June. Always manifesting a penetrating interest in 1926 and the University, Bill expresses again his "deep-felt thanks to Princeton and to all classmates" for all that his association with us has meant to him. He has a generous word for Class officers and classmates who have kept in touch and visited him over the years. He has had to give up golf because of a leg injury some years ago, but makes do with gardening and walking for exercise. Joan has taken up painting, mainly doing portraits in oils with bill as her critic, drawing on all that he learned from Prof. Mather's course at Princeton.

Louisa and Dick France met Assoc. Mbr. Julia Bergland and Rose and Lew Rufford at a forum in Colonial Williamsburg recently. They plan to visit Barlow Henderson in Nashville in April. Assoc.

Mbr. Eleanor Koebler in Chevy Chase, Md., reports that her youngest daughter was married last fall.

We report with sadness the death of Nate Moyse suddenly on Feb. 28 of this year, and of Henry M. Spitzer on Mar. 27, 1988.

27

MELSON R. BURN
36 Lexington Rd.
West Hartford, CT 06119

As the Secretary sits down to write this report, he would rather like to go out for a walk. His native Connecticut is enjoying an incredible February, with sunny afternoons and temperatures pushing into the forties and fifties. Kids run around with bare legs and men shop in shirt sleeves. It's the right afternoon to report that Bill Thomas is cheerful about being 80-plus. He reads the Ann Landers column "once in a blue moon," and clipped for the secretary one of this cheerful note: "So please, folks, try to make it to 80. It's the best time of life. People forgive you for anything. If you ask me, life begins at 80." Bill says that 85 is even better, and "Best to you and the Class."

Butts Butterworth reports that after he had a cataract removed from his left eye in 1985, his eyesight improved for a while. But now, he has lost the ability to see details, or to read even with a magnifying glass. But the tone of his letters reveals an astonishing height of courage and patience.

This is all the news we have for now. How about mailing in some accounts of winter vacations, and helping the secretary to measure up to the ideal of the indefatigable long-time secretary of 1925? Always a full column! And how about some photos of self, family, and travels?

We have a memorial in this issue.

28

R. PARK JOHNSON
Box 28
Penny Farms, FL 32079; 904-284-8698

The small delegation of '28 members at the Alumni Day luncheon in Jadwin Gym on Feb. 16 was composed of Fred Hyer and Perc Young, who were joined by honorary member Judy McCartin. Fred was the '28 representative at the Service of Remembrance.

Plans are going forward for a Spring Picnic in late April or early May, but the date was not fixed when this column went to the mail, and it is hoped that there will be the usual good attendance at this always-pleasant "rite of spring."

Judge Oliver Gasch of the U.S. District Court for the District of Columbia was once again in charge of a hearing in the case of an anti-nuclear petition against a nuclear-powered satellite launched by a space shuttle in October 1989 he had denied such a petition, when the Atlantis launched a Jupiter probe named Galileo. In Oct. 1990, the satellite to be sent into space from Discovery was named Ulysses. It was designed to rocket itself out of earth orbit for a round-about voyage around the sun, scheduled to be over Jupiter's north pole in 1992, and then be given additional impulse by the big planet's intense gravity hurling it back toward the sun. It will be near (only 120 million miles) the sun in 1994, and 18 months later will pass over the so-far unexplored north pole region of the sun. Judge Gasch again rejected the petition, asserting that adequate safeguards were built into the satellite.

Bob Royes died Feb. 19, at the Ashbrook Nursing Home in Scotch Plains, N.J. His wife, Margaret, died in 1981. Our sympathy is with their son Robert Jr. and their daughter Helen Collins.

29

LOUIS F. KAMP
12 Winthrop Rd.
Guilford, CT 06437; 203-453-4646

A greeting from Tony Sessa to the Class officers, wishing them the best of health. Tony had carved out quite a niche for himself in Brooklyn, where he practiced law for many years, was active and served in numerous organizations and clubs. He now lives in Manhattan, overlooking Central Park.

A card from Tom Block tells of being out on the West Coast at the Birman Wood Golf Club, near Santa Barbara, for three months, enjoying friends and good weather. Unfortunately, his right foot has handicapped him from playing golf, his true love, as much as he'd like.

Spence Marsb kindly shared a letter from Peggy Wright, Fult Wright's wife, about his trials in battling cancer. He was first stricken in 1979. Although he has nurses' aides for some hours each day, Fult keeps fantastically strong, taking an interest in the world, in sports on TV, and in staying cheerful.

Catherine and Carl Breuer have been well pleased with their move to Meadow Lakes in Hightstown early last year. They enjoy their attractive apartment, can keep in touch with friends in Princeton (just 25 minutes away) and have peace of mind with medical care available if needed and enjoy the companionship that this retirement community affords. With its proximity to Princeton, many of its graduates have moved there, including a number from our Class. Regretfully, Jack Kerr's wife, Margaret, died Aug. 25, 1989.

We have a memorial in this issue.

30

ROBERT A. "TOD" SCHNEIDER
8008 Westover Rd.
Bethesda, MD 20814

Wally Ruckert represented the Class at the Service of Remembrance on Alumni Day in Princeton on Feb. 17. Also present were Agnes and Bill Forsyth, Fred Pieters, Syd Stevens, and Associate Mrs. Frank Johnson with her daughter, grandson, and granddaughter.

While in Boca Grande, Fla., Wally and Red Schneider had a drink with Associate Jean Bennett, who was making her annual visit at the Gasparilla Inn.

Jean and George Milburn have been living in Victoria, British Columbia for the past 15 years. George is still active in mineral exploration, mainly in the Carson City area of Nevada and the Wickensburg area of Arizona. He would like to hear from his classmates.

Agnes and Bill Forsyth spent a week in Antigua in late Feb.

Reunions this year will be held on June 7 and 8. Preliminary plans call for our headquarters to be in Cloister Inn, which, we are told, has been extensively renovated. More details later.

On behalf of the Class we take this occasion to salute Laurance Rockefeller '32, who received Princeton's highest honor, the Woodrow Wilson award, on Alumni Day. Mr. Rockefeller is noted not only for his many generous contributions to Princeton but also for his donations to his country, exemplified by the Natl. Parks on St. John in the Virgin Islands and Jackson Hole in the Grand Teton country of Wyoming. The Class of 1932 is justifiably proud of this distinguished Princetonian, whose loyalty to Princeton remains steadfast despite the many changes which have taken place since his undergraduate days.

We report with regret the death of Phil Ham in January. A memorial will follow.

31

HUEN T. KAM
15-01-U Meadow Lakes
Hightstown, NJ 08520; 609-448-4100

Not many of us retain clear memories of WWI. During the period from 1914 to 1918 we were eight, nine, ten years old. Perhaps we remember some of the war posters, the blue and gold starflags in windows, the Liberty Bonds plugged by Douglas Fairbanks and Mary Pickford, and newsboys hawking their "Extra Extra." But memories of the era are still vivid and poignant in the popular songs of the time, such as "It's Long Way to Tipperary," "Pack up Your Troubles," "Keep the Home Fires," "There's a Long, Long Trail," "Smiles," and so forth.

What has any of this to do with of '31? Some of us who took R.O.T.C. in our time remember with nostalgia, and a certain amount of amusement, that during the decade of 1931, we were still being trained with horse-drawn equipment, and the fieldpieces were left-over WWI French 75s (using spent ammunition. Perhaps this was useful military training for those who went onto WWII, but for us of who went charging around the lower campus, it was disconcerting to learn that the A Army nags always anticipated the officer's command. We remember Sergeant Bixbe telling us how to clean the guns with "Slushin' erl," and Captain McConihe saying "he rides just like a part of a horse; which part we will not say, of course."

One of the cartoons of WWI that many remember was of two doughboys hunkered down in a shallow shell hole with bombs bursting in air. One says to the other, "If you know of a better hole, go to it."

32

MATLAND A. BROY
1199 Park Ave.
New York, NY 10018

Word has come from the University about the scholarships sponsored by the Class. This year a record 26 students are receiving aid that comes in one way or another from '32, viz:

THE ALEXANDER MATLAND STEWART, 1898, SCHOLARSHIP, funded in his father's memory by Jimmy Stewart, supports five undergraduates this year.

THE SAMUEL COCHRAN JR. MEMORIAL SCHOLARSHIP FUND, raised over the years by friends and classmates of Sam Cochran, has now grown to the point where it can help two students this year.

THE JAMES DONNELL CLASS OF 1932 SCHOLARSHIP, funded by Jim Donnell, is our largest, and this year gives support to 15 students.

THE KENNETH W. GRENEMILL SCHOLARSHIP, funded by Ken Gremmell, takes care of two students.

THE CLASS OF 1932 SCHOLARSHIP was established several years ago from reserve funds of the Class, and supports one scholar.

THE CLASS OF 1932 ENDOWED SCHOLARSHIP comes from the Condit bequest, steered our way by Jim Macfarland, and supports one student. All recipients are encouraged to write to the donors about themselves. Many do. Jim Macfarland goes a step further; he writes to the recipients, explaining the nature of the Condit bequest. In the past he has never had a reply, but this year he got one, a heart-warming letter from Roland Villacorta '94, telling all about his life in the Philippines, and explaining that his full name—Filipino style—is John Gerard Roland Esteban Villacorta III. An "olé" to Roland.

Here's a quiz gleaned from the 1932 BRIC-A-BRAC: What classmate played the piccolo in the University band and the oboe in the orchestra? Better yet, what classmate played the clarinet in the band, the violin in the orchestra, and the drums in the instrumental club? For answers, see next column.

33

ANTHONY MOODY
600 E. Cathedral Rd., Apt. A314
Philadelphia, PA 19128

In the Dec. 19 PAW, we reported that Fife Symington Jr. was facing a runoff election for the governorship of Arizona. Well, the election was held, and Fife won. As a result, Fife Symington Sr. becomes the first member of '33 to be the father of a governor, joining two other distinguished classmates, namely Soapy Williams, governor of Michigan, and George White, son of a governor of Ohio. Incidentally, we recently heard from George, who tells us that he and Betty were in Mexico at the Balboa Club last November with Eleanor and Gardiner Green. While they were there, Gardiner developed serious heart problems, but they're home now and Eleanor says he's okay. She says he's tough.

Supplement to the account of Alumni Day: Connie and Ed Holschub were there, and Mary Jane Paynter was at the Service of Remembrance, representing Bob Guttm's family. Mary Jane is the sister of Betty Gwinn.

As we get into the Annual Giving campaign, we can state that Curly Marsb had his annual visit to Boca Grande, from which he returned refreshed and ready for the final push. He golfed with "Keidel et al." The et al was not spelled out, but we understand it was down some from last year, when Agnew, the Carters, Crous, and Gaffneys took part.

With regret we report the death on Feb. 20, 1991, of Jack Stokes in Princeton. A memorial service was held Feb. 24 at the Stony Brook Friends Meeting.

The Carters, Hewsons, Ludhams, and Tournends attended, and Dave Ludlum said a few words about Jack. We have memorials in this issue.

34

RALPH K. PITCHEE
4347 Province Line Rd.
Princeton, NJ 08540

Lank Seibert, shown here some 60 years ago, is one of seven former sports greats in the 130-year history of Pingry School, in Elizabeth, N.J., to be inducted next month in its new Athletic Hall of Fame. At Pingry he lettered in baseball and soccer as well as basketball. At Princeton Lank was a three-year letterman and in our senior year won the B. Franklin Bunn Trophy, Princeton basketball's highest award. As a junior, on Dec. 10, 1932 ("Lank had hot hands that night," in the words of Ken Fairman, who captained the 1933-34 team) he scored 15 field goals against Ursinus, a Tiger record that stood for 31 years. (It was broken Dec. 21, 1963, by Bill Bradley '65, with 18 field goals against Wisconsin). Over and above his prowess on the court, Lank made another lasting contribution to Princeton basketball when he provided the funds that made possible the East Team Room in Jadwin Gym.

Fred Kammer, who qualified and played in nine U.S. amateur golf tournaments 1935-64 and was a member of the victorious Walker Cup team of 1947, says he does not "play tennis, bridge, croquet, or sail, which limits to a degree my activities. My golf handicap has gone up from 2 to 24."

Ruth and Len Warriner, both ardent golfers (he has shot two holes-in-one, the more recent in '89), spent several days last fall on Jekyll Island, Ga. on their annual outing with MISGA, the Maryland Interstate Seniors Golf Assn.

Some class!

We have a memorial in this issue.

35

JOSEPH C. HAZEN JR.
94 Essex Rd.
Summit, NJ 07901

MOVING UP. Alb Flotas, a retired manufacturing executive of Philadelphia, views with alarm the fact the "1935 is getting uncomfortably close to RAW's front page."

MIDDLE MAN. Fred Temple, of Charlotte, N.C., is a retired C.P.A., a golfer, bridge player, and Civil War buff, but his favorite activity is acting "as an arbitrator for the N.A.S.D. (National Assn. of Security Dealers). I sit on their panels a few times a year and help decide controversies between brokers and their customers. The parties are required to submit their differences to arbitration, and this takes a big burden off the Federal Court system. Very interesting work."

IN PRINCETON'S SERVICE. Ted Kelly, of Chestertown, Md., has served nine years as secretary-treasurer of the alumni association of Maryland's Eastern Shore, with 125 constituents spread over 125 miles. Ted is a retiree from Union Carbide. . . . Bob McEuen, of Geneva, Switzerland, has served 10 years as regional chairman of Annual Giving for that country. Bob has lived in Switzerland for 29 years and worked for F.M.C. Corp. (once known as Food Machinery and Chemical Corp.) until retirement in 1975.

BLUE AND WHITE TIGER. Chick Weaver, of Westport, Conn., says he has thought about using the Class birthday card "as a design for my next hooked rug, but I have decided that orange and black won't fit in with the rest of our interior decorating." Then he asks, "How about a blue and white tiger?" Chick adds that he has played a lot of golf with Neil Lebbor, who lives nearby and has taken up sport seriously, after forsaking tennis because of a hip operation. "His progress has been phenomenal." Chick is retired from the insurance business; Neil, from the medical profession.

IN MEMORIAM. John K. Bennett of Tucson, Ariz., Apr. 1, 1912—Dec. 15, 1990. The Class has memorials in this issue.

36

JAMES G. BENSON
24 Aylesbury Cir., Windermere
Madison, CT 06443

Our nominating committee comprising past presidents Glassmeyer, Groel, and Richard announces the following slate of Class officers to serve for the next five years: President—Jesser, Vice Presidents—Scheide and J. P. Jones (West), Secretary—Benson, Treasurer—Gibby, and Class Agent—E. M. Williams.

Add to the growing list of those expecting to attend our 55th: B. Brown, Glassmeyer, Goudreau, Grenier, G. S. Jones, J. P. Jones, Perry, Souverance, G. Smith, Scheide, Spencer, J. W. Thompson, R. Williams, and Wright.

We have received the jacket of a new book by Randolph "Pat" Jenks, co-authored by Beverly Powell and published by Zondervan Publishing House. It is named DESERT QUEST, THE HUNT FOR TRUE GOLD. It can be found in most major book stores. This book offers adventure, action, biography, travel, history, and inspiration. The book's forward, by Dr. Elton Trueblood, states "DESERT GOLD is one of a kind. It is the extraordinary memoirs of Randolph Jenks, who, as a young man, conducted a search for his family's gold mine in the rugged mountains of northern Mexico. The reason? The fruits of the mine were being regularly robbed by a female outlaw named Doña Poinciana. Living with constant dangers, natural and human alike, he learned many lessons along the way. Eventually his search for gold was overtaken by his search for God. His own life is an experiment in practical Christianity." Pat splits his time between his home in Tucson, Ariz. and at his ranch in Luna, N.M.

Rev. John A. Thompson would welcome cards at Highland Convalescent Hospital, 1840 Highland Ave., Duarte, CA 91010.

We regret to report that John Hind's wife, Evelyn, died Mar. 3 and Seaver Jones's wife, Louise, on Mar. 2.

37

STANFORD F. MEDINA
250 Broadway, Rm. 2104
New York, NY 10007

Valentine's day gave a tug at Fred Parkin's heart as he and Tish would have been married 50 years, but he's heading for a happy 13th with Judy next July.

Jack Irwin's Jan. 29 luncheon at the Bohemian Club in San Francisco was a huge success, drawing Frank Bell, Walt Close, Pete Gleason, Hank McCreery, Bill Morris, Julian Peabody, Art Scott, Larry Sherwood, Geoff Stengel, Norm Stoner, Nic Thacher, Joe Whiteley, and Bob Weidenmayer. Small Princeton flags decorated the tables. Bob Stuart had to cancel when King Olaf of Norway died and he had to attend a memorial service at the embassy in Washington. Walt of course said he expected everybody back for our 55th in 1992, drawing very near, though we'll miss Jack and Bob Bendheim who will be in Nassau. Rod Morgan had to miss the lunch, but says he'll be there in 1992. The speaker was Professor Darley, on leave from Princeton and teaching psychology at U.C.—Berkeley. Jack and Walt then headed for Australia and New Zealand.

To temper the good news, Dick Bell spent two weeks in the hospital with bleeding ulcers, which came on without warning, and our condolences to Lang Van Norden on the death of his brother '35, who had joyously sponsored the Harlem Boys Marching Band at various reunions.

'33ers of the Hill will be interested but disappointed to know that Bud Sauter's grandson quarterbacked the Woodberry Forest football team last fall, threw three touchdown passes and won 21-20. Last spring he pitched a no-hit, no-run baseball game.

A prominent classmate is having fun with the following joke. Take five pennies. Put one down. Q: Do you smell anything? A: One scent. Put two down. Do you see any fruit? A pear. For three: do you see any reptiles? Three copperheads. For four: do you see any automobiles? Four Lincolns. For five: do you see any sex? Ans.: No. Reply: What kind of sex can you get now for a nickel?

Well, it's funny when he does it.

38

WILLIAM P. TAMM
Box 25217
Jackson, WY 83001; 307-733-5193

Ed Myers writes from Abandoned Farm, Damariscotta, Me., that he is still raising mussels and promoting this delicacy so well known in France and catching on on this side of the Atlantic. He has enough time on his hands to write, in a style imitated by Buchwald and Royko, what he modestly calls scurrilous articles on the state of the world for MAINE TIMES. He does penance for this by spending an evening reading to, listening to, and counseling inmates at Maine State Prison, trying to bring to them a religious perspective. Success stories are infrequent but numerous enough to encourage the group of 50 or so engaged in this work to continue for several years now.

The Thacher Scholarship Fund which honors our Bill and Jake '41 currently supports Leigh Hall '94, Wendy Hasson '91, Robert Marks '91, and Renwai Mount '94. The John G. Buchanan Scholarship helps Duncan Smith '94 and Matthew Parr '94. The Bernard H. Ridder Fund assists Pedro Balderama '94, and the Robert Meyer Memorial Scholarships are held by Yak-anya Cooper '92, Kara McClendon '94, Richard McBride '93, Cindy Ross '92, and Rachno Sachasinh '91. Bernie is, of course, still with us.

Bob Burke writes (a first for him since he was Class secretary in 1941) that he sold his Chemetal Corp. in 1984, but still lives in New Canaan, Conn., with a summer place in Quogue, R.I. Golf and squash are his major pastimes; the second happiest moment in his longtime interest in boating came last fall when he sold his boat. Bob was the author of the memorial for Ed Burns, his wife Dorothy's brother.

39

RICHARD R. UHL
12 Charlotte Ct.
Briarcliff Manor, NY 10510

In January, Operation Desert Shield caused Al Butler to change a family skiing trip from Switzerland to Sun Valley. And that led to a chance encounter with Princetonian Brooke Shields '87, who graciously posed with Al and granddaughter Elizabeth Murchison, the young lady on the right, who, if all goes well, may one day be a Princetonian herself, Class of 2001.

And now that Desert Storm is over, our Class trip to enjoy Paris and cruise down the Seine is proceeding full steam ahead.

Mary Hazard tells us the final volume (vol. 6) of A HISTORY OF THE CRUSADES appeared in mid-1990. Hap had worked on this monumental project for 40 years and finished work on vol. 6 only a month before he died. That final volume is dedicated to Hap.

Both Betty and Phil Warner started the new year in hospital. Betty for five weeks with a staph infection. Both on the mend. Phil says, "Never mind. Now '91 is going to be a great year."

Winter travelers Louise and Walt Hatfield off to Hawaii and Isabel and Larry Galloway to Elderhostel in Arizona to study local geology.

Did you ever wonder what special talent it takes to be a Class treasurer? Bill Bell gives a clue: "My club number at the Landings (Savannah) is 1261. The first number is 1. The first three numbers total 9. The first two numbers total 3. The last three numbers total 9." With a mnemonic like that Bill could easily wind up signing bar chits with Class numerals instead of his club number.

With sorrow we report the deaths of Don Irwin and Chuck Vernon. Memorials to follow.

40

BILLIAM FULLER
6119 Vernon Terr.
Alexandria, VA 22307; 703-329-1961

Relaxing aboard ship during the 1940's Danube River expedition is our talented Class poet laureate, Nick Biddle, who composed the following verses in honor of this thoroughly enjoyable and highly successful occasion:

"At poolside a photo was taken of our Class
The ship was slowed to keep our hair en masse.
We thought that each had posed apart
But when the print came—no Bob Hart.
Romania is known for a rejuvenating cream
And I found a driver to support this theme.
He allowed me to sell the supply on our bus
So the kids at Reunion will really be us.
Jacey and Christine were tour directors plus
They took all our troubles and smoothed out the fuss.
They promised never to leave us behind
But Warren, Marian, and Polly were hard to find.
The Kayzers, you might say, lived wealthy and wise
Their suites on the ship were double our size.
When it came to their Sheraton Royal Suite
The Habsburgs and Sultans could take a back seat.
Shopping in the Bazaar was something to behold
The merchants were annoying and even bold.
Raise your eyes and you were fair game
Nametag on, they'd call you by name.
So I'll always remember our Danube trip
Especially the UKRAINE, a first-class ship.
Our thanks to Dave and thanks to Gene Das-vee-DAHIN-ya to all of the '40 team."

41

BILL WILSON
Box 1420
Bridgehampton, NY 11932; 516-537-2458

This LIFE magazine photo of the future Judge Broderick was one of six illustrating a poll the PRINCETON ran Oct. 6, 1937 to see whom our freshman considered the greatest living American. Charles Evans Hughes won, with Roosevelt second, Henry Ford third, and Charles A. Lindbergh fourth. Vince, whom LIFE characterized as a bank president's son living on "New York's swank upper Fifth Avenue" voted for F.D.R. and said, "Although my father is in sympathy with the present liberal administration, I form my own political opinions." Others pictured and quoted were Chico Alley (F.D.R.), Fen Clagett (C.E.H.), Bill (sic) Longstrech (C.E.H.), Ted Phillips (C.E.H.), and Sub Urban (F.D.R.).

Thanks to relentless sleuthing by Lou Steward, our list of lost classmates has been whittled down to these five Glenn Harrison, Bob Lyons, Capt. Carl Meyer, Lew Perrine, and Fred Winch.

Pete Wynkoop, son of Liz (Mrs. Craig W. Barry) and our deceased Coop Wynkoop and a Hyde Park (N.Y.) Culinary Institute graduate, has opened a top-drawer restaurant in Melbourne, Fla., named Strawberry Mansion in a landmarked pointy-gable house, which he and his two partners spent six loving years restoring. Pete is to be married in Florida later on this year.

42

ARMSTRONG HUNTER
R.R. 1, Box 250, Perkinsville, VT 05151
802-263-5361; (fax 802-263-5263)

This photo, sent with brief letter from Damon Carter, finds Paul Mailloux, Irv Pettengill (up from Naples) and Damon (over from Cape Coral) at Paul's rented condo on Florida's Fort Myers Beach. The letter appends a note for the record: "Your fair weather reporter at the Yale game missed O.B. Carter, Damon Carter, Tom Huntington, and Bill Scranton, who weathered two-thirds of that lousy game before heading back to the bus."

Under the knife in recent weeks were Charlie Crandall, Jack Guibrie, and John Jaechel, and probably others as yet unreported.

Barbara Priester Deely writes from Massachusetts that granddaughter Aimée Lahaussais '93 "still adores Princeton, is taking a bunch of marvelously related courses in the classics, looked in [on] the Class of '42 at the last reunion and thought the reuners looked—guess what—'grandfatherly.'" Barbara is a grandparent sweepstakes contender with the twelfth due soon.

From George Thomson's helpful '38 column in the Exeter Bulletin: "Roger Schmidt moved to Honolulu from Lahaina last year and remains very active in business, estate planning, and pensions, [and] would welcome hearing from any Honolulu-bound classmates."

A Feb. 28 note from Charles Henry in Oregon brings a clipping that Helen Farnum Henry, his wife of almost 43 years, died Jan. 24. The note: "Not good news, but the children and I are doing well with the help of many generous friends." The clipping, a newspaper story with nice photo of Helen, was headed "Ex-teacher, arts activist, dead at 66." We are the less. We have a memorial in this issue.

43

JACK LAPLIN
10 Vardon Rd.
West Hartford, CT 06117; 203-523-8929

A rousing evening was enjoyed by all concerned on Thurs., Feb. 28, when a total of 26 '43ers convened at the Princeton Club of New York for the annual Class dinner.

Present were: Stever Aubrey, our lone representative in the acting profession, Tom Barbour, Mignon and Brod Cameron, Ned Carpenter, Class President Ed Essertier, Mary and Peter Funk, Jo and Jack Lafflin, Howdy Marshall, Patsy and Lin Miller, Jan Nadelman, Dick Osann, Lillian and Dave Peaslee, Sabine and Peter Platten, Vivianne and Norm Russell, Charley Scribner, Bill Sloane and a colleague in the Development Office, Judy McCartin.

The speaker, and an entertaining one he proved to be, was Dave Wilkinson, chairman of Princeton's Department of Physics. He gave the attendees and overview of the science courses now offered at the University (mandatory, by the way) for those in the humanities area. He also performed several electrical experiments cited by Benjamin Franklin in his letters to a fellow British scientist named Colson between 1740 and 1750.

To give credit where credit is due, Dave Peaslee's efforts were at least partially instrumental in adding to the curriculum at Princeton the courses described above.

In a long letter to Ed Essertier, Tom Gary described his attempts to locate some of our "lost" classmates. He couldn't find John Klopfer. Lester Mount now lives in Fresno, Calif., but, in his words, "has no time for college reunions, alumni magazines, or college fund drives." Richard Peck is married for the third time, has spent some time searching for the Lost Dutchman gold mine, and lives at 4316 East Janis Way, Phoenix, AZ 85032. Regrettably, Tom also developed the information that Charles Phillips died in Oct. 1989; a memorial will appear in a subsequent issue of the RAW.

44

HERVEY S. STOCKMAN
1041 Matador Dr., S.E.
Albuquerque, NM 87123; 505-296-7057

An unidentified U.S.M.C. pilot gives the thumbs-up READY sign in the Persian Gulf at the height of that stunning war. Bless them all! At times this column can really be fun. A case in point: four envelopes from four classmates arrived in the same mail containing the same newspaper clipping: Bill Zinsser's heartwarming memorial to his family's generations-old shellac business, "Strangers on the Phone Share Only Yesterdays," the N.Y. TIMES, Feb. 21. In this period of reawakened love of country, Bill's work is delightfully yesterday and today. We can only speculate on how many '44s read the N.Y. TIMES. Bob Brown expected some 30 "good guys" at the N.Y.C. P.C. luncheon to welcome spring and hear Karl Harr give his thoughts on political, defense, economic, and space matters in today's Washington. Who showed later. '44 turned out in style for Alumni Day, Feb. 16. B. and Gloria Brown, G. Bittenheim, A. and Carol Christie, Y. and Mary Conwell, R. and Ethel May Gillis, G. and Janet Grace, A. and Katharine Huston, L. and Eve Kraft, H. and Sue MacDonald, D. and Nan Thomson, J. Wagenseller, P. Wall, J. and Molly Ware. All the above plus Grace McPherson were at the Jadwin luncheon and most attended the Service of Remembrance in the chapel, joining Diana Olcott and her three children. From the '44 Board stand-up meeting in Jadwin we include here the GO decision on the campus benches, turning Wag and Herb Hobler loose to work with Jon Hlafter of Grounds and Buildings. The ten benches at $1500 each are to be a 1991-92 effort, with the funds raised by special solicitations of selected classmates. The benches are not a part of our 50th gifts. A nice note from Bill Tribble's widow and second wife, Lynn, who plans to make the New Orleans Mini, a welcome respite from her Public Health Service work. Have a lovely spring and let's hear from you.

45 WARREN W. BENETON
U.S. Courthouse, 915 Lafayette Blvd.
Bridgeport, CT 06604

Herewith the final reminder of the cocktail reception Tuesday, April 30, 5-8 P.M., at the Princeton Club of New York, 15 West 43rd St. Stop by for a libation and a mini-reunion prior to the June Princeton festivities.

Any classmate who thinks that the physiognomy of Rip Burns is being overexposed in this column is invited to send along as many pix as Rip sends each year. Publication is promised. So here is the Ripper with prexy emeritus Wat Stewart, both obviously professional models for an eyeglass manufacturer.

Two happily retired couples, Lisa and Rod Moulinter and Jean and Bob Peck, reside in Tucson. Rod continues public service consulting and Bob concentrates on the magnificent Arizona-Sonora Desert Museum. Bob invites classmates and spouses to his interesting and informed guided tour of an installation regarded as one of the finest museums of its type in the world.

Another classmate checks in as having joined us for the 45th, but having failed to note his presence in the book. Pat and Jack Sully made the journey to Princeton from their home in nearby Westfield. Jack describes their experience as "the finest kind of time." That comment expresses the reaction of everybody else who attended, so let's build toward the 50th, starting this June. Plan to gather at Betsy and J. B.'s on Friday night, June 7.

46 ROBERT CAMPBELL, JR.
Investors Security Services
636 Morris Tpk., Short Hills, NJ 07078

1946's 45th
Ken Campbell writes from Akron, Oh. that he is salivating over the prospect of Reunions. However, he comments that while the charms of the campus are boldly displayed in "Collegiate Gothic," some of the buildings of the past 20 years leave much to be desired; one, indeed, looks like Willie Wonka's Chocolate Factory. "I have a private, but fervent hope the powers that be will place excellence and blend of design over newness." Bill Buell is administrator of a medical assistance project in Eastern Europe.

Though thoughts of Reunions fill our minds at this time, we received a letter the other day whose spirit demanded publication. Luis Pajardo '90, one of our former scholarship students, writes that he returned to his native Columbia last summer to pursue a life in journalism. He relates, "I have had a truly hectic semester since leaving Princeton. I moved to Bogota and started working for a newspaper, primarily on political and economic stories. A few months later I was offered a job in the Economic Planning Agency of our government. Columbia is presently undergoing its own perestroika. The government is resolved to abandon state interventionist policies in favor of a free market. Specifically, I am working in the foreign trade section of the Natl. Planning Dept. My job is to lift all foreign trade restrictions.

"My superiors were eager to hire me once they learned I had gone to school in the U.S. They want people familiar with free market theory. So far, I feel confident my Princeton education has prepared me well.

"Last spring when you and I met at the Naas you said I could become an important force in my country. This flabbergasted me. I never thought of my future in those terms. Now this seems to be happening, thanks to Princeton and the Class of 1946."

47 ABA BUSHNELL
Box 7034
Tucson, AZ 85725; 602-741-4715

FIRST IMPRESSION: Bill Ryan reported proudly that his daughter-in-law, Caterina Lindquist, whose name got double faulted in an earlier column, is the winner of the first Oslo Open, a new event on the women's pro tennis tour.

TWICE-TOLD TALE: John Pritzlaff, a former state senator and former ambassador, who now shuttles between homes in Phoenix and Santa Barbara, breathed a sigh of relief after Arizona's gubernatorial runoff election. His son-in-law, Republican Pife Symington, had triumphed narrowly in November's three-way race, but needed more than 50 percent of the vote in February to satisfy a quirk in the law (he garnered 51 percent).

TWO OF PAIRS: Mary and Goph Thomas hosted a mini-yet-mighty '47 reunion at their Maryland farm over a December weekend, enjoying the company of Meredith and Marty Millsbaugh, as well as Walter Dandy and Ann Allen.

FOUR-IN-HAND: Bruce Douglass, who retired from the Pennsylvania Civil Service Commission at year's end, said a Scandinavian swing last summer included a train ride between Helsinki and Leningrad, where he picked up a booklet printed in Finnish and produced by the Russians that contains two pages about physicist Sid Drell, with photo (Bruce hopes it is "complimentary," and so do I, since my Finnish interpreter insists the text actually is Danish). Fred Rogers sent a page from the September issue of TRAVELER magazine, complete with favorable item (in English) about architects Bob Venturi and his wife/partner Denise Scott Brown, who visited Kyoto and wrote, "The Japanese can make art out of anything; they love pattern and color."

FIFTH DIMENSION: Dick Windsor added these "definites" to the Midwest reunion tally—Bob Boyle, Arno Fischer, Dick Gallagher, Pbil Pope, and Bob Woblforth.

48 DAVID K. FERRIS
106 Snowden Ln.
Princeton, NJ 08540; 609-924-3340

on Fri., June 7, will be at Bedens Brook Club. It is a lovely setting about five miles from campus out in the Hopewell Valley. And, again this year, our anonymous classmate who thought up the A.A. Haven will see that it is going full blast with lots of coffee freely flowing. There are those who march to

What a festive lot we seem to be. Reunions will be on us before the ink dries on the calendar. John Pell is our chairman this year. We will be satellite to '51. Our dinner a non-alcoholic drummer while being festive. Bob Meyer has enlisted the genius of Tom Wolf, John Garber, and Jim Shand to organize a wonderful, immediate post-reunion excursion to Gettysburg, Lancaster, and the Amish country. This is a treat not to be missed: spectacular country and lots of historic sites.

Bill Danforth chaired the committee of the Institute of Medicine that wrote the report which contained more than 40 recommendations for changes in the National Institutes of Health AIDS program.

Bill May, professor of ethics at S.M.U., has a new book coming out this spring from Indiana Univ. Press. It is THE PATIENT'S ORDEAL. Bill is a giant figure in the world of biomedical ethics. His much better half, Beverly, has eachewed Broadway roles in recent years as the Dallas-New York commute got to be just too much. Beverly continues to be a permanent member of the Dallas Theatre Center and has just closed as Kate Keller in Arthur Miller's ALL MY SONS.

The Class is saddened to learn of the death of Jack Ralston on Jan. 30.

49 ALVIN R. KNAIGHT
Limerick Lane Poetryworks®, 5 Birch Ln.
Chappaqua, NY 10514; 914-238-0352

You'll find many old friends awaiting when the gang shows up at reunion headquarters in Dodge-Osborn court, where '51 will celebrate its 40th, and we'll be a satellite class along with the guys from '48 through '53. Reunion Chairman Larry Theilgard tells us Liz and Charlie Townsend have once again graciously agreed to host '49's Fri. night cocktail party and dinner, to begin at 6 P.M. More info coming to you via mail from Larry. Save the date!

The Scranton, Penn., Sunday Times carries a Veterans Rollcall page, on which appeared a feature story, with photo, of the WWII heroics of Rev. Ed Diehl as pilot of a B-17 Flying Fortress. Lt. Diehl and his crew flew 52 missions, virtually all of them solitary, unescorted, top secret, often at 500-foot altitude, dropping arms and supplies to O.S.S. teams, Free French, British Intelligence, and underground organizations. Flying primarily out of the 885th Bomb Squadron in Algiers and, later, Italy, Ed flew his plane—"Miss Hug Bug" on missions over enemy territory in Yugoslavia, Greece, Albania, northern Italy, and southern France, making it safely despite being hit by enemy fire. He was awarded the Distinguished Flying Cross and Air Medal. After graduating from Princeton and Princeton Theological Seminary, Ed served as a Presbyterian minister in Minnesota, Idaho, and Alaska, before returning to his native state of Pennsylvania and serving as psychiatric chaplain at Parview State Hospital for 30 years before retiring in 1986. Ed and Helen continue to live in Waymart, Penn., and celebrated their 45th wedding anniversary last July.

Having been transferred to Kissimmee, Fla., Bob Dodd, still with A.T.& T., writes: "Life in Florida is great, even if you aren't retired. The state is not only populated by the young and vital and the old and feeble, but also by a lot of critters—insects, scorpions, fire ants, snakes, etc. So far, no alligators have made it into our front yard from the lake across the street, but we have been visited by a herd of cruising cattle that consumed our banana plant and left large non-cash deposits in their wake.

We have memorials in this issue.

50 PETE BUCHANAN
151 West St.
Beverly Farms, MA 01915; 508-922-1650

There is still time to sign up for the Montreal extravaganza next month (May 15-19). Call Bob Schelling for information 514-932-8444. Coonhead Morgan and Tizo Robinson are both going by way of Bermuda, in an attempt to claim the long-distance prize.

Certainly the Class champion for long-distance seasonal relocation is Steve Halsey, who still consults for American Express on international philanthropy. Steve's yearly schedule is November to April in Hong Kong, May to August in London, and September/October in the U.S. Joan and Alan Kirk visited Steve and Lutie in East Anglia in June. Alan has served as an adjunct professor at George Washington Univ. for the last several fall terms, is a docent at the National Cathedral one day a week, and volunteers for Meals on Wheels another day. The rest of the week he works on his golf game. His name recently appeared as an aide to the 1918 Class secretary, Jarvis Cromwell, who is also his stepfather. Joe Parsons filled a similar role for 1913 for several years. Hopefully our nominating committee will recognize these talents in future years. On the subject of volunteering, three classmates appeared on the list of the 15 most durable Annual Giving regional chairmen. Bob Brewer was runner-up with 25 years in Central Kentucky. John Wuberspoon has logged 15 years in Chattanooga, while Tom Carubbers has covered all of Alabama for 12 years.

Fran Wood married Bunny Philpott of Philomath, Ore., Jan. 5. This expanded his family by four children and six grandchildren. Tony Hutchins, whose Bastille Day wedding to Kathleen Cherot was reported earlier, acquired three new sons and a daughter, two black and a yellow lab, and one large cat. Similarly, George Henderson's new bride, Irene, brought along "a pack of puppies." George is running his own consulting firm as a Ph.D. industrial psychologist.

Charles Krigbaum is on leave from his Yale organist duties this spring. He is performing and lecturing at Oxford, in Norway, and in Leipzig.

51

RICHARD K. PAYNTER
49 Wilson Rd.
Princeton, NJ 08540; 609-921-6720

"Life Begins at the 40th" June 6-9

Every 10 years the U.S. Census Bureau's findings cause angst and partisan infighting and Elbridge Gerry's 1812 "solution" is in the spotlight. Although the party in power lusts to gerrymander districts, perhaps N.J. handles the challenge to draw new legislative boundaries better than her 49 sisters. Her 10-member Legislative Apportionment Commission can call on Don Stokes to break the deadlock. As dean of the Woodrow Wilson School, Don is widely respected as a disinterested arbiter and he has the support of the bipartisan commission.

At this writing, Reunion Chairman Joe Houell is on a well-deserved vacation, so I don't have the names of current sign-ins. I assure you that we are closing in on the 40th reunion record of 233, heading to our goal of 250. The May 15 column will have more names. We will break the record.

Barbara and Don Carey, although in Togo with the Peace Corps, miss skiing in New Hampshire. They plan to be back in time to bike from New Hampshire to our 50th.

Gigi and Dick Freeman recently spent a weekend at the Tides Inn in Virginia with Lois and Clem Darby, Sandy and Lew Thompson, Joan and Bob Frey. Several of them were celebrating their Big 60.

Dave Reichow writes: "Still general sales manager for Burnham Corp., which makes boilers. Laurie, my wife is a licensed realtor, having some success, although the market is now the pits. Oldest daughter, Melissa, got her M.B.A. from N.Y.U. and works in N.Y.; son Chris finishes Widener Univ. Law School this spring. Gretchen is a senior at York College. David is married."

52

Don Omsdorff
4630 30th St., N.W.
Washington, DC 20008

The recent report in this space on the send-off given Joe Bolster on his retirement as head of Princeton Annual Giving did not contain some of the astounding accomplishments of the Bolster era. According to Princeton record-keepers, funds exceeding $211 million were raised for the University in his 23 years as director of Annual Giving. Annual Giving has grown five times since 1972 and ten times since 1964, shortly before Joe took over the leadership of fundraising.

The University trustees presented Joe with a Certificate of Appreciation for his exceptional contributions to Princeton. In a very special gesture, Presidents Bob Goheen, Bill Bowen, and Harold Shapiro presented him with a mounted Nassau Hall clapper.

John McGillicuddy was recently the guest of honor at the N.Y.C. Police Foundation's annual winter dinner-dance. The Times reported this was one Manhattan event where security was no problem. Another report in the WALL STREET JOURNAL listed John among major bank execs who took pay cuts in 1990 due to slack business. Out of modesty, we will not report the austerity earnings reported, except to say it remained in seven figures.

Despite our venerable age, the Class still has ten sons or daughters on the undergraduate rolls at Princeton, according to information from the University, although most of them are in their final year or two. The students are: Gary Andlinger's daughter Nicole '91; Pete Battist's son, Peter '92; Jerry Canter's son, Robert '92; Gilbert Dunbam's daughter, Jennie '91; Ted Kennedy's son, Bruce '92; Poss Parham's daughters, Alice '92 and Margaret '94; Jack Sanders's son, Matthew '92; and Maco Stewart's daughter, Macol '91, and son, Stewart '92.

53

FRANC J. LOHMEYER
Box 18
Blawenburg, NJ 08504

Mini Reunion Oct. 18-20, Philadelphia

On Feb. 28, the Class had the privilege of hosting Dr. and Mrs. Shapiro at a dinner held at the Princeton Club in New York. Dr. Shapiro addressed the assemblage on the subject of the importance of primary and secondary education and the hazards to be faced now and in the future if these segments of our educational structure continue to be neglected. Pete Kurzman did an excellent job of organizing the occasion and the committee performed nobly in assembling a fine turnout on relatively short notice. Those attending, including a number not heard from lately were: John Beck, John Burr, Don Canirell, Bill Close, Jay Cooper, Ralph deNunzio, Frank Decker, Vince Duffy, Don Dwight, Chuck Fadden, Al Forsyth, Bill Gaillard, Joe Golden, Skip Hargraves, Tom Kilburn, Lew Kleinhans, Ools Lindholm, Len Milberg, Jim Neff, Rocky O'Connell, Saul Post, Dave Retmers, Bill Ruddick, Ed Waesche, and Ted Yankauer.

It's nice to know that our wives read the PAW and continue to send details of the accomplishments of their more modest husbands. A recent note on the activities of Ed Harden from his wife, Evelyn, is a good case in point. Ed is a professor of English at Simon Fraser Univ. in Vancouver, B.C. A Thackeray specialist and nut, he is the recipient of a two-year grant from the Natl. Endowment for the Humanities for the purpose of preparing an edition of the unpublished letters of Thackeray. His recent publications are a critical edition of THE HISTORY OF HENRY ESMOND in 1989, and the two-volume work ANNOTATIONS FOR THE SELECTED WORKS OF WILLIAM MAKEPEACE

THACKERAY in 1990. Although it certainly deserves more than her footnote to the letter, Evelyn herself is an associate professor of Russian at the same university.

54

DICK STRAVINS
1 Valley Sq., Ste. 101
Blue Bell, PA 19422

It's not too early to start thinking about getting your tickets for the 1996 Olympics and to figure out your accommodations in Atlanta. Your best bet is to start with the person who changed the landscape of the city, T. Harvey Mathis, pictured here looking like an undergraduate. Harvey and his partner Mack Taylor launched the Perimeter Center, developed the Buckhead Plaza, and are presently creating Inverness, a major development in Birmingham. An honors graduate in economics, Harvey can still run the numbers for the truly huge projects that he undertakes. These days "Catfish," along with most other developers, is treading lightly, but he continues to be a major "mover and shaker" in Atlanta. He does lots of community work, knowing that as Atlanta goes, so goes Taylor and Mathis. When you start out fluffing towels in Griffin, Ga., and wind up as the premier Atlanta developer . . . you have arrived!!!

Alan Mayers led the Class in singing "Old Nassau" at our 25th. He was chosen because he has a great voice and he is the only living person who knows the second verse . . . by heart. Alan, a scientist and administrator for the Agency for Health Care Policy and Research, received a new infusion of money from Congress which tripled his workload and has put his singing and touring on hold.

Give our former prexy Joe Castle a lot of credit, for starting up a new refinery in Lawrenceville, Ill., right in the middle of Desert Shield and Desert Storm, when crude oil prices were bouncing all over the lot. Joe raised $90 million to start the refinery with help from a West German partner, Metallgesellschaft Corp. Now that crude prices have stabilized and normal start-up problems are leveling out, we wish Joe great success in a major new venture.

Don't forget the '54 Middle East Foreign Policy Seminar on Sat., May 4, in Washington D.C. (Embassy Suites Hotel). If you enjoyed last year's seminar, this one is a MUST!!!

55

MARK ROSSINI
40 E. 88th St.
New York, NY 10128; 212-772-7447

Here is our youthful James E.A. Jobn as he ascends to the presidency of G.M.I. Engineering and Management Inst., formerly the General Motors Institute.

Bob Hollander has been named master of Butler College. Caroline Moseley presented a lecture/performance on "Songs of the Blue and the Gray: An Introduction to Popular Song of the Civil War" at Princeton's Taplin Auditorium in March.

Scott McVay's Geraldine R. Dodge Foundation is providing funding for base program support for energy technology assessment and energy policy analysis at the university's Center for Energy and Environmental Studies.

Rug Brounell is spending a year at Oxford as a N.E.H. research fellow working on a biography of Horace Walpole. Rug's Oxford Press book on Samuel Johnson will be issued in paperback "but don't look for it in airports." Rug was named outstanding researcher of the Univ. of Nevada in 1969 and a foundation professor.

Peter Louis's Progressive Corp. and his success in gliding it through a parlous period for insurers was profiled in the N.Y. TIMES recently. Pete is pictured with a sculpture entitled "Outdoor Office," which he commissioned for the company's contemporary art collection and which is installed on the roof of Progressive's headquarters building in Mayfield Heights, Ohio.

Chet Safran was married to Jennifer Pinto, an art dealer in Manhattan, on March 10. Welcome to '55, Jennifer! Chet's son, Robert, has been named executive editor of the AMERICAN LAWYER. Fred London and Trudie have had dinner with Bill Gilland and Mary. Bill is dean of the school of Architecture at the Univ. of Oregon.

56 DAVID M. JORDAN
410 Rodman Ave.
Jenkintown, PA 19046

When the Pentagon set up its physical standards for reporters interested in covering the Persian Gulf war, the Detroit FREE PRESS checked its staffers to see how they measured up. One of those who passed muster was political reporter Hugh McDiarmid, who accomplished 29 sit-ups, 27 pushups, and a mile and a half in 14:44. Hugh says he stays in shape walking his golden retriever Jake and doing aerobics weekly. He said nothing about all those smoke-filled rooms in Lansing.

Will Barber co-edited and contributed a chapter to THEONOMY: A REFORMED CRITIQUE, published last year by Zondervan, the whole work being a collaboration of Will and colleagues at Westminster Seminary. He and Gail are enjoying their first grandchild, Susannah Ruth, since her parents have moved to the Philadelphia area.

This, the next-to-last column before our 35th reunion, presents a reminder to register and mail your bios promptly. your reunion committee has put together a Great Program: the menu is gourmet, the music professional, and the camaraderie unique. One of the attractions, the pianofest scheduled for Thursday evening, features two prominent '56 keyboard artists, John D'Arms and Jim Freund, both of whom could have made it in the musical world had they not been so proficient in their academic and legal fields. They will set the pace for a weekend of musical delights, led by the fabulous Louisiana Repertory Jazz Ensemble, various campus singing groups, the University Marching Band, and John Joyce as "the Spirit of '76." It all starts in Holder Court, and it takes place June 6-9. Join us!

57 JACK SCHULMAN
Box 6177, Yorkville Station
New York, NY 10128; 212-427-3575 (H)

Jay Lebr: "Our 34th reunion begins with our Class dinner at Prospect House, Fri., June 7—cocktails at 6:30, dinner at 8:00, surprise speaker at 9:00, Nassoons at 9:30. If you register by May 1, the entire weekend (including all meals in the reunion quad) is just $50 per person; after May 1, $57." As an extra arm-twist, Jay will send you his new book, Prr, Prrr and Prry (in hard cover, naturally), if you commit by May 1. Don't delay!

Jim Case: "I am dean of the Hudson Valley Center of S.U.N.Y.-Empire State College. Ralph Quere: "Our children have all finished college, our first grandchild was born, and I've finished a project on the history of Lutheran worship. Teaching remains challenging."

Clive Chandler: "My daughter Margaret '93 is pursuing politics, while active in the prison teaching program." Chuck Lowry: "Still teaching away at Manassas Park H.S., Va. I have a daughter, Nell, now seven."

Alan Tucker: "Our daughter Kumi '90 is working at N.K.K. Steel and ABC-TV in Tokyo. According to her, there seem to be hundreds of young Princetonians over there." John Nevin: "Miles Seifert is a grandfather." D. L. Smith, M.D.: "Working full time for the Motion Picture and Television Hospital as staff physician. Though a high school (Scarsdale) and '57 classmate of Peter Gott, we rarely talked about things. After reading his book, No House Calls, I know we agree on a lot of things—well done, PG, MD!"

Jack Dibb: "Jack Jr. doing research on Greenland ice cap and teaching at Univ. of New Hampshire; Mike teaching seventh grade in Connecticut."

58 RALPH L. DeGROFF
7 Gracie Sq.
New York, NY 10028

Dick Howard, director of Mexican Affairs, has recently been promoted to minister counselor at the U.S. Dept. of State, which has the effect of extending his diplomatic service awhile longer. Dick is excited by the prospects of negotiating a North American Free Trade Agreement with Mexico.

Tom Morris has been elected chairman of the policy committee and chief executive officer of Deckert, Price & Rhoads, a prominent Philadelphia law firm.

Morry Hodges, chief of Cardiology at Hennepin County Medical Center in Minneapolis, is looking forward to a sabbatical this fall at St. Georges Hospital in London.

Lanny Dennison is still enjoying his private practice in dermatology and his teaching at the Univ. of Vermont Med. School. The Class extends its sympathy to Lanny and his family upon learning of the death of his father, who served on the Princeton Univ. staff for 40 years.

Joe Nye's Harvard Univ. course "Must History Repeat the Great Conflicts of this Century?" can now be purchased on tape. The Teaching Company, in cooperation with the Smithsonian Inst., has identified Joe as one of the top professors in America and has recorded this lecture series. The Harvard Casson's Confidential Guide gives Joe a rating which "sets him near the pinnacle of the professional world." Classmates interested in the tape should write The Teaching Company, P.O. Box 17524, Dept. 114, Arlington, VA 22216.

Jim Nesbitt was recently appointed general director of U.F.M. Intl., an interdenominational mission with over 500 members working in over 15 countries. Princeton's influence is much in evidence with Wever '65, Pay '65, Horton '65, and Kutnow '70 on the board of directors and five other Princetonians overseas.

59 JAY M. SWORN
11321 Bolling House Rd.
Rockville, MD 20852; 301-984-7877

George Beall continues to garner accolades. He recently became a fellow of the American College of Trial Lawyers, an association of 4,500 U.S. and Canadian attorneys whose purpose is to improve the standards of trial practice, the administration of justice, and the ethics of the legal profession.

Bill Agee is teaching art history at Hunter College in N.Y., and also doing consulting work with museums. Bill tells us to watch for his Stuart Davis exhibition at the Metropolitan Museum of Art sometime this year.

Received the following from Doug Fisher: "Attended a magnificent wedding at the Washington Cathedral last August of our class secretary's daughter, Sheridan. Other tigers also attended: Tony Cotter and David Riordan '58. The bride's uncle went to the wrong cathedral and missed the ceremony—he is not a tiger!

WHERE ON EARTH? Over the years, the Class has lost touch with approximately 50 members other than those who are deceased. While some of these classmates may have intentionally "dropped out," others may not know they are lost and may be waiting to be found. There are probably many people in the Class who would be interested in contacting—or simply knowing the whereabouts—of these lost classmates. As an irregular feature of this column, under the heading "Where on Earth," we will list, from time to time, the names of a few of the missing. If anyone has any information on any of them, and would not be violating any confidences through its disclosure, please drop us a note. This feature has no direct affiliation with Annual Giving or the Internal Revenue Service. Included among the missing are Chris Allen, Anthony Anderson, David Basherville, Alex Bueno, Robert Cooke, and Snowden Dougherty.

Don't forget Annual Giving. If you haven't already contributed, take a few minutes to write a check (or endorse that stock certificate) and send it in. We have a memorial in this issue.

60 MASON LOWMAN
100 Lincoln Ave.
Amherst, MA 01002

Here are Donald and Laurie Catino and Tom Urbaniak, both doctors. Tom is an orthopedic surgeon in Yardley, Penn., and Don is a practicing physician and professor of medicine at Dartmouth medical school. Tom is chairman, Dept. of Orthopedics and a trustee of the Helene Fold Medical Center. Don has settled in New London, N.H., near skiing and lots of demanding recreational activity, such as the triathlon competition he regularly engages in. Following Princeton, he headed for Cornell medical school and New York's Bellevue Hospital, both in N.Y.C. "Bloody but unbowed," he writes, "I joined the special forces and enjoyed an Snails idyll in South Vietnam. Luckier than the 58,012 k.i.a., I survived Tet and got to punish myself further at Harvard's own Boston City Hospital. I was married to a wonderful woman, Jill, and with Jennifer and Donald and later Laurie, escaped to New Hampshire. We took our brood to Haiti for 1½ years at the Hospital Albert Schweitzer... we've traveled to Central and South America in the last several years and have developed a continuing interest in their ancient Indian cultures. I'd like to retire to a globe-trotting medicine lifestyle—only 15 years to go." John Graves writes that he is moving to Florida and re-establishing a psychotherapy practice there. John had hip-replacement surgery and has suffered much arthritis. He needs to avoid the snow and ice of New England. His article, "Intelligibility in Psychotherapy" will soon be published in a major international volume on medical science.

61 GEORGE BRANKLEY III
98 Winfield Ln.
New Canaan, CT 06840

Be sure to check out the latest 30th reunion mailing, including Lee Byler's wonderful poem which incorporates the names of everyone who's signed up to date. Also check out the great entertainment lined up by Jim Blair. And there's lots more to tell—a great reunion is shaping up under the leadership of Berton and Scasserra. BE THERE!

1961 THIRTIETH 1991

Fine turn-out at the Class dinner on Mar. 7. Details will follow, but our thanks (for the 14th straight year) to Page Chapman for running things (and to his secretary, Terry Vitolo). Earlier the 30th Reunion Committee met, as did Woody Andrews's A.G. Special Gifts Committee, with Class Agent Fred Hitz and Prexy Mike Iseman in attendance. (And speaking of secretaries, we owe a vote of thanks also to Mary Up-right, who prepares these columns for George Brakeley.)

Artist Ken McIndoe, a Hopewell resident, continues to receive rave reviews. "Defying Labels," a recent Princeton Packard article is titled, and it goes on to say "the art of Ken McIndoe eludes categorization as he alternates between the Irish landscape and the urban pulse of N.Y.C. streets." Bob Golden reports that son Jonathan received early acceptance to the Class of '95. Sandy Falconer remarried in July of last year. Judy brings him two stepdaughters, so it's a full house, what with his four. Sandy takes time out from his medical practice to direct the South County Chamber Singers, which he founded. They performed last November at the Univ. of R.I. On Jan. 26, the Reverend Doctor William Wesley Millsaps was consecrated as the third Bishop of the Southwest in the American Episcopal Church.

62

ERIC W. JOHNSON
2221 Craigie Ct.
Vienna, VA 22182; 703-280-9080

SPEED RACER: Photo shows Dave Moran ensconced in the driver's seat of a DB-2 Sports 2000 (race car) in which he won the Rocky Mountain Division National Championship of the S.C.C.A. in 1989. "Any sponsors out there?"

STATE OF THE PRESIDENT: Joe Irenas, our leader, reports that, like many of us, he is 50 years old, but unlike many of us is also a grandfather (Joseph Eron O'Donnell, born Aug. 3, 1990). "The mother, my daughter Amy, is a member of the Pennsylvania and New Jersey bars—and presently a second-year student at Brown Medical School. I'm saving for architecture school."

NORRIS CLEVELAND: Rip Noble is still general secretary (second in charge) with the Board for Homeland Ministries of the United Church of Christ, the agency responsible for educational materials, publishing, new churches, and support of social action ministries and service projects of congregations, and is moving the agency's 100 staff members to Cleveland, Oh., in the summer of '91. "Who's in Cleveland?"

CHICAGO, CHICAGO: Diel Williams, many years with Gould Inc. of Chicago, joined a firm of 14 lawyers, Burke, Smith & Williams, an eight-minute commute from home, "rather than move to Cleveland."

THE ISLE OF NANTUCKET: Terry Dupes saw Harvey Bartle at a "PAANI" [P.U. Alum. Assn. of Nantucket Isle] dinner cruise in Aug. He also spent Labor Day Weekend with Barb and Bill Venable on Nantucket—"We just bought a summer house there."

63

SILVER S. BOWARDS
Elgin Academy, 350 Park St.
Elgin, IL 60120; fax 708-695-5017

Al Foster still practices law flamboyantly with Paton, Boggs and Blow in Greensboro, N.C., and is still recovering from his great success a year ago as lawyer for Liggett and Myers in a massive anti-trust trial with a favorable $149 million verdict. Liggett's claim, through Allen, that tobacco giant Brown and Williamson had engineered a generic-brands price war to drive them out of business was upheld, after a lengthy trial and 12-day jury deliberation. Al was quoted in a WALL STREET JOURNAL feature as saying, "Liggett bled buckets, and cigarette prices climbed, and B&W saw what they had and sat back and gloated over it." From there, he jumped directly into a case for United Technologies involving patents of auto airbag sensors. The Fosters' daughter Susan is now two years old.

When Micky Wolfson's train cars passed through Chicago in February, Californiaward, Jay Gunther was on board. Jay is still doing his excellent lawyering in N.Y.C. at Shearman and Sterling, with an apartment on Park Avenue. Gres Lemaistre is a systems programmer at Trans-Tel in Jacksonville, Fla. Lou Lenzen is an international oil negotiator with Chevron Overseas petroleum in San Ramon, Calif., specializing in concession agreements for oil and gas exploration and production, based in the S.F. Bay Area, but traveling a lot worldwide. Ed Strauch is managing partner of Straight Wharf Seafood Company on Nantucket Island, living in Norwell, Mass. Richard Friedman is a partner in the law firm of Halfpenny, Hahn and Roche in downtown Chicago. Bob Lasly is an endodontist and youth basketball coach in Toms River, N.J., living in Holmdel, where his wife, Margaret, is a township committee woman. They have two children: Robert (15) and Jessica (10).

It is with great sadness that I report the death of Jeff Rhode after a long bout with cancer in New Zealand, where he was practicing medicine.

64

JOTHAM JOHNSON
Box 12
Blawenburg, NJ 08504

Thanks again to Pat Rowell and Dave Driscoll for hosting a swell cocktail party at their N.Y.C. loft on W 17th St. in late February. On hand were Tina and Bill Birch, Don Brant, Tim Burman, Peter Carry, Al Dold, Nat Floyd, Elizabeth and Bob Gambee, Rich Intersimone, Jo Johnson, Margee and George Kbouri, Mary Kay and Rob Kuser, Freddie and Alex McFerran, Stew Pinkerton, Harvey Plasse, Tom Richardson, and Dave Wetherill. Lots of fun. On to New Orleans!

Pete Carry was in Princeton a couple of nights earlier to speak at Forbes College and to take in the Tigers' basketball conquest of Penn. Speaking on the topic, "Confessions of an S.I. Editor, as a Princeton Basketball Junkie," Pete was quoted in the Prince as saying that "Over the years I've lost my affection for almost everything (in sports) except Princeton basketball," and cited Coach Pete Carril as the major reason for his unwavering dedication to the Tiger cagers. While Pete has been following the team closely "since a Dec. 1961, 72-66 loss to Villanova in Dillon Gym," Nat Floyd has more recently become a fervent fan and has been turning up in the stands all over the eastern seaboard. Should the men's lacrosse team continue to play as impressively as it did in its season-opening conquest of Johns Hopkins in Baltimore, Rich Intersimone may also be turning up all over the eastern seaboard.

Looking for an attorney to assist in the defense of criminal investigations and prosecutions? You might want to contact the new firm of (Harvey) Silverglate & Good, located in Boston's Battery-march Building, 617-542-6663. If, on the other hand, you're looking for an attorney to help you decipher the laws relating to the capital of corporations, you might try Jim Hanks, of the Baltimore firm of Weinberg & Green, whose volume, LEGAL

CAPITAL (third edition), was published last September by Foundation Press. Jim also had a hand last fall in the publication (by Prentice-Hall Law & Business) of MARYLAND CORPORATION LAW, the first treatise on this subject published in nearly 40 years.

65

J. MICHAEL PAREN
Winthrop, Stinson, Putnam & Roberts
1 Battery Park Plaza, New York, NY 10004

In this era of rising unemployment, one of the candidates for the "right person in the right place at the right time" award is Noel Shipman, who has developed a thriving practice on Airport Boulevard in L.A. representing plaintiffs in a wide variety of cases involving alleged wrongful termination of employments. "I don't want victims," Noel says, "I want aggressive, assertive types who are mad."

Someone who doesn't have that problem, however, is Cliff Fenton who just moved to Winnetka, Ill. to the headquarters of John Nuveen & Co. after 20 years in N.Y.

Installment one of the long-promised alumni off-spring on campus list reads as follows: John (Eric '93), Andrews, Lee (Stacey '93) Arberg, Lindsay (Lindsay '94) Arbur, Bruce (Matthew '92) Buck, Ship (William '94) Canning, Harvey (David '91) Clapp, Mike (Diana '91) Clifford, Tom (Brooke '93) Coburn, Charles (Jessica '94) Gibson, Rush (Jennifer '92) Haines, Coleman (Darlington '94) Hicks, J. Scott (Charles '93) Hill, and Tom (Holly '92 and Beth '94) Holzer. More to follow. On a parallel subject, Doug Barton's son Greg will be part of the Class of '95. "This careful family planning will make a wonderful 30th reunion—graduation marathon in 1995."

Close encounters of the Trump Shuttle kind—John Taylor, on his way to D.C. to work on behalf of his medical foundation with John McIlwaine on some upcoming F.D.A. legislation before they joined Karl Jackson for lunch at the White House mess (that's a place to eat, not a condition) to celebrate Karl's just having been named senior personal national security adviser to Vice President Quayle, which I'm sure will allow many of us to sleep better at night.

66

JEFFREY M. McCOLLUM, A.T.&T. Products
5 Wood Hollow Rd., Rm. 1J19
Parsippany, NJ 07054

It's now 52 days and counting. The rolls are swelling. The bands are tuning. All in preparation for our reuniting. Late news from Reunion chairman Tiny Morgan: as of mid-March, 270 classmates have registered. We are aiming for more than 400, but you'll have to register soon in order to have a blazer ready for you. Send your registration to Tiny now. If you're concerned about the cost, arrangements can be made—call Tiny (202-966-9164) or Charlie Phobn (212-449-4577). There's NO REASON for missing the celebration!

Jim Merritt reports that our 25th Reunion Book will be mailed in late April. For those who sent in their materials after the book went to press, Jim expects to do an insert that will be mailed out after Reunions.

DOWN THE AISLE. As previously reported, David Lee was married on June 23, 1990, to Hallie Buford Stephenson. Unlike the recent war in the Gulf, word of the event arrived long before pictures.

Stephenson. Unlike the recent war in the Gulf, word of the event arrived long before pictures. What the picture reveals is that several '66ers were on hand to celebrate the occasion with David and Hallie. Shown in the accompanying photo are (l-r): Peter Freeman, Bill Woodward '67, Rich McConnell, Bill Childress, David, Bob Warwick, Bill Bowers '68, and Hal Davis '65. The photo was taken at the Fenno House in Quisset, Mass. It is owned by the Woods Hole Oceanographic Inst. where Hallie, who is now the assistant circuit executive for the U.S. Court of Appeals, was once a researcher. We have a memorial in this issue.

67 PETER J. TUNON
6503 Masefield St.
Worthington, OH 43085

 Alfred Bloom has been selected as the next president of Swarthmore College.

He is presently executive V.P. and dean of the faculty at Pitzer College in Claremont, Calif., but served previously at Swarthmore as associate provost from 1985 to 1986, and as assistant and then associate professor of psychology and linguistics and director of the linguistics program from 1974-1986. Among many other works, he has authored the article "Caution—The words you use may affect what you say."

Last June, Van Pell and his wife, Paige, moved to Louisville, Ky. Van left a four-year stint as co-chief operating officer of the Balcor Co., and is now "an independent consultant and entrepreneur with interests in several businesses." He has also switched from auto racing to horses, and is now taking hunter/jumper lessons.

As a measure of the passage of time, Jay Berman writes: "I have a son old enough to drive! Soon he'll be going to college—and I only just finished college myself." Meanwhile, Grant Thomas offers a theological proof that gains strength over the years: "Still more or less out of trouble, so perhaps there is a God."

TWENTY-FIVE YEARS AGO: Vatican abolishes index of banned books. Police rout 1000 civil rights demonstrators in Mississippi. Sandoz Corp. suspends distribution of L.S.D. Johnny Rivers's "Secret Agent Man" infiltrates Top Five.

68 JOE KLUMBE
Hartford Hospital, 80 Seymour St.
Hartford, CT 06115; fax 203-524-7077

Adam Klimek was captured on film as he practiced flying through Palmer Stadium recently. He and his parents joined Mike Hollander and Carol in Jadwin Cage to watch the Tigers dismantle the Lions of Loyola Marymount. The day was replete with hoopla, TV cameras, a packed house, toe-curling excitement, and scores of undergraduates with various body parts painted black and orange. The 14-0 Ivy basketball champs raised the same goose bumps that Bradley and Company did 26 years ago.

Tanya Baranowski is a recipient of the Class of '68 scholarship fund again this year. She is a junior English major who reports that Princeton has

Junk-Mail Guru

Jayme (left) and Ratalahti.

PHOTO COURTESY BILL JAYME

"IT SHOULD BE CALLED 'JUNK MAIL,' because we are invading people's homes," said Bill Jayme '47 in The New York Times Magazine last August. Jayme was underscoring his disdain for the term "direct marketing," which is preferred by his professional colleagues. They acknowledge him as the industry's "master solicitor."

"Whatever its name," Time magazine recently proclaimed in a cover story on the junk-mail explosion, "it is an extraordinary by-product of democratic civilization. . . . The plain fact is that Americans love the stuff as much as they hate it. . . . Today more money is invested in direct-mail pitches, promotions and appeals than is spent on advertising in magazines or on radio or network television."

Jayme (pronounced Jay-me) and his housemate and partner of twenty-three years, a Finnish-born graphics designer named Heikki Ratalahti, have launched more than two dozen new upscale magazines, including New York, Smithsonian, and Bon Appetit. Most recently, they have been engaged in a test-marketing competition with two other firms, trying to sell Civilization for the Library of Congress. They seldom lose such head-to-head tests of effectiveness.

Other copywriters and designers are at a disadvantage, toiling independent of the other. Jayme and Ratalahti have clearly benefited from working closely together, creating packages in which all the elements click. Dubbed "the gurus of the direct-mail copywriting trade" in the Time story, the dynamic duo clicked for about $30,000 for each of the more than ten packages they concocted last year. This is a handsome return on an investment of less than three weeks' endeavor from conception to completion. About 30 percent of each project's time goes to the all-important outer envelope—"the headline of the ad," in Jayme's words. "Sometimes sassy, sometimes sly," according to The San Francisco Examiner, "Jayme once teased prospective readers of Psychology Today with an envelope emblazoned, 'Do you close the bathroom door even when you're the only one home?'"

A native of Pittsburgh, Jayme graduated from Princeton "after fighting World War II in Texas." He then spent twenty years in New York City, earning his journalism spurs at Time Inc., CBS, and McCann-Erickson, as well as demonstrating his versatility by writing light humor for some leading publications, an original libretto for a popular opera, and two books, an anthology of mnemonics for children and a collection of egg recipes for leftover yolks and whites.

The maestro migrated in 1969 to the Bay Area—"a fitting environment," Adweek/West noted in a 1986 tribute, "for the droll, Princeton-educated, iconoclastic guru of direct mail." He moved a few years ago to a hilltop home on five verdant acres overlooking the vineyards of Sonoma, prompting one client to remark, "Like pilgrims to the guru, we have to go up the mountain to see him."

And clients no doubt will keep climbing that hill, since Jayme's enticing come-ons almost always generate more responses than the industry's 1 to 2 percent average, occasionally as high as an incredible 10 percent. For their money, they will continue to receive carefully crafted four-page letters, exciting brochures, subtle order cards, and those seemingly irresistible envelopes, which usually offer something free and convey a sense of immediacy.

At sixty-five, Jayme could put his wit and wisdom to bed and live comfortably the rest of his life. But that would deprive future junk mail of much of its true grit. Moreover, it would disrupt his happy status quo: "I wake up to air that hasn't been breathed since China. The Mercedes has a sun roof. My only medication is Alka-Seltzer. What more could a person ask?"

—Asa Bushnell '47

Princeton Clubs and Alumni Associations

PC OF NW OHIO (Toledo): Fri., Apr. 19—Luncheon with Prof. Andre Maman.

PC OF MID-HUDSON (Poughkeepsie): Sat., Apr. 21—Dinner with Prof. of Politics and International Affairs Jeffrey Herbst '83.

PAA OF MARYLAND (Baltimore): Tues., Apr. 23—Dinner with Prof. of Public and International Affairs Frank von Hippel.

PA OF VIRGINIA: Wed., Apr. 24—Dinner with Prof. of Public and International Affairs Frank von Hippel.

PC OF NEW ENGLAND (Boston): Wed., May 1—Annual meeting, Marriott Hotel, Newton, Mass. President Shapiro '64 will speak.

PAA OF CENTRAL PENN. (Harrisburg): Tues., May 7—Dinner with Prof. of Geological and Geophysical Sciences George Philander.

PC OF ROCHESTER: Tues., May 7—Annual meeting and dinner with V.P. for Finance and Administration Richard Spies '71. For further info., please call Dr. Michael Schneider '72 at 716-586-7368.

PAA OF CENTRAL N.Y. (Syracuse): Wed., May 8—Luncheon PC OF LANCASTER CTY.: Dinner with Prof. of Geological and Geophysical Sciences George Philander.

PAA OF NEW HAMPSHIRE: Wed., May 8—Dinner with Prof. of Near Eastern Studies Michael Cook.

PAA OF SOUTHERN N.Y.: Wed., May 8—Dinner with V.P. for Finance and Administration Richard Spies '71.

PAA OF MONMOUTH & NE OCEAN COUNTIES: Wed., May 15—Annual dinner with President Harold Shapiro '64. Reception at 6 P.M.; dinner at 7 at the Old Mill Inn, Spring Lake Heights. For information regarding any of these events, please call Elizabeth Hunt at the Alumni Council, 609-258-3351.

helped expand her mind and firm her ideals. Tanya's junior paper will explore gender issues in contemporary English playwriting. This spring she will delve into courses in the fields of children's literature, Afro-Atlantic syncretic narratives, gendered genres, and a survey of English history. Tom Baranowski spent part of his time in the dining halls, and his daughter has been student coordinator at the graduate college's Department of Food Services. She is now the kitchen manager at Tower Club. Tanya also devotes time to the Aquinas Inst., the Undergraduate Residential Life Committee, and the Special Olympics. She is gratified and satisfied that her father's class continues to support undergraduates so that they have the opportunity to learn, grow, and become as enthusiastic about Princeton as all of us.

69

PAUL GEORGE BITTENFIELD
1854 Keys Crescent
Cincinnati, OH 45206

HAPPY GUYS, HAPPY OCCASION: Clay McElDowney, X Shannon, Ted Webber, and Terry Larrimer in best bib 'n' tucker for Tiger Inn's 100th Anniversary celebration this past Oct. 20.

Rich Rein waited a good deal less than a century, only "42 exciting and wonderful years" before surrendering to matrimony last Apr. 28. His wife, Joanne Gere, formerly worked in marketing/communications at the Anderson Center in Binghamton, N.Y., and at McCarter Theater. The pair are now colleagues at U.S. 1, the newspaper Rich founded to serve the Princeton business community. Dick Schneider and Gary Diedrichs were there to witness the nuptials.

Jim Nowacki's daughter Carrie is an asset to New Trier High School: real accomplishments in girl's track and also in field hockey. Her dad is an attorney and partner with Kirkland and Ellis in Chicago.

From the MEDICAL TRIBUNE's question-and-answer page during February, Dr. Stuart Silverman responded to an inquiry. He is adjunct associate professor of medicine at U.C.L.A. School of Medicine and medical Director of Osteoporosis Medical Center in Beverly Hills.

Father Jeff von Arx, S.J. reports a wonderful year in Australia. He worked at St. Vincent's Hospital in Sydney; Sevenhill parish in Clare, South Australia; and the Australian National Univ. in Canberra. He is now back at Georgetown and has been elected chairman of the history dept. beginning in July.

70

Jan Kukur
113 Laurel Rd.
Princeton, NJ 08540

How you feeling? Been kind of tired and sluggish lately? At the end of the day, do you nod off before Vanna has modeled her latest tacky outfit? Well, Bucko, you'd better sit down, because what we have to report this will verify that Father Time is after us all!

Believe it or not, it has been 25 years since those letters of admission invited us to become members of Princeton's best class, the Class of 1970 (Didn't the director of admissions tell us that at Freshman Assembly in Alexander Hall?).

If you need further proof that we're not kids anymore, there are currently six undergraduate children enrolled at Princeton parented by the Class of 1970: Said Farah '94 (our Ahmed is his father), Robyn Hampton '93 (Bob), Jennifer Hutchinson '93 (Tom), Brad Lips '93 (Peter), Colin Ceike '92 (Steve Nipper), and Jenna Wood '91 (Cappy Pentz).

One of these fortunate students even lives in Forbes College, named after our own Steve Forbes.

If that doesn't make you wonder how tempus fugit, consider that we also have 15 applicants for the Class of 1995. Even with our outstanding bloodlines, tutelage, and Orange and Black examples, a few of these very deserving children will probably choose to attend some college other than Princeton.

Our heartiest congratulations go out to those '70 sons and daughters who are fortunate to enjoy the Princeton undergraduate experience we were offered a quarter century ago. We wish them all the happiness (and more) that we shared during our time at Princeton and extend similar well wishes to all children of '70, no matter what path they take.

As more and more of our children attain college age, our attitudes and relationship with university life will assuredly be transformed. In retrospect, maybe parietals weren't such a bad idea after all!

71

STUART E. RICKINSON
P.O. Box 3108
Del Mar, CA 92014

This column has noted the careers of Andres Duany and his spouse and professional partner, Elizabeth Plater-Zyberk '72, periodically for some time. Now, the N.Y. Times's highly respected architecture critic, Vincent Scully, has publicly confirmed what the Class has long known, saying the professional couple "are by far the most interesting young architects practicing today." He continues that Andres and Elizabeth "are coming close to bringing to fruition the most important contemporary movement in architecture . . . the revival of the vernacular and classical traditions and their reintegration into the mainstream of modern architecture in its fundamental aspect: the structure of communities, the building of towns."

RESUMES: Russell Baker has been elected one of the managing partners of his 100-person law firm, Spencer, Fane, Britt & Browne in Kansas City, Mo. He specializes in business and construction litigation. His wife, Susan, is a partner in another law firm, Payne & Jones, in nearby Overland Park, Kan. They have four children: Joshua (14), Elizabeth (11), Katherine (5), and Edward (2).

Jim Hart has joined Group Health, Inc., in Minneapolis as the associate medical director for quality and utilization management. Group Health introduced comprehensive, pre-paid H.M.O. care to the Twin Cities over 30 years ago and today serves more than 300,000 people through 55 facilities around the state.

72

KIP HEWITT
21 Wildcat Rd.
Darien, CT 06820

19TH REUNION: Mark your calendar for June 7 and 8. Once again, the Class will have an outdoor candlelight dinner at Valerie and Bill Sharpstone's house in Lawrenceville (3520 Lawrenceville Road, immediately across from Squibb's HQ). Cocktails at 6; dinner at 7 P.M. $30 per person. To make reservations, call Fritz Cammerzell 609-683-0066.

PRE-P-RADE PICNIC: The pre-P-ade picnic will be in a new location this year—in the garden of the Joseph Henry House, located on the front campus directly across from Maclean House. As in the past, the picnic is free. Given the new P-ade route, our picnic will be right at the center of Reunions activity.

WEST COAST CAPITAL: The February issue of Inc. magazine included an interview with Peter Wendell and five other venture capitalists on the future of the industry in the 1990s. Peter is founder and general partner of Sierra Ventures, in Menlo Park, Calif. His firm invests in early-stage technology-related businesses. In addition, Peter is teaching a course on entrepreneurship and venture capital at Stanford.

Also on the West Coast are Tom Hoster and Jack Griffin, who recently had dinner with Jim Hart, when Jim was in California for Princeton Alumni Council meetings.

73

R. GREGORY PLEMPTON
Box 14545
North Palm Beach, FL 33408

George Dies has been living in Belgium since last April. He is getting used to a new language (Flem-

Night of the Scud Attacks

THE NIGHT THE IRAQIS launched ten Scud missiles toward Saudi Arabia, Robin Pearse-Drance '73 was pregnant and holed up in the basement of the American consulate in Dhahran, site of the largest U.S. airbase in the region.

Pearse-Drance and her husband, Tom, are members of the Merchant Marine and had been working since November aboard a Kuwaiti tanker shuttling oil along the east coast of Saudi Arabia. She had learned of her pregnancy on January 15, the U.N. deadline for Iraq to pull out of Kuwait, when their ship was in the port of Akhobar. She decided to return to the States, even though Tom, the ship's second mate, had to remain to fulfill a four-month contract.

The war started two days later. Pearse-Drance remembers feeling "trapped" and worrying about a missile strike—possibly with chemical weapons—by Iraq against the ship. "The dress code on shore was to carry a gas mask in a pouch slung over your shoulder, as if it were a purse. But the ship owners hadn't provided us any, and didn't until the last minute," she says.

On January 20, Pearse-Drance went to Dhahran to see if she could get on board a military airlift. Because of her pregnancy, officials jumped her to the top of a list of a thousand people seeking evacuation. That evening, she and about a hundred others boarded several buses at the consulate for the airport. They were halfway there when air-raid sirens began sounding. The buses turned back toward the consulate. They had not gone far when Pearse-Drance saw a burst of light in the sky and heard an explosion as a Patriot missile intercepted the first of the ten Scuds fired that night. The windows and metal seats on her bus shook. "At first," she recalls, "I thought a bomb had landed. I realized later what I'd seen."

Back at the consulate, they were led into the basement, where they spent most of the night. "Every time there was a lull, we'd start upstairs and then the sirens would sound again and we'd retreat to the shelter." The sense of powerlessness, she says, "was overwhelming. I remember feeling very alone—separated from my husband, my soulmate, my best friend. We didn't panic. There was a group of women whose necks I wanted to wring because they kept complaining about everything—not having their luggage, for instance. But mainly, everyone was helping everyone else. I travel with a pocket Bible, given to me by Tom. I read Psalm 91, which is what the index recommends when you're in danger: Don't be afraid, it says, 'for the terror by night; nor for the arrow that flieth by day.' I read it over and over and passed it around. It was very calming."

Throughout the night, she adds, "I kept thinking that if I ever get out of here, I will never again complain about petty things or take anything for granted." Early the next morning, the evacuees made it to the airport and boarded a C-5 transport plane—a "Jadwin Gym with wings," Pearse-Drance recalls—and flew to Dover, Delaware.

Robin Pearse-Drance '73 and her husband Tom

PHOTO COURTESY OF ROBIN PEARSE-DRANCE

As an undergraduate, Pearse-Drance studied art history, painting, and religion, and for her senior thesis did a series of biblically inspired abstract paintings. After graduation, she attended the Church Divinity School of the Pacific, in Berkeley, California, worked for a while in advertising and interior design, and—following her ministerial instincts—served as director of volunteers at the Seaman's Church in Manhattan, where she met Tom, a graduate of New York Maritime College.

Two days after they were married, Tom went to sea for six months. On subsequent voyages, he made sure that his contract allowed his wife to accompany him. Pearse-Drance eventually obtained her seaman's papers, enabling her to ship out with Tom as a working member of the crew. She has come to love the sea, she says, for the sense of "detachment from ordinary chores, from the 'busyness' in our lives. I love the romanticism, and not seeing anything except the stars and the sea stretching out—you get a wonderful feeling of your own insignificance in relation to the magnitude of creation."

Ashore, they bought a home near Lake Placid, New York, that between voyages they operate as a bed-and-breakfast lodge, called Voskrecenia (Ukrainian for "Resurrection"). Pearse-Drance recently returned there to await Tom, who's due home next month, and the birth of their first child, in September.

—Daniel N. White '65 ish), a new job with Raynet, a fiber-optic start-up, as intl. director of finance, and a new, unproved map of Europe. George is pictured here with Joe Murcbison at Versailles last March.

Also pictured this week is Enid Duany Mendoza, with her children Sergio Andres (12) and Beatriz

(10). They and husband Sergio all support her in her new career as a commercial litigation attorney at Steel, Hector & Davis, after graduating cum laude last December from Univ. of Miami Law School.

Come celebrate as we turn the big 4-0. A great program for Reunions, June 7-8. Contact Jerry Raymond at 201-393-0004 or 201-743-5426.

Also starting a new career, Cbris Howard has left IBM after 17 years as a branch manager in Cleveland, to join Russell Reynolds Associates as an executive recruiting consultant in Cleveland.

74

JOHN STAVIKAN
15 Woodbine Rd.
Kendall Park, NJ 08824

NEWS FROM ALL OVER: Pam Douglas has moved to Boston to become director of echocardiography at Beth Israel Hospital and associate prof. of medicine at Harvard Medical School. She is also serving as a member of the medical committee for the U.S. Triathlon Federation and the Intl. Triathlon Union, the sport's governing bodies. She is the team physician for the U.S. triathlon team and has developed drug testing programs for the sport.

Gordon Douds reports from Agoura Hills, Calif. that his recent accomplishments include passing his critical care boards, working on opening a sleep center, and losing 30 pounds. This is in addition to his pulmonary practice and his four children.

Joan Gudger Kelly has left Los Angeles for Washington, D.C., where she and her husband are enjoying new jobs: she in general pediatrics and neonatology at Children's and Italy Cross Hospitals; he at the Assn. of American Medical Colleges. All four of her stepchildren are grown and gone, and she is now accumulating step-grandchildren. The Kellys and their four-year-old daughter are now involved in building their dream house on two country acres.

Chris Macharonis has departed the American Assn. of Retired Persons, where he was the manager of advocacy programs, to become a partner in the Washington, D.C. law firm of Bell, Boyd & Lloyd, where he is specializing in age discrimination and pension law.

Tom Murtagh has become a tenured member of the faculty of the computer science department at Williams College in Williamstown, Mass. He spent the 1989-90 school year on leave from Williams, teaching at Rice Univ. in Houston, Tex.

75

MELISSA KIRBY MESSERMAN
940 Riverside Ave., Berkeley Square
Trenton, NJ 08618

The sculpture of Jane Palmer was the focus of one-person shows at Francis Marion College in Florence, S.C., in January and at the Nice Picture Co. Gallery in Havana, Fla. in March. Jane, pictured with some of her work, teaches at Morris College in Sumter, S.C. Hugh P. McCormick III is living in the Baltimore Inner Harbor area with his wife, Joyce, and son, Hugh (1). One of his recent projects with Peterson & Brickbauer Architects was pictured on the cover of Architecture in Oct. 1990.

Cynthia Chase and her husband, Jonathan Culler, brought their first child, William Tinsley Culler-Chase (pictured) into the world on Sept. 10, 1990.

Bill Busb continues to manage a four-attorney legal services office providing legal representation in 12 rural counties in Tennessee.

Ellen Kahn Rampell and Bill Metzger '71 were co-chairmen in December of the first-ever production of a Triangle Club show in South Florida (the Palm Beaches). About 400 people attended, including Jim Bernstein and Hollis Russell. Ellen's reminiscence: "Let's just call it an experience."

76

JAMES L. MARKETOS
Lane & Mitendorf, 919 18th St., N.W.
Washington, DC 20006

When the stars and planets are aligned just so, strange things happen. This must have been the case when four of our classmates registered for the same math class: English, French, Germany, and Ireland (Where was Jordan?) A review of our Class roll shows that we could have produced some other bizarre coincidences and also provides a way to mention many of you who are too shy to send news. We have colors (Black, Brown, Green, White), precious metals (Gold, Silver), lots of cities (Austin, Colby, Crowley, Darby, Hamilton, Jackson, Lancaster, Naples, Newton, Patterson, Raleigh, Ramsey, Reading, and Washington), and even five Old Testament figures (Elias, Isaac, Moses, Solomon, and Zacharias).

Our Carpenter could build us a catamaran (it has two Keels). With the Yard we'd hoist a Batten sail up the Mast and trim it with the Cunningham. She might be Small, but we could sail her in Low or Slack water, through tidal Rips and against Strong and Swift currents. We'd be careful to keep her Stern off any Lee shore, where it might be Stoney or Savage. In Winter, when the Snow comes, we'd have a Ball, Going south to seek Sands or visit a Villa or Hunt for a Suam—just for the Joy of it. Maybe we'd take along some Cousins, a Valentine, a Goodfellow (or just an extra Hand) and together drink a few Beers (and then Crouch near some Trees). Somebody would try to Nix it by Dunning us for unpaid bills. But we'd Cope, suffering no real Loss, knowing our little Craft was just the Price of a rich imagination, a Toyun-Won, a Bell un-rung. We never really saw Tonkyn, or the King in his Castle with many Towers, or heard the Piper or Shook the Marshall's Sword. But in the Chambers of our mind, there'd always be Fudge and Seltzer, a Fox in the Forest, Hay in the Pield, and a Ray of sun on the Rose that blooms where the two Brooks meet.

77

JAMES BARRON
15 W. 72nd St., Apt. 24-B
New York, NY 10023

SOMETHING COMPLETELY DIFFERENT—It's time to take a break from all the birth announcements, wedding notes, and career updates that have filled the '77 column in recent weeks and focus on classmates with pets. Some of them (the pets, not the classmates) meow in the morning, others bark at night, and a few marched in last year's P-rade. Dave Bebring's yellow labrador, Grizzly, went to work with him every day for many years and was a fixture in his office in Danville, Calif., usually under the desk, sleeping. Then Dave changed jobs, and now Grizzly stays at home. Dave has had Grizzly, a star frisbee-catcher, for seven years and has been married for almost two. Among the Princetonians on hand when he wed Lisa Kiper on June 6, 1989, were John Merrill (who now works in a Seattle partnership with Dave), Tom Leyden, and Mark Erickson and his wife, Lin.

CONURE CONNOISSEUR—Sheryl Beaver Holland has three cats, Marianka, Sebastian, and 13-year-old Erasmus ("Razzie" for short). Sheryl had twins (Sibyl and Jared) 19 months ago, and since then Razzie's attention-getting routine has included pawing Sheryl's face and riding around the house on her shoulders. She also looks after Charlie, a conure, a green-and-red parrot-like bird with a two-word vocabulary ("Hello" and "achoo"); Honey, a bunny; three hermit crabs and a crayfish who has shed his shell a couple of times. Cathy Wolf's grandfather (Class of 1914) had a dog that played dead when asked the question, "What would you rather do than go to Yale?" Class Secretary James Barron's gray-and-white cat, Sir Thomas More, won the chance to bring all his friends to a Manhattan comedy club. Guess who, on a lark, put More's name on a raffle ticket. Guess who won. And, health laws being pretty strict about animals in restaurants, guess who won't get to go his own party.

78

BON PERKIN
Box 886
Middlebury, VT 05753

Does the '78 PAW column provide motivation to start a family?

Andrés Gil writes, "My wife and I finally tired of reading about classmates' children in the Class notes and had our own." The result: Elizabeth Curry, born Feb. 18, 1991. Andres claims that Elizabeth is "al-ready training for our 15th reunion."

J. Hutter Geller '83 and Alan Geller are the parents of Daniel, born May 1, 1990. Alan is V.P. of research and design for a new software company, Systems Designs Associates. The Geller family, located in Hunterdon County, N.J., also includes "two cats, a dog, two goats, five chickens, and two Macs."

Pictured are Christopher, Christine, and Jessica Anne Garten, the latter of whom was born on June 1, 1990.

Michael Thomas Ferrugia joined older brother Frank Jr. (now almost 3) last June. Writes Frank Sr., "It puts us on course to filling our own 14-room mansion in Newark's Forest Hill. We'll keep you posted."

Joshua Sugarman was born last June 28, to Lisa Fisher and Jay Sugarman. According to Nancy Coppenbavate, the Fisher/Sugarman family is in the process of moving from Brookline to Newton, Mass.

While we all enjoy reading about each other's children, all forms of news about '78ers are welcome in this column: new interests, volunteer activities, honors and achievements. Your classmates want to read about you.

79

MARTHA KRAMER
27 Northill St., Apt. 6-R
Stamford, CT 06907

PROFESSIONAL CHANGES: Leon Kabaria has left the mergers group at First Boston to become a managing director of Triant Group, L.P. Leon has specialized in leveraged transactions and restructurings; he is expected to look for acquisition opportunities in the U.S. and United Kingdom. Somers Randolph has opened a second studio, this one in Nashville, Tenn. He plans art exhibitions in Tennessee this spring and Southern Calif. this fall.

FIRSTS: Scott and Peggy Hsieh McIntosh had their first child, Andrew, in December. Scott notes that the amount of sleep in the household hasn't changed, but Andrew seems to be getting all of it. Living in the Washington area, Scott works for the Justice Dept., and Peggy works for the Natl. Inst. of Health. Renee Creange and her husband, Joseph Bonito, had their first child, Cara, last May. Born 11 days late, she has wasted no time getting on her feet and (we hope) heading for the Princeton women's basketball team.

PUBLIC SERVICE: Sharon Kalemklarian is starting her second year as a law clerk for a federal judge in San Diego and has been awarded a Skadden-Aarps fellowship to help runaway children. Her husband, Ron Ottinger, works with the San Diego City Schools as a coordinator of restructuring initiatives. Their son, Sam (4), and daughter, Kay (2), are learning the fine art of playing together. Wade Helm has been a staff research attorney for a nonprofit environmental protection group in Frankfort, Kentucky for the past year.

80

PAK PARKER
25 Farmhouse Ln.
Purlong, PA 18925

GOING BACK: Remember our tenth? As recent as those happy memories may seem, spring has arrived, hardball season is upon us, and once again it's "80 up at bat" for our 11th. Mark your calendar for June 6-9 to pull out those baseball caps and uniforms and journey back to Old Nassau. We'll be partying hardy with the Class of '81 at a new location, Butler College. No doubt it will be an extra base hit.

In other University news, Creigh Duncan represented the Class at the annual Service of Remembrance, held in the University Chapel on Alumni Day in February. She was most impressed with the entire service and plans to return in future years even if not representing the Class.

Pictured are Steve Hughes and Steve Sklar on the occasion of Steve H.'s recent visit to Steve S.'s. Steve S. has been living in Lyons, France for the last couple of years, working for Banque Veuve Morin-Pons, a subsidiary of the Dresdner Bank. He has also been doing some teaching on the side while living in a virtually all-French environment, which, he claims, has done wonders for his French as well as for his unconscious hand gestures. Steve H. visited Lyons from Madrid, Spain, to see his father, who was conducting a performance of Frank Zappa ballets that were a part of the American Dance Festival. In Madrid, Steve H. teaches English and is getting into radio voice-over.

Another recent visitor for Steve S. was Eric Koenig, who has been living in Bonn and Berlin for a year, on what was described as a German government boondoggle designed to show future prominent Americans that Germany is not going to abandon Western Europe. His only major frustration is that German stores are never open.

81

JEAN AMABLE TELLJOHANN
50 Riverside Dr., Apt. 9F
New York, NY 10024

Seth Masters and Suzette Brooks (Amherst '81) were married in N.Y.C. on May 12, 1990. Among the Princetonians present were Ivan Zimmerman, Amanda Young, Rich Zabel, and Mike Northrop.

Seth and Suzette honeymooned in Turkey and Greece; Seth has not stopped traveling since—albeit to more mundane destinations on business for Booz-Allen. Steve Mayer recently attended the weddings of his roommates Scott Thompson (in London last August) and Chuck Yort (in Palo Alto last August.)

Dave and Diane Anderson Eloffson recently saw Frank Oliva and his wife, Sheri. Frank is already "going wild" preparing for our tenth! Carol Sbeibner Pennenga is looking forward to the tenth, when she will have more than a few '81ers to march down Prospect Street with! Carol is continuing to enjoy being a full-time mom to Amy (3) and volunteering at church and on the N.J. Noise Control Council.

David Galef recently won the Writers Exchange fiction award in a competition sponsored by Poets & Writers, Inc. David will give two readings, one at the Poetry Society of America in Gramercy Park on May 2 and another in Boylston Hall at Harvard on May 7.

Wally Adams is enjoying studies at the Yale School of Organization & Management, where he hopes to graduate in 1992 with a master's in public and private management. Robert Brennan is opening his own law practice specializing in civil litigation, mediation, and related areas in Hollywood, Calif. Larry and June Fletcher-Hill have moved to Baltimore from Boston. Larry is an asst. attorney general; June is hitting the job-hunting trail. Dan Greenwald is "having a great time in plastic surgery" at Univ. of Chicago.

82

TIM DOOLEY KOOS
12409 Sadler Lane
Bowie, MD 20715

'82 Births are abounding. Kathy and Jeff Idler had a daughter, Anna Evelyn. James Griffin Cole was born to Barbie Griffin Cole and Chris Cole '81, named in honor of his grandfather, James Q. Griffin '55. His great-grandfather, Donald W. Griffin '23, wonders if he'll join the Class of 2012.

Bonna Horovitz sent a picture of her and her husband, Joel Finkelstein's son, Alex William (born on Oct. 7, 1990). She also says that Laura Gold came to N.Y. from Ann Arbor to celebrate her 30th birthday with Susan Wagner, Heldi Aronin, Sharon Selter, and Marshall Lux. Marshall and his wife, Karen Moss, brought along their first-born twins, Matthew Adam and Sarah Hannah (born Aug. 21, 1990).

Leslie Ebrlich told us that Stephanie Lynn and Mark Kleiman had their first, Benjamin William, on Sept. 16, 1990. Mark just started a new job for a money management firm, Neuberger & Berman, in New York City. Leslie also began a new job with Citicorp, in a group which is starting an individual investment business. She recently saw Karin Robinson (working for Hillier in Princeton) and Claire Laporte who moved to N.Y. Also pictured is Grace Hays Holcomb born to Jenny (Young) and Pierre Du Pont on Feb. 15, 1991. They love living in London despite threats of terrorism. Pierre is with International Computers, Ltd., while Jenny is on maternity leave from her law firm, Covington & Burling.

83

GAIL FRANK
345 West 87th St., Apt. 3F
New York, NY 10024

Pictured above are the Princetonians who attended the wedding of Genesisia Perlmutter and Steven Kamen. They were married Mar. 3, 1990, and recently celebrated their first anniversary. Genesisia and Steve live in N.Y.C. where she is an associate with Kronish, Lieb, Weiner & Hellman and he is an associate at Morgan, Lewis & Bockius. Pictured are (l-r): Robert Adler, Shelly Mitnick '84, David Mitnick, Margarethe Petro Laurenzi, Mark Laurenzi '84, Genesisia, Rick Mosenkis '85, Steve, Karen Magee, Mark Binder '85, Gwen Gowen, and David Hacem. Bob is a V.P. at Goldman Sachs involved in

Young Alumni Activities

PC OF NEW YORK: Apr. 17&?—Young members' dinner and theater package to see FOREVER PLAID. Apr. 22—Movie Night—Custom feature "Cartoon and News Reel." Apr. 27—Wild Ivy Rock 'n' Roll Ball. May 2—Thursday Night Club—Young Alumni get-together in the club's Tiger Bar & Grill. For reservations, call the manager's office at 212-840-6400.

PA OF NEW ENGLAND: May 1—PANE annual meeting with guest speaker President Shapiro at Boston Newton Marriott. Contact Dick Charlesworth '46 617-894-4345 or Frank Giovino 617-329-0001. May 12, 16, 19, 22—Princeton at the Pops at Symphony Hall, Boston. $30. per seat. Contact Dick Charlesworth '46 617-894-4345.

PC OF MICHIGAN: Apr. 27—Whirlyball at Romar Sports Center (Ann Arbor) $11.00 per person and reservations required. June 7—Party T.B.A. "Reunions in Michigan" for those who can't attend the real Reunions. All classes welcome. Wear your beer jacket. FREE and BYO. For more info. and reservations, please call Mike Sklar at 313-994-1831 or George Cor-sar at 313-647-0054.

Contact Debbie Bredael at the Alumni Council with notices of events for inclusion in this column. Call or write: the Alumni Council, Maclean House, Princeton Univ., Princeton, NJ 08544; 609-258-3353.

researching environmental companies. Shelly is doing an internship in psychology at N.Y. Hospital. David is doing a child psychology fellowship also at N.Y. Hospital. Margie is a senior associate at Adams & Rinehart, a corporate financial public-relations firm. She delivered a baby girl early in Mar. 1991. This is Margie and Mark's first child. Mark is an associate at Simpson Thacher Bartlett in N.Y.C. Karen is the business manager of PEOPLE magazine. Gwen is working at the television show 20/20. And David is an associate at the architecture firm of Childs, Bertman, Tseckares & Casendino, Inc. in Boston. He has been busy working on the Prudential Center redevelopment.

Eugene Sidoti writes that he, his wife, Lanni, and his daughter, Lea, are doing well. They celebrated Lea's first birthday last November. Eugene will start a residency in plastic surgery next July after completing his fourth year of a general surgery residency.

84

THOMAS C. WU
Beacon Court, 175 Beacon St., Apt. 413
Somerville, MA 02143

NEWSWORTHY NOTES: Jeremy Feigelson and Eugenie Allen ('85) sent in this photo of daughter Emily Allen Feigelson, born Nov. 4, 1989. Jeremy is finishing up law school at the Univ. of Chicago in June, and will begin a clerkship with Judge Milton Shadur of the District Court of Northern Illinois. Eugenie is a freelance writer, and most recently wrote the Dec./Jan. cover story on caesarean sections for PARENTING magazine. Eugenie's science book for pre-teen children will be in bookstores soon. Another classmate finishing school this spring is Anne-Marie Maman, who will graduate from the Kellogg School of Business at Northwestern in June. Down in Houston, Peter MacDonald is teaching school. Peter will be moving to Austin in the fall to work on his master's degree in education. Over in Los Angeles, Marcy Levinson is the morning news anchor for KLAC radio. She was recently awarded a Golden Mike from the Radio and Television News Assn. of Southern Calif. for the best radio newscast under 15 minutes.

NORTHEAST REGIONAL ROUND-UP: Brett McCarty joined Showtime Networks, Inc., as Northeast regional marketing director last August, and is enjoying work in the entertainment/cable industry. Scott Aquilina and Ellen Sheeby are living in Boston, where Scott is working for an urban design firm called Lane Frenchman, and Ellen is working for a nonprofit group dedicated to increase donor organ availability. Eileen Florin is a second-year resident in family medicine in Latrobe, Penn. And Heidi Hoffman is pursuing a career as an actress in N.Y.C., where she is appearing in TV series, and is the co-founder of the "Willow Cabin Theater Company."

85

ROB JURANEK
1578 Oak Ave., Apt. 1
Evanston, IL 60201

FAST-TRACK PARENTAL CAREERIST: Joanne Naples Miceli dropped us a note to tell of her recent promotion to "full-time mom." Pictured are her subordinates, James (3) and Stephanie (5 mos.) We like her work force.

Ron Talakoski sent in a small, good-reading novel to explain his post-Nassua adventures. After graduation, he toured Europe as a student of "corporate business practices." His sojourn included an internship with the Benefica Professional Football Organization (B.P.F.O.). He returned to attend business school somewhere in New Haven, and, in 1987, accepted a position with the International Hockey League in Flint, Mich. Next Ron joined the staff of the N.Y. Rangers, married Cheryl, and accepted a position with Nabisco. In 1989 he returned to sports to become managing general partner of the New Haven Coliseum Acquisition Corp., somewhere in Connecticut. His firm manages the 20-year-old, 11,000-seat coliseum, (recently named among the nation's best by PERFORMANCE magazine), where it hosts, among others, the AHL Nighthawks, Moscow Circus, Harlem Globetrotters, Ice Capades, and Social Warrior Pub Jello Wrestling. Ron credits his Princeton education with providing him the wherewithal to make his mark in the Eli capital.

Moving on, Jeff Tarr has returned from Paris to San Francisco, where he helps develop international markets for International Development Group.

Finally, Michael Reynolds is finishing his second year at Vanderbilt's Owen School of Management. He invites all '85ers to Nashville for a night of foot-stomping at the Grand Ole Opry. Just do it.

86

SALLIE KIM
2645 California St., Apt. 303
Mountain View, CA 94040

It may be difficult to believe that we graduated from Princeton almost five years ago, but our fifth reunion is only about two months away. You can register up to the first day of Reunions, but if you want to make sure that your name is stitched onto the bowling shirt for the costumes, you should call Doug Bootbe at 203-629-9292 or Esther Hsieh at 212-735-5734 NOW. These bowling shirts are part of our Class costume, and you have the option of personalizing your shirt with your name or nickname.

nights in India taking care of Vivan.

A NEW ARRIVAL: Pictured here are happy mother Nandita Parsbad and baby Vivan Parshad Jayant, who joined his parents on Dec. 15, 1990. Nandita and husband Sanjay Jayant are now spending many sleepless NUPTIALS: Elsje Neukermans (pictured here) married Peter Paine III '85 in Palo Alto, Calif., on Aug. 4, 1990. Also in the picture are Andrew Sidamon-Eristoff '85, Peter Paine '32, Megan Jessiman Ketcham '87, Joey Plager '85, Clark Cohen, Elsje, Eliza Knox, Peter Paine Jr. '57, Jan Fritze '93, Peter, Tippi Stevens, Caroline Coleman, Natalie Bocock '83, Charlie Weiss '85, and Chris Kuenne '85. Elsje is a first-year student at Wharton Business School, and Peter is an associate in a law firm. Tippie Stevens is a publicist for Avon Books.

87

MARY TAYLOR DEMKO
1935 Seville St.
Santa Rosa, CA 95403

AUGUST NUPTIALS: Tad Coburn married Kim Weigel '88 on Aug. 18, 1990, in Wolfboro, N.H. In attendance were (bottom row) Pete Maruca, Mike Klein, Hugh Flood, Suzanne Brown '86, Tom Herd, Dana Boocook '83, Roger Boocook '56, (standing) Mike Coco, Liz Halliday, Anil Duggal, Heidi Elmendorf Singer '88, Steve Singer, Tad, Kim, Paige Curtis '88, Wendy Adams '88, Nancy Schwartz '88, Bryan Rockwood, Jeff Gray, Pat Curtis '88, Alex Defrondeville '88, Andy Coburn '89, Philip Coburn '93, Kim Aldrich '89, Matt Coburn '91, Jon Clayton, and Jay Kern. Guests danced to a comeback performance of "The Usual Suspects." Tad and Kim settled in Cambridge; Tad engineers software for Easel Corp. in Woburn, and Kim manages accounts at Brown Brothers Harriman in Boston.

The Class of '87 salutes those of us who were in the Persian Gulf during the war. Matt Gantz, Rob Smith, and Peter Huggins all were deployed from active duty units. Tom Springer and Brian Wiley, both Army reservists, were also called into action. Debby Greenberg got caught in the fray while spending a year in a Jewish education program in Jerusalem, but said she stayed safe and sane while missiles dropped on Tel Aviv. Brooke Shields headed to the desert to entertain troops.

88

CHRISTOPHER LU
206E Holden Green
Cambridge, MA 02138

ALTAR EGO: This smiling group of '88ers attended the wedding of Mike Cully and Maureen Ahearn (U.Va. '90) last Aug. 4. Pictured here are: (top, l-r) Mitch Lazris, Larry Gonzales, Ellen Melauer, Reed Stephens, Elissa Sberdalan; (middle) Deborah Bailey, Mike, Maureen, Rob Schumm; (bottom) Jenny Wu, Kim Conliffe. And speaking of weddings, Mitch and Jenny were recently engaged and will marry in Aug. 1992 at the Princeton Chapel.

CALIFORNIA DREAMIN': Enjoying the year-round warm weather of San Diego are Clark Fernon and Steve Frazier, who surf at 5:30 A.M. twice a week before work. Sandy Gray works for a small wood-products manufacturing company in Los Angeles, where he manages operations and looks for acquisitions. Also in L.A. is Ed Siskind, who works for Goldman Sachs & Co. Farther up the coast is Pete Chow, a Ph.D. candidate in electrical engineering at Stanford, who says he still finds time to fine-tune his volleyball skills.

LETTER OF THE MONTH: David Barndoll writes: "I am officially back in Houston, teaching British literature to sophomores at my old school (St. John's School). When not at school-related functions, I am singing with the Houston Symphony Chorus (not the 'Tones, but what the heck?) and assisting the Singing Boys of Houston as well. Life is fantastic."

Don't forget—our third reunion is June 6-9. You know the place.

89

DAVID MILLER
96 Linden La.
Princeton, NJ 08540

OVER THE TRANSOM: An anonymous informant provided this photographic evidence of unsanctioned '89 reunion activity. Pictured here at Stowe, Vt., over Martin Luther King Weekend are (l-r): Suzie Quarngesser (currently studying at Univ. of Maryland Law School), Ceci Conway (with Paine Webber in N.Y.C.), Bryan Legate (with the "White House advance team" in Houston), Greg Byrnes (Georgetown Law School), Todd Duibie (with Peat Marwick Consulting in Washington, D.C.), David Horn (Morgan Stanley in N.Y.C.), John Wallace (investment banking in Atlanta), Sarah O'Connor (teaching high school in D.C.), Dwight Anderson ("businessman-at-large" in Albany, N.Y.), Maria Dabbe (healthcare consulting in D.C.), Kathy Raymond (financial analyst with Trammell Crow Ventures, a Dallas venture-capital firm), Ellen Rava (soon to be relocating from St. Louis to D.C.). As our anonymous correspondent observed, "where there is a will, '89ers find a way to bridge the geographic gaps." So true. The above, by the way, represents the model for Class notes submissions: photo with complete names and occupations of the revelers (100 percent '89ers is a bonus).

Please let me know if you would like to make changes to your name as it appears on University and Class records—for example, if you have gotten married or if you have a nickname you prefer, like Bucky or Boopsie.

WHERE ARE THEY NOW? The Class has already lost track of the addresses of a few classmates, and would appreciate hearing from or about Katherine Hintz, Greg Richards, Edward Sims, Erik Spector, and Leslie Wright.

90 BRETT GOODMAN
22 Berkeley Terrace
Livingston, NJ 07039

Can you say "Reunions"? Can you say "fun"? Can you say "I'll be there"? If not, practice until you can! June 6-9 will feature our first annual "Long Distance" Award, given to the classmate who travels the farthest to get to Old Nassau. One contestant could be Brian Keare, who works for a multi-national law firm in Paris and was recently visited by Trevor Tratina, who studies politics and rows crew at Oxford. After graduation, Brian toured Europe with Reed Galtner, Steve Golden, John Phelps, John Simon, and Dwight Stone.

Michèle Sobman also has a chance to win. Michèle works for Young & Rubicam in Frankfurt and reports that Alex Hess, Cecile Roach, and Alexandra Webster live together in London. Other '90ers in England include Dominic Moross, who works for Maxwell Communications in London, and James Currier, who is in Great Britain for six months on assignment for G.T.E.

Speaking of travel, some classmates are still living out their post-graduation fantasy trips. The group of Rob Beams, John Green, and Rob Myslik are spanning the globe, as are Mary Herrick and Lynne Stuart.

Closer to home in N.Y.C., seven classmates have set a record for proximity. Not only do Nick Franklin, Doug Freedman, and Marc Galletti live together, but their next-door neighbors are Cecilia De la Rosa, Amy Emanuel, Betty Lee, and Lisa Pollock.

Speaking of Cecilia, congratulations to her and Greg Polaski, who recently announced their engagement. The wedding, scheduled for summer 1992, will take place after Cecilia completes a one-year M.B.A. program at S.M.U. Greg is an account executive for a shipping company in the Big Apple, and Cecilia presently fundraises for Lincoln Center.

91 BUCKY JOHNSON
152 Little Hall
Princeton University Campus

By now, many of you are already done with your theses and are getting ready to cruise out to tropical locales. Congratulations! And you thought it would never happen: Senior Check-Out. For good, that is. What is Check-Out? Check-Out is many things.

At the Registrar's Office, we will be filling out four-year Princeton evaluations and other forms. We will also be voting on Class awards for service to the Class of '91 and service to the University as well as some "less official" awards given on Class Day. At this time, information will also be given about Operation Mattress, the Class constitution, Reunions, P-rade, elections for new Class of '91 officers, Step-Sing song lyrics, tickets for Prom, Baccalaureate, and Commencement and so on.

At Maclean house, we will be able to pick up the prized Reunions buttons. You may also buy guest buttons, one per student, $35 per button. Hold on to these buttons! They are not replaceable, and you're going to be very sorry if you can't get into Reunions.

Finally, we will then be able to go down to Palmer Hall, if shipping is reliable, to pick up our caps and gown and our Senior Jackets.

Check-Out will go on for the week of May 6 to May 10 from 10 A.M. to 4:30 P.M., but don't wait until the end to take care of things. (Many of you were guilty of this for cap and gown measurements, and that was nothing compared with Check-Out.)

You'll be getting more information soon, but if you have questions, call Stephan or Marco at x9769 or Becky at x8245. Until then, have fun in the sun!

GS WEN G. HUNNAN JR. '45
1573 Kirkley Rd.
Columbus, OH 43221
01-*59

POLITICS: "Still serving as dean of international and special programs, Northern Illinois Univ., DeKalb, IL 60115," reports Daniel Wu '50. And Richard Leach '51 tells us that in 1990 he retired after 35 years as a member of the Dept. of Political Science at Duke Univ. Meanwhile, from France, Loic Bouvard '53, a deputy in the French Natl. Assembly, recently wrote us about a check he sent to Annual Giving, "I hope you can cash it." From Bastad, Sweden, Jaan Penmar '53 writes, "Retired from Radio Free Europe/Radio Liberty in July 1989. I had been a director of the Soviet nationalities services. Currently working on a book dealing with Soviet nationality policy. P.S. Please note new address for 1991. Larsbackavagen 2, S-269 OO Bastad, SWEDEN." And we learn that Karl E. Meyer '56 was the author of PUNDITS, PORTS AND WITS: AN OMNIBUS OF AMERICAN NEWSPAPER COLUMNS, published by Oxford Univ. Press, 1990. We have a periodic report from Ernest Thomas Greene '58. "I have completed three years of work in the Department of State's Refugee Bureau," says Ernest. "Unfortunately, with the number of refugees in the world now totaling some 14 million, there is no end to the refugee problems in all parts of the world. I spent six weeks in Pakistan in the summer of 1989 to assist refugees there." Donald B. Easum '53 tells us, "I will direct a Policy Task Force (WWS 402) in this spring semester (1991) entitled 'Toward a Post-Apartheid South Africa.'" And finally Charles L. Robertson '59 updates his career: "Retired after teaching international relations for 36 years at Smith College to take a post as associate dean for international study." His latest publication is THE INTERNATIONAL HERALD TRIBUNE: THE FIRST HUNDRED YEARS, Columbia Univ. Press.

WOODROW WILSON SCHOOL: Pictured here is John Ashton-Greene '49 on the Island of Bali. John writes us that he received an invitation to attend the 20th Anniversary Commemoration of the White House Conference on Food, Nutrition, and Health. As President of Hunger Inc., John helped in drafting the first report in Dec. 1969. "I recently returned," John writes, "from a month long trip to the Pacific rim countries: Japan, China, Hong Kong, Macao, Indonesia, Singapore, and Thailand." This involved exploring business conditions and consulting on political problems and opportunities.

We have memorials in this issue.

GS CHRISTOPHER KEANE '86
31183 Lakemont Dr.
San Ramon, CA 94583
76-*90

ASTROPHYSICAL SCIENCES: Tom Harley '90 is currently at the Natl. Center for Physical Acoustics, Univ. of Mississippi, Oxford, Miss., where he is doing research in the area of high-speed digital signal processing. Tom's wife, Deena, recently gave birth to their first child, Margaret, and we hear all is well.

CHEMICAL ENGINEERING: News reaches us that

Sangtae Kim '83 was recently (June 1990) promoted to full professor in the Dept. of Chemical Engineering at the Univ. of Wisconsin. In addition, early this year his book MICROHYDRODYNAMICS: PRINCIPLES AND SELECTED APPLICATIONS was published. John Kraistos '85 was promoted to senior research engineer at DuPont, where he is designing new processes for manufacture of nylon for hosiery. He and his wife, Maria, have two children, Kaitly (5) and Michael (4). Joseph W. Krozal '90 is a postdoctoral fellow at U.C.—Davis.

CLASSICS: Alan Shapiro '77 is back at Princeton this semester as a visiting professor in the Dept. of Classics, where he is teaching a course in the new human values program.

COMPARATIVE LITERATURE: Alexandra Reed Lajoux '78 is "delighted to report" that she and her husband Bernard have adopted a 4-year-old boy, Franklin. She adds that to cope with motherhood she is "reading Bob Fagles's new translation of ILIAD."

ENGLISH: Jonathan Levittow '86 is currently on the faculty at Merced College, Merced, Calif.

MECHANICAL AND AEROSPACE ENGINEERING: Ralph Al-dredge III '90 is currently a postdoctoral fellow at U.C.—San Diego. Amy Aking '88 is currently on the faculty of the Aerospace Engineering and Mechanics Dept. at the Univ. of Minnesota, where "it's cold." She recently returned from a postdoctoral appointment in Europe where she witnessed firsthand the recent political events in Germany. David King '82 is currently a staff electric propulsion scientist at Rocket Research Company, Redmond, Wash. He adds that his boss is W. W. Smith '78. From Italy, Marco Masoero '82 writes that his first daughter, Francesca, was born on Nov. 21, 1990. William M. Proscia '83 was recently promoted to research scientist in the environmental sciences group at United Technologies Research Center. Eric Udd '78 is currently completing his editing of a book entitled FIBER OPTIC SENSORS: AN INTRODUCTION FOR ENGINEERS AND SCIENTISTS, which is scheduled for publication in April 1991.

POLITICS: Steve Hoffman '76 was recently named full professor of political science at Taylor Univ., Upland, Ind. He recently negotiated an exchange agreement between Taylor and the Univ. of Nizhni Novgorod in the Soviet Union. He notes that the university and the city were formerly known as Gorki and reverted back to the pre-revolutionary name this past October.

RELIGION: Mark S. Cladis '88 is currently assistant professor of religion at Vassar College. Henry S. Levinson '76 has recently been appointed as head of the Dept. of Religious Studies at the Univ. of North Carolina—Greensboro. Since joining the faculty there in 1983 he has served as associate dean of the College of Arts and Science as well as director of the Center for Critical Inquiry in the liberal arts. In the past he has been a fellow of the National Endowment for the Humanities and the National Humanities Center.

WOODROW WILSON SCHOOL: Ben Baldanza '86 has moved from his job of manager of yield management at American Airlines to director of financial analysis at Northwest Airlines. Keith Bradsher '89 is living in N.Y.C. and covering telecommunications and other business news for N.Y. TIMES. Glenn Lundén '85 is manager of fare structure analysis for the N.Y.C. Transit Authority, and he writes that "after inflicting a 15% fare increase on millions of New Yorkers, he is hard at work on the next one." He is also becoming more familiar with Carnegie Hall through his involvement in the N.Y.C. Gay Men's Chorus. Caryl J. McNeilly '87 is continuing her work at the Inst. of International Finance, and has just completed a major two-year house expansion/remodeling project. Amy White '82 was recently named finance manager of the Alexandria, Va. police department and adds the happy news that she is recently engaged.

Donald Robert McLean '27

DON, WHO DIED Aug. 9, 1990, inherited a long Princeton tradition. His great-great grandfather, Samuel Pinley, was president, 1761-66, when Princeton was the College of New Jersey. His great-great-granduncle, John Maclean Jr., was president, 1853-68. Academic life did not appeal to Don, who left the campus in 1925. After some years of business in Detroit, he found his congenial life work with Cleveland's Stouffer Food Corp., restaurateurs. He served in charge of operations, especially expansion and the building program.

Don led an immensely active life apart from business. He married Louise Orr (Iowa State College '37), raised two sons, Robert Bruce and William Douglas McLean, and found time (one wonders how) to play golf and tennis, enjoy swimming, frequent several clubs, and attend chamber of commerce meetings.

For years, Don visited Princeton every fall to attend conferences of the industrial relations section of the Graduate School. He was active in community affairs and a devoted member of the Congregational Church in Cleveland's suburban Shaker Heights.

To Don's family his classmates send their most sympathetic greetings.

The Class of 1927

Ernest Chester Crabb '29

CHET DIED Feb. 9, 1990. He was born in China and prepared for college at Mercersburg. At Princeton he was captain of both freshman and varsity cross-country, and was also on the track and soccer teams. His roommate was Dan Evans.

After college, he was a Y.M.C.A. secretary and taught at Stony Brook School on Long Island, but in 1931 entered Biblical Seminary in N.Y., and then went to Princeton Theological Seminary. He had pastorates at Presbyterian and Methodist churches in Dillonville, Mineral Ridge, Akron, Canfield, and Farmdale, Oh.; in Jamestown, N.Y.; and Erie and Bessemer, Penn. In 1964, in semi-retirement, he began substitute teaching and preaching, and preached a sermon just three days before his death. His special interests included China, youth groups, physical fitness, and human service.

In 1965, he returned to his earlier activity as a runner, and was often first in his age group at meets around the country. In 1967 he was a gold medalist in several Senior Olympics races. In 1936 he married Thelma Margaret Iler, and she survived him by only a few months. Their children are Betty and David. The Class extends sincere sympathy to Chet's family.

The Class of 1929

Caulder Baynard Perryclear '33

PERRY DIED Nov. 17, 1990, at North Palmouth, Mass. A service was held at North Palmouth Congregational Church. Perry was born Dec. 23, 1907, in Savannah, Ga. His family moved a good deal during his childhood, and at the time he came to Princeton he lived at Mt. Tabor, N.J. He went to the Hun School.

In college, Perry, who was a manager of Court Club, lived there junior year with Ambrose Cort Jr. '32. He left college at the end of that year. Perry worked with department stores as a management executive until 1951, when he became a manufacturer's representative for wholesale furniture. He continued in this business until he retired. During WWII he served for a year in the Auxiliary. He was active in a number of trade associations.

In 1977 he retired to the Cape. On Sept. 8, 1938, Perry married Barbara Stronach in Northampton, Mass. They had four children: Nancy Talbott, Barbara Patterson, William, and Robert Nichols. There are two grandchildren. The Class of '33 expresses its sympathy to Barbara and the rest of the family.

The Class of 1933

Donald P. Wilson '33

DODO WILSON died Jan. 12, 1991, in Costa Mesa, Calif. Dodo was born Sept. 15, 1909, in Hartford, Conn. He prepared at Andover. In college he played football and hockey. He roomed with Scotty Calahan, and was a member of Colonial Club.

Dodo left college after two years and began a long involvement with the field of aviation. From 1932 to 1934 he was a district traffic manager for United Airlines. He then spent seven years with Fairchild Aviation as manager of aviation radio and navigation equipment sales, during which he flew through 17 countries in Europe 1937-39. He had two hitches in the Navy, interrupted by a spell with Federal Telephone and Radio. In the Navy he was a Lt. commander. In 1954 Dodo was associated with the establishment of Lester Equipment and Mfg. Co., from which he retired as chairman in 1986. He was heavily involved with storage battery technology.

On Mar. 30, 1940, Dodo married Edna (Bunny) Massey, in N.Y.C. They had four children: Donald, Gordon, Wayne, and Gwendolyn. Dodo has been such a lively and positive figure in the Class that it seems hard to realize that he was only with us for two years. He will be greatly missed. We send our sympathy to the family.

The Class of 1933

Pompeo Henry Maresi '34

PEO (SONNY) MARESI, who led, in the words of those nearest to him, "a good, disciplined life of service to his family, friends, and many causes," died of cancer Feb. 8. A former resident of Lake Como, Italy, he lived for the past eight years principally in Berwickshire, Scotland.

Through the years Pao was a generous supporter of the American Farm School in Greece, Atlantic College in Wales, Cornell, Swarthmore (his wife Phebe's alma mater), and several other institutions here and abroad. In 1989 Princeton received a gift amounting to nearly $3 million from the sale of Pao's family home on Lake Como.

